Dorchester Heights Monument at Boston National Historical Park preserves the 115-foot commemorative marble tower at the site of Revolutionary War fortifications that led to British troops evacuating Boston. However, conditions at the tower required urgent attention due to deterioration of structural elements, water damage, and damaged sidewalks that resulted in closure of areas for safety. This project completed repairs and restoration of the commemorative tower and surrounding area, including structural and foundational restoration, plumbing improvements, and accessibility improvements. This project helps ensure that the site can support commemorative activities associated with the 250th anniversary of signing of the Declaration of Independence in 2026.

GAOA LRF is funding Maintenance Action Teams (MATs) in the National Park Service and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. MATs are teams of federal employees, and in some cases NPS interns and members of youth and service corps, who can quickly mobilize across their region to complete smaller scope repair, rehabilitation, or historic preservation activities.

At Monomoy National Wildlife Refuge, MATs relocated a vault toilet threatened by erosion to a stable location where it will remain in public service for years to come.
