The Strange History of the Indian Trade Blanket

Pendleton's New Portland Collection

I recently bought a sweater online. The designer, Twelfth Street by Cynthia Vincent, calls it a Navajo blanket cardigan, and I'm well aware that it's trendy. "Navajo," "Native American," and "Indian" prints are everywhere. Fashion magazines like Elle and Teen Vogue have touted their now-ness. High-end designers like Vivienne Westwood and middle-range lines like William Rast have shown these prints on the runway. Even retailers like the Gap—which this past winter peddled multiple sweaters featuring a striped pattern described as Navajo—and Urban Outfitters—which currently has 27 pieces of Navajo merchandise available online—are getting in on the action.

But why are these prints suddenly so popular? And what, if anything, do these Native American or Navajo prints have to do with Native American textiles?

Pendleton's Collaboration With Opening Ceremony

The fashion world's recent enthusiasm for all things Native American was kick-started by British designer Matthew Williamson's spring 2008 show, which featured dresses, tops, and skirts beaded with fluorescent Native American motifs. From there, the trend spread to designers like Phillip Lim, Anna Sui, Isabel Marant, and Burberry. But it was in the winter of 2009 that Native American prints gained mass traction with the launch of a prominent collaboration between Pendleton—a woolen mill in Oregon that has been making wool blankets emblazoned with Native American-inspired designs for more than a hundred years—and Opening Ceremony, the envelope-pushing fashion brand and retailer. For the past three seasons, Opening Ceremony has elevated Pendleton from catalog frumpery to the fashion front lines, cutting the boldest and brightest of Pendleton fabrics into micro-minis, cropped jackets, and even (rather garish) onesies. Other companies followed suit: Pendleton fabrics have also lined and embellished Levi's jean jackets and adorned Timberland hiking boots, as well as Vans slip-ons and high-tops. Pendleton is now getting into the game itself with its new, blatantly hipster-oriented Portland collection.

Pendleton's Chief Joseph Print Blanket

Pendleton isn't just a manufacturer of Native American designs: In fact, the Oregonian woolen mill played a huge role—perhaps more than any one Indian tribe—in creating these distinctive patterns. Pendleton's early designers were instrumental in shaping modern conceptions of what Native American designs look like. They created bold and bright patterns that incorporated symbols from various tribes (as well as some non-Native American symbols), and their

Trend Report

Outdoor glam

BY JANET BENNETT KELLY

Crisp, late fall days conjure scenarios of mountain hikes and bike rides, followed by evenings of sipping spiced beverages and cozying up around a fire. Even if you don't pursue your outdoor idyll, dressing as if you do should be part of your plan. Here, some seasonable suggestions.

1 Sir Edmund Hillary scaled Mount Everest, but he and his fellow mountaineers were also well known for their dashing fashion sense. This shawl collar wool pullover with vintage-y leather elbow patches passes muster, particularly when topped by a trapper hat and paired with a tartan plaid shirt, distressed jeans, ragg socks and boots. Also available in red. Shaggy Shetland pullover, $128 at www.rugby.com.

2 Transform your small studio or attic garret into a chic cabin. The duvet deserves a rest; opt for a splash of vivid color from a saddle blanket woven according to traditions of Native Americans in the Southwest. Rim Rock blanket, $218 for a twin, $298 for queen, $338 for king at www.pendletonusa.com.

3 Be equipped for the wilds of work or a trek in the wild. Modcloth's streamlined canvas backpack can hold your necessaries in a lined compartment, front and side pouches and interior pockets. With a handle and adjustable shoulder straps. Backpack to the Future bag, $79.99 at www.modcloth.com.

4 Hiker laces, a fuzzy lining and lug soles give Nine West's ankle boot its rugged appeal. Stacked heels let the wearer seamlessly move from the woods to city sidewalks. Nine West Janajay ankle boot, $129 at www.endless.com and www.ninewest.com.

Lakota star quilts

Renee Turning Heart of Eagle Butte started sewing as a youngster and credits her grandmother with teaching her to make star quilts, which are used in Native American culture for many important occasions such as births, naming ceremonies and graduations. Her apprentice, Patricia Kennedy, grew up surrounded by quilts, and had basic sewing skills, but never learned the specific techniques for making star quilts. Now that she has grandchildren, she wants to be able to make things for them, which spurred her interest in learning from Renee.

Renee Turning Heart shows how to sew strips of fabric together, then cut them to make diamonds for a star quilt pattern.

Renee Turning Heart and Patricia Kennedy admire Patricia's first star quilt.

Living Indian Treasure Award

Call for Nominations
South Dakota Living Indian Treasure Award
October 2010

The Native American way of life traditionally honors the elders of their culture. In 1990 a new award in the arts was established to recognize and continue this tradition. Co-sponsored by Northern Plains Indian Art Market and South Dakotans for the Arts, the award is presented biennially at the SD Governor's Awards in the Arts and is known as the South Dakota Living Indian Treasure Award.

Artists eligible for the award must be living South Dakota Native Americans and over the age of 55. Artists in all art forms (including visual arts, music, dance, theatre, literature, story telling) with a record of artistic accomplishment are eligible. Selection is based upon preservation of excellence in traditional Indian art forms or for breaking new ground with innovative art that stems from traditional sources.

The Governor's Awards in the Arts will be presented at the Ramkota River Center in Pierre on Wednesday, February 16, 2011. Recipients must be present to accept the award. Nominations may be made by an organization of an individual and must be postmarked no later than November 30, 2010. Employees and board members of South Dakotans for the Arts and the South Dakota Arts Council are not eligible for these awards.

Materials submitted should include one copy of this form, a brief personal history of the nominee and a summary of accomplishments of the nominee no more than three pages in length. Samples or representations of the artist's work are encouraged. Up to five letters of support may be submitted. No materials will be returned unless a stamped, self-addressed envelope is included. The nomination must be signed by the person making the nomination and postmarked before November 30, 2010.

All materials should be mailed to:

I was not aware of this matter and am excited to receive your news! As Ken could tell you, I order products from Pendleton (jeans and shirts) and have often wondered "should I or shouldn't I" purchase Indian-related products, for fear that the works may not have been created by Indian artisans or may not have been created by approval of the relevant tribe or the monies may not go back to the artisans.

I am not trying to bash Pendleton – I'm just never sure and I am not going to buy unless I am sure. (Ken may have my exchange with Susan's Christmas Shop in Santa Fe where I declined to purchase Easter eggs with Navajo symbols because the artist is not Navajo – at least I recall "Navajo" as the tribal symbol at issue.)

INDIAN ARTS & CRAFTS ACT SETTLEMENT WITH PENDLETON WOOLEN MILLS REACHED

WASHINGTON — The Indian Arts and Crafts Board (IACB) of the U.S. Department of the Interior announces a settlement agreement it has signed with Pendleton Woolen Mills (Pendleton).

This agreement resolves concerns raised by the IACB regarding Pendleton's prior sales of the through a section of its website labeled "Native American." The IACB alleged that Pendleton's marketing of this product violated the Indian Arts and Crafts Act, 25 U.s.C. §305e (Act) because it did not sufficiently make clear that the Blanket was not produced by genuine Indian artisans and therefore did not qualify as an "Indian Product" as defined by the Act.

This "no image" has replaced Pendleton "Sioux Star Blanket" image on Pendleton's website.

These funds will assist with The Heritage Center's promotion of Sioux artisans and economic development through the production, promotion, and sales of authentic Sioux art and craftwork, and associated programs.

According to Father George Winzenburg, S.J., President of Red Cloud Indian School, "These resources will enable The Heritage Center to enhance its ongoing work to improve the economic status of Lakota artists and artisans that it serves through the promotion and sale of authentic Indian art in its exhibitions, gift shop and on-line store. It will also assist The Heritage Center to encourage other Tribal members to pursue their creative work and to spur economic development across the Pine Ridge Reservation."

Additionally, Pendleton has agreed to include a paragraph to help educate consumers about the Act in its print catalogs, on its website, and in marketing materials it distributes to retailers of its Native American inspired products for at least two years.

Great to hear from you, Meridith. I've been in touch with two of your staffers in the last week, so it must be IACB time for me! Congratulations on the settlement with Pendleton. Wonderful news!

I'll see if I can find any other organizations that should receive the bulletin. I'm still learning all of the networks that Lori has going here at FPF, so it might take me a little digging.

Off the top of my head I'd suggest Northern Plains Indian Art Market and Great Plains Art Institute at Sinte Gleska University, Native CDFIs - including Lakota Fund, Four Bands, and Hunkpati - Pine Ridge Area Chamber of Commerce, Thunder Valley Community Development (located near Sharps Corner, SD). I'm sure I'll think of more, but that's great information for them.

I'm copying my work email so that you have it in your contact list.

Hope you're well, and I'm sure we'll connect soon. Let me know when you are in SD next.

Looking forward to partnering!

Best,

Peter

In case First Peoples Fund has yet to receive a copy of this Bulletin, please see the attachment. Can you recommend Indian organizations in South Dakota to send copies to? We are sending copies to Tribes and businesses listed in our Source Directory, but if you could suggest others that would be great.

Thank you,

BULLETIN: INDIAN ARTS AND CRAFTS ACT SETTLEMENT WITH PENDLETON WOOLEN MILLS

The Indian Arts and Crafts Board (IACB) of the U.S. Department of the Interior announces a settlement agreement it has signed with Pendleton Woolen Mills (Pendleton).

This agreement resolves concerns raised by the IACB regarding Pendleton's prior sales of the Pendleton "Sioux Star Blanket" through a section of its website labeled "Native American." The IACB alleged that Pendleton's marketing of this product violated the Indian Arts and Crafts Act, 25 U.S.C. § 305e (Act) because it did not sufficiently make clear that the Blanket was not produced by genuine Indian artisans and therefore did not qualify as an "Indian Product" as defined by the Act.

As part of the agreement, Pendleton recently donated $41,250 to the Red Cloud Indian School's The Heritage Center in Pine Ridge, South Dakota. These funds will assist with The Heritage Center's promotion of Sioux artisans and economic development through the production, promotion, and sales of authentic Sioux art and craftwork, and associated programs.

According to Father George Winzenburg, S.J., President of Red Cloud Indian School, "These resources will enable The Heritage Center to enhance its ongoing work to improve the economic status of Lakota artists and artisans that it serves through the promotion and sale of authentic Indian art in its exhibitions, gift shop and on-line store. It will also assist The Heritage Center to encourage other Tribal members to pursue their creative work and to spur economic development across the Pine Ridge Reservation."

Additionally, Pendleton has agreed to include a paragraph to help educate consumers about the Act in its print catalogs, on its website, and in marketing materials it distributes to retailers of its Native American inspired products for at least two years. Pendleton also has made changes to its internet marketing to ensure against any customer confusion regarding the origins of its products.

The IACB is pleased that this agreement will not only benefit Sioux artists and artisans, but also help to raise the understanding of and compliance with the Act through greater consumer awareness.

For more information on the Act, a truth-in-marketing law which carries civil and criminal penalties and prohibits the offer or display for sale, or sale, of any art or craft product in a manner that falsely suggests it is Indian produced, and Indian product, or the product of a particular Indian Tribe, please visit the IACB website at www.iacb.doi.gov, or call toll free at 1-888-ART-FAKE or 1-888-278-3253.

INDIAN ARTS AND CRAFTS ACT

Pendleton Woolen Mills Supports the Indian Arts and Crafts Act

Pendleton Woolen Mills honors and admires the works of our country's Native American artists. Native Americans were among our first customers, and throughout the decades we have maintained a mutual bond of respect and admiration. We are pleased to support the tenets of the Indian Arts and Crafts Act, and the protection it affords traditional and contemporary American Indian arts.

The Indian Arts and Crafts Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-644), as amended, is a truth-in-marketing law that prohibits the offer or display for sale, or sale, of any art or craft product in a manner that falsely suggests it is Indian produced, an Indian product, or the product of a particular Indian Tribe. Covering all traditional and contemporary American Indian and Indian-style art and craftwork produced after 1935, the Act carries both criminal and civil penalties. For more information on the Act, please visit www.iacb.doi.gov.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement ("Agreement") is entered into between the United States of America ("United States"), on behalf of the Indian Arts and Crafts Board ("IACB"), and Pendleton Woolen Mills, Inc. ("Pendleton"). The purpose of this Agreement is to fully and finally resolve all matters between the United States, the IACB, and Pendleton arising from Pendleton's prior sales of the Pendleton Sioux Star Blanket. This Agreement is made with reference to the following:

WHEREAS, the United States and the IACB allege as follows: Starting in 2005, Pendleton marketed on its website the Sioux Star Blanket in a manner that inaccurately suggested that the Pendleton item referred to as the "Sioux Star Blanket" was an Indian product; Pendleton marketed the Sioux Star Blanket in a section of its website labeled "Native American"; the Sioux Star Blanket was named after a well-known Sioux symbol; the website image of the product depicted what appeared to be a genuine Sioux blanket; the accompanying description of the Sioux Star Blanket did not sufficiently make clear that the Blanket was not produced by genuine Indian artisans; and the Sioux Star Blanket did not qualify as an "Indian product" as that term is defined by the Indian Arts and Crafts Act; and

WHEREAS, counsel for Pendleton represented to the United States that, since 2005, Pendleton has sold approximately 570 Sioux Star Blankets through its website with gross sales totaling $108,290; and

WHEREAS, the United States and the IACB allege that Pendleton's Internet marketing of the Sioux Star Blanket constitutes a violation of the Indian Arts and Crafts Act, 25 U.S.C. § 305e; in order to address this alleged violation, the IACB notified Pendleton by letter on January 12,

2010, that its Internet marketing of the Sioux Star Blanket may be in violation of the Indian Arts and Crafts Act, 25 U.S.C. § 305e, after which Pendleton was notified by the United States that a civil action had been authorized based on an alleged violation of the Indian Arts and Crafts Act, 25 U.S.C. § 305e; and

WHEREAS, in response to requests from the United States, Pendleton altered its Internet marketing of the Sioux Star Blanket by changing the name of the "Native America" section of its website to "Native American Inspired," changing the name of the "Sioux Star Blanket" to the "Plains Star Blanket," and editing the accompanying description of the product to state that it was not an authentic Indian product, along with other changes consistent with the letter and spirit of the Indian Arts and Crafts Act; and

WHEREAS, the United States and the IACB claim that, pursuant to the Indian Arts and Crafts Act, 25 U.S.C. § 305e, for this alleged first-time violation, Pendleton is liable for a penalty of up to, and potentially in excess of, $1 million, in addition to the costs of the IACB's investigation; and

WHEREAS, although Pendleton disagrees with the claims and liability asserted by the United States and IACB, it is the mutual desire of the parties to this Agreement to resolve all matters arising out of Pendleton's Internet marketing of the Sioux Star Blanket with finality and without the need for litigation.

NOW, THEREFORE, it is agreed as follows:

1. This Agreement is entered into by the parties without any admission of liability by Pendleton or any Pendleton officer, director, employee, or representative.

2. In consideration of this settlement, Pendleton agrees to make, or to maintain, the following changes to its marketing of Native American themed products:

A. Pendleton will not include a "Native American" section on its website, in its print catalogs, or in materials provided to retailers. Pendleton may include a section named or referred to as "Native American Inspired" in any of these marketing materials;

B. To the extent that Pendleton sells the product previously named the "Sioux Star Blanket," it will be named the "Plains Star Blanket";

C. Pendleton's Native American Inspired product descriptions will make clear that its products are not Indian products; and

D. Pendleton agrees to not include any federally recognized Native American tribal name in any of its product names without express authorization from such Native American tribe. Notwithstanding the foregoing, Pendleton may use geographic designations such as cardinal directions, names of State, or names of geographic landmarks, and such use shall not violate this agreement, even if such geographic designations may also be contained in the name of a federally recognized Native American tribe. Moreover, nothing in this agreement shall be construed to prevent accurate, descriptive, or fair references to such tribes or the use of same in language used to describe a product. Any such use of a federally recognized Native American tribe name shall be in accordance with the Indian Arts and Crafts Act.

3. In further consideration of this settlement, Pendleton agrees that, not later than thirty (30) days after execution of this Agreement, and for a minimum of two (2) years following execution of this Agreement by all parties, it shall include the following paragraph (hereinafter referred to as the "Paragraph") in its print catalogs, on its website, and in marketing material it distributes to retailers of its Native American Inspired products:

The Indian Arts and Crafts Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-644), as amended, is a truth-in-marketing law that prohibits the offer or display for sale, or sale, of any art or craft product in a manner that falsely suggests it is Indian produced, an Indian product, or the product of a particular Indian Tribe. Covering all traditional and contemporary American Indian and Indian-style art and craftwork produced after 1935, the Act carries both criminal and civil penalties. For more information on the Act, please visit www.iacb.doi.gov.

A. Pendleton agrees to include the Paragraph in all of its print catalogs containing Native American Inspired Products. The design, placement, and size of the Paragraph will be consistent with other text in Pendleton's print catalogs that explains the history and nature of the company.

B. Pendleton agrees to include the Paragraph on a separate page within its website labeled "Indian Arts and Crafts Act." The design, placement, and size of the Paragraph will be consistent with other text on Pendleton's website that explains the history and nature of the company. A link to the "Indian Arts and Crafts Act" will be included under the "Native American Inspired" heading Pendleton's website, as well as at the bottom of the page of any product contained within the "Native American Inspired" section of the website.

C. Pendleton agrees to include the Paragraph in marketing materials sent to its retailers of Native American Inspired products. The design, placement, and size of the Paragraph will be consistent with other text in Pendleton's print catalogs that explains the history and nature of the company.

4. In further consideration of this settlement, Pendleton agrees that, no later than thirty (30) days following execution of this Agreement by all parties and their respective counsel, it will donate to the Red Cloud Indian Heritage Center in Pine Ridge, South Dakota (RCIHC) an amount of Forty-One Thousand, Two Hundred and Fifty dollars ($41,250);

5. This Agreement settles any and all existing and potential enforcement actions, civil actions, allegations, and claims arising out of Pendleton's marketing of the Sioux Star Blanket. This Agreement may be pleaded as a complete defense to, and may be used as a basis for an order dismissing any administrative action, enforcement action, or civil claim against Pendleton brought by the IACB or the United States, arising out of Pendleton's marketing of the Sioux Star Blanket.

6. Notwithstanding any other provisions of this Agreement, it is understood that, if the United States determines that Pendleton, or any of its employees, has knowingly given false, incomplete, or misleading information in the negotiations of this Agreement or in the investigation that led to this Agreement, Pendleton and/or its employees may be subject to criminal or civil proceedings.

7. Pendleton and the United States agree that neither party nor their successors or assigns will commence or pursue any action or claim against the other party or any of their officials, representatives, officers, or employees, or former officials, representatives, officers, or employees, in connection with this matter.

8. This Agreement was negotiated and drafted jointly by counsel for all parties hereto and shall be interpreted fairly and not against any party as the drafter thereof.

10. This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement and understanding between the parties concerning the subject matter hereof, supersedes all prior negotiations and proposed agreements, written and oral, and represents the final disposition of any and all matters, allegations, and claims arising out of Pendleton's marketing of the Pendleton Sioux Star Blanket.

No representations, understandings, or agreements have been made or relied upon in the making of this Agreement other than those specifically set forth herein. This Agreement can be modified only in a writing signed by the parties.

11. This Agreement may be executed in two or more counterparts, including photocopies, each of which when so executed shall be deemed to be an original and all of which when taken together shall constitute one and the same instrument.

Stanton, Meridith <meridith_stanton@ios.doi.gov> Fri, Jan 17, 2014 at 5:42 PM
To: gwinzenburg@redcloudschool.org

Good Evening Father Winzenburg,

Congratulations!

I am delighted to hear that the $41,250 donation was finally made to The Heritage Center.

Would you have time to speak with me by phone next Tuesday, Thursday before 1:00 EST, or anytime on Friday?

Best Regards,

Meridith

Dear Meridith:

Since talking with you in March, we have made some progress and I wanted to give you an update.

Please see Infringer Table. [redacted]

[redacted] I am now using the E-Bay VERO process to ask E-Bay to remove specific items. The correspondence is below; attachments to them above -- 1.1, 1.2, and 1.3.

The Navajo Nation continues to pursue their Urban Outfitters lawsuit, and is not collaborating with us. [redacted]

Dear Rebecca:

Attached is a revised Infringement Form.

Reason Codes:

- I erroneously used 5.1, thinking it was for Trademarks. It has been removed.
- While I believe your customers' uses are a violation of both 2.1 and 2.2, I have used only 2.2. per your instructions.
- In addition, your customers' uses are also violations of the Indian Arts and Crafts Act (1935 and 1990). But, there is no place to document this on the Infringement Form.

I am resubmitting only the Infringement Form, but I would like for the previously submitted documents to be considered a part of my complaint.

I have reattached 1.1, which is background on the Navajo Nation's and NBHI's Trademarks and the associated rights.

RE: INFRINGEMENT ON "NAVAJO" TRADEMARKS SR# 1-10146246398

Dear [redacted]

Thank you for contacting the eBay VeRO (Verified Rights Owner) Program in regard to the following potentially infringing items on the eBay site:

251284755290 330940607919 130930203757 151013153227 261231996087 261222355163 111099268992

We are happy to assist you and help you protect your intellectual property rights. However, the nature of intellectual property infringement you are attempting to report is unclear.

In reviewing the Notice of Claimed Infringement (NOCI), I see that you selected multiple reason codes for the items you reported. As such, we are asking for additional clarification from you regarding the nature of the infringement.

Please resubmit the NOCI to us and select only the single most appropriate reason code indicating how the items are infringing on your intellectual property rights.

We are requesting this clarification so that we may ensure the correct action is being taken, and also so that we can provide the seller with details regarding the removal of their items.

Thank you for your patience and your participation in eBay's VeRO Program. We appreciate you helping to keep eBay a safe and reputable forum in which to conduct business, and we look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Rebecca P.

RE: INFRINGEMENT ON "NAVAJO" TRADEMARKS SR# 1-10146246398

Dear [redacted]

Thank you for contacting eBay's Verified Rights Owner (VeRO) Program regarding the listings of concern.

Phillip, we weren't able to process the Notice of Claimed Infringement you submitted because portions of it were not completely filled out. Specifically, it was missing the following information:

Your physical signature

In addition, we were unable to process the Notice of Claimed Infringement you filed because it doesn't include the Item numbers of the infringing listings. Accordingly, we need you to resubmit the notice with Item numbers. If you need help locating the Item numbers, let us know. We'll be happy to help.

As soon as we receive a completed Notice of Claimed Infringement, we'll be able to pursue the matter.

Please resubmit a completed notice to us by fax at 801-757-9521 or by pdf to vero@ebay.com. If you need to download another copy of the form, please go to:

http://pages.ebay.com/help/community/NOCI1.pdf

Thank you for helping to keep eBay a safe and reputable forum in which to conduct business. We appreciate your report to eBay's VeRO Program and look forward to working with you further.

Sincerely,

Janet W.

SOUTHWEST CONTEMPORARY BLANKET

71529

read 1 review write a review follow this product

Placed images from 19th-century Navajo rugs take on a modern-art edge in this striking, contemporary blanket. Those beautifully simple rugs of the American Southwest have been sought-after trade items for more than a century. The directional cross is a sacred symbol to many Native American tribes and signifies the four great directions – North, South, East and West. Within each direction lie numerous powers and teachings. The symmetry of the crosses, squares and stripes make this design at home in settings from rustic to ultramodern. Unnapped. Whipstitch binding. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. Made in the USA of fabric woven in our Northwest mills.

American Indian College Fund
The American Indian College Fund is a Native American-operated organization dedicated to education. More than 30 tribal colleges serve American Indian students from every geographic region in the United States. They are beacons of hope for social and economic change in the communities they serve. The fund provides educational opportunities for students and disburses 6,000 scholarships annually. For a century, Pendleton Woolen Mills has maintained a mutual respect for our original customers, Native Americans. That is one of many reasons we support this philanthropic partnership. When you purchase an American Indian College Fund Blanket, a portion of the proceeds goes to help tribal colleges. To learn more about the fund, call 1-800-776-3863 or visit www.collegefund.org.

The taos ikat blanket

This blanket was inspired by a fabulous weaving displayed at a renowned museum in Taos, New Mexico, that specializes in Native American, Hispanic and international art. Ikat originated in Indonesia and has become a nearly universal weaving style. The technique is common in South and Central America, dating from pre-Columbian times. True ikat uses a resist-dying process similar to tie-dye. Dye is applied before the cloth is woven to create the pattern. Our jacquard loom interpretation of traditional ikat captures the marvelous depth of color and subtlety inherent in this ancient art form. The fabric is woven in our Northwest mills.

LANE POWELL
ATTORNEYS & COUNSELORS

Steven B. Ungar

Shareholder | Portland | 503.778.2064 | ungars@lanepowell.com

Areas of Practice
For more than 30 years, Steven Ungar has focused his practice on white collar criminal defense, governmental investigations, corporate governance, subpoena response, professional licensing, government affairs, state and federal regulatory compliance and crisis management. His experience includes serving as General Counsel for a public company; and currently, he serves as Chair of the Oregon State Lottery Commission, a gubernatorial appointment since 2005.

Steven has handled high-profile matters for major corporations, business executives, nonprofit organizations and Native American tribes. He is recognized for his skills in negotiations, alternative dispute resolution and problem-solving, and where these fail, litigation. Over the past decade he has been a go-to lawyer in the Northwest in each of these areas of practice, and is recognized as a first tier choice of businesses and individuals facing complex legal problems.

Investigations, Prosecutions and Compliance
Steven has extensive experience helping clients address matters of corporate compliance, governmental investigations and federal criminal prosecutions, arising from allegations of:

- Securities fraud, "Ponzi-scheme" claims, insider trading
- Tax evasion, tax liability, IRS and state-level tax fraud
- Broker-dealer issues, bank and bankruptcy fraud
- Health care fraud and abuse (Medicare, Medicaid and private payor)
- Embezzlement, theft, misappropriation of trade secrets or intellectual property
- Computer- and Internet-related offenses
- Environmental regulations and compliance (state and federal)
- Obstruction of justice and perjury

His familiarity with appearing before and negotiating with governmental agencies, investigators and prosecutors frequently translates into favorable rulings and dispositions for Lane Powell clients facing these types of complex and multi-faceted personal, legal and business problems.

Crisis Management
Steven has decades of experience representing and assisting individuals, corporations, Native American tribes and nonprofit organizations in preventing financial and public relations caused crises for individuals and entities. When a serious problem or crisis cannot be prevented, Steven has extensive experience assisting executives and boards in strategic decision-making, as well as the management, mitigation and containment of the problem. This experience encompasses formal legal representation, public and media relations, conducting independent internal investigations (e.g., for special committees formed by a board of directors) and coordinating with government investigators.

Representing Crime Victims
The rights of crime victims have been increasingly recognized at both the state and federal levels. In Oregon and Washington, the recognition of these rights in criminal and civil cases has given rise to a growing practice area. Steven's experience as both a criminal defense lawyer and in representing governmental entities and organizations has provided an excellent foundation from which to advocate on behalf of victims of criminal acts. He has successfully secured in-depth information about the prosecution crimes committed against his clients, commitments to receive counseling and compensation, and in the recent case involving the kidnapping of Gert Boyle, Chairman of Columbia Sportswear Company, Steven won an expanded role in the plea negotiation process. He has assisted clients in asserting these rights by representing witnesses giving testimony (before grand juries and in civil cases) about the injuries they have suffered, facilitating cooperation with government prosecutors, coordinating with lawyers who file lawsuits on behalf of victims for compensation, and advising on options (including injunctions and before parole boards) to protect victims' rights against perpetrators of crime.

Native American Legal Affairs
For years, Steven has served a number of Native American tribes as an effective Special Counsel on criminal, regulatory, tax, gaming, jurisdictional and economic development matters. Together with other lawyers at the Firm and hand-picked consultants, Steven approaches more serious problems in a manner ranging from "under the radar" strategic counsel to task-force type representation, providing legal assistance to Tribal boards and councils, focusing on:

- Tribal Governance
- Bureau of Indian Affairs matters

- Financial restructuring
- Gaming and related regulatory issu e.g., with the NIGC or State gaming commi ns)
- Personnel matters
- Crisis management

Environmental Investigations and Prosecutions
Steven's legal experience in this area includes both EPA and state-level investigations, which lead to civil and criminal enforcement of the increasingly complex and voluminous environmental regulatory landscape. He has represented large corporations and smaller entities alike in negotiating settlements and, when necessary, litigating issues arising out of alleged violations concerning air, water and hazardous chemicals.

Health Care Fraud and Abuse
Steven has extensive experience representing health care providers who face a myriad of increasingly complex state and federal laws, rules and regulations. He helps clients navigate through these laws and investigations and other enforcement perils that face providers, given the heightened scrutiny of the Health and Human Services' Office of Inspector General ("OIG") into allegations of Medicare and Medicaid fraud, abuse and overpayments to providers generally.

Pendleton Woolen Mills Continues Support with Nearly $80,000

February 21, 2012

Since 1995, Pendleton Woolen Mills has supported the American Indian College Fund (the Fund) to help Native college students pursue their dreams of obtaining a college degree. Pendleton has continued its longstanding support by granting two gifts to the Fund. The first gift of $6,472 is from royalties from a blanket line designed exclusively for the American Indian College Fund. This gift will continue the Pendleton Woolen Mills Tribal College Scholarship Program, which provides scholarships to American Indian students attending tribal colleges and universities in Washington and Montana. Pendleton's second gift of $73,498 will go towards the Pendleton Endowment Tribal Scholars Program, which provides scholarships in perpetuity to Native students attending tribal colleges and universities throughout the United States.

"We are pleased to be part of the American Indian College Fund family," said Robert Christnacht, Division Manager of Pendleton's Home division. "Our relationship with the Native American community goes back to our company's earliest days over 100 year ago. It is with a sense of pride and community that Pendleton makes these donations."

"The American Indian College Fund has enjoyed the support of Pendleton Woolen Mills for 17 years. Their support has been crucial for providing scholarships to American Indian students throughout Indian Country," said Richard B. Williams, President and CEO of the American Indian College Fund. "Pendleton's continued support provides hope to students who otherwise could not afford a college education, while also helping their families and communities."

About Pendleton Woolen Mills

Pendleton Woolen Mills has proudly designed and woven American Indian Trade blankets since 1909 in its mill in Pendleton, Oregon. Today, inspired by its heritage, Pendleton designs and produces apparel for men and women, blankets, home décor and gifts. Products are offered in catalogs, online and in Pendleton retail and outlet stores nationally. Pendleton designs are also sold by select retailers throughout the USA, Canada, Europe and Asia. Pendleton Launches Endowed Scholarship Program with American Indian College Fund

April 16, 2010

Denver, Colorado - Oregon-based Pendleton Woolen Mills has donated $39,000 to establish an endowed scholarship program benefitting American Indian tribal college student scholarships through a partnership with the American Indian College Fund (the Fund). This endowed scholarship program, entitled the Pendleton Endowment, will provide financial assistance to Native students attending any of the 33 tribal colleges located throughout the United States.

In addition to the Pendleton Endowment, the company provides royalty payments to the Fund for limited edition American Indian College Fund blankets sold by Pendleton. These payments fund the longstanding Pendleton Woolen Mills Tribal College Scholarship Program which supports American Indians at Northwest Indian College in Washington state or Blackfeet Community College, Chief Dull Knife College, Fort Belknap College, Fort Peck Community College, Little Big Horn College, Salish Kootenai College, and Stone Child College in Montana.

Since the Bishop family (now in its sixth generation of managing Pendleton Woolen Mills) opened the woolen mill in Pendleton, Oregon in 1909, the company has woven hundreds of thousands of Indian trade blankets, most of which were historically purchased by American Indians. The Bishop family and the town of Pendleton came together to build the town's mill, which continues to weave Pendleton jacquard fabric for Indian Trade Blankets.

Today, Pendleton is one of a handful of American companies still weaving fabric at their own USA mills. They focus on legendary craftsmanship and world class innovation for the specialty woolens that comprise their home and apparel collections. All Pendleton items are woven with care and quality and carry the iconic label "Warranted To Be A Pendleton." Pendleton has been manufacturing limited edition blankets for the American Indian College Fund, the proceeds of which have benefitted scholarships, for more than 10 years.

"Our heritage is integrally tied to the Native American," says Mort Bishop III, president, Pendleton Woolen Mills. "They were our first customer. Our remarkable friendship over 10 decades is one that we hold with respect and appreciation. Pendleton blankets are woven for an entire culture, which gives us both tremendous pride and responsibility. This new scholarship fund is one way we can continue to help young people in tribal colleges around the country become stronger through a quality education."

"We are thrilled that Pendleton Woolen Mills has chosen to expand its commitment to American Indian education by establishing an endowed scholarship program," said Richard B. Williams, President and CEO of the American Indian College Fund. "Pendleton is known throughout Indian Country for its commitment to making quality blankets and apparel, and it continues to build on that reputation for its commitment to a quality, culturally based education for Indian people."

President Obama Donates $125,000 of Nobel Prize Money to American Indian College Fund

March 12, 2010

Denver, Colorado – President Obama announced today that he will donate $125,000 of his $1.4 million Nobel Peace Prize monies to the American Indian College Fund (the Fund). In a statement issued by the White House, Obama said of the Fund and nine other charity organizations that received donations from the president, "These organizations do extraordinary work in the United States and abroad helping students, veterans and countless others in need. I'm proud to support their work."

"We are thrilled that President Obama has chosen to publicly acknowledge the work the American Indian College Fund is doing in Indian Country by sharing $125,000 of his prestigious Nobel Peace Prize award with us," said Richard B. Williams, President and CEO of the American Indian College Fund. "As a result of President Obama's vision and leadership, through his donation to the Fund along with nine other outstanding charities, he is setting an example for how all Americans can help those less fortunate. The gift will be used to support Native scholarships at America's 33 accredited tribal colleges and universities."

According to the White House Statement, these charities include Fisher House, which provides housing for families of patients receiving medical care at major military and VA medical centers; the Clinton-Bush Haiti Fund, which raises money for long-term relief efforts in Haiti after its earthquake; College Summit, which partners with elementary and middle schools and school districts to increase college enrollment and student preparation; the Posse Foundation, a scholarship organization which identifies public high school students with academic and leadership potential who may be overlooked by traditional college selection processes; the United Negro College Fund, which helps 60,000 students yearly to attend college through scholarship and internship programs; the Hispanic Scholarship Fund, the nation's leading Hispanic scholarship organization; the Appalachian Leadership and Education Foundation, which supports and enables young Appalachians to pursue higher education though scholarship and leadership curriculum; AfriCare, which supports health and HIV/AIDS, food security and agriculture, and water resource development projects in 25 countries; and the Central Asia Institute, which promotes and supports community-based education and literacy, especially for girls, in remote regions of Pakistan and Afghanistan.

Trademark fight over men's fragrance pits Pendleton Woolen Mills against Pendleton Round-Up

Let'er Buck cologne, on this display at the Pendleton Round-Up Association's Hall of Fame museum in Pendleton, has triggered a lawsuit by the Pendelton Woolen Mills , claiming trademark infringement. The Woolen Mills claims to own the Pendleton "mark", and says the Round-Up's marketing of fragrances is likely to cause confusion by the public because the Woolen Mills sells lotions, soaps and scented bath products.

PENDLETON -- Working side by side since the buggy-whip and six-gun era, the Pendleton Round-Up and Pendleton Woolen Mills have helped put this dusty old rodeo town on the map.

But now these grizzled saddle pards are headed to court, locked in a trademark wrangle over ownership and control of the word "Pendleton."

The nonprofit, all-volunteer Pendleton Round-Up Association stands accused of trademark infringement, unfair competition and deceptive trade practices, among other complaints, in a lawsuit brought by the Woolen Mills in U.S. District Court in Portland.

Triggering the suit is a product no self-respecting working cowboy would have bought in the rodeo's early years. A men's perfume called "Let 'er Buck vintage cologne spray," manufactured by Western Crossings LLC, sells for $69 for 3.4 ounces and includes the Pendleton Round-Up name on the package.

The Pendleton Round-Up Association won use of the name from the U.S. Trademark Commission last spring. The family-run Woolen Mills, world-renowned for its Native American-style blankets, then filed suit.

The Round-Up's trademark is "confusingly similar" to the Woolen Mills' own trademark, the suit claims.

The private company's Portland law firm, Lane Powell PC, says the court should prohibit registration of the Pendleton Round-Up trademark for fragrances or any goods or services related to those offered by Pendleton Woolen Mills.

History

The city: The Umatilla County town of Pendleton, population 16,612, was incorporated in 1880 and named after an otherwise

The suit also seeks unspecified actu... damages and punitive damages, and asks the court to have both amounts multiplied by up to three times the sum awarded owing to the Round-Up Association's "willful and intentional conduct."

The impending courtroom shootout troubles people in Pendleton.

Mayor Phil Houk said the Woolen Mills takes part in each September's Pendleton Round-Up and gives away dozens of blankets for prizes.

"When people think of Pendleton, Oregon, they think of the Pendleton Woolen Mills and the Pendleton Round-Up, and we are very proud of that," Houk said.

In a prepared statement, Woolen Mills spokeswoman Cheryl Engstrom sounded almost apologetic about the suit.

"Pendleton Woolen Mills has been working as a community volunteer with Pendleton Round-Up Association for over 100 years in a close relationship and working partnership," she said.

But she added, "Trademark protection laws are complex. A disagreement over the last six months unfortunately could not be resolved in a conventional manner."

The Woolen Mills started using the Pendleton name on blankets and throws around 1895, on apparel in 1912 and on lotions, soaps and other scented bath products in 2006, the lawsuit says.

The company has tossed its loop over a stampede of federal registrations bearing the name Pendleton -- from wine and wool to blankets and western jackets and coats.

In fact, the Woolen Mills is a partner with the Round-Up in marketing whiskey imported and bottled by Hood River Distillers. Bottles of 80-proof Pendleton Blended Canadian Whiskey bear the Round-Up's registered "Let 'er Buck" trademark and bucking horse logo and the word "Pendleton," a registered trademark of the Woolen Mills.

As for the Round-Up Association, it markets a smaller spectrum of products ranging from ball caps and T-shirts to books, barbecue sauce, whiskey and cologne.

But rodeo officials expect royalty income from the Let 'er Buck and Pendleton Round-Up brands, trademarks and logos one day might exceed the rodeo's ticket sales.

"The last thing in the world we want to do is ruin our relationship with the Woolen Mills," said Round-Up President Dennis Hunt . "But we didn't file suit against them."

forgotten 1864 vice presidential candidate from Ohio.

Deep roots: In 1910, a pair of brothers named Bishop, owners of the Pendleton Woolen Mills, helped kick-start the Pendleton Round-Up. It began as a hometown event modeled on Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West show and needed horseback Native Americans to give it authenticity.

The Bishops rode out to the Umatilla Indian Reservation to enlist the Confederated Umatilla, Cayuse and Walla Walla tribes. The chiefs were noncommittal, and the Bishops went home thinking they'd failed.

Next morning, they saw a dust cloud rising over the reservation. A short time later, hundreds of tribal members rode into Pendleton, set up a huge tepee encampment and spent the next several days dancing, singing, racing horses and displaying their tribal regalia to the crowds.

That first Pendleton Round-Up attracted 7,000 spectators, more than double what was expected.

The lawsuit raises the question: If [illegible] Woolen Mills wins, would the rodeo still get to call itself the Pendleton Round-Up?

A judge may have to decide that.

Round-Up spokesman Randy Thomas said the Rodeo Association would prefer to settle out of court. The association isn't interested in owning the Woolen Mills' Pendleton trademark, he said.

"We want to be the Pendleton Round-Up," Thomas said. "The Woolen Mills and the Round-Up and the town and the tribes, we all benefit from the promotion of each other."

The mayor hopes the two venerable institutions will come to terms.

"I think what people need to do is not take it too personally," Houk said. "Once the decision is made, move on. As time progresses, the relationship between the two will be very good again."

Pendleton Woolen Mills Continues Support with More Than $100,000 to the Fund

March 8, 2011

Since 1995, Pendleton Woolen Mill's support of the American Indian College Fund (the Fund) has helped more than 400 students pursue their dreams of obtaining a college degree. Pendleton has continued its longstanding support by granting two gifts to the Fund. Pendleton's first gift of $15,514.83 is from royalties generated from sales from a blanket line designed exclusively for the Fund. This gift will continue the Pendleton Woolen Mills Tribal College Scholarship Program, which provides scholarships to American Indian students attending tribal colleges and universities (TCUs) in Washington and Montana. Pendleton's second gift of $83,855.50 will go towards the Pendleton Endowment Tribal Scholars Program, which provides scholarships in perpetuity to Native students attending TCUs throughout the United States.

"We are always inspired by the individual stories of struggle and triumph of the students who receive the scholarships," said Robert Christnacht, Pendleton Home Division Manager. "Pendleton is honored to be able to contribute to the long-term growth of the tribal college system through the American Indian College Fund."

"Pendleton's support has been instrumental in the evolution of higher education in Indian Country," said Richard B. Williams, President and CEO of the American Indian College Fund. "These gifts will allow us to continue helping American Indian students change their lives through education for many years to come. We are incredibly grateful for Pendleton's generosity."

About Pendleton Woolen Mills

Set against the dry blue sky and bleached hills on the outskirts of town, the 100-year-old Pendleton Woolen Mills is an icon to the town and a brand that is the essence of Americana. But to its president, it's also something more visceral.

"You open the door of the store and you get a waft of wool smell — it's just like smelling leather," says Mort Bishop III. "You smell quality."

There is also a whiff of nostalgia for Bishop.

"One hundred years ago there were 1,000 mills," he says. "Now there are only a handful."

As one of the few left standing, Pendleton is coping with the recession and a changing market that over the past decades has seen wool blankets go from an everyday necessity to a specialty product. Pendleton has adapted by creating bedding out of other fabrics and designs. Even though Pendleton is the largest blanket manufacturer in the country, clothing is now 80% of its business. It processes and weaves all its wool at mills in Pendleton and Washougal, Wash.

Over the past decade that Bishop, 57, has been president of this sixth-generaton family business, the company has changed its focus from wholesale to retail, doubling its retail stores. Pendleton now has 70 retail outlets across the U.S. and also sells in Canada, China and Japan. While 45% of sales are still wholesale to department stores such as Dillards and VanMeur in the Midwest, 55% of sales are now catalog, Internet and retail.

But with gross revenue flat, Pendleton this summer eliminated 45 jobs, consolidated yarn manufacturing at the Washougal mill, and plans to cut salaries that are more than $50,000 annually. But Bishop is optimistic that consumer confidence will improve by fall and sales will pick up. The company has also refocused on core products, such as women's jackets and skirts, and men's shirts and sweaters.

Pendleton competes with Talbots and J. Crew for the attention of the 45- to 55-year-old shopper with a taste for quality fabrics. Balancing reliable products and innovative designs is the challenge Pendleton Woolen Mills faces every year. Bishop anticipates the market six months in advance, what he calls, "writing the next chapter."

"The next chapter has to fit logically after the existing chapter in the book," he says. "It all has to work together in a cohesive way."

In the next chapter, he sees collaborations as key to creating innovative new designs — and staying in business. A collaboration with the high-fashion New York-based company Opening Ceremony landed a Pendleton jacket on the May cover of American fashion bible Women's Wear Daily. And it started, of all places, in Japan. There, American styles have been tweaked to fit Japanese frames and sensibilities, inspiring a new line of clothing called Pendleton Meets Opening Cermony, which uses Pendleton wool and Native American patterns in clothing with urban styling. Two other collaborations, one with clothing company Hurley and one with the Japanese high-fashion label Comme des Garçons, also combine Pendleton fabric with new cuts and styles. These lines launch this fall.

"Our business niche is classic merchandise, but even in classic merchandise there needs to be freshness, evolution and creativity," says Bishop.

As Pendleton celebrates its centennial anniversary this year, Oregon turns 150. It was a custom Pendleton blanket that Gov. Ted Kulongoski gave to President Barack Obama to celebrate the state's anniversary, a blanket picturing Mt. Hood that was made from a new wool derived from environmentally friendly processes and dyes.

But sustainability isn't just a green manufacturing process for Bishop.

"I was well-trained by my father and grandfather and uncle," says Bishop. "That comes with a certain level of responsibility to leave the company better than you found it."

The Reservation

Population

The population of the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation is one of the most difficult statistics to confirm. United States Census Report counts put the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation's resident population at 15,521. However, a 2005 study conducted by Colorado State University and accepted by the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development estimates the resident population to be approximately 28,787.

Jim Berg, executive director for Oglala Sioux Lakota Housing, states that "the real number is closer to 40,000."

Size

The Pine Ridge Indian Reservation covers more than 2.8 million acres in southwestern South Dakota, making it the second-largest reservation in the United States and larger than Delaware and Rhode Island combined.

Economic realities

- 80 percent of residents are unemployed.
- 49 percent of residents live below the federal poverty line.
- 61 percent of residents below the age of 18 live below the poverty line.
- The Pine Ridge Indian Reservation is located in Shannon County, where its per-capita income makes it the second poorest county in the United States, at $6,286.
- If the Oglala Sioux Tribe were to equally disperse revenues from the Prairie Wind Casino to all enrolled tribal members, each resident would receive $.15 per month.

Health and well-being realities

- The infant mortality rate is five times higher than the United States national average.
- More than 4.5 million cans of beers are sold annually in White Clay, Nebraska, just over the border from the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. This amounts to more than 12,500 cans of beer a day. The reservation itself is dry.
- Obesity, diabetes, and heart disease occur in epidemic proportions on the Pine Ridge.
- Native Americans' rate of amputations related to diabetes is three to four times higher than among the general United States population.
- Death rates due to diabetes among Native Americans are three times higher than among the general United States population.
- Unhealthy diets and lack of exercise are two main contributing factors behind these high numbers, despite the fact that in the early history of the Lakota, diabetes was virtually unknown.
- Life expectancy on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation is the lowest anywhere in the western hemisphere, except for Haiti. A recent study found the life expectancy for men to be 48 years, and for women it is 52 years.

Shannon County residents and facilities

- Shannon County has the highest population rate of Native Americans in the United States, and the lowest percentage of Caucasians.
- About 70 percent of residents have attained a high school diploma, while 12.1 percent have attained a bachelor's degree.
- On the reservation, 13 percent of residents lack complete plumbing facilities, while 9.2 percent lack complete kitchen facilities. Also, 22.8 percent lack phone service.
- Shannon County has the interesting distinction of having the highest percentage of Democratic votes for President in the 2004 election of any county in the United States.

Youth risk behavior

- A report from the South Dakota Office of Comprehensive School Health indicates that among South Dakota high school students: 67 percent had intercourse at least once in their life.
- 88 percent used alcohol during their life.
- 31 percent seriously considered attempting suicide.
- 15 percent attempted suicide in the last 12 months.
- 90 percent tried cigarette smoking.
- 80 percent tried marijuana.

Lakota language

It is estimated that there are 6,000 fluent speakers of the Lakota language today, according to The University of California-Los Angeles Language Materials Project. The study found the language is in severe danger of becoming extinct.

- In the early 1990s, about half of the population of the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation could speak the Lakota language. Today, that number has fallen to less than one-quarter on the Pine Ridge, and is as low as 4 percent on other Lakota reservations.
- Because the average fluent speaker is nearly 65 years old, it is estimated that the vast majority of current fluent speakers are first-language speakers. The rate of teaching second-language speakers is falling drastically behind.

College debt

According to a news release by the Rapid City Journal in November 2008, South Dakotans rank 1st in the amount of average college debt owed upon completion of college.

Charitable giving

- Of all the foundation dollars infused every year to worthy causes, less than 1 percent of all philanthropic money goes to Native American causes, concerns and organizations.
- In 2008, South Dakota ranked fourth lowest in terms of money received from grants when compared to other states. North Dakota, Montana and Wyoming received fewer. In terms of total number of grants, South Dakota received the second fewest when compared with all other states. South Dakota received 127 whereas North Dakota received 112 grants in 2008.
- During the recession of 2001, South Dakota recorded easily the lowest level of charitable giving as a percent of income, at 0.4 percent. Just one year earlier South Dakota posted 1.8 percent of income earmarked for charities. South Dakota had a significantly larger decrease in percent of income donated to charities during this 2001 recession than other states, a decrease of 78 percent.

Red Cloud Indian School (Red Cloud) does not meet the following Standard for Charity Accountability.

Standard 8: Program Service Expense Ratio - Spend at least 65% of its total expenses on program activities.

Red Cloud does not meet this Standard because:

According to the its audited financial statements for the fiscal year ended June 30, 2009, the organization spent $7,774,406 or 63% of its total expenses ($12,337,085) on program service activities.

Red Cloud Indian School (Red Cloud) meets the remaining 19 Standards for Charity Accountability.

Back To Top

Programs

Red Cloud consists of two elementary schools and one college preparatory high school serving Lakota boys and girls. At its main campus at Holy Rosary Mission in Pine Ridge, South Dakota, Red Cloud operates a Lakota Catholic school system that includes an elementary school (grades K-8) and a college preparatory high school. Red Cloud operates a second elementary school (grades K-8) at Our Lady of Lourdes. In addition to the South Dakota state required curricula, Red Cloud teaches courses in Lakota history, language, culture and spirituality. Red Cloud also coordinates the development efforts of community-based parish outreach programs on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Trained staff and community volunteers lead gatherings and celebrations to focus on cultural traditions and customs. In addition, the organization helps identify the needs of the community in an effort to provide programs and opportunities to serve children and their families. Three times per year, Red Cloud publishes a newsletter, the "Red Cloud Country." The Heritage Center located on the main campus showcases the art and native craft of Native American artists. The Heritage Center sponsors an annual juried Art Show showcasing the work of Native American artists from across the country. The organization provides direct assistance to families through its emergency pastoral fund and its parishes which serve the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 2010, Red Cloud's program expenses were:

Education programs	6,593,604
Socio-pastoral	735,816
Community services and cultural development	333,634

Placed images from 19th-century Navajo rugs take on a modern-art edge in this striking, contemporary blanket. Those beautifully simple rugs of the American Southwest have been sought-after trade items for more than a century. The directional cross is a sacred symbol to many Native American tribes and signifies the four great directions – North, South, East and West. Within each direction lie numerous powers and teachings. The symmetry of the crosses, squares and stripes make this design at home in settings from rustic to ultramodern. Unnapped. Whipstitch binding. 62% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. Woven in our Northwest mills.

Placed images from 19th-century Navajo rugs take on a modern-art edge in this striking, contemporary design. These beautifully simple rugs of the American Southwest have been sought-after trade items for more than a century. The directional cross is a sacred symbol to many Native American tribes and signifies the four great directions – North, South, East and West. Within each direction lie numerous powers and teachings. The symmetry of the crosses, squares and stripes make this design at home in settings from rustic to ultramodern. Unwrapped. Whipstitch binding. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. Woven in our Northwest mills. Fits standard size pillow.

NAVAJO WATER BLANKET

Based on an early 19th-century photograph by Edward S. Curtis, this blanket incorporates classic Navajo elements in an eye-dazzling pattern. The central dragonfly, an emblem of water, symbolizes life. Includes a special hangtag with the legend, inspiration or history behind the blanket. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton, unnapped. Dry clean. Woven in our Northwest mills. Created exclusively for the American Indian College Fund. Your purchase helps fund scholarships and other needs. 64" x 80"

American Indian College Fund
The American Indian College Fund is a Native American-operated organization dedicated to education. More than 30 tribal colleges serve American Indian students from every geographic region in the United States. They are beacons of hope for social and economic change in the communities they serve. The fund provides educational opportunities for students and disburses 6,000 scholarships annually. For a century, Pendleton Woolen Mills has maintained a mutual respect for our original customers, Native Americans. That is one of many reasons we support this philanthropic partnership. When you purchase an American Indian College Fund Blanket, a portion of the proceeds goes to help tribal colleges. To learn more about the fund, call 1-800-776-3863 or visit www.collegefund.org.

YAVAPAI BLANKET

write the first review follow this product

The nomadic Yavapai or "People of the Sun" once occupied much of central Arizona. Yavapai women specialized in basketry, with some items woven tightly enough to hold water. The vivid pattern reflects the intricate Yavapai art of basketry. Now in a blue as brilliant as a cloudless Southwest desert sky. Reversible jacquard for two dramatically different looks. Like the original Native American trading blankets, it is unnapped. 52% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. Made in the USA.

IROQUOIS TURTLE BLANKET

write the first review follow this product

The Iroquois Turtle Blanket is a re-coloration of an early 1900s Pendleton design. It pays tribute to the Iroquois Confederacy, one of the oldest participatory democracies on earth, consisting of the Oneida, Seneca, Mohawk, Cayuga, Onondaga (and later the Tuscarora) Nations. The Turtle design was inspired by Iroquois, primarily Mohawk, legend. Long ago, the earth was covered with deep water and there were no people. According to stories, the birds saw Skywoman fall from the sky. As she fell, she grabbed the roots of a tree from heaven. The birds spread their wings together to save her. Only the Turtle was strong enough to hold her, so they placed her on the turtle's back. There she planted the root; and as her garden grew, Turtle grew in size first becoming a large island, then finally North America, known as Turtle Island. This blanket is an example of centerpoint design in which three major design elements fall in a row down the center of the blanket. Unmapped. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. Made in the USA. 64" x 80".

American Indian College Fund
The American Indian College Fund raises money for 32 tribal colleges that serve 30,000 students representing 250 native tribes. The fund disburses approximately 5,000 scholarships annually for American Indian students seeking to better their lives through continued education. The tribal colleges play a vital role in the futures of Native American people, our country and, ultimately, people everywhere. For over 100 years, Pendleton Woolen Mills has maintained a mutual respect for our original customers, Native Americans. That is one of the many reasons we are pleased to support this important philanthropic partnership. When you purchase any blanket from our American Indian College Fund Collection, a portion of the proceeds goes to help tribal colleges throughout the country. To find out more about the American Indian College Fund, call 1-800-776-3863, or visit www.collegefund.org.

Placed images from 19th-century Navajo rugs take on a modern-art edge in this striking, contemporary design. These beautifully simple rugs of the American Southwest have been sought-after trade items for more than a century. The directional cross is a sacred symbol to many Native American tribes and signifies the four great directions – North, South, East and West. Within each direction lie numerous powers and teachings. The symmetry of the crosses, squares and stripes make this design at home in settings from rustic to ultramodern. Unwapped. Whipstitch binding. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. SHOW & TELL

LOOK FOR THE ALUTIIQ LABEL

From Tlingit carver Nathan Jackson's 20-foot totem pole to the modernist stone-and-metal sculptures of Chiricahua Apache–born artist Allan Houser, Smithsonian's National Museum of the American Indian is full of works by native artisans.

And lots—and lots—of signs indicating which works are, in fact, "NATIVE MADE."

In the building's first-floor Chesapeake Museum Store, for instance, you'll find all sorts of "jewelry, textiles, and other works by Native artisans," according to the museum's Web site. Among them: Nachanulth carver Tom Patterson's red-cedar wren mask, listed at $3,000, and a black jar by Santa Clara Pueblo potter Margaret Tafoya, which is priced at a whopping $22,500.

But not every item boasts the same tribal cred. In fact, upstairs in the Roanoke Museum Store, there's all sorts of Native American–themed merchandise that's not quite so authentic.

Take the colorful 32-by-44-inch "muchacho robe," listed at $55. Or the $95 zip-motif denim jacket. Or the 800 deep-violet "commuter bag." Or the matching $20 compact-disc carrying case—perfect for packing up that $15.98 copy of Smithsonian Folkways Recordings' Beautiful Beyond: Christian Songs in Native Languages.

Though "[i]nspired by the vivid colors and intricate designs of local and southwest Native American tribes," according to their labels, the mats, bag, particular Indian or Indian tribe or Indian arts and crafts organization, resident within the United States." And the law strictly defines an Indian as "any individual who is a member of an Indian tribe, or for the purposes of this section is certified as an Indian artisan by an Indian tribe."

The labeling regs lend at least a slight edge to the native artist competing with non-natives—often in the same galleries and markets—"for his own cultural identity," notes Alutiiq artist Jerry Laktonen. "I think it has probably helped quite a bit as far as giving us a foothold in the market," says Laktonen, whose hand-painted ceremonial paddles sell under the "NATIVE MADE" label at the Smithsonian for $1,500 a pop.

"We comply to the letter," says Linda St. Thomas, spokesperson for Smithsonian Business Ventures, the institution's money-making arm that oversees the museum's stores and Mitsitam Café. Not that the Smithsonian has much choice in the matter: Violating the act just once can result in stabilized or synthetic [illegible] alternative for our visitors who w[illegible] to purchase a more affordable remembrance from the National Museum of the American Indian."

Yet there appears to be at least one discrepancy the museum has overlooked: Under a "NATIVE MADE" sign advertising "Northwest Coast Crafts" hang an abundance of black $18 baseball caps embroidered with a red eagle logo.

A label affixed to the outside of the hats indicates that they were designed by Kwakwaka'wakw and Salish descendant Maynard Johnny Jr. But another label sewn inside the brushed-cotton-twill hats clearly reads, "Made in China."

"That's a mistake," says St. Thomas. "It should have a tag that says that it's not native-made."

NOBODY IN THE CLUB, IT'S HISTORY...SORT OF

When the board of the beleaguered City Museum of Washington voted to close all its exhibits last month, Chair Thornell Page cited Congress' failure to provide an expected $1 million subsidy to help keep the institution afloat.

He didn't mention that the museum had also just lost some significant local funding: the $10,000 to $12,000 in rental revenue it was getting each week from area party promoters.

Back on Oct. 2, the old Carnegie Library build[illegible] day-night party called Muse (Show & Tell, 10/15). "The only weekly event of its kind," according to promotional materials, "MUSE provides the perfect pleasure palace for hip trendsetters and architects of style looking to break from the mundane club scene."

Not so perfect, it turned out: Organizers pulled the plug on the [illegible] pact-disc carrying case—perfect for packing up that $15.98 copy of Smithsonian Folkways Recordings' Beautiful Beyond: Christian Songs in Native Languages.

Though "[i]nspired by the vivid colors and intricate designs of local and southwest Native American tribes," according to their labels, the robe, bag, and CD case were all manufactured by Portland, Ore.–based Pendleton Woolen Mills Inc. Hence the "NON-NATIVE MADE" disclaimer printed in small type in the bottom right-hand corner of the shop's "Pendleton Sun Signs" placard.

But all this origin-specific labeling isn't just about the museum's being politically correct or customer-friendly. It's also about obeying federal law: The Indian Arts and Crafts Act of 1990, which Congress passed in response to increasing sales of tribal-looking knockoffs, strictly regulates how these goods can be marketed.

Under the act, "[i]t is unlawful to offer or display for sale or sell any good, with or without a Government trademark, in a manner that falsely suggests it is Indian produced, an Indian product, or the product of a a fine of up to $1 million—almost half the more than $2 million in sales the museum has raked in since opening on Sept. 21. A repeat offense could bump that penalty up to $5 million.

Naturally, the museum takes its arts-and-crafts labeling very seriously indeed. "Everything that is by Native Americans has to be labeled as such and verified," St. Thomas says. "And we have letters of authenticity from all the makers. So where we say it's made by Indians, we have the letters to back it up."

And when authenticity is in question, the museum attempts to clarify. Above a rack of $18 bracelets and $35 necklaces, for instance, there's this fine-print disclaimer: "This jewelry is assembled by Navajo people, however, the components are not handmade or produced by Native Americans. Turquoise used may be event of its kind," according to promotional materials, "MUSE provides the perfect pleasure palace for hip trendsetters and architects of style looking to break from the mundane club scene."

Not so perfect, it turned out: Organizers pulled the plug on the weekly-party idea after only five weeks. "It was very labor-intensive," explains promoter Howard Kitrosser. "Too much load-in and load-out of all the stuff"—sofas, bar supplies, and DJ equipment.

Muse will continue, Kitrosser says—but not on a weekly basis. "We've just found that people responded better if we do, like, once-a-month special events," says Kitrosser, who notes that the event saw its biggest turnout for its Oct. 7 concert afterparty featuring embattled R&B crooner R. Kelly.

As for future special events: Muse will earn a little scratch for the City Museum on Dec. 17 and Dec. 31, but not again until February 2005.

DIAMOND RANCH QUILT

As the buffalo disappeared, Northern plains Indians of Montana and the Dakotas replaced buffalo robes with quilts. One of the most recognizable designs is the Morning Star, adapted in the late 1800s from the traditional Lone Star pattern. Covering most of the quilt top, its eight-point design was extremely difficult to create – the mosaic of tiny diamonds radiating out from the center took long hours of careful cutting, perfect placement and skillful handstitching. In Native American lore, this large star signifies the beginning of a new day – and also lights the way for departing souls. Handquilted on pure cotton. Washable. Imported.

Sioux Star, Pendleton Blanket

In 1990, the Sioux Star design was inspired by quilt patterns that have been handmade for generations. Sioux quilts may take years to finish. Each one, with its own unique design, represents a memorial, an event, a person, or honors a special occasion. To commemorate this tradition, the Sioux Star blanket is truly a striking representation of the Sioux nation. Napped and felt bound.

Dedicated in friendship to all Santee, Wiciycla and Teton of the Sioux Nation, who are renowned for their quiltmaking skills and artistry.

Specifications;

82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton.

Dry clean. Made in the USA, Pendleton Woolen Mills.

CHEYENNE EAGLE BLANKET

7CCH

Depicts the Cheyenne story of how a warrior freed an eagle from the antlers of an elk. For helping to free him, the eagle gave the man a gift - a beautiful stallion covered with spots just like the eagle's feathers. Designed exclusively for the American Indian College Fund by Northern Cheyenne Artist Ben Nighthorse Campbell, this truly artistic blanket includes a special hangtag that tells the story of the Eagle, the Elk, and the Warrior. Photograph: Raymond Meeks. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton, unnapped. Dry clean. Made in the USA. 39" x 66".

American Indian College Fund
The American Indian College Fund raises money for 32 tribal colleges that serve 30,000 students representing 250 native tribes. The fund disburses approximately 5,000 scholarships annually for American Indian students seeking to better their lives through continued education. The tribal colleges play a vital role in the futures of Native American people, our country and, ultimately, people everywhere. For over 100 years, Pendleton Woolen Mills has maintained a mutual respect for our original customers, Native Americans. That is one of the many reasons we are pleased to support this important philanthropic partnership. When you purchase any blanket from our American Indian College Fund Collection, a portion of the proceeds goes to help tribal colleges throughout the country. To find out more about the American Indian College Fund, call 1-800-776-3863, or visit www.collegefund.org.

The nomadic Yavapai or "People of the Sun" once occupied much of central Arizona. Yavapai women specialized in basketry, with some items woven tightly enough to hold water. The vivid pattern reflects the intricate Yavapai art of basketry. Now in a blue as brilliant as a cloudless Southwest desert sky. Reversible jacquard for two dramatically different looks. Like the original Native American trading blankets, it is unnapped. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. Made in the USA.

The Native American pueblo pottery tradition of the Southwest is an art form that has endured for centuries. The Laguna blanket is a tribute to the pottery motifs of Laguna Pueblo in what is now present-day New Mexico. The first pottery of the Southwest pueblo tribes was probably based on the basketry forms of the Anasazi, pueblo dwellers of ancient days thought to be the ancestors of several modern Indian tribes including the Hopi, the Zuni and the Pueblo. The Laguna Blanket is crafted in the traditional, dramatic three-color combination prevalent in Laguna pottery — shades of red, black and tan. It is centered with a vibrant geometric floral design inspired by images common in Laguna pottery. Curving shapes, flowers and leaves, circles, and star like are signature Laguna design elements. The blanket's geometric border represents the pueblos themselves, the cliffs or adobe homes of Southwestern Native Americans. Unfringed. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. Made in the USA. 64" x 80"

AICF 20TH ANNIVERSARY- MARTINEZ BLANKET

710-H

Legendary Southwest ceramic artist Maria Martinez 1887-1980) is renowned for her black-on-black pottery, re-creating an ancient art form until then seen only in museums. In the Tewa pueblo of San Ildefonso, New Mexico, she was known for making the thinnest pots in the fastest amount of time. She shared her traditional techniques and skills with her family, her Pueblo and the world, in keeping with her belief that an individual could not succeed without supporting the group. Maria Martinez won many awards and helped create both demand and respect for beautiful, well-made pottery. In doing so, she enabled others to make a living at the pueblo. At the time of her birth, just thirty families lived within the pueblo of San Ildefonso. Today, artists and galleries in the area thrive as a testament to the legacy of Maria Martinez.

American Indian College Fund
The American Indian College Fund raises money for 32 tribal colleges that serve 30,000 students representing 250 native tribes. The fund disburses approximately 5,000 scholarships annually for American Indian students seeking to better their lives through continued education. The tribal colleges play a vital role in the futures of Native American people, our country and, ultimately, people everywhere. For 86 years, Pendleton Woolen Mills has maintained a mutual respect for our original customers, Native Americans. That is one of the many reasons we are pleased to support this important philanthropic partnership. When you purchase any blanket from our American Indian College Fund Collection, a portion of the proceeds goes to help tribal colleges throughout the country. To find out more about the American Indian College Fund, call 1-800-776-3863, or visit www.collegefund.org.

Hi Meridith,

I'm in Chicago at the moment and I haven't had a chance to look them over yet. I will do so this evening and drop you a note then.

Again, thanks for you and your team's time yesterday. I'm looking forward to getting back to work next week.

Have you had a chance to give this further thought-in terms of whether or not this would be a good time for me to involve a Sioux Tribal member and the US Attorney's office in SD. I think Ashley has emailed you the two documents to your Temple address, following yesterday's phone call. I currently pln to fly to AZ this Thursday, and then following the Heard Market fron Phoenix to Rapid City-in part because our Sioux Indian Museum curator retires March 26-after over 40 yrs with our museum. But the travel plans can be flexible if need be.

SIOUX STAR BLANKET

In 1990, the Sioux Star design was inspired by quilt patterns that have been handmade for generations. Sioux quilts may take years to finish. Each one, with its own unique design, represents a memorial, an event, a person, or honors a special occasion. To commemorate this tradition, the Sioux Star blanket is truly a striking representation of the Sioux nation. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton warp. Dry clean. Made in the USA. 64" x 80"

Re: Pendleton Home Collection Holiday 2009 Catalog
File No. 005436.336

Dear Ms. Stanton:

This firm represents Pendleton Woolen Mills, Inc. ("Pendleton"). Our client forwarded to us your letter dated January 12, 2010, regarding Pendleton's Pendleton Home Collection Holiday 2009 catalog and compliance with the Indian Arts and Crafts Act (the "Act").

We understand the Act prohibits the marketing or sale of goods as "Indian" made when they are not made by Indians as defined by the Act. We understand that the Act prohibits the offer, display, or sale of a product in a manner that falsely suggests it is Indian produced, an Indian product, or the product of a particular Indian Tribe.

The products offered by Pendleton Woolen Mills, Inc. are in fact inspired by the original tribes and Pendleton uses the Sioux and Lakota names to give credit to the respective tribes for the origination of the designs.

Pendleton's marketing has long acknowledged that its designs are inspired in part by Native American tribes, just as different tartan designs are inspired by different Scottish families. The designs used by Pendleton cannot accurately be named or described in any other way or manner, except by reference to the tribal names. Pendleton has been using its Sioux Star design name in this way on a variety of different products since at least 1989. Pendleton's use of the Sioux and Lakota names gives credit to Native American tribes where credit is due.

Consistent with the spirit of the Act, Pendleton does not give any indication or make any representation or misrepresentation to its consumers that its products are made by Native Americans. There are some circumstances in which Pendleton hires Native American designers to design blankets for its Legendary Series. In such cases, those Native American designers may be featured by Pendleton in its catalogs.

Pendleton respects, honors, and reveres Native American tribal art and has supported Native Americans and Native American organizations for over 100 years. For example, Pendleton has partnered with the American Indian College Fund to provide scholarships to Native American students.

We would be happy to schedule a conference call with you to discuss the information set forth in this letter and resolution of this matter.

Very truly yours,

LANE POWELL PC

LAGUNA BLANKET

The Native American pueblo pottery tradition of the Southwest is an art form that has endured for centuries. The Laguna blanket is a tribute to the pottery motifs of Laguna Pueblo in what is now present-day New Mexico. The first pottery of the Southwest pueblo tribes was probably based on the basketry forms of the Anasazi, pueblo dwellers of ancient days thought to be the ancestors of several modern Indian tribes including the Hopi, the Zuni and the Pueblo. The Laguna Blanket is crafted in the traditional, dramatic three-color combination prevalent in Laguna pottery — shades of red, black and tan. It is centered with a vibrant geometric floral design inspired by images common in Laguna pottery. Curving shapes, flowers and leaves, circles, and star like are signature Laguna design elements. The blanket's geometric border represents the pueblos themselves, the cliffs or adobe homes of Southwestern Native Americans. Unnapped. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. Made in the USA. 64" x 80".

The nomadic Yavapai or "People of the Sun" once occupied much of central Arizona. Yavapai women specialized in basketry, with some items woven tightly enough to hold water. The vivid pattern reflects the intricate Yavapai art of basketry. Now in a blue as brilliant as a cloudless Southwest desert sky. Reversible jacquard for two dramatically different looks. Like the original Native American trading blankets, it is unnapped. 82% pure virgin wool/18% cotton. Dry clean. Made in the USA.

INDIAN ARTS AND CRAFTS BOARD
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20240

January 12, 2010

Pendleton Home Collection
P.O. Box 3030
Portland, Oregon 97208-3030

Dear Sir or Madam:

As the Pendleton Home Collection's Holiday 2009 Catalog contains offers of "Lakota Dinnerware" and a "Sioux Star Quilt," the Indian Arts and Crafts Board is providing you with important information on the Indian Arts and Crafts Act (Act) for your prompt review. As you will see upon reviewing the material, the Act is essentially a truth-in-marketing law designed to prevent the marketing of art and craft products as "Indian" made when they are not, in fact, made by Indians as defined by the Act.

Under the Act, it is illegal to offer or display for sale, or sell, any art or craft product in a manner that falsely suggests it is Indian produced, an Indian product, or the product of a particular Indian Tribe. According to the implementing regulations, unqualified use of the terms "Indian," "Native American," or the names of particular Indian Tribes in connection with the sale or display for sale of an Indian art or craft product will be interpreted to mean that the maker is a member of a federally or officially State recognized Indian Tribe, a member of the Tribe named, or is certified by an Indian Tribe as a non-member artisan; 25 C.F.R. §309.3. Therefore, for such work to be sold as Indian, Native American, or as the product of a particular Indian Tribe, it must be produced by an enrolled member of a federally or officially State recognized Tribe, or by an individual who has been formally certified as a non-member Indian artisan by the federally or officially State recognized Tribe of their descent.

Therefore, to ensure full compliance with the Act, the IACB recommends that you refrain from marketing products as the product of a particular Tribe, such as "Sioux Star Quilt," unless they are produced by Indians as defined by the Act.

First-time violations of the Act carry civil and criminal penalties of up to $250,000 in fines, imprisonment up to five years, or both. For corporations, first-time violations carry civil and criminal penalties of up to $1,000,000.

If you have any questions about the Indian Arts and Crafts Act, please call us at (202) 208-3773.

Sincerely,

MEREDITH Z. STANTON

WOOLEN MILLS

Weaving America's Spirit Since 1909

A century has passed since we wove the first jacquard blanket at our mill in Pendleton, Oregon. Native Americans then and now celebrate significant occasions with the gift of a Pendleton blanket. Today we weave beautiful fabrics – from intricate jacquards to festive tartans and soft merino woolens – in our Northwest mills. Americans from sea to shining sea put Pendleton gifts at the top of their lists. And we continue to weave our reputation for gifts of quality, rich in history, with wonderful stories to tell.

Spirit of the Peoples

Pendleton blankets first rolled off the jacquard looms at our mill in Pendleton, Oregon, in 1909. This Spirit of the Peoples design is dedicated to the Pendleton community, customers and associates who have made possible our centennial celebration. Six stripes represent the five generations who have led the company and the next generation that will lead us on. Directional crosses symbolize North, South, East and West, homes to the Native Americans – our first customers. Arrowheads denote the strength and good fortune that have blessed our journey thus far.

Chief Joseph

When the U.S. government ordered the Nez Perce onto reservations in Idaho, Chief Joseph resisted, leading his band toward Canada. Considered a brilliant strategist, he won many battles against great odds. In 1877 he surrendered to save his people from a harsh winter with little food and no blankets. The Chief Joseph blanket includes Native American symbols of strength and bravery, attributes of this great chief whose courage and determination won him respect in times of peace and war.

B-C. Ah-Day Collection Baby Blankets
"Ah-Day" means "special" in Kiowa, and these intricate blankets are an unsurpassed gift for a special child. They are designed by acclaimed Native American artist Virginia Stroud and created exclusively by Pendleton Woolen Mills for the American Indian College Fund. They were inspired by the Plains Indian tradition of parents placing their child's remaining navel cord inside an amulet shaped like a turtle or a sand lizard. The amulets represent the turtle's hard shell and the sand lizard's quick movements to guard the spirit of the child and ensure a long, protected life. Pure virgin wool/cotton. Dry clean. Made in the USA.

D. Paisley Jacquard Throw
Originally from Persia and India, paisley was brought home to Scotland by soldiers returning from the colonies. In the 1800s Scottish weavers re-created the pattern on their jacquard looms. We weave this richly detailed, double-sided fabric on our own jacquard looms in Pendleton, Oregon. Ours is one of the few American mills still weaving such intricate patterns. The design is light and subtle on one side, darker and more defined on the other. 100% pure virgin wool. Dry clean. Made in the USA. Thistle or sage.

71016	60" x 66" with 3" fringe	$148.00

Luxurious Merino

The finest merino wool blankets are woven in our Oregon mill. Merino is light, lofty and among the best wool available. The fine, tightly crimped fleece leaves fewer ends sticking out. That's why our blankets and throws are softer and smoother – irresistible luxuries that promise a lifetime of comfort.

Father's Eyes Blanket

We designed and wove this special blanket to honor fathers everywhere. Diamonds represents a father's loving eyes. They are symbols of the clarity and wisdom with which he watches over and guides his children. Arrowheads signify the unwavering protection a father provides for his family and the direction that he offers to his sons and daughters. A portion of the sale of each blanket will benefit the Men's Health Network, a nonprofit group dedicated to improving men's lives through better health.

Heritage Blankets

C. New! Fremont Blanket
The Fremont Blanket was inspired by the ancient Fremont Indians, a prehistoric culture that inhabited Utah and parts of the Colorado Plateau and the Great Basin. Like their contemporaries, the Anasazi, the Fremont Indians disappeared mysteriously. They left behind on the walls of caves and canyons many rock art records depicting the curved horns of Bighorn sheep. The graceful, sure-footed sheep were a source of food and clothing. The horn motif on this blanket represents Bighorn sheep and arrows, the weapons of the hunter. Black multi.
71202 64" x 80" $198.00

D. Iroquois Turtle Blanket
A recoloration of a favorite Pendleton design from the early 1900s. Legend says that long ago when the earth was covered with water, the birds saw Skywoman fall from the sky. They spread their wings to save her. Only the Turtle was strong enough to hold her, so they placed her on Turtle's back. There she planted a garden. As it grew, Turtle grew in size, finally becoming North America. Gold multi.
70781 64" x 80" $198.00

E. Diamond Dance Blanket
The design is a revival of a pattern from the Pendleton Cayuse collection of the 1920s. Original Cayuse blankets are coveted by collectors, and we are pleased to weave a modern interpretation of this exciting pattern. The dizzying three-dimensional diamond effect makes it one of the most dynamic designs in our century of blanket making. Tan multi.
71066 64" x 80" $198.00

F. Geronimo Blanket
A tribute to the famed Apache medicine man, seer and spiritual leader, Geronimo. He was single-minded in his determination to preserve his people's land and culture through any means necessary. The Geronimo blanket is inspired by an original Pendleton robe he wore in a photograph from the early 1900s. As with all Pendleton blankets made through 1909, the blanket has rounded corners. Red.
70243 64" x 80" $198.00

This year we introduce the Fremont Blanket to our Heritage Collection. The collection includes enduring patterns reintroduced from our archives. Dating back as far as 1909, the Heritage Collection designs are interpretations of traditional Indian trade blankets woven by Pendleton Woolen Mills in the early 20th century. All are pure virgin wool/cotton, unnapped and woven in the USA in our own Northwest mills. Dry clean.

A. American Indian College Fund Navajo Water Blanket
This pattern is based on an early-19th-century photograph by Edward S. Curtis, the renowned photographer who recorded thousands of Native people at the turn of the 20th century. It incorporates a classic Navajo sawtooth design. The central dragonfly, an emblem of water, symbolizes life. Includes a special hangtag with the legend, inspiration and history behind the blanket. Pure virgin wool/cotton, unnapped jacquard is woven in our Northwest mills. Dry clean. Made in the USA.
Created for the American Indian College Fund.
70235 64" x 80" $275.00

B. Wrought Iron Blanket Hangers
Steel ¾" rod with cast iron finials in arrowhead (aged black iron finish) or hoop (aged rust iron finish) design. Two wall hanger mounts included. 75"L with finials.
70236 Arrowhead $188.00
70689 Hoop $188.00

Add Hanging Tabs and Turn a Blanket into Wall Art
We will gladly sew tabs on any size blanket so that you may use it as a wall hanging. Tab color will match the blanket binding. Cost is $32.00/per blanket. To find out more or to order, visit our website.

American Indian College Fund

American Indian College Fund is a Native-operated organization dedicated to innovation and growth in education. The tribal colleges are more than 30 strong, serving 30,000 students – 85 percent of whom live at or below the poverty level. Today the fund provides educational opportunities for American Indian students and disburses 5,000 scholarships annually. For a century, Pendleton Woolen Mills has maintained a mutual respect for our original customers, Native Americans. That is one of the many reasons we are pleased to support this important philanthropic partnership. When you purchase an American Indian College Fund Blanket or our Navajo Water coat, a portion of the proceeds goes to help tribal colleges throughout the country. To find out more about the American Indian College Fund, call 1-800-776-3863 or visit www.collegefund.org.

C. Cheyenne Eagle Saddle Blanket
This American Indian College Fund collectible depicts the Cheyenne story of how a warrior freed an eagle from the antlers of an elk. Designed exclusively for Pendleton by Cheyenne artist and former U.S. senator Ben Nighthorse Campbell. Includes a special hangtag with the legend, inspiration and history behind the blanket. Pure virgin wool/cotton, unnapped jacquard is woven in our Northwest mills. Dry clean. Made in the USA. Created for the American Indian College Fund.

National Treasures

America's national parks are a precious heritage. Since the early 1900s, Pendleton has honored these national treasures with a collection of distinctive park blankets. All the blankets have a Pendleton commemorative label signifying their authenticity and the park represented, and all are woven in our own Northwest woolen mills.

Grand Canyon, Yosemite, Grand Teton, Rainier, Acadia, Glacier and Crater Lake

D-J. Collectible National Park Blankets
Beginning with Glacier Park in the early 1900s, Pendleton has honored America's greatest natural treasures with a series of distinctive striped blankets – each a handsome representation of the priceless park for which it is named. The traditional colors and historic markings of the Glacier Park Blanket date back to the days of the frontier trading posts. Colors and stripes of subsequent blankets are designed to pay tribute to the natural beauty unique to each park. 100% pure virgin wool. Dry clean. Made in the USA.
