Hi Travis, it's a better approach to look at what action the entire federal government is taking for USVI relief. Interior is responsible for coordinating federal policy for the territories, but the disaster relief efforts are really a holistic operation. Those efforts include HHS medical teams, US Coast Guard search and rescue and port rebuilding, Department of Energy power restoration, and humanitarian aid from DoD.

Specifically within the Interior Department we have extra law enforcement officers keeping the peace, conducting search and rescue and evacuations, and a quick reaction team. We have scientists monitoring flood waters. And the crews from National Park Service and other bureaus assessing infrastructure damage.

Heather Swift
 Press Secretary
 Department of the Interior
