Wonderful to hear from you! I have wondered often how you were doing but know your work can be like drinking from a fire hose. I would love to come back to the department and have lunch with you. I am out next week but I will ping you when I return and we can work out a date soon. Thank you for reaching out. Warmly. Becky

Hello Becky,

I hope that you are doing well. I had a meeting with DOI's museum team recently, and I told them that I was looking for your portrait here. Initially, I asked about a painting and was just told that we didn't have one. I'm so happy that I found your portrait. I also met a friend of yours yesterday, Carolyn S Malenick. She spoke very highly of you, and was pleased that someone who worked for you now works here. I took it as a high compliment.

If you are ever free, I would love to meet with you to catch up. I've had enough time to get my feet under me, but working here is so different from Heritage. I'd love to hear more of your stories or any advice you could give me. Would you be interested in coming to DOI for lunch sometime? Then you could see your portrait too. If it is easier, however, I could meet you at Heritage some day when the boss is traveling.

I hope you have a wonderful weekend!

Warmly,
Elinor

Hi, Elinor,

I wanted to get back to you in regards to your inquiry about a portrait of Becky Norton Dunlop.

As I mentioned, the official paintings have traditionally only been of Interior Secretaries, so there is not one of her in the Interior Museum's collection. Since she had served as Interior's Assistant Secretary for Fish, Wildlife & Parks, I inquired of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's historian in the event that a portrait of her had ended up in their collection. He confirmed that they do not have a painting of her.

However, you will find a framed, black and white photograph of her (with an accompanying brass nameplate) in the 3100 Corridor (the 3rd floor hallway for the Assistant Secretary for Fish, Wildlife & Parks). They have a wall of photographs in the entry portal showing past officials.

Hope this helps,
Tracy
