Timeline for the Performance Appraisal System

5-Level Performance System

INTRODUCTION

Managing employee performance is an integral part of the work that all managers and rating officials perform throughout the year. It is as important as managing financial resources and program outcomes because employee performance or the lack thereof, has a profound effect on both the financial and program components of any organization.

The Department of the Interior's performance management policy is designed to document the expectations of individual and organizational performance, provide a meaningful process by which employees can be rewarded for noteworthy contributions to the organization, and provide a mechanism to improve individual/organizational performance as necessary.

To accomplish these objectives, managers need to identify organizational goals to be accomplished, communicate individual and organizational goals to employees that support the overall strategic mission and/or Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA) goals of the Department of the Interior, monitor and evaluate employee performance, and use performance as a basis for appropriate personnel actions, including rewarding noteworthy performance and taking action to improve less than successful performance.

The Office of Personnel Management defines performance management as the systematic process of:

- planning work and setting expectations
- continually monitoring performance
- developing the capacity to perform
- periodically rating performance in a summary fashion; and
- rewarding good performance

10/4/04 #370DM430HB-1 (Revised 10-2016)

Replaces 11/1/95 FPM-418

This handbook is designed for Department of the Interior rating officials and employees to assist with the management of employee performance that is aligned with and supports organizational goals. It is divided into five areas coinciding with OPM's definition, with the final section expanded to include taking other actions based on performance including dealing with poor performance.

SECTION 1 - PLANNING

In an effective organization, work is planned in advance. This includes setting performance expectations and goals for individuals in order to channel efforts toward achieving organizational objectives. Involving employees in the planning process is essential to their understanding of the goals of the organization, what needs to be done, why it needs to be done, and expectations for accomplishing goals.

Performance elements tell employees what they have to do and standards tell them how well they have to do it.

DEVELOPING EMPLOYEE PERFORMANCE APPRAISAL PLANS (EPAP) The regulatory requirements for planning an employee's performance include establishing the elements and standards in their EPAP. An EPAP outlines the specific elements and standards that the employee is expected to accomplish during the rating cycle. Performance elements and standards should be strategically linked, results focused, measurable, understandable, verifiable, equitable, achievable, and provide for meaningful distinctions between levels of performance. In addition, EPAPs should be flexible so that they can be adjusted for changing program objectives and work requirements. When used effectively, these plans can be beneficial working documents that are discussed often, and not merely paperwork that is filed in a drawer and seen only when ratings of record are required.

ENSURING EMPLOYEES UNDERSTAND THE PERFORMANCE APPRAISAL SYSTEM

Supervisors need to ensure that their employees have a good basic understanding of the Performance Appraisal System. A tool that explains the system, Understanding Performance Management, has been developed for that purpose and is provided as an attachment to the EPAP forms (DI-3100S updated October 2016 and DI-3100 updated September 2012). Supervisors must provide that instructional tool to their employees and have them sign block A-3 on the cover page of the EPAP form when the performance plan is established to document receipt.

ELEMENTS The Department's policy outlines that employees may have a minimum of one and not more than five elements in their appraisal plans, all of which will be considered critical. Through these elements, employees are held accountable as individuals for work assignments and responsibilities of their position. A Critical Element is an assignment or responsibility of such importance that Unsatisfactory performance in that element alone would result in a determination that the employee's overall performance is Unsatisfactory. As defined by law, failure on one or more Critical Elements can result in the employee's reassignment, removal, or reduction in grade. Consequently, Critical Elements must describe work assignments and responsibilities that are significantly influenced by an employee's work effort and within the employee's control. For most employees this means that Critical Elements cannot describe a group's performance. However, a supervisor or manager can and should be held accountable for seeing that results measured at the group or team level are achieved. Critical Elements assessing group performance may be appropriate to include in the EPAP of a supervisor, manager, or team leader who can reasonably be expected to command the production and resources necessary to achieve the results (i.e., held individually accountable).

Supervisors and managers may use several documents and/or sources to assist them in determining the appropriate Critical Elements for their employees. These include but are not limited to:

- Goals and objectives as outlined in the Department's strategic plan
 - Specific performance goals established for a given program area as outlined in the Department's annual performance plan
 - Bureau/Office specific program goals and objectives
 - Functional area/organizational goals and objectives
 - Other internal management policy/direction
 - Laws and/or regulatory requirements
 - Customer/stakeholder feedback
 - Employee input
 - Employee position descriptions

Mandatory Elements: Department policy requires the following mandatory elements be included:

- All supervisors/managers— EPAPs for all supervisors and managers shall include the following Critical Element (one of the not more than five elements):

Supervisory/Managerial Element:

Performance of supervisory/managerial duties will be carried out in accordance with statutory/regulatory requirements and Bureau/Office policies governing the following areas:

- Merit System Principles
- Anti-harassment, anti-discrimination & EEO obligations
- Strengthening diversity & inclusion
- Effective management of ethics, conduct & discipline issues
- Strategic planning of workforce requirements and effective use of recruitment, retention and hiring tools
- Reasonable accommodation obligations
- Safety and occupational health obligations
- Strengthening employee engagement and customer service
- Effective performance management
- IT security, data protection and records management obligations
- Internal management policies and controls

See Benchmark standards below for description of standards for supervisors at the various performance levels.

- The President’s Memorandum requires that managers and supervisors with responsibility for hiring are:
- (1) more fully involved in the hiring process, including planning current and future workforce requirements, identifying the skills required for the job, and engaging actively in the recruitment and, when applicable, the interviewing process; and
- (2) accountable for recruiting and hiring highly qualified employees and supporting their successful transition into Federal service, beginning with the first performance review cycle starting after November 1, 2010;

- (3) reasonable standards must be developed to establish goals and identify bureau/office requirements and how they will be measured for that performance cycle.
- All employees—EPAPs must have at least one performance element that is linked to the strategic mission and/or Government Performance Results Act (GPRA) goals of the Department, Bureau/Office, and/or work unit. Rating officials should determine which appropriate GPRA/mission strategic goal(s), end outcome goal(s), end outcome performance measure(s), strategies, or strategy performance measure(s) can best be utilized to develop the critical element(s) and standards in each employee’s performance appraisal plan. This element(s) should be clearly labeled on the EPAP. (See Appendix 1 for some specific Bureau/Office examples.)

STANDARDS

The performance standards are expressions of the performance threshold(s), requirement(s), or expectation(s) that must be met for each element at a particular level of performance. They must be focused on results and include credible measures at the Fully Successful level (and at the Minimally Successful level if employee performance falls below the Fully Successful level) such as:

- QUALITY, addresses how well the employee or work unit is expected to perform the work and/or the accuracy or effectiveness of the final product. It refers to accuracy, appearance, usefulness, or effectiveness. Measures can include error rates (such as the number or percentage of errors allowable per unit of work) and customer satisfaction rates (determined through a customer survey/feedback).
- QUANTITY addresses how much work the employee or work unit is expected to produce. Measures are expressed as a number of products or services expected, or as a general result to achieve.

- TIMELINESS addresses how quickly, when, or by what date the employee or work unit is expected to produce the work.
- COST-EFFECTIVENESS addresses dollar savings or cost control. These should address cost-effectiveness on specific resource levels (money, personnel, or time) that can generally be documented and measured. Cost-effectiveness measures may include such aspects of performance as maintaining or reducing unit costs, reducing the time it takes to produce or provide a product or service, or reducing waste.

To develop specific measures, the rating official must determine which of the above general measure(s) are important for a given element, and then determine how to measure it.

The Benchmark Standards (listed below) have been developed and may be used to describe required performance levels for all Critical Elements. Using the described Benchmark Standard is not mandatory. When Benchmark Standards are used, additional specific, measurable criteria must be developed at the Fully Successful level for each Critical Element EXCEPT the Mandatory Supervisory/Managerial Critical Element. The Mandatory Supervisory/Managerial Critical Element may be applied without modification and the supervisory Benchmark Standards do not need any augmentation (unless the employee's performance falls below the Fully Successful level). While regulation only requires specific, measurable criteria to be identified at the Fully Successful level, rating officials are strongly encouraged to develop measurable criteria at additional levels so employees clearly understand their performance expectations at various levels.

If the Benchmark Standards below are not used, standards developed by the rating official should require levels of performance that are essentially equivalent to that described by the Benchmark Standard at each level. See Appendix 2 to assist you in developing your own standards.

The following Benchmark Standards are provided for your use in describing expected performance at the various levels of the plan. These Benchmark Standards can be applied to every position, but must be augmented with specific standards that describe the results expected at the Fully Successful level for each element. Additionally, standards must explain how well they must be performed to be successful.

While each and every criterion described in the Benchmark Standards will not have to be met by the employee in absolute terms to assign a particular rating level, the rating official MUST ensure the employee understands the overall level of performance they are expected to meet in order to be assigned a given rating level.

The Benchmark Standards are separated into those applicable to Employees and Supervisory Employees.

Benchmark Employee Performance Standards

Exceptional:

Employee: The employee demonstrates particularly excellent performance that is of such high quality that organizational goals have been achieved that would not have been otherwise. The employee demonstrates mastery of technical skills and a thorough understanding of the mission of the organization and has a fundamental impact on the completion of program objectives.

The employee exerts a major positive influence on management practices, operating procedures and/or program implementation, which contribute substantially to organizational growth and recognition. The employee plans for the unexpected and uses alternate ways of reaching goals. Difficult assignments are handled intelligently and effectively. The employee has produced an exceptional quantity of work, often ahead of established schedules and with little supervision.

The employee's oral and written communications are exceptionally clear and effective. He/she improves cooperation among participants in the workplace and prevents misunderstandings. Complicated or controversial subjects are presented or explained effectively to a variety of audiences so that desired outcomes are achieved.

Superior:

Employee: Employee demonstrates unusually good performance that exceeds expectations in critical areas and exhibits a sustained support of organizational goals. The employee shows a comprehensive understanding of the objectives of the job and the procedures for meeting them.

Effective planning by the employee improves the quality of management practices, operating procedures, task assignments and/or program activities. The employee develops and/or implements workable and cost-effective approaches to meeting organizational goals. The employee demonstrates an ability to get the job done well in more than one way while handling difficult and unpredicted problems. The employee produces a high quantity of work, often ahead of established schedules with less than normal supervision.

The employee writes and speaks clearly on difficult subjects to a wide range of audiences and works effectively with others to accomplish organizational objectives.

Fully Successful:

Employee: The employee demonstrates good, sound performance that meets organizational goals. All critical activities are generally completed in a timely manner and supervisor is kept informed of work issues, alterations and status. The employee effectively applies technical skills and organizational knowledge to get the job done. The employee successfully carries out regular duties while also handling any difficult special assignments. The employee plans and performs work according to organizational priorities and schedules. The employee communicates clearly and effectively.

Minimally Successful:

Employee: The Department of the Interior has not developed a benchmark standard for the Minimally Successful standard for this performance cycle; however, managers and supervisors must develop a Minimally Successful standard when plans are established for the year and/or if it is determined that an employee has not achieved Fully Successful performance. This may include a specific benchmark standard in the EPAP itself or a narrative Letter of Expectations attached and made part of the performance standard which must indicate the following information: 1) the employee is on notice that his/her performance is less than Fully Successful; 2) that the employee's performance is Minimally Successful and what constitutes the Minimally Successful performance (written in a forward, not backward manner), such as "your performance is Minimally Successful which means that you have completed certain work products 50% of the time"; 3) that the employee must continue at this level in order to avoid falling to the Unsatisfactory level; and 4) that the expectation is that the employee will get back to the Fully Successful level of performance. Please contact your servicing Human Resource Office for assistance.

Unsatisfactory:

Employee: The employee's performance is unsatisfactory. The quality and quantity of the employee's work are not adequate for the position. Work products do not meet the minimum requirements expected.

The employee demonstrates little or no contribution to organizational goals; failure to meet work objectives; inattention to organizational priorities and administrative requirements; poor work habits resulting in missed deadlines and/or incomplete work products; strained work relationships; failure to respond to client needs; and/or lack of response to supervisor's corrective efforts.

Benchmark Supervisory Employee Performance Standards

Exceptional:

Supervisory: The employee demonstrates excellent leadership skills and with only rare exceptions develops effective working relationships with others; immediately handles difficult situations with subordinates with professionalism and effectiveness, and demonstrates foresight in correcting situations that may cause future problems before they arise; encourages independence and risk-taking among subordinates, yet takes responsibility for their actions; is open to and solicits the views of others, and promotes cooperation among peers and subordinates, while guiding, motivating and stimulating positive responses.

The employee demonstrates a strong commitment to fair treatment, equal opportunity and the affirmative action objectives of the organization, and has a significant positive impact on achievement of goals in this area. In addition, the employee demonstrates innovation and specific positive achievements in meeting other management obligations such as the Merit System Principles, anti-harassment, anti-discrimination and EEO obligations, strengthening diversity and inclusion, effective management of ethics, conduct and discipline issues, strategic planning of workforce requirements and effective use of recruitment, retention and hiring tools, reasonable accommodation obligations, safety and occupational health obligations, strengthening employee engagement and customer service, effective performance management, IT security, data protection and records management obligations, and internal management policies and controls. . The employee systematically monitors quality, delivery, and customer satisfaction levels and makes adjustments accordingly; and works with staff to proactively implement solutions to prevent problems and avoid gaps in customer expectations.

Effective Performance Management: The employee uses staff preferences and performance information to identify both immediate and long-term developmental needs, helps staff to identify their own developmental needs and provides challenging assignments to address those needs; promotes cooperation among peers and subordinates, while guiding, motivating and stimulating positive responses to accomplishments; and provides continuing constructive performance feedback, working with employees to identify ways to improve their strengths.

Superior:

Supervisory: The Supervisory employee demonstrates good leadership skills and establishes sound working relationships; almost always handles difficult situations with subordinates with professionalism and effectiveness; shows good judgment in dealing with others and considering their views; has a strong sense of mission and seeks out responsibility; demonstrates a commitment to fair treatment, equal opportunity and the affirmative action objectives of the organization, and has a positive impact on achievement of goals in this area. In addition, the employee promotes a safe working environment and solutions to problems encountered in meeting other management obligations such as the Merit System Principles, anti-harassment, anti-discrimination and EEO obligations, strengthening diversity and inclusion, effective management of ethics, conduct and discipline issues, strategic planning of workforce requirements and effective use of recruitment, retention and hiring tools, reasonable accommodation obligations, safety and occupational health obligations, strengthening employee engagement and customer service, effective performance management, IT security, data protection and records management obligations, and internal management policies and controls. Employee anticipates customer needs and resolves or avoids potential problems, resulting in high customer satisfaction. Supervisory employee tailors methods of reward and recognition to the individual to the extent possible, resulting in increased motivation in staff; and solicits employee input and takes initiative to seek out and arrange for a variety of developmental opportunities beyond standard training.

Effective Performance Management: Using effective planning works with employees to exceed expectations in critical areas and shows sustained support of organizational goals; establishes sound working relationships with subordinates and shows good judgment in dealing with them, considering their views; works with employees to develop plans and timeframes to improve performance.

Fully Successful:

Supervisory: The Supervisory employee is a capable leader who works successfully with others and listens to suggestions. The employee generally handles difficult situations with subordinates with professionalism and effectiveness. The employee also works well as a team member, supporting the group's efforts and showing an ability to handle a variety of interpersonal situations. The employee's work with others shows an understanding of the importance of fair treatment and equal opportunity and meets other management obligations such as the Merit System Principles, anti-harassment, anti-discrimination and EEO obligations, strengthening diversity and inclusion, effective management of ethics, conduct and discipline issues, strategic planning of workforce requirements and effective use of recruitment, retention and hiring tools, reasonable accommodation obligations, safety and occupational health obligations, strengthening employee engagement and customer service, effective performance management, IT security, data protection and records management obligations, and internal management policies and controls. The employee maintains contact with customers (internal and/or external), and is effective in understanding their needs and using feedback to address customer requirements. Provides timely, flexible, and responsive products and/or services to customers, resulting in valued products and services. Solicits employee input to improve work products and/or services and to develop employee skills. Recognizes and rewards employee contributions in a fair and consistent manner.

Effective Performance Management: The employee identifies and ensures alignment of unit goals with agency goals, seeks input of employees in the development of performance criteria, effectively translates and communicates project or work unit goals into concrete work assignments for staff; provides feedback and conducts reviews according to DOI established timeframes; ensures performance distinctions are made among individuals and awards are reflective of employee contributions toward organizational performance; and addresses poor performance in a fair and timely manner.

Minimally Successful:

Supervisory:

The Department of the Interior has not developed a benchmark standard for Minimally Successful standard for this performance cycle; however, managers and supervisors must develop a Minimally Successful standard when plans are established for the year and/or if it is determined that an employee has not achieved Fully Successful performance. This may include a specific standard in the EPAP itself or a narrative Letter of Expectations attached and made part of the performance standard which must indicate the following information: 1) the employee is on notice that his/her performance is less than Fully Successful; 2) that the employee's performance is Minimally Successful and what constitutes the Minimally Successful performance (written in a forward, not backward manner), such as "your performance is Minimally Successful which means that you have completed certain work products 50% of the time;" 3) that the employee must continue at this level in order to avoid falling to the Unsatisfactory level; and 4) that the expectation is that the employee will get back to the Fully Successful level of performance. Please contact your servicing Human Resource Office for assistance.

Unsatisfactory:

Supervisory: The Supervisory employee's performance is Unsatisfactory. The employee usually fails to motivate subordinates and promote team spirit; often provides unclear assignments and performance requirements or insufficient instructions to subordinates; frequently fails to provide sufficient explanation of organizational goals to subordinates; generally fails to satisfy customer needs and/or meet customer service objectives; and/or frequently fails to meet production or mission goals in a timely and quality manner. The employee's work with others consistently fails to show an understanding of the importance of fair treatment and equal opportunity. The employee frequently fails to meet other management obligations such as the Merit System Principles, anti-harassment, anti-discrimination and EEO obligations, strengthening diversity and inclusion, effective management of ethics, conduct and discipline issues, strategic planning of workforce requirements and effective use of recruitment, retention and hiring tools, reasonable accommodation obligations, safety and occupational health obligations, strengthening employee engagement and customer service, effective performance management, IT security, data protection and records management obligations, and internal management policies and controls.

EMPLOYEE PARTICIPATION

Supervisors/managers must involve employees in establishing the EPAP for their position. By participating, employees get a clearer understanding of what is required and what role their position plays in the activity of the organization. The final decision regarding critical

Designing effective feedback into a performance management program will improve individual and team performance and will make your organization more effective. With effective feedback processes, employees can see their progress and that motivates them to reach their performance goals successfully.

elements and standards always rests with the management official, however. The EPAP form has a block (A-2) that is to be signed by the employee and the supervisor indicating that employee input into the development of the EPAP was solicited by the supervisor. Employees should sign the EPAP, if the employee does not want to sign the EPAP, the supervisor should explain that the signature is for receipt, not agreement. In cases where the employee refuses to sign the EPAP, the supervisor has the authority to implement the performance standards without employee agreement. Supervisor's should identify in the employee's signature block that the "Employee Refused to sign."

Employee participation may be accomplished as follows:

- (1) Employee and rating official jointly developing the EPAP;
 - (2) Employee providing the rating official with a draft plan;
 - (3) Rating official providing the employee with a draft plan, or
 - (4) Employee writing one of the critical elements that he/she performs in his/her position.

DOCUMENTING ELEMENTS AND

STANDARDS The Critical elements and associated descriptions of expected performance described at the "Fully Successful" level, at a minimum, must be documented on the EPAP (See Appendix 8) and signed by the rating official and the employee. Reviewing officials may be required to review/approve the EPAP as determined by their Bureau/Office.

SECTION 2 - MONITORING

EPAPs should be developed and put in place within 60 days of the beginning of the appraisal period, the employee's entrance on duty, the assignment of an employee to a detail or temporary promotion scheduled to exceed 120 days, the assignment of an employee to a new position, or their assignment to a new or different Supervisory position. Rating officials who move out of their position more than 90 days before the end of the rating period should finalize progress reviews and where standards had been in place for the minimum of 90 days, prepare an interim appraisal for the incoming rating official. If an employee moves to a Supervisory position in the new organization, a review of the previous EPAPs should be accomplished and if accepted, both the new rating official and the employee sign and date the EPAP. If the new rating official makes changes to the plan, a new plan must be put in place, allowing the employee a minimum of 90 days under the new plan before a rating may be assigned. Remember, the 90 day period for a substantial change in an EPAP is for issuing a rating, either interim or rating of record. An employee may drop at any time to Minimally Successful or Unsatisfactory at which time immediate action to improve performance is necessary.

Effective and timely feedback during the performance appraisal period addressing employee performance on elements and standards is an essential component of a successful performance management program. Employees need to know in a timely manner how well they are performing. They need to be told what they are doing well and if there are areas needing improvement.

In order for the employee to receive a rating of record during the rating year, elements and standards must be in place a minimum of 90 days before the end of the rating period.

Feedback can come from many different sources: observation by managers and rating officials, measurement systems, feedback from peers, and input from customers, just to name a few. It will be up to rating officials to determine how best to gather the information, and from which sources, to ensure an effective rating of the employees under their supervision.

When providing feedback, the following concepts should be kept in mind:

- Feedback works best when it relates to a specific goal, such as those established in the employee's performance appraisal plan. Basing feedback on the employee's performance against his or her elements and standards is critical to providing tangible, objective, and powerful feedback. Telling employees that they are doing well because they exceeded their goal by 10 percent is more effective than simply saying, "You're doing a good job."
 - Employees should receive information about how they are doing in as timely a fashion as possible. If they need to improve their performance, the sooner they find out about it, the sooner they can correct the problem. If employees have reached or exceeded a goal, the sooner they receive positive feedback, the more rewarding it is to them.
 - Feedback should be given in a manner that will best help improve performance. Since people respond better to information presented in a positive way, express feedback in a positive manner. This is not to say that information should be sugar-coated, but present accurate, factual, and complete feedback; it is more effective when it reinforces what the employee did well and then identifies what the employee needs to do in the future to further improve his/her performance.

Part of the monitoring process includes conducting at least one formal progress review during each appraisal period at approximately mid-way through the rating cycle. The completion of this progress review is to be noted on the employee's performance appraisal plan by both the rating official and the employee signing the cover sheet at part B. While only one progress review is required, rating officials are encouraged to frequently discuss performance with subordinate employees during the appraisal period. This is particularly critical in the case of an employee who is not performing at the "Fully Successful" level. In this case, it may be necessary to provide additional written criteria on performance expectations and/or set up regular feedback sessions with the employee. It is important to contact your servicing Human Resources Office for advice and assistance before taking any action.

Some issues that may be discussed in a performance review:

For both employees & supervisors

- Communication
- Training requirements (formal, on-the-job, etc.)
- Sufficiency of skills and knowledge level for successful performance
- Status of work (challenging, fulfilling)
- Delegation of assignments
- Getting/giving regular feedback

For supervisors

- What could I do to help make your job easier or help you in any way?
 - Is your staff responding to assignments appropriately and in a timely fashion?

Rating officials should document employee performance, both good and when improvement is needed, throughout the year. By communicating in this manner, it will allow the rating official to provide specific examples to the employee during progress reviews, during the rating of record, or at other appropriate times throughout the year.

See Appendix 3 for additional supervisory guidance on Performance Reviews.

See Appendix 4 for additional employee guidance on Performance Reviews.

SECTION 3 –DEVELOPING EMPLOYEES

The process of performance management provides an excellent opportunity to identify developmental needs. During planning and monitoring of work, deficiencies in performance become evident and can be addressed. Areas for improving good performance also stand out, and action can be taken to help successful employees improve even further.

Developing employees is more than just training employees. Developing employees covers all efforts to foster learning, which happens on the job every day. When organizations focus on developing their employees' capacity to perform rather than just training them, employees will be able to adapt to a variety of situations, which is vital for the survival, well-being, and goal achievement of individuals as well as organizations.

Employee development can be either formal or informal. Formal development may include:

- traditional training in structured courses, classrooms, and formal development programs;
- details provide valuable experience for growth and additional skill sets.
- self-study courses, including those using computer technologies, such as distance learning over the Internet, CD-ROM courses, and Intranet courses provided to employees addressing agency-specific skills and competencies.

One effective means of identifying formal training for an employee is establishing an Individual Development Plan (IDP), as follows:

The Individual Development Plan 1-2-3 Process

1. Self-Assessment. The employee reviews prior job experience, training, education and other developmental experiences to provide concrete information regarding current strengths and skills. This could include a review of past applications for employment and past training records.

The employee reviews the standards for work performance to determine core competencies necessary for the job and past performance evaluations for indications of areas needing improvement and identifies core skills specific to that need.

Providing employees with training and developmental opportunities encourages good performance, strengthens job-related skills and competencies, and helps employees keep up with changes in the workplace, such as the introduction of new technology.

The employee assesses personal career goals and determines both short and long term steps toward achieving the goals.

The employee identifies specific opportunities for developmental experiences and researches possible sources for development. The employee may seek out career counseling from a variety of sources including peers, current and past supervisors, and the human resources staff.

The supervisor is available for clarifying and counseling.

2. Discussions and Collaboration. In order to obtain mutual commitment between the supervisor and the employee, open discussion and collaboration is necessary.

The employee and supervisor should mutually agree to discuss the results of the self-assessment and draft IDP prepared by the employee. The discussion includes both perspectives of organizational needs, job requirements, the employee's strengths and developmental needs, financial limitations, timing and learning opportunities that the supervisor will actively support.

The supervisor coaches the employee by giving open and constructive feedback, identifying challenging assignments, discussing career paths in the organization and reasonable timeframes for meeting the objectives of the IDP.

The supervisor and employee should sign a completed IDP based on mutual agreement or final decisions of the supervisor.

3. Implementation and Follow-up. The employee ensures that any necessary procurement or training request forms are prepared and monitors work that is assigned to best accomplish the IDP's developmental experiences. The employee reports on completion of items in the IDP. The supervisor and the employee meet periodically throughout the year to review and update the IDP.

Bureaus/Offices may require the use of an IDP at their discretion. Check with your Human Resources Office for the IDP or other appropriate form to be used by your Bureau/Office for documenting employee development needs.

While managers have a large influence over formal training, they have even greater impact on creating a climate for informal employee development, which can take a wide variety of forms:

- Feedback is a natural part of the monitoring process of performance management, but specific and timely feedback to employees about their performance against established expectations also provides the foundation for discussing developmental needs.
- Job rotations and special assignments can stretch and challenge employees and broaden their understanding of the organization.
- Coaching and counseling provides individualized advice and instruction.
- Mentoring helps employees clarify career goals, understand the organization, analyze strengths and developmental needs, build support networks, and deal with roadblocks.
- Using the manager as an informal teacher acknowledges that managers consciously teach employees through their own model, habits, and system of values.
- Learning teams can form to meet regularly to focus on improving performance.

- Self-development includes a broad collection of techniques and approaches, demonstrations at other organizations.

Although these informal developmental strategies cost very little, they have potentially big payoffs in terms of improved individual and organizational performance.

As part of a "performance improvement period," (PIP) training and/or development may also become a critical component of demonstrating assistance to employees who are not meeting performance requirements.

Rating officials should contact their servicing Human Resources Office or Employee Relations Specialist for assistance as soon as problems with an employee's performance develop. Also see Section 5 for more information on dealing with poor performance.

For additional information about the IDP, see Appendix 5.

SECTION 4 - RATING

Within the context of formal performance appraisal requirements, rating means evaluating employee performance against the elements and standards in an employee's performance appraisal plan and assigning a rating of record. The rating of record is based on work performed during the entire 12-month appraisal period, including temporary assignments over 120 days.

To be eligible for a rating of record an employee must:

- Be a permanent full-/part-time employee; and
 - Be under established standards for a minimum of 90 days;
- OR
- Be a temporary employee who has worked more than 120 days during the annual appraisal period; and
 - Be under established standards for at least the last 90 days.

INTERIM APPRAISALS Interim appraisals are written ratings prepared when an employee has worked under performance standards in the position for 90 days and if one or more of the following occurs:

- The employee changes position (i.e., reassignment, promotion, change to lower grade, transfer);
 - The employee completes a temporary assignment of more than 120 days (i.e., detail, temporary promotion, etc.);
 - The rating official leaves the supervisory position more than 90 days before the end of the rating cycle;
 - To document a level of competence determination for within-grade increase purposes when the employee's most recent rating of record is not consistent with the level of competence determination. A rating for this purpose becomes the rating of record.

A copy of the interim appraisal will be provided to the new rating official and to the employee. Any interim appraisals should be considered by the new rating official in assigning an official annual rating of record. The weight given to interim ratings in deriving annual ratings of record shall 10/4/04 #370DM430HB-1 (Revised 10-2016) be proportional to their share of the appraisal period.

RATING CRITICAL ELEMENTS Rating officials should compile performance data from various sources as a part of the rating process. It is often a good idea to ask employees to keep track of their own progress using data identified during the planning phase so they can provide a complete account of their accomplishments during progress reviews and the final rating. As discussed above, rating officials, as they deem appropriate, should also talk to customers and peers, review documentation, and incorporate other feedback if available to ensure a complete picture of the employee's performance.

The rating assigned reflects the level of the employee's performance as compared to the standards established. If an employee does not have an opportunity to perform a critical element during the rating period, no rating will be assigned and the words "Not Rated" should be written on the EPAP for that element.

When assigning a rating for each element, the rating official should consider the following:

1. Read carefully each performance standard level beginning with the Fully Successful one. It is to be considered the base level standard.
 2. Determine the level that best describes the employee's performance on the element. Each and every criterion in the standard does not have to be met by the employee in absolute terms to assign a particular rating level. The sum of the employee's performance of the element must, in the rater's judgment, meet the assigned level's criteria.

Remember, the 90 day period for a substantial change in an EPAP is for issuing a rating, either interim or rating of record. An employee may drop at any time to Minimally Successful or Unsatisfactory at which time immediate action to improve performance is necessary.

Each Critical Element should be assigned one of the following ratings based on the employee's performance for the appraisal period and documented on the Performance Plan:

Rating Level	Points Assigned
Exceptional	5 points
Superior	4 points
Fully Successful	3 points
Minimally Successful	2 points
Unsatisfactory	0 point

RATING OF RECORD Within 30 days following completion of the appraisal period (including any extensions, if applicable), the rating official shall review the performance of each employee based on previously communicated elements and standards and prepare the annual rating of record.

Elements are to be rated only with whole numbers.

Rating officials shall not assign employee ratings under an arbitrary distribution system (such as a bell curve). This is contrary to the intent of the appraisal system and would interfere with assigning ratings based on actual performance.

A narrative summary must be written for each Critical Element assigned a rating of Exceptional, Minimally Successful, or Unsatisfactory. This narrative should contain examples of the employee's performance that substantiate and explain how the employee's performance falls within the levels assigned. The narrative summaries are recorded on the EPAP. A narrative summary is encouraged, but not required, for ratings of Superior and Fully Successful.

All ratings of record of Exceptional, Minimally Successful, and Unsatisfactory must be reviewed and approved by the reviewing official prior to discussion with the employee. A review of the summary rating is not required for ratings of Superior and Fully Successful, unless established by internal Bureau/Office guidance. See Appendix 8 for a sample completed EPAP.

DISCUSSION WITH EMPLOYEE The rating official will discuss the completed EPAP with the employee after all required approvals are obtained.

The rating official should be prepared to have a thorough performance rating discussion. In preparation for the discussion, the rating official should ensure the following:

- All necessary approvals of the rating of record have been completed.
 - Employee performance on each Critical element during the rating period has been reviewed and noted, including tasks that were completed well and any areas needing improvement. Specific examples should be noted when possible.
 - A private location and adequate time has been put aside to meet with the employee, including time for employee input (As a general rule, 30 minutes to one hour per employee).
 - Future expectations and goals of the organization have been considered.

During the meeting, the rating official should do the following:

- Be professional, calm and focused on performance issues.
 - Begin with positive feedback on tasks the employee has done well regardless of what the final rating is.
 - Go through each element and discuss items of note, both positive and negative as appropriate and assign a rating.
 - Provide specific examples when possible.
 - Describe any changes in performance required and ensure the employee understands.
 - Allow for employee questions and input throughout.
 - Summarize the performance and assign the rating of record.
 - Have the employee sign and date the "Employee" block on the EPAP.
 - Sign and date the "Rating Official" block on the EPAP.

In cases where the employee refuses to sign the EPAP, the supervisor has the authority to implement the performance rating. Supervisor's should identify in the employee's signature block that the "Employee refused to sign."

Rating Officials should keep a copy of the completed EPAP for their files, provide a copy of the completed and signed form to the employee, and send the original to the servicing Human Resources Office within 60 days of the end of the rating period to be filed in the Employee Performance Folder (EPF).

EMPLOYEE SUPPLEMENTAL COMMENTS An employee may submit written comments to the overall rating of record, the element ratings and/or the narrative comments if they desire. This may occur if an employee wishes to provide specific information on noteworthy accomplishments that the rating official did not include, or if they have other comments that they wish to include as part of the performance appraisal plan. NOTE: THIS PROCESS MAY BE UTILIZED ONLY WHEN THE EMPLOYEE IS NOT CONTESTING THE RATING HE/SHE RECEIVED ON A GIVEN ELEMENT, WHICH, IF CHANGED, WOULD AFFECT THE OUTCOME OF THE OVERALL RATING OF RECORD.

These comments must be submitted to the rating official within 30 days of the date the employee receives/signs the rating of record on the EPAP. The rating official should forward these comments to their servicing Human Resources Office to be filed with the completed EPAP in the EPF. These written comments will not change the rating of record as determined by the rating official.

RECONSIDERATION PROCESS - When an employee has a concern about the rating given on a particular element, which, if changed, will affect the outcome of the rating of record, he/she may request a reconsideration of this rating through their Bureau/Office reconsideration process.

Each Bureau/Office may determine the process that will be utilized when an employee requests reconsideration of a rating, and whether to use the reviewing official in the reconsideration process, or choose a reconsideration official, reconsideration committee, or other designee to review the reconsideration request. Bureaus/Offices have discretion to change the process and/or timeframes outlined below, but must ensure the process includes an informal and formal stage and that timeframes are reasonable. In addition, the authority to make a final decision on a request for reconsideration must remain within a given Bureau/Office. Each Bureau/Office must formally notify all employees of its reconsideration process.

Informal Reconsideration Procedure - When possible, the employee and rating official should informally attempt to resolve any disagreement about the performance appraisal and/or rating. An employee must discuss their dissatisfaction with the rating official before requesting a formal reconsideration unless the employee requests in writing to move directly to the formal stage and this is allowed by the Bureau/Office reconsideration process. This informal discussion should take place within 7 calendar days of the employee's receipt of the Employee Performance Appraisal Form, and the rating official's decision must be communicated to the employee, either verbally or in writing, within 7 calendar days of the informal reconsideration discussion.

If agreement cannot be reached informally, the employee may request a formal reconsideration of the rating through their servicing Human Resources Office.

Requesting a Formal Reconsideration - To request a formal reconsideration, the employee should send a written request to their servicing Human Resources Office within 7 calendar days of receipt of decision of the informal meeting. This request should include the following:

- Employee organization and duty station;
 - Copy of the annual appraisal for which a reconsideration is being requested;
 - Specific area(s) or details of the annual appraisal for which the reconsideration is being requested;
 - The identity of the employee's designated representative (name, title, address, and telephone number), if applicable;
 - Why the employee believes the rating is in error, with supporting facts and documents;
 - The action the employee requests of the reconsideration official or the reconsideration committee; and

- A copy of the written decision of the informal reconsideration by the rating official, a statement confirming that the informal process was followed, and/or a written request to move directly to the formal stage.

The servicing Human Resources Office will review the formal request for reconsideration to determine if it is appropriate for acceptance under these procedures. If it is not accepted, the request will be returned to the employee with an explanation of the reason(s) for non-acceptance. If accepted, the request for reconsideration is referred within 14 calendar days of receipt to the reconsideration official, reconsideration committee, or other designee established by the Bureau/Office.

The formal reconsideration process shall be carried out by a person or person(s) as determined by the Bureau/Office, who have not been involved in the reconsideration request and, when practical, who do not occupy a position subordinate to any official who recommended, advised, or made a decision in connection with the appraisal involved. The servicing Human Resources Office shall advise the reconsideration official or committee members of their responsibilities during this formal process.

An employee may be represented during the formal reconsideration process. The Bureau/Office may disallow the employee's choice of representative for reason of conflict of interest or position or unreasonable cost to the Government.

The authority of the reconsideration official or reconsideration committee is limited to an impartial reconsideration of the employee's dissatisfaction with the rating given on a particular element that he/she believes may adversely affect the annual rating of record. The employee may not dispute (1) the number or type of performance elements identified for their position, or (2) the substance or contents of performance standards, including the objective criteria against which performance will be measured.

The reconsideration official or reconsideration committee shall be provided all the resources necessary to complete the impartial reconsideration and render the Bureau/Office decision.

The reconsideration official or reconsideration committee is responsible for the following actions in considering an employee's formal reconsideration request:

- (1) Reviewing any evidence or information submitted by the employee, rating official, and/or reviewing official;
- (2) Consulting with the employee, the employee's representative (if applicable), the rating official, the reviewing official, and staff experts as necessary and appropriate;
- (3) Increasing the summary rating or an element rating; removing or modifying narrative comments, or leaving the summary rating, element ratings, or narrative comments unchanged; and
- (4) Issuing a final written decision within 20 calendar days of receipt of the request for reconsideration that includes documentation of the basis for the decision. This document must be given to the employee and filed in the Employee Performance File (EPF).

The decision rendered by the reconsideration official or reconsideration committee (or other designee as determined by the Bureau/Office) is final and becomes the official rating of record.

Timeframes outlined above (or in the established Bureau/Office reconsideration process) may be extended on a case-by-case basis upon mutual consent of the parties and with concurrence of the servicing Human Resources Office.

Employees covered by a Collective Bargaining Agreement that includes a reconsideration procedure will be governed by that procedure as the exclusive method to request reconsideration.

SECTION 5 - ACTIONS BASED ON PERFORMANCE

A basic principle of effective management is that all behavior is controlled by its consequences. Those consequences can and should be both formal and informal and both positive and negative. Positive consequences include rewards and recognition, promotions, within-grade-increases, etc. Negative consequences may include counseling, reassigning, removing, or downgrading the employee.

REWARDING PERFORMANCE - Rewarding performance means providing incentives to, and recognition of, employees for their performance at work and acknowledging their contributions to the agency's mission. Recognition is an ongoing, natural part of day-to-day experience. Good performance should be recognized without waiting for nominations for formal awards to be solicited.

Awards may come in many forms, including cash, time off, non-monetary items, honor awards, etc. Many of the actions that reward good performance — like saying “You did a good job.” — don’t require specific regulatory authority and are easy to give.

Under Departmental policy 370 DM 430, an employee must be rated at Level 4 (Superior) or Level 5 (Exceptional) to be eligible for an award for sustained superior performance. Employees rated at Level 5 (Exceptional) must be considered for an award.

Supervisors/Managers have the flexibility to recognize employees using any of the following forms of recognition or combination thereof (i.e., individual cash award and a Time-Off Award):

- Exceptional (Level 5): Eligible for an individual cash award up to 5% of base pay; a Quality Step Increase; Time-Off Award; or other appropriate equivalent recognition. Additionally, may be eligible for a salary increase of up to 5% from the Human Capital Performance Fund.
- Superior (Level 4): Eligible for an individual cash award up to 3% of base pay; Time-Off Award, non-monetary award, or other appropriate equivalent recognition.
- Fully Successful (Level 3): Eligible for awards such as monetary, non-monetary, Time-off, or other appropriate equivalent recognition, given for reasons other than sustained performance tied to the rating of record.
- Minimally Successful (Level 2): Ineligible for any performance recognition.
- Unsatisfactory (Level 1): Ineligible for any performance recognition.

Supervisors/Managers should contact their servicing Human Resources Office for further information and assistance regarding appropriate delegations and procedures that must be followed.

LINKS TO OTHER PERSONNEL ACTIONS -

The rating of record has a bearing on various other personnel actions, such as granting within-grade pay increases, promotions, determining additional retention service credit in a reduction in force, etc. The relationship of the rating of record to other personnel actions includes the following:

Within-Grade Increases: For General Schedule Employees: In order to justify granting a within-grade increase, the employee must be performing at an "acceptable level of competence." An employee whose current performance of a critical element fails to meet the standards or whose overall performance is less than Fully Successful is not performing at an acceptable level of competence and the within-grade increase must be withheld. An employee's rating of record must be no lower than Level 3 (Fully Successful) for an employee to receive a within-grade increase. This may require a rating official to prepare a new rating of record before the end of the waiting period for a within-grade increase in order to document that an employee previously rated at Level 1 or 2 has improved performance to an acceptable level of competence. Conversely, for an employee whose most recent summary rating is at Level 3 or higher, but whose performance has deteriorated to the degree that the rating official wishes to withhold a within-grade increase, the rating official must prepare a new rating of record to document that performance has fallen to a Level 1 or 2. Supervisors/Managers should contact their servicing Human Resources Office for further information and assistance. (See Section 4, "Interim Appraisals.")

For Federal Wage System Employees: An employee under a regular Federal Wage System (FWS) schedule with a current rating of record of Fully Successful or better shall be advanced to the next higher step within the grade upon completion of the required waiting period. FWS employees with a current performance appraisal of Minimally Successful or Unsatisfactory shall have step increases withheld until their performance improves to the Fully Successful level. The rating of record should reflect appropriate performance at the time the step increase is given.

Promotion: In order to be noncompetitively promoted to a higher grade in a career ladder, an employee must have a current rating of record of Fully Successful or better in addition to meeting other prescribed requirements. In considering an employee for merit promotions under competitive procedures, due weight will be given to Supervisory appraisals of past and/or present performance.

Probationary/Trial Periods: New employees must be carefully observed during the probationary/trial period to determine whether they have the qualities needed to become satisfactory career employees. Proper use of periodic progress reviews to determine progress during the probationary/trial period can do much to assure that these employees have adequately demonstrated their qualifications and fitness. However, an employee may be removed at any time during the probationary/trial period if his/her performance is less than "Fully Successful."

Replaces 11/1/95 FPM-418

Probationary Period for Supervisors and Managers: Individuals serving a supervisory or managerial probationary period need to be observed to determine whether they perform supervisory or managerial duties in a Fully Successful manner. New supervisors and managers who do not successfully complete the probationary period are normally returned to a position of the same grade and pay as that held prior to the Supervisory or managerial position as long as that position was held at the Department of the Interior. Proper use of progress reviews during this period can do much to ensure that the employee has fully demonstrated the qualifications and skills necessary for the Supervisory or managerial position.

Reductions-in-Force: An employee's performance rating of record is used to determine the employee's assignment rights during a Reduction-in-Force (RIF). Employees are given performance credit for RIF retention by adjusting the employee's service date for RIF purposes. Generally the employee receives additional service credit based on the average of the three most recent ratings of record received during the 4-year period prior to the issuance of the RIF notice. Service credit is provided as follows:

Level 5 (Exceptional) Rating - 20 years
Level 4 (Superior) Rating - 16 years
Level 3 (Fully Successful) Rating - 12 years
Level 2 (Minimally Successful) Rating - 0 years
Level 1 (Unsuccessful) Rating - 0 years

If an employee received a rating of record under other than a 5-level system during the timeframe used to determine the average years of service to be credited, he/she will receive service credit for RIF purposes in accordance with 5 CFR 351.504.

Performance credit is only one of many variables that must be considered in a RIF. Supervisors and employees should contact their servicing Human Resources Office for further information.

DEALING WITH POOR PERFORMANCE At any time in the performance appraisal cycle that you find that the employee's performance is not meeting performance expectations, it is important that you take appropriate action to deal with the poor performance. This includes contacting your servicing Human Resources Office for advice and assistance. They are available to provide support to rating officials in documenting performance, providing feedback to the employee, and assessing courses of action.

An employee who is performing at the Minimally Successful level cannot be granted a within-grade-increase (WGI), and specific procedural requirements apply when a WGI is denied. Even if a WGI is not due, when an employee is performing at the Minimally Successful level, the supervisor should advise the employee of the specific performance deficiencies, define the Minimally Successful level of performance in the employee's performance plan (if not already done when the plan was established) and take appropriate steps to assist the employee in correcting those deficiencies. An official Performance Improvement Plan (PIP) is not required to deal with Minimally Successful performance. It is used to deal with Unsatisfactory performance.

At any time during the rating cycle that an employee's performance falls to the Unsatisfactory level, the employee must be placed on a PIP to assist in improving the performance to at least the Minimally Successful level. Supervisors and managers must develop Minimally Successful standards at the time an employee is found to be below the Fully Successful level.

There is a difference between Unsatisfactory performance and misconduct. Unsatisfactory performance (can't do) is failure of the employee to perform the job at the required level (at least Minimally Successful level), where misconduct (won't do) is generally failure to follow a workplace rule (whether written or unwritten). Examples of misconduct are: tardiness, absenteeism, unprofessional/discourteous conduct; damaging/destroying government property; falsification, etc. It can also be considered a conduct problem when an employee is capable of performing his/her duties at an acceptable level but chooses not to. Sometimes, misconduct can result in poor performance. Sometimes performance and misconduct can be interrelated; however, it is important to recognize the difference between the two. Contact your servicing Human Resources Office for advice and guidance.

There is a formal regulatory process outlined to deal with employees who are not performing acceptably that includes the following steps:

Step 1: Communicating Expectations and Performance Problems.

The first step in the process is to meet with the employee to counsel or discuss the deficiencies of his/her performance. Counseling is a communication process occurring between a rating official and an employee aimed at effecting some positive change in the employee's performance. Most performance problems can be resolved through effective communication when done in the early stage of the process. The counseling session is an opportunity to discuss performance deficiencies and to clarify expectations. The focus of the counseling session should be to tell the employee exactly what must be done to bring performance to an acceptable level.

Preparing to Counsel the Employee.

Prior to counseling the employee, the rating official should first determine if it is a performance or misconduct problem. It is critical that the rating official reviews, prior to the counseling session, the employee's standards to ensure they clearly convey what needs to be done in the job. The rating official needs to ensure that standards are clear, reasonable and are not "backwards" or impermissibly "absolute" (See Appendix 2). You should be prepared to identify specifically the Critical element(s) in which the employee has exhibited deficiencies and provide examples of the employee's work. Your Human Resources staff can assist you in this review.

- Employee performance on the critical element(s) in question has been reviewed and documented, including specifics related to the areas of concern. Examples should be noted when possible.
 - A private location and adequate time has been set aside to meet with the employee, including time for employee input.
 - Expectations for improved performance have been outlined.

Counseling an Employee.

After preparations have been completed, you are ready to counsel the employee. The counseling session should be in a private and uninterrupted environment. During the counseling session you should do the following:

- Identify the Critical element(s) where the employee is working at an Unsatisfactory level of performance.
- Provide specific examples of the poor performance and suggest ways that performance can be improved.
- Invite feedback from the employee and be a good listener.
- Maintain a constructive tone, along with a calm and professional demeanor; do not argue with the employee.
- Plan some specific actions the employee will take to improve his or her performance, such as taking training or working closely with another employee for a period of time, etc. As appropriate, give the employee the responsibility of finding the course or providing ideas on how he/she can improve by a specific date and reporting back to you.
- At the end of the session, tell the employee your expectations and what the employee must do to bring his or her performance to an acceptable level.
- Document the counseling session, schedule the next session, and provide the employee a copy of the documentation.

Use the checklist at Appendix 6 to make sure all actions related to Step One have been completed.

10/4/04 #370DM430HB-1 (Revised 10-2016)
Replaces 11/1/95 FPM-418

Step Two: Providing an Opportunity to Improve.

When dealing with unsatisfactory performance under Part 432 of Title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations, an employee must be provided with information concerning his/her performance and how it can be improved, and then be given an opportunity to demonstrate Minimally Successful performance before an agency proposes a reduction in grade or removal based on Unsatisfactory performance. Before any performance-based action is proposed, the following must be considered:

Initial Determination of Unsatisfactory Performance.

For an initial determination of Unsatisfactory performance to be valid, an employee must receive a copy of the Critical elements and performance standards for his/her job and his/her performance must be measured against those performance standards. The quality of the EPAP is, therefore, of key importance for taking action based on Unsatisfactory performance. Unsatisfactory performance must be measured against the Critical elements of the EPAP; however, a formal performance rating denoting Unsatisfactory performance is not required preceding an opportunity to improve period. Unsatisfactory performance is the only basis for removal or reduction in grade action under Part 432. Minimally Successful performance is not a basis for removal or reduction in grade, but will result in denial of a WGI.

Reasonable Opportunity to Demonstrate Minimally Successful Performance.

The employee must be notified in writing of Unsatisfactory performance, what is needed to bring performance up to a Minimally Successful level and what assistance will be provided. This written notification is in the form of a Performance Improvement Plan. (PIP) The employee should be warned concerning the consequences of continued performance below the Minimally Successful ("acceptable") level and given a reasonable time to demonstrate at least Minimally Successful performance before a reduction in grade or removal is considered. Additionally, rating officials are encouraged to make efforts to help employees with Minimally Successful performance raise their performance to a Fully Successful level.

The performance elements and standards for the performance improvement period shall be based on the EPAP and written notices that are in effect at the determination of Unsatisfactory performance. The notification to the employee of the improvement period may include clarification and greater specificity regarding performance expectations. Care should be taken to avoid the appearance that higher performance standards are required during the performance improvement period than in the original EPAP. If the new requirements constitute a significant change, such as standards or performance requirements that exceed the context of the current plan or which had not previously been applied or communicated to the employee, it may be necessary to treat them as a new EPAP requiring a period of 90 days before the employee can be rated.

The amount of time necessary to give the employee a reasonable opportunity to demonstrate Minimally Successful performance is not dictated in regulation or departmental guidance. The reasonable time to improve will be determined by management and can vary according to the requirements of individual positions and EPAPs and the amount of time and effort already devoted to correcting performance deficiencies. As a general rule, less time and effort are required in cases where rating officials have appropriately managed performance and documented their efforts to resolve performance problems. (Note: For bargaining unit employees, the applicable collective bargaining agreement should be checked for additional requirements.)

Assistance to the employee in any combination of counseling, training, or changes in the level of supervision provided is required. Therefore, such assistance and communications to the employee should be fully documented in progress reviews, on the performance appraisal form, and/or in other documentation to the employee.

Replaces 11/1/95 FPM-418

This documentation must demonstrate that:

- The employee was informed that his/her performance has been determined to be unsatisfactory in one or more Critical elements and of specific needs for improvement.
 - The rating official, or other designated staff worked with the employee in an attempt to resolve work-related problems, provided any necessary formal training, on-the-job training, or counseling, and met periodically with the employee to clarify assignments, explain what was needed to be done, and answer questions about the EPAP.
 - The employee was informed of the consequences of failure to improve (e.g., removal, reassignment, or reduction in grade).

Use the checklist at Appendix 6 to make sure all actions related to Step Two have been completed.

Step Three: Taking Action

Overview

A rating official has the authority to take action against an employee based on poor performance. This is usually accomplished in accordance with 5 CFR Part 432, Performance Based Reduction in Grade and Removal Actions. However, under some circumstances, it is more advantageous to take action under 5 CFR Part 752, Adverse Actions. The specific facts of your case, along with the weight of your evidence, will be determining factors in deciding under which authority to take your action. Seek guidance from your servicing Human Resources Office as soon as you determine that you have an employee whose performance is less than Fully Successful, and they will assist you in determining how to proceed.

Taking Performance-Based Actions under 5 USC Chapter 43:

If after completing steps one and two above, the employee's performance does not improve to at least the Minimally Successful level, an agency may reassign the employee, reduce an employee in grade or remove the employee. Please note that employee reassignment can be an option at any time. If there is reason to believe that the employee could be more successful in another position, reassignment should be effected as soon as reasonably possible—a PIP is not required for enacting a management designated reassignment. It is highly recommended that you seek guidance from your servicing Human Resource Office.

Remember, there are many options available for dealing with performance management issues. Consulting with your servicing Human Resource Office will ensure consistent, prudent action to ensure productivity and motivation to the workforce.

If using Chapter 43 to deal with poor performance, performance must be evaluated after the opportunity period, and if still Unsatisfactory in one or more of the Critical elements identified in the PIP, the employee must be provided 30 days advance written notice of the proposed action (demotion or removal), specifying instances demonstrating failure to meet the PIP requirements. The 30-day notice period may be extended for a period not to exceed 30 days, or can be extended further in accordance with the provisions in 5 CFR § 432.105(a)(4)(i)(B).

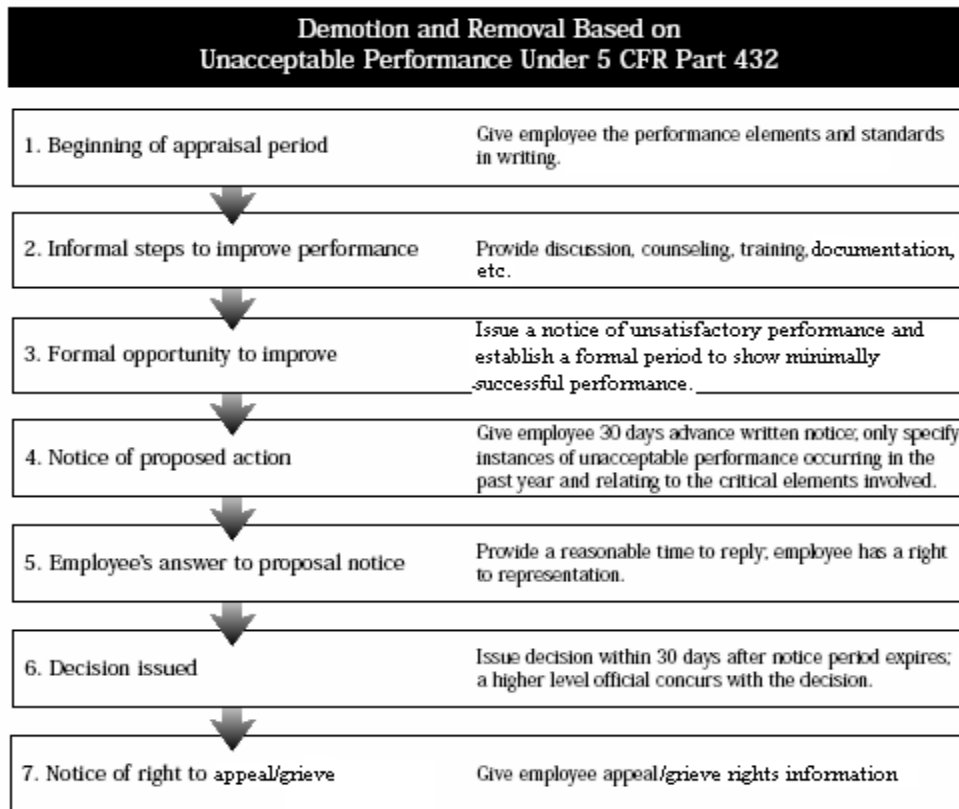

The notice must provide:

- A reasonable time to reply, orally and in writing;
- Right to representation;
- Consideration of medical conditions when raised by the employee.

Final written decision by a higher-level official must be issued within 30 days, or upon expiration of approved extensions and must be issued on or before the effective date of the action to be taken. The decision must consider any response to the proposal that the employee provided, and must be based only on instances of unsatisfactory performance occurring during the 1-year period ending on the date of the advance notice of proposed action, with specific emphasis on the PIP performance. It must specify the instances of unsatisfactory performance and provide the applicable appeal rights information.

Figure A. outlines the steps that must be followed in taking a demotion or removal action under 5 CFR Part 432.

Taking Performance Actions under 5 USC Chapter 75:

Under 5 USC Chapter 75, and 5 CFR Part 752, an agency may take action to suspend for more than 14 days, demote or remove an employee for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service, to include a performance-based adverse action. The rating official will be required to show that informal steps such as discussions, counseling and training were taken to assist the employee in improving performance deficiencies, but a formal performance improvement opportunity period is not required. If using Chapter 75 to deal with poor performance, the following procedures apply:

- Performance expectations must have been communicated to the employee;
- Informal steps must be taken to improve performance deficiencies, including discussion with employee, counseling, training, etc.;
- A 30-day advance written notice of proposed action must be issued, giving specifics of the performance deficiencies;
- The employee must be provided a reasonable period of time to reply orally and in writing (Normally 14 days but not less than 7 days); and
- The employee has the right to representation by an attorney or other representative.

A written decision must be issued at the earliest practicable date, giving the specific reasons for the action decided upon. Only those reasons specified in the notice of proposed action and any information provided by the employee in the reply to the notice may be considered. The decision must be provided to the employee on or before the effective date of the action. The decision must provide the employee with appeal rights information.

5 CFR Part 432 vs. Part 752
	P A R T 4 3 2	P A R T 7 5 2
Types of Actions	Actions: Demotion or Removal	Actions: Suspension, Demotion, or Removal
Actions Taken For	Actions taken for "unacceptable performance."	Actions taken for "such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service."
Proof	Actions must be proven by "substantial evidence" (lower standard than Part 752).	Actions must be proven by a "preponderance of the evidence" (higher standard than Part 432).
Actions Based On	Actions can only be based on an employee's formal, established, communicated standards.	Actions can be based on expectations or established/formal standards.
Opportunity Period	Employee is entitled to an opportunity period.	No requirement for an opportunity period.
Time Limits	Time limited to performance "deficiencies" occurring within the 1 year prior to the proposal notice.	No time limit for inclusion of "incident/charges" in Part 752.
Immediacy of Action	Employee remains on the job throughout the opportunity period.	Can initiate immediate action because no requirement for an opportunity period exists.
Mitigation	Action may not be mitigated (action will either be sustained or reversed).	Action may be mitigated (penalty reduced).

While a performance-based action taken under Part 752 does not require providing the employee a formal opportunity to improve performance to the Minimally Successful level, the arbitrator or judge will be interested in the efforts taken by the rating official to provide assistance to help the employee improve his/her performance to the Minimally Successful level. Therefore, providing an opportunity to improve performance will help the agency present a stronger case before a third party hearing and we strongly recommend providing a performance improvement period regardless of what authority is used to deal with performance deficiencies.

Part 752 also allows for taking adverse action based on ad hoc standards such as explicit instructions or work assignments, or professional standards established for certain occupations. If an ad hoc standard is no more stringent than the established performance standards, it may be appropriate to take a 752 performance-based action on failure to meet that ad hoc standard.

Appeal Rights

Employees have the right to appeal a performance-based removal or demotion to the Merit Systems Protection Board, and some employees covered by collective bargaining agreements may have the right to grieve the action through their negotiated grievance procedure. An employee can choose between these two methods of appeal, but cannot pursue both avenues.

In addition, allegations of discrimination, reprisal for whistleblowing, and other prohibited personnel practices can be raised in an employee's appeal of a performance-based removal or demotion. Such allegations can also be filed directly with the Bureau/Office Equal Opportunity Office or the Office of Special Counsel.

Use the checklist at Appendix 6 to make sure all actions related to Step Three have been completed.

DEVELOPING PERFORMANCE STANDARDS:

The Benchmark standards provided in this handbook describe levels of performance for any given position. However, rating officials are encouraged and expected to augment those Benchmark standards with specific standards, using the following guidance.

The best standards are:

- Stated concretely and specifically
- Practical to measure
- Meaningful
- Exceed-able
- Realistic and based on sound rationale

Some questions that might be asked to assist in developing the standards include the following:

- Which general measures apply:
 - Is quality important? Does the stakeholder or customer care how well the work is done?
 - Is quantity important? Does the stakeholder or customer care how many are produced?
 - Is it important to accomplish the element by a certain time or date?
 - Is it important to accomplish the element within certain cost limits?
 - What measures are already available?
- How could quality, quantity, timeliness, and/or cost-effectiveness be measured?
- Is there some number or percent that could be tracked?
- If the element does not lend itself to being measured with numbers and can only be described, ask:
 - Who could judge that the element was done well?
 - What factors would they look for?

Rating officials should be careful that the “Fully Successful” standard is not impermissibly “absolute,” i.e., allows no room for errors, nor that it is a “backwards” standard. (An example of a backwards standard might be, “Makes more than 4 errors per document.” This would allow an employee to make 100 errors and still be rated fully successful.)

Some questions that might be asked to help determine whether you are writing an absolute standard include:

- How many times may the employee fail this requirement and still be Fully Successful?
- Does the standard use words such as “all,” “never,” and “each”? (These words do not automatically create an absolute standard, but they often alert you to problems.)
- If the standard allows for no errors is that because an error would result in risk of death, injury, etc.?

Some questions that might be asked to help determine whether you are writing a backwards standard include:

- Does the standard express the level of work the rating official wants to see or does it describe negative performance? (Example of describing negative performance: Requires assistance more than 50 percent of the time. A Better Choice is: Works independently more than 50 percent of assignments and/or the time.)
- If the employee did nothing, would he or she meet the standard, as written? (Example: Completes fewer than four products per year. A Better Choice is: No more than 3 products are incomplete at the established deadline.)

A Supervisor's Guide on How to Get the Most of Performance Appraisals

Why do we have performance appraisal meetings, and how can they benefit you and your employees?

Giving and receiving feedback is one of the critical components of the performance appraisal process. As a rating official, it is incumbent upon you to ensure that the feedback provided is meaningful, that you take the time to prepare and that the employee has a chance to ask questions and provide input.

Meeting with your employees to discuss how they're doing can and should be very beneficial for both of you. Following are a few of the benefits that can result from good preparation and an open discussion:

- You get a chance to provide information directly to your employee about your expectations and standards and to provide feedback on the work he/she did well along with any areas needing improvement.
- You get to provide the employee information about the “big picture” and how what he/she does contributes to mission/organizational goals.
- You get a chance to ask the employee about how he/she feels about his/her job--whether he/she enjoys the work, if he/she is ready for greater responsibilities, if he/she is feeling too overwhelmed by the work already assigned, whether he/she needs more assistance from you or coworkers, etc.
- You get a chance to get to know the employee a bit better, and he/she gets to know you a bit better, too. The more you know one another, the greater the chances that you'll be able to communicate well on an ongoing basis, especially if a problem crops up.
- You get the opportunity to discuss your employee's future with him/her. That can be as simple as discussing training opportunities to better handle a specific project or something as broad as the employee's career aspirations and how he/she plans to get there.

What Should You Do to Prepare?

While you are encouraged to provide feedback to your employees on an on-going basis, Department of the Interior policy requires that you meet formally with employees at least twice a year—once approximately mid-way through the performance appraisal cycle (called a Progress Review) and once at the end of the rating year. Remember, this may be modified by specific Collective Bargaining Agreements that may have been specifically negotiated for your Bureau/Office or Unit. These meetings are a chance for you to engage in an open exchange with your employees about their performance.

Before the progress review or before you prepare the employee's appraisal:

- --Request information from the employee on his/her key work accomplishments for the period being discussed. Keep a “kudos” folder for each employee with key accomplishments that you can refer to.
- --If you have specific issues that you want to discuss with the employee, ensure that you have prepared to discuss these clearly and concisely.
- --Think about (and document) what’s most important for you to tell the employee about how he/she is doing.
- --Write down what you feel the employee has done/accomplished/learned, what he/she did particularly well, and any areas in which you may have been disappointed in how the employee performed, including what they could have done better. You should include examples of specific projects or assignments.
- --Think about whether the employee has the skills that you think he/she needs to do his/her job well, and write down any skills you think need to be gained or improved.
- --Write down the key points and questions you want to discuss during the meeting.

If in preparing for the performance discussions and/or finalizing the rating you believe that the employee is not performing at a Fully Successful level, you should immediately contact your servicing Human Resources Office to discuss what steps to take prior to meeting with the employee.

The Performance Discussion

During the actual performance discussion, you should review the employee’s performance during the period in question including a summary of key accomplishments, praise him/her for work that he/she did particularly well, inform him/her of work that could have been improved and/or areas where he/she may need to focus more effort, etc. You should offer some examples, and give the employee the opportunity to ask questions for clarification or to provide information. This should definitely be a two–way dialogue rather than a lecture.

In addition, you should:

- Ask the employee how he/she feels the past six months or year went, and what he/she liked and didn’t like (with the goal of finding out in what ways he/she felt supported, or might have wanted feedback, or other information that you can use in working with the employee better in the future).
- Ask whether the employee has adequate training and resources to carry out his/her work.
- Ask the employee about his/her short and/or long-term career goals and offer suggestions or resources to assist him/her with these goals, as appropriate.

- Clearly articulate your expectations for the next six months or during the coming year and ask if the employee understands them. Be prepared to clarify any areas of confusion.
- Refer to your notes, so that you don't overlook any points that you feel are important.
- Ensure that the employee has a chance to provide feedback and ask questions.

Once you have finished your discussion with the employee provide him/her the appraisal form to sign. At the end of the rating year, make sure that he/she receives a copy of the completed appraisal form.

If the employee has concerns with the final rating, provide him/her with a copy of your Bureau's/Office's reconsideration process or refer him/her to the appropriate individual who can provide that information.

Don't forget that you can and should continue to discuss the employee's performance with him/her throughout the year. While the setting might not be as formal as during progress reviews or rating discussions, it's still important to keep talking, day in and day out, with your employees.

An Employee Guide on How to get the Most out of Performance Appraisals

Why do we have performance appraisal meetings, and how can they benefit you?

Meeting with your supervisor to discuss how you're doing can be of great benefit to you. To make the most out of this discussion, here are some helpful tips:

- You get a chance to obtain information, directly from your supervisor, about his/her expectations and standards for you. That way, you know right up front what you need to do a great job.
- You get feedback on how you're doing. It's wonderful to hear about the good work that you're doing. It's also good to find out if you haven't been meeting expectations – once you know that there's something you could do better, you can work on it (which is definitely better than being in the dark and continuing to do something which doesn't work).
- You get the “big picture” about how you're doing on the job. Day-to-day feedback is great, but it helps, too, to step back and hear about how you're doing overall and how the work you do helps accomplish important goals of the organization.
- You get to talk with your supervisor about how you feel about your job. Do you enjoy the work you do? Are you ready for greater responsibilities? Are you feeling too overwhelmed by the work you've already been assigned? Do you need more assistance from your boss or your coworkers? This is your chance to have an open discussion with your supervisor's undivided attention about how you feel things are going.
- You get a chance to get to know your supervisor a bit better, and he/she gets to know you a bit better, too. The more you know one another, the greater the chances that you'll be able to communicate well on an ongoing basis, especially if a problem crops up.
- You get the opportunity to discuss your future with your supervisor. That can be as simple as discussing your interest in a training course to better handle a specific project, to something as broad as your career aspirations and how you plan to get there.

What Should You Do to Prepare?

Even though your supervisor is the one calling the performance meeting, you have considerable involvement in the discussion. In fact, you can and should give some thought to what you want to get out of this meeting.

Perhaps you want suggestions for how you can provide better customer service, or maybe you want specific feedback on what you do well and not so well when you give presentations. Just as your supervisor will be preparing for his/her meeting with you, it is important to do a bit of preparation of your own. Preparation for meeting with your supervisor has two phases:

1) Before your supervisor prepares your appraisal:

- --Prepare a list of your key work accomplishments, and give that to your supervisor for his/her consideration in preparing your rating. This way, you can help ensure that your significant accomplishments are not overlooked. Keep a “kudos” folder with your accomplishments in it to refer to for this.
- --If you have specific issues, which you will want to discuss with your supervisor, give him/her a “heads up”, so that he/she can be well prepared for your discussion. Come prepared to discuss each issue clearly and concisely.

2) In preparation for the meeting when your rating is communicated, think about the following:

- What’s most important for you to learn/find out about how you’re doing?
- What have you done/accomplished/learned during the year? Make yourself a list of key items, so that you can ask for your supervisor for feedback on specific projects or assignments.
- What did you do particularly well? What are the ways you may have been disappointed in how you performed?
- What kind of feedback would you like to give to your supervisor? (e.g., I really like it when you review and edit my drafts before they’re put in final form, so that we don’t waste a lot of time and paper revising documents at the last minute; thank you for letting me take so much time off when my parents were visiting; I really need to hear from you about how I’m doing when I’m working on a project, rather than assuming that your silence means I’m doing okay; etc.).
- Do you have the skills that you think you need to do your job well? What skills might you want to work on polishing up?
- Where do you see your career heading? How can your supervisor help you achieve your career goals?

It may help to write down your key points and questions. That way, you can use your notes during your discussion and make sure that you don’t forget to bring up the important thoughts and questions you have.

The Performance Discussion

The day has come for your performance discussion. You’ve put some thought into how you’re doing, and you’re ready to have a good discussion with your supervisor. There’s one more thing you may want to consider – take a look at your supervisor's perspective on the discussion you're about to have.

Your supervisor may:

Review your performance over the past six months or year with a summary of key accomplishments, work that you did particularly well, work that could have been improved, areas where you may need to focus more effort, etc. He/She will offer you some examples, and will give you the opportunity to ask questions for clarification or to provide information. This is definitely a two – way dialogue.

- Ask you how you feel the past six months or year went, and what you liked and didn't like (with the goal of finding out in what ways you felt supported, or how you might have wanted feedback, or other information that he/she can use in working with you in the coming year).
- Look ahead to the coming six months or year and discuss with you his/her specific expectation for you.
- Ask you whether you feel that you have adequate training and resources to carry out your work. This will likely lead to a discussion of what additional information or materials you may need.
- Ask you about your short and/or long-term career goals. Based on your response, he/she may offer suggestions or resources to assist you.

During the meeting, don't be shy about asking for clarification, particularly about your supervisor's expectations of you. Refer to your notes, so that you don't overlook any points that you feel are important. If your supervisor doesn't bring up the topic yourself – if you want specific information, then ask specific questions. You may be amazed at how informative this discussion will be.

And yes, there is the paperwork that needs to get done. Your supervisor will ask you to sign your appraisal form, and will make sure that you receive a copy of your rating.

That's it. By the time you finish your discussion, you should have a good feel for how well you're doing, what your strengths and weaknesses are, and where you're heading in the coming year. Don't forget, though, that you can and should continue to discuss your performance with your supervisor throughout the year. While the setting might not be as formal as during progress reviews or rating discussions, it's still important to keep talking, day in and day out, with your supervisor. If you're ever in doubt about how you're doing, don't forget that you have an amazing tool at your disposal - you can simply, but directly, ask your supervisor for feedback, at any point during the year.

Still have questions about any of this or about the performance appraisal process in general? Consult with your supervisor, who will try to address any questions you may have.

Supervisor's Guide to Developing Individual Development Plans

The Individual Development Plan (IDP) is a valuable performance enhancement tool for any federal employee. The IDP can be of great assistance to those who want to enhance skills and strengths and learn more about matters of interest that are relevant to the performance of the agency. Bureaus/Offices may require the use of an IDP at their discretion. Check with your Human Resources Office for the IDP or other appropriate form to be used by your Bureau/Office for documenting employee development needs.

The following is a brief outline of the definition, steps and goals of an IDP.

Goals The employee and the rating official develop goals together. The IDP provides a connection between the employee's career interests and needs to the organizational mission and priorities. The most common goals of an IDP are to:

- Learn new skills to improve current job performance
- Maximize current performance in support of organizational requirements
- Increase interest, challenge, and satisfaction in current position
- Obtain knowledge, skills and abilities necessary for career growth

Definition An IDP identifies a broad spectrum of developmental opportunities for the employee, including on-the-job training, distance learning, formal classroom training, details, shadow assignments and self-development. It addresses the needs of the organization and of the employee beginning with a focus on maximizing employee performance in the current job.

An IDP is a guide to help individuals reach career goals within the context of organizational objectives. It is a developmental action plan to move employees from their current place to where they want to go. It provides the systematic steps to improve and to build on strengths as individuals improve job performance and pursue career goals.

An IDP is a partnership between the employee and the rating official in personal development. Preparing an IDP involves open feedback, clarification and discussion about developmental needs, goals, and plans. Periodic communication between the rating official and the employee is the key to the currency and success of an IDP.

An IDP is not a:

- Performance appraisal. It is not used to determine pay, awards or other personnel actions based on performance.
- Contract for training. Final approval of training opportunities is made based on factors such as timing and budget availability.
- Position description. It is not used for clarifying discrepancies in the duties as described.

- Guarantee for promotion or for reassignment to another position. While the developmental experiences identified in an IDP may have some training that might qualify the employee for another position or grade, there is no guarantee of advancement.

Responsibilities As in all aspects of the employee/supervisor relationship, direct and open communication is the key to the success of an IDP. The following responsibilities address the IDP process specifically.

The employee is responsible for:

- Assessing personal skills necessary for performing the current position
- Suggesting developmental experiences which would enhance the skills necessary for performing the current position and for the desired career goals
- Identifying personal career goals
- Understanding what skills are necessary for meeting the career goals
- Participating in open discussions with the rating official concerning the elements of the IDP
- Completing the developmental experiences in the IDP as approved by the rating official
- Alerting the rating official when the IDP needs review and updating

The rating official is responsible for:

- Providing constructive feedback to the employee about skills necessary for performing the current position
- Suggesting and reviewing employee suggestions for developmental experiences which would enhance the skills necessary for performing the current position
- Counseling the employee about career goals
- Identifying developmental experiences which would enhance the skills necessary for performing in the next type of position toward the employee's career goal
- Participating in open discussions with the employee concerning the elements of the IDP, in periodic updates and reviews of the IDP for currency
- Giving final approval to specific developmental experiences
- Monitoring the progress of the employee in completing the developmental experiences agreed upon in the IDP

Individual Development Plan (Bureaus/Offices may require the use of an IDP at their discretion. Check with your Human Resources Office for the IDP or other appropriate form to be used by your Bureau/Office for the IDP or other appropriate form to be used by your Bureau/Office for documenting employee developmental needs).

2. When must performance elements and performance standards be developed for an employee's position?

All employees covered under the system should have standards in place within 60 days of the beginning of the performance appraisal cycle, their entrance on duty, their assignment to a new position, or their assignment to a new or different supervisory position.

3. When is the performance appraisal cycle?

The appraisal cycle runs from October 1 through September 30 of the following year, unless the Department's Human Resources Office approves a different schedule.

For temporary employees whose appointments are over 120 days but less than one year, the appraisal cycle runs from date of appointment to termination of appointment.

For temporary employees whose appointments are greater than one year, the appraisal cycle is the same as permanent employees.

4. When are performance appraisal ratings due?

Appraisal ratings are due within 30 days of the end of the appraisal period, i.e., by October 31 of each year.

Appraisal ratings for temporary employees are due at the termination of the employee's tour of duty. (Not 30 days after.)

5. What are the eligibility requirements for receiving a performance appraisal?

An employee must have been working in the same position and under the supervision of the same rating official or reviewing official for at least 90 consecutive calendar days. In addition, the employee must have been working under a set of approved performance standards for at least 90 consecutive days.

6. How are ratings handled when an employee has been under the supervision of more than one rating official during the appraisal period?

The rating official for appraisal purposes is the individual supervising the employee at the end of the performance appraisal period. The rating or reviewing official will assign the rating of record, providing he or she has supervised the employee for at least 90 consecutive calendar days and providing the employee has worked under the same set of performance standards for at least 90 days prior to the end of the appraisal period.

If the employee has received a performance evaluation from another rating official during the current rating period, the rating official shall consider that rating when assigning the summary rating of record.

If, at the end of the performance appraisal period, the rating official has not supervised the employee for at least 90 consecutive calendar days, the reviewing official may serve as the rating official as determined by the Bureau/Office.

The appraisal period may be extended up to 90 days past the normal end date for an employee if, on the normal end date of the appraisal period, the employee has not been under standards for at least 90 days.

7. What is the role of the Reviewing Official?

The Reviewing Official is responsible for reviewing and approving ratings of "Exceptional," "Minimally Successful," and "Unsatisfactory;" and carrying out any other responsibilities as outlined by the Bureau/Office Head.

8. How many performance elements can be written for a position?

Each employee covered should have at least one and not more than five Critical elements as part of their EPAP.

9. What is a critical element?

A critical element is a component of the position that is so important that failure to perform requires remedial action, and may serve as the basis for adverse action against the employee if performance does not improve.

10. How closely do performance elements have to match the employee's position description?

There must be a reasonable relationship between the position description (P.D.) and the elements used for appraisal. For example, if a P.D. states the individual is responsible for supervising employees, a performance element addressing performance appraisal would be appropriate, since appraisal is one aspect of a supervisor's duties.

11. Are performance standards negotiable?

No. The development of performance standards is a retained management right that cannot be negotiated or bargained. However, it is strongly encouraged that employees have input on developing their elements and standards, but the final decision regarding critical elements and standards always rests with the management official.

12. Are performance appraisals or other aspects of the performance appraisal process grievable or appealable?

Performance appraisal rating and concerns are not grievable under the Agency grievance system. If the employee is covered under a negotiated agreement that covers performance appraisal, the negotiated process must be followed. If the employee is not covered under a negotiated agreement which covers performance appraisal, the employee is entitled to file a request for reconsideration when an employee has a concern about the rating given on a particular element that, if changed, will affect the outcome of the rating of record.

13. Are performance reviews required during the appraisal cycle?

Supervisors are expected to establish effective and ongoing communication with employees regarding performance and ways of improving it. An annual counseling session is required where accomplishments against elements and standards are discussed and rating official and employee formally sign the appraisal. One Progress Review at approximately mid-year is required, and the results of that review are documented on the employee performance appraisal form. Additionally, periodic counseling sessions throughout the year are recommended as a good personnel management tool to assure that employees are kept up-to-date on management's assessment of their performance. For paperwork reduction purposes, however, no specific timetables are set for these counseling sessions and no form or other documentation is required to be filled out on such counseling sessions unless possible adverse action is anticipated in the future.

14. What are the requirements for granting or denying within-grade increases?

A within-grade increase is earned on the basis of performance during the waiting period. Regulations require the granting or denying of a within-grade increase to be based on the employee's most recent performance appraisal rating of record. To grant a within-grade increase, the employee must have a rating of record of at least Fully Successful (Level 3). To deny a within-grade increase, the employee must have a rating of record of less than Fully Successful.

In addition to ensuring the day-to-day completion of work and normal supervisory duties within the IT Services Division, Eleanor dealt with two significant employee issues during the past rating year. These employee issues had the potential for major negative impact on the division and even the region, but because of Eleanor’s leadership and professionalism, the problems were dealt with effectively, with minimal disruption and with a positive outcome for all concerned. In addition, Eleanor hired three new employees, which has increased the region’s diversity percentage in underrepresented categories. Eleanor has also provided an opportunity for her staff to get involved in new and unique processes within the region in which the staff had significant input. Several individuals on Eleanor’s staff have told me that Eleanor has demonstrated respect and care for them as individuals and acknowledges what they

Narrative Summary

Describe the employee’s performance for each Critical Element. A narrative summary must be written for each element assigned a rating of Exceptional, Minimally Successful, or Unsatisfactory.

In addition to overseeing the myriad contracts which Eleanor was assigned, because of her expertise, she implemented a major change to the way the office traditionally does contract monitoring. This involved development of guidance and performing training for all IT and management employees involved in contract monitoring. Eleanor sought out the managers involved, worked with them to develop the process, devised new ways to do the work, trained the individuals involved, and implemented the process. The managers were reluctant at first, because this involved new and different ways of looking at performing the work, however, Eleanor convinced them that they could gain significant savings, particularly in staff time. Eleanor partnered with two other organizational units within the region to accomplish these changes.
