IN THE MATTER OF: INDIAN WATER RIGHTS SETTLEMENTS TRIBAL CONSULTATION

TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS

TUESDAY, JANUARY 10, 2017 9:05 A.M.

JACKSON FEDERAL BUILDING
SOUTH AUDITORIUM
915 SECOND AVENUE
SEATTLE, WASHINGTON 98104

1	INDIAN WATER RIGHTS SETTLEMENTS
2	TRIBAL CONSULTATION
3	TUESDAY, JANUARY 10, 2017
4	9:05 A.M.
5
6	MR. MECHAM: Good morning, everyone. This
7	this session is a consultation that the 8	Department of the Interior has arranged to meet with 9	tribal leaders and other tribal representatives to
10	discuss the Department of the Interior's
11	participation in Indian Water Rights settlement
12	negotiations. We really appreciate everyone's
13	attendance.
14	My name is Duane Mecham, and I will be 15	conducting the session. I will be introducing our
16	other Federal folks in just a minute. I currently
17	am part of what's called the Indian Water Rights
18	Office, the Office of the Secretary at the
19	Department. And I'll explain a little bit more
20	about that office in a few minutes.
21	And this session some of you, I
22	believe, may have been at other sessions where we
23	had initiated a consultation on the Department's
24	participation in the Indian Water Right
25	negotiations. And this is the third of three where we are welcoming and taking comments from tribal 1 leaders and other tribal representatives. And we 2 3 have folks who are taking a transcript of the session, and taking notes of the session. 5 will be transcribed and placed on our Indian Water Rights Office website for future reference. So, all 7 of the information and comments are being collected. 8 We are also accepting written comments. 9 We've asked that those be in by the end of this 10 month. If anyone needs more time we'll certainly 11 try to accommodate that. 12 The overall goal will be to have this 13 information from the Tribes developed into a report for the new Administration. And I'll talk a bit 14 15 more about that in a minute as well. Great. 16 So, let's -- let's make our way to some 17 introductions. And I might have you introduce yourself, Tushar. 18 19 MR. KANSAL: Sure. Hi, all. Good 20 morning. My name's Tushar Kansal. I work for a nonprofit named the Consensus Building Institute. 21 22 I'm a mediator facilitator, but what I'm doing here 23 today is just taking notes and I'm going to be 24 turning that into a meeting summary, which will be a little bit easier to -- to read and understand and 25 follow exactly kind of what happened in this session than the official transcript which will be, or course, word-for-word.

MR. MECHAM: I'm going to turn some time over to two other departmental representatives to introduce themselves.

MR. DUCHESNE: Good morning. I'm Matthew Duchesne, I'm the manager of reclamation -- Bureau of Reclamation's Native American Affairs Program.

And I'm here with Rachel Brown, who is sitting in the third row. Our office is responsible for both policy setting for Reclamation's participation in Indian Water Rights Settlements, negotiations and implementations, as well as funding, not funding for the implementation of the settlements in terms of the actual construction, but funding for the teams, technical studies, those types of things flow through our office for Reclamation.

I'm glad to be here and looking forward to the conversation this morning.

MR. LOUDERMILK: Good morning, everyone.

My name is Bruce Loudermilk. I'm the Director of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, newly appointed. I've been in the job, this will be my second full week, so I'm getting out and starting to meet you folks.

And I do know we have some staff that have come up from Northwest Region, Mike, you're here. And I'm sure we'll probably have folks in the -- in the audience introduce themselves also as we go around, so we'll let them do that at that time. So, thank you all.

MR. MECHAM: Thank you Bruce and Matthew.

And I --- I have a colleague here, I won't make her introduce herself, Jennifer Frozena, she's an attorney based out of our DC Solicitor's office, but somehow was able to arrange to live out -- out West here in Portland, and she works on a lot of the tribal water issues along with myself.

When I'm not in DC filling in for this position with the Secretary's office I work also in Portland, Oregon. And I've been fortunate to work on a number of tribal settlements in -- in the negotiations context. And I have noticed Dennis from Salish Kootenai Tribes, I appreciate you all being here. We've been working on that one, as you will -- if you haven't been in the negotiation yet -- learn these can -- these can go on for a few years.

Matt Howard is a representative on some of 1 our teams, he's based in Boise, Idaho, with the Bureau of Reclamation. 2 I appreciate your 3 participation. Yullen, thank you for coming. 4 So let me -- oh, and the star of the show 5 got -- we got a plan A, and a plan B, and a plan C worked to get our slide show up. And, Martin Von 7 Gnechten, thank you for doing that. He's in the 8 office of the Secretary of Indian Water Rights 9 Office as well. 10 So, what I would like to do is just take, 11 I don't want to -- this is a meeting, of course, for 12 -- for us to talk to you. We've asked for the 13 tribes to present any information that they believe 14 is relevant for our review of how the Department 15 participates in these Indian water negotiations. 16 I thought it would be helpful to set the 17 stage for -- to -- to walk through as background how 18 the Department participates in these negotiations. 19 I'll try not to take a whole lot of time with that. 20 But it -- because this is a pretty significant 21 program for the Department at any given time there 22 could be 15 to 20 active negotiations around the 23 West with Indian tribes, states, local parties, and 24 also even once the settlement is passed there is 25 extensive work to get that settlement implemented.

These are not like your standard court case where the parties reach an agreement and exchange money and go home. There's often and necessarily needed infrastructure, water administration issues, and others that the Department of the Interior is actively involved in through the implementation phase.

So, now I will turn to these set of slides. Thanks again, Marty, for -- for getting this pulled together. The main focus of our consultation is on the Criteria and Procedures that were adopted by the Federal Government going back to 1990. In a communication that we sent to tribal leaders we highlighted that they have not been modified since then, but they have -- I'll get some water. I get a little choked up when I talk about criteria. Excuse me. They have provided guidance for the Administration's participation in settlements and include key factors that we consider in trying to reach a full and complete settlement.

The information that we sent out to initiate this consultation indicated that we are reviewing how the Federal Government participates and whether these Criteria and Procedures need to be modified. They set up a basic framework for negotiations. We, as the Federal Government, have trust responsibilities towards tribes, including for water resources and water rights.

And in a negotiation a key premise is that we -- the tribe should receive equal benefits for any rights that are released as part of the settlement. And tribes should receive value from confirmed water rights. Maybe just to highlight those two points. Over my career, you know, going on well over 25 years at Interior I've had the fortune to work on tribal negotiations. And some of those have actually reached complete settlements, and in those settlements we have been able to provide for significant water resource benefits for tribes based on the tribe's priorities.

And we've also been able to realize value for the tribes. For example, the one Tribe I worked a lot with in Idaho, the Nez Perce Tribe, their big focus was fisheries, being a fishing Tribe, and through the negotiations the Tribe and the other parties were able to reach agreement not -- not just on water, but also on managing that water for hatcheries. The Tribes were able to have hatcheries transferred to the Tribes for -- for their management.

The Fort Hall Tribes, also of Idaho, southeast Idaho, they were able to negotiate the right to market part of their water, and that's been an important value for -- for them coming out of their settlement.

The Federal Government also is insistent that these settlements, to the extent they have costs associated with them, and most of them do, have appropriate costs shared by all parties. And that's embedded, and I'll talk a little more about that, it's embedded in the Criteria and Procedures.

For participating the Federal Government, and we don't necessarily take these phases in every negotiation, but they -- they provide the framework for how we get information and how we can develop our own positions on the settlements. We have a fact finding phase that tries to determine how far the parties have been able to develop a -- a sound technical basis of what the tribes are entitled to, the legal foundation for the tribe's rights.

Then we turn to an assessment and recommendation phase, where the Federal negotiation team for that particular settlement negotiation develops an assessment of any -- any position that other parties have made, any proposed settlement, and any proposal to resolve other Indian -- or water-related claims from the tribe, like damages claims.

These are then developed into briefing and negotiation positions at the highest levels of the Department. The Department has a working group on Indian water negotiations, which consists of all of the assistant secretaries and the Solicitor and they develop positions, and then once developed the Secretary is apprised and usually agrees to that position, and that's the position of the negotiation team.

Then, of course, the negotiations. I mentioned fact finding. This is important if your tribes are not quite in a negotiation yet, because the more information that is available about the nature and extent and range of water right claims the more prepared the parties can be to try to resolve those in negotiation. In the assessment, as I mentioned, one thing that the Department does working closely with the Department of Justice is to conduct an assessment of the positions of all the parties. And we take a close look at what litigation would provide for the tribes, and what settlement would provide for all parties.

The -- the briefings and negotiations phase of -- of the Federal participation, one of the biggest things that is worked on in this phase is what is the proper Federal contribution for a tribal settlement that could be supported by the - whatever Administration is currently in place.

Ultimately for 99 percent of these settlements

Congress is the entity that approves the settlement for a lot of legal and other reasons, but more and more the Department -- the -- the Congress looks to the Department for a position on what the Federal contributions to the settlement should be.

And I talked about that. Just let me quickly go through the criteria that are embedded in the Criteria and Procedures that were published in 1990. They apply to all negotiations involving any water right claims where we, the Federal Government, participate. And one of the primary goals is to resolve all outstanding water claims to achieve a finality, both for the tribes and for the Federal Government on these outstanding claims.

Criterion four, the title -- the total cost of the settlement to all parties should not exceed the value of the existing claims, as calculated by the Federal Government. Now, that's --

1 that's not very many words right there, but that's intended to be a complex thing that the Federal 2 3 Government has taken various means and ways to develop positions about what the value of claims 5 are, and how we calculate those claims. And any information tribes have about what their position --7 let me first state the Criteria and Procedures don't give a lot of detail on how that's to happen, so 9 that is an important focus of our review, and 10 information tribes can provide would be helpful on 11 that front.

Federal contribution, this is similar to the point I just made, they -- we believe the contribution should not be higher than the calculable legal exposure, and that's for all -- all water-related claims, both water rights and water damages. And then programmatic costs that may -- may have been incurred anyway for tribal water resource development.

I was already mentioning a couple of these points, but I think it's fair to highlight for you, you know, we recognize that these are not well written, as set out in the 1990 Criteria and Procedures. And that the pure legal analysis of what the exposure is, generally, does not account for equitable or historic circumstances that form a tribe's experience.

And I know that the -- working closely with the Salish Kootenai Tribes on a live negotiation in the last several years, that's certainly been an important point the Tribes have driven home.

The criterion six, this is -- I alluded a little bit to the fact that the Federal Government doesn't cost share. State, local, other parties are expected to bear their fair share, based on the benefits that they receive, and that also can vary extensively from settlement to settlement. This is not always achieved. Ultimately, as I said, Congress has the final say. But it -- it remains a key concern. And I would anticipate will be a key concern for -- for the new Administration.

We call these the Bishop factors, and that's not a reference to any particular religion.

Let me explain. Chairman Bishop of the House Natural Resources Committee in February 2015, that's the -- that's the Committee in the House that has oversight over water resource issues, including Indian water right settlements.

And to ensure that they had information that they wanted from the Administration, and to 1 also assess whether these settlements, there is a 3 restriction in the House on having earmarks, so they want to ensure that these settlements are for the 5 National interests and not just for local interests. So, he asked us -- that Committee has requested that 7 for any settlement that's before Congress in legislation we provide to them these -- these --9 this information. Does the proposed settlement 10 adhere to the current Criteria and Procedures? 11 Does the settlement especially meet 12 Criteria 4 and 5(a), such that the settlement 13 represents a net benefit to the American taxpayer? 14 And does the Administration specifically 15 support the Federal financial authorizations included in whatever legislation is in front of 16 17 Congress? 18 They also asked for information about the 19 litigation. A lot of these tribal water settlements 20 are driven by litigation. 21 And I'll move on, just to -- to set the 22 stage. Here are the questions that we asked for this 23 particular consultation. Do the Criteria and 24 Procedures need to be reviewed and reconsidered 25 given that they were promulgated in 1990, prior to -

1	- prior to the negotiation of a great majority of
2	the of the enacted settlements. In other words,
3	have we learned some lessons since 1990 that could
4	be could inform a revision of the Criteria and
5	Procedures.
6	Number two: Have the Criteria and Procedures
7	been useful to achieve Indian water settlements?
8	Have they been applied consistently and fairly.
9	And then if they are to be reconsidered,
10	should both the substantive criteria and the 11	procedures, including processes through various
12	agencies, be reexamined.
13	And, finally, what criteria or procedures
14	should be revised? Why should they be revised?
15	What is the best mechanism to accomplish the 16	revision?
17	As I mentioned, we are accepting written
18	comments and, of course, now we would like to take
19	any comments that the tribal representatives have 20	here today. Marty will have this microphone. This
21	is our one microphone; is that right, Marty?
22	MR. VON GNECHTEN: Yes.
23	MR. MECHAM: Okay. Good. Again, our main
24	intent is to get your comments, your information.
25	   If there is a guestion we can answer we'llwe'll

try to do that. The -- well, again, we're -- we're 1 trying to seek information to be developed into our 3 report on -- on -- on this consultation. We -- I -- I would ask, as a courtesy, initially if tribal 5 leaders or representatives who are here on behalf of their tribes, tribal leadership, have the first 7 opportunity to provide comments. I know there aren't a lot of us, so we can take as much time as 9
   we want, and but -- but it would be helpful for us 10 if -- if tribal leaders have a first shot at 11 providing their -- their views. And I think with 12 that, unless, I didn't queue anything up, I think 13 are we ready, Marty?
             MR. VON GNECHTEN: We want to ask people
14 15
   to identify themselves, name and also affiliation -- 16
             MR. MECHAM:
                          Thank you very much.
17
             MR. VON GNECHTEN:
                                -- for appearance in 18
   the transcript.
19
             MR. MECHAM: Yeah. A good reminder to me.
20
   If you could identify yourselves and your tribal 21 affiliation, we -- for our -- for our transcript, 22 and if we have questions about spelling or et cetera we'll work with you on that, but it would be helpful 23 24 to have the identifications. Thank you.
25
             MR. CLAIRMONT:
                             Thank you for this

opportunity to provide a statement. I'm Dennis Clairmont, I'm a councilman from Confederated Salish Kootenai Tribes, Western Montana, and I have a prepared statement.

I wish to thank the Interior for holding these consultations. My name is Dennis Clairmont and I'm on the Tribal Council for Confederated Salish Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation. Indian water settlements are critical to tribal self-sufficiency and economic development. The Tribes have spent the past -- the last 20 years negotiating a compact with the State of Montana to resolve the Tribes' water rights claims.

In 2015 the Tribes' compact was approved by the Montana Legislature. The Tribes are now in the process of working with Interior, Justice and OMB on Federal legislation that will ratify the compact and provide much needed Federal funding for infrastructure and rebuilding tribal natural resources that have been decimated by Federal policies and actions.

As part of this process, the Tribes have had to work under the framework of 1990 Criteria and Procedures and have repeatedly been told that the Federal cost of our settlement is too high and the non-Indian contribution is not sufficient. No one 1 2 can explain, however, what constitutes an 3 appropriate Federal contribution or what the threshold is for an acceptable State contribution. 5 Our settlement includes the highest state contribution to date. Moreover, the Federal 7 contribution is comprised in large part of funding 8 to rehabilitate and modernize an irrigation system 9 that belongs to the BIA, and the Tribes are required 10 to provide significant waivers of liability for past 11 failures of the BIA related to the system and all of 12 our water resources.

It has been made clear as part of this process that the Criteria and Procedures need to be revised. The Tribes will provide written comments, but we would like to highlight a few changes that must be made. First, the Criteria and Procedures need to be revised to update what the standards are for determining an appropriate Federal contribution. Tribes should receive value for all the claims waived in a settlement, as well as impacts to their water and water-related resources that have been decimated by historical Federal policies and actions.

Second, it must be recognized that the state contributions are a result of state policy that neither tribes nor the Federal Government can dictate the outcome of what a state deems is acceptable. In evaluating state contributions there must be a balancing of state policy with the monetary and non-monetary benefits included in a settlement, including attributing value to approval of a water settlement by the state.

Third, it must be recognized that the Criteria and Procedures are intended to be flexible and should be applied to tribes in the context of their unique history and the circumstances related to the particular settlement.

In closing, I would like to emphasize that it's important that the Department complete the consultation process by revising the Criteria and Procedures. We understand that a new Administration will begin soon, but it is critical that something positive comes out of this process and tribal comments are not just put on a shelf. Thank you.

MR. MECHAM: Thank you.

MR. JOHNSON: Good morning, my name is

Virgil Johnson, and I'm the Tribal Chairman of the Confederated Tribes of the Goshute Reservation. We are located on the Utah/Nevada border. We are located three miles -- three hours west of Salt Lake City. And we have been on that land since the Creator put us there.

And before I go on any further I want to pay some honor and respect to the early people of this area, the Skokomish and the Suqaumish people, and the early beginnings here. And I'm honored to be in their early -- early lands to -- to be here today on this day in January of the new year. So, I pay respects to the early people of this area, Chief Seattle and -- and his people.

And I think that's something that, you know, Native -- amongst Native tribes we -- we like to do that. We like to pay honor and respect to the people who -- who were here originally, long before we ever came. So, to pay respect to the people of this area.

One of the reasons why we are here, a main reason why we are here today, I'm here with my tribal vice-chairman, Elvira Murphy, on my right.

And then our Tribal attorney, Mr. Paul Tsosie, is here today. We are here in wanting to consult with the Federal Government, because the water rights, the issues are very significant, especially if you have aboriginal water on your land, and we have aboriginal water on our reservation on the Utah/Nevada border.

3 And historically our people have -- have traveled in Eastern Nevada, Western Utah, into 5 Northern Idaho, and down into the Las Vegas area. And we have covered a wide range of territory, our 7 people have, aboriginally. And once the Government put us on a Reservation it diminished a lot of our 9 land. But one thing that the Federal Government did 10 historically a long time ago in writing the 11 Constitution of the United States, they -- in 12 Article 1 Section 8 and in Article 2 Section 2 13 Clause 3, and also mentioned in the 14th Amendment, 14 it gives the Native Americans across America, and we 15 included, as the Confederated Tribes of the Goshute 16 Reservation, some rights. We are recognized by the 17 Federal Government.

And that's why I believe these consultations are very important for, you know, to let the Federal Government know their trust responsibilities and their fiduciary capacity in dealing with Native Americans. And so we, as a tribe, we'd like to -- in knowing that information we like to hold the people, such as the Department of Interior, their feet to the fire because if -- if we don't, as Native American tribes and nations, we -- we -- we tend to lose and give up some of the things that -- that have been given up historically, and we -- we don't want that. We want to maintain our rights as Native -- Native people.

And, so, a part of that, a huge item of that, is water. And so that's why we are here today. We want to protect our water. We are -- our tribe is in a water litigation with Southern Nevada Water Authority. They want to take the water that's available, all the water that's available, under the surface of the earth, as well as the water on the top, to ship the water to Las Vegas. And so they have done some things in place historically, and we're to the point now where due to litigation we want to -- we'd like to bring it to a close, and to have some kind of settlement with the Southern Nevada Water Authority. And so that's why -- also why we're here.

And we need the BIA to sit with us at the table on litigation against Southern -- Southern Nevada Water Authority. Because water is precious in the West. You know, we have a saying in the West that says, you know, whiskey's for drinking, water's for fighting. But we're not here to fight, we're here to have a partnership with the -- with the Department of Interior, and specifically the BIA, to come to the table to -- to help us in that -- in that litigation.

With us, but they pulled out and at their protest saying that there was enough adequate monitoring, and -- and so they pulled out. And so we want them to -- want the BIA to get back with the tribe, that's the bottom line of why we're here, you know, together in a partnership would help us with the litigation to take care of what Southern Nevada Water Authority is trying to do.

And we -- we want to make sure that those things -- that doesn't happen, because once the water starts flowing southward into Las Vegas you can't stop it. But we can surely do some things previous to that happening. And that's -- and that's -- that's -- that's one of the things that we're -- we want. We want to have a Federal team together, along with our Tribe, to make presentations, so our water is not taken. Water, of course, is, you know, very precious amongst human beings in general.

So, for the record, I have some things I'd like to bring to your attention. We are in 1 negotiations with our -- with our State of Nevada, 2 3 and the State of Utah. Half of our reservation's in Utah, the other half is in the State of Nevada. 5 Utah has been working with us with their Natural Resources Department and their water -- their Water 7 Rights Department. 8 And we have -- we are in the process of 9 quantifying our water with the State of Nevada --10 State of Utah, and the -- and the governor, we've 11 brought it to the attention of Governor Herbert. 12 And he has given us his recommendation. We even 13 asked him to write a letter to the governor of 14 Nevada. And so Utah people are very -- very 15 supportive of what we -- of what we are doing. 16 So, we're asking the BIA to intervene with 17 us to protect our water rights. And -- and we're 18 basically asking the Federal Government to protect 19 the -- the base -- base water, which is underneath 20 the surface of the earth. We're willing to work 21 with Southern Nevada Water Authority's PE with the 22 surface water, but not the base water, because 23 there's a lot more water, you know, underneath the 24 surface of the earth than there is on the top. 25 And so, we have met with the previous Director, Director Black. And -- and to get the ball rolling again, and we were working on getting a team together. And now with the new Administration coming onboard we would like you to continue to have that partnership with us, as well as the, you know, the office of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and those who are in that office to assist us with our -- with our water.

And so that's -- that's basically why we're here. And since you -- you are giving us a listening here, I think that's what these consultations are for. And so we would like to have the BIA to say, you know, we're with you. You know, we -- part of the Constitution of the United States gives the Native American people across America sovereignty rights and self-determination. And we, as a tribe, we are very -- we are very proactive in a lot of things that we do on our reservation.

We are a small reservation on the Utah/Nevada border. We have about 615 Tribal members, and a third of those members live on the reservation and the other two-thirds are -- live in the urban setting, but we are still Native Americans. We're a small group of people. And we - we feel that due to our sovereignty and our self-determination we are a Tribe that is going forward.

And -- and part of that going forward is to protect our water.

And one of the things that we are very protective of dealing with water is I mentioned earlier, originally, our -- our territory extended into -- into the Salt Lake City area, down into the Las Vegas area and Northern Nevada, those were our -- our aboriginal lands. And because those are our aboriginal lands we have several sacred sites in that -- in that -- in that territory.

One of the sacred sites that we have in that area is called Swamp Cedars. And Swamp Cedars is a place aboriginally where our Native people went to do their sacred ceremonials and their prayers and their songs. And so it's a land that is very -- very sacred to -- to us as Native Americans.

Those who live in Eastern Nevada, the -the Ely Shoshones and some of the Te-Moak in Elko were all Shoshones. And so those lands are very sacred to us. We have a lot of cultural items that are located in those areas because, you know, those were areas where our aboriginal people traveled and mingled with other natives in that area. So, we have a -- we have some several sacred sites there.

And the Cedar Swamp area is in an area that is very sacred to us. And -- and it's located in Spring Valley, it's on the Nevada side, toward the north end of the Southern Nevada Pipeline Project. And -- and because of that we feel that that area needs to be protected.

As a matter of fact, historically that particular area had three massacres in -- in its history and our people were massacred there. In 1859 the calvary came and attacked our people when they were doing their ceremonials; men, women and children were killed at that site. And then two other times the same thing happened; they were attacked early in the morning without any kind of -- they were not creating any -- any kind of issue, but the military, through the years, you know, their -- their policy, it seems that they attack early in the morning, surprise the people, and many men, women and children were killed at that place.

And -- and since it's a swamp area, when the military came there they came there with their horses and some of their horses got bogged down in the swamp but, nevertheless, many of the Natives, practically all the Natives, were -- were killed in that area.

And a few of the people who still remember what happened, it's recorded that an individual who watched what happened said this is worst I have ever saw. It lasted two hours, and during that short period of time every Indian squaw, papoose and every dog was killed. And this was by an individual by the name of Elijah Wilson.

And then another time when it happened it happened again. This first time it happened from a calvary troop out of Utah. And the next time it happened from a calvary troop out of California.

And he's a colonel of the California Volunteers, he ordered to hunt -- troops -- he ordered his troops to hunt down -- down the Newe. Newe, that's the term we used to -- that -- that we are people. So, when we talk amongst each other we call ourselves Anirala, Anirala meaning, you know, you're -- you're my people, you're my person, you're my family.

And so this person said that the -- the Colonel ordered the Newe to be killed. And this was his comment, "Leave their bodies thus exposed as an example of what evildoers may expect. You will also destroy every male Indian whom you may encounter. This course may seem harsh and severe, but I desire that the order may be rigidly enforced, as I am merciful." I don't get it, but that was the attitude that the military had toward Native Americans historically.

And then it happened again. Well, you get the picture of what I'm saying, that that -- that particular area is very sacred to us Native people, the Goshutes and the people who live near to that area. And we feel that that -- those areas are sacred. When these people died, a cedar tree grew where -- where they died. So, that's why it's called Cedar -- Swamp Cedar, and -- and so that area is very sacred to us. And that area is an area where this pipeline would go through.

We don't want our sacred sites to be desecrated in any way. We want that area to be preserved. Because those spirits are still -- still linger there and we still go there to pray, and we still go there to do our ceremonials. And -- and that place is a very significant place for Native Americans in that area. And we want that area to be protected.

And so -- and then we also have other cultural sites that need to be protected, but the Southern Nevada Water Authority they -- they don't

1 see it that way. And, so, that's one of the reasons why we need to be in consultation for -- for trust 2 3 responsibilities of the Federal Government to protect those sacred sites for us -- us Native 5 Americans. It is important to us. 6 And -- and so that's why we're asking the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Department Of 7 Interior, to come to the table and sit with us 9 against this water litigation against Southern 10 Nevada Water Authority. So -- and I know we're a 11 small group, and -- and there's some time that we 12 could use. And I want to concede just a little --13 some of my time to our attorney, Mr. Tsosie, and he 14 can speak just a little bit further on it. 15 MR. TSOSIE: Paul Tsosie, I'm the attorney for the Confederated Tribes of the Goshute 16 17 Reservation. And the Chairman laid out some 18 history, some facts that were going on. And one of 19 the biggest points that we want to bring up was in 20 respect to the -- the standards that are used here. 21 Our -- the standards really do not take into 22 consideration cultural sites. We talk about Federal resources, we talk about how much money it will 23 24 cost, we talk about that, but we somehow need to 25 leave in there places like the Swamp Cedars that we're fighting for, that we're fighting Southern

Nevada Water Authority for, we're asking the Federal Government to help us in that process.

But we're also trying to establish a Federal water team. We've met BIA, we've met with Department of Interior. And that's one of the things that really stood out in the meetings was the story of the Swamp Cedars. And somehow there needs to be a criteria drafted that will take that into consideration, because that's what this Tribe and other tribes are -- are fighting for.

And other than that I think the Chairman laid out all -- all of the concerns. Thank you.

MR. JOHNSON: Thank you very much for listening to, you know, my comments, and the reason why we're here. And not only that, but the cultural end of what we hold sacred and dear to our lives is very important. And so -- and then the last thing is the water. Water is so sacred to -- to Native Americans, and -- and you've seen how sacred sites are protected, and what's happening at Standing Rock.

And so -- but we would rather work with the BIA, we would rather work so we're working in partnership together that -- that we get our -- our

1 -- our needs met. And -- and we continue to -- to live on this land that was given to us. 2 That's --3 that's what we would like to see. And I know that we, our Tribe specifically, we -- we haven't made a 5 big issue, a big deal about our rights and the massacres and things like that happened, because, 7 again, I think we're taking the high road. Let me say it that way. And rather than not to get other tribal people across America involved with us. 9 10 that happens, then it happens. But we -- we want to 11 work in a partnership situation. To us, that --12 that's significant. And that's why we're here. 13 Thank you for listening. 14 MR. MECHAM: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. 15 other tribal leaders or representatives? I guess we 16 can also open it up to any -- any comments from 17 those attending today. We have time. Mary, he said 18 everything --19 MS. PAVEL: Well, no. 20 MR. MECHAM: We -- we have time. 21 MS. PAVEL: Okay. Mary Pavel, attorney 22 with Sonosky, Chambers, Sachse, Endreson & Perry, 23 working with the Confederated Salish Kootenai Tribes 24 of the Flathead Reservation. I think the 25 Councilman's last -- or one of his points regarding

1 the uniqueness of every situation, whether it's the 2 Goshutes who needs to preserve access to water, to 3 preserve access to sacred sites, and resources, or the Montana construct of having the Montana Water 5 Commission, and doing all of that work with you, I know that you dedicated hours and hours 7 and hours. And it feels a little bit like you did all of that work at the State level to get it 9 through the State legislature, and now we're having 10 to do more work to get the Federal Dakota included. 11 And I'm -- I'm not -- I'm not sure if that 12 could have been avoided, but you have to have a 13 little bit of adaptability or includability. that in Montana then we're done in Montana, 14 15 obviously, but it -- it didn't last. But the Goshute 16 presented another unique situation, saying well, 17 you've got to now get Nevada to the table. 18 So, in Montana we had Montana to the 19 table, and it still -- we still have to go through 20 the process of working now with the Federal Water 21 Rights team and do the review and the assessment 22 and, you know, the process that Duane first 23 outlined. I'm not sure that's very efficient. 24 we can bring some more efficiencies to it, because 25 it's a -- it's a lot. Right? To -- to listen to the Goshute now say we can't get Nevada to do, we've got a good partner in Utah.

And I agree in terms of your efficiencies in wanting to have everybody at the table, Nevada, Utah, you know, all of the stakeholders. But the criteria have to be agile enough where the workers - the -- the people implementing it, I think, to -- to -- to make it work, so that we're not starting at square one again.

And it feels -- I mean I know that for us it may be -- it could be we're not incurring institutional knowledge there with the people on the ground that are working towards us and -- and informing us, but that's because we had that Montana process. I'm not sure how we can bring some of that foundational work into -- into the beginning of the process, but I think that's something that's important for the picture to give you.

The other thing that -- and I know you guys heard a lot about it in the beginning of this process was the new guidance that OMB brought forward and -- and how that's going to implement the process that you outlined, because you guys talk about -- in that -- in that process you talked about that the team then informs the Secretary. But it seems that the guidance required the team to have -it seemed to require even what benchmarks before you could inform the secretary, and permissions, and I'm just wondering how that -- if -- if we're gonna -- if you are still going to have to be required to be guided by that guidance is that going to be somehow more formalized in the Criteria and Procedures?

Obviously, you heard a lot about that. And we think that guidance was a little bit out of bound, and not really consistent with how things are working on the ground, let alone institute a different water team for the tribal negotiations and things. It seems kind of a -- a you know, that's not how the process really worked. But if that is something that is going to guide you we need to know how that works. Because, again, we're running -you know, we're doing a lot of work with the water team and we're -- you know, we're reaching agreement on critical points and critical issues, but if -- if that's not really agreement -- if we haven't -- if we're -- if we're not -- if you've got to go then run the traps on that agreement with another agency that's not in the room and not at the table, again, that -- you know, it just leaves us kind of floating in air, and, you know, negotiating against ourselves a little bit.

So, you know, those are two points I want to think about is I don't know how you can bring agility to the criterion process, procedures, but I think we have to do it because each -- each situation is different, each priority is different.

Obviously, we have huge infrastructure needs, we have huge fishery protection needs, there are sacred sites, their certainty, you know, depends on what -- what is the value, what is the priority for the Tribal government, maybe even the Fed. You know, that's going to have to inform how you calculate value, how you assess the measure of contribution, how you assess the value of the waivers being given.

So, thank you.

MR. TSOSIE: I just have one question.

You said that you're accepting questions. Now, you're going through the whole process of gathering information. Well, Paul Tsosie, attorney for the Confederated Tribes of the Goshute Reservation. You go into this whole consultation process, you're going out to Indian country, gathering all this information.

I just want to know in the next four years with this changeover in Administration now what's it going to look like? I mean is this changeover in the Administration going to affect all of this input that you're getting right now? What's your thoughts on that?

MR. MECHAM: Paul, we will address that question. Just let me confirm if any other folks have any comments to bring up. I don't have a gavel, but actually we have -- we did this schedule until 11:00, so I think we'll keep the record open until 11:00. But if there are no more comments from the folks who are here now, let me go ahead and try to address Paul's question.

Obviously, at the cusp of any new Administration, and maybe I'll preface that by saying I certainly don't speak for the new Administration at this stage, because it's, A, not really here for a week or two but, B, we haven't had the occasion to -- to be -- we have just this week and over the next couple of weeks will have opportunities to provide basic background briefings to the transition team. And that, of course, sets up a foundation for the new folks to have an initial understanding that this is one of the many, many

1 programs at Interior and how it fits in with the overall mission. 2 3 I have had the opportunity to work through, and can prove by the grey here, that a 5 number of Administrations going back -- it's been so long I can't remember how far back. But having lived through a number of transitions to new 7 Administrations, including from one party to another, I -- I can say generally that for -- for 9 10 both parties, for any new Administration, they --11 they do get it, they do understand that these 12 issues, A, are -- are -- are very important and, B, 13 have many players that are not just the United 14 States or just the Department of the Interior. 15 And -- and an acknowledgment that in 16 almost every instance these issues as they play out, 17 and we've had two good examples of individual 18 situations here, the Salish Kootenai Tribes, and the 19 Goshute Tribes, how those individual circumstances 20 sort of rise above the partisan issues and they are 21 a local situation, with local parties affected, and 22 the local Tribes affected and the State affected. 23 So, these issues tend to be bipartisan. 24 And we will be keeping, you know, as best 25 as possible, folks apprised about the new Administration's bringing on their -- their -- their -- their -- their new people who will -- who will be the leads for the Indian water issues. If -- if you have a pending or anticipating having a request for an Indian water right negotiation team you can bring that up with us at any time, and we will raise that with -- with the new Administration once they're in place.

Beyond that I -- we -- we simply have to wait until the folks are onboard and confirm exactly what their priorities are. And -- and as with respect to wrapping up this -- Mary's comments as well, wrapping up this particular consultation, we will develop a full report recognizing the themes the tribes have raised, the recommendations they've raised, and the -- the concerns they've raised.

And we will present that, it will have the discussions going forward within the Administration. Once this issue is engaged with them, and they have folks to engage in, will involve the Department of Justice, the Department of the Interior, and a number of agencies of Interior, BIA, Bureau of Reclamation and others, Solicitor's office, and the Office of Management and Budget.

And so beyond that I -- I haven't been

1 given a specific time frame by which we'll -- we will wrap up our -- our report on these issues. But 3 through -- through various opportunities, even just calling us, we will give you updates. And there are 5 various public forums; for example, in the summer the -- there is a joint state/tribal conference on 7 Indian water issues that I believe will happen this summer, cosponsored by the Western States Water 9 Council and Native American Rights Fund, where I 10 believe we will be recommending that Administration 11 folks be at that -- at that conference to provide 12 additional views on -- on these issues. 13 So, a long answer, maybe not a very 14 concise one. But that's -- that's some thoughts on -15 - on how things have happened and how they will go 16 forward. 17 All right. With that, I appreciate all of 18 the -- we all appreciate the information provided. 19 Virgil, do you --20 MR. JOHNSON: Yeah. Can I make -- may I 21 make a comment? 22 MR. MECHAM: Of course. 23 MR. JOHNSON: Just a comment that I made 24 at a meeting probably a month ago, month-and-a-half 25 ago, down in Phoenix when I met with the IHS people.

And the comment I made at the time is I'm concerned with -- with the new Administration coming onboard, especially with the new anticipated leader of the Department of Interior, Mr. Zinke from Montana.

Just some of the things that I have read about him, he kind of flip-flops on -- on some of the issues dealing with land, shelling the land back to the public.

I know Secretary Jewell came to Utah last year to a place called Bluff, Utah, way down there in the southeast corner of the State of Utah, in -- in support of the Bears Ears Monument that President Obama made available to set that land aside for the Natives in that area. And -- and -- and with the new Department of Interior coming in I -- I'm just a little concerned about, you know, where he will stand when it comes to dealing with Native Americans.

And hopefully there -- there will be enough people strong enough who have supported Native Americans in the Department of Interior to give him some good direction as to -- in dealing with Native Americans across Indian country. I know just by listening on things that are happening with the new Administration, I think we're going to take a -- a different turn than how things have been done before.

I know there has been a lot of issues with President Obama from the democrats and the republicans, but for Native Americans I -- I think he -- he was very helpful in -- in dealing with some Natives and -- across American in Indian country, and doing what was right for them.

And so I just want to go on record to say that I'm -- you know, I'm concerned as a tribal leader for our Tribe. That it's a new Administration coming on, that what has been I think, kind of like an open-door policy for Native Americans, is going to be shut down. So, with the new Department of the Interior Secretary coming onboard, hopefully, he'll, you know, make some good decisions on our behalf and not -- and not be -- you know, flip-flop on what he's doing. I know he had a session, he had a listening session, I believe, in Montana. And he wanted to duck the Antiquities Act.

The Antiquities Act is the Act that President Obama was able to use in order to set that land aside in the Bears Ears Monument down in southeastern Utah. That land is now set aside to protect the sacred sites, and the various prayer

places, and gathering wood and things like that that 1
   the Native of Americans in that area.
             So, I just want to be on -- go on -- go on record to -- to at least say that I'm concerned.
 5
   And that people in the right places would speak their piece, and give the opinion of the Native 7 Americans that we are concerned that there -- there would still be support for Native Americans across 9 America.
10
             MR. MECHAM: Thank you. All right. Well, 11 thank you all, again, for participating. And we 12 will -- the Federal side will just stay here until 11:00 in case anybody got lost on the way. I guess
13
   I'll wrap up this portion of the session, unless 14 15 there's any final -- final comments. Is there 16 anything from the Federal side. Last call.
17
              (Whereupon, there was no response.)
18
             MR. MECHAM: Thank you very much for 19 attending.
20 (Whereupon, the meeting was concluded at 21
   10:15 a.m.)
