Souder holds a Bachelor of Science degree in public management from Indiana University's School of Public and Environmental Affairs. He and his wife Sarah have two children, Elias, 6, and Ethan, 4, who are already fond of Bradenton’s people, beaches and clear water.

De Soto National Memorial commemorates the landing of Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto in Florida in 1539 and the first extensive organized exploration by Europeans of what is now the southern United States. The memorial, established in 1948, received nearly 233,000 visitors in 2016 who spent an estimated \$13.6 million in local gateway regions while visiting De Soto National Memorial. These expenditures supported 210 jobs and $19.1 million in total economic output in local economies surrounding the park.

Paul R. Ross

Senior Public Affairs Specialist

Office of Communications

U.S. Department of the Interior

Office: (202) 501-4633 | Cell: (202) 507-1689

From: Laura Rigas
To: Ross, Paul
Cc: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: NPS Statement/Release on two Florida based superintendents
Date: Thursday, May 25, 2017 8:35:17 AM

Hi Paul --
This these are cleared, subject to any edits Heather may have.
Thanks so much!
L

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On May 24, 2017, at 2:15 PM, Ross, Paul <paul_ross@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Laura-

Circling back here to see if this has received clearance yet? Thanks!

Paul R. Ross
Senior Public Affairs Specialist
Office of Communications
U.S. Department of the Interior
Office: (202) 501-4633 | Cell: (202) 507-1689

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 4:35 PM, Ross, Paul <paul_ross@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Laura-

NPS has a release regarding a new superintendent at De Soto National Memorial. They also have an if-asked statement regarding the superintendent of Canaveral National Seashore returning to work after a sexual harassment investigation that led to the dismissal of the park's chief ranger. Both are below for your review.

The superintendent at Canaveral goes back to work sometime this week. De Soto want to put out their announcement tomorrow but NPS is asking them to wait until Wednesday.

-Paul

IF-ASKED

"The National Park Service has taken final personnel action in the investigation into sexual harassment at Canaveral National Seashore. NPS maintains a zero-tolerance policy with regard to discrimination and harassment and remains firmly committed to holding employees accountable for misconduct. We are working closely with Canaveral National Seashore staff to help them heal and move forward.”

For background, not for direct attribution:

As of May 12, Edwin Correa is no longer employed with the National Park Service. The National Park Service made a final decision concerning his employment with the agency and Mr. Correa has appeal rights to challenge the agency’s decision.

Myrna Palfrey is concluding her temporary assignment with the regional partnerships office and will return as park superintendent, effective May 28. The superintendent took appropriate action to report charges of sexual harassment at the park.

Nathan Souder Selected as New Superintendent of De Soto National Memorial

ATLANTA – Today, National Park Service (NPS) Southeast Regional Director Stan Austin announced that Nathan Souder has been selected as the new superintendent of De Soto National Memorial in Bradenton, FL. Souder has been the acting superintendent there since March and officially begins his new role May 28, 2017.

“Nathan’s deep commitment to public service and civic engagement makes him a great fit for the job,” Austin said. “He brings with him broad experience and sound management skills. Nathan has dynamic employees he will lead in advancing the mission of De Soto National Memorial.”

Souder began his NPS career as a seasonal backcountry ranger in 2001 at Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado. His 16-year tenure with the agency has included assignments with increasing responsibility in legislative and congressional affairs, public affairs, budget, construction project management, and volunteer and youth programs. For the last two years, Nathan served as one of ten Urban Fellows across the country charged with increasing relevancy and collaboration for the National Park Service. As the Urban Fellow for Jacksonville, Florida, he split his time between working at Timucuan Ecological and Historic Preserve and downtown Jacksonville in City Hall.

“I am truly honored to be trusted with the responsibility of caring for this amazing memorial,” Souder said. “The park’s staff, volunteers and partners form an outstanding team that I am excited to continue working with. Together we will continue to engage with the local community and introduce new audiences to this hidden treasure.”

Souder holds a Bachelor of Science degree in public management from Indiana University’s School of Public and Environmental Affairs. He and his wife Sarah have two children, Elias, 6, and Ethan, 4, who are already fond of Bradenton’s people, beaches and clear water.

De Soto National Memorial commemorates the landing of Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto in Florida in 1539 and the first extensive organized exploration by Europeans of what is now the southern United States. The memorial, established in 1948, received nearly 233,000 visitors in 2016 who spent an estimated \$13.6 million in local gateway regions while visiting De Soto National Memorial. These expenditures supported 210 jobs and $19.1 million in total economic output in local economies surrounding the park.

Paul R. Ross
Senior Public Affairs Specialist
Office of Communications
U.S. Department of the Interior
Office: (202) 501-4633 | Cell: (202) 507-1689

From: Nachmany, Eli
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: op ed
Date: Thursday, July 13, 2017 3:23:58 PM
Attachments: Made in America.docx

Attached as Word Doc

On Thu, Jul 13, 2017 at 3:14 PM, Nachmany, Eli <eli_nachmany@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Made in America: Promoting the All-American Outdoor Experience

This week, President Trump kicked off “Made in America Week.” At the Department of the Interior, we are taking this opportunity to promote and strengthen America’s tradition of outdoor recreation on public lands, which is made possible, in large part, thanks to private foundations, American businesses, and the thousands of public-private partnerships across our public lands.

We already have thousands of partners across the country who fund and assist with visitor services, infrastructure, and even land acquisition.

Boston Harbor National Recreation Area is a unique example of a public-private partnership where federal, state, and private organizations work together to manage the land; provide boats between islands; restore historic lighthouses and forts; provide deliver educational tours; and carry out janitorial and maintenance tasks. All of this could not be possible without the joint effort.

Private partners also help maintain our buildings and aging infrastructure.

For example, earlier this year, President Trump donated his first quarter salary of about $78,000 to the National Park Service to restore historic battlefields. Private foundations like the Civil War Trust, National Park Foundation, and Save Historic Antietam all chipped in, and with matching donations we were able to fund a $263,000 project to restore a historic structure and nearly mile-long fence at the historic Antietam National Battlefield in Maryland.

Some of our most-iconic, all-American outdoor experiences like riding the historic Ford “Red Jammer” buses in Glacier National Park, staying overnight in the El Tovar lodge at the Grand Canyon, or whale watching in Alaska’s Glacier Bay National Park would not be possible without public-private partnerships.

To highlight and expand on Made in America partnerships, this week Interior is hosting a roundtable with outdoor recreation industry leaders and land managers to brainstorm innovative ideas for how we can partner together to build upon the All-American Outdoor Experience on public lands. A couple of ideas I’ve already heard are installing energy-efficient cabins in a national monument, and bringing mobile youth fishing centers to urban areas across the country.

The Department is focused on identifying and expanding the best existing services and bringing in new services to parks and recreation areas.

For example, Wi-Fi, internal transportation, campgrounds, boat ramps, concessions, and even restrooms are not available on many public lands. Also, once somebody gets to a recreation area, services like boat, ATV and fishing pole rentals are often unavailable. This would be like going on a ski vacation and not being able to rent skis or have access to a lift up the mountain.

This leaves many families without practical and affordable options for camping, hiking, and recreating. Having three kids and two granddaughters myself, I can't imagine going on a family vacation without some of these basic services.

Now, expanding public-private-partnerships does not mean privatizing our parks as some have wrongly suggested. I am opposed to the sale or transfer of our public lands, and under my watch our public lands will remain public.

Having partners in parks also does not mean the shuttle bus will look like a race car covered in corporate stickers. In fact, some of our most iconic features are only possible thanks to partnerships.

More partnerships will allow parks and public lands to deliver greater services to more visitors, while allowing our rangers to focus on things like the health of the ecosystem, guided tours, educational services, and land management. Partners are also able to deliver many services to the American people at a lower cost than the government can.

With the right amount of ingenuity and originality, we can foster the All-American Outdoor Experience through our work at Interior. The Roosevelt Arch at Yellowstone National Park reads, "For the enjoyment of the people." Enjoying recreation on public lands is at the core of our shared American heritage.

The All-American Outdoor Experience is part of who we are as Americans, but it's also a big economic driver for communities across the country. As a whole, the outdoor recreation industry generates $887 billion in consumer spending and supports 7.6 million American jobs, according to industry analysts. In addition, the revenue the industry produces is a major boost to our economy.

Made in America is about products as much as it is about our shared heritage and values. It is about making memories by taking a kid fishing for the first time, or in my case, taking my wife hiking early in our relationship.

There's a reason 330 million people from across the country and the world visit our parks every year, and millions more flock to public lands coast to coast: It's because these spaces are uniquely American. and are the result of a century of public-private partnerships.

This "Made in America" Week, let's unite with common pride in our country, standing behind American businesses and engaging in American outdoor traditions that have stood the test of time.

On Thu, Jul 13, 2017 at 2:47 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Chuck Plunkett
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: Op-Ed from Secretary Zinke
Date: Friday, July 14, 2017 3:07:32 PM

This doesn't quite strike me as that exclusive Heather, so we'll pass on this one. But do keep us in mind with future offerings of course.

Another note: This one is almost 800 words. We have space in our print editions for no more than 700 words and 650 is better.

Here's hoping you have a great weekend! And again, thanks for thinking of The Denver Post.

Chuck Plunkett
Editor of the Editorial Pages
The Denver Post
303.954.1333 o
303.810.6129 c

On Fri, Jul 14, 2017 at 12:36 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Chuck, below is the op-ed from the Secretary. Here's his headshot.

Would Monday/Tuesday be a realistic target?

Thanks!

Made in America: Promoting the All-American Outdoor Experience
By Secretary Ryan Zinke

This week, President Trump kicked off “Made in America Week.” At the Department of the Interior, we are taking this opportunity to promote and strengthen America’s tradition of outdoor recreation on public lands. The all-American outdoor experience was the idea of visionaries like President Theodore Roosevelt, and has been carried on by the federal government and Congress for years. It could not have been possible without help from philanthropic foundations, American businesses, and thousands of public-private partnerships across our public lands.

We already have thousands of partners across the country who fund and assist with visitor services, infrastructure, and even land acquisition for increased public access. The Far View Lodge at Mesa Verde is one such project that benefits from partnering with private business.

In my recent visit to Boston Harbor National Recreation Area, I learned how it is a unique example of a public-private-public partnership where federal, state, and private organizations work together to manage the land, provide boat transportation between islands, restore historic lighthouses and forts, lead educational tours, and complete janitorial and maintenance tasks. All of this could not be possible without the joint effort.

Private individuals and philanthropic organizations also help maintain our public lands.

For example, earlier this year, President Trump donated his first quarter salary of about $78,000 to the National Park Service to restore historic battlefields. Private foundations like the Civil War Trust, National Park Foundation, and Save Historic Antietam all chipped in, and with matching donations we were able to fund a $263,000 project to restore a historic structure and nearly mile-long fence at Antietam National Battlefield in Maryland.

Some of our most-iconic, all-American outdoor experiences, like riding a historic Ford “Red Jammer” bus in Glacier National Park, staying overnight in the El Tovar lodge at the Grand Canyon, or whale watching in Alaska’s Glacier Bay National Park, would not be possible without the valued work of American businesses and workers.

To highlight and expand on Made in America partnerships and products, this week Interior is hosting a roundtable with outdoor recreation industry leaders to brainstorm innovative ideas for how we can work together to build upon the outdoor experience on public lands. Some ideas I’ve already heard are for outdoor recreation outfitters to make investments in our public lands for things like energy-efficient cabins and fishing access points.

The Department is focused on identifying and expanding the best existing services, and bringing in new services to parks and recreation areas to preserve and enhance the American outdoor experience.

For example, Wi-Fi access, internal transportation, campgrounds, boat ramps, concessions, and even restrooms are not available on many public lands. Also, once somebody gets to a recreation area, common services like boat, ATV, and fishing pole rentals are often unavailable. Our goal is to expand services so public access to our public land is expanded for all Americans.

More partnerships does not mean privatizing our parks as some have wrongly suggested. I am opposed to the sale or transfer of our public lands, and under my watch our public lands will remain public, “For the benefit and enjoyment of the people,” as the famous Yellowstone Roosevelt Arch states.

Having partners on public lands also does not mean the tour bus will look like a race car covered in corporate stickers. Some of our most iconic features are only possible thanks to partnerships.

Expanding partnerships will allow parks and public lands to deliver better services to more visitors, while allowing our rangers to focus on things like the health of the ecosystem, guided tours, educational services, and land management.

The All-American Outdoor Experience is part of who we are as Americans, but it’s also a big economic driver for communities across the country. As a whole, the outdoor recreation industry generates $887 billion in consumer spending and supports 7.6 million American jobs, according to industry analysts. In addition, the revenue the industry produces is a major boost to our economy.

Made in America is as much about products as much as it is about the shared American experience created here. It is about making memories by taking a kid fishing for the first time, or in my case, taking my wife hiking early in our relationship.

There's a reason why 330 million people from across the country and around the world visit our parks every year, and why millions more flock to public lands from coast to coast: It's because these spaces are uniquely American.

This Made in America Week, let's unite with a common pride in our country, standing behind American businesses and engaging in American outdoor traditions that have stood the test of time.

Ryan Zinke is the 52nd Secretary of the Interior. He is a fifth-generation Montanan, former Congressman, an Eagle Scout, and retired Navy SEAL Commander.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Jul 14, 2017 at 2:05 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Understood, thanks, Chuck. Would you be able to do Monday or Tuesday?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Jul 14, 2017 at 12:49 PM, Chuck Plunkett <cplunkett@denverpost.com> wrote:

Thanks for reaching out Heather. We would always welcome submissions from Secretary Zinke of course. Some things to know:

Our production schedule for Sunday means that I would have to have had a heads up earlier in the week, like Wednesday. We put our Perspective section together and to bed on Thursdays. We also ask that op-eds we receive for possible publication be exclusive to us.

So this Sunday would be out, but please we could consider an exclusive op-ed submission for early in the week.

Thanks so much.

Chuck Plunkett

Editor of the Editorial Pages
The Denver Post
303.954.1333 o
303.810.6129 c

On Fri, Jul 14, 2017 at 10:37 AM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hi there Chuck - Heather Swift here from the Dept. of the Interior. I'm wondering if the Post is interested in a submission from Sec. Zinke for Sunday's paper.

Next week is "Made in America Week" in the Trump administration and the Secretary will highlight in the op-ed made in America partnerships in parks and public lands and touch on his priorities with expanding them.

Let me know if you're interested.

Thanks!
Heather
202-208-5338

ps - the gent who answers the phones is very polite.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Bowman, Liz
To: Heather Swift
Cc: Rigas, Laura
Subject: RE: Op-Eds on Red/Blue
Date: Monday, October 02, 2017 1:55:36 PM

Hi Heather and Lara – The email below was in response to questions you all were getting about Red/Blue, just so you had the background. I didn't think you guys were planning to make an announcement on this, it was just for background, in case there was a desire to schedule a call or meeting between the two principals on the issue. Thanks again – Liz

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, September 21, 2017 3:41 PM
To: Bowman, Liz <Bowman.Liz@epa.gov>
Cc: Rigas, Laura <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Op-Eds on Red/Blue

Awesome. Thanks Liz. For the next several weeks we are packed with hunting, fishing and conservation work so I don't think it immediately fits into our message calendar.

Sent from my iPad

On Sep 21, 2017, at 11:52 AM, Bowman, Liz <Bowman.Liz@epa.gov> wrote:

Hi Heather and Laura -- Below, please find some two op-eds that Administrator Pruitt refers to with regard to his inspiration on a Red Team/Blue Team exercise. The first is a piece that ran today from the CEO of the Heartland Institute praising the exercise. That follows the original two pieces that inspired the Administrator to start working on this exercise. If this is something that Secretary Zinke is interested in discussing, please let me know and we can set up a call/meeting between the two Cabinet members. Please let me know if you all have questions. Thank you – Liz, (b) (6)

September 21, 2017

The Hill: Red team-blue team exercise will expose the junk science that filled Obama's EPA

By: Op-Ed, Roger Bezdek and Joseph Bast, Heartland Institute

Former Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Christine Todd Whitman has leveled a number of error-riddled accusations against the current administrator, Scott Pruitt. Perhaps she is troubled by the fact that Pruitt's term in office will likely be marked by a landmark contribution to the scientific debate while her legacy was middling.

Whitman's main concern is that Pruitt will establish a "red team-blue team" exercise to examine whether the EPA has falsely claimed scientific certainty on unresolved questions in the debate over anthropogenic global warming (AGW). Such questions include whether human-produced carbon dioxide is the major driver of global warming and climate change, and if it is possible to accurately forecast future climate conditions and even weather events.

Whitman contends there is "broad consensus" and "no debate" on these matters, and that "the red-team idea is a waste of the government's time, energy and resources."

The first question to ask Whitman is, if the science is settled, the evidence overwhelming, and the answer is a slam-dunk, what is she afraid of? If she is right, the debate will last all of five minutes. She would seem to have nothing to lose.

We believe Whitman's real fear is that an objective, transparent, and rigorous red team-blue team exercise would reveal that the science behind current EPA climate policies was manipulated, biased toward alarmism, and is therefore not a reliable basis for public policy.

Claims about global warming coming from EPA, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), and international groups such as the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) are loaded with appeals to secret, hidden, or "missing" files and to pre-conceived conclusions, subject to overt political interference, and protected by a deep corruption of the peer review process. A red team-blue team exercise would expose all this dirty laundry.

How could an open and public debate result, as Whitman contends, in the public knowing "less about the science of climate change than before"? This is insulting to millions of people who are better trained to understand the science debate than she is.

The red team-blue team methodology was pioneered by the national security community to test assumptions and analyses, identify risks, and reduce — or at least understand — uncertainties. The process is considered a best practice in complex high-consequence situations such as intelligence assessments, spacecraft design, and major industrial operations. Would not Whitman agree that global warming is a complex high-consequence situation?

A red team-blue team exercise has staunch supporters outside the Trump administration. Earlier this year, Dr. Steven Koonin called for a more formal exercise to be overseen by an interagency group similar to the Obama-era and now disbanded Interagency Working Group on the Social Cost of Carbon. Others who have joined the call include Dr. William Happer at Princeton University, Dr. Judith Curry of the Georgia Institute of Technology, and Dr. Freeman Dyson at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton.

An international exercise has been underway since 2003, when Dr. S. Fred Singer, a distinguished atmospheric physicist, launched a Team B to critique an upcoming report from the United Nations' IPCC. That effort is ongoing and is called the Nongovernmental International Panel on Climate Change.

None of these distinguished scientists fits Whitman's demeaning reference to the "tiny minority of contrarians who publish very little and are funded by fossil fuel interests." Dr. Koonin, just to focus on one, served as Undersecretary of Energy for Science under President Obama, served a decade as provost at Caltech, and is founder and currently the Director of New York University's Center for Urban Science and Progress.

Whitman argues that a red team-blue team exercise would be a waste of government resources and "a slap in the face to fiscal responsibility and responsible governance." Frankly, it would be a well-deserved slap in the face of past EPA administrators, including her, and other federal agency leaders who shamefully allowed climate science to become politicized and unreliable.

It is fiscally irresponsible and irresponsible governance to spend trillions of dollars on uneconomical technologies, forcing consumers to buy products they do not want, and destroying entire industries on the basis of untested hypotheses and inaccurate forecasts.

A red team-blue team investigation of the truth about global warming is absolutely imperative. We know why Whitman opposes it. For the rest of us, this exercise is long over-due.

Joseph L. Bast is CEO of The Heartland Institute, a conservative nonprofit group based in Illinois, and Roger H. Bezdek, Ph.D., is president of Management Information Services, Inc, an economic research and consulting firm.

April 28, 2017

New York Times: Climate of Complete Certainty

By: Bret Stephens, Op-Ed Columnist

This is Bret Stephens's first column.

When someone is honestly 55 percent right, that's very good and there's no use wrangling. And if someone is 60 percent right, it's wonderful, it's great luck, and let him thank God.

But what's to be said about 75 percent right? Wise people say this is suspicious. Well, and what about 100 percent right? Whoever says he's 100 percent right is a fanatic, a thug, and the worst kind of rascal.

— An old Jew of Galicia

In the final stretch of last year's presidential race, Hillary Clinton and her team thought they were, if not 100 percent right, then very close.

Right on the merits. Confident in their methods. Sure of their chances. When Bill Clinton suggested to his wife's advisers that, considering Brexit, they might be underestimating the strength of the populist tide, the campaign manager, Robby Mook, had a bulletproof answer: The data run counter to your anecdotes.

That detail comes from "Shattered," Jonathan Allen and Amie Parnes's compulsively readable account of Clinton's 2016 train wreck. Mook belonged to a new breed of political technologists with little time for retail campaigning and limitless faith in the power of models and algorithms to minimize uncertainty and all but predict the future.

"Mook and his 'Moneyball' approach to politics rankled the old order of political operatives and consultants because it made some of their work obsolete," Allen and Parnes write about the campaign's final days. "The memo that one Hillary adviser had sent months earlier warning that they should add three or four points to Trump's poll position was a distant memory."

There's a lesson here. We live in a world in which data convey authority. But authority has a way of descending to certitude, and certitude begets hubris. From Robert McNamara to Lehman Brothers to Stronger Together, cautionary tales abound.

We ought to know this by now, but we don't. Instead, we respond to the inherent uncertainties of data by adding more data without revisiting our assumptions, creating an impression of certainty that can be lulling, misleading and often dangerous. Ask Clinton.

With me so far? Good. Let's turn to climate change.

Last October, the Pew Research Center published a survey on the politics of climate change. Among its findings: Just 36 percent of Americans care "a great deal" about the subject. Despite 30 years of efforts by scientists, politicians and activists to raise the alarm, nearly two-thirds of Americans are either indifferent to or only somewhat bothered by the prospect of planetary calamity.

Why? The science is settled. The threat is clear. Isn't this one instance, at least, where 100 percent of the truth resides on one side of the argument?

Well, not entirely. As Andrew Revkin wrote last year about his storied career as an environmental reporter at The Times, "I saw a widening gap between what scientists had been learning about global warming and what advocates were claiming as they pushed ever harder to pass climate legislation." The science was generally scrupulous. The boosters who claimed its authority weren't.

Anyone who has read the 2014 report of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change knows that, while the modest (0.85 degrees Celsius, or about 1.5 degrees Fahrenheit) warming of the earth since 1880 is indisputable, as is the human influence on that warming, much else that passes as accepted fact is really a matter of probabilities. That's especially true of the sophisticated but fallible models and simulations by which scientists attempt to peer into the climate future. To say this isn't to deny science. It's to acknowledge it honestly.

By now I can almost hear the heads exploding. They shouldn't, because there's another lesson here — this one for anyone who wants to advance the cause of good climate policy. As Revkin wisely noted, hyperbole about climate "not only didn't fit the science at the time but could even be counterproductive if the hope was to engage a distracted public."

Let me put it another way. Claiming total certainty about the science traduces the spirit of science and creates openings for doubt whenever a climate claim proves wrong. Demanding abrupt and expensive changes in public policy raises fair questions about ideological intentions. Censoriously asserting one's moral superiority and treating skeptics as imbeciles and deplorables wins few converts.

None of this is to deny climate change or the possible severity of its consequences. But ordinary citizens also have a right to be skeptical of an overweening scientism. They know — as all environmentalists should — that history is littered with the human wreckage of scientific errors married to political power.

I've taken the epigraph for this column from the Polish poet Czeslaw Milosz, who knew something about the evils of certitude. Perhaps if there had been less certitude and more second-guessing in Clinton's campaign, she'd be president.

Perhaps if there were less certitude about our climate future, more Americans would be interested in having a reasoned conversation about it.

April 20, 2017

Wall Street Journal

A 'Red Team' Exercise Would Strengthen Climate Science: Put the 'consensus' to a test, and improve public understanding, through an open, adversarial process.

By: Steven Koonin, Energy Department Undersecretary, Opinion Columnist

Tomorrow's March for Science will draw many thousands in support of evidence-based policy making and against the politicization of science. A concrete step toward those worthy goals would be to convene a "Red Team/Blue Team" process for climate science, one of the most important and contentious issues of our age.

The national-security community pioneered the "Red Team" methodology to test assumptions and analyses, identify risks, and reduce—or at least understand—uncertainties. The process is now considered a best practice in high-consequence situations such as intelligence assessments, spacecraft design and major industrial operations. It is very different and more rigorous than traditional peer review, which is usually confidential and always adjudicated, rather than public and moderated.

The public is largely unaware of the intense debates within climate science. At a recent national laboratory meeting, I observed more than 100 active government and university researchers challenge one another as they strove to separate human impacts from the climate's natural variability. At issue were not nuances but fundamental aspects of our understanding, such as the apparent—and unexpected—slowing of global sea-level rise over the past two decades.

Summaries of scientific assessments meant to inform decision makers, such as the United Nations' Summary for Policymakers, largely fail to capture this vibrant and developing science. Consensus statements necessarily conceal judgment calls and debates and so feed the "settled," "hoax" and "don't know" memes that plague the political dialogue around climate change. We scientists must better portray not only our certainties but also our uncertainties, and even things we may never know. Not doing so is an advisory malpractice that usurps society's right to make choices fully informed by risk, economics and values. Moving from oracular consensus statements to an open adversarial process would shine much-needed light on the scientific debates.

Given the importance of climate projections to policy, it is remarkable that they have not been subject to a Red Team exercise. Here's how it might work:

The focus would be a published scientific report meant to inform policy such as the U.N.'s Summary for Policymakers or the U.S. Government's National Climate Assessment. A Red Team of scientists would write a critique of that document and a Blue Team would rebut that critique. Further exchanges of documents would ensue to the point of diminishing returns. A commission would coordinate and moderate the process and then hold hearings to highlight points of agreement and disagreement, as well as steps that might resolve the latter. The process would unfold in full public view: the initial report, the exchanged documents and the hearings.

A Red/Blue exercise would have many benefits. It would produce a traceable public record that would allow the public and decision makers a better understanding of certainties and uncertainties. It would more firmly establish points of agreement and identify urgent research needs. Most important, it would put science front and center in policy discussions, while publicly demonstrating scientific reasoning and argument. The inherent tension of a professional adversarial process would enhance public interest, offering many opportunities to show laymen how science actually works. (In 2014 I conducted a workshop along these lines for the American Physical Society.)

Congress or the executive branch should convene a climate science Red/Blue exercise as a step toward resolving, or at least illuminating, differing perceptions of climate science. While the Red and Blue Teams should be knowledgeable and avowedly opinionated scientists, the commission should have a balanced membership of prominent individuals with technical credentials, led by co-chairmen who are forceful, knowledgeable and independent of the climate-science community. The Rogers Commission for the Challenger disaster in 1986, the Energy Department's Huizenga/Ramsey Review of Cold Fusion in 1989, and the National Bioethics Advisory Commission of the late 1990s are models for the kind of fact-based rigor and transparency needed.

The outcome of a Red/Blue exercise for climate science is not preordained, which makes such a process all the more valuable. It could reveal the current consensus as weaker than claimed. Alternatively, the consensus could emerge strengthened if Red Team criticisms were countered effectively. But whatever the outcome, we scientists would have better fulfilled our responsibilities to society, and climate policy discussions would be better informed. For those reasons, all who march to advocate policy making based upon transparent apolitical science should support a climate science Red Team exercise.

Mr. Koonin, a theoretical physicist, is director of the Center for Urban Science and Progress at New York University. He served as undersecretary of energy for science during President Obama's first term.

Appeared in the April 21, 2017, print edition.

Liz Bowman
U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)
Office: 202-564-3293

From: Newell, Russell
To: Barnum, Jeremy
Cc: Laura Rigas; Heather Swift; Paul Ross; April Slayton
Subject: Re: PEER News Release on SOI at Channel Islands
Date: Wednesday, October 04, 2017 5:31:02 PM

thanks Jeremy - yes, please send them our way.

Russell Newell
Deputy Director of Communications
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 208-6232
@Interior

On Wed, Oct 4, 2017 at 5:28 PM, Barnum, Jeremy <jeremy_barnum@nps.gov> wrote:

DOI Colleagues,

We were just alerted to the below news release related to a PEER FOIA request from earlier this year related to the Secretary and Channel Islands.

The park is planning to refer queries to Interior Press, unless you would like for us to do otherwise.

Thanks,

Jeremy

<https://www.peer.org/news/news-releases/zinke-commandeered-boat-for-channel-islands-jaunt.html>.

For Immediate Release: Oct 04, 2017
Contact: Kirsten Stade (202) 265-7337

ZINKE COMMANDEERED BOAT FOR CHANNEL ISLANDS JAUNT
Diverted to Pick Up Wife, Aunt, and Guests He Classified as “Technical Experts”

Posted on Oct 04, 2017 | Tags: California, DOI, NPS

Washington, DC — Exorbitant travel by the Interior Secretary is not limited to charter planes but includes seagoing vessels, according to documents released today by Public Employees for Environmental Responsibility (PEER). In mid-April, Ryan Zinke diverted a National Park Service (NPS) boat to pick him and family members up for a three-hour island tour featuring a Junior Ranger swearing-in ceremony.

On April 18th, the NPS boat Ocean Ranger left its Ventura, California port to travel to Santa Barbara Harbor to pick up Zinke, his wife, and aunt to take them and other members of his party to Santa Rosa Island, part of the Channel Islands National Park, and back that same day.

The party spent more time at sea than on the island, with a three-hour itinerary that consisted largely of photo ops, a tour, lunch, and Zinke swearing in middle school students as Junior Rangers. Notably –

Use of the government ship cost taxpayers around $4,000 dollars, including fuel and crew overtime, an estimate that does not include significant time by several NPS staff people; Zinke also brought along two local fishermen whom he classified as “technical experts” though on what issue is unclear. As such, they traveled free; and

To pay for his wife and aunt, NPS presented Zinke with a bill for $142, which by mid-June increased to $152 in late fees. The bill appears to have been paid by late June.

“There is nothing deeply wrong with this ‘grip-and-grin’ tour but it is galling when the Secretary is telling everyone else to tighten their belts,” stated PEER Executive Director Jeff Ruch who obtained the documents under the Freedom of Information Act after employees complained of the time and expense lost for no discernible purpose. “Taxpayers should not foot the bill for public officials acting as tourists.”

The records also describe Zinke expressing a desire to open a “working demonstration ranch” on Santa Rosa Island to “highlight the island’s ranching heritage,” quoting a note from the park superintendent. The Zinke tour group also included members of the Vail family which ran a cattle ranch on the island until 1998 and a commercial hunting operation there until 2011.

The Channel Islands are often called “the Galapagos Islands of North America” due to the unique and wide diversity of plants and animals found nowhere else on earth. In recent years, NPS has undertaken a major and costly effort to preserve and protect these native resources, including removal of nonnative plants and animals, recovery of island foxes, and reestablishment of bald eagles.

“Cattle and imported game animals are not the ‘heritage’ of Santa Rosa but an aberrant moment in its history,” added Ruch, noting a recent Zinke directive to maximize hunting opportunities even on national park lands. “Our major concern is that Ryan Zinke wants to turn this ecological jewel back into a game preserve.”

###

Look at records about Ocean Ranger expenses

See Zinke’s technical experts

Look at Zinke bill of collection

View the Zinke itinerary

Read Zinke “demonstration ranch” idea

Revisit Channel Islands ecological restoration

<https://www.peer.org/news/news-releases/zinke-commandeered-boat-for-channel-islands-jaunt.html>

From: Myers, Gregory
To: Heather Swift
Subject: Re: Pics from Last Night
Date: Friday, December 15, 2017 11:26:27 AM

I didn't see them on the wall, outside you office.

On Fri, Dec 15, 2017 at 10:15 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Check out the wall outside my office.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Dec 15, 2017, at 9:55 AM, Myers, Gregory <gregory_myers@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hello Heather. Did you get the chance to develop the pictures of me and wife, last night? If so, when can I drop by and get them? Thank you.

--

Gregory Myers

Immediate Office of the Secretary

Department of the Interior

(202) 208-5024 Direct Line

gregory_myers@ios.doi.gov

--

Gregory Myers

Immediate Office of the Secretary

Department of the Interior

(202) 208-5024 Direct Line

(202) 208-6956 Fax

gregory_myers@ios.doi.gov

From: Swift, Heather
To: Myers, Gregory
Subject: Re: Pics from Last Night
Date: Friday, December 15, 2017 1:42:32 PM

I think somebody accidentally took your photo. Here is the digital copy. <https://www.flickr.com/photos/157076256@N07/25208020398/in/album-72157691046262845/>

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Dec 15, 2017 at 9:55 AM, Myers, Gregory <gregory_myers@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hello Heather. Did you get the chance to develop the pictures of me and wife, last night? If so, when can I drop by and get them? Thank you.

--

Gregory Myers

Immediate Office of the Secretary

Department of the Interior

(202) 208-5024 Direct Line

gregory_myers@ios.doi.gov

From: Swift, Heather
To: Rigas, Laura
Subject: Re: POLITICO Playbook, presented by BP: ABOUT that tax bill delay -- POLITICO/MORNING CONSULT poll: voters like tax reform, but they're cool to corporate cut -- TRUMP says he'll tighten vetting after NYC attack -- BETSY DEVOS profile -- B'DAY: David Bo..
Date: Wednesday, November 01, 2017 9:13:58 AM

I already spoke to Lippman

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Nov 1, 2017 at 9:05 AM, Rigas, Laura <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
ok. They should have put him in the list below at minimum.

*Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior*

On Wed, Nov 1, 2017 at 9:02 AM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
he's in power briefing apparently.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Nov 1, 2017 at 8:49 AM, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Did I miss the boss?

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

Begin forwarded message:

From: Anna Palmer Jake Sherman Daniel Lippman
<politicoplaybook@politico.com>
Date: November 1, 2017 at 6:35:25 AM EDT
To: <Laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>

Subject: POLITICO Playbook, presented by BP: ABOUT that tax bill delay -- POLITICO/MORNING CONSULT poll: voters like tax reform, but they're cool to corporate cut -- TRUMP says he'll tighten vetting after NYC attack -- BETSY DEVOS profile -- B'DAY: David Bossie

Reply-To: POLITICO subscriptions <reply-fe8913717260017a72-630318_HTML-795262248-1376319-0@politicoemail.com>

View online version | Add politicoplaybook@politico.com to your address book.

Today's POLITICO Playbook presented by BP

By JAKE SHERMAN (sherman@politico.com; @JakeSherman), ANNA PALMER (anna@politico.com; @apalmerdc) and DANIEL LIPPMAN (daniel@politico.com; @dlippman)

Listen to today's Audio Briefing | Subscribe on Apple Podcasts | Visit the online home of Playbook

DRIVING THE DAY

Happy Wednesday morning, and welcome to November.

TAX ROLLOUT: TOP RATE STAYS AT 39.6, ROLLOUT DELAYED -- WSJ'S RICH RUBIN, SIOBHAN HUGHES and KRISTINA PETERSON: "The House Republican tax plan will preserve a top individual tax rate of 39.6%, according to people familiar with the matter, though party leaders are delaying its release by a day to iron out unresolved issues.

"The plan for the top rate marks a retreat for Republicans on a question that has spurred intense debate in Washington: How will a tax overhaul treat the most affluent Americans? Republicans last year had been discussing a top rate of 33%, and then moved to 35% earlier this year. But they left themselves open to the possibility of keeping it unchanged or lowering it by some smaller amount." <http://on.wsj.com/2z3p02P>

-- RACHAEL BADE, BERNIE BECKER, BRIAN FALER and AARON LORENZO: "Ryan told conservative group leaders Thursday that the [top] income threshold for the top rate would likely be higher than it currently is, likely between $750,000 and $1 million. He said the estate tax would likewise be repealed but may have to be phased out to save money in the short term.

"But it's the unresolved issues that caused Ways and Means members the most heartburn this week -- and ultimately led to the delay. Those include: how to win over GOP lawmakers from high-tax states that are balking over curbing the state and local tax deduction, which their constituents rely on. There are also question about how to ensure that wealthy individuals don't take advantage of the lower 25 percent small business or 'pass-through' rate. Many of the unresolved items are hot-button issues, including what to do with 401(k) retirement plans." <http://politi.co/2zn8fAl>

-- MORE DETAILS FROM NANCY COOK: "Ryan was fuzzy with them on where the one-time repatriation tax would fall. The estate tax is definitely going away but might have to be phased out. It would definitely be gone by year three. ...

"The delay on the timing of the House GOP tax bill also forced the White House to re-jigger its roll-out plans. President Trump had tentatively planned to host some Republican members of the House Ways & Means Committee to the Oval Office for a photo-op and statements, following the unveil of the House bill, according to a congressional source familiar with the planning -- but that too got disrupted."

ABOUT THE DELAY ... The idea that this bill rollout would slip to Thursday truly isn't a surprise to people in Washington. We put in Playbook Tuesday that President Trump was going to do a tax event "if House Republicans are able to get their tax bill out."

TWO WAYS TO THINK ABOUT THIS -- ... Republicans want you to think this delay isn't a big deal. And, in many ways, it's not. Massive bills -- and this one will be 1,000-plus pages -- are hard and they take time. That's why it was nonsensical that the White House wanted this done before the end of the year. (Although clearing this before year end would allow another run at health care in early 2018.) And, from a practical standpoint, this isn't a big setback. The rollout is delayed by one single day.

-- BUT, BUT, BUT ... Tax reform isn't a walk in the park. This is only going to get harder. Remember: we haven't seen a single detail yet. Not one. The delay helps highlight that this is a long, arduous and tricky process.

REMINDER -- Up on Capitol Hill and among Republican political operatives, the success of tax reform is seen as existential, and binary. Finish it and get it into law, and keep the House. Fail, and the House could be gone. IT'S SO IMPORTANT -- AMERICAN ACTION NETWORK, the top House GOP outside group, is likely to spend between $20 million and $25 million to support the package. They've already spent close to $15 million.

BEHIND THE SCENES -- TRUMP sat down with nearly a dozen trade association heads to talk about tax reform Tuesday. He asked how many of them had been working on tax policy when Congress and President Ronald Reagan rewrote the code in the 1980s. THE ANSWER: Just 2. TOM DONOHUE of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and DIRK VAN DONGEN of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors. SPOTTED: Robert Cresanti of IFA, Matt Shay of NRF, Karen Kerrigan of the Small Business & Entrepreneurship Council and Rob Nichols of ABA, among others. MISSING: JERRY HOWARD, head of the National Association of Homebuilders, who has come out against the tax package.

YOU'RE INVITED! DEPT. OF GOOD TIMING -- JAKE and ANNA will sit down FRIDAY with HOUSE WAYS AND MEANS CHAIRMAN KEVIN BRADY -- Kevin Brady is the House's top tax writer, putting him in the middle of Republicans' biggest and most important legislative push. He will explain the tax bill to us -- and to Washington -- in a Playbook Interview. LOCATION: The Newseum (555 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW). TIME: Doors open at 11:30 a.m., and the event starts at noon. RSVP <http://bit.ly/politicobradyc> EMAIL US if you have questions for the chairman. Our coordinates are at the top of the newsletter.

-- @ChadPergram at 10:43 p.m.: "McConnell, Ryan, WH Cos Kelly, Nat'l Sec Adviser McMaster & DefSec Mattis all had dinner tonight".

 A message from BP: We operate the largest renewables business of any major oil and gas company in the world. Learn more in our Economic Impact Report. *****

NEW POLITICO/MORNING CONSULT POLL -- "Poll: Voters like tax reform overall but cool to corporate cut," by Toby Eckert: "Overall public support for the tax plan outlined in September by President Donald Trump and GOP Hill leaders remains steady, but opposition to a corporate rate cut has edged up, according to a new POLITICO/Morning Consult poll. Forty-eight percent of registered voters who responded to the poll said they "strongly support" or "somewhat support" the overall proposal based on what they knew about it, compared to 37 percent who opposed it. Those numbers are unchanged from a similar poll earlier this month, conducted shortly after the White House and congressional Republicans released their tax overhaul framework.

"The proposal's popularity was driven by overwhelming Republican support, with 83 percent of GOP voters supporting it, compared to 24 percent of Democrats and 39 percent of independents. But a key part of the plan, lowering the corporate tax rate to 20 percent from 35 percent, remains one of its least popular aspects. A plurality of respondents - 41 percent - said it shouldn't be part of tax legislation, compared to 39 percent who said it should." <http://politi.co/2xIsHXV>

THE LATEST ON THE TERROR ATTACK IN NYC -- "NYC truck attack: Investigators scour driver's background," by AP's Colleen Long and Matt Sedensky: "Investigators worked through the night to determine what led a truck driver to plow down people on a riverfront bike path near the World Trade Center, brandishing air guns and yelling 'God is great' in Arabic as his deadly route of terror ended with a crash, authorities said.

"Eight people were killed and 11 seriously injured in a Halloween afternoon attack that the mayor called 'a particularly cowardly act of terror.' The driver - identified by officials as an immigrant from Uzbekistan - was in critical condition but expected to survive after a police officer shot him in the abdomen." <http://bit.ly/2ikTIdz>

-- NYT: "The rampage ended when the motorist - whom the police identified as Sayfullo Saipov, 29 - smashed into a school bus, jumped out of his truck and ran up and down the highway waving a pellet gun and paintball gun and shouting 'Allahu akbar,' Arabic for 'God is great,' before he was shot in the abdomen by the officer. He remained in critical condition on Tuesday evening." <http://nyti.ms/2huDEq2>

-- "A Mangled School Bus, Bodies Everywhere; 'It Was Surreal'," by NYT's Jose DelReal and Corey Kilgannon: <http://nyti.ms/2zaaUfJ>

--"Terror suspect was a 'very friendly' Uzbek immigrant who drove for Uber," by N.Y. Post's Gabrielle Fonrouge: "Kobiljon Matkarov, 37, met suspected terrorist Sayfullo Saipov in Florida about five years ago shortly after Saipov came from Uzbekistan-the two connected over their mutual heritage. 'He is very good guy, he is very friendly... he is like little brother... he look at me like big brother,' Matkarov said by phone Tuesday from his home in Miamisburg, Ohio. Matkarov said he'd been working for Uber and living in New Jersey as recently as this summer."

<http://nyp.st/2iQXrU4>

--N.Y. POST cover, "TERROR RETURNS TO NYC"

<http://nyp.st/2gZUCQ0> ... N.Y. Daily News cover, "BIKE PATH BLOODBATH" <http://nydn.us/2iQ4MTT>

-- TRUMP'S REACTION -- @realDonaldTrump at 5:30 p.m.: "In NYC, looks like another attack by a very sick and deranged person. Law enforcement is following this closely. NOT IN THE U.S.A.!" ... at 6:31 p.m.: "We must not allow ISIS to return, or enter, our country after defeating them in the Middle East and elsewhere. Enough!" ... at 6:57 p.m.: "My thoughts, condolences and prayers to the victims and families of the New York City terrorist attack. God and your country are with you!" ... at 9:26 p.m.: "I have just ordered Homeland Security to step up our already Extreme Vetting Program. Being politically correct is fine, but not for this!"

 A message from BP: From coast to coast, we spent $16 billion with local businesses last year. Take 30 seconds to see how we're supporting jobs across the U.S. *****

AP'S ZEKE MILLER: "The real John Kelly slowly revealing himself at White House": "In his three months on the job, John Kelly has been credited with bringing order to a chaotic West Wing, but don't call him a moderate. President Donald Trump's chief of staff was the enforcer of Trump's controversial immigration policies, has frequently criticized the president's enemies, and this week echoed his boss' defense of Confederate monuments. It all suggests that 'The Chief,' as he is known among aides, may have instilled order, but he is more ideologically aligned with Trump than many believed.

"Much has been made of the imagery of Kelly silently lurking on the sidelines of presidential addresses, seeming to cringe when Trump gets out of line. But it may be wishful thinking by Trump's critics to believe that he's tugging the president in another direction. White House officials and Kelly allies say he is not so much partisan as he is ideological, holding hawkish views on issues like immigration and national security."

<http://bit.ly/2zX8QoE>

WHERE TRUMP'S HEAD IS -- "Trump rejecting Bannon's hard line against Mueller -- for now," by CNN's Jeff Zeleny, Gloria Borger and Kevin Liptak: "President Donald Trump has decided -- for now -- to stick with his strategy of cooperation with special counsel Robert Mueller, a day after the Russia investigation ensnared three of his campaign aides. That's despite being urged to take a harder line by his former chief strategist, Steve Bannon. Bannon spoke with Trump following Monday's announcements from the special counsel, and advocated taking a harsher approach to Mueller ...

"While Trump encouraged Bannon to lead the public charge against Mueller, the President made clear to aides Tuesday that he's not adopting Bannon's advice. As the President stewes about the recent developments in the Russia investigation, he's receiving conflicting arguments about how to proceed. His current legal team and strategy has the support of White House chief of staff John Kelly and -- perhaps most importantly -- members of the President's family." <http://cnn.it/2yiQsKJ>

MUELLER WATCH -- "Papadopoulos Claimed Trump Campaign Approved Russia Meeting," by Bloomberg's Greg Farrell, David Voreacos and Henry Meyer: "Former Trump adviser George Papadopoulos made a significant claim in an email: Top Trump campaign officials agreed to a pre-election meeting with representatives of Russian President Vladimir Putin. The message, if true, would bolster claims that Trump's campaign attempted to collude with Russian interests. But it's unclear whether Papadopoulos, who pleaded guilty to lying to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was merely boasting when he sent the July 14, 2016, email to a Kremlin-linked contact. There's also no indication such a meeting ever occurred."

<https://bloom.bg/2z8v8GO>

-- "Andrew Weissmann, Mueller's Legal Pit Bull," by NYT's Matt Flegenheimer: "It is not clear if President Trump and his charges fear Mr. Weissmann as they gird for the slog ahead. It is quite clear, former colleagues and opponents say, that they should. 'I'm no fan of Donald Trump,' said Dan Cogdell, a Houston defense lawyer who tangled with Mr. Weissmann when Mr. Weissmann helped lead the federal task force investigating Enron in the early 2000s. 'Frankly, I can't think of two people who deserve each other more than Andrew Weissmann and Donald Trump.'" <http://nyti.ms/2gTk7Ps>

THE NEXT TURN OF THE SCREW -- "Mueller schedules interview with Hope Hicks," by Annie Karni and Josh Dawsey: "President Donald Trump's longtime aide and current communications director, Hope Hicks, is scheduled to speak with special counsel Robert Mueller's team in mid-November, following the president's trip to Asia, multiple people familiar with the schedule told POLITICO. Mueller's team is also expected to interview three or four other current White House officials as early as this week ...

"Mueller's team already has interviewed former aides, including Trump's first chief of staff Reince Priebus and former press secretary Sean Spicer. But the latest round of interviews appears to mark a new phase of the investigation - hauling in current administration officials for daylong depositions." <http://politi.co/2z2H9OA>

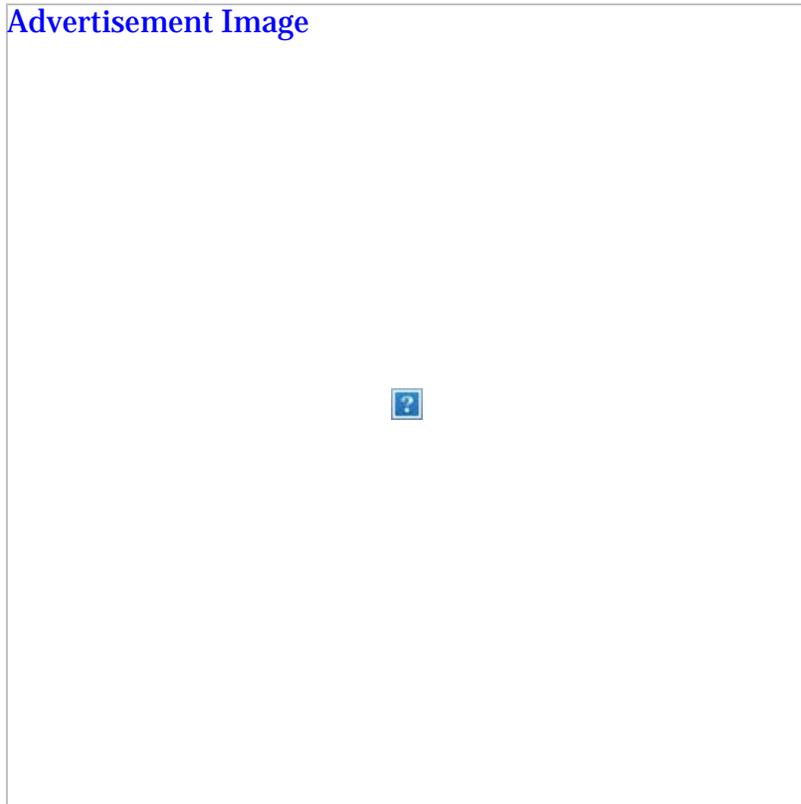

GETTING POTUS READY FOR ASIA -- "Trump advisers try to focus the president's attention on Asia trip," by Andrew Restuccia, Nahal Toosi, and Josh Dawsey: "President Donald Trump has been holed up in a series of rapid-fire briefing sessions on his upcoming 12-day, five-country tour through Asia - an effort the White House hopes will help avoid the kind of diplomatic snafus that have dogged his presidency. ... Trump's top advisers - including national security adviser H.R. McMaster, Secretary of State Rex Tillerson and U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer - have met with the president in recent days to go over details of the trip, including in an hourlong briefing Friday in the Oval Office, according to administration officials.

"Top aides have sought to keep the briefings short to avoid overloading the president with details but have scheduled dozens of them to plan public remarks and outline what he should say about North Korea on defense and China on trade."

<http://politi.co/2z87B92>

Advertisement Image

FOR YOUR RADAR -- "Exclusive: U.S. pursues direct diplomacy with North Korea despite Trump rejection," by Reuters' Arshad Mohammed and Matt Spetalnick: "The United States is quietly pursuing direct diplomacy with North Korea, a senior State Department official said on Tuesday, despite U.S. President Donald Trump's public assertion that such talks are a waste of time. Using the so-called 'New York channel,' Joseph Yun, U.S. negotiator with North Korea, has been in contact with diplomats at Pyongyang's United Nations mission, the official said, at a time when an exchange of bellicose insults between Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un has fueled fears of military conflict." <http://reut.rs/2lBgBOS>

TRUMP'S WEDNESDAY -- Trump is holding a cabinet meeting. This afternoon he will sign the National Veterans and Military Families Month Proclamation. He is having lunch with VP Mike Pence, Secretary of State Rex Tillerson and Defense Secretary James Mattis. He will also meet with RNC Chair Ronna Romney McDaniel. He will also sign a bill "Disapproving of the Consumer Financial Bureau's Arbitration Agreements Rule."

SPORTS BLINK -- TONIGHT: World Series, Game 7, Astros vs. Dodgers, 8:20 p.m. at Dodgers Park in Los Angeles

PLAYBOOK READS

PHOTO DU JOUR: Authorities stand near a damaged Home Depot truck after a motorist drove onto a bike path near the World Trade Center memorial, striking

and killing several people. Officials called the incident an act of terror. | Craig Ruttle/AP Photo

BETSY DEVOS PROFILE -- TIM ALBERTA in the Nov./Dec. issue of POLITICO Magazine, "The Education of Betsy DeVos: President Donald Trump's most controversial, ideological Cabinet pick is discovering the limits of her power": "It is strange, if a bit unsettling, to see U.S. Marshals constantly hovering near the U.S. secretary of education, a 59-year-old evangelical Christian grandmother whose hobbies are bike riding, yoga and visiting grade schools. But as Betsy DeVos approached Kansas City Academy on a sunny Friday morning in mid-September, it was clear why she wants them there.

"It was the final day of her 'Rethink School' tour, the familiar fly-around trip taken by a Cabinet secretary to capture some local news coverage and emphasize priorities-in DeVos' case, to highlight unique and innovative learning environments across the country. But at this particular stop, tension filled the air. Several hundred protesters gathered outside-vastly outnumbering the 76 students, grades 6 through 12, who attend the school-while a procession of speakers denounced DeVos as a destroyer of public education and an enabler of campus rape."

<http://politi.co/2h0r0lx>

K STREET FILES -- "Podesta's downfall sends shock waves through K Street: The departure of the Democratic super-lobbyist, and indictment of Paul Manafort, has other firms working to make sure they're not next," by Theo Meyer:

<http://politi.co/2ijCXzp>

ROBERT DRAPER on the cover of the N.Y. Times Magazine, "A Post-Obama Democratic Party in Search of Itself: Barack Obama left office as one of the most popular departing presidents in American history. He also left behind a Democratic Party struggling to find an identity and a future without him - and to reconnect with voters in time for the 2018 elections": "Most if not all Democrats are more than happy to watch Bannon's kamikaze antics wreak havoc on the opposition. Still, some in the party rue the lack of pugnacity on their own side. 'There are two types of Democrats,' David Krone, Harry Reid's former chief of staff, told me one afternoon this summer in the Midtown Manhattan office where he now works as a consultant for an investment firm.

'There are killers, and there are whiners. Unfortunately, we have too many of the latter and not enough of the former.'

<http://nyti.ms/2ijwuUZ> ... The cover <http://politi.co/2ht2mqH>

THE HARASSMENT FILES -- "NPR's top editor placed on leave after accusations of sexual harassment," by WaPo's Paul Farhi: "NPR is investigating allegations by two women who said the head of its news department made unwanted physical contact with them while he was employed by another news organization nearly two decades ago. The women, both journalists at the time of the alleged incidents, made the accusations in recent weeks against Michael Oreskes, senior vice president of news and editorial director at the Washington-based public broadcasting organization. In response to the allegations, NPR said Tuesday that it has placed Oreskes on indefinite leave.

"In separate complaints, the women said Oreskes -- at the time, the Washington bureau chief of the New York Times - abruptly kissed them while they were speaking with him about working at the newspaper. Both of them told similar stories: After meeting Oreskes and discussing their job prospects, they said he unexpectedly kissed them on the lips and stuck his tongue in their mouths." <http://wapo.st/2hs1YJ6>

JOHN HEILEMANN SPEAKS OUT - "Mark Halperin's 'Game Change' Partner Says He Was Unaware," by NYT's Michael M. Grynbaum: "'I had never heard of, been exposed to or had any inkling of the notion that he had engaged in any behavior that could be described in even the broadest sense of being sexual harassment or sexual assault,' Mr. Heilemann said, in his first public remarks since the claims against Mr. Halperin surfaced. He added, 'I was flabbergasted and shocked.' ... It remains unclear what will become of Mr. Halperin's contributions to the scuttled third installment in the 'Game Change' series.

"The pair had conducted roughly 300 interviews for the book in recent months, Mr. Heilemann said. 'We've done reporting that touches on important things both for history and for the current national dialogue,' he said. ... 'Mark was my friend,' Mr. Heilemann said. 'I cared about him then, and I care about him now. It's also the case that Mark wasn't in the circle of my closest friends.' ... Showtime said that the network remained on good terms with Mr. Heilemann and that it was examining whether 'The Circus' will go on without Mr. Halperin."

<http://nyti.ms/2gPQaQ5>

MEDIAWATCH -- "I want to quit": Fox News employees say their network's Russia coverage was 'an embarrassment,'" by CNN's Oliver Darcy: "I'm watching now and screaming,' one Fox News personality said in a text message to CNN as the person watched their network's coverage. 'I want to quit.' 'It is another blow to journalists at Fox who come in every day wanting to cover the news in a fair and objective way,' one senior Fox News employee told CNN of their outlet's coverage, adding that there were 'many eye rolls' in the newsroom over how the news was covered. The person said, 'Fox feels like an extension of the Trump White House.'" <http://cnnmon.ie/2za3IjV>

-- MAJOR GARRETT is publishing a new book called "Mr. Trump's Wild Ride: The Thrills, Chills, Screams, and Occasional Blackouts of the First Year with America's 45th President," which is expected to come out in fall of 2018. The publisher is All Points Books, the political and current affairs imprint of St. Martin's Press.

PLAYBOOKERS

SPOTTED: Frank Luntz in the second row behind home plate at World Series Game 6 yesterday - (Rep. Kevin McCarthy tweeted a pic of Frank on TV) <http://bit.ly/2ijkMtK> ... at a bipartisan Senate "Halloween dog costume celebration" yesterday on the Hill, hosted by Sen. Thom Tillis (R-N.C.): Sens. Steve Daines (R-Mont.), Deb Fischer (R-Neb.) and Mike Rounds (R-S.D.) along with 100 dogs and at least 200 people - pic of Tillis and a dog

<http://politi.co/2z50g8c>

OUT AND ABOUT -- Among the trick or treaters at Robert and Elena Allbritton's house last night, which had a doughnut truck in the driveway (Mama's Doughnut Bites): Ivanka and her kids, Mark and Sally Ein, and CBS' Nancy Cordes - pics

<http://bit.ly/2h2pLCm> ... <http://bit.ly/2ijF7il> ...

<http://bit.ly/2zWoQY1> ... <http://bit.ly/2z1ROqf>

-- SPOTTED at the Adrienne Arsht Day of the Dead party last night at her Massachusetts Heights mansion: Sens. Chris Coons (D-Del.) and Catherine Cortez Masto (D-Nev.), Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross and Hilary Ross, Kellyanne Conway, Rep. Ed Royce (R-Calif.) and Marie Royce, Kevin Sullivan and Mary Jordan, Education Secretary Betsy DeVos (wearing full skeleton face paint) and Dick DeVos, Ret. Gen. Jim Jones and Diane Jones, Amb. Stuart Bernstein, Stuart and Gwen Holliday ...

... Mexican Amb. Geronimo Gutierrez, Amb. Capricia and Rob Marshall, Kathleen Biden, Boyden Gray, Brazilian Amb. Sergio Silva Do Amaral, Susan Blumenthal, Israeli Amb. Ron Dermer, Patrick Steel and Lee Satterfield, Monaco Amb. Maguy Doyle, Kathleen Stevens, Lucky Roosevelt, Jordanian Amb. Dina Kawar, Tom and Anne LeBlanc, Michelle Kosinski, Michael LaRosa, Katherine Bradley, Robert Pullen, and Paige Ennis.

TRANSITIONS -- WILL JOHNSON has joined DailyKos as senior vice president for advertising strategy. He will lead the creation of a new unit focused on digital advertising sales. He is an alum of Talking Points Memo, NGP VAN, Bully Pulpit Interactive and Change. ... Melika Willoughby starts today as comms director for Rep. Jim Jordan (R-Ohio). She is a Hillsdale alumna who served as communications director for Kansas Gov. Sam Brownback.

-- John Thornton and former Singapore Amb. to the U.S. Chan Heng Chee have been named new co-chairs of the Asia Society. Caroline Kennedy and Prince Turki Al Faisal Al Saud have been named to the board. The organization is starting a $135 million capital campaign.

BIRTHDAYS OF THE DAY: David Bossie, president of Citizens United and former Trump deputy campaign manager. How he's celebrating: "Enjoying dinner with my wife and four children at our favorite place GrillMarx, a small restaurant in Olney, Maryland." Read his Playbook Plus Q&A:

<http://politi.co/2lzIbvI> ... WaPo non fiction book critic Carlos Lozada. How he got his start in journalism: "I started off as an associate editor at Foreign Policy magazine, beginning in late 1999. I was working at the Federal Reserve but wanted to try something new, and I'll always be grateful to Moises Naim and James Gibney for hiring me. I had no business getting that job, but it sent me on my way." Q&A: <http://politi.co/2A4g2Qx>

BIRTHDAYS: Charles Koch is 82 ... Rep. Darrell Issa (R-Calif.) is 64 ... Katie (Walsh) Shields (hubby tip: Mike) ... Apple CEO Tim Cook is 57 ... Vanessa Morrone (hat tip: Sean Spicer) ... Lee Fang, investigative journalist at The Intercept ... Francesco Guerrera, head of EMEA at Dow Jones Media Group and publisher of Financial News ... Politico's Jason Shervinski and Cristina Brownell ... GPG's Alex Byers ... Brian Mahoney ... Rep. Bruce Poliquin (R-Maine) is 64 ... John Oxtoby, VP of strategy and corporate development at Ariel Investments and Obama alum (h/t Andrew Bates) ... Michael Byerly ... Ram Sivalingam ... Jamie Sterne, founder of hedge fund Skye Global Management ... Eric Liu ... Megan Wilson, lobbying reporter for The Hill (h/t Neil Grace) ... Les Novitsky ... Jay Villegas, bartender extraordinaire at Tosca (h/ts Maggie and Jon) ...

... Liz Dougherty, general counsel and corporate secretary at Business Roundtable ... Larry Flynt is 75. He's celebrating with friends and family (h/t Nadia Szold) ... Clare Steinberg, associate at Gibson, Dunn ... Tyler Hernandez ... Fergus M. Bordewich, historian and author of "The First Congress" (h/t Jean) ... Chloe Mullins Taylor of Hawk Partners and alum of Greenberg, Quinlan, Rosner ... Ali Ahmad ... Pearson Cummings, SVP for tech policy and public affairs at Edelman ... Peter Urban ... Jordan Mason ... Greg Werkheiser ... Bill Deere ... Peter Newell ... Leslie Pollner ... Gabe Cramer is 23 (h/t Jewish Insider) ... Doug Stevens ... Jordan

Mason ... John Stipicevic ... former Rep. John Spratt (D-S.C.) is 75 ... Anthony DeAngelo, media relations manager at APCO Worldwide ... Anthony Fragale ... Sue Mahsem ... Bo Harmon ... John Seeley ... Mitchell Wohlberg ... country singer Richard Samet "Kinky" Friedman is 73 ... CNN's Marshall Cohen ... Senate Chaplain Barry Black is 69 ... Siri Uotila (h/t Teresa Vilmain)

SUBSCRIBE to the Playbook family: POLITICO Playbook

<http://politi.co/2lQswbh> ... Playbook Power Briefing

<http://politi.co/2xuOiqh> ... New York Playbook

<http://politi.co/1ON8bqW> ... Florida Playbook

<http://politi.co/1OypFe9> ... New Jersey Playbook

<http://politi.co/1HLKltF> ... Massachusetts Playbook

<http://politi.co/1Nhtq5v> ... Illinois Playbook

<http://politi.co/1N7u5sb> ... California Playbook

<http://politi.co/2bLvcPl> ... London Playbook

<http://politi.co/2xfDPuK> ... Brussels Playbook

<http://politi.co/1FZeLcw> ... All our political and policy tipsheets <http://politi.co/1M75UbX>

View online

To change your alert settings, please go to <https://secure.politico.com/settings>

This email was sent to Laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd. Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

Please click here and follow the steps to unsubscribe.

From: Heather Swift
To: Laura Rigas
Cc: Douglas Domenech
Subject: Re: President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts
Date: Monday, June 26, 2017 7:22:38 PM

Happy dance

Sent from my iPhone

On Jun 26, 2017, at 7:14 PM, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Congrats!!!!!!!!!!!!

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Jun 26, 2017, at 4:07 PM, Douglas Domenech <douglas_domenech@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: White House Press Office <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>
Date: June 26, 2017 at 7:05:35 PM EDT
To: <douglas_domenech@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts
Reply-To: <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
June 26, 2017

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts

President Donald J. Trump today announced his intent to nominate the following individuals to key positions in his Administration:

Brenda Burman of Arizona to be Commissioner of Reclamation, Department of the Interior. Ms. Burman is currently Director of Water Strategy at the Salt River Project, which operates one of the original Reclamation projects approved in 1903. Ms. Burman has worked for nearly 20 years on western water matters including Tribal water settlements, Colorado River, and other river basin issues. Under the George W. Bush Administration, Ms. Burman served as Deputy Commissioner, the number two position at Reclamation, before becoming Deputy Assistant Secretary for Water and Science. Ms. Burman holds a J.D. from the University of Arizona and a B.A. from Kenyon College.

Peter B. Davidson of Virginia to be General Counsel, Department of Commerce. Mr. Davidson recently served as Senior Vice President for Congressional Relations at Verizon Communications, and prior to that, as General Counsel to the United States Trade Representative. He has also served as Vice President for Congressional Relations at USWEST and Qwest, General Counsel and Policy Director to the Majority Leader of the House of Representatives, Attorney-advisor in the Office of Legal Counsel of the Department of Justice, director of congressional and media relations at the United States Information Agency, staff to Representatives Dick Armey and Bill Frenzel, and law clerk on the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. Mr. Davidson has degrees from Carleton College and The University of Virginia School of Law, where he served as Notes Editor on the Law Review. He was raised in Minnesota and northern Wisconsin and currently resides in Virginia with his wife Kari, and they have three children: Madeleine, Sophie, and Björn.

Douglas W. Domenech of Virginia to be an Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Insular Affairs. Mr. Domenech currently serves as Senior Advisor to the Secretary of the Interior. Previously he was the Secretary of Natural Resources for the Commonwealth of Virginia, overseeing six state environmental, recreation, and historic resource agencies. He also previously worked for the Forest Resources Association. During the George W. Bush Administration, Domenech served at the Interior Department as White House Liaison and Deputy Chief of Staff to Secretaries Gale Norton and Dirk Kempthorne. In addition, he served as the Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary for Insular Affairs. Mr. Domenech currently serves as the Secretary's appointee to the Advisory Council of the Conservation Trust of Puerto Rico. His family is from Puerto Rico, and he holds a B.S. in Forestry and Wildlife Management from Virginia Tech University. He is married to Jeanne Domenech and they reside in Alexandria, Virginia.

Jason Kearns of Colorado to be a Commissioner of the United States International Trade Commission for the remainder of a 9 year term expiring December 16, 2024. Mr. Kearns currently serves as Chief International Trade Counsel (Democratic Staff) to the Committee on Ways and Means in the House of Representatives. In that position, he advises Members of Congress on legislation concerning trade and on oversight issues involving the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative and other agencies involved in international trade policy and regulation. Before that, he served for three years in the Office of the General Counsel to the U.S. Trade Representative. From 2000 through 2003, Mr. Kearns worked in the international trade group of the law firm, WilmerHale. Mr. Kearns holds a M.P.P. from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University, a J.D. from the University of Pennsylvania, and a B.A. from the University of Denver. He is married to Lindy Arnof Kearns and they have three children.

###

Unsubscribe

The White House 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW Washington DC 20500 202-456-1111

From: Micah Chambers
To: Lori Mashburn
Cc: Laura Rigas; Heather Swift; amanda_kaster@ios.doi.gov; downey_magallanes@ios.doi.gov; scott_hommel@ios.doi.gov; todd_willens@ios.doi.gov; James Cason; Douglas Domenech; Daniel Jorjani
Subject: Re: President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts
Date: Tuesday, August 01, 2017 12:34:05 AM

Thanks. His press release has been ready for weeks haha

Sent from my iPhone

On Jul 31, 2017, at 11:31 PM, Lori Mashburn <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

FYI. The official announcement on Nelson went out.

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Locetta, Jennifer R. EOP/WHO" <(b) (6)>
Date: July 31, 2017 at 9:22:33 PM EDT
To: "lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov" <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Fwd: President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts

Jennifer R. Locetta
Special Assistant to the President
Associate Director, Presidential Personnel Office

Begin forwarded message:

From: White House Press Office <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>
Date: July 31, 2017 at 9:02:27 PM EDT
To: <(b) (6)>
Subject: President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts
Reply-To: <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
July 31, 2017

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts

President Donald J. Trump today announced his intent to nominate the following individuals to key positions in his Administration:

Daniel M. Gade of North Dakota to be a Member of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission for the remainder of a five-year term expiring July 1, 2021. Mr. Gade was born and raised in North Dakota. He graduated from the United States Military Academy (West Point) in 1997, and was wounded in action twice and decorated for valor while serving in Iraq. He served in the administration of President George W. Bush, where his portfolio included veterans, military health care, and United States disability policy. He returned to West Point in 2011 and taught various political science and leadership courses until his retirement from the Army in 2017. He holds an M.P.A. and Ph.D. in public administration and policy from the University of Georgia. He has served on various advisory committees advising the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, and was appointed to serve on the National Council on Disability by then-Speaker Boehner in 2015. He cofounded the Independence Project, a Veteran's employment and empowerment experiment.

Melissa Sue Glynn of the District of Columbia to be an Assistant Secretary of Veterans Affairs, Enterprise Integration. Until recently, Dr. Glynn led Alvarez and Marsal's public sector practice focused on improving the delivery of government programs, and K-12 and higher education. Previously, she was a Principal with PricewaterhouseCoopers and was responsible for the firm's work with the Department of Veterans Affairs. Initially, Dr. Glynn's career focused on the development and deployment of innovative technologies associated with collaborative decision-making. She served as Co-Director of the Center for the Management of Information at the University of Arizona concurrent with her doctoral studies. She was also a principal investigator on a cooperative grant from the National Science Foundation and several programs funded by defense research laboratories. A New Jersey native, Dr. Glynn holds a B.A. from Rutgers University and a M.A. and a Ph.D. from the University of Arizona.

John Henderson of South Dakota to be an Assistant Secretary of the Air Force, Installations, Environment, and Energy. Mr. Henderson most recently served in the Army as the Commander of the Omaha District, Army Corps of Engineers, where his responsibilities included overseeing an annual program of $1.5 billion dollars consisting of more than 2,500 projects supporting the nation's water resources infrastructure, military construction, and Federal interagency work in nine States, environmental restoration projects in 41 States, and an extensive program supporting Department of Defense petroleum and energy infrastructure worldwide for the Defense Logistics Agency. Mr. Henderson has over 23 years of active military experience as an Army engineer officer, serving two combat tours to Iraq and one combat tour to Afghanistan as an engineer battalion task force commander. Mr. Henderson possesses a master's degree in civil engineering from the South Dakota School of Mines and Technology and is a licensed Professional Engineer in the State of South Dakota. His military education includes a National Security Studies fellowship with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and graduation from the Joint Combined Warfighters Course, Army War College Fellowship Program, Command and General Staff College, Air Assault School, and Airborne School.

Ryan Douglas Nelson of Idaho to be Solicitor of the Department of the Interior. Mr. Nelson is a seasoned attorney with broad experience advising government and corporate executives in the public and private sector. Mr. Nelson has worked for all three branches of government. He served as Deputy Assistant Attorney General in the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the Department of Justice, where he managed the natural resource, wildlife and appellate sections of the Division, and as Deputy General Counsel for the White House Office of Management and Budget. He also served as Special Counsel for the Senate Judiciary Committee and as a law clerk for the Senate Legal Counsel. After graduating from BYU Law School with Honors, Mr. Nelson clerked for Judge Henderson on the D.C. Circuit and for Richard Mosk and Charles Brower on the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal in The Hague, the Netherlands. Mr. Nelson was an associate at Sidley Austin and is currently General Counsel for Idaho-based wellness company, Melaleuca, Inc. He has argued 13 Federal court of appeals cases on complex environmental and constitutional issues. Mr. Nelson resides in his hometown of Idaho Falls, Idaho, with his wife, Barbara Baer Nelson, and their seven children.

###

Unsubscribe

From: Laura Rigas
To: Douglas Domenech
Cc: Swift Heather
Subject: Re: President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts
Date: Monday, June 26, 2017 7:22:23 PM

Congrats!!!!!!!!!!!!

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Jun 26, 2017, at 4:07 PM, Douglas Domenech <douglas_domenech@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: White House Press Office <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>
Date: June 26, 2017 at 7:05:35 PM EDT
To: <douglas_domenech@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts
Reply-To: <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
June 26, 2017

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts

President Donald J. Trump today announced his intent to nominate the following individuals to key positions in his Administration:

Brenda Burman of Arizona to be Commissioner of Reclamation, Department of the Interior. Ms. Burman is currently Director of Water Strategy at the Salt River Project, which operates one of the original Reclamation projects approved in 1903. Ms. Burman has worked for nearly 20 years on western water matters including Tribal water settlements, Colorado River, and other river basin issues. Under the George W. Bush Administration, Ms. Burman served as Deputy Commissioner, the number two position at Reclamation, before becoming Deputy Assistant Secretary for Water and Science. Ms. Burman holds a J.D. from the University of Arizona and a B.A. from Kenyon College.

Peter B. Davidson of Virginia to be General Counsel, Department of Commerce. Mr. Davidson recently served as Senior Vice President for Congressional Relations at Verizon Communications, and prior to that, as General Counsel to the United States Trade Representative. He has also served as Vice President for Congressional Relations at USWEST and Qwest, General Counsel and Policy Director to the Majority Leader of the House of Representatives, Attorney-advisor in the Office of Legal Counsel of the Department of Justice, director of congressional and media relations at the United States Information Agency, staff to Representatives Dick Armey and Bill Frenzel, and law clerk on the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. Mr. Davidson has degrees from Carleton College and The University of Virginia School of Law, where he served as Notes Editor on the Law Review. He was raised in Minnesota and northern Wisconsin and currently resides in Virginia with his wife Kari, and they have three children: Madeleine, Sophie, and Björn.

Douglas W. Domenech of Virginia to be an Assistant Secretary of the Interior, Insular Affairs. Mr.

Domenech currently serves as Senior Advisor to the Secretary of the Interior. Previously he was the Secretary of Natural Resources for the Commonwealth of Virginia, overseeing six state environmental, recreation, and historic resource agencies. He also previously worked for the Forest Resources Association. During the George W. Bush Administration, Domenech served at the Interior Department as White House Liaison and Deputy Chief of Staff to Secretaries Gale Norton and Dirk Kempthorne. In addition, he served as the Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary for Insular Affairs. Mr. Domenech currently serves as the Secretary's appointee to the Advisory Council of the Conservation Trust of Puerto Rico. His family is from Puerto Rico, and he holds a B.S. in Forestry and Wildlife Management from Virginia Tech University. He is married to Jeanne Domenech and they reside in Alexandria, Virginia.

Jason Kearns of Colorado to be a Commissioner of the United States International Trade Commission for the remainder of a 9 year term expiring December 16, 2024. Mr. Kearns currently serves as Chief International Trade Counsel (Democratic Staff) to the Committee on Ways and Means in the House of Representatives. In that position, he advises Members of Congress on legislation concerning trade and on oversight issues involving the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative and other agencies involved in international trade policy and regulation. Before that, he served for three years in the Office of the General Counsel to the U.S. Trade Representative. From 2000 through 2003, Mr. Kearns worked in the international trade group of the law firm, WilmerHale. Mr. Kearns holds a M.P.P. from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University, a J.D. from the University of Pennsylvania, and a B.A. from the University of Denver. He is married to Lindy Arnof Kearns and they have three children.

###

Unsubscribe

The White House 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW Washington DC 20500 202-456-1111

From: Laura Rigas
To: Micah Chambers
Cc: Lori Mashburn; Heather Swift; Alex Hinson; blake_deeley@ios.doi.gov; Downey Magallanes; Scott Hommel; Russell Newell
Subject: Re: President Donald J. Trump Announces Key Additions to his Administration
Date: Thursday, October 26, 2017 11:18:18 AM

Already went out. Included Congressional quotes.

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Oct 26, 2017, at 11:16 AM, Micah Chambers <micah_chambers@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Who's coordinating it and do you want to wait for codel quotes?

Sent from my iPhone

On Oct 26, 2017, at 8:49 AM, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thanks! I believe our release should be ready to release today. Has Steven signed off?
My best,
L

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Oct 26, 2017, at 9:31 AM, Lori Mashburn <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

FYI.

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Locetta, Jennifer R. EOP/WHO" <(b) (6)>
Date: October 26, 2017 at 9:02:54 AM EDT
To: "lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov" <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Fwd: President Donald J. Trump Announces Key Additions to his Administration

Jennifer R. Locetta
Special Assistant to the President
Associate Director, Presidential Personnel Office

Begin forwarded message:

From: White House Press Office <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>
Date: October 26, 2017 at 9:01:34 AM EDT
To: (b) (6) >
Subject: President Donald J. Trump Announces Key Additions to his Administration
Reply-To: <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
October 26, 2017

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts

President Donald J. Trump today announced his intent to nominate the following individuals to key positions in his Administration:

William Beach of Kansas to be Commissioner of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor, for a term of 4 years. Mr. Beach is the Vice President for Policy Research at the Mercatus Center at George Mason University. Mr. Beach previously served as the Chief Economist for the Senate Budget Committee, Republican Staff. Prior to that position, he was the Lazof Family Fellow in Economics at the Heritage Foundation and director of the Center for Data Analysis. Prior to joining Heritage in 1995, Mr. Beach served as a senior economist in the corporate headquarters of Sprint United, Inc., and, from 1991 to 1995, as the president of the Institute for Humane Studies at George Mason University. A graduate of Washburn University in Topeka, Kansas, Mr. Beach also holds a master's degree in history and economics from the University of Missouri-Columbia and a Ph.D. in Economics from Buckingham University in Great Britain.

Irving Dennis of Ohio to be Chief Financial Officer, Department of Housing and Urban Development. Mr. Dennis recently retired as a Global Client Service Partner with Ernst & Young, LLP where he served as the coordinating assurance partner on several large multinational public companies in various industries. He has an in-depth understanding of business and financial risk and extensive experience advising audit committees and C-suite executives on global corporate governance, financial, and internal control matters. His experience includes finance transformations, enterprise risk management and corporate governance. In addition, Mr. Dennis has held several leadership roles within EY including a Regional Audit Methodology Leader and a member of a Regional Assurance Leadership Team. Mr. Dennis earned a B.S. Degree in business administration-accounting from Montclair State University and is a Certified Public Accountant. He serves on several not-for-profit boards and has been a member of various accounting-related organizations. Mr. Dennis lives in New Albany, Ohio, with his wife and two children.

Steven Gardner of Kentucky to be Director of the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement. Mr. Gardner is President and CEO of ECSI, LLC, a consulting firm where he has focused on natural resources, mining, reclamation, energy, environmental, and health and safety issues. In 2011, he was inducted into the College of Engineering Hall of Distinction. As a licensed professional engineer, Mr. Gardner has worked on projects throughout the United States and internationally. He was the 2015 President of the Society for Mining, Metallurgy and Exploration (SME). He has served on the UK Mining Engineering Foundation, Kentucky Geological Survey, Biosystems & Agricultural Engineering Advisory Boards, and was a member of the Kentucky Board of Licensure for Professional Engineers and Surveyors. Mr. Gardner has an M.S. in Mining Engineering with a Graduate Certification in Environmental Systems and a B.S. in Agricultural Engineering from the University of Kentucky.

Kenneth L. Marcus of Virginia to be the Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights, Department of Education. Mr. Marcus is currently President and General Counsel of the Louis D. Brandeis Center for Human Rights Under Law. He previously served as Staff Director of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and was delegated the authority of Assistant Secretary of Education for Civil Rights under President George W. Bush. He also previously served as the Lillie and Nathan Ackerman Chair in Equality and Justice in America at the City University of New York's Baruch College School of Public Affairs. Mr. Marcus is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley School of Law and Williams College.

M. Lee McClenny of Washington to be Ambassador Extraordinary & Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Republic of Paraguay. Mr. McClenny, a career member of the Senior Foreign Service, class of Minister-Counselor, began his public service with the U.S. Information Agency in 1986. He is currently the Chargé d'Affaires e.p. of the U.S. Embassy in Caracas, Venezuela. He has previously served overseas in Kuala Lumpur, Montreal, Manila, London, Brussels, Guatemala City, Belgrade and Ottawa, as well as in leadership positions at the Department of State and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Mr. McClenny is a recipient of the Presidential Meritorious Service Award, and numerous performance awards from the Department of State and U.S. Information Agency. He received a B.A. from the University of Washington, and speaks Spanish, French, and some Serbo-Croatian and Russian.

Carlos Trujillo of Florida to be the Permanent Representative of the United States to the Organization of American States with the rank of Ambassador. Mr. Trujillo has been the Florida State Representative for the 105th District in the Florida House of Representatives, Tallahassee, Florida since 2010. An attorney, he simultaneously has been the Founding Partner of Trujillo, Vargas, Gonzalez and Hevia LLP since 2011 and President of Carlos Trujillo, PA, since 2007. Previously, he served as a Florida Assistant State Attorney at the Miami Dade County State Attorney's Office in Miami from 2007 to 2011. He also has been a Board Member of the Public Health Trust of Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami. Mr. Trujillo earned a B.S. from Spring Hill College in Mobile, Alabama and a J.D. from Florida State College of Law in Tallahassee. He speaks fluent Spanish.

Peter Hendrick Vrooman of New York to be Ambassador Extraordinary & Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Republic of Rwanda. Mr. Vrooman, a career member of the Senior

Foreign Service, class of Counselor, has served as an American diplomat since 1991. He most recently served as Chargé d'Affaires from 2016 to 2017 and Deputy Chief of Mission from 2014 to 2016 at the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Mr. Vrooman has held senior positions with the Department of State at home and at the U.S. Mission to the United Nations, as well as overseas. He has served at seven embassies in Africa, the Near East and South Asia. Mr. Vrooman possesses a deep knowledge of East African issues, expertise in UN peacekeeping, strong management and public diplomacy credentials, and economic/commercial advocacy experience. He earned a M.S. from the National Defense University's Industrial College of the Armed Forces, and a B.A. from Harvard College. He speaks French and Arabic.

The following individuals to be Members of the Board of Governors of the United States Postal Service:

- Calvin R. Tucker of Pennsylvania, for the remainder of a term expiring December 8, 2023.
- Robert M. Duncan of Kentucky, for the remainder of a seven-year term expiring December 8, 2018, and an additional term expiring December 8, 2025.
- David Williams of Illinois, for the remainder of a seven-year term expiring December 8, 2019.

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Appoint Personnel to Key Administration Posts

President Donald J. Trump today announced his intent to appoint the following individuals to key positions in his Administration:

Eddie Joe Williams of Arkansas will serve as the Federal Representative to the Southern States Energy Board.

John Zangardi of Pennsylvania will serve as the Chief Information Officer, Department of Homeland Security. Dr. Zangardi has extensive experience in information technology and security. Most recently, Dr. Zangardi served as the Acting Chief Information Officer at the Department of Defense. He previously served as the Principal Deputy Department of Defense Chief Information Officer. His career also includes experience in acquisition, policy, legislative affairs, resourcing, and operations. Dr. Zangardi is a retired Naval Flight Officer and served in a variety of command and staff assignments. Since his retirement from the Navy, he has held several senior executive positions at the Department of the Navy, including as the Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Command, Control, Communications, Computers, Intelligence, Information Operations, and Space and as the Department of Navy Chief Information Officer. Dr. Zangardi holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Scranton, master's degree from the Naval Postgraduate School, and Doctor of Philosophy degree from George Mason University.

The following individuals will serve as Members of the Advisory Committee on the Arts of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts:

- Pamela DeVos of Michigan.
- Frederick Davis Jubitz of Oregon.
- Michael S. Lorber of New York.
- Anne N. Reyes of Florida.
- Stephanie Spencer of California.
- Frank Giordano of New Jersey.
- Vance Thompson of South Dakota.
- Geoffrey K. Verhoff of Virginia.

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Designate David Kautter to the Internal Revenue Service

David Kautter of Virginia to be the Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue. This designation will become effective on November 13, 2017. Mr. Kautter was confirmed on August 3, 2017, to be the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Tax Policy.

###

Unsubscribe

From: Micah Chambers
To: Laura Rigas
Cc: Lori Mashburn; Heather Swift; Alex Hinson; blake_deeley@ios.doi.gov; Downey Magallanes; Scott Hormel; Russell Newell
Subject: Re: President Donald J. Trump Announces Key Additions to his Administration
Date: Thursday, October 26, 2017 11:18:47 AM

Ha nvm, clearly hadn't checked all my emails. Nice work Blake

Sent from my iPhone

On Oct 26, 2017, at 8:49 AM, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thanks! I believe our release should be ready to release today. Has Steven signed off?
My best,
L

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Oct 26, 2017, at 9:31 AM, Lori Mashburn <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

FYI.

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Locetta, Jennifer R. EOP/WHO" <(b) (6)>
Date: October 26, 2017 at 9:02:54 AM EDT
To: "lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov" <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Fwd: President Donald J. Trump Announces Key Additions to his Administration

Jennifer R. Locetta
Special Assistant to the President
Associate Director, Presidential Personnel Office

Begin forwarded message:

From: White House Press Office <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>
Date: October 26, 2017 at 9:01:34 AM EDT
To: <(b) (6)>
Subject: President Donald J. Trump Announces Key Additions to his Administration
Reply-To: <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
October 26, 2017

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts

President Donald J. Trump today announced his intent to nominate the following individuals to key positions in his Administration:

William Beach of Kansas to be Commissioner of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor, for a term of 4 years. Mr. Beach is the Vice President for Policy Research at the Mercatus Center at George Mason University. Mr. Beach previously served as the Chief Economist for the Senate Budget Committee, Republican Staff. Prior to that position, he was the Lazof Family Fellow in Economics at the Heritage Foundation and director of the Center for Data Analysis. Prior to joining Heritage in 1995, Mr. Beach served as a senior economist in the corporate headquarters of Sprint United, Inc., and, from 1991 to 1995, as the president of the Institute for Humane Studies at George Mason University. A graduate of Washburn University in Topeka, Kansas, Mr. Beach also holds a master's degree in history and economics from the University of Missouri-Columbia and a Ph.D. in Economics from Buckingham University in Great Britain.

Irving Dennis of Ohio to be Chief Financial Officer, Department of Housing and Urban Development. Mr. Dennis recently retired as a Global Client Service Partner with Ernst & Young, LLP where he served as the coordinating assurance partner on several large multinational public companies in various industries. He has an in-depth understanding of business and financial risk and extensive experience advising audit committees and C-suite executives on global corporate governance, financial, and internal control matters. His experience includes finance transformations, enterprise risk management and corporate governance. In addition, Mr. Dennis has held several leadership roles within EY including a Regional Audit Methodology Leader and a member of a Regional Assurance Leadership Team. Mr. Dennis earned a B.S. Degree in business administration-accounting from Montclair State University and is a Certified Public Accountant. He serves on several not-for-profit boards and has been a member of various accounting-related organizations. Mr. Dennis lives in New Albany, Ohio, with his wife and two children.

Steven Gardner of Kentucky to be Director of the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement. Mr. Gardner is President and CEO of ECSI, LLC, a consulting firm where he has focused on natural resources, mining, reclamation, energy, environmental, and health and safety issues. In 2011, he was inducted into the College of Engineering Hall of Distinction. As a licensed professional engineer, Mr. Gardner has worked on projects throughout the United States and internationally. He was the 2015 President of the Society for Mining, Metallurgy and Exploration (SME). He has served on the UK Mining Engineering Foundation, Kentucky Geological Survey, Biosystems & Agricultural Engineering Advisory Boards, and was a member of the Kentucky Board of Licensure for Professional Engineers and Surveyors. Mr. Gardner has an M.S. in Mining Engineering with a Graduate Certification in Environmental Systems and a B.S. in Agricultural Engineering from the University of Kentucky.

Kenneth L. Marcus of Virginia to be the Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights, Department of Education. Mr. Marcus is currently President and General Counsel of the Louis D. Brandeis Center for Human Rights Under Law. He previously served as Staff Director of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and was delegated the authority of Assistant Secretary of Education for Civil Rights under President George W. Bush. He also previously served as the Lillie and Nathan Ackerman Chair in Equality and Justice in America at the City University of New York's Baruch College School of Public Affairs. Mr. Marcus is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley School of Law and Williams College.

M. Lee McClenny of Washington to be Ambassador Extraordinary & Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Republic of Paraguay. Mr. McClenny, a career member of the Senior Foreign Service, class of Minister-Counselor, began his public service with the U.S. Information Agency in 1986. He is currently the Chargé d'Affaires e.p. of the U.S. Embassy in Caracas, Venezuela. He has previously served overseas in Kuala Lumpur, Montreal, Manila, London, Brussels, Guatemala City, Belgrade and Ottawa, as well as in leadership positions at the Department of State and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Mr. McClenny is a recipient of the Presidential Meritorious Service Award, and numerous performance awards from the Department of State and U.S. Information Agency. He received a B.A. from the University of Washington, and speaks Spanish, French, and some Serbo-Croatian and Russian.

Carlos Trujillo of Florida to be the Permanent Representative of the United States to the Organization of American States with the rank of Ambassador. Mr. Trujillo has been the Florida State Representative for the 105th District in the Florida House of Representatives, Tallahassee, Florida since 2010. An attorney, he simultaneously has been the Founding Partner of Trujillo, Vargas, Gonzalez and Hevia LLP since 2011 and President of Carlos Trujillo, PA, since 2007. Previously, he served as a Florida Assistant State Attorney at the Miami Dade County State Attorney's Office in Miami from 2007 to 2011. He also has been a Board Member of the Public Health Trust of Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami. Mr. Trujillo earned a B.S. from Spring Hill College in Mobile, Alabama and a J.D. from Florida State College of Law in Tallahassee. He speaks fluent Spanish.

Peter Hendrick Vrooman of New York to be Ambassador Extraordinary & Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Republic of Rwanda. Mr. Vrooman, a career member of the Senior Foreign Service, class of Counselor, has served as an American diplomat since 1991. He most recently served as Chargé d'Affaires from 2016 to 2017 and Deputy Chief of Mission from 2014 to 2016 at the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Mr. Vrooman has held senior positions with the Department of State at home and at the U.S. Mission to the United Nations, as well as overseas. He has served at seven embassies in Africa, the Near East and South Asia. Mr. Vrooman possesses a deep knowledge of East African issues, expertise in UN peacekeeping, strong management and public diplomacy credentials, and economic/commercial advocacy experience. He earned a M.S from the National Defense University's Industrial College of the Armed Forces, and a B.A. from Harvard College. He speaks French and Arabic.

The following individuals to be Members of the Board of Governors of the United States Postal Service:

- Calvin R. Tucker of Pennsylvania, for the remainder of a term expiring December 8, 2023.
- Robert M. Duncan of Kentucky, for the remainder of a seven-year term expiring December 8, 2018, and an additional term expiring December 8, 2025.
- David Williams of Illinois, for the remainder of a seven-year term expiring December 8, 2019.

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Appoint Personnel to Key Administration Posts

President Donald J. Trump today announced his intent to appoint the following individuals to key positions in his Administration:

Eddie Joe Williams of Arkansas will serve as the Federal Representative to the Southern States Energy Board.

John Zangardi of Pennsylvania will serve as be Chief Information Officer, Department of Homeland Security. Dr. Zangardi has extensive experience in information technology and security. Most recently, Dr. Zangardi served as the Acting Chief Information Officer at the Department of Defense. He previously served as the Principal Deputy Department of Defense Chief Information Officer. His career also includes experience in acquisition, policy, legislative affairs, resourcing, and operations. Dr. Zangardi is a retired Naval Flight Officer and served in a variety of command and staff assignments. Since his retirement from the Navy, he has held several senior executive positions at the Department of the Navy, including as the Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Command, Control, Communications, Computers, Intelligence, Information Operations, and Space and as the Department of Navy Chief Information Officer. Dr. Zangardi holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Scranton, master's degree from the Naval Postgraduate School, and Doctor of Philosophy degree from George Mason University.

The following individuals will serve as Members of the Advisory Committee on the Arts of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts:

- Pamela DeVos of Michigan.
- Frederick Davis Jubitz of Oregon.
- Michael S. Lorber of New York.
- Anne N. Reyes of Florida.
- Stephanie Spencer of California.
- Frank Giordano of New Jersey.
- Vance Thompson of South Dakota.
- Geoffrey K. Verhoff of Virginia.

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Designate David Kautter to the Internal Revenue Service

David Kautter of Virginia to be the Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue. This designation will become effective on November 13, 2017. Mr. Kautter was confirmed on August 3, 2017, to be the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Tax Policy.

###

Unsubscribe

From: Scott Hommel
To: Lori Mashburn
Cc: Heather Swift; Laura Rigas; micah_chambers@ios.doi.gov; downey_magallanes@ios.doi.gov; douglas_domenech@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: President Donald J. Trump Announces Key Additions to his Administration
Date: Monday, July 10, 2017 7:32:25 PM

Outstanding

Scott C. Hommel
Chief of Staff
Department of the Interior

On Jul 10, 2017, at 7:19 PM, Lori Mashburn <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Susan's announcement just went.

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Locetta, Jennifer R. EOP/WHO" <(b) (6)>
Date: July 10, 2017 at 7:04:49 PM EDT
To: "lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov" <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Fwd: President Donald J. Trump Announces Key Additions to his Administration

Jennifer R. Locetta
Special Assistant to the President
Associate Director, Presidential Personnel Office

Begin forwarded message:

From: White House Press Office <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>
Date: July 10, 2017 at 7:03:45 PM EDT
To: (b) (6)
Subject: President Donald J. Trump Announces Key Additions to his Administration
Reply-To: <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
July 10, 2017

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intent to Nominate Personnel to Key Administration Posts

President Donald J. Trump today announced his intent to nominate the following individuals to key positions in his Administration:

Ronald L. Batory of New Jersey to be the Administrator of the Federal Railroad Administration, Department of Transportation. Mr. Batory has more than 45 years of diverse leadership in the railroad industry. In his last capacity with Consolidated Rail Corporation, he served as President and Chief Operating Officer. Prior to that affiliation, he was President of the Belt Railway Company of Chicago. Mr. Batory earned his B.A. from Adrian College and his M.A. from Eastern Michigan University. Mr. Batory and his wife, Barbara, reside in Mount Laurel, New Jersey.

Susan Combs of Texas to be an Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Policy, Management and Budget. Ms. Combs has an extensive career in elected public office and in the private sector as a small business owner running a ranch in the Big Bend area of Texas. She served in the Texas Legislature, writing and passing the State's private property legislation, and working to ensure greater transparency in government spending. She was also elected to two Texas statewide offices: as the State's first woman Agriculture Commissioner; and then as the Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts, Treasurer, and Chief Financial Officer. Ms. Combs spent 16 years in statewide elected leadership.

Lewis M. Eisenberg of Florida to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Italian Republic, and to serve concurrently and without additional compensation as Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Republic of San Marino. Mr. Eisenberg is a prominent American financier, investor, and philanthropist. Co-founder and managing partner of Ironhill Investments in New York, he has a record of engaging with State and local governments on complex issues. Mr. Eisenberg was the Chairman of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey for six years and was named a Founding Board Member of the Lower Manhattan Development Corporation, where he chaired its 9/11 Victims' Families and Transportation Advisory Councils. He is an Emeritus Member of Cornell University's Johnson Graduate School of Management Advisory Council and Life Member of the Cornell University Council. He earned a B.A. at Dartmouth College and a M.B.A. at Cornell Johnson School of Business.

Robert P. Kadlec of New York to be Assistant Secretary of Health and Human Services for Preparedness and Response. Currently, Dr. Kadlec is the Deputy Staff Director for the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence. Previously, he served as a Special Assistant to the President for Biodefense Policy for President George W. Bush. Dr. Kadlec holds a B.S. from the U.S. Air Force Academy; a M.D. from the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, and a M.A. in National Security Studies, Georgetown University.

Stephen B. King of Wisconsin to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Czech Republic. Mr. King is a prominent public servant and businessman who successfully acquired, built, and sold a specialty chemical manufacturing business and founded a family investment business. Earlier in his career, Mr. King investigated civil rights violations for the Federal Bureau Investigation, served as an investigator for the U.S. Senate's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, and was named Special Assistant to the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture for liaison between USDA and the Agriculture Committees of the House and Senate. Mr. King earned a M.A. and a B.S. at Western Illinois University.

Randal Quarles of Colorado to be a Member of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System for the remainder of a 14-year term expiring January 31, 2018, and for an additional 14-year term expiring January 31, 2032, and to be Vice Chairman for Supervision of the Federal Reserve System for a term of 4 years. Mr. Quarles has had an extensive career in government and international finance. He served as Under Secretary for Domestic Finance in the George W. Bush Administration, and before that as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for International Affairs and U.S. Executive Director of the IMF. He had earlier served in the George H.W. Bush Administration as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Financial Institutions Policy. He is a founder and managing director of The Cynosure Group, a private investment firm in Salt Lake City. Before founding Cynosure, Mr. Quarles was a partner of The Carlyle Group and, earlier, of the law firm of Davis Polk & Wardwell. He graduated summa cum laude in philosophy and economics from Columbia University and earned a J.D. from the Yale Law School.

Mary Kirtley Waters of Virginia to be an Assistant Secretary of State, Legislative Affairs. Since early 2017, Ms. Waters has served as Deputy Assistant Secretary in the Bureau of Legislative Affairs at the State Department. Ms. Waters was a cabinet confirmation team leader for the Presidential Transition Team. Previously, she served as President of the North American Millers' Association, Vice President for Corporate Relations with the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation, and Assistant Secretary for Congressional Relations at the Department of Agriculture. She spent 15 years as Senior Director and Legislative Counsel in the Washington office of ConAgra Foods. Ms. Waters earned a B.A. from the University of Illinois and a J.D. from George Mason University's Antonin Scalia Law School.

President Donald J. Trump Announces Intended Appointments to the Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity

President Donald J. Trump today announced his intent to appoint the following individuals as members of the Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity:

- J. Christian Adams of Virginia
- Alan Lamar King of Alabama

###

Unsubscribe

The White House 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW Washington DC 20500 202-456-1111

From: Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: Press inquiry: Chuck Johnson, Palmer Luckey
Date: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 9:26:09 AM

Heather – Tried you, but realized that’s the wrong number. Call me this morning when you’re able.

(b) (6)

From: Dorr, Kaelan K. EOP/WHO
Sent: Monday, May 22, 2017 9:26 PM
To: Shah, Raj S. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Ditto, Jessica E. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Kennedy, Adam R. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Hemming, Andrew J. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Dubke, Michael D. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Cheung, Steven EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>
Subject: Fwd: Press inquiry: Chuck Johnson, Palmer Luckey

Flagging the below for the broader team - they've responded that they didn't know who he was when they accepted invite, etc.

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Date: May 22, 2017 at 9:13:21 PM EDT
To: <(b) (6)>, "Love, Kelly A. EOP/ Who" <(b) (6)>, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Fwd: Press inquiry: Chuck Johnson, Palmer Luckey

Kelly, can you give me a call? 202-8897-7111

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Date: May 22, 2017 at 9:04:25 PM EDT
To: Dell Cameron <dell.cameron@gizmodo.com>
Cc: Interior Press <Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov>, Bryan Menegus <bryan.menegus@gizmodo.com>
Subject: Re: Press inquiry: Chuck Johnson, Palmer Luckey

Hi Dell, the Secretary nor anyone on staff was aware of the behavior you outlined. Regarding setting up the meeting, a friend of the Secretary's suggested he talk with them about their technology. As a result, they had a very brief meeting with the Secretary there was no action after.

For your background, please see this letter then-Congressman Zinke penned denouncing such behavior, tactics and rhetoric
<https://www.daines.senate.gov/news/press-releases/tester-daines-zinke-bullock-fox-stand-against-anti-semitism-and-white-nationalism>

Sent from my iPhone
On May 22, 2017, at 8:23 PM, Dell Cameron
<dell.cameron@gizmodo.com> wrote:

Thanks Heather.

Can you say who arranged this meeting? One of those "gentlemen," Chuck Johnson, is a fairly controversial figure.

- His website is fundraising for Andrew Anglin, publisher neo-Nazi website Daily Stormer. Link: <http://gizmodo.com/internet-gremlin-chuck-johnsons-website-becomes-inaccess-1794791944>
- Prior to the meeting, Johnson incorrectly identified a student at University of Virginia and accused her of making false rape accusations (he attacked her online and posted a photo of her). Link: <http://jezebel.com/woman-falsely-idd-as-uvas-jackie-by-conservative-blogge-1671234663>
- He was booted from Twitter after saying he planned to "take out" a black activist. Link: <http://www.politico.com/blogs/media/2015/05/troll-charles-johnson-banned-from-twitter-207688>
- He's argued that homosexuality was responsible for an Amtrak derailment. Link: <http://www.advocate.com/commentary/2015/05/15/op-ed-amtrak-accident-isnt-part-gay-agenda>
- He falsely claimed a "left-wing Democrat" nurse in New Jersey had Ebola and offered $1,000 for pictures of a Republican candidate's wife, who was in a nursing home. Link: <http://bit.ly/139nGar>

Was the secretary aware of Mr. Johnson's... how do I put it.... extremely inappropriate and abusive behavior prior to taking that meeting?

Dell Cameron

Staff Reporter, Gizmodo
Gizmodo Media Group
Email: dell@gizmodo.com
Signal: (469) 387-1810

PGP: keybase.io/dellcam

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 6:23 PM, Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hey there, Dell. The Secretary had a brief meeting where he listened to their ideas about using technology on the border and referred the gentlemen to the Department of Homeland Security.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov 1
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 5:03 PM, Dell Cameron
<dell.cameron@gizmodo.com> wrote:

Follow up.

Please excuse the language in this email below, I'm quoting one of the attendees of the meeting in which Mr. Zinke, Downey Magallanes, Scott Hommel, Nancy Guiden, as well as acting Communications Director Megan Bloomgren, were all present.

We asked Mr. Luckey if he could elaborate on what was discussed w/ the Secretary at this meeting.

Mr. Luckey told our reporter: "I could give you an answer. Or I could tell you to go fuck yourself."

In response, we're filing a FOIA request for additional information about the meeting & printing a story about the meeting within the hour.

Regards,

Dell Cameron
Staff Reporter, Gizmodo
Gizmodo Media Group
Email: dell@gizmodo.com
Signal: (469) 387-1810
PGP: keybase.io/dellcam

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 2:46 PM, Dell Cameron

<dell.cameron@gizmodo.com> wrote:

Good afternoon,

It came to our attention that Sec. Zinke attended a meeting on April 12 with Oculus Rift founder Palmer Luckey and WeSearchr founder Charles Johnson, as well as four Interior staff members, concerning the construction of a border wall.

Can your office elaborate on what that meeting was about, and why Johnson and Luckey were asked to advise on such a project?

Thanks,

Dell Cameron

Staff Reporter, Gizmodo

Gizmodo Media Group

Email: dell@gizmodo.com

Signal: \(469\) 387-1810

PGP: keybase.io/dellcam

From: Rigas, Laura
To: Swift, Heather
Cc: Nathan Adams
Subject: Re: Press release: Former Louisiana State Official Scott A. Angelle Named as Director of the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement
Date: Monday, May 22, 2017 7:55:31 PM

Sorry for the delay. Nope, just a BSEE announcement. Thanks!

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 2:50 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Is this supposed to go out from DOI too?

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Julian, Gregory <gregory.julian@bsee.gov>
Date: Mon, May 22, 2017 at 10:03 AM
Subject: Press release: Former Louisiana State Official Scott A. Angelle Named as Director of the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement
To:

THE BUREAU OF SAFETY AND ENVIRONMENTAL ENFORCEMENT

Office of Public Affairs

Date: May 22, 2017
Contact: Gregory Julian (202) 208-3985

Former Louisiana State Official Scott A. Angelle Named as Director of the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Former Louisiana state official Scott A. Angelle will head-up the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement. As part of the Department of the Interior, BSEE fosters safe and responsible energy production on the U.S. Outer Continental Shelf through regulatory oversight of oil and gas operations. Angelle, who most recently served as Vice Chairman of the Louisiana Public Service Commission, will assume his new position May 23.

“Scott Angelle brings a wealth of experience to BSEE, having spent many years working for the safe and efficient energy production of both Louisiana’s and our country’s offshore resources,” Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke said. “As we set our path towards energy dominance, I am confident that Scott has the expertise, vision, and the leadership necessary to effectively enhance our program, and to promote the safe and environmentally responsible exploration, development, and production of our country’s offshore oil and gas resources.”

Angelle, who will serve as the fourth director in BSEE’s history, has held numerous positions in Louisiana State and Parish governments, including Interim Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of the Louisiana Department of Natural Resources, and St. Martin Parish President. In the aftermath of the BP oil spill, Angelle served at the request of then Louisiana Governor Bobby Jindal as liaison to the federal government, and negotiated an early end of the previous administration’s drilling moratorium.

“I welcome the opportunity to serve President Trump and Secretary Zinke, and work with BSEE staff to meet the critical goal of energy dominance for our country,” said Angelle. “It is an exciting and challenging time for BSEE; I look forward to leading our efforts to empower the offshore oil and gas industry while ensuring safe and environmentally responsible operations.”

Angelle served for eight years as Louisiana’s Secretary of the Department of Natural Resources. Under his leadership, the state’s coastal permitting system was reformed, providing for efficient permitting while increasing drilling rig counts in Louisiana by more than 150 percent during his tenure. Angelle has also served as Chairman of the Louisiana State Mineral Board, and as a member of the Louisiana State University Board of Supervisors, Southern States Energy Board, and the Louisiana Coastal Port Advisory Authority.

Angelle is a native of Breaux Bridge, Louisiana, and a cum laude graduate of the University of Louisiana at Lafayette with a Bachelor of Science degree in Petroleum Land Management. He and his wife Dianne are the proud parents of five children and four grandchildren.

Established in 2011, BSEE fosters secure and reliable energy production through a program of efficient permitting, appropriate regulations, compliance monitoring and enforcement, inspections, technical assessments, and incident investigations. The position of BSEE Director is not Senate-confirmed.

More information on BSEE can be found at: <http://www.bsee.gov>

###

-- BSEE --

--

Greg Julian

Press Secretary

Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement

O: 202-208-6184

M: 202-412-8375

Gregory.Julian@bsee.gov

<http://www.bsee.gov/> | <https://www.linkedin.com/company/bureau-of-safety-and-environmental-enforcement> | <https://twitter.com/BSEEGov>

| <https://www.facebook.com/BSEEGov/>

Home

From: Angelico, Eileen
To: Laura Rigas; Heather Swift
Cc: Frank Quimby; Richard Cardinale; Katharine Macgregor; Gregory Julian
Subject: Re: proposed Outreach Strategy for BSEE Director Announcement
Date: Thursday, May 18, 2017 10:27:07 AM
Attachments: Angelle annc release - BSEE masthead 5-18-2017.docx

Laura and Heather,

Thanks for everyone's feedback. Please find attached the BSEE announcement press release with a revised lead paragraph and on BSEE masthead.

We are awaiting your okay to set the release day Mon, 5/22 and to schedule The Advocate interview next Weds., 5/24.

Thanks,

Eileen

Eileen P. Angelico, APR
Acting Chief, Office of Public Affairs
Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement
(202) 208-7746 office
(504) 654-7840 mobile

On Thu, May 18, 2017 at 8:16 AM, MacGregor, Katharine <katharine_macgregor@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

This looks great.

On Wed, May 17, 2017 at 7:15 PM, Rigas, Laura <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thanks, Eileen. Will get back to you asap but this generally sounds right to me. Kate, welcome your input as well.

My best,

L

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Wed, May 17, 2017 at 1:08 PM, Angelico, Eileen <eileen.angelico@bsee.gov> wrote:

Laura and Heather,

Please see below for the proposed Outreach Strategy for the announcement and introduction of the BSEE Director. I have also attached the document and draft DOI press release. The draft DOI press release has been submitted to Frank Quimby.

We are requesting an issuance date of May 22, 2017. The BSEE Director is expected to report on Tuesday, May 23, 2017.

The only media interview that we are proposing the first week would be with The Advocate, the Baton Rouge daily. The interview would focus on introduction of the new Director and the FY 2018 BSEE Budget Request. This has also been included in BSEE's budget outreach strategy.

Please let me know if you need any additional information.

Thanks,

Eileen

Eileen P. Angelico, APR
 Acting Chief, Office of Public Affairs
 Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement
 (202) 208-7746 office
 (504) 654-7840 mobile

BSEE Director Announcement Outreach Strategy

Date/Time	Action	Audience	Notes
5-22-2017 10:00 am	DOI Announcement Press Release	DOI and BSEE media distro lists, BSEE social media
5-22-2017	DOI Announcement Press Release distributed to BSEE Congressional list	Congressional members and staff
5-23-2017 1:00 pm	BSEE introductory email	all BSEE employees
5-24-2017 1:00 pm (tentative)	Interview by phone with The Advocate reporter, Baton Rouge, LA (tentative)	Louisiana communities – Baton Rouge, New Orleans, and Lafayette	Areas of discussion – BSEE Director's intro and BSEE FY 2018 Budget Request
5-25-2017	Letter to external stakeholders	Industry, NGO's, coastal States
6-1-2017 (tentative) time TBD	Media Roundtable Discussion (in-person and phone)	Washington bureau and trade reporters	Areas of discussion – BSEE Director's intro and BSEE FY 2018 Budget Request
6-1-2017	Director's Corner (blog) posted on bsee.gov	Web site viewers	Will be supported by follow-on with social media platforms
June & July Dates TBD	Field visits and all-hands meetings	BSEE field staff	New Orleans, La gulf coast, Houston, Camarillo, CA and Anchorage, AK

--

Kate MacGregor
1849 C ST NW
Room 6625
Washington DC 20240

202-208-3671 (Direct)

From: Swift, Heather
To: Ben Lefebvre
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:14:58 PM

Fort Bliss supplied and paid for the helo.

The CODEL Was Norway, Greenland, AK. She was on the entire CODEL.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 4:11 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

And more follow-up:

When you say Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter, does that mean DOI did not pay for its use? Any idea on cost?

Did Mrs. Zinke attend the Norway leg of the trip? I'm just confused if the Greenland/Norway leg of that trip was an official CODEL, or if the CODEL was just the Alaska bit.

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:03 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Thank you. A few more. Sorry for the dribble dribble on this.

1. The August flight to Ravalli County, that was tied to this August 24 Tweet? (Re: This: <https://twitter.com/Scavino45/status/889679192685780992>)

No, that appears to be a July tweet.

2. What transportation was used for his visit to Basin & Range Monument visit on July 30? (<https://twitter.com/SecretaryZinke/status/891861787234058240>) If military or charter, reasoning and cost?

It was a BLM helicopter. (I don't immediately have the cost information available)

3. Did the Secretary use a military vehicle to review the Organ Mountains monument in New Mexico in June? If so, reasoning and cost?

Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter so the Secretary and Ft Bliss personnel were able to discuss their needs and concerns as related to the monument. Reasoning - it is difficult to survey a half million-acre piece of land with few roads by foot or car in an hour and a half.

4. Did the Secretary use a charter flight to visit Florida in April? If so, reasoning and cost?

The Secretary has not been to Florida.

5. I see on the Secretary Trip Summary that Mrs. Zinke was with him during the Alaska trip in May. Did she also travel with him to Norway (i.e., the leg of the trip before the events in Alaska)? If so, did DOI pay anything for her travel, lodging or food budget? Or did the Zinke's reimburse DOI her part of the trip out of their private bank accounts?

Mrs. Zinke personally paid for all of her expenses while traveling on the CODEL and in Alaska.

6. For the flights on AF1 to visit the Boy Scout jamboree and the Youngstown POTUS rally, did DOI pay anything toward the flights?

Yes. (I do not have this information immediately available)

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 3:35 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Apart from events with POTUS/VPOTUS, the Secretary took military air once. He was invited by USDA Secretary Sonny Purdue to go to a wildfire camp at a Type 1 fire in Ravalli County Montana in August. The fire claimed the life of one firefighter. It is still burning but 90% contained. The USDA and DOI co-manage wildfire fighting on federal lands. The USDA was the lead on the trip. DOI has not been billed for it.

Three Charter Flights

3/31

Trip: USVI Centennial Transfer Day Ceremony (The 100 year anniversary of the Danish government turning over the Virgin Islands to the United States. DOI has jurisdiction over territories)

Flight Plan: St Croix --> St Thomas --> St Croix

Reason: No commercial flight were available

Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost/staff)

5/17

Trip: CODEL to Norway and Greenland

and

Alaska

Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee organized the Arctic CODEL. The Committee organized and utilized a charter

.

Flight Plan: Deadhorse, AK --> Alpine, AK --> Fairbanks

Reason: Commercial flights were not an option

, please contact SENR for more details about their choice of aircraft

Payment: the Secretary and

1

staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost)

6/26

Las Vegas to Kalispell, MT for the Western Governors Association annual meeting.
The Secretary had

a

speaking engagement in the evening in Nevada and

meetings

in the morning in Montana.

Flight Plan:

8:30PM

Las Vegas -->

1:40AM

Kalispell

Reason: No commercial flight available to get the Secretary and staff to the event on time.

Payment:

$12,375

(

Secretary and

4

staff

)

was paid out of the DOI budget

.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 2:43 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello all,

Has Secretary Zinke used military aircraft for travel during his time as Interior Secretary, and, if such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? You can exclude travel with the POTUS on Air Force 1.

Also, has Secretary Zinke used charter flights for official travel during his time as Secretary? If such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? I see on his public calendar that only a few flights were explicitly described as commercial flights, a July 30-31 United flight from LAS to IAD, for example. Were any of the trips listed in his public calendar on chartered flights?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre

Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro

Desk: 703-647-8775

Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537

Proton: bjlefevre@protonmail.com

Twitter: @bjlefevre

From: Heather Swift
To: Ben Lefebvre
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:11:53 PM

Yes. It's also on Zinke's twitter act. Lots of pix.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 28, 2017, at 4:10 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Whoops, 1) Should have been this Tweet:

<https://twitter.com/SteveDaines/status/900727259920834560>

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:03 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Thank you. A few more. Sorry for the dribble dribble on this.

1. The August flight to Ravalli County, that was tied to this August 24 Tweet? (Re: This: <https://twitter.com/Scavino45/status/889679192685780992>)
No, that appears to be a July tweet.
2. What transportation was used for his visit to Basin & Range Monument visit on July 30? (<https://twitter.com/SecretaryZinke/status/891861787234058240>) If military or charter, reasoning and cost?
It was a BLM helicopter. (I don't immediately have the cost information available)
3. Did the Secretary use a military vehicle to review the Organ Mountains monument in New Mexico in June? If so, reasoning and cost?
Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter so the Secretary and Ft Bliss personnel were able to discuss their needs and concerns as related to the monument. Reasoning - it is difficult to survey a half million-acre piece of land with few roads by foot or car in an hour and a half.
4. Did the Secretary use a charter flight to visit Florida in April? If so, reasoning and cost?
The Secretary has not been to Florida.

5. I see on the Secretary Trip Summary that Mrs. Zinke was with him during the Alaska trip in May. Did she also travel with him to Norway (i.e., the leg of the trip before the events in Alaska)? If so, did DOI pay anything for her travel, lodging or food budget? Or did the Zinke's reimburse DOI her part of the trip out of their private bank accounts?

Mrs. Zinke personally paid for all of her expenses while traveling on the CODEL and in Alaska.

6. For the flights on AF1 to visit the Boy Scout jamboree and the Youngstown POTUS rally, did DOI pay anything toward the flights?

Yes. (I do not have this information immediately available)

Thank you,
Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 3:35 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Apart from events with POTUS/VPOTUS, the Secretary took military air once. He was invited by USDA Secretary Sonny Purdue to go to a wildfire camp at a Type 1 fire in Ravalli County Montana in August. The fire claimed the life of one firefighter. It is still burning but 90% contained. The USDA and DOI co-manage wildfire fighting on federal lands. The USDA was the lead on the trip. DOI has not been billed for it.

Three Charter Flights

3/31

Trip: USVI Centennial Transfer Day Ceremony (The 100 year anniversary of the Danish government turning over the Virgin Islands to the United States.

DOI has jurisdiction over territories)

Flight Plan: St Croix --> St Thomas --> St Croix

Reason: No commercial flight were available

Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost/staff)

5/17

Trip: CODEL to Norway and Greenland
and

Alaska

Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee organized the Arctic CODEL.

The Committee organized and utilized a charter

.
Flight Plan: Deadhorse, AK --> Alpine, AK --> Fairbanks
Reason: Commercial flights were not an option
, please contact SENR for more details about their choice of aircraft

Payment: the Secretary and 1
staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.
(waiting on cost)

6/26
Las Vegas to Kalispell, MT for the Western Governors Association annual meeting.
The Secretary had
a speaking engagement in the evening in Nevada and
meetings
in the morning in Montana.
Flight Plan:
8:30PM
Las Vegas -->
1:40AM
Kalispell
Reason: No commercial flight available to get the Secretary and staff to the event on time.

Payment:
$12,375

(
Secretary and 4
staff
)

was paid out of the DOI budget

.
-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 2:43 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello all,

Has Secretary Zinke used military aircraft for travel during his time as Interior Secretary, and, if such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? You can exclude travel with the POTUS on Air Force 1.

Also, has Secretary Zinke used charter flights for official travel during his time as Secretary? If such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? I see on his public calendar that only a few flights were explicitly described as commercial flights, a July 30-31 United flight from LAS to IAD, for example. Were any of the trips listed in his public calendar on chartered flights?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: question form Politico on Secretary travel
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 5:56:00 PM

The Beechcraft from Las Vegas to Glacier International, yeah.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 5:48 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Are you asking if the Secretary plans to reimburse DOI for the Secretary's flights for official business?

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 5:45 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Does Zinke intend to reimburse DOI for any of the charter flights?

Thank you,
Ben

From: Ben Lefebvre
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:12 PM
To: 'Swift, Heather' <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: RE: question form Politico on Secretary travel

And more follow-up:

When you say Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter, does that mean DOI did not pay for its use? Any idea on cost?

Did Mrs. Zinke attend the Norway leg of the trip? I'm just confused if the Greenland/Norway leg of that trip was an official CODEL, or if the CODEL was just the Alaska bit.

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:03 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Thank you. A few more. Sorry for the dribble dribble on this.

1. The August flight to Ravalli County, that was tied to this August 24 Tweet? (Re: This: <https://twitter.com/Scavino45/status/889679192685780992>)
No, that appears to be a July tweet.
2. What transportation was used for his visit to Basin & Range Monument visit on July 30? (<https://twitter.com/SecretaryZinke/status/891861787234058240>) If military or charter, reasoning and cost?
It was a BLM helicopter. (I don't immediately have the cost information available)
3. Did the Secretary use a military vehicle to review the Organ Mountains monument in New Mexico in June? If so, reasoning and cost?
Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter so the Secretary and Ft Bliss personnel were able to discuss their needs and concerns as related to the monument. Reasoning - it is difficult to survey a half million-acre piece of land with few roads by foot or car in an hour and a half.
4. Did the Secretary use a charter flight to visit Florida in April? If so, reasoning and cost?
The Secretary has not been to Florida.
5. I see on the Secretary Trip Summary that Mrs. Zinke was with him during the Alaska trip in May. Did she also travel with him to Norway (i.e., the leg of the trip before the events in Alaska)? If so, did DOI pay anything for her travel, lodging or food budget? Or did the Zinke's reimburse DOI her part of the trip out of their private bank accounts?
Mrs. Zinke personally paid for all of her expenses while traveling on the CODEL and in Alaska.
6. For the flights on AF1 to visit the Boy Scout jamboree and the Youngstown POTUS rally, did DOI pay anything toward the flights?
Yes. (I do not have this information immediately available)

Thank you,
Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 3:35 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Apart from events with POTUS/VPOTUS, the Secretary took military air once. He was invited by USDA Secretary Sonny Purdue to go to a wildfire camp at a Type 1 fire in Ravalli County Montana in August. The fire claimed the life of one firefighter. It is still burning but 90% contained. The USDA and DOI co-manage wildfire fighting on federal lands. The USDA was the lead on the trip. DOI has not been billed for it.

Three Charter Flights

3/31

Trip: USVI Centennial Transfer Day Ceremony (The 100 year anniversary of the Danish government turning over the Virgin Islands to the United States. DOI has jurisdiction over territories)

Flight Plan: St Croix --> St Thomas --> St Croix

Reason: No commercial flight were available

Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.
(waiting on cost/staff)

5/17

Trip: CODEL to Norway and Greenland
and
Alaska

Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee organized the Arctic CODEL. The Committee organized and utilized a charter

Flight Plan: Deadhorse, AK --> Alpine, AK --> Fairbanks

Reason: Commercial flights were not an option

, please contact SENR for more details about their choice of aircraft

Payment: the Secretary and

1

staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.
(waiting on cost)

6/26

Las Vegas to Kalispell, MT for the Western Governors Association annual meeting.

The Secretary had

a

speaking engagement in the evening in Nevada and
meetings

in the morning in Montana.

Flight Plan:

8:30PM

Las Vegas -->

1:40AM

Kalispell

Reason: No commercial flight available to get the Secretary and staff to the event on time.

Payment:

$12,375

(
Secretary and 4
staff
)

was paid out of the DOI budget

.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 2:43 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello all,

Has Secretary Zinke used military aircraft for travel during his time as Interior Secretary, and, if such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? You can exclude travel with the POTUS on Air Force 1. Also, has Secretary Zinke used charter flights for official travel during his time as Secretary? If such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? I see on his public calendar that only a few flights were explicitly described as commercial flights, a July 30-31 United flight from LAS to IAD, for example. Were any of the trips listed in his public calendar on chartered flights?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre

Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro

Desk: 703-647-8775

Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537

Proton: bjlefevre@protonmail.com

Twitter: @bjlefevre

From: Swift, Heather
To: Ben Lefebvre
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:31:50 PM

Did you ever inquire into whether Sally Jewell or Ken Salazar personally paid for official government travel?

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:25 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Roger. He had multiple official government events and meetings on both sides of the trip. On the front end, an event ending at 7:45PM and on the back end meetings beginning again at 8:30AM. No commercial flights were available which merited the late flight. Of course this was pre-approved by the ethics office. Every single trip the secretary goes on is pre-cleared by career officials in the ethics office. I have not had the opportunity to discuss that with the Secretary however the trip is fully compliant and approved government travel.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:03 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Nope, I know they're government travel. But just wanted to know about the use of a chartered jet for government work. Just want to know if he has to reimburse. Tom Price just said he would for the private flights he booked.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:01 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Ben I am getting the sense that you believe these were not official government trips for some reason. Is that what you're getting at?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 5:57 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Sorry – the St. Thomas flights, and the flight to the WGA meeting.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 5:48 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Are you asking if the Secretary plans to reimburse DOI for the Secretary's flights for official business?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 5:45 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Does Zinke intend to reimburse DOI for any of the charter flights?

Thank you,

Ben

From: Ben Lefebvre

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:12 PM

To: 'Swift, Heather' <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: RE: question form Politico on Secretary travel

And more follow-up:

When you say Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter, does that mean DOI did not pay for its use?
Any idea on cost?

Did Mrs. Zinke attend the Norway leg of the trip? I'm just confused if the Greenland/Norway leg of that trip was an official CODEL, or if the CODEL was just the Alaska bit.

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:03 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Thank you. A few more. Sorry for the dribble dribble on this.

1. The August flight to Ravalli County, that was tied to this August 24 Tweet? (Re: This: <https://twitter.com/Scavino45/status/889679192685780992>)

No, that appears to be a July tweet.

2. What transportation was used for his visit to Basin & Range Monument visit on July 30? (<https://twitter.com/SecretaryZinke/status/891861787234058240>) If military or charter, reasoning and cost?

It was a BLM helicopter. (I don't immediately have the cost information available)

3. Did the Secretary use a military vehicle to review the Organ Mountains monument in New Mexico in June? If so, reasoning and cost?

Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter so the Secretary and Ft Bliss personnel were able to discuss their needs and concerns as related to the monument. Reasoning - it is difficult to survey a half million-acre piece of land with few roads by foot or car in an hour and a half.

4. Did the Secretary use a charter flight to visit Florida in April? If so, reasoning and cost?

The Secretary has not been to Florida.

5. I see on the Secretary Trip Summary that Mrs. Zinke was with him during the Alaska trip in May. Did she also travel with him to Norway (i.e., the leg of the trip before the events in Alaska)? If so, did DOI pay anything for her travel, lodging or food budget? Or did the Zinke's reimburse DOI her part of the trip out of their private bank accounts?

Mrs. Zinke personally paid for all of her expenses while traveling on the CODEL and in Alaska.

6. For the flights on AF1 to visit the Boy Scout jamboree and the Youngstown POTUS rally, did DOI pay anything toward the flights?

Yes. (I do not have this information immediately available)

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 3:35 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Apart from events with POTUS/VPOTUS, the Secretary took military air once. He was invited by USDA Secretary Sonny Purdue to go to a wildfire camp at a Type 1 fire in Ravalli County Montana in August. The fire claimed the life of one firefighter. It is still burning but 90% contained. The USDA and DOI co-manage wildfire fighting on federal lands. The USDA was the lead on the trip. DOI has not been billed for it.

Three Charter Flights

3/31

Trip: USVI Centennial Transfer Day Ceremony (The 100 year anniversary of the Danish government turning over the Virgin Islands to the United States. DOI has jurisdiction over territories)

Flight Plan: St Croix --> St Thomas --> St Croix

Reason: No commercial flight were available

Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost/staff)

5/17

Trip: CODEL to Norway and Greenland

and

Alaska

Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee organized the Arctic CODEL. The Committee organized and utilized a charter

.
Flight Plan: Deadhorse, AK --> Alpine, AK --> Fairbanks
Reason: Commercial flights were not an option

, please contact SENR for more details about their choice of aircraft

Payment: the Secretary and

1

staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost)

6/26

Las Vegas to Kalispell, MT for the Western Governors Association annual meeting.

The Secretary had

a

speaking engagement in the evening in Nevada and

meetings

in the morning in Montana.

Flight Plan:

8:30PM

Las Vegas -->

1:40AM

Kalispell

Reason: No commercial flight available to get the Secretary and staff to the event on time.

Payment:

$12,375

(

Secretary and

4

staff

)

was

paid out of the DOI budget

.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 2:43 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello all,

Has Secretary Zinke used military aircraft for travel during his time as Interior Secretary, and, if such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? You can exclude travel with the POTUS on Air Force 1.

Also, has Secretary Zinke used charter flights for official travel during his time as Secretary? If such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? I see on his public calendar that only a few flights were explicitly described as commercial flights, a July 30-31 United flight from LAS to IAD, for example. Were any of the trips listed in his public calendar on chartered flights?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre

Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro

Desk: 703-647-8775

Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537

Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com

Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Swift, Heather
To: Ben Lefebvre
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:58:15 PM

Roger. We have not been billed for it to date.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:53 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:
Oh, and USDA told me they're splitting the cost of the military flight with DOI.

Ben Lefebvre
Politico Pro, oil & gas energy reporter
Office: 703-647-8775
Mobile: 313-473-0537
@bjlefebvre

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:38:12 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

I'll have a statement from the ethics office by the end of the night. The lead official is out of state on leave because (b) (6)

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:37 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
roger dodger.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:35 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Web team says redacting is going to be PIA, so they're just putting your quote about it being cleared up higher and removing doc.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:31 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

THANK YOU! I owe you a beer.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:30 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

I just sent word on redacting the info to the production guys.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:27 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Would you be willing to magic marker over the career officials' (Raul Matias and Sherman Hogue) salary and GS levels on the second page of the form? I know it's all publicly releasable information, I just want to release it in the press if it's not necessary

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:24 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

What's up?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:19 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Could I ask a small favor off the record?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:17 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank. Including a link to the doc.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:13 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

FYI - here's the flight approval doc from Nevada

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:54 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

I think tonight.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:53 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

is your piece running tonight or tomorrow?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:50 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

No problem. I know how it is....

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:44 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

ah, sorry. that's my word salad. I haven't talked with the Secretary about personally paying for official government travel.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:41 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

You said: "I have not had the opportunity to discuss that with the Secretary however the trip is fully compliant and approved government travel."

Sorry, that means you haven't had the opportunity to discuss what with the Secretary? Reimbursement? Clearing the flights with ethics department? Sorry – I know it's getting late. Just want to make sure I have things correct.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:25 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Roger. He had multiple official government events and meetings on both sides of the trip. On the front end, an event ending at 7:45PM and on the back end meetings beginning again at 8:30AM. No commercial flights were available which merited the late flight. Of course this was pre-approved by the ethics office. Every single trip the secretary goes on is pre-cleared by career officials in the ethics office. I have not had the opportunity to discuss that with the Secretary however the trip is fully compliant and approved government travel.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:03 PM, Ben Lefebvre

<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Nope, I know they're government travel. But just wanted to know about the use of a chartered jet for government work. Just want to know if he has to reimburse. Tom Price just said he would for the private flights he booked.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:01 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Ben I am getting the sense that you believe these were not official government trips for some reason. Is that what you're getting at?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 5:57 PM, Ben Lefebvre

<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Sorry – the St. Thomas flights, and the flight to the WGA meeting.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 5:48 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Are you asking if the Secretary plans to reimburse DOI for the Secretary's flights for official business?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 5:45 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Does Zinke intend to reimburse DOI for any of the charter flights?

Thank you,

Ben

From: Ben Lefebvre

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:12 PM

To: 'Swift, Heather' <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: RE: question form Politico on Secretary travel

And more follow-up:

When you say Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter, does that mean DOI did not pay for its use? Any idea on cost?

Did Mrs. Zinke attend the Norway leg of the trip? I'm just confused if the Greenland/Norway leg of that trip was an official CODEL, or if the CODEL was just the Alaska bit.

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:03 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Thank you. A few more. Sorry for the dribble dribble on this.

1. The August flight to Ravalli County, that was tied to this August 24 Tweet? (Re: This: <https://twitter.com/Scavino45/status/889679192685780992>)

No, that appears to be a July tweet.

2. What transportation was used for his visit to Basin & Range Monument visit on July 30? (<https://twitter.com/SecretaryZinke/status/891861787234058240>) If military or charter, reasoning and cost?

It was a BLM helicopter. (I don't immediately have the cost information available)

3. Did the Secretary use a military vehicle to review the Organ Mountains monument in New Mexico in June? If so, reasoning and cost?

Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter so the Secretary and Ft Bliss personnel were able to discuss their needs and concerns as related to the monument. Reasoning - it is difficult to survey a half million-acre piece of land with few roads by foot or car in an hour and a half.

4. Did the Secretary use a charter flight to visit Florida in April? If so, reasoning and cost?

The Secretary has not been to Florida.

5. I see on the Secretary Trip Summary that Mrs. Zinke was with him during the Alaska trip in May. Did she also travel with him to Norway (i.e., the leg of the trip before the events in Alaska)? If so, did DOI pay anything for her travel, lodging or food budget? Or did the Zinke's reimburse DOI her part of the trip out of their private bank accounts?

Mrs. Zinke personally paid for all of her expenses while traveling on the CODEL and in Alaska.

6. For the flights on AF1 to visit the Boy Scout jamboree and the Youngstown POTUS rally, did DOI pay anything toward the flights?

Yes. (I do not have this information immediately available)

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 3:35 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Apart from events with POTUS/VPOTUS, the Secretary took military air once. He was invited by USDA Secretary Sonny Purdue to go to a wildfire camp at a Type 1 fire in Ravalli County Montana in August. The fire claimed the life of one firefighter. It is still burning but 90% contained. The USDA and DOI co-manage wildfire fighting on federal lands. The USDA was the lead on the trip. DOI has not been billed for it.

Three Charter Flights

3/31

Trip: USVI Centennial Transfer Day Ceremony (The 100 year anniversary of the Danish government turning over the Virgin Islands to the United States. DOI has jurisdiction over territories)

Flight Plan: St Croix --> St Thomas --> St Croix

Reason: No commercial flight were available

Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost/staff)

5/17

Trip: CODEL to Norway and Greenland

and

Alaska

Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee organized the Arctic CODEL. The Committee organized and utilized a charter

.

Flight Plan: Deadhorse, AK --> Alpine, AK --> Fairbanks

Reason: Commercial flights were not an option

, please contact SENR for more details about their choice of aircraft

Payment: the Secretary and

1

staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost)

6/26

Las Vegas to Kalispell, MT for the Western Governors Association annual meeting.
The Secretary had

a

speaking engagement in the evening in Nevada and meetings

in the morning in Montana.
Flight Plan:

8:30PM

Las Vegas -->

1:40AM

Kalispell

Reason: No commercial flight available to get the Secretary and staff to the event on time.

Payment:

$12,375

(

Secretary and

4

staff

)

was

paid out of the DOI budget

.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 2:43 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello all,

Has Secretary Zinke used military aircraft for travel during his time as Interior Secretary, and, if such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? You can exclude travel with the POTUS on Air Force 1.

Also, has Secretary Zinke used charter flights for official travel during his time as Secretary? If such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? I see on his public calendar that only a few flights were explicitly described as commercial flights, a July 30-31 United flight from LAS to IAD, for example. Were any of the trips listed in his public calendar on chartered flights?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre

Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro

Desk: 703-647-8775

Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537

Proton: bjlefevre@protonmail.com

Twitter: @bjlefevre

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:52:05 PM

Story is going to Web now. I can get the ethics officer statement in a follow-up for tomorrow. Any progress on the costs of the Virgin Island flights or BLM helicopter use?

Ben Lefebvre
Politico Pro, oil & gas energy reporter
Office: 703-647-8775
Mobile: 313-473-0537
@bjlefebvre

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:38:12 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

I'll have a statement from the ethics office by the end of the night. The lead official is out of state on leave because (b) (6).

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:37 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
roger dodger.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:35 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Web team says redacting is going to be PIA, so they're just putting your quote about it being cleared up higher and removing doc.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:31 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

THANK YOU! I owe you a beer.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:30 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

I just sent word on redacting the info to the production guys.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:27 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Would you be willing to magic marker over the career officials' (Raul Matias and Sherman Hogue) salary and GS levels on the second page of the form? I know it's all publicly releasable information, I just want to release it in the press if it's not necessary

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:24 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

What's up?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:19 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Could I ask a small favor off the record?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:17 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank. Including a link to the doc.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:13 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

FYI - here's the flight approval doc from Nevada

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:54 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

I think tonight.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:53 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

is your piece running tonight or tomorrow?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:50 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

No problem. I know how it is....

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:44 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

ah, sorry. that's my word salad. I haven't talked with the Secretary about personally paying for official government travel.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:41 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

You said: "I have not had the opportunity to discuss that with the Secretary however the trip is fully compliant and approved government travel."

Sorry, that means you haven't had the opportunity to discuss what with the Secretary? Reimbursement? Clearing the flights with ethics department? Sorry – I know it's getting late. Just want to make sure I have things correct.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:25 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Roger. He had multiple official government events and meetings on both sides of the trip. On the front end, an event ending at 7:45PM and on the back end meetings beginning again at 8:30AM. No commercial flights were available which merited the late flight. Of course this was pre-approved by the ethics office. Every single trip the secretary goes on is pre-cleared by career officials in the ethics office. I have not had the opportunity to discuss that with the Secretary however the trip is fully compliant and approved government travel.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:03 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Nope, I know they're government travel. But just wanted to know about the use of a chartered jet for government work. Just want to know if he has to reimburse. Tom Price just said he would for the private flights he booked.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:01 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Ben I am getting the sense that you believe these were not official government trips for some reason. Is that what you're getting at?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 5:57 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Sorry – the St. Thomas flighs, and the flight to the WGA meeting.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 5:48 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Are you asking if the Secretary plans to reimburse DOI for the Secretary's flights for official business?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 5:45 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Does Zinke intend to reimburse DOI for any of the charter flights?

Thank you,

Ben

From: Ben Lefebvre

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:12 PM

To: 'Swift, Heather' <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: RE: question form Politico on Secretary travel

And more follow-up:

When you say Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter, does that mean DOI did not pay for its use? Any idea on cost?

Did Mrs. Zinke attend the Norway leg of the trip? I'm just confused if the Greenland/Norway leg of that trip was an official CODEL, or if the CODEL was just the Alaska bit.

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:03 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Thank you. A few more. Sorry for the dribble dribble on this.

1. The August flight to Ravalli County, that was tied to this August 24 Tweet? (Re: This: <https://twitter.com/Scavino45/status/889679192685780992>)

No, that appears to be a July tweet.

2. What transportation was used for his visit to Basin & Range Monument visit on July 30? (<https://twitter.com/SecretaryZinke/status/891861787234058240>) If military or charter, reasoning and cost?

It was a BLM helicopter. (I don't immediately have the cost information available)

3. Did the Secretary use a military vehicle to review the Organ Mountains monument in New Mexico in June? If so, reasoning and cost?

Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter so the Secretary and Ft Bliss personnel were able to discuss their needs and concerns as related to the monument. Reasoning - it is difficult to survey a half million-acre piece of land with few roads by foot or car in an hour and a half.

4. Did the Secretary use a charter flight to visit Florida in April? If so, reasoning and cost?

The Secretary has not been to Florida.

5. I see on the Secretary Trip Summary that Mrs. Zinke was with him during the Alaska trip in May. Did she also travel with him to Norway (i.e., the leg of the trip before the events in Alaska)? If so, did DOI pay anything for her travel, lodging or food budget? Or did the Zinke's reimburse DOI her part of the trip out of their private bank accounts?

Mrs. Zinke personally paid for all of her expenses while traveling on the CODEL and in Alaska.

6. For the flights on AF1 to visit the Boy Scout jamboree and the Youngstown POTUS rally, did DOI pay anything toward the flights?

Yes. (I do not have this information immediately available)

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 3:35 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Apart from events with POTUS/VPOTUS, the Secretary took military air once. He was invited by USDA Secretary Sonny Purdue to go to a wildfire camp at a Type 1 fire in Ravalli County Montana in August. The fire claimed the life of one firefighter. It is still burning but 90% contained. The USDA and DOI co-manage wildfire fighting on federal lands. The USDA was the lead on the trip. DOI has not been billed for it.

Three Charter Flights

3/31

Trip: USVI Centennial Transfer Day Ceremony (The 100 year anniversary of the Danish government turning over the Virgin Islands to the United States. DOI has jurisdiction over territories)

Flight Plan: St Croix --> St Thomas --> St Croix
Reason: No commercial flight were available
Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost/staff)

5/17

Trip: CODEL to Norway and Greenland

and

Alaska

Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee organized the Arctic CODEL. The Committee organized and utilized a charter

.
Flight Plan: Deadhorse, AK --> Alpine, AK --> Fairbanks

Reason: Commercial flights were not an option

, please contact SENR for more details about their choice of aircraft

Payment: the Secretary and

1

staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost)

6/26

Las Vegas to Kalispell, MT for the Western Governors Association annual meeting.

The Secretary had

a

speaking engagement in the evening in Nevada and

meetings

in the morning in Montana.

Flight Plan:

8:30PM

Las Vegas -->

1:40AM

Kalispell

Reason: No commercial flight available to get the Secretary and staff to the event on time.

Payment:

$12,375

(

Secretary and

4

staff

)

was

paid out of the DOI budget

.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 2:43 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello all,

Has Secretary Zinke used military aircraft for travel during his time as Interior Secretary, and, if such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? You can exclude travel with the POTUS on Air Force 1.

Also, has Secretary Zinke used charter flights for official travel during his time as Secretary? If such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? I see on his public calendar that only a few flights were explicitly described as commercial flights, a July 30-31 United flight from LAS to IAD, for example. Were any of the trips listed in his public calendar on chartered flights?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre

Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro

Desk: 703-647-8775

Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537

Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com

Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Heather Swift
To: Ben Lefebvre
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 9:09:17 PM

Ben your description of the events in Montana is off. The Secretary had meetings starting at 8:30AM and then went to WGA. He gave a 45 minute speech then held a press conference. The then had a working lunch with governors.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 28, 2017, at 7:54 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Oh, and USDA told me they're splitting the cost of the military flight with DOI.

Ben Lefebvre
Politico Pro, oil & gas energy reporter
Office: 703-647-8775
Mobile: 313-473-0537
@bjlefebvre

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:38:12 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

I'll have a statement from the ethics office by the end of the night. The lead official is out of state on leave because (b) (6).

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:37 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

roger dodger.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:35 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Web team says redacting is going to be PIA, so they're just putting your quote about it being cleared up higher and removing doc.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:31 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

THANK YOU! I owe you a beer.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:30 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

I just sent word on redacting the info to the production guys.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:27 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Would you be willing to magic marker over the career officials' (Raul Matias and Sherman Hogue) salary and GS levels on the second page of the form? I know it's all publicly releasable information, I just want to release it in the press if it's not necessary

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:24 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

What's up?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:19 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Could I ask a small favor off the record?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 7:17 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank. Including a link to the doc.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:13 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

FYI - here's the flight approval doc from Nevada

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:54 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

I think tonight.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:53 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

is your piece running tonight or tomorrow?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:50 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

No problem. I know how it is....

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:44 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

ah, sorry. that's my word salad. I haven't talked with the Secretary about personally paying for official government travel.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:41 PM, Ben Lefebvre

<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

You said: "I have not had the opportunity to discuss that with the Secretary however the trip is fully compliant and approved government travel."

Sorry, that means you haven't had the opportunity to discuss what with the Secretary? Reimbursement? Clearing the flights with ethics department? Sorry – I know it's getting late. Just want to make sure I have things correct.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:25 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Roger. He had multiple official government events and meetings on both sides of the trip. On the front end, an event ending at 7:45PM and on the back end meetings beginning again at 8:30AM. No commercial flights were available which merited the late flight. Of course this was pre-approved by the ethics office. Every single trip the secretary goes on is pre-cleared by career officials in the ethics office. I have not had the opportunity to discuss that with the Secretary however the trip is fully compliant and approved government travel.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 6:03 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Nope, I know they're government travel. But just wanted to know about the use of a chartered jet for government work. Just want to know if he has to reimburse. Tom Price just said he would for the private flights he booked.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 6:01 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Ben I am getting the sense that you believe these were not official government trips for some reason. Is that what you're getting at?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 5:57 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Sorry – the St. Thomas flights, and the flight to the WGA meeting.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 5:48 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: question from Politico on Secretary travel

Are you asking if the Secretary plans to reimburse DOI for the Secretary's flights for official business?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 5:45 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Does Zinke intend to reimburse DOI for any of the charter flights?

Thank you,

Ben

From: Ben Lefebvre
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:12 PM
To: 'Swift, Heather' <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: RE: question form Politico on Secretary travel

And more follow-up:

When you say Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter, does that mean DOI did not pay for its use? Any idea on cost?

Did Mrs. Zinke attend the Norway leg of the trip? I'm just confused if the Greenland/Norway leg of that trip was an official CODEL, or if the CODEL was just the Alaska bit.

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 4:03 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Thank you. A few more. Sorry for the dribble dribble on this.

1. The August flight to Ravalli County, that was tied to this August 24 Tweet? (Re: This: <https://twitter.com/Scavino45/status/889679192685780992>)

No, that appears to be a July tweet.

2. What transportation was used for his visit to Basin & Range Monument visit on July 30?
(<https://twitter.com/SecretaryZinke/status/891861787234058240>) If military or charter, reasoning and cost?

It was a BLM helicopter. (I don't immediately have the cost information available)

3. Did the Secretary use a military vehicle to review the Organ Mountains monument in New Mexico in June? If so, reasoning and cost?

Fort Bliss supplied a helicopter so the Secretary and Ft Bliss personnel were able to discuss their needs and concerns as related to the monument. Reasoning - it is difficult to survey a half million-acre piece of land with few roads by foot or car in an hour and a half.

4. Did the Secretary use a charter flight to visit Florida in April? If so, reasoning and cost?

The Secretary has not been to Florida.

5. I see on the Secretary Trip Summary that Mrs. Zinke was with him during the Alaska trip in May. Did she also travel with him to Norway (i.e., the leg of the trip before the events in Alaska)? If so, did DOI pay anything for her travel, lodging or food budget? Or did the Zinke's reimburse DOI her part of the trip out of their private bank accounts?

Mrs. Zinke personally paid for all of her expenses while traveling on the CODEL and in Alaska.

6. For the flights on AF1 to visit the Boy Scout jamboree and the Youngstown POTUS rally, did DOI pay anything toward the flights?

Yes. (I do not have this information immediately available)

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, September 28, 2017 3:35 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: question form Politico on Secretary travel

Apart from events with POTUS/VPOTUS, the Secretary took military air once. He was invited by USDA Secretary Sonny Purdue to go to a wildfire camp at a Type 1 fire in Ravalli County Montana in August. The fire claimed the life of one firefighter. It is still burning but 90% contained. The USDA and DOI co-manage wildfire fighting on federal lands. The USDA was the lead on the trip. DOI has not been billed for it.

Three Charter Flights

3/31

Trip: USVI Centennial Transfer Day Ceremony (The 100 year anniversary of the Danish government turning over the Virgin Islands to the United States. DOI has jurisdiction over territories)

Flight Plan: St Croix --> St Thomas --> St Croix

Reason: No commercial flight were available

Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost/staff)

5/17

Trip: CODEL to Norway and Greenland

and

Alaska
Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee organized the Arctic CODEL. The Committee organized and utilized a charter

.
Flight Plan: Deadhorse, AK --> Alpine, AK -->
Fairbanks

Reason: Commercial flights were not an option

, please contact SENR for more details about their choice of aircraft

Payment: the Secretary and

1

staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

(waiting on cost)

6/26

Las Vegas to Kalispell, MT for the Western Governors Association annual meeting.

The Secretary had

a

speaking engagement in the evening in Nevada and

meetings

in the morning in Montana.

Flight Plan:

8:30PM

Las Vegas -->

1:40AM

Kalispell

Reason: No commercial flight available to get the Secretary and staff to the event on time.

Payment:

$12,375

(
Secretary and

4

staff

)

was

paid out of the DOI budget

.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov 1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 2:43 PM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello all,

Has Secretary Zinke used military aircraft for travel during his time as Interior Secretary, and, if such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? You can exclude travel with the POTUS on Air Force 1.

Also, has Secretary Zinke used charter flights for official travel during his time as Secretary? If such travel happened, how much are the trips estimated to have cost? I see on his public calendar that only a few flights were explicitly described as commercial flights, a July 30-31 United flight from LAS to IAD, for example. Were any of the trips listed in his public calendar on chartered flights?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre

Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro

Desk: 703-647-8775

Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537

Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com

Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Swift, Heather
To: Wallace, Gregory
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov; Killough, Ashley
Subject: Re: question from CNN regarding Mrs. Zinke
Date: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 4:46:44 PM

Ooof, I just reread what I wrote and just want to reorganize all those sentences to appear in chronological order, rather than in the crazy order in my head...

The trip was a bipartisan trip organized by the U.S. Senate where several spouses were invited to attend. Mrs. Zinke prolonged her trip because the Senator invited her to participate in the Rolling Thunder ride and ceremony.

DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and the Governor's wife (a key point both Politico and WP left out). The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence.

Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Nov 21, 2017 at 4:44 PM, 'Wallace, Gregory' via Interior Press <interior_press@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thank you, Heather.

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 4:33 PM
To: Wallace, Gregory
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov; Killough, Ashley
Subject: Re: question from CNN regarding Mrs. Zinke

The trip was a bipartisan trip organized by the U.S. Senate where several spouses were invited to attend. DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and the Governor's wife (a key point both Politico and WP left out). The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence. Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska. Additionally, Mrs. Zinke prolonged her trip because the Senator invited her to participate in the Rolling Thunder ride and ceremony.

Further, it's also important to remember that the group launching this nonstory is run by left wing political campaign staffers. They aren't exactly unbiased observers here.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Nov 21, 2017 at 4:25 PM, 'Wallace, Gregory' via Interior Press <interior_press@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Good afternoon, Heather and colleagues,

We're working on a story this afternoon involving the Department scheduling and email documents Western Values Project received.

The story looks at how the Secretary's office coordinated Mrs. Zinke's travel when she accompanied her husband.

Do you have any comment on this, and has the Secretary or Mrs. Zinke reimbursed the government for her travel expenses?

Thank you, Greg

Gregory Wallace

CNN

202-738-3113

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Heather Swift
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: RE: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March
Date: Friday, September 29, 2017 10:15:37 AM

On the Downing stuff? It would have an impact if she's using executive office vehicles to campaign as part of a Senate race, I believe.

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 10:14 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

I'm trying to understand the angle on since she became a volunteer chair and it's impact on the Secretary.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 10:11 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

No accusations - just fact finding. Basically trying to see if any of the secretaries have been misusing taxpayer funds. We're asking all the Secretarial offices these sorts of questions. But we have to be thorough and make sure all the buttons are buttoned, information-wise. I know what my editors will ask so I want have the info to answer them.

Ben Lefebvre
Politico Pro, oil & gas energy reporter
Office: 703-647-8775
Mobile: 313-473-0537
@bjlefebvre

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:50:53 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Can you explain this more? Is there an accusation of wrongdoing?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 9:46 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Ok. Thanks for that. And last one (for now), which will probably come out of the earlier question – did Mrs. Zinke travel with the Secretary on official business at any time since she started working as a campaign chairman for Troy Downing? If so, do you know which trips?

Thank you,
Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:40 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

No she didn't. I'll put a request in for that information

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:37 AM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you. So can you please give me a complete list of trips in which she accompanied the Secretary? If not on the USVI or Nevada flights, does that mean she accompanied him on every other flight?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:35 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Mrs. Zinke has personally footed the bill for any travel she did accompanying her husband. She was not on the USVI or the Nevada flights, helos, or wildfire flight.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:30 AM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you.

Doing a mind-reading of my editors, I guess I should maybe phrase the question this way to save ourselves time: In what official DOI trips, if any, and excluding the CODEL already mentioned, did Mrs. Zinke accompany the Secretary? And if there are other trips where she accompanied him, did she pay her own way, or reimburse DOI for expenses related to her participation? And just for your knowledge, I don't care about her traveling so much. It's more about the money spent.

Thank you,
Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:25 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Still waiting on the cost from OAS. No, Mrs. Zinke was not on the trip.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:22 AM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello,

And just to follow up again, please let me know the cost of the four planes chartered to take the Secretary to/from St. Thomas on the March/April Virgin Islands trip.

One additional question – did Mrs. Zinke accompany the Secretary on that trip? If so, did the Zinkes reimburse DOI for her part of the trip, or pay their own way?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Swift, Heather
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: RE: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March
Date: Wednesday, October 04, 2017 11:15:41 AM

And just to follow up on this , to make sure we have this correct – Mrs. Zinke was not on the flight to USVI. Was she in the USVI at all for the trip? I know the Sec. met with Sen. Murkowski and the Senator’s husband for dinner. Mrs. Zinke was not at the dinner, correct?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:40 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

No she didn't. I'll put a request in for that information

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:37 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you. So can you please give me a complete list of trips in which she accompanied the Secretary? If not on the USVI or Nevada flights, does that mean she accompanied him on every other flight?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:35 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Mrs. Zinke has personally footed the bill for any travel she did accompanying her husband. She was not on the USVI or the Nevada flights, helos, or wildfire flight.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:30 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you.

Doing a mind-reading of my editors, I guess I should maybe phrase the question this way to save ourselves time: In what official DOI trips, if any, and excluding the CODEL already mentioned, did Mrs. Zinke accompany the Secretary? And if there are other trips where she accompanied him, did she pay her own way, or reimburse DOI for expenses related to her participation? And just for your knowledge, I don't care about her traveling so much. It's more about the money spent.

Thank you,
Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:25 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Still waiting on the cost from OAS. No, Mrs. Zinke was not on the trip.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:22 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello,

And just to follow up again, please let me know the cost of the four planes chartered to take the Secretary to/from St. Thomas on the March/April Virgin Islands trip.

One additional question – did Mrs. Zinke accompany the Secretary on that trip? If so, did the Zinkes reimburse DOI for her part of the trip, or pay their own way?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Heather Swift
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: RE: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March
Date: Wednesday, October 04, 2017 11:36:10 AM

Thank you.

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, October 4, 2017 11:18 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Background She was not at USVI

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 4, 2017, at 11:17 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

And just to follow up on this , to make sure we have this correct – Mrs. Zinke was not on the flight to USVI. Was she in the USVI at all for the trip? I know the Sec. met with Sen. Murkowski and the Senator’s husband for dinner. Mrs. Zinke was not at the dinner, correct?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:40 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

No she didn't. I'll put a request in for that information

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:37 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you. So can you please give me a complete list of trips in which she accompanied the Secretary? If not on the USVI or Nevada flights, does that mean she accompanied him on every other flight?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:35 AM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Mrs. Zinke has personally footed the bill for any travel she did accompanying her husband. She was not on the USVI or the Nevada flights, helos, or wildfire flight.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:30 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you.

Doing a mind-reading of my editors, I guess I should maybe phrase the question this way to save ourselves time: In what official DOI trips, if any, and excluding the CODEL already mentioned, did Mrs. Zinke accompany the Secretary? And if there are other trips where she accompanied him, did she pay her own way, or reimburse DOI for expenses related to her participation? And just for your knowledge, I don't care about her traveling so much. It's more about the money spent.

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:25 AM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Still waiting on the cost from OAS. No, Mrs. Zinke was not on the trip.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:22 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello,

And just to follow up again, please let me know the cost of the four planes chartered to take the Secretary to/from St. Thomas on the March/April Virgin Islands trip.

One additional question – did Mrs. Zinke accompany the Secretary on that trip? If so, did the Zinkes reimburse DOI for her part of the trip, or pay their own way?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Heather Swift
To: Ben Lefebvre
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March
Date: Friday, September 29, 2017 10:31:20 AM

Oh that is definitely not happening. Still waiting on the itineraries.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 10:16 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

On the Downing stuff? It would have an impact if she's using executive office vehicles to campaign as part of a Senate race, I believe.

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 10:14 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

I'm trying to understand the angle on since she became a volunteer chair and it's impact on the Secretary.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 10:11 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

No accusations - just fact finding. Basically trying to see if any of the secretaries have been misusing taxpayer funds. We're asking all the Secretarial offices these sorts of questions. But we have to be thorough and make sure all the buttons are buttoned, information-wise. I know what my editors will ask so I want have the info to answer them.

Ben Lefebvre
Politico Pro, oil & gas energy reporter
Office: 703-647-8775
Mobile: 313-473-0537
@bjlefebvre

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:50:53 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Can you explain this more? Is there an accusation of wrongdoing?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 9:46 AM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Ok. Thanks for that. And last one (for now), which will probably come out of the earlier question – did Mrs. Zinke travel with the Secretary on official business at any time since she started working as a campaign chairman for Troy Downing? If so, do you know which trips?

Thank you,
Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:40 AM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

No she didn't. I'll put a request in for that information

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov |
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:37 AM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you. So can you please give me a complete list of trips in which she accompanied the Secretary? If not on the USVI or Nevada flights, does that mean she accompanied him on every other flight?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:35 AM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Mrs. Zinke has personally footed the bill for any travel she did accompanying her husband. She was not on the USVI or the Nevada flights, helos, or wildfire flight.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov 1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:30 AM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you.

Doing a mind-reading of my editors, I guess I should maybe phrase the question this way to save ourselves time: In what official DOI trips, if any, and excluding the CODEL already mentioned, did Mrs. Zinke accompany the Secretary? And if there are other trips where she accompanied him, did she pay her own way, or reimburse DOI for expenses related to her participation? And just for your knowledge, I don't care about her traveling so much. It's more about the money spent.

Thank you,

Ben

From: Swift, Heather

[mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, September 29, 2017 9:25 AM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Cc: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: Question from Politico re: Virgin Islands trip in March

Still waiting on the cost from OAS. No, Mrs. Zinke was not on the trip.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov |
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 9:22 AM, Ben Lefebvre
<blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hello,

And just to follow up again, please let me know the cost of the four planes chartered to take the Secretary to/from St. Thomas on the March/April Virgin Islands trip.

One additional question – did Mrs. Zinke accompany the Secretary on that trip? If so, did the Zinkes reimburse DOI for her part of the trip, or pay their own way?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Heather Swift
To: Ben Lefebvre
Subject: Re: question from Politico
Date: Thursday, December 07, 2017 8:08:26 PM

To more fully respond to your ridiculous line of questioning.

After a congressional hearing, the Secretary attended an official Congressional event with the Congressman from Montana and the Speaker of the House before going to an emergency management briefing. On the other occasion he did an aerial survey of a power line corridor, which was pending before the Department, while traveling back from meetings in southern Virginia in order to get to a meeting with the Vice President. All official government business despite your own opinions.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Dec 7, 2017, at 6:28 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

The swearing in of the Congressman is absolutely an official event, as is emergency management training. Shame on you for not respecting the office of a Member of Congress.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Dec 7, 2017, at 3:46 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Hope you are well. I was glancing at some newly released DOI OS travel documents I received via FOIA. I see that on June 20, Sec. Zinke justified ordering a USPP helicopter to fly him to an 3 p.m. event in West Virginia, with the justification that he had to attend an event in D.C. until 2pm. But the D.C. event was Rep. Gianforte's swearing-in. Does DOI consider that swearing-in official business, especially given that Gianforte and his wife donated to Zinke's Congressional campaigns?

Also, on July 7, Zinke took a USPP helicopter to an event in Yorktown, Va., justifying it by saying he needed to be back in D.C. for a 4 p.m. event. That D.C. event was horseback riding with VP Pence. Again, did DOI consider that official business of the sort that necessitated a ~$6,000 helicopter ride?

I know you already gave us a list of the times Sec. Zinke has used charter flights. Is there a way to get a more complete list of the times he has used government aircraft?

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Heather Swift
Subject: RE: Question from Politico
Date: Friday, November 17, 2017 2:40:55 PM

Did she take a military flight? One of the emails says she had asked about taking one, though not sure whether that request was granted.

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 2:28 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

The trip was not prolonged. The Secretary always planned to stay in Alaska a few days. We had multiple press events that had been planned and actually we sent out the advisory with the events on 5/26. It's on the website.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 2:19 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

On May 28, Caroline Burton wrote:

Mrs. Zinke will now be staying in Alaska postCODEL, a decision she and the Secretary made on the trip. The schedule has been adjusted to reflect that, including now driving from Denali as was originally the plan before the charter flight.

My concern for now is primarily the Monday dinner with the governors office, as paid for by the governors office. The Secretary wants her to join and has said he will personally reimburse them for her meal. I know this is taking place tomorrow and we're not giving you much time so apologies for the short turn around.

Seeing as how the CODEL officially ended May 28, a May 28 email saying Mrs. Zinke will "now" be staying in Alaska and apologies for "the short turn around" seems to make things a bit spur of the moment.

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 2:17 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

Why do you think the trip was "prolonged"?

Heather Swift

Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 2:14 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Hope all is well. We received some FOIA'd emails from Interior re: the Secretary's travel schedule for certain trips. As such, a few questions for you:

1. Did Secretary Zinke reimburse DOI for Lola's meal at the governors meeting in Denali?
2. Was there any reason for Lola to attend that dinner? I know that Interior staff had originally advised against it.
3. When was the May trip to Anchorage planned? From the DOI emails, it seems that the Secretary and Mrs. Zinke added a few days to the trip as of May 26 or 27, so not sure if it was part of the original schedule. If it was tacked on during the last week of May, what was his purpose in prolonging the trip? And when exactly did Mrs. Zinke leave Alaska? It's not noted on the trip schedule. Did DOI pay for the return trip to the lower 48 for either of the parties who prolonged the trip?

Looking for end of day for deadline.

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: Question from Politico
Date: Friday, November 17, 2017 4:17:33 PM

Two more questions (and I apologize for keeping you busy on a Friday afternoon):

1. Any indication who paid for the Nat Geo dinner on April 10th at Hubbard Hall? It was to celebrate the Secretary's appointment.
2. And did Mrs. Zinke accompany her husband to the Safari Club dinner in Alaska on May 31st? She's not listed, but wanted to double check.

Thank you,
Ben

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 3:31 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and his wife. The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence.

It's not accurate to say staff advised against it. Staff simply stated it would need to get it approved by ethics under short notice, which we did.

Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska.

Secretary Zinke flew to Boise, Idaho, to visit the wildland firefighting center. <https://www.doi.gov/mediaadvisories/tomorrow-secretaries-perdue-and-zinke-speak-about-forestry-issues-and-policies-boise>

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Nov 17, 2017 at 2:33 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

I see. The Secretary's plan did not change. How about Lola's stay in Alaska? Burton's email specifically says she adjusted the schedule to reflect that. Did the zinke's reimburse DOI for her prolonged stay? Or did it not happen as per Burton's email? When exactly did Mrs. Zinke leave

Alaska?

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 2:28 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

The trip was not prolonged. The Secretary always planned to stay in Alaska a few days. We had multiple press events that had been planned and actually we sent out the advisory with the events on 5/26. It's on the website.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 2:19 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

On May 28, Caroline Burton wrote:
Mrs. Zinke will now be staying in Alaska postCODEL, a decision she and the Secretary made on the trip. The schedule has been adjusted to reflect that, including now driving from Denali as was originally the plan before the charter flight. My concern for now is primarily the Monday dinner with the governors office, as paid for by the governors office. The Secretary wants her to join and has said he will personally reimburse them for her meal. I know this is taking place tomorrow and we're not giving you much time so apologies for the short turn around.

Seeing as how the CODEL officially ended May 28, a May 28 email saying Mrs. Zinke will "now" be staying in Alaska and apologies for "the short turn around" seems to make things a bit spur of the moment.

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 2:17 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

Why do you think the trip was "prolonged"?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 2:14 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Hope all is well. We received some FOIA'd emails from Interior re: the Secretary's travel schedule for certain trips. As such, a few questions for you:

1. Did Secretary Zinke reimburse DOI for Lola's meal at the governors meeting in Denali?
2. Was there any reason for Lola to attend that dinner? I know that Interior staff had originally advised against it.
3. When was the May trip to Anchorage planned? From the DOI emails, it seems that the Secretary and Mrs. Zinke added a few days to the trip as of May 26 or 27, so not sure if it was part of the original schedule. If it was tacked on during the last week of May, what was his purpose in prolonging the trip? And when exactly did Mrs. Zinke leave Alaska? It's not noted on the trip schedule. Did DOI pay for the return trip to the lower 48 for either of the parties who prolonged the trip?

Looking for end of day for deadline.

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: Question from Politico
Date: Friday, November 17, 2017 3:35:24 PM

Got it. Thanks.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 3:34 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

To be clear: " the Governor and his wife." means the Governor's wife.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Nov 17, 2017 at 3:32 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 3:31 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and his wife. The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence.

It's not accurate to say staff advised against it. Staff simply stated it would need to get it approved by ethics under short notice, which we did.

Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska.

Secretary Zinke flew to Boise, Idaho, to visit the wildland firefighting center. <https://www.doi.gov/mediaadvisories/tomorrow-secretaries-perdue-and-zinke-speak-about-forestry-issues-and-policies-boise>

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Nov 17, 2017 at 2:33 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

I see. The Secretary's plan did not change. How about Lola's stay in Alaska? Burton's email specifically says she adjusted the schedule to reflect that. Did the zinke's reimburse DOI for her prolonged stay? Or did it not happen as per Burton's email? When exactly did Mrs. Zinke leave Alaska?

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 2:28 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: Question from Politico

The trip was not prolonged. The Secretary always planned to stay in Alaska a few days. We had multiple press events that had been planned and actually we sent out the advisory with the events on 5/26. It's on the website.

Heather Swift

Press Secretary

Department of the Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 2:19 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

On May 28, Caroline Burton wrote:

Mrs. Zinke will now be staying in Alaska postCODEL, a decision she and the Secretary made on the trip. The schedule has been adjusted to reflect that, including now driving from Denali as was originally the plan before the charter flight.

My concern for now is primarily the Monday dinner with the governors office, as paid for by the governors office. The Secretary wants her to join and has said he will personally reimburse them for her meal. I know this is taking place tomorrow and we're not giving you much time so apologies for the short turn around.

Seeing as how the CODEL officially ended May 28, a May 28 email saying Mrs. Zinke will "now" be staying in Alaska and apologies for "the short turn around" seems to make things a bit spur of the moment.

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 2:17 PM

To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: Question from Politico

Why do you think the trip was "prolonged"?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 2:14 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,
Hope all is well. We received some FOIA'd emails from Interior re: the Secretary's travel schedule for certain trips. As such, a few questions for you:

1. Did Secretary Zinke reimburse DOI for Lola's meal at the governors meeting in Denali?
2. Was there any reason for Lola to attend that dinner? I know that Interior staff had originally advised against it.
3. When was the May trip to Anchorage planned? From the DOI emails, it seems that the Secretary and Mrs. Zinke added a few days to the trip as of May 26 or 27, so not sure if it was part of the original schedule. If it was tacked on during the last week of May, what was his purpose in prolonging the trip? And when exactly did Mrs. Zinke leave Alaska? It's not noted on the trip schedule. Did DOI pay for the return trip to the lower 48 for either of the parties who prolonged the trip?

Looking for end of day for deadline.

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: Question from Politico
Date: Friday, November 17, 2017 4:20:25 PM

And just a reminder to see if you can address my earlier question of when exactly Mrs. Zinke left Alaska. Did she attend any other events with the Secretary while in the state?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 3:34 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

To be clear: " the Governor and his wife." means the Governor's wife.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Nov 17, 2017 at 3:32 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Thank you.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 3:31 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and his wife. The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence.

It's not accurate to say staff advised against it. Staff simply stated it would need to get it approved by ethics under short notice, which we did.

Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska.

Secretary Zinke flew to Boise, Idaho, to visit the wildland firefighting center. <https://www.doi.gov/mediaadvisories/tomorrow-secretaries-perdue-and-zinke-speak-about-forestry-issues-and-policies-boise>

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Nov 17, 2017 at 2:33 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

I see. The Secretary's plan did not change. How about Lola's stay in Alaska? Burton's email specifically says she adjusted the schedule to reflect that. Did the zinke's reimburse DOI for her prolonged stay? Or did it not happen as per Burton's email? When exactly did Mrs. Zinke leave Alaska?

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 2:28 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>
Subject: Re: Question from Politico

The trip was not prolonged. The Secretary always planned to stay in Alaska a few days. We had multiple press events that had been planned and actually we sent out the advisory with the events on 5/26. It's on the website.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 2:19 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

On May 28, Caroline Burton wrote:

Mrs. Zinke will now be staying in Alaska postCODEL, a decision she and the Secretary made on the trip. The schedule has been adjusted to reflect that, including now driving from Denali as was originally the plan before the charter flight.

My concern for now is primarily the Monday dinner with the governors office, as paid for by the governors office. The Secretary wants her to join and has said he will personally reimburse them for her meal. I know this is taking place tomorrow and we're not giving you much time so apologies for the short turn around.

Seeing as how the CODEL officially ended May 28, a May 28 email saying Mrs. Zinke will "now" be staying in Alaska and apologies for "the short turn around" seems to make things a bit spur of the moment.

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, November 17, 2017 2:17 PM
To: Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com>

Subject: Re: Question from Politico

Why do you think the trip was "prolonged"?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 2:14 PM, Ben Lefebvre <blefebvre@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,
Hope all is well. We received some FOIA'd emails from Interior re: the Secretary's travel schedule for certain trips. As such, a few questions for you:

1. Did Secretary Zinke reimburse DOI for Lola's meal at the governors meeting in Denali?
2. Was there any reason for Lola to attend that dinner? I know that Interior staff had originally advised against it.
3. When was the May trip to Anchorage planned? From the DOI emails, it seems that the Secretary and Mrs. Zinke added a few days to the trip as of May 26 or 27, so not sure if it was part of the original schedule. If it was tacked on during the last week of May, what was his purpose in prolonging the trip? And when exactly did Mrs. Zinke leave Alaska? It's not noted on the trip schedule. Did DOI pay for the return trip to the lower 48 for either of the parties who prolonged the trip?

Looking for end of day for deadline.

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Laura Rigas
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: Question from Politico
Date: Friday, November 17, 2017 3:12:15 PM

And I assume we are talking about the dinner at Cook Hotel?

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 2:08 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

very good points. will do.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Nov 17, 2017 at 3:06 PM, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Could we add “which we did” at the end of the second question, second sentence? Also should we add that the wife of the AK GOV also attended the dinner?

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Nov 17, 2017, at 1:59 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

For Review, from POLITICO -

1. Did Secretary Zinke reimburse DOI for Lola’s meal at the governors meeting in Denal I

DOI did not pay for the meal. The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for the meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence.

1. Was there any reason for Lola to attend that dinner? I know that Interior staff had originally advised against it.

It's not accurate to say staff advised against it. Staff simply stated it would need to get it approved by ethics under short notice.

From: Newell, Russell
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: Question from Politico
Date: Friday, November 17, 2017 5:24:56 PM

when can we use the "We're on to Cincinatti" response with Politico? (ref. Bill Belichick)

:)

Russell Newell
Deputy Director of Communications
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 208-6232
@Interior

On Fri, Nov 17, 2017 at 2:58 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
For Review, from POLITICO -

1. Did Secretary Zinke reimburse DOI for Lola's meal at the governors meeting in Denal
I

DOI did not pay for the meal. The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for the meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence.

1. Was there any reason for Lola to attend that dinner? I know that Interior staff had originally advised against it.

It's not accurate to say staff advised against it. Staff simply stated it would need to get it approved by ethics under short notice.

From: Swift, Heather
To: Rigas, Laura
Subject: Re: Question re National Park Foundation
Date: Wednesday, May 17, 2017 5:20:38 PM

That's what that email meant. He was probably calling about that inquiry from the anti gun blog.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, May 17, 2017 at 5:19 PM, Rigas, Laura <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Ha. Will from the NPS Foundation just called me as a head's up as well. They are going to defer to you on this.

I am fine with confirming. Were there any other appointments?

*Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior*

On Wed, May 17, 2017 at 5:15 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
he may be calling about this

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Dan Friedman <dfriedman@thetrace.org>
Date: Wed, May 17, 2017 at 5:12 PM
Subject: Question re National Park Foundation
To: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Hi. I am a reporter with The Trace, an online publication that cover gun policy matters. I am writing an article on a statement by Susan LaPierre, the head of the NRA Woman's Forum and wife of NRA chief Wayne LaPierre, that Sec. Zinke named her to the board of the National Park Foundation, which raises private funds to support national parks. When does that appointment take effect? Any statement available on this selection. Who else, if anyone, has the secretary named to the board?

Deadline is 10am Thursday.

Thanks.

--

Dan Friedman
Washington Correspondent
The Trace
202.290.5424
dfriedman@thetrace.org

From: Davis, Natalie
To: Swift, Heather
Cc: Lori Mashburn
Subject: Re: Question re National Park Foundation
Date: Wednesday, May 17, 2017 6:58:04 PM

You're welcome. Let us know if you need anything else.

On Wed, May 17, 2017 at 6:44 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Thanks, gals!

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, May 17, 2017 at 6:43 PM, Davis, Natalie <natalie_davis@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
See attached.

On Wed, May 17, 2017 at 6:42 PM, Lori Mashburn <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Hello Heather,

Susan was appointed to NPF on April 27, 2017. We have not appointed (or reappointed) anyone to any other boards. Natalie will share the appointment letter. I don't think NPF has done a public announcement yet.

Lori

Sent from my iPhone

On May 17, 2017, at 5:13 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Question re: LaPierre

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----
From: Dan Friedman <dfriedman@thetrace.org>
Date: Wed, May 17, 2017 at 5:12 PM
Subject: Question re National Park Foundation
To: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Hi. I am a reporter with The Trace, an online publication that cover gun policy matters. I am writing an article on a statement by Susan LaPierre, the head of the NRA Woman's Forum and wife of NRA chief Wayne LaPierre, that Sec. Zinke named her to the board of the National Park Foundation, which raises private funds to support national parks. When does that appointment take effect? Any statement available on this selection. Who else, if anyone, has the secretary named to the board?

Deadline is 10am Thursday.

Thanks.

--

Dan Friedman
Washington Correspondent
The Trace
202.290.5424
dfriedman@thetrace.org

--

Natalie Davis, Special Assistant
Immediate Office of the Secretary
U.S. Department of the Interior
202.208.4928

--

Natalie Davis, Special Assistant
Immediate Office of the Secretary
U.S. Department of the Interior
202.208.4928

From: Thomas Crosson
To: Heather Swift
Cc: Alex Hinson
Subject: RE: questions about Every kid in a park
Date: Monday, June 26, 2017 10:02:34 AM

We'll just take this one if that is ok.

For future EKIP questions, please send them to Kathy Kupper. kathy_kupper@nps.gov

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, June 26, 2017 9:21 AM
To: Thomas Crosson
Cc: Alex Hinson
Subject: Re: questions about Every kid in a park

Yep - do you want us to send directly to that person?

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Jun 26, 2017 at 9:18 AM, Thomas Crosson <Thomas_Crosson@nps.gov> wrote:
You can go head and forward them to us. We have an EKIP-savvy person here in our office who can handle these.

OK with you?

Tom Crosson
Chief of Public Affairs
National Park Service
NEW NUMBER: (202) 513-7260
Visit us at www.nps.gov

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, June 26, 2017 9:15 AM
To: Thomas Crosson; Hinson, Alex
Subject: Fwd: questions about Every kid in a park

Tom - how should Alex respond to these EKIP inquiries?

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----

From: (b) (6) <(b) (6)>
Date: Sun, Jun 25, 2017 at 11:18 PM
Subject: questions about Every kid in a park
To: interior_press@ios.doi.gov

Dear sir or Madam,

My (b) (6) in on June 22, 2017. His school sent home an informational sheet about the "Every kid in a park". According to the information they sent, "This summer you (b) (6) ."

My wife and I are confused according to the information on your web page, we cannot apply for the pass until September 1, whereas our school says go ahead apply for it now (ie. 6/25/2017) and it will be good until 8/31/2018.

What is correct?

Sincerely,

(b) (6)

From: Swift, Heather
To: Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO
Cc: Laura Rigas; Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO
Subject: Re: Questions about Zinke for Congress PAC data
Date: Monday, October 30, 2017 2:28:07 PM

The department cannot comment on political matters.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Oct 30, 2017 at 2:11 PM, Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)> wrote:

How are you handling these PAC questions?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, October 30, 2017 10:43 AM
To: Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>; Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>
Subject: Fwd: Questions about Zinke for Congress PAC data

Brad, inquiry below regarding the campaign PAC.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Esther Whieldon <ewhieldon@politico.com>
Date: Fri, Oct 27, 2017 at 5:56 PM
Subject: Questions about Zinke for Congress PAC data
To: Interior Press <interior_press@ios.doi.gov>, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

I'm looking over some of the Zinke for Congress PAC expenditures. Please answer the following questions.

1) Please address the sale of the RV to Buttrey and whether the PAC sold it to him for less than it's actual value. And please address whether Lola Zinke may have conversely sold the RV to the PAC for more than it was worth.

2) The Zinke for Congress PAC reported a $22K-ish payment to First BankCard and listed the underlying transactions as all happening on December 31.

2a) Please provide the dates that the three expenses listed underneath were actually incurred?

recipient_name	recipient_state	disbursement_description	disbursement_amount	disbursement_date
VONS	CA	CAMPAIGN DINNER	314.36	12/31/2016 0:00
WESTHOUSE	NY	LODGING	696.18	12/31/2016 0:00
LIME INN	Virgin Islands	LODGING	522.74	12/31/2016 0:00

3) The Zinke for Congress PAC reported the receipt of this $13,997.653 transfer on its April Quarterly report, but does not list the individual contributions contained in the transfer-in from Zinke Victory Fund. Why is that?

4) Lastly, please provide a general comment on the extent to which Zinke ensured his campaign PAC followed campaign finance and disclosure laws.

Please respond by 10 am Monday as we plan to run a story at 11 a.m. Apologies for the short notice.

Thanks, Esther

Esther Whieldon

Reporter

POLITICO

301-213-4370 (mobile)

703-672-2788 (office)

ewhieldon@politico.com

Twitter: @esthernow

From: Swift, Heather
To: Nick Juliano
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: questions from politico
Date: Friday, December 08, 2017 2:48:14 PM

Please direct your questions to Mr. Ryan.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Dec 8, 2017 at 7:27 AM, Nick Juliano <njuliano@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather - just reupping this request. Think you'll be able to provide answers today?
Thanks

Nick Juliano
POLITICO
202-557-9390 (mobile)
Sent from my iPhone

On Dec 7, 2017, at 12:32 PM, Nick Juliano <njuliano@politico.com> wrote:

Hi Heather –

I'm hoping you can help confirm some details about a meeting that was listed on Secretary Zinke's August calendar –

<image001.png>

Is that the same Steve Ryan who represented the Zinkes in D.C. Superior Court earlier this year in a lawsuit involving Saint Sophia Greek Orthodox Church? (background here: <https://www.eenews.net/stories/1060058652>)

If so, is he representing the secretary or Lola Zinke in other legal matters?

Is the Jim McCray listed in the description the CEO of Highwood Capital?
<http://www.highwoodcap.com/team.html>

Are Brian Ballard, Susie Wiles and Syl Lukis all from the lobbying firm Ballard Partners?

Did all of the listed participants actually attend the meeting?

What did they discuss?

Please let me know if you could get answers to these by the end of the day today.

Thanks

Nick

Nick Juliano

Deputy Energy Editor

POLITICO

njuliano@politico.com

703-672-2748

202-557-9390

Twitter: @nickjuliano

From: Downey Magallanes
To: Daniel Jorjani
Cc: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: questions
Date: Thursday, October 19, 2017 5:36:04 PM

Good

On Oct 19, 2017, at 5:22 PM, Daniel Jorjani <daniel.jorjani@sol.doi.gov> wrote:

If there is a report/rumor that she is an ombudsman or has some other official role, that report/rumor is false. Your statement is correct.

Sent from my iPhone

On Oct 19, 2017, at 2:08 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Please see the press inquiry below this email.

Proposed statement: "Mrs. Zinke has zero role at the Department."

Background: Much like previous secretaries and spouses, she occasionally meets her husband while he is traveling and pays for her meals and travel at her own personal expense. She and all cabinet spouses received a federal ethics briefing.

I also talked to him about a number of other issues off the record.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Good afternoon:

I am writing a story about Mrs. Zinke, dealing with her role in politics (the Downing campaign), in public commentary (Twitter) and her support for the secretary.

(Parenthetical note: I understand there was a previous E&E story proposed, that never ran. This is not that story; I am a different reporter.)

A couple of questions:

Is Mrs. Zinke available for interview?

How would you characterize her role at the department?

On what occasions will she travel with the secretary?

Does she have work space at the department?

Has she received ethics briefing?

I appreciate the help. My deadline is Friday at 11 a.m.

Thanks.

Mike

Michael Doyle

Reporter

mdoyle@eenews.net

202-446-0467 x467

@MichaelDoyle10

E&E NEWS

122 C Street NW 7th Floor Washington, DC 20001

www.eenews.net | @EENewsUpdates

Energywire, Climatewire, Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM

From: Michael Doyle
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: questions
Date: Friday, October 20, 2017 11:08:35 AM

OK, thanks.

Statement attributed to you?

Background attributed to Interior official?

I'll call at 11:30 or so, if you're free.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, October 20, 2017 11:05 AM
To: Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: questions

statement: "Mrs. Zinke has zero role at the Department."

Background: Much like previous secretaries and spouses, she occasionally meets her husband while he is traveling at her own personal expense. She and all cabinet spouses received a federal ethics briefing.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Oct 19, 2017 at 1:01 PM, Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net> wrote:

Good afternoon:

I am writing a story about Mrs. Zinke, dealing with her role in politics (the Downing campaign), in public commentary (Twitter) and her support for the secretary.

(Parenthetical note: I understand there was a previous E&E story proposed, that never ran. This is not that story; I am a different reporter.)

A couple of questions:

Is Mrs. Zinke available for interview?
How would you characterize her role at the department?
On what occasions will she travel with the secretary?
Does she have work space at the department?
Has she received ethics briefing?

I appreciate the help. My deadline is Friday at 11 a.m.

Thanks.

Mike

Michael Doyle

Reporter

mdoyle@eenews.net

202-446-0467 x467

@MichaelDoyle10

E&E NEWS

122 C Street NW 7th Floor Washington, DC 20001

www.eenews.net | @EENewsUpdates

Energywire, Climatewire, Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM

From: Michael Doyle
To: Heather Swift
Subject: RE: questions
Date: Friday, October 20, 2017 12:39:43 PM

Thanks.

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, October 20, 2017 12:39 PM
To: Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: questions

Thanks for the readout

Yep to spox

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 20, 2017, at 12:15 PM, Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net> wrote:

Swift move!

I'll say: you guys will have absolutely no reason to be concerned with story. It's basically a profile, with material from his book, stuff about Twitter and campaign, mentions FOIA lawsuit...all pretty routine.

On the background quote, can we attribute to Interior 'spokesperson' rather than 'official?'

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Friday, October 20, 2017 11:54 AM
To: Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: questions

Ugh No. I'm getting bandaged up after taking a tumble into a hedge row. I'm not kidding.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 20, 2017, at 11:35 AM, Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net> wrote:

You free now?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, October 20, 2017 11:05 AM

To: Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net>

Subject: Re: questions

statement: "Mrs. Zinke has zero role at the Department."

Background: Much like previous secretaries and spouses, she occasionally meets her husband while he is traveling at her own personal expense. She and all cabinet spouses received a federal ethics briefing.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Oct 19, 2017 at 1:01 PM, Michael Doyle

<mdoyle@eenews.net> wrote:

Good afternoon:

I am writing a story about Mrs. Zinke, dealing with her role in politics (the Downing campaign), in public commentary (Twitter) and her support for the secretary.

(Parenthetical note: I understand there was a previous E&E story proposed, that never ran. This is not that story; I am a different reporter.)

A couple of questions:

Is Mrs. Zinke available for interview?

How would you characterize her role at the department?

On what occasions will she travel with the secretary?

Does she have work space at the department?

Has she received ethics briefing?

I appreciate the help. My deadline is Friday at 11 a.m.

Thanks.

Mike

Michael Doyle

Reporter

mdoyle@eenews.net

202-446-0467 x467

@MichaelDoyle10

E&E NEWS

122 C Street NW 7th Floor Washington, DC 20001

www.eenews.net | @EENewsUpdates

Energywire, Climatewire, Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM

From: MacGregor, Katharine
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: Recent Articles
Date: Monday, June 05, 2017 7:33:57 PM

Hmmm...we can work with this.

On Mon, Jun 5, 2017 at 6:55 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Recent, topical articles from the reporter, Nathaniel Herz, are bulleted and copy/pasted below.

- Interior secretary vows to reinvigorate Alaska oil industry
- Here's the infrastructure wish list that Alaska Gov. Walker sent to President Trump
- Anchorage mayor vows to reduce greenhouse gas emissions after Trump's Paris pullout

Interior secretary vows to reinvigorate Alaska oil industry

President Donald Trump's interior secretary, Ryan Zinke, drew cheers from some industrial-minded Alaskans on Wednesday when he pledged to pave the way for new development on the North Slope and reinvigorate the state's oil industry.

"The only path for energy dominance is a path through the great state of Alaska," Zinke told the audience at an Anchorage conference hosted by the state's major oil industry group, the Alaska Oil and Gas Association.

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke takes questions Tuesday in Anchorage. Sen. Lisa Murkowski, Sen. Dan Sullivan and Rep. Don Young listen at right. (Marc Lester / Alaska Dispatch News)

"The president has declared — and thank you Donald J. Trump — that the war on North American energy is now over," Zinke added, equating "energy" and oil.

Flanked by politicians and hard-hat-wearing union members, Zinke signed a secretarial order at the end of his speech aimed at boosting production in the National Petroleum Reserve-Alaska and at updating estimates of the amount of oil beneath the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

Alaska politicians welcomed the move, calling it a reversal of Obama-era policies of the past eight years that Republican U.S. Sen. Lisa Murkowski described as an effort to "close it all off."

"Now, finally, we have an administration that will listen to us — that will work with us to ensure that we can safely produce our resources," Murkowski said.

But some industry players interviewed at the conference were more tempered in their reaction, saying the federal government is limited in the amount of power it can exert over global market forces that have crashed the price of oil, caused thousands of job losses in Alaska and blown a massive hole in the state's budget.

"The market determines what we can pull the trigger on," said Dave Norton, an engineer and co-owner of Anchorage-based Hawk Consultants, which manages oil and gas projects. "Fracking in Texas is so cheap to do, why would anybody want to come up here?"

Zinke is a retired U.S. Navy SEAL who said Wednesday that he had spent time on the Aleutian islands of Adak and Shemya. His wife also has Alaska credentials, having once worked at the Lucky Wishbone restaurant, though Zinke did slip up once Wednesday, referring to the North Slope as the "North Shore."

His pledge to make the oil industry great again, at the Dena'ina Civic and Convention Center downtown at the tail end of a nearly weeklong trip through the state, was his first major public address in Alaska. It came before an enthusiastic audience of state and federal lawmakers, staffers and oil industry executives who had often clashed with the Obama administration and its efforts to fight global warming by limiting the production of Earth-warming greenhouse gases — the byproducts of fossil fuels.

"Our economy's an oil economy," said Anchorage Republican state Rep. Chris Birch, who said the conference was like "going to church on Sunday."

"You get up, you get out kind of refreshed," he said.

Zinke's pledge to revitalize the state's oil industry came as Trump prepared to announce Thursday whether he would abandon the landmark Paris climate deal reached in 2015 under Obama — with initial reports claiming he would.

The Paris agreement calls for the United States to make about one-fifth of the globe's emissions reductions through 2030.

Obama used Alaska as a backdrop for his push for the climate deal, describing global warming as a looming crisis for the state and the world in his own speech in Anchorage in 2015 and declaring that "any so-called leader who does not take this issue seriously or treats it like a joke is not fit to lead."

Zinke didn't mention global warming in his speech. He told reporters at a news conference afterward that he thinks the climate is changing. But he said he hadn't read the Paris agreement and argued that there's a lot about climate change that's not understood.

"What can we do about it? What is the influence? That is unsettled," he said, contradicting the latest U.N. scientific report that said it's "extremely likely" that human influence has been the dominant cause of warming in the past half-century.

About 20 people protested Zinke's appearance both inside and outside the convention center, with one, Rachel Cella, 40, saying that she wanted to hear more plans to help move the state's economy away from oil.

"Obviously we're not going to just shutter the oil fields," she said while holding a handmade sign that said "there are no jobs on a dead planet." She added: "We need to acknowledge what's happening and acknowledge that we can't bury our heads in the sand anymore and think that the oil industry is coming back in Alaska. They're not accepting change and the reality that this is a shifting planet."

Zinke argued that boosting Alaska energy production would create economic opportunities, and he pointed out that he didn't hear any objections to development at a Tuesday round-table meeting with Alaska Native leaders.

[New interior secretary says he's ready to share federal management duties with Alaska Natives]

Zinke's new order gives his agency three weeks to create a new schedule for review and revision of an Obama-era plan for the Indiana-sized petroleum reserve, on the North Slope. It also directs his agency to create a plan within three weeks for "updating current assessments of the undiscovered, technically recoverable oil and natural gas resources" on the North Slope, with a focus on the petroleum reserve and the coastal plain of the wildlife refuge.

The Obama administration plan for the petroleum reserve, finished in 2013, made about half of the area unavailable for leasing, in a move that could preclude development of as many as 350 million barrels of oil, according to the order.

While Zinke and Alaska politicians described the Obama administration as hostile to oil development on the North Slope, one former top Interior Department official, David Hayes, said that the existing plan for the petroleum reserve was in part shaped by oil industry interest — or lack of it.

"They turned back many of their leases. So the notion that the Obama administration stood in the way of developing responsible oil and gas on the east side of the NPR-A is belied by the facts," said Hayes, a former deputy interior secretary under Obama who's now a lecturer at Stanford Law School. "The economics are challenging up there for companies. It's much cheaper to get shale oil in North Dakota than it is on the North Slope. It's that simple."

But since the 2013 adoption of the plan, oil industry interest in the petroleum reserve and nearby state land has surged following recent announcements of major discoveries by companies like Repsol, Armstrong and ConocoPhillips. And officials with Gov. Bill Walker's administration now describe the area as red-hot.

"Suddenly, now, we have a body of information that suggests geologically, and based on well results and seismic (testing), that wait a minute, we've been missing something," said Andy Mack, the natural resources commissioner. "Now there are these huge, economic discoveries and it's pretty prolific. It's exciting for Alaska."

Here's the infrastructure wish list that Alaska Gov. Walker sent to President Trump

Alaska Gov. Bill Walker has sent President Donald Trump a wish list of projects for inclusion in a potential federal infrastructure package — roads, ports, assistance for the state's gas pipeline project and cash to relocate rural villages threatened by climate change.

Walker sent the seven-item list to Trump and Mick Mulvaney, Trump's budget director, on May 15. That was two weeks before Trump said he would pull out of the Paris accord on climate change, a move followed by a muted statement from Walker on the announcement.

The letters and list were obtained through a public records request to Walker's office.

Walker's seven requests are:

- An expedited state-federal land exchange to hurry construction of the road between King Cove and Cold Bay through the Izembek National Wildlife Refuge, on the Alaska Peninsula — a proposal rejected by former President Barack Obama's administration.
- $124 million to help relocate the erosion-threatened Southwest Alaska village of Newtok. The village is disappearing as sea levels rise and land sinks, though Walker doesn't mention climate change in his letter to Trump, who has claimed that global warming is a hoax.
- Federal loan guarantees, faster environmental permitting and investment for AKLNG, the proposed $43 billion natural gas pipeline and liquefied natural gas export project that would run from Alaska's North Slope to the Kenai Peninsula.
- Permits, planning assistance and cash or low-interest loans for a proposed new road project that would run through the National Petroleum Reserve-Alaska on the North Slope. The road, at a cost of $300 million or more, would run from Utqiagvik, the town formerly known as Barrow, to the village of Nuiqsut.
- $125 million to finish the stalled rail extension to Port MacKenzie, across the Knik Arm from Anchorage.
- Money or low-interest loans to help rebuild the aging Port of Anchorage, as well as a resolution to Anchorage's long-running lawsuit against the federal Maritime Administration, or MARAD, over bungled work on the project.
- Construction of a naval base and expansion of Coast Guard operations in Alaska — an effort that Walker's administration predicts could ultimately cost as much as $30 billion just for the first phase. Walker's current request is for a defense department report assessing "future security requirements" for Arctic ports, as well as "timely designation of one or more strategic Arctic ports in Alaska."

Walker's letter to Mulvaney ends with what Walker calls three "additional areas of need in Alaska": basic sewer and water infrastructure, since 3,300 rural Alaska homes lack flush toilets and running water; assistance for relocating Kivalina, Shaktoolik and Shishmaref, three more erosion-threatened coastal villages; and support for enhanced broadband internet across the state.

Trump touted his plans for a $1 trillion infrastructure package while campaigning, but has yet to lay out a concrete proposal.

He's expected to give a speech Wednesday as part of an "infrastructure week" in which he'll lay out broad plans for more state, city and corporate spending on infrastructure — instead of cash from the federal government, The New York Times reported Saturday.

Walker said in his letter to Mulvaney that he expects to send more lists with additional energy, transportation and municipal projects "in the coming months." Walker has already solicited ideas for additional proposals from local officials across the state, distributing a letter that asks for nominations.

Anchorage mayor vows to reduce greenhouse gas emissions after Trump's Paris pullout

Anchorage Mayor Ethan Berkowitz is promising to maintain efforts to lower greenhouse gas emissions following President Donald Trump's decision to pull the United States out of the Paris climate deal, while some advocates question why Alaska Gov. Bill Walker hasn't approached the issue more energetically.

"We'll continue to address climate change," Berkowitz said in a phone interview Friday, a day after Trump's announcement. "And we're doing it because it is a part of looking out for the future of the local economy and it's about making sure we're good stewards of the place we live."

A group of American cities and states has quickly coalesced around upholding the Paris emissions targets despite Trump's announcement, with former New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg coordinating an effort to submit a pledge by the group to the United Nations.

Anchorage hasn't developed a comprehensive analysis of its emissions or outlined formal targets for reductions, steps taken by dozens of other major cities around the country and world. And Berkowitz didn't commit to formally joining the group of mayors, governors and businesses coordinated by Bloomberg.

But the city has commissioned just such an emissions analysis from an Anchorage firm, DeerStone Consulting, and expects its results within weeks. Berkowitz also pointed to ongoing efforts that should help reduce greenhouse gas pollution.

The city has replaced thousands of streetlights with more energy-efficient LED bulbs, and the municipal utility just opened a new natural gas power plant that emits 30 percent less carbon dioxide to generate the same amount of electricity as legacy plants.

Berkowitz, a Democrat in an officially nonpartisan office, framed the issue in economic terms rather than political ones, pointing to endorsements of the Paris agreement by oil companies like BP, ConocoPhillips and ExxonMobil — along with climate change's disproportionate impact in northern latitudes, with the Arctic warming twice as fast as the rest of the world.

Global warming threatens Anchorage with higher fire danger, infestations of invasive species and road damage from more freeze-thaw cycles, Berkowitz said.

"This is common sense about making sure that we show leadership in an area where we're disproportionately impacted," Berkowitz said. "These are business decisions."

Berkowitz's pledge came as Walker faces growing pressure from environmental advocates and Democratic legislators for more aggressive state action on climate change.

The governor issued a statement Thursday that neither endorsed nor denounced Trump's proposal, saying that in spite of the withdrawal, "Alaska will continue to work to boost national defense and security measures for our 6,640 miles of Alaskan coastline, increase resilience for Arctic communities and provide energy leadership for the nation."

Both Republicans and Democrats said Walker's reaction was perplexing, with one GOP writer, Suzanne Downing, calling it "mystifying" and saying it was a "tortured statement that signifies nothing."

Addressing climate change was a central state policy a decade ago. Former Gov. Sarah Palin created a subcabinet and working groups to develop a climate change strategy, while the Legislature established its own commission to assess impacts of global warming.

But Palin's efforts stalled as her political aspirations rose, and climate change ceased to be a priority of her successor, Republican Sean Parnell.

"You had industry representatives as well as conservation organizations — the whole hierarchy of government sitting down together and talking through issues. It kind of went dead in the water," said Bruce Botelho, the former attorney general, who sat on a climate advisory group.

Walker is a Republican-turned-independent who aligned himself with Democrats to defeat Parnell, raising the hopes of Alaskans who support more aggressive action on climate change. Advocates point to erosion that threatens coastal villages, ocean acidification that could hurt Alaska fisheries and thawing permafrost that could damage state infrastructure.

Administration officials have said they're considering reviving the climate subcabinet. And Walker, at his State of the State speech in January, said officials were developing a "framework" to respond to global warming and to "maintain the integrity of our lands, air and water for future generations."

But no such framework has been announced, and neither has any action emerged on the subcabinet, frustrating some who wanted to see more decisive moves.

"We've been frustrated at the pace of change," said Bob Shavelson, head of the Homer-based environmental group Cook Inletkeeper.

"The governor says the right things," he added. "But we need to back it up. We can't simply continue to put the blinders on and pretend that we can continue to be an oil and gas state forever."

The Walker administration plans to advance its global warming initiative once this year's legislative session is over, with the potential to issue an administrative order, said Claire Richardson, chief of staff to Lt. Gov. Byron Mallott, a Democrat who's played a major role in developing the climate strategy.

"A lot of things have been put on the back burner as we face the fiscal crisis," Richardson said. "You're going to see more focus on this once we get through the legislative session."

Walker's administration, in a partnership with research program Alaska Sea Grant, just hired a new fellow, Danielle Meeker, who's finishing a master's degree in climate science this month, Richardson said. Her yearlong fellowship in the governor's office will include work on global warming.

The Legislature, however, remains divided over how to tackle climate change.

Members of the largely Democratic House majority coalition are proposing legislation to create a response commission bankrolled by a penny-per-barrel tax on oil that flows through the trans-Alaska pipeline, since oil is a fossil fuel and its burning contributes to global warming.

But members of the Republican-led Senate majority oppose the bill, with North Pole Republican Sen. John Coghill panning the effort as an "anti-development agenda" that attacks "the very industry that fuels our economy."

That same schism persists among some of the politicians eyed as potential replacements for Walker.

Wasilla Republican Sen. Mike Dunleavy, who's considering a run for governor next year, said he doesn't think the state can make more than a minuscule impact on the global climate.

"We don't have emissions. I think it's a moot issue for Alaska — it's 780,000 people spread over a subcontinent," Dunleavy said in a phone interview. "If Anchorage thinks it will make people feel better, emotionally, to change out light bulbs and stuff, then more power to them."

If the city tries to adhere to the Paris accord, Dunleavy argued, it would benefit the Mat-Su, his home region, "because people will move there and businesses will move there."

Former U.S. Sen. Mark Begich, a Democrat viewed by state GOP leaders as another potential gubernatorial candidate, argued that adaptation to global warming's threat could boost the state's economy, and that ignoring it risks missing out on new jobs.

Alaska could be a test site for alternative fuels for military planes and wind power could lessen the state's dependence on fossil fuels, Begich said. New research projects could study the impact of global warming on fish and wildlife populations.

The state, Begich added, should be a "center for excellence and innovation when it comes to climate change."

"The governor and the Legislature should be on this thing without a second thought," he said. "Unless I missed something, I haven't seen much. I think there's a void there."

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

--

Kate MacGregor
1849 C ST NW
Room 6625
Washington DC 20240

202-208-3671 (Direct)

From: Scott Hommel
To: Heather Swift
Cc: Laura Rigas@ios.doi.gov; downey_magallanes@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Remarks by President Trump on Antiquities Act Designations
Date: Tuesday, December 05, 2017 12:25:42 AM

Pretty awesome!

Scott C. Hommel
Chief of Staff
Department of the Interior

On Dec 5, 2017, at 12:05 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Boss' shoutout today in POTUS speech.

And I have to say, really -- talk about a very special guy that I made Secretary of the Interior. Does he know the interior. He's knows it, he loves it. He loves seeing it and riding on it. Ryan Zinke, who truly believes in protecting America -- he is protecting America. And nobody loves it more. Ryan. (Applause.) Thank you. Just as he protected America as an officer of the legendary Seal Team Six. He's a tough cookie and you've done a great job. Thank you, Ryan.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

Begin forwarded message:

From: White House Press Office <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>
Date: December 4, 2017 at 1:34:14 PM MST
To: <interior_press@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Remarks by President Trump on Antiquities Act Designations
Reply-To: <whitehouse-noreply@messages.whitehouse.gov>

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

December 4, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
ON ANTIQUITIES ACT DESIGNATIONS

Utah State Capitol
Salt Lake City, Utah

12:20 P.M. MST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you to a very special man, Orrin Hatch, for the introduction. And that was truly a nice introduction and I appreciate it.

You are a true fighter, Orrin. And I have to say, I've gotten to know him very well. I've gotten to know a lot of people very well. You meet fighters and you meet people that you thought were fighters but they're not so good at fighting. He's a fighter. We hope you will continue to serve your state and your country in the Senate for a very long time to come. (Applause.)

I want to especially thank you for the tremendous work in ushering massive tax cuts and reform through the Senate. Just happened, and we have a final step to go. And I predict we're going to be very successful. We're talking about massive, massive tax cuts. (Applause.) It's tax cuts and reform, but I always mention tax cuts first because that's what people like to hear.

We're now one huge step closer to delivering to the American people the historic tax relief as a giant present for Christmas. Remember I said we're bringing Christmas back? Christmas is back, bigger and better than ever before. We're bringing Christmas back. (Applause.) And we say it now with pride. Let me just say, to those here today and all across the country: Merry Christmas to everybody. (Applause.) And also, happy holidays and a great New Year. We're going to have a great, great year.

Joining us at this ceremony are many other tremendous leaders from Utah, including your great senator, Mike Lee. Where's Mike? Mike, come! Come here, Mike. Get up here, Mike. (Applause.) He worked along with Orrin and the rest of them. We got it done. Mike, thank you very much. (Applause.)

You want to say something?

SENATOR LEE: It's not every day the President of the United States asks you to take the microphone from him. But I want to say, Mr. President, thank you for your leadership. Thank you for being here. Thank you for standing with the people of Utah. We appreciate it deeply. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you, Mike.

I also want to recognize your fantastic representatives who are with us -- Rob Bishop, John Curtis, Chris Stewart, and Mia Love. Thank you all. You're here. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.

And I have to say, really -- talk about a very special guy that I made Secretary of the Interior. Does he know the interior. He's knows it, he loves it. He loves seeing it and riding on it. Ryan Zinke, who truly believes in protecting America -- he is protecting America. And nobody loves it more. Ryan. (Applause.) Thank you. Just as he protected America as an officer of the legendary Seal Team Six. He's a tough cookie and you've done a great job. Thank you, Ryan.

Governor Gary Herbert. Where is Gary? Come on Gary. Come on, Gary. Get over there, Gary. So they can -- (applause) -- and you're your wife, the First Lady, is fantastic. Thank you very much. First Lady. Thank you, First Lady.

Attorney General Sean Reyes. Sean, thank you. (Applause.) Thank you. An original supporter of mine. You know, you always remember those original supporters. Greg Hughes. Greg, thank you. (Applause.) He was an original right at the beginning. Thank you, Greg. He had a feeling.

Finally, I want to recognize the members of the local Utah Navajo. Thank you very much. (Applause.) Thank you very much. Thank you very much. Really appreciate it. We're profoundly honored by your presence here today, and I'm thrilled to be here with so many wonderful friends, so many people that saw something a little special and they said, we're with him, and I'm really working hard to put it back. And that's what we're doing today. This magnificent capitol, in your incredible state. And it is special people in a special state. Thank you very much for being here.

I've just come from touring Welfare Square with Senator Hatch and some amazing people from the leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints. (Applause.) Special. I spent a lot of time with them. In fact, I went around the store, I wanted a nice can of tuna fish -- (laughter) -- and they had plenty. They really help people. Incredible.

After our visit, I can truly say firsthand that Utah's awesome natural beauty is exceeded only by the warmth and grace and hospitality of its citizens. This state has many natural treasures, but its greatest treasure by far is its people. (Applause.) And we will ensure the right of the people to live according to the faith in their hearts, which is why we will always protect your religious liberty. (Applause.) And we've been doing that.

I know all of you feel blessed to be living among some of the most glorious natural wonders anywhere in the world. You cherish Utah's gleaming rivers and sweeping valleys. You take inspiration from its majestic peaks. And when you look upon its many winding canyons and glowing vistas, you marvel at the beauty of God's great creation. (Applause.)

And that is why I'm here today: Because some people think that the natural resources of Utah should be controlled by a small handful of very distant bureaucrats located in Washington. And guess what? They're wrong.

The families and communities of Utah know and love this land the best, and you know the best how to take care of your land. You know how to protect it, and you know best how to conserve this land for many, many generations to come.

Your timeless bond with the outdoors should not be replaced with the whims of regulators thousands and thousands of miles away. They don't know your land, and truly, they don't care for your land like you do. (Applause). But from now on, that won't matter. I've come to Utah to take a very historic action to reverse federal overreach and restore the rights of this land to your citizens. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.

But before I began -- because I understood how big it is -- I'm a real estate developer. When they start talking about millions of acres, I say, say it again? That's a lot. So, before I began, I met with Senator Orrin Hatch, who loves Utah and loves the people of Utah. I called Senator Mike Lee, who loves Utah and loves the people of Utah. I called your governor. I called my original -- where is he? There he is. I called all of the friends that I have in Utah. I said, what do you think? I said, will this be good for our country, and will it be good for your state? They said this would be incredible for our country, will be incredible for Utah. Finally, you would be giving people back their access to the land they know, to the land they understand, and most importantly, to the land that they love.

I also said, will it be at all controversial? They all told me no. (Laughter.) How did that happen? I don't think it is controversial, actually. I think it's so sensible.

Therefore, today, on the recommendation of Secretary Zinke, and with the wise counsel of Senator Hatch, Senator Lee, and the many others, I will sign two presidential proclamations. These actions will modify the national monuments designations of both Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante. (Applause.)

As many of you know, past administrations have severely abused the purpose, spirit, and intent of a century-old law known as the Antiquities Act. This law requires that only the smallest necessary area be set aside for special protection as national monuments. Unfortunately, previous administrations have ignored the standard and used the law to lock up hundreds of millions of acres of land and water under strict government control.

These abuses of the Antiquities Act give enormous power to faraway bureaucrats at the expense of the people who actually live here, work here, and make this place their home. This is where they raise their children. This is the place they love.

For example, the previous administration designated more than a half a billion acres of land and water, including Bears Ears. It did so over the loud objections of the people of this state and their elected representatives. Governor -- right?

The results have been very sad and very predictable. Here, and in other affected states, we have seen harmful and unnecessary restrictions on hunting, ranching, and responsible economic development. We have seen grazing restrictions prevent ranching families from passing their businesses and beloved heritage on to the children -- the children that they love.

We've seen many rural families stopped from enjoying their outdoor activities. And the fact they've done it all their lives made no difference to the bureaucrats in Washington.

We have seen needed improvements, like infrastructure upgrades and road maintenance, impeded and foreclosed. We have seen how this tragic federal overreach prevents many Native Americans from having their rightful voice over the sacred land where they practice their most important ancestral and religious traditions. (Applause.)

These abuses of the Antiquities Act have not just threatened your local economies; they've threatened your very way of life. They've threatened your hearts.

Our precious national treasures must be protected. And they, from now on, will be protected. (Applause.) Under my administration, we will advance that protection through a truly representative process, one that listens to the local communities that knows the land the best and that cherishes the land the most. (Applause.)

With the action I'm taking today, we will not only give back your voice over the use of this land, we will also restore your access and your enjoyment. Public lands will once again be for public use -- (applause) -- because we know that people who are free to use their land and enjoy their land are the people most determined to conserve their land.

One values the splendor of Utah more than -- I'll tell you what, there's nobody out there. I just came in, and I'm looking around with Orrin and with Mike and with the governor and with everybody, and I'm just saying, what a beautiful picture it is. But no one values the splendor of Utah more than you do, and no one knows better how to use it.

With your help in treating our natural bounty with respect, gratitude, and love, we will put our nation's treasures to great and wonderful use. Families will hike and hunt on land they have known for generations, and they will preserve it for generations to come. Cattle will graze along the open range. Sweeping landscapes will inspire young Americans to dream beyond the horizon. And the world will stand in awe of the artistry God has worked right here in your great state.

Together, we will usher in a bright new future of wonder and wealth, liberty and law, and patriotism and pride all across this great land.

Thank you to the wonderful people of Utah. May God bless you and may God bless America. Thank you very much. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you very much. Thank you. (Applause.)

And in your honor, I will now, with your representatives, sign this very, very important proclamation. Thank you very much, everyone. Thank you. (Applause.)

(The proclamation is signed.)

END

12:37 P.M. MST

Unsubscribe

The White House 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW Washington DC 20500 202-456-1111

From: Laura Rigas
To: Heather Swift
Subject: Re: Retraction - false editorial
Date: Saturday, November 25, 2017 9:09:02 PM

Yup. Thx. Any response from her?

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Nov 25, 2017, at 11:34 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

I was so annoyed when I read this last night. I BCCed you on it since it's Boston and you may get calls about it from friends and family.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Nov 25, 2017, at 8:25 AM, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thx!!

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Nov 24, 2017, at 11:43 PM, Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hello Marjorie - Please allow me to introduce myself to you and your team as I have not yet have the pleasure of being contacted by anyone over there. I'm Heather, the press secretary at Interior. I saw your recent editorial about Secretary Zinke and am requesting a full retraction on the grounds of multiple inaccuracies.

1. The headline and the thrust of the story is patently false. The enhancement finding by USFWS had zero impact on ivory and the import of elephant tusks. That is still illegal.

2. There was no "cleaned house"

3. The Obama Administration Interior Secretaries spent about a million dollars on charter aircraft

4. Mrs. Zinke did not cause "headaches for department staffers"

5. Zinke has zero ties to the company Whitefish Energy and had nothing to do with the contract - that contract was awarded by the state run utility in Puerto Rico. (Which is led by a democrat governor) In fact, the Secretary invited a full investigation into the matter.

6. At no point did the President distance himself from Zinke. In fact, he tweeted a statement that he and the secretary talked about the USFWS decision, referencing Zinke by name.

7. Again, ivory is excluded from the enhancement finding which means tusks cannot be imported.

8. Poaching is very different from legal hunting. Only individuals who have extensive paperwork to prove the hunt was legal and within all applicable regulations are able to apply for an import permit.

9. There was no "ban" on importing elephant trophies during the Obama years. The import was being reviewed while the enhancement finding was being processed. Trophies from other African nations were still permitted such as Namibia and South Africa.

10. Lastly, and I truly cannot stress this enough, there is a major difference between hunting and poaching and under no circumstances should the two terms be used interchangeably as they are in this opinion piece.

In the future, I'm happy to answer any questions you and your team have before you write. Many many many editorial page writers reach out to me before they write and find the information helpful.

Please let me know when the article is retracted.

Warmest regards,

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

From: Heather Swift
To: Vincent Devito
Cc: laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Revised
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 8:13:43 PM

Nice. Thanks, Vincent!

Sent from my iPhone

On May 30, 2017, at 8:08 PM, Vincent Devito <vincent_devito@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thank you, XXXXXX, for that introduction.

I love Alaska. My wife Lola and I actually both have ties. Her dad worked up here while she was growing up and I did quite a bit of training while I was in the military.

And, as I say to my friend Senator Murkowski, Montana and Alaska aren't all that different...both states have a robust outdoor culture and a frontier outlook and we're both blessed with abundant energy resources.

Speaking of, some of you may know that my path to Interior Secretary was a little different than most. I hadn't spent much time in Washington, D.C., or served as a career politician. Instead, I served in the military, just like 10 percent of all Alaskans. Your state and mine have highest percentage of veterans. We should be proud of that.

So during my Navy years, in addition to getting up to Alaska to train, I also spent a lot of time in the Middle East on oil platforms. Though it was a little different than what you all did. I was mostly keeping bad guys off of them.

I'm pleased to be with the thousands of forward-looking and hard-working men and women of the Alaska energy industry.

In my view, energy is important for three reasons.

First, it's better for the environment that the U.S. produces energy. Thanks to advancements in technology, we can responsibly develop our energy resources and return the land to equal or better quality than it was before.

I've spent a lot of time overseas, and I can tell you with 100 percent certainty it is better to develop our energy here under reasonable regulations, than have it produced overseas under little or no regulations.

Second, energy production is an absolute boon to the economy, supporting more than 9 million jobs and supplying affordable power for manufacturing, home heating, and transportation needs. And I can tell you, it's going to take a whole lot of energy to rebuild America's aging infrastructure.

And lastly, achieving American energy independence will strengthen our national security by reducing our reliance on foreign oil and allowing us to assist our allies with their energy needs.

As a military commander, I saw how the power of the American economy and American energy defeated our adversaries around the world. The world is safer when American is strong.

I am an unabashed supporter of Teddy Roosevelt whose views about America's holdings are best inscribed on the Roosevelt Arch at Yellowstone National Park – “for the benefit and enjoyment of the people.”

Contrary to what some believe, being a good steward of our land and resources does not mean locking it up and banning public access. Teddy Roosevelt himself said that, "Conservation means development as much as it does protection.”

Yet during the previous administration, nearly 94 percent of the Outer Continental Shelf was off limits for responsible development. And about half of the National Petroleum Reserve-Alaska was out too.

As of March 1, 2017, only 16 million acres in the OCS (out of a total 1.7 billion acres) are under lease for oil and gas development. Of the little area that is open to development, more than 97 percent of the leases are in the Gulf of Mexico.

Offshore leasing revenues have been the second highest source of revenue to the Treasury behind personal income taxes paid. In 2008 the U.S. Treasury collected nearly $18 billion in federal OCS leasing revenues.

Yet by contrast, last year in 2016, leasing revenues collected fell to only $2.8 billion.

That's a drop of more than $15 billion that would otherwise partially go toward funding important conservation programs like the Land and Water Conservation Fund, Infrastructure, and our parks.

That's in part why President Trump and I got to work to rewrite the Five-Year Plan and get more people back to work on rigs, platforms, and other onshore oil and gas jobs.

I recognize that not all areas are appropriate for energy development, but many places provide the perfect opportunity to balance energy and conservation priorities. Thanks to new developments in science and technology, it is possible to responsibly develop American energy resources while being good stewards of the environment.

There is no debate that the federal government should regulate energy production within its borders and that the taxpayer should get fair value for the resources extracted. But when regulation becomes a punitive tool of political advocacy rather than public interest, there needs to be a change of course.

President Trump's America First Offshore Energy Executive Order began that course correction. That order directed me to conduct a review of the current five year offshore development plan for the Outer Continental Shelf, streamline permitting for seismic research and reconsider a host regulations hampering development.

The President and I are committed to energy dominance and his executive order was a decisive step in common sense energy policy for the benefit of the American people.

I then took immediate action to implement the President's offshore energy policy by signing two Secretarial Orders.

Those orders are meant

- to enhance opportunities for energy exploration, leasing, and development on the Outer Continental Shelf;
- establish regulatory certainty for OCS activities; and
- promote conservation stewardship, by providing jobs, energy security, and revenue for the American people.

The first order directed the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management to immediately initiate development of a new "Five Year Outer Continental Shelf Oil and Gas Leasing Program,” with full consideration given to leasing the OCS offshore Alaska, the mid- and south-Atlantic, and the Gulf of Mexico. It also directs expedited consideration of appealed, new, or resubmitted seismic permitting applications for the Atlantic and the review or rescission of other regulations outlined in the President’s executive order.

Just a few weeks ago,

Vincent DeVito was appointed by to serve as the department's counselor for energy policy to strengthen and better coordinate the department's vast energy portfolio. Also, I recently appointed Scott Angelle the new Director of the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement and he will work with our energy team to promote safety, protect the environment and conserve resources through the regulatory oversight and enforcement of energy industry operations on the U.S. Outer Continental Shelf.

These are a series of continuing actions at the Department. For instance, we also have a focus on changing punitive regulations. A good example is our work regarding the new flaring regulations. After they were not repealed under the Congressional Review Act, we immediately went to work to assist production and workers. As a result, we Are planning to issue notice to adjust compliance deadlines of the federal regulations governing flaring and gas leaks on public lands, and we will propose to revise or withdraw certain regulations that are not needed to prevent waste.

Today, I am announcing additional steps in our common sense energy policy for the benefit of the American people.

Today, I am signing a third Secretarial Order that will jump-start Alaskan energy production in the National Petroleum Reserve – Alaska and update resource assessments for the "10-0-2 area" of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

The order calls for the development of a revised Integrated Activity Plan for the National Petroleum Reserve that strikes an appropriate statutory balance for promoting development while protecting surface resources.

It also calls for an evaluation, under the existing Integrated Activity Plan, of ways to efficiently and effectively maximize the tracts offered for sale during the next National Petroleum Reserve lease sale.

The order also directs the offices of Land and Minerals Management and Water and Science to submit a joint plan to the Counselor to the Secretary for Energy Policy for updating assessments of undiscovered, technically recoverable oil and natural gas resources on Alaska's North Slope, focusing on Federal lands that include the National Petroleum Reserve and the Section 1002 Area of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

This joint plan shall include consideration of new geological and geophysical data, as well as the potential for reprocessing existing geological and geophysical data.

I'm a geologist. Science is a wonderful thing – it helps us understand what is going on deep below the surface of the earth. We need to use science to update our understanding of the 1002 area of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge as Congress considers important legislation to responsibly develop there one day. This order takes the important first step in a smart and measured approach to energy development in ANWR.

Regarding the National Petroleum Reserve, this land was set up with the sole intention of oil and gas production and serves a critical role in both our energy and national security. However, years of policy politics put roughly half of the National Petroleum Reserve off-limits.

Using this land for its original intent will create good paying jobs and revenue for our Northern-most city and strengthen our energy and national security.

Working with the Alaska Native community, Interior will identify areas in the National Petroleum Reserve where responsible energy development makes the most sense and devise a plan to extract resources.

We will do it in a way that respects both the environment and traditional uses of the land and maintains subsistence hunting and fishing access.

Let me close by saying that for all the needed changes we are making to the previous administration's energy policies, one thing does not change -- and that is our commitment to safety and our environment.

That remains our priority.

Nothing in the Secretarial Order I am signing today would reduce, eliminate, or modify any environmental or regulatory requirements for energy development.

We have thousands of talented and dedicated employees working on our frontlines who are focused on the safe and responsible development of our nation's energy resources.

We are going to keep it that way and we will hold companies accountable. Good stewardship of our lands and waters and maintaining U.S. energy dominance are not mutually exclusive.

Thanks very much for the opportunity to be here today. I'll now sign this order with you.

###

From: Heather Swift
To: Elinor Renner
Subject: Re: Scheduling Lincoln Tours
Date: Tuesday, December 19, 2017 7:51:32 AM

Got it!!

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Dec 18, 2017, at 10:33 PM, Elinor Renner <elinor_renner@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hi Heather,

We're doing separate tours for non Politicals on Tuesday at 3:45-4:30 and 4:30-5:15. I had Mike on the 4:30 tour. I'm happy to add his wife then!

Warmly,
Elinor

Sent from my iPhone

On Dec 18, 2017, at 7:38 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Z invited reporter mike Coleman and his wife tomorrow. They will go to the 2:15.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Dec 18, 2017, at 5:39 PM, Renner, Elinor
<elinor_renner@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Good Evening Everyone,

As Scott mentioned in the Politicals Meeting a few weeks ago, the Secretary has offered to give everyone a special tour of the Lincoln Memorial. These tours are closed to the public and can only be accessed by the Secretary of the Interior. This includes a guided tour of the basement, where you can view graffiti from workers who helped to build the Memorial and the stalagmites and stalactites throughout the underground, and the fantastic view of Washington from the rooftop.

The Secretary will be leading tours this Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday during the times below:

1. Tuesday from 2:15-3:00
2. Tuesday from 3:00-3:45
3. Wednesday from 5:30-6:15
4. Thursday from 3:45-4:30
5. Thursday from 5:15-6:00
6. Thursday from 6:00-6:45

Each political may bring one guest. Please email me your preferred tour time slot and if you will be bringing a plus one. I will email you back to confirm your tour time and give you the information on where to meet.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Warmly,
Elinor

--

Elinor Renner
U.S. Department of the Interior
Immediate Office of the Secretary
Special Assistant to the Secretary
Washington, DC 20240
202-208-6087

From: Hudson, Hope R. EOP/WHO
To: Swift, Heather
Cc: Laura Rigas
Subject: RE: Sec. Zinke GQ
Date: Thursday, May 25, 2017 2:13:30 PM

Terrific

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, May 25, 2017 12:39 PM
To: Hudson, Hope R. EOP/WHO (b) (6) >
Cc: Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke GQ

(b) (5)

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, May 25, 2017 at 12:25 PM, Hudson, Hope R. EOP/WHO

(b) (6) > wrote:

This is so helpful. Thank you! (b) (5)

Thanks!

Sent from my iPhone

On May 25, 2017, at 11:29 AM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hi Renee, thanks for the call. Below are some topline messaging on the Secretary and his bio. Let me know if there's anything else you need.

TOPLINE

- Secretary Ryan Zinke is a fifth-generation Montanan and a 23-year veteran of the U.S. Navy SEALs
 - Zinke is a guy that the average American connects with. He's a veteran, comes from a blue collar family (three generations of plumbers), and like the President is incredibly close with his wife and adult children.

- Zinke is a total work horse whose leadership at Interior has been bold and decisive.
 - Zinke has signed a number of Secretarial orders to implement the President's American Energy First agenda.
 - Zinke is a hands-on leader who does extensive travel to the places impacted by his Department, like his four-day trip to Utah to conduct a review of the national monuments under the President's executive order.

- He is well-liked and well-respected by his colleagues in the cabinet and in the White House.
 - Zinke is always willing to go the extra mile and collaborate on projects

Secretary Ryan Zinke Bio

Ryan Zinke was sworn in as the 52nd Secretary of the Interior on March 1, 2017.

A fifth-generation Montanan and former U.S. Navy SEAL Commander, Ryan Zinke built one of the strongest track records in the 114th Congress on championing sportsmen's access, conservation, regulatory relief, forest management, responsible energy development, and smart management of federal lands.

“As a former Navy SEAL, Ryan has incredible leadership skills and an attitude of doing whatever it takes to win,” President Donald Trump said in nominating the former congressman, who built an impressive portfolio on Interior issues ranging from federal mineral leases to tribal affairs to public lands conservation.

Growing up in a logging and rail town near Glacier National Park, Ryan has had a lifelong appreciation for conserving America's natural beauty while honoring Teddy Roosevelt's vision of multiple-use on our public lands. He has consistently led the efforts to renew the Land and Water Conservation Fund in Congress, and has also been a firm advocate for our nation's sportsmen to gain access to our public lands with the SCORE Act and SHARE Act. Zinke also coauthored the Resilient Federal Forest Act, which initiated new reforms for revitalizing America's timber towns and preventing wildfires by emphasizing the collaborative process.

Zinke is widely praised for his voting record supporting the Teddy Roosevelt philosophy of managing public lands, which calls for multiple-use to include economic, recreation and conservation. He has pledged to explore every possibility for safely and responsibly repealing bad regulations and using public natural resources to create jobs and wealth for the American people.

“I am honored and humbled to serve Montana and America as Secretary of the Interior,” Zinke said. “I shall faithfully uphold Teddy Roosevelt's belief that our treasured public lands are ‘for the benefit and enjoyment of the people’. I will work tirelessly to ensure our public lands are managed and preserved in a way that benefits everyone for generations to come. Most importantly, our sovereign Indian Nations and territories must have the respect and freedom they deserve. I look forward to making the Department of the Interior and America great again.”

As Secretary of the Interior, Zinke leads an agency with more than 70,000 employees who are stewards for 20 percent of the nation’s lands, including national parks, monuments, wildlife refuges and other public lands. The department oversees the responsible development of conventional and renewable energy supplies on public lands and waters; is the largest supplier and manager of water in the 17 Western states; and upholds trust responsibilities to the 567 federally recognized American Indian tribes and Alaska Natives.

Ryan Zinke represented the state of Montana in the U.S. House of Representatives since 2014. Before that he served in the Montana State Senate from 2009 to 2011, but the bulk of his public service was 23 years as a U.S. Navy SEAL officer.

Zinke enlisted in the Navy in 1985 and was soon selected to join the elite force where he would build an honorable career until his retirement in 2008. He retired with the rank of Commander after leading SEAL operations across the globe, including as the Deputy and Acting Commander of Joint Special Forces in Iraq and two tours at SEAL Team Six. Zinke was the first Navy SEAL elected to the U.S. House and is the first SEAL to serve as a cabinet secretary.

Zinke holds a Geology degree from the University of Oregon, where he was an All-PAC 10 football player; a Master’s degree in Business Finance from National University; and a Master’s degree in Global Leadership from the University of San Diego. Ryan and his wife Lolita (Lola) have three children and two granddaughters. Zinke is proud to be an adopted member of the Assiniboine Sioux Tribe at the Fort Peck Reservation in Northeast Montana.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Altman, Travis
To: Heather Swift
Cc: russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov; raul_matias@ios.doi.gov
Subject: RE: Sec. Zinke in studio with Lou
Date: Monday, September 11, 2017 3:16:45 PM

Thanks so much, this is very helpful!

-----Original Message-----

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 3:15 PM
To: Altman, Travis
Cc: russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov; (b) (6), (b) (7)(C)
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke in studio with Lou

Hi Travis, it's a better approach to look at what action the entire federal government is taking for USVI relief. Interior is responsible for coordinating federal policy for the territories, but the disaster relief efforts are really a holistic operation. Those efforts include HHS medical teams, US Coast Guard search and rescue and port rebuilding, Department of Energy power restoration, and humanitarian aid from DoD.

Specifically within the Interior Department we have extra law enforcement officers keeping the peace, conducting search and rescue and evacuations, and a quick reaction team. We have scientists monitoring flood waters. And the crews from National Park Service and other bureaus assessing infrastructure damage.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

> On Sep 11, 2017, at 2:52 PM, Altman, Travis <Travis.Altman@foxnews.com> wrote:

>

> Hi Heather, thanks again for helping us out! Lou is curious to know what elements of the Department of Interior are most directly involved in the hurricane relief effort, would you be able to help me get that information?

> -Travis

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
> Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 1:23 PM
> To: McCarton, Anne
> Cc: russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov; (b) (6), (b) (7)(C); Altman,
> Travis; Leo, Chelsea
> Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke in studio with Lou

>

> Great!

>

> Arriving with the Secretary:

> Lola Zinke

> heather swift

> (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (armed personal protection detail) (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (armed > personal protection detail

>

> Heather Swift

> Press Secretary

> Department of the Interior

>

>
>> On Sep 11, 2017, at 1:20 PM, McCarton, Anne <Anne.McCarton@foxnews.com> wrote:
>>
>> Introducing you here to Travis who will produce the segment. And feel free to send the list of attendees my way!
>>
>> Thank you Heather. I look forward to meeting you.
>>
>> I am also ccing our Guest Greeter Chelsea should anyone need to arrive early or need to do a walk through etc.
>>
>>
>>

>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
>> Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 12:46 PM
>> To: McCarton, Anne <Anne.McCarton@FOXNEWS.COM>
>> Cc: russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov; raul_matias@ios.doi.gov
>> Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke in studio with Lou

>>
>> Oh wonderful! Yes 7:05 hit with 6:30 arrival is perfect.
>>
>> I'm just CCing my colleagues who are on the Secretary's personal protection detail for their awareness.
>>
>> Heather Swift
>> Press Secretary
>> Department of the Interior
>>
>>

>>> On Sep 11, 2017, at 12:17 PM, McCarton, Anne <Anne.McCarton@foxnews.com> wrote:
>>>
>>> Hello Heather:

>>>
>>> Could he possibly join us at 705p. This would be terrific.
>>>
>>>
>>>

>>> Sent from my iPhone
>>>

>>>> On Sep 10, 2017, at 2:11 PM, "heather_swift@ios.doi.gov" <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
>>>>

>>>> Hi Anne. Heather Swift here from Secretary Zinke's office. The >>>> secretary will be in New York tomorrow and would like to join Lou >>>> in studio if possible. Topics included 9/11 ceremony he is >>>> attending in Shanksville with the vice president earlier in the day >>>> and hurricane Irma.

>>>>
>>>> Thanks for your consideration.
>>>>

>>>> Heather Swift
>>>> Press Secretary
>>>> Department of the Interior
>>>>

>>>> This message and its attachments may contain legally privileged or confidential information. It is intended solely for the named addressee. If you are not the addressee indicated in this message (or responsible for delivery of the message to the addressee), you may not copy or deliver this message or its attachments to anyone. Rather, you should permanently delete this message and its attachments and kindly notify the sender by reply e-mail. Any content of this message and its attachments that does not relate to the official business of Fox News or Fox Business must not be taken to have been sent or endorsed by either of them. No representation is made that this email or its attachments are without defect.

>>>

From: Leo, Chelsea
To: Heather Swift
Cc: McCarton, Anne
Subject: RE: Sec. Zinke in studio with Lou
Date: Monday, September 11, 2017 1:30:33 PM

Thank you for sending this over, Heather. I will check Zinke's team into security and escort them to the studio upon arrival. If there's any changes, please let me know!

Chelsea Leo

Guest Greeter
Fox Business Network
631.903.9780

-----Original Message-----

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 1:23 PM
To: McCarton, Anne <Anne.McCarton@FOXNEWS.COM>
Cc: russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov; (b) (6), (b) (7)(C); Altman, Travis <Travis.Altman@FOXNEWS.COM>;
Leo, Chelsea <chelsea.leo@FOXBUSINESS.COM>
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke in studio with Lou

Great!

Arriving with the Secretary:
Lola Zinke
heather swift
(b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (armed personal protection detail)
(b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (armed personal protection detail)

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

> On Sep 11, 2017, at 1:20 PM, McCarton, Anne <Anne.McCarton@foxnews.com> wrote:
>
> Introducing you here to Travis who will produce the segment. And feel free to send the list of attendees my way!
>
> Thank you Heather. I look forward to meeting you.
>
> I am also ccing our Guest Greeter Chelsea should anyone need to arrive early or need to do a walk through etc.
>
>
>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
> Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 12:46 PM
> To: McCarton, Anne <Anne.McCarton@FOXNEWS.COM>
> Cc: russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov; raul_matias@ios.doi.gov
> Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke in studio with Lou
>
> Oh wonderful! Yes 7:05 hit with 6:30 arrival is perfect.
>

> I'm just CCing my colleagues who are on the Secretary's personal protection detail for their awareness.

>

> Heather Swift

> Press Secretary

> Department of the Interior

>

>

>> On Sep 11, 2017, at 12:17 PM, McCarton, Anne <Anne.McCarton@foxnews.com> wrote:

>>

>> Hello Heather:

>>

>> Could he possibly join us at 705p. This would be terrific.

>>

>>

>>

>> Sent from my iPhone

>>

>>> On Sep 10, 2017, at 2:11 PM, "heather_swift@ios.doi.gov" <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

>>>

>>> Hi Anne. Heather Swift here from Secretary Zinke's office. The secretary will be in New York tomorrow and would like to join Lou in studio if possible. Topics included 9/11 ceremony he is attending in Shanksville with the vice president earlier in the day and hurricane Irma.

>>>

>>> Thanks for your consideration.

>>>

>>> Heather Swift

>>> Press Secretary

>>> Department of the Interior

>>

>> This message and its attachments may contain legally privileged or confidential information. It is intended solely for the named addressee. If you are not the addressee indicated in this message (or responsible for delivery of the message to the addressee), you may not copy or deliver this message or its attachments to anyone. Rather, you should permanently delete this message and its attachments and kindly notify the sender by reply e-mail. Any content of this message and its attachments that does not relate to the official business of Fox News or Fox Business must not be taken to have been sent or endorsed by either of them. No representation is made that this email or its attachments are without defect.

>>

From: Heather Swift
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke
Date: Monday, September 11, 2017 7:44:58 AM

Thanks. They should have LE plates but I'll ask

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 7:29 AM, Rivera, Anthony <Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Thank you. I actually don't know how the parking works around here. I can ask my boss to see if they can do anything for you.

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 6:31:55 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Armed law enforcement officers going in the building will be (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (advance), (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) and (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) will be escorting the Secretary.

If possible can you assist us with parking spots for three vehicles?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 10, 2017, at 9:51 AM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Good Morning Heather,

I hope you are having a great weekend. I received word that we will be in studio 3 for our pre tape which is good news. Is it possible to give me the names of the security detail coming in. I don't know if the building security is just going to let them up. They get a little stern even if a name maybe misspelled.

Anyways I have the topics/questions that David would like to talk about with Sec. Zinke:

- Responsibilities of the Dept. of the Interior when it comes to Harvey recovery and post Hurricane Harvey.

- What is the department of the interior doing to update and reform its operations to be a more effective agency?

- What are some of the more key points of interaction with individual states?

- Are there regional strategies based on geographical area not just state borders?

These are the main questions David has. He will be thinking of others but for now these are the most important. Thank you Heather!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017 1:30:03 PM

To: Rivera, Anthony

Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Ryan Zinke
Lola Zinke
Heather Swift
+2 Security detail

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017 at 1:24 PM, Rivera, Anthony

<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Actually if we could get on a quick call and work out the logistics that would be better than the email. You can call one of my numbers or just send me your number and I could call you.

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera

Producer – David Webb Show

SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125

Office: (212) 901-6403

Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017 1:12:44 PM

To: Rivera, Anthony

Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Oh that would work! He is available Tuesday in the 1PM hour.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017 at 1:09 PM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

What time are you looking for. Maybe we could do a pretape?

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017 12:52:47 PM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Shoot, I'm sorry, Anthony. I thought the show went later. Unfortunately the Secretary won't be able to join after all. I will be in touch though and let you know when he's available for call ins in the future.

Again, my apologies for the mistake.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017 at 12:43 PM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Hello Heather,

Just making sure you got my last email. If we can get Sec. Zinke locked in today for next week that would be awesome. Let me know, thanks!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017 11:18:18 AM

To: Rivera, Anthony

Subject: Sec. Zinke

Hi there, Anthony. Secretary Zinke will be in NYC next week and would like to come on David's show. What's your availability like Monday-Wednesday?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Heather Swift
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke
Date: Monday, September 11, 2017 10:39:19 AM

His email address is (b) (6), (b) (7)(C)

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 10:27 AM, Rivera, Anthony <Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Ok great. Just let them know I will be available from 12-2pm today so hopefully they can make it then. Thank for your help!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 9:51:06 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

I do not. I'll remind them to call you.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:40 AM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Great. I just put them in the system. Do you know what time they will be getting in today for the check in?

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 9:37:08 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Armed law enforcement officers going in the building will be [REDACTED], [REDACTED], (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) and (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) [REDACTED]

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:35 AM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

And Security for today?

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 7:29:16 AM

To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

He will arrive around 12:50. We have a hard stop at 1:30 because he has Willow at 1:40

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 7:21 AM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Please also let me know what time they will be coming in. I will be doing a show from 9am-12 pm ET. Will be free from 12pm-2pm ET.

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 6:31:55 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Armed law enforcement officers going in the building will be (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (advance), (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) and (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) will be escorting the Secretary.

If possible can you assist us with parking spots for three vehicles?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 10, 2017, at 9:51 AM, Rivera,
Anthony <Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Good Morning Heather,

I hope you are having a great weekend. I received word that we will be in studio 3 for our pre tape which is good news. Is it possible to give me the names of the security detail coming in. I don't know if the building security is just going to let them up. They get a little stern even if a name maybe misspelled.

Anyways I have the topics/questions that David would like to talk about with Sec. Zinke:

- Responsibilities of the Dept. of the Interior when it comes to Harvey recovery and post Hurricane Harvey.

-What is the department of the interior doing to update and reform its operations to be a more effective agency?

-What are some of the more key points of interaction with individual states?

- Are there regional strategies based on geographical area not just state borders?

These are the main questions David has. He will be thinking of others but for now these are the most important. Thank you Heather!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb
Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017
1:30:03 PM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Ryan Zinke
Lola Zinke
Heather Swift
+2 Security detail

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov 1
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017 at 1:24 PM,
Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Actually if we could get on a quick call and work out the logistics that would be better than the email. You can call one of my numbers or just send me your number and I could call you.

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb
Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017
1:12:44 PM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Oh that would work! He is available Tuesday in the 1PM hour.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov 1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017 at 1:09 PM, Rivera, Anthony <Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>

wrote:

What time are you looking for. Maybe we could do a pretape?

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017 12:52:47 PM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Shoot, I'm sorry, Anthony. I thought the show went later. Unfortunately the Secretary won't be able to join after all. I will be in touch though and let you know when he's available for call ins in the future.

Again, my apologies for the mistake.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov

1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017 at 12:43 PM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>

wrote:

Hello Heather,

Just making sure you got my last email. If we can get Sec. Zinke locked in today for next week that would be awesome. Let me know, thanks!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David
Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch.
125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday, September 8,
2017 11:18:18 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Sec. Zinke

Hi there, Anthony.

Secretary Zinke will be in NYC next week and would like to come on David's show. What's your availability like Monday-Wednesday?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov

1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: (b) (6), (b) (7)(C)
To: Heather Swift
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke
Date: Monday, September 11, 2017 10:31:55 AM

FYI

I called Rivera twice - left him a message I have not heard back from him. Do you have an different POC?

Sent from my iPhone

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:55 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thanks :)

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:54 AM, (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) <(b) (6), (b) (7)(C)> wrote:

Ok. I left a msg with Rivera yesterday and never heard back from him or the security at that site. I'll call him in a few.

Sent from my iPhone

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:52 AM, Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

The radio guy is wondering if you can call or email him and let him know what time you expect to walk through today.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 10, 2017, at 11:55 PM, Roddy, Russell
<russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hey, Heather...please see below from (b) (6), (b) (7)(C)
per names and request for parking.

----- Forwarded message -----

From: <(b) (6), (b) (7)(C) y>
Date: Sun, Sep 10, 2017 at 12:37 PM
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke
To: "Roddy, Russell"
<russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov>

Armed law enforcement officers going in the building will be (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (advance), (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) and (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) will be escorting the Secretary.

If possible can they assist us with parking spots for three vehicles?

Thanks

Raul

Sent from my iPhone

On Sep 10, 2017, at 12:00 PM, Roddy, Russell <russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

----- Forwarded message ---

From: Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Date: Sun, Sep 10, 2017 at 11:55 AM
Subject: Fwd: Sec. Zinke
To: russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov,
mark_asmussen@nps.gov

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Rivera, Anthony"
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>

Date: September

10, 2017 at 9:50:50
AM EDT
To: "Swift,
Heather"
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Subject: Re: Sec.
Zinke

Good Morning
Heather,

I hope you are having a great weekend. I received word that we will be in studio
3 for our pre tape
which is good news. Is it possible to give me the names of the
security detail
coming in. I don't know if the building
security is just going to let them
up. They get a little stern even if a name maybe misspelled.

Anyways I have the topics/questions
that David would like to talk about
with Sec. Zinke:

- Responsibilites of the Dept. of the Interior when it comes to Harvey recovery and post Hurricane Harvey.

-What is the department of the interior doing to update and reform its operations to be a more effective agency?

-What are some of the more key points of interaction with individual states?

- Are there regional strategies based on geographical area not just state borders?

These are the main questions David has. He will be thinking of others but for now these are the most important. Thank you Heather!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David
Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot
Ch. 125

Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461
<OutlookEmoji-1503940572888_SiriusXM.jpg>

From: Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday,
September 8, 2017
1:30:03 PM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec.
Zinke

Ryan Zinke
Lola Zinke
Heather Swift
+2 Security detail

-

Heather Swift
Department of the
Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov
1
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017
at 1:24 PM, Rivera,
Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Actually if we could get on a quick call and
work out the logistics that would be better

than the email.
You can call one
of my numbers or
just send me your number and I
could call you.

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer –
David Webb
Show
SiriusXM Patriot
Ch. 125
Office: (212)
901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461
<OutlookEmoji-1503940572888_
SiriusXM.jpg>

From: Swift,
Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday,
September 8,
2017 1:12:44 PM

To: Rivera,
Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec.
Zinke

Oh that would work! He is available
Tuesday in the 1PM hour.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the
Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov
1
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8,
2017 at 1:09 PM,
Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

What time are
you looking for.
Maybe we could do a pretape?

Kind Regards,

Anthony
Rivera
Producer –
David Webb
Show
SiriusXM
Patriot Ch.
125
Office: (212)
901-6403
Cell: (347)
753-3461
<OutlookEmoji-1503940572888_
SiriusXM.jpg>

From: Swift,
Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday,
September 8,
2017 12:52:47

PM

To: Rivera,
Anthony

Subject: Re: Sec.
Zinke

Shoot, I'm sorry,
Anthony. I thought the show went later.

Unfortunately
the Secretary
won't be able to join after
all. I will be in touch though and let you know when he's available
for call ins in the future.

Again, my apologies for the mistake.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the
Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov

1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8,
2017 at 12:43

PM, Rivera,
Anthony

<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>

wrote:

Hello

Heather,

Just making sure you got my last email.
If we can get
Sec. Zinke locked in today for next week
that would be awesome.
Let me know,
thanks!

Kind
Regards,

Anthony
Rivera
Producer –
David Webb
Show
SiriusXM
Patriot Ch.
125
Office: (212)
901-6403
Cell: (347)
753-3461
<OutlookEmoji-1503940572888_
SiriusXM.jpg>

From: Swift,
Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday,
September 8,
2017 11:18:18
AM
To: Rivera,
Anthony

Subject: Sec.

Zinke

Hi there,
Anthony.
Secretary
Zinke will be in NYC next week and would like to come on David's
show.
What's your availability like Monday-
Wednesday?

-

Heather
Swift

Department of the
Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov

1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Rivera, Anthony
To: Heather Swift
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke
Date: Monday, September 11, 2017 10:26:54 AM

Ok great. Just let them know I will be available from 12-2pm today so hopefully they can make it then. Thank for your help!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 9:51:06 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

I do not. I'll remind them to call you.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:40 AM, Rivera, Anthony <Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Great. I just put them in the system. Do you know what time they will be getting in today for the check in?

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 9:37:08 AM

To: Rivera, Anthony

Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Armed law enforcement officers going in the building will be (b) (6), (b) (7)(C), (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) and (b) (6), (b) (7)(C)

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:35 AM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

And Security for today?

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 7:29:16 AM

To: Rivera, Anthony

Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

He will arrive around 12:50. We have a hard stop at 1:30 because he has Willow at 1:40

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 7:21 AM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Please also let me know what time they will be coming in. I will be doing a show from 9am-12 pm ET. Will be free from 12pm-2pm ET.

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 6:31:55 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Armed law enforcement officers going in the building will be (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (advance), (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) and (b) (6), (b) (7) will be escorting the Secretary.

If possible can you assist us with parking spots for three vehicles?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 10, 2017, at 9:51 AM, Rivera, Anthony <Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Good Morning Heather,
I hope you are having a great weekend. I received word that we will be in studio 3 for our pre tape which is good news. Is it possible to give me the names of the security detail coming in. I don't know if the building security is just going to let them up. They get a little stern even if a name maybe misspelled.
Anyways I have the topics/questions that

David would like to talk about with Sec.
Zinke:

- Responsibilities of the Dept. of the Interior when it comes to Harvey recovery and post Hurricane Harvey.
- What is the department of the interior doing to update and reform its operations to be a more effective agency?
- What are some of the more key points of interaction with individual states?
- Are there regional strategies based on geographical area not just state borders?

These are the main questions David has. He will be thinking of others but for now these are the most important. Thank you Heather!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017 1:30:03 PM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Ryan Zinke
Lola Zinke
Heather Swift
+2 Security detail

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov |
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017 at 1:24 PM, Rivera,
Anthony <Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Actually if we could get on a quick call and work out the logistics that would be better than the email. You can call one of my numbers or just send me your number and I could call you.

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017 1:12:44 PM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Oh that would work! He is available
Tuesday in the 1PM hour.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov |
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017 at 1:09 PM, Rivera,
Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:
What time are you looking for. Maybe we could do a pretape?

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather

<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017 12:52:47 PM

To: Rivera, Anthony

Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Shoot, I'm sorry, Anthony. I thought the show went later. Unfortunately the Secretary won't be able to join after all. I will be in touch though and let you know when he's available for call ins in the future.

Again, my apologies for the mistake.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov |

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017 at 12:43 PM,

Rivera, Anthony

<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>

wrote:

Hello Heather,

Just making sure you got my last email. If we can get Sec. Zinke locked in today for next week that would be awesome. Let me know, thanks!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Swift, Heather

<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday, September 8, 2017

11:18:18 AM

To: Rivera, Anthony

Subject: Sec. Zinke

Hi there, Anthony. Secretary Zinke will be in NYC next week and would like to come on David's show. What's your availability like Monday-Wednesday?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov |

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: (b) (6), (b) (7)(C)
To: Heather Swift
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke
Date: Monday, September 11, 2017 10:32:37 AM

We would like to do about 45 minutes.

Sent from my iPhone

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:55 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thanks :)

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:54 AM, (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) <(b) (6), (b) (7)(C)> wrote:

Ok. I left a msg with Rivera yesterday and never heard back from him or the security at that site. I'll call him in a few.

Sent from my iPhone

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:52 AM, Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

The radio guy is wondering if you can call or email him and let him know what time you expect to walk through today.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 10, 2017, at 11:55 PM, Roddy, Russell
<russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hey, Heather...please see below from (b) (6), (b) (7)(C)
per names and request for parking.

----- Forwarded message -----
From: <(b) (6), (b) (7)(C)>
Date: Sun, Sep 10, 2017 at 12:37 PM
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

To: "Roddy, Russell"
<russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov>

Armed law enforcement officers going in the building will be (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (advance), (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) and (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) will be escorting the Secretary.

If possible can they assist us with parking spots for three vehicles?

Thanks

Raul

Sent from my iPhone

On Sep 10, 2017, at 12:00 PM, Roddy, Russell <russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

----- Forwarded message ----

From: Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Date: Sun, Sep 10, 2017 at 11:55 AM
Subject: Fwd: Sec. Zinke
To: russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov,
mark_asmussen@nps.gov

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Rivera, Anthony"
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>

Date: September 10, 2017 at 9:50:50 AM EDT
To: "Swift, Heather"

<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Subject: Re: Sec.
Zinke

Good Morning
Heather,

I hope you are having a great weekend. I received word that we will be in studio
3 for our pre tape
which is good news. Is it possible
to give me the names of the
security detail
coming in. I don't know if the building
security is just going to let them
up. They get a little stern even if a name maybe
misspelled.

Anyways I have the
topics/questions
that David would like to talk about
with Sec. Zinke:

- Responsibilities of the Dept. of the Interior when it comes to Harvey recovery and post
Hurricane Harvey.

-What is the department of the interior doing to update and reform its operations to be a more effective agency?

-What are some of the more key points of interaction with individual states?

- Are there regional strategies based on geographical area not just state borders?

These are the main questions David has. He will be thinking of others but for now these are the most important. Thank you Heather!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David
Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot
Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-
6403
Cell: (347) 753-
3461

<OutlookEmoji-1503940572888_SiriusXM.jpg>

From: Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday,
September 8, 2017
1:30:03 PM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec.
Zinke

Ryan Zinke
Lola Zinke
Heather Swift
+2 Security detail

-

Heather Swift
Department of the
Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov
1
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8, 2017
at 1:24 PM, Rivera,
Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Actually if we could get on a quick call and
work out the logistics that would be better
than the email.
You can call one
of my numbers or
just send me your

number and I
could call you.

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer –
David Webb
Show
SiriusXM Patriot
Ch. 125
Office: (212)
901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461
<OutlookEmoji-
1503940572888_
SiriusXM.jpg>

From: Swift,
Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday,
September 8,
2017 1:12:44 PM

To: Rivera,
Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec.
Zinke

Oh that would work! He is available
Tuesday in the 1PM hour.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the
Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov

1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8,
2017 at 1:09 PM,
Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

What time are
you looking for.
Maybe we could do a pretape?

Kind Regards,

Anthony
Rivera
Producer –
David Webb
Show
SiriusXM
Patriot Ch.
125
Office: (212)
901-6403
Cell: (347)
753-3461
<OutlookEmoji-1503940572888_
SiriusXM.jpg>

From: Swift,
Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday,
September 8,
2017 12:52:47
PM

To: Rivera,
Anthony

Subject: Re: Sec.

Zinke

Shoot, I'm sorry,
Anthony. I
thought the show went later.
Unfortunately
the Secretary
won't be able to join after
all. I will be in touch though and let you know when he's available
for call ins in the future.

Again, my apologies for the mistake.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the
Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov
I
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 8,
2017 at 12:43
PM, Rivera,
Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Hello
Heather,

Just making sure you got
my last email.
If we can get

Sec. Zinke
locked in today for next week
that would be awesome.
Let me know,
thanks!

Kind Regards,

Anthony
Rivera
Producer –
David Webb
Show
SiriusXM
Patriot Ch.
125
Office: (212)
901-6403
Cell: (347)
753-3461
<OutlookEmoji-1503940572888_
SiriusXM.jpg>

From: Swift,
Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Friday,
September 8,
2017 11:18:18
AM

To: Rivera,
Anthony
Subject: Sec.
Zinke

Hi there,

Anthony.
Secretary
Zinke will be in NYC next week and would like to come on David's
show.
What's your availability
like Monday-
Wednesday?

-

Heather
Swift
Department of the
Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov
1
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Heather Swift
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke
Date: Monday, September 11, 2017 11:09:14 AM

Perfect

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 11:07 AM, Rivera, Anthony <Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Yes, he called my office number but during the show I am in the studio. He got in touch with me through my cell though. We are all squared off for today. Will see him at 12. Thank you Heather!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 10:32:55 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

 Said he called and left 2 messages.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 10:28 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

He is available 12-2 today.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 10:27 AM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Ok great. Just let them know I will be available from 12-2pm today so hopefully they can make it then. Thank for your help!

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 9:51:06 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

I do not. I'll remind them to call you.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:40 AM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

Great. I just put them in the system. Do you know what time they will be getting in today for the check in?

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11, 2017 9:37:08 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

Armed law enforcement officers going in the building will be (b) (6), (b) (7)(C), (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) and (b) (6), (b) (7)(C)

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 9:35 AM, Rivera, Anthony <Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com> wrote:

And Security for today?

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Monday, September 11,
2017 7:29:16 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke

He will arrive around 12:50. We have a hard stop at 1:30 because he has Willow at 1:40

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 11, 2017, at 7:21 AM,
Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Please also let me know what time they will be coming in. I will be doing a show from 9am-12pm ET. Will be free from 12pm-2pm ET.

Kind Regards,

Anthony Rivera
Producer – David
Webb Show
SiriusXM Patriot
Ch. 125
Office: (212) 901-
6403
Cell: (347) 753-3461

From: Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent: Monday,
September 11, 2017
6:31:55 AM
To: Rivera, Anthony
Subject: Re: Sec.
Zinke

Armed law enforcement officers going in the building will be (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) (advance), (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) and (b) (6), (b) (7)(C) will be escorting the Secretary.

If possible can you assist us with parking spots for three vehicles?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 10, 2017, at 9:51 AM, Rivera, Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Good Morning
Heather,

I hope
you are having a great weekend.

I received word
that we will be in studio
3 for our pre tape which is good news.

Is it possible to give me the names of the security detail coming in. I don't know if the building security is just going to let them up.

They get a little stern even if a name maybe misspelled.

Anyways
I have
the topics/questions
that
David
would like to talk about with Sec.
Zinke:

-
Responsibilities
of the
Dept.
of the Interior
when it comes
to Harvey recovery
and post
Hurricane Harvey.

-What is the department

of the interior doing
to update
and reform its operations to be a more effective agency?

-What
are some of the more key points
of interaction with individual states?

- Are
there regional strategies based on geographical area not just state borders?

These are the main questions
David
has. He will be thinking
of others but for now these are the most important.
Thank
you
Heather!

Kind Regards,

Anthony
Rivera
Producer

—

David
Webb
Show
SiriusXM
Patriot
Ch.
125
Office:
(212)
901-6403
Cell:
(347)
753-3461

From:

Swift,
Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent:

Friday,
September
8, 2017
1:30:03
PM

To:

Rivera,
Anthony

Subject:

Re: Sec.
Zinke

Ryan
Zinke
Lola
Zinke
Heather
Swift
+2
Security
detail

-

Heather
Swift
Department
of the
Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov

1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri,
Sep 8,
2017 at
1:24
PM,
Rivera,
Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Actually
if we could get on a quick call
and work out
the logistics
that would be better than
the email.
You can call one
of my numbers or just send me your number and I could call

you.

Kind Regards,

Anthony
Rivera
Producer

–

David
Webb
Show
SiriusXM
Patriot
Ch.

125
Office:
(212)
901-6403
Cell:
(347)
753-3461

From:

Swift,
Heather

<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent:

Friday,
September
8, 2017
1:12:44
PM

To:

Rivera,
Anthony

Subject:

Re:
Sec.
Zinke

Oh
that would work!
He
is available
Tuesday
in
the 1PM hour.

-

Heather
Swift
Department
of the
Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov

1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri,
Sep
8, 2017

at 1:09

PM,

Rivera,
Anthony

<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>

wrote:

|

What
time
are you looking for.
Maybe
we could do
a pretape?

Kind Regards,

Anthony
Rivera
Producer

—

David
Webb
Show
SiriusXM
Patriot
Ch.
125
Office:
(212)
901-6403
Cell:
(347)
753-3461

From:
Swift,
Heather

<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent:

Friday,
September
8, 2017
12:52:47
PM

To:

Rivera,
Anthony

Subject:

Re:
Sec.
Zinke

Shoot,
I'm
sorry,
Anthony.
I thought
the show went
later.
Unfortunately
the
Secretary won't be able
to join after all.
I will be
in touch though
and let you know when he's available

for call ins
in
the future.

Again,
my apologies
for
the mistake.

-

Heather
Swift
Department
of
the
Interior

@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov
I
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On
Fri,
Sep
8, 2017
at 12:43
PM,
Rivera,
Anthony
<Anthony.Rivera@siriusxm.com>
wrote:

Hello
Heather,

Just

making sure you got my last email.
If
we can get
Sec.
Zinke locked
in today
for next week
that would be awesome.
Let
me
know,
thanks!

Kind Regards,

Anthony
Rivera
Producer

—

David
Webb
Show
SiriusXM
Patriot
Ch.
125

Office:
(212)
901-6403
Cell:
(347)
753-3461

—
From:

Swift,
Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Sent:

Friday,
September
8, 2017
11:18:18
AM

To:

Rivera,
Anthony

Subject:

Sec.
Zinke

Hi
there,
Anthony.
Secretary
Zinke
will be
in NYC
next week
and would like

to come on David's
show.
What's
your availability
like Monday-
Wednesday?

-

Heather
Swift
Department
of
the
Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov

1

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Russell Newell
To: Laura Rigas
Cc: Heather Swift
Subject: Re: secretary bio
Date: Wednesday, September 20, 2017 12:49:21 PM

That would be great - thank you!

Sent from my iPhone

On Sep 20, 2017, at 11:48 AM, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Larry can fix. Want me to ask him?

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Sep 20, 2017, at 12:46 PM, Russell Newell <russell_newell@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Heads up on bio that is on the website. See below. Can you confirm and ask someone to correct?

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: "Renner, Elinor" <elinor_renner@ios.doi.gov>
Date: September 20, 2017 at 11:27:51 AM CDT
To: "Newell, Russell" <russell_newell@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: bio

Cully just sent me a correction for future reference:

Sec Zinke did not "enlist" in the Navy in 1985 as the bio below states. He was an officer for his entire career. Enlistees are "enlisted Sailors" not officers.

Rather, it should read: he was "commissioned as an officer in the Navy in 1985..."

On Wed, Sep 20, 2017 at 11:48 AM, Renner, Elinor
<elinor_renner@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thanks, Russell.

Could you send me the blurb for the description of the event today? Heritage wants to start publicizing the event. Allison seats 200, and we don't want an empty auditorium!

Warmly,
Elinor

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Newell, Russell <russell_newell@ios.doi.gov>

Date: Tue, Sep 19, 2017 at 5:45 PM

Subject: bio

To: Elinor Renner <elinor_renner@ios.doi.gov>

Elinor - they can pull from this bio for the intro and for any materials.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

Secretary Ryan Zinke

Ryan Zinke was sworn in as the 52nd Secretary of the Interior on March 1, 2017.

A fifth-generation Montanan and former U.S. Navy SEAL Commander, Ryan Zinke built one of the strongest track records in the 114th Congress on championing sportsmen's access, conservation, regulatory relief, forest management, responsible energy development, and smart management of federal lands.

"As a former Navy SEAL, Ryan has incredible leadership skills and an attitude of doing whatever it takes to win," President Donald Trump said in nominating the former congressman, who built an impressive portfolio on Interior issues ranging from federal mineral leases to tribal affairs to public lands conservation.

Growing up in a logging and rail town near Glacier National Park, Ryan has had a lifelong appreciation for conserving America's natural beauty while honoring Teddy Roosevelt's vision of multiple-use on our public lands. He has consistently led the efforts to renew the Land and Water Conservation Fund in Congress, and has also been a firm advocate for our nation's sportsmen to gain access to our public lands with the SCORE Act and SHARE Act. Zinke also coauthored the Resilient Federal Forest Act, which initiated new reforms for revitalizing America's timber towns and preventing wildfires by emphasizing the collaborative process.

Zinke is widely praised for his voting record supporting the Teddy Roosevelt philosophy of managing public lands, which calls for multiple-use to include economic, recreation and conservation. He has pledged to explore every possibility for safely and responsibly repealing bad regulations and using public natural resources to create jobs and wealth for the American people.

"I am honored and humbled to serve Montana and America as Secretary of the Interior," Zinke said. "I shall faithfully uphold Teddy Roosevelt's belief that our treasured public lands are 'for the benefit and enjoyment of the people'. I will work tirelessly to ensure our public lands are managed and preserved in a way that benefits everyone for generations to come. Most importantly, our sovereign Indian Nations and territories must have the respect and freedom they deserve. I look forward to making the Department of the Interior and America great again."

As Secretary of the Interior, Zinke leads an agency with more than 70,000 employees who are stewards for 20 percent of the nation's lands, including national parks, monuments, wildlife refuges and other public lands. The department oversees the responsible development of conventional and renewable energy supplies on public lands and waters; is the largest supplier and manager of water in the 17 Western states; and upholds trust responsibilities to the 567 federally recognized American Indian tribes and Alaska Natives.

Ryan Zinke represented the state of Montana in the U.S. House of Representatives since 2014. Before that he served in the Montana State Senate from 2009 to 2011, but the bulk of his public service was 23 years as a U.S. Navy SEAL officer.

Zinke enlisted in the Navy in 1985 and was soon selected to join the elite force where he would build an honorable career until his retirement in 2008. He retired with the rank of Commander after leading SEAL operations across the globe, including as the Deputy and Acting Commander of Joint Special Forces in Iraq and two tours at SEAL Team Six. Zinke was the first Navy SEAL elected to the U.S. House and is the first SEAL to serve as a cabinet secretary.

Zinke holds a Geology degree from the University of Oregon, where he was an All-PAC 10 football player; a Master's degree in Business Finance from National University; and a Master's degree in Global Leadership from the University of San Diego. Ryan and his wife Lolita (Lola) have three children and two granddaughters. Zinke is proud to be an adopted member of the Assiniboine Sioux Tribe at the Fort Peck Reservation in Northeast Montana.

Russell Newell
Deputy Director of Communications

U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 208-6232

@Interior

--

Elinor Renner
U.S. Department of the Interior
Immediate Office of the Secretary
Special Assistant to the Secretary
Washington, DC 20240
202-208-6087

--

Elinor Renner
U.S. Department of the Interior
Immediate Office of the Secretary
Special Assistant to the Secretary
Washington, DC 20240
202-208-6087

From: Adams, Nathan
To: Swift_Heather
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs: TEST
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 4:59:46 PM

Copy that. Thanks.

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 4:57 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Definitely yes on the pic. AK and PAM.

Can you schedule it for 5:45?

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 4:47 PM, Adams, Nathan <nathan_adams@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Pic or no pic?

PAM, Internal and AK? Anyone else?

Just let me know when.

Thanks.

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 4:46 PM, U.S. Department of the Interior <interior_news@updates.interior.gov> wrote:

news release

Date: May 30, 2017

Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

ANCHORAGE - U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs based out of Anchorage. Zinke made the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

"A lifelong Alaskan and Air Force Major, Steve is perfectly qualified to advise me on Alaskan issues," said Secretary Zinke. "Like 10 percent of Alaskans, Steve served in the military, and he then continued his service as a civilian working for elected officials. His broad range of experience will prove to be invaluable as the Department focuses on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior's management."

"It's an incredible honor to be asked to serve on Secretary Zinke's staff. I look forward to working with our state, local, and First Alaskan partners to help unlock Alaska's potential," said Wackowski.

Wackowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family's halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-

AA football at Saint Mary's College, where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC-Berkeley's Air Force ROTC program.

He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour, Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's "Top 40 under 40" Award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the U.S. Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as the late Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's reelection campaign.

Steve is an avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox lab, Cali.

Steve Wackowski stands in a boat holding the antlers of a moose.

###

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to Email Address by: U.S. Department of the Interior 1849 C Street, N.W. Washington DC 20240 202-208-3100

--

Nate Adams
Office of Communications
U.S. Department of the Interior
202-208-2060

--

Nate Adams
Office of Communications
U.S. Department of the Interior
202-208-2060

From: Swift, Heather
To: Adams_Nathan
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs: TEST
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 4:58:52 PM

and as always..... I have an update lol. Please include the quote below under Steve's quote.

"I've known and worked with Steve for years, and I'm incredibly pleased that he will be the point person for Alaskan issues at the Department of the Interior," Murkowski said "Secretary Zinke is building a strong team for Alaska, putting good people in the right places to help our state I'm excited to see what we can all do together to help address the wide range of Interior-related issues that we are facing "

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 4:57 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Definitely yes on the pic. AK and PAM.

Can you schedule it for 5:45?

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 4:47 PM, Adams, Nathan <nathan_adams@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Pic or no pic?

PAM, Internal and AK? Anyone else?

Just let me know when.

Thanks.

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 4:46 PM, U.S. Department of the Interior <interior_news@updates.interior.gov> wrote:

news release

Date: May 30, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

ANCHORAGE - U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs based out of Anchorage. Zinke made the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

“A lifelong Alaskan and Air Force Major, Steve is perfectly qualified to advise me on Alaskan issues,” said Secretary Zinke. “Like 10 percent of Alaskans, Steve served in the military, and he then continued his service as a civilian working for elected officials. His broad range of experience will prove to be invaluable as the Department focuses on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior’s management.”

"It's an incredible honor to be asked to serve on Secretary Zinke's staff. I look forward to working with our state, local, and First Alaskan partners to help unlock Alaska's potential," said Wackowski.

Wackowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family’s halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary’s College, where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC-Berkeley’s Air Force ROTC program.

He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour, Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve’s work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska’s North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce’s “Top 40 under 40” Award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the U.S. Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as the late Senator Ted Stevens’ last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski’s reelection campaign.

Steve is an avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox lab, Cali.

Steve Wackowski stands in a boat holding the antlers of a moose.

###

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to Email Address by: U.S. Department of the Interior 1849 C Street, N.W. Washington DC 20240 202-208-3100

--

Nate Adams
Office of Communications
U.S. Department of the Interior
202-208-2060

From: Daigle, Nicole (Energy)
To: Laura Rigas; Hughes Brian \(Energy\); Petersen Karina \(Murkowski\)
Cc: Micah Chambers; Heather Swift
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 5:51:57 PM

Thanks! The Senator's will go out momentarily.

From: Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 5:46 PM
To: Brian Hughes <Brian_Hughes@energy.senate.gov>, Nicole Daigle <nicole_daigle@energy.senate.gov>, Karina Petersen <karina_petersen@murkowski.senate.gov>
Cc: Micah Chambers <micah_chambers@ios.doi.gov>, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Fwd: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

Begin forwarded message:

From: U.S. Department of the Interior <interior_news@updates.interior.gov>
Date: May 30, 2017 at 1:45:32 PM AKDT
To: <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs
Reply-To: <interior_news@updates.interior.gov>

Date: May 30, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

ANCHORAGE - U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs based out of Anchorage. Zinke made the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

“A lifelong Alaskan and Air Force Major, Steve is perfectly qualified to advise me on Alaskan issues,” said Secretary Zinke. “Like 10 percent of Alaskans, Steve served in the military, and he then continued his service as a civilian working for elected officials. His broad range of experience will prove to be invaluable as the Department focuses on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior’s management.”

"It's an incredible honor to be asked to serve on Secretary Zinke's staff. I look forward to working with our state, local, and First Alaskan partners to help unlock Alaska's potential," said Wackowski.

Wackowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family's halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary's College, where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC-Berkeley's Air Force ROTC program.

He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour, Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's "Top 40 under 40" Award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the U.S. Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as the late Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's reelection campaign.

Steve is an avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox lab, Cali.

Steve Wackowski stands in a boat holding the antlers of a moose.

#

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov by: U.S. Department of the Interior 1849 C Street, N.W. Washington DC 20240 202-208-3100

From: Daigle, Nicole (Energy)
To: Laura Rigas
Cc: Hughes, Brian \(Energy\); Petersen, Karina \(Murkowski\); Micah Chambers; Heather Swift:Petersen.Karina(Murkowski):Micah.Chambers:Heather.Swift)
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 6:11:31 PM

I understand. Just wanted to be sure someone got back to him. Thank you!

From: Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 6:06 PM
To: Nicole Daigle <nicole_daigle@energy.senate.gov>
Cc: Brian Hughes <Brian_Hughes@energy.senate.gov>, Karina Petersen <karina_petersen@murkowski.senate.gov>, Micah Chambers <micah_chambers@ios.doi.gov>, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

Hi-- he reached out but unfortunately we can't make it happen. Did Rick live this am, Dave tomorrow at the conference, and will do NBC live TV tomorrow. Thx!

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On May 30, 2017, at 2:00 PM, Daigle, Nicole (Energy) <Nicole_Daigle@energy.senate.gov> wrote:

Laura,

Nick McDermott with KTVA just called me and is interested in interviewing, live if possible, Steve about the announcement. If you could get back to him, that would be great. He can be reached at nickm@ktva.com or 907-274-1111.

Thanks,
Nicole

From: Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 5:46 PM
To: Brian Hughes <Brian_Hughes@energy.senate.gov>, Nicole Daigle <nicole_daigle@energy.senate.gov>, Karina Petersen <karina_petersen@murkowski.senate.gov>
Cc: Micah Chambers <micah_chambers@ios.doi.gov>, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Fwd: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

Begin forwarded message:

From: U.S. Department of the Interior <interior_news@updates.interior.gov>
Date: May 30, 2017 at 1:45:32 PM AKDT
To: <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs
Reply-To: <interior_news@updates.interior.gov>

Date: May 30, 2017

Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

ANCHORAGE - U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs based out of Anchorage. Zinke made the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

"A lifelong Alaskan and Air Force Major, Steve is perfectly qualified to advise me on Alaskan issues," said Secretary Zinke. "Like 10 percent of Alaskans, Steve served in the military, and he then continued his service as a civilian working for elected officials. His broad range of experience will prove to be invaluable as the Department focuses on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior's management."

"It's an incredible honor to be asked to serve on Secretary Zinke's staff. I look forward to working with our state, local, and First Alaskan partners to help unlock Alaska's potential," said Wackowski.

Wackowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family's halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary's College, where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC-Berkeley's Air Force ROTC program.

He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour, Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's "Top 40 under 40" Award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the U.S. Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as the late Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's reelection campaign.

Steve is an avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox lab, Cali.

Steve Wackowski stands in a boat holding the antlers of a moose.

#

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov by: U.S. Department of the Interior 1849 C Street, N.W.
Washington DC 20240 202-208-3100

From: Swift, Heather
To: Erica Martinson
Cc: Interior Press
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 6:42:11 PM

Mr. Wackowski is currently serving in that role, and we plan to include a number of other qualified and capable Alaskans in our staffing plan in the coming weeks and months.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 6:08 PM, Erica Martinson <emartinson@alaskadispatch.com> wrote:

Is this position filling the slot for Senior Advisor for Alaskan Affairs that operated out of the secretary's immediate office in Washington, D.C. during the last administration? Or is it in addition to that position?

Thanks,

--
Erica Martinson
Washington, DC reporter
Alaska Dispatch News
cell/Signal: 202-436-4234
@EricaMartinson

On 5/30/2017 5:45 PM, U.S. Department of the Interior wrote:

news release

Date: May 30, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

ANCHORAGE - U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs based out of Anchorage. Zinke made the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

"A lifelong Alaskan and Air Force Major, Steve is perfectly qualified to advise me on Alaskan issues," said Secretary Zinke. "Like 10 percent of Alaskans, Steve served in the military, and he then continued his service as a civilian working for elected officials. His broad range of experience will prove to be invaluable as the Department focuses on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior's management."

"It's an incredible honor to be asked to serve on Secretary Zinke's staff. I look forward to working with our state, local, and First Alaskan partners to help unlock Alaska's potential," said Wackowski.

Wackowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family's halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary's College, where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC-Berkeley's Air Force ROTC program.

He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour, Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's "Top 40 under 40" Award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the U.S. Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as the late Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's reelection campaign.

Steve is an avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox lab, Cali.

Steve Wackowski stands in a boat holding the antlers of a moose.

#

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to emartinson@alaskadispatch.com by: U.S. Department of the Interior 1849 C Street, N.W.
Washington DC 20240 202-208-3100

From: Lori Mashburn
To: Swift_Heather
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 6:41:01 PM

Yes, that totally works.

Sent from my iPhone

On May 30, 2017, at 6:24 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Can I say, "Mr. Wackowski is currently serving in that role and we plan to include a number of other qualified and capable Alaskans in our staffing plan in the coming weeks and months."

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 6:19 PM, Mashburn, Lori <lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

It is filling that role for now. We have (b) (5)

We think we have AK pretty well covered.

Lori K. Mashburn
White House Liaison
Department of the Interior
202.208.1694

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 6:09 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Lori?

-

Is this position filling the slot for Senior Advisor for Alaskan Affairs that operated out of the secretary's immediate office in Washington, D.C. during the last administration? Or is it in addition to that position?

Thanks,

--

Erica Martinson
Washington, DC reporter
Alaska Dispatch News
cell/Signal: 202-436-4234
@EricaMartinson

On 5/30/2017 5:45 PM, U.S. Department of the Interior wrote:

news release

Date: May 30, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for

Alaska Affairs

ANCHORAGE - U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs based out of Anchorage. Zinke made the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

"A lifelong Alaskan and Air Force Major, Steve is perfectly qualified to advise me on Alaskan issues," said Secretary Zinke. "Like 10 percent of Alaskans, Steve served in the military, and he then continued his service as a civilian working for elected officials. His broad range of experience will prove to be invaluable as the Department focuses on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior's management."

"It's an incredible honor to be asked to serve on Secretary Zinke's staff. I look forward to working with our state, local, and First Alaskan partners to help unlock Alaska's potential," said Wackowski.

Wackowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family's halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary's College, where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC-Berkeley's Air Force ROTC program.

He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour, Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's "Top 40 under 40" Award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the U.S. Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as the late Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's reelection campaign.

Steve is an avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox lab, Cali.

Steve Wackowski stands in a boat holding the antlers of a moose.

#

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to emartinson@alaskadispatch.com by: U.S. Department of the Interior 1849 C Street, N.W.
Washington DC 20240 202-208-3100

From: Swift, Heather
To: Sadler, Kelly J. EOP/WHO
Cc: jlawrence@usatoday.com; dmastio@usatoday.com; Laura Rigas
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Op-Ed Pitch
Date: Thursday, July 13, 2017 5:17:06 PM
Attachments: OpEd_MadeInAmerica_Rec_FINAL.docx

Jill, Heather Swift here - press secretary at the Department of the Interior.

Attached is an op-ed from Secretary Ryan Zinke written exclusively for USA Today. Also here is a high-res headshot.

Please let me know if you're interested in running this in the Sunday edition, or on Monday.

Happy to discuss any edits as well.

Best,
Heather

(b) (6)

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Jul 13, 2017 at 12:54 PM, Sadler, Kelly J. EOP/WHO

<(b) (6)> wrote:

Jill,

Hi - we're branding next week "Made in America" and would love to kick it off by placing an op-ed with you by Secretary Zinke on America's public lands and how public private partnerships can and will create a world-class outdoor experience. We'd love this to go in your weekend edition or to run on Monday.

Are you interested in the exclusive? We'll have the copy by the end of the day to review.

Thanks,
Kelly

Kelly Sadler
Special Assistant to the President
Office of Communications
White House

C: (b) (6)

From: Mark Carter
To: Heather Swift
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Promotes Hunting, Fishing, and Wildlife Conservation with Employee "Showdown" at Department of the Interior
Date: Wednesday, September 20, 2017 11:31:50 AM
Attachments: Questions for Secretary Zinke from AmericaHunt.docx

Heather,

Questions for the proposed Q-and-A feature with Secretary Zinke are attached. Thank you again. (Our staff actually had more, but I edited down to 16. We're grateful for any he has time to answer.)

Mark Carter
America Hunt

On Sep 19, 2017, at 5:00 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

For sure!

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 19, 2017, at 5:52 PM, "mark@americahunt.com" <mark@americahunt.com> wrote:

Heather,
That's awesome. Thank you again for sharing.
Mark

Sent from myMail for iOS

Tuesday, September 19, 2017, 4:35 PM -0500 from Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>:

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----

From: U.S. Department of the Interior <interior_news@updates.interior.gov>
Date: Tue, Sep 19, 2017 at 4:43 PM
Subject: Secretary Zinke Promotes Hunting, Fishing, and Wildlife Conservation with Employee "Showdown" at Department of the Interior
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov

news release

Date: September 19, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

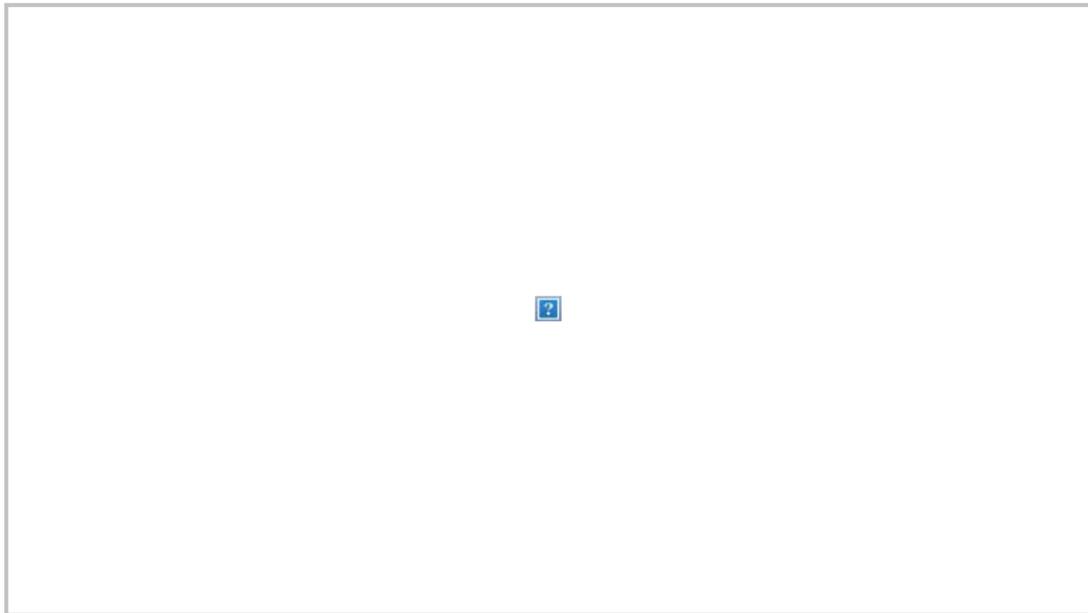

Secretary Zinke Promotes Hunting, Fishing, and Wildlife Conservation with Employee "Showdown" at Department of the Interior

WASHINGTON – Today, on the heels of a groundbreaking directive to expand hunting access on public lands, U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke announced his latest initiative to reemphasize hunting and fishing at the Department with a new temporary addition to the employee cafeteria: the arcade game “Big Buck Hunter Pro.” The Secretary also announced the “Secretary’s Shotgun Showdown,” a fun employee competition on the game, with the winner earning bragging rights and a “Beverage on the Balcony” with the Secretary. The contest runs from today, September 19th, 2017, until Wednesday, October 11th, 2017.

Completing the Department’s goals and objectives hinges on employee awareness and involvement. Having the “Big Buck Hunter Pro” arcade game will get many employees involved in Sportmen’s Season, in turn furthering the Department’s mission of wildlife and habitat conservation.

“Some of my best memories are hunting and fishing with my dad and granddad, and then later teaching my own kids to hunt and fish . That’s something I want more families to experience,” said Secretary Zinke. “ Hunters and anglers are the backbone of wildlife and habitat conservation in America . because sportsmen contribute billions of dollars to conservation . From my perspective, the more sportsmen we have in the woods and waters, the better our wildlife and land will be. The “Shotgun Showdown” will help reignite the passion and emphasis of hunting and fishing at the Department, and will be a fun way to advance our mission of wildlife and habitat conservation.”

The Secretary kicked off the Shotgun Showdown by facing off against U.S. Fish and Wildlife career employee Casey Stemler from Littleton, Colorado. For over 45 years, Casey has enjoyed hunting and fishing on National Wildlife Refuges across the nation from California to Maryland and big-game hunting on BLM lands throughout the west.

This September and October, the Department of the Interior is setting its sights on the continued role that hunters and anglers play in wildlife conservation. Earlier this month, Secretary Zinke signed a directive to support and expand hunting and fishing, enhance conservation stewardship, improve wildlife management, and increase outdoor recreation opportunities for all Americans. The move was widely praised by sportsmen and wildlife conservation organizations.

On his first day in office, Secretary Zinke reversed an order that would have banned lead ammo and tackle on National Wildlife Refuge lands, and he began the process of expanding hunting and fishing opportunities on public lands across the Department. In August, the Secretary announced a proposal to expand hunting and fishing opportunities at 10

National Wildlife Refuges, and he announced the initial stages of a plan to acquire land to make the Bureau of Land Management Sabinoso Wilderness Area accessible for the first time ever to hunters, hikers, and wildlife watchers.

In addition, Secretary Zinke recently made recommendations to President Trump on 27 national monuments, calling for changes to some that, while still protecting the land, would also protect and expand public access to that land for citizens who want to hunt, fish, hike, and experience the joy and beauty of those public lands.

###

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to heather_swift@ios.doi.gov by: U.S. Department of the Interior 1849 C Street, N.W.
Washington DC 20240 202-208-3100

Mark Carter
Editor, America Hunt
501.680.7542
Mark@AmericaHunt.com
AmericaHunt.com

 AMERICA HUNT
www.AmericaHunt.com

From: Russell Newell
To: Nachmany, Eli
Cc: Laura Rigas; Heather Swift
Subject: Re: SECRETARY: Upcoming Speaking Engagements
Date: Thursday, September 07, 2017 8:42:49 PM

Eli - great work. This will be a huge help. Thank you

Sent from my iPhone

On Sep 7, 2017, at 5:18 PM, Nachmany, Eli <eli_nachmany@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Laura,

As requested, here is an exhaustive summary of all upcoming Secretary speaking engagements that Leila has sent us. I will update this document periodically and send it along, and can even make this into a constantly-updating Google Doc if you think it to be a better idea than the calendar (probably easier to organize and easier to read).

This is all draft text and I welcome edits, suggestions, etc. I've left the Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation event information a bit bare, as Heather suggested I pull from RZ interview tomorrow. Working on two different speeches for 9/11 (one for 9/10, one for 9/11). Russ and I have connected on DepSec speech for hunting, and will work on getting this done.

Document is attached and text is also included below in the body for your convenience. Thanks.

Upcoming Speaking Engagements for Secretary Ryan Zinke (Strategic Calendar)

September 10, 2017

EVENT: Flight 93 Soundbreaking for "Tower of Voices"

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Shanksville, PA

NOTES: 3 minute remarks, keynote speech is September 11th VPOTUS (Secretary introducing him for 3 minutes there as well)

TYPE: Formal, but brief enough for notecard

AUDIENCE: General public

PRESS: Open

September 13, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation Annual Banquet -- VIP Reception and Banquet

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Dovetails with broader push for sportsmen engagement

TYPE: Secretary likely doesn't need formal remarks here, given familiarity with the issues and the audience; "5-10 minutes of remarks about his passion for the outdoors and highlight one or two top priorities he's focusing on as Secretary."

AUDIENCE: Foundation VIPs and reception guests

PRESS: Closed

September 20, 2017

EVENT: Wonders of Wildlife Museum and Aquarium at the Bass Pro HQ -- Gala Dinner Event

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Springfield, MO

NOTES: Event staff sent over detailed information, will sort through prior to drafting remarks

TYPE: Informal remarks on conservation, appreciation of the outdoors/wildlife, likely one notecard is fine

AUDIENCE: Conservation leaders

PRESS: Closed

September 22, 2017

EVENT: NRA Women's Leadership Forum Summit

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Irving, TX

NOTES: Secretary could talk about strong women in his personal life (mother, wife, daughter) or professional life (military, political staff, Cabinet/Congressional colleagues). Big theme of NRA Women's push recently has been safety for females – women are safer when allowed to conceal carry.

TYPE: Formal, keynote remarks – opportunity to tell stories here

AUDIENCE: NRA forum participants, likely heavy female demographic

PRESS: Closed

September 25, 2017

EVENT: National Stone Sand and Gravel Association Legislative and Policy Forum

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Seems like a niche topic that may require specific remarks – will need to coordinate here with OCL. Website notes “Waters of the U.S. rule,” “MSHA's workplace exams rule,” and “long term highway funding” as topics to be discussed over the forum, which runs 4 days all told. This one is likely worth a call to Association POC.

TYPE: Formal, 10 minute remarks on aggregates production and “ESA” issues – flagging for prebrief on this unless Secretary is particularly well-read here, Q&A is included

AUDIENCE: Industry folks and other forum attendees

PRESS: Likely industry press

September 26, 2017

EVENT: Jefferson Island Club Citizen of the Year Award

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Secretary is being honored as Citizen of the Year; it's for "legislators who have distinguished themselves for their outstanding leadership, dedication to public service, and contributions in the spirit of America's founding fathers."

TYPE: Informal remarks, will reach out to find out more about the event

AUDIENCE: Jefferson Island Club members

PRESS: Closed

October 11, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Coal Caucus

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: U.S. recently announced first-ever coal export to Ukraine, WSJ piece on "Coal Makes a Comeback" has good nuggets as well. Secretary was a member of the Caucus. Blake Deeley running point on this from OCL, finding out if we want to put in an "ask" or "call to action."

TYPE: Informal, brief remarks at a roundtable

AUDIENCE: Members of Congress and their staff

PRESS: Closed

November 9, 2017

EVENT: America First Energy Conference (Heartland Institute)

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Houston, TX

NOTES: Organization appears very pro-administration, focused on deregulation

TYPE: Formal remarks, possibly good to write them out given specificity of deregulation accomplishments and opportunity to get back on energy as hunting season winds down

AUDIENCE: Conference attendees (energy industry and policy folks)

PRESS: Presumably closed, will check

MISC. FLAGGING: Upcoming Deputy Secretary speech on hunting, upcoming Secretary speech on energy (Heritage Foundation), upcoming Vincent DeVito speech on tech (Oceans 17)

--

Sincerely,
Eli Nachmany
Writer, U.S. Department of the Interior
Office of Communications

<Upcoming Speaking Engagements 0907.docx>

From: Bergling, Timothy
To: Newell, Russell
Cc: Laura Rigas; Swift, Heather; Alex Hinson; Nachmany, Eli
Subject: Re: Secretary's Holiday Video
Date: Monday, December 18, 2017 2:25:22 PM

My feeling is that dog is wicked cute, and the Secretary's interactions with him are very, very likable and relatable...I could even see this getting shared with notes that say "check out the cute dog"...

Either way if there's a decision to re-shoot we need to set it up with prompter/camera folks asap, I don't know their schedules or even if they're here this week

tb

On Mon, Dec 18, 2017 at 2:12 PM, Newell, Russell <russell_newell@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Just watched this. Ragnar is a little busy in the video and it is distracting. I like that he's with Mrs. Zinke and the dog however, which may outweigh doing it over again with just him. People will like the dog - they'll relate to a feisty pet.

Russell Newell
Deputy Director of Communications
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 208-6232
@Interior

On Mon, Dec 18, 2017 at 11:59 AM, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
She's already gone home. He knew the dynamics and was fine with it.

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Dec 18, 2017, at 11:57 AM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

I'm not wild about this. Can we perhaps redo it tomorrow without ragnar? He's a little squirrely.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Dec 18, 2017 at 11:49 AM, Bergling, Timothy <timothy_bergling@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

<https://youtu.be/QNtnMRjvAkA>

From: Esther Whieldon
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: Seeking verification/comment -- Steed taking over BLM
Date: Thursday, November 16, 2017 11:51:58 AM

Thanks

Esther Whieldon
Reporter
POLITICO
301-213-4370 (mobile)
703-672-2788 (office)
ewhieldon@politico.com
Twitter: @esthernow

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Thursday, November 16, 2017 11:47 AM
To: Esther Whieldon
Cc: BLM main press email; Interior Press
Subject: Re: Seeking verification/comment -- Steed taking over BLM

"Brian has been an incredible asset to the Bureau since his first day. We are excited to have him temporarily step into this leadership role. We couldn't be more thankful to Mike Nedd for leading the Bureau during the initial transition. Nedd helped execute big wins for sportsmen's access, multiple-use, and energy development on BLM lands over the past few months."

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Nov 16, 2017 at 11:18 AM, Esther Whieldon <ewhieldon@politico.com> wrote:

>

> Can you please confirm the contents of this email - that Zinke has appointed Steed as acting BLM director? What day did Zinke make the appointment and why did he decided to do this? Also, please address how the agency is dealing with the limitations of any BLM acting director's authority now that the vacancies act has kicked in and Trump has not nominated anyone for BLM director yet.

>

>

> I'd love to have a response by noon if possible.

>

>

> Thanks, Esther

>

>

>

> From: "Nedd, Michael" <mnedd@blm.gov>

> Date: November 15, 2017 at 3:03:21 PM PST

> To: BLM_All_Employees <blm_all_employees@blm.gov>

> Subject: BLM Acting Director

>

>

> BLM employees:

>

>

> This week, Secretary Ryan Zinke appointed Brian Steed as Acting Director of the BLM, and I want to welcome him as he begins his journey leading this great agency. John Ruhs and I have worked alongside Brian since his appointment as Deputy Director for Programs and Policy in October, and we have come to know his ethic, his intellect, and his passion for our multiple-use and sustained yield mission. His experience includes working as Chief of Staff to U.S. Representative Chris Stewart of Utah, teaching and researching economics at the University of Utah, and serving as a Deputy County Attorney in Iron County, Utah. He is a native of Logan, Utah, and now resides in Northern Virginia with his wife and three children. Brian's western heritage and values make him a perfect fit for the BLM team.

>

>

> Since March 15, I have had the honor of leading the BLM. Your tireless dedication to our mission inspires me every day. DOI leaders continually express their confidence in the BLM's leadership in the field and here in Washington, which is a testament to all of you. Thank you for supporting me as the Acting Director over these months, and remaining as ever BLM strong.

>

>

> During the coming weeks, John and I will transition to different roles. John will return to his position as BLM Nevada State Director, and I will assume the duties of Acting Deputy Director for Operations. I appreciate John's sacrifice over the past seven months while he has lived away from his family and the wide open spaces that he loves.

>

>

> Please join me in welcoming Brian to his new position. As we move forward, let's continue to stay focused on our shared mission and values that guide us in our stewardship of America's public lands.

>

>

> Take care and have a wonderful day! :)

> Michael D. Nedd

>

>

> Esther Whieldon

> Reporter

> POLITICO

> 301-213-4370 (mobile)

> 703-672-2788 (office)

> ewhieldon@politico.com

> Twitter: @esthernow

>

From: Laura Rigas
To: Olson, Jeffrey
Cc: Russell Newell; April Slayton; Heather Swift; Barnum, Jeremy; Paul Ross
Subject: Re: Senator Rubio to Independence NHP
Date: Wednesday, December 27, 2017 3:13:59 PM

Thx!

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Dec 27, 2017, at 2:39 PM, Olson, Jeffrey <jeffrey_olson@nps.gov> wrote:

FYSI

Senator Marco Rubio, his wife and 4 children will visit Independence National Historic Park in Philadelphia on Friday, December 29th and Saturday, December 30th. He will arrive at 10:00 a.m. on the 29th for a tour of the Liberty Bell Center, Congress Hall, West Wing and Independence Hall. They will then go to City Tavern for lunch. On the 30th, they will arrive at the Ben Franklin Museum at 10:30 a.m., where they will be greeted by Interpretation & Education staff and then will explore the museum on their own. FYI - They will also visit the Museum of the American Revolution Friday afternoon and the National Constitution Center Saturday afternoon.

--

Jeffrey G. Olson
Public Affairs Officer
The National Park Service
1849 C Street NW Room 3310
Washington, DC 20240

Office:202-513-7261
Mobile:202-230-2088

www.nps.gov

From: Swift, Heather
To: Jorjani, Daniel
Subject: Re: Short Deadline for White House
Date: Thursday, July 13, 2017 4:08:07 PM

thank you! appreciate it.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Jul 13, 2017 at 4:06 PM, Jorjani, Daniel <daniel.jorjani@sol.doi.gov> wrote:
Looks good. Only proposed edit is in the last line -

This "Made in America" Week, let's unite with under a common pride in our country, standing behind American businesses and engaging in American outdoor traditions that have stood the test of time.

On Thu, Jul 13, 2017 at 3:24 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Apologies for the short deadline. Below and attached is an op-ed for USA Today drafted for the Secretary titled, Made In America :Promoting the All-American Outdoor Experience

Please review and return edits NO LATER THAN 4:30.

This has been run through NPS PPPs. They are getting back to me if there are any issues we need to be aware of on the examples chosen.

Made in America: Promoting the All-American Outdoor Experience

This week, President Trump kicked off "Made in America Week." At the Department of the Interior, we are taking this opportunity to promote and strengthen America's tradition of outdoor recreation on public lands, which is made possible, in large part, thanks to private foundations, American businesses, and the thousands of public-private-partnerships across our public lands.

We already have thousands of partners across the country who fund and assist with visitor services, infrastructure, and even land acquisition.

Boston Harbor National Recreation Area is a unique example of a public-private-public partnership where federal, state, and private organizations work together to manage the land, provide boats between islands, restore historic lighthouses and forts, provide educational tours, and carry out janitorial and maintenance tasks. All of this could not be possible without the joint effort.

Private partners also help maintain our buildings and aging infrastructure.

For example, earlier this year, President Trump donated his first quarter salary of about $78,000 to the National Park Service to restore historic battlefields. Private foundations like the Civil War Trust, National Park Foundation, and Save Historic Antietam all chipped in, and with matching donations we were able to fund a $263,000 project to restore a historic structure and nearly mile-long fence at Antietam National Battlefield in Maryland.

Some of our most-iconic, all-American outdoor experiences, like riding a historic Ford “Red Jammer” bus in Glacier National Park, staying overnight in the El Tovar lodge at the Grand Canyon, or whale watching in Alaska’s Glacier Bay National Park, would not be possible without public-private partnerships.

To highlight and expand on Made in America partnerships, this week Interior is hosting a roundtable with outdoor recreation industry leaders to brainstorm innovative ideas for how we can work together to build upon the outdoor experience on public lands. Some ideas I’ve already heard is for a food truck in parking lot, energy-efficient cabins in a national monument, and mobile youth fishing centers in urban areas across the country.

The Department is focused on identifying and expanding the best existing services and bringing in new services to parks and recreation areas.

For example, Wi-Fi, internal transportation, campgrounds, boat ramps, concessions, and even restrooms are not available on many public lands. Also, once somebody gets to a recreation area, services like boat, ATV and fishing pole rentals are often unavailable. This would be like going on a ski vacation and not being able to rent skis or have access to a lift up the mountain.

This leaves many families without practical and affordable options for camping, hiking, and recreating. Having three kids and two granddaughters myself, I can't imagine going on a family vacation without some of these basic services.

More partnerships does not mean privatizing our parks as some have wrongly suggested. I am opposed to the sale or transfer of our public lands, and under my watch our public lands will remain public.

Having partners on public lands also does not mean the tour bus will look like a race car covered in corporate stickers. Some of our most iconic features are only possible thanks to partnerships.

Expanding partnerships will allow parks and public lands to deliver greater services to more visitors, while allowing our rangers to focus on things like the health of the ecosystem, guided tours, educational services, and land management. Partners are also able to deliver many services to the American people at a lower cost than the government can.

With the right amount of ingenuity and originality, we can foster the All-American Outdoor Experience through our work at Interior. The Roosevelt Arch at Yellowstone National Park reads, "For the enjoyment of the people." Enjoying recreation on public lands is at the core of our shared American heritage.

The All-American Outdoor Experience is part of who we are as Americans, but it's also a big economic driver for communities across the country. As a whole, the outdoor recreation industry generates $887 billion in consumer spending and supports 7.6 million American jobs, according to industry analysts. In addition, the revenue the industry produces is a major boost to our economy.

Made in America is about products as much as it is about our shared heritage and values. It is about making memories by taking a kid fishing for the first time, or in my case, taking my wife hiking early in our relationship.

There's a reason 330 million people from across the country and the world visit our parks every year, and millions more flock to public lands coast to coast: It's because these spaces are uniquely American.

This "Made in America" Week, let's with under a common pride in our country, standing behind American businesses and engaging in American outdoor traditions that have stood the test of time.

#####

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Jul 13, 2017 at 2:08 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Heads up - you'll have an oped to review in about an hour.

The WH would like us to write an op-ed for Made in America Week focusing on the all-American outdoor experience which are made possible by public private partnerships. Target is Sunday USA Today.

Unfortunately they need it COB TODAY to hit deadline!

I'm finalizing first draft and will send around 3 o'clock.

Thanks.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Heather Swift
To: Newell, Russell
Subject: Re: SPAM DANGER?
Date: Thursday, October 12, 2017 10:51:33 AM

Not a fan of this format.

Sent from my iPad

On Oct 12, 2017, at 10:48 AM, Newell, Russell <russell_newell@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

just asked Jeff - techMIS is a potential new vendor to take over the service Bulletin has been providing. Jeff said this is test or sample of what news clips would look like under them. We'd have the ability to tweak. Jeff wants to sit down with Laura and me today to discuss

Russell Newell
Deputy Director of Communications
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 208-6232
@Interior

On Thu, Oct 12, 2017 at 10:42 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Any idea what in the world the world this is? Did we get another service?

Sent from my iPad

Begin forwarded message:

From: DOI Daily <doi@techmis.com>
To: Burt Squires - TechMIS <Burt.Squires@techmis.com>
Subject: DOI Daily Briefing (10-12-17)

DOI DAILY BRIEFING

Prepared for the Office of Communications (OCO)

U.S. Department of the Interior (DOI)

By TechMIS

<<http://www.techmis.com/>> www.TechMIS.com

<<http://techmis.com/doi/epub/2017/Oct/12/Target%201/>> Mobile User Copy

TO:

U.S. Department of the Interior & Staff

DATE:

Thursday, October 12, 2017 7:00 AM ET

DOI In The News

Ethics office director rebukes agency heads

Watchdog Uses Years Old Endorsement To Claim Zinke Violated Ethics Rules As
Trump's Interior Secretary

Zinke's Mix Of Fundraisers, Government Work Raises New Ethics Concerns

Zinke blasted over travel; will not touch Confederate monuments on federal lands

House committee advances bill to limit Antiquities Act

[MA] Feds ignore objections to Cape Wind

[UT] Op-ed: Utah delegation needs a clear message about our monuments

[NV] Nevada's Heller, Laxalt join Sandoval in supporting sage grouse decision

[CA] Fears grow of wildfires merging in California

[CA] Whole towns evacuated as Northern California firestorm grows; at least

23 people are dead, 285 missing

[CA] Wildfires Burning Through Cash, Not Just Landscape

[CA] Wildfires trample California's $58 billion wine industry

[CA] Will wine country disaster push Congress to fix fire budget?

[CA] Fire restoration activities planned

[CA] Rives Mansion hits the market for $1.3 million

Bureau of Indian Affairs

[MA] Taunton City Council extends emergency services agreement with tribe

[SD] Family sues Indian boarding school in Pierre for wrongful death

[MT] Homeland Hero

[AZ] The Largest Coal-Fired Power Plant in the West Is Slated for Closure

[AZ] Navajo Nation President Begaye Testifies before Congress to Fix
Problems with 1974 Navajo-Hopi Land Settlement Act

[CA] Camp 4 Final Deal Getting Close

Bureau of Land Management

[TN] Villagers help create a 'hidden gem'

[CO] Legal Protest Targets Trump Fracking Plan That Threatens Colorado River

[CO] Suit seeks to stop oil-gas drilling on 9 parcels

[WY] US government halts Wyoming wild horse roundup amid dispute

Bureau of Ocean Energy Management

Scientists Eavesdrop on Little-known Beaked Whales to Learn
How Deeply They
Dive

[NJ] New Jersey Gov. Christie Rejects President's Offshore Drilling Plan

Bureau of Reclamation

[AZ] The Sierra Club's Shadowy History with the Navajo Generating Station

Fish and Wildlife Service

250 Years After Washington Drained It, Feds Soak A Swamp

Mussel, once feared extinct, brought back to Ohio River

Bee-Killing Pesticide Found in 75 Percent of Global Honey Samples

[KY] Bald Eagle Population Soars in Kentucky

[SD] The only ND man indicted in a SD sting for selling eagle parts is in custody

[MT] Controversy Over Grizzly Bear Protection Continues

[CA] Opinion: Tiny Mouse Is Huge Success Story for Endangered Species Act

US Forest Service

Wildfires: How They Form, And Why They're So Dangerous

[NH] White Mountains forest fire still burning a week later

[SC] More than 150 roads in need of repair around National Forest

[IN] Region parks, parkways to lose hundreds of trees

[OR] Forest Service needs to alter their procedures

[CA] Drought and heat, worsened by humans, help fuel California fires

[CA] The Napa Fire Is a Perfectly Normal Apocalypse

[CA] Bulldozing Forests Isn't the Answer to Controlling California's Wildfires. Here's What Is.

[CA] Forest Service visitor-use surveys begin

US Geological Survey

[WY] Geologists Map the Plumbing Beneath Yellowstone's Old Faithful Geyser

[WY] 'Supervolcano' Under Yellowstone May Have Planet-Killing Potential

National Park Service

National parks need investment from private companies to thrive

No more parks?

[NY] Stonewall National Monument's rainbow flag plan was going fine, then things got weird

[NC] Mysterious debris washes ashore in Hatteras, leading to a lot of questions

[TN] Chimney Tops Trail reopens

[MS] Barrier islands to remain closed after Nate

[TX] New EPA Rule Will Allow Twice The Pollution From Texas Coal Plants

[MT] Glacier National Park sets annual attendance record

[WY] September 3rd busiest in Yellowstone's history

[WY] Traffic accident kills 4 bison in Grand Teton park

[WY] Yellowstone Death Linked to a Search for Forrest Fenn's Treasure

[WY] 'UFO' Sighted Zig-Zagging Over Yellowstone Supervolcano

[WY] Devils Tower plans prescribed fire

[WY] Experts expect record year for lake trout removal

Office of Insular Affairs

[PR] Three weeks since Hurricane Maria, much of Puerto Rico still dark, thirsty and frustrated

[PR] Puerto Rico's hurricane death toll rises to 45

[PR] Puerto Rico: US officials privately acknowledge serious food shortage

[PR] Trump's Puerto Rico video tells positive story, leaves misery on cutting-room floor

[PR] Puerto Rico Relief Bill Cancels $16 Billion in Debt — But Not for Puerto Rico

[PR] Puerto Rico's treasured rainforest another victim of Hurricane Maria

[PR] Puerto Rico's Solar Rush

[VI] Has America Forgotten the Virgin Islands?

[VI] US Virgin Islands getting back to business following September storms

Headlines

The Washington Post

The New York Times

The Wall Street Journal

ABC News

NBC News

CBS News

Washington Schedule

President

Vice President

Senate

House of Representatives

Editorial Note: This Brief represents summarized content - click on

the
hyperlink to access full-text articles for these news summaries.

Note: The DOI News Briefing is a collection of news articles generated by a set of search terms related to DOI's mission. The inclusion of particular stories is not intended to reflect their importance, nor is it intended to endorse the political viewpoints or affiliations included in news coverage.

DOI In The News

Ethics office director rebukes agency heads

<<https://www.cbsnews.com/news/ethics-office-director-rebukes-agency-heads/>>

CBS News [10/11/2017 10:21 AM, Rebecca Shabad, 14389K] reports that the acting director of the U.S. Office of Government Ethics is warning the leaders of government agencies that they should promote an "ethical culture," while suggesting some have practiced the opposite. In a memo issued to agency heads, David Apol, the acting director and general counsel of the Government Ethics office, wrote that he's grateful to leaders who have demonstrated a commitment to ethical service. "At the same time, I am deeply concerned that the actions of some in government leadership have harmed perceptions about the importance of ethics and what conduct is, and is not, permissible," Apol wrote. Apol called on these agency heads to "redouble" their commitment to ethics in government. Officials' use of charter flights such as by Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin, Energy Secretary Rick Perry, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and

Environmental Protection Agency head Scott Pruitt have recently come under scrutiny.

The
<https://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/trumps-cabinet-cant-seem-to-stop-ta-king-private-planes/2017/10/11/358f83fe-a87c-11e7-850e-2bdd1236be5d_story.ht ml?utm_term=.0075cb7f8e3a> Washington Post [10/11/2017 7:27
PM, Editorial
Board] reports now that former health and human services secretary
Tom Price
has been drummed out of government for swanning around the nation in private planes at exorbitant expense to taxpayers, other members of the Trump administration are jockeying to claim the mantle of haughtiest Cabinet
member. Among the leading contenders is Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, who seems to have learned contempt for the people who pay his salary at the knee of Mr. Price. Mr. Zinke thought nothing of spending $12,375 on a charter flight from Las Vegas, where he spoke at the behest of a political patron, to his home state of Montana in June. He waved away criticism of the flight
as "a little B.S. over travel."

<http://www.msnbc.com/the-beat-with-ari-melber/watch/new-trump-cabinet-offic
ial-under-fire-for-ethics-spending-1070659139597> MSNBC
[10/11/2017 7:44 PM,
Staff, 4332K] reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke follows
Tom Price
using government resources for personal travel. Trump's ethics chief says
he's "deeply concerned" with the administration's actions.

Additional reporting:
<<http://www.miamiherald.com/opinion/editorials/>

article178397746.html> Miami Herald [10/11/2017 9:23 PM, Staff, 4830K, FL]

Watchdog Uses Years Old Endorsement To Claim Zinke Violated Ethics Rules As Trump's Interior Secretary

<<http://dailycaller.com/2017/10/11/zinke-violated-ethics-regulations-with-years-old-statement-govt-watchdog-says/>>

The Daily Caller [10/11/2017 6:02 PM, Tim Pearce, 5106K, DC] reports a government watchdog group is calling for an ethics investigation into Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke after a statement from Zinke endorsing a fundraising firm was found on the firm's website. Campaign for Accountability (CfA) filed a request for investigation with the Office of Government Ethics Wednesday, claiming Zinke broke federal ethics regulations by using his office as a platform to endorse a private business. ForthRight Strategy, a fundraising firm hired by Zinke during his 2014 congressional race, featured an apparent endorsement from Zinke on the front page of its website, according to CfA.

"You guys are in large part why I had the money and support that afforded me the opportunity to become a Congressman for the at-large seat in Montana," Zinke's statement read. "Your results and personal commitment to Team Zinke were bar none! I greatly value the professional as well as the personal relationship we have developed over many years! Thank you!" The statement is several years old, predating when Zinke was nominated to serve as secretary of the Interior, CfA confirmed to The Daily Caller News Foundation.

Zinke's Mix Of Fundraisers, Government Work Raises New Ethics Concerns

<<http://www.abcactionnews.com/newsy/zinkes-mix-of-fundraisers-government-wor> k-raises-new-ethics-concerns> ABC Action News [10/11/2017

9:50 AM, Lindsey

Pulse and Katherine Biek, 517K, FL] reports that Interior Secretary Ryan

Zinke has made some seemingly questionable travel decisions, and media outlets just uncovered some more. Politico uncovered two more instances of the Cabinet official attending fundraisers when the U.S.

government paid for his travel. In March, Zinke reportedly went to a fundraiser affiliated with

Rep. Steve Daines at a ski resort in Montana, and in May, he's said to have attended a fundraiser for Rep. Don Young at a steakhouse in Alaska. The outlet says Zinke also attended several other events with donors while on official trips.

<<http://my.tvey.es/Sz25G>> CNN [10/11/2017 9:49 PM, Staff,

888K] reports that ethics hawks are zeroing in on Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's travel and whether he violated a federal law intended to insulate federal employees from political influence.

<<http://www.politico.com/tipsheets/morning-energy/2017/10/11/reading-the-tea>

-leaves-on-clean-power-plan-repeal-222739> Politico [10/11/2017 10:00 AM,

Anthony Andragna, 10378K] reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke attended at least two additional political fundraisers during trips he took for official Interior business, Pro's Esther Whieldon and Ben scoop. Federal law permits Cabinet officials to participate in partisan political activities on their own time and without using any federal resources, but FEC records don't list any reimbursement payments to Interior for the events. "Both law and common sense tell us that taxpayer resources are supposed to be used when you're doing the taxpayers' business [but] are not supposed to be used to help candidates get elected," said

Lefebvre
Brendan
Fischer of the nonprofit watchdog organization Campaign Legal Center.
Spokeswoman Heather Swift said ethics officials signed off on all trips and they all complied with the law. "The Interior Department under the Trump
Administration has always and will always work to ensure all officials follow appropriate rules and regulations when traveling, including seeking commercial options at all times appropriate and feasible, to ensure
the
efficient use of government resources," she said.

<<http://www.govexec.com/management/2017/10/zinke-mnuchin-travels-raise-still-more-questions/141692/>> Government Executive [10/11/2017
1:23 PM, Charles
S. Clark, 156K, DC] reports that the array of issues swirling around
Trump
Cabinet members' taxpayer-funded travel now include potential violations of the Hatch Act. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Tuesday was reported by
Politico to have attended two political fund-raisers during official travel and leisure trips, raising questions about whether he properly complied with
Hatch Act restrictions on mixing politics with government business. Zinke,
Politico disclosed, has attended at least three "political fundraisers while traveling for official business, including a weekend ski getaway less than three weeks after he was sworn in that donors paid up to $3,000 to attend,"

according to sources and documents the publication reviewed.
"Zinke has held at least a half-dozen other events with big donors or influential conservative organizations while on official trips," the report said.
His
mixing of travel purposes is under review by the Interior Department's inspector general. The newest wrinkle is whether Zinke has violated the Hatch Act. While Cabinet members may conduct partisan political activities,
rules require them to do so on their own time, with their own resources, and without invoking their government job title. An Interior spokesman said
Zinke's travels were approved by ethics officials and were compliant with the law.

Additional reporting:

<<http://edition.cnn.com/videos/politics/2017/10/12/ryan-zinke-interior-secre-tary-travel-federal-law-marsh-dnt-ac.cnn>> CNN [10/11/2017 10:37 PM, Rene Marsh, 15712K]

<<http://www.msn.com/en-us/news/politics/zinkes-travel-continues-to-raise-ethical-questions/ar-AAAtjJP5>> MSN [10/12/2017 12:44 AM, Rene Marsh and Gregory Wallace, 880K]

<<http://www.msnbc.com/rachel-maddow/watch/secretary-zinke-having-awesome-time-with-taxpayer-money-1071065155746>> MSNBC [10/12/2017 12:27 AM, Rachel Maddow, 4332K]

<<http://my.tvey.es/Sa9c3>> Time Warner Cable News Buffalo [10/11/2017 1:25 PM, Staff, NY]

<http://www.wral.com/news/national_world/national/video/

17010733/> WRAL
[10/12/2017 6:05 AM, Staff, 1045K, NC]

<http://missoulain.com/opinion/letters/zinke-should-apologize-to-employees/a
rticle_bc8ee1d2-3ef8-5464-ae93-3351f1df03b1.html> Missoulain
[10/11/2017
9:45 AM, Ed Gilk, 180K, MT]

<https://www.salon.com/2017/10/11/ryan-zinkes-magical-taxpayer-tour-ski-reso rt-alaskan-steakhouse/> Salon [10/11/2017 9:31 AM, Taylor Link, 5434K, CA]

Zinke blasted over travel; will not touch Confederate monuments on federal
lands

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/powerpost/paloma/the-energy-202/2017/10
/11/the-energy-202-the-other-scientific-consensus-the-epa-is-bucking/59dcff9
230fb0468cea81e52/> Washington Post [10/11/2017 10:19 AM, Dino Grandoni,
39042K] reports that Zinke told Breitbart News over the weekend that there are some monuments on federal lands he will not touch — Confederate monuments. "No monuments are going to be removed from federal land," Zinke said. "Where do you start and where do you stop?... If you're a native
Indian, I can tell you, you're not very happy about the history of General
Sherman or perhaps President Grant." Zinke continued: "I think we should never hide from our history or erase our history. I think we should embrace the history and understand the faults and learn from it. But when you try to erase history, what happens is you also erase how it happened and why it happened and the ability to learn from it."

<https://www.metro.us/news/politics/ryan-zinke-confederate-monuments-removed>

Metro [10/11/2017 5:20 PM, Erin Tiernan, 1106K, NY] reports Interior

Secretary Ryan Zinke said if the government caves to leftist demands and has Confederate monuments removed it could lead to a "slippery slope" where next Native Americans will be calling for the removal of statues commemorating leaders who lead violence against their ancestors. "Where do you start and where do you stop?" Zinke asked in an interview with conservative Breitbart News on Sunday. "It's a slippery slope. If you're a native Indian, I can tell you, you're not very happy about the history of General Sherman or perhaps President Grant." Zinke's rhetoric falls in line with that of conservative commentators and President Donald Trump himself. Zinke said removing monuments is equivalent to erasing history and vowed the Department of Interior would not remove any Confederate monuments. "I think we should never hide from our history or erase our history. I think we should embrace the history and understand the faults and learn from it. But when you try to erase history, what happens is you also erase how it happened and why it happened and the ability to learn from it," Zinke told Breitbart. But critics are calling bull on what they said is a simplistic response from Zinke that kind of just misses the point.

House committee advances bill to limit Antiquities Act

<http://www.washingtonexaminer.com/house-committee-advances-bill-to-limit-an> tiquties-act/article/2637232> Washington Examiner [10/11/2017 6:08 PM, Josh Siegel, 3567K, DC] reports that the House Natural Resources Committee advanced legislation Wednesday that would limit the power of presidents to designate public land as national monuments. The National Monument Creation and Protection Act, moved by a 23-17 vote, would overhaul the 1906 Antiquities Act, which gives the president unilateral power to protect structures of "historic and scientific interest."

Separately on Tuesday, the Natural Resources Committee considered a resolution authored by Rep. Raul Grijalva of Arizona requiring Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to disclose more information about his review of recent national monument designations. The measure did not advance. President Trump ordered the Interior Department to undertake a review of 27 national monuments shortly after his inauguration. Zinke issued a report to Trump in August, but it was not made public. A memo leaked to the media revealed that Zinke recommends shrinking or changing the boundaries of six national monuments and proposes management changes to four others that could reopen areas to logging, cattle grazing and commercial fishing. The Bears Ears National Monument in Utah is perhaps the most contentious one Zinke pegs for a size reduction.

<https://thinkprogress.org/house-bill-limit-presidential-authority-monuments>

-b44751cedee4/> ThinkProgress [10/11/2017 2:09 PM, Jenny Rowland, 3037K, DC] reports the full House Natural Resources Committee on Wednesday is marking up a bill that would limit the president's authority to protect historic places and landscapes. H.R. 3990, introduced by Rep. Rob Bishop, who chairs the committee, would radically re-imagine the Antiquities Act - the law allowing presidents to create national monuments - by imposing acreage caps, narrowing the definition of what deserves protection, and prohibiting national monuments that protect oceans, among other restrictions. The committee will also address another bill, a resolution of inquiry filed by Rep. Grijalva and 25 other House Democrats, aimed at getting the administration to provide Congress with more information about Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke's national monument review and report. Zinke has come under fire recently for the secret nature of his report which would significantly reduce at least four national monuments. Ironically, Bishop's bill undercuts many of the recommendations made in the leaked version of Zinke's report as well as the Trump Administration's overall agenda on national monuments.

The <http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2017/oct/11/national-monument-creation-and-protection-act-limi/> Washington Times [10/11/2017 8:34 PM, Ben Wolfgang, 3771K, DC] reports that the bill, expected to pass the GOP-led House, overhauls the 1906 Antiquities Act and sets new limits on what land can be designated as a monument and lays out the level of consultation that must take place between the federal and local governments during the process. The House legislation comes amid a review of recent monument designations by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, who has recommended to President Trump that a handful of monuments – most notably the sprawling Bears Ears National Monument and Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, both in Utah – be drastically cut down in size.

Additional reporting:

<<https://wtop.com/congress/2017/10/house-gop-moves-to-revamp-law-on-national-monuments/>> WTOP [10/11/2017 4:58 PM, Associated Press, DC]

<http://www.pressofatlanticcity.com/news/ap/nation/house-gop-moves-to-revamp-law-on-national-monuments/article_778c77de-0352-529a-bba3-22b636e80995.html>

The Press of Atlantic City [10/11/2017 4:58 PM, By Matthew Daly, 142K, NJ]

<<https://www.ecowatch.com/congress-public-lands-2495535091.html>> EcoWatch [10/11/2017 11:18 AM, Staff, 564K, OH]

<<https://www.ksl.com/?sid=46125948&nid=757>> KSL [10/11/2017 3:32 PM, Amy Joi O'Donoghue, KSL, 1018K, UT]

<<http://www.statesmanjournal.com/story/news/politics/2017/10/11/house-gop-bi-ll-would-give-states-veto-power-over-large-national-monuments/755776001/>> Statesman Journal [10/11/2017 2:17 PM, Matthew Daly, 258K, OR]

<<http://kuer.org/post/national-monuments-revamp-gets-house-panel-ok>> KVER [10/11/2017 8:15 PM, Judy Fahys, CA]

[MA] Feds ignore objections to Cape Wind

<<http://www.mvtimes.com/2017/10/11/feds-ignore-objections-cape-wind/>> Martha's Vineyard Times [10/11/2017 12:18 PM, June Parker, MA] reports that the federal government is continuing to ignore us when it comes to Cape Wind. The recent rubberstamp of Cape Wind's long-term lease of 46 square miles of Nantucket Sound disregards the wishes of the state, the local government, and the Wampanoag tribes on both Martha's Vineyard and Cape Cod. Why don't the feds realize this project is too expensive, outdated, and unwanted in our waters? Over the objections of the locals, the U.S. Department of the Interior first issued a lease to Cape Wind in 2010. In 2017, nothing has changed. The Steamship Authority, fishermen, the Cape and Islands delegation, the tribes, and many others all wrote to the Department of the Interior telling them Cape Wind does not belong in Nantucket Sound, there are far too many conflicts here and to cancel Cape Wind's lease. Their response? To continue to ignore us and instead rubber stamp approval.

[UT] Op-ed: Utah delegation needs a clear message about our monuments

<<https://www.deseretnews.com/article/865690796/Op-ed-Utah-delegation-needs-a-clear-message-about-our-monuments.html>> Deseret News [10/11/2017 10:10 AM, Josh Boling, 1322K, UT] reports that if the Trump administration, Ryan Zinke and our Utah representatives wanted us to truly trust them then they would stop doing literally everything they could to undermine their own words. The latest: a leak from Trump's White House detailing Interior Secretary Zinke's monument review in which he recommends downsizing both Bears Ears and Grand Staircase Escalante national monuments.

[NV] Nevada's Heller, Laxalt join Sandoval in supporting sage grouse decision

<<http://www.nevadaappeal.com/news/government/nevadas-heller-laxalt-join-sand> oval-in-supporting-sage-grouse-decision/> Nevada Appeal [10/11/2017 6:42 PM,

Staff, 22K, NV] reports that Sen. Dean Heller and Attorney General Adam Laxalt have now joined Gov. Brian Sandoval in applauding the BLM decision to cancel withdrawal of federal lands in six western states. The original plan was to withdraw 10 million acres of land – a third of that total in Nevada – to protect the sage grouse. The rules would have severely limited mining and energy development in those areas. But Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke signed an order last week canceling that withdrawal and giving states more flexibility to manage the grouse population.

The

<http://www.buffalobulletin.com/opinion/columns/article_1581a422-ae8d-11e7-8

041-cfff0ef30173.html> Buffalo Bulletin [10/11/2017 8:04 AM, Staff, 1K, WY]

reports that Wyoming spent a decade tailoring a sage-grouse conservation plan, and when it comes to preserving greater sage-grouse habitat, few states do it better than our own. The Department of the Interior and the BLM should proceed with caution before they attempt to amend federal land use plans regarding the greater sage-grouse. And quite honestly, if it ain't broke, don't fix it. Wide-sweeping changes could backfire as putting the quirky bird's habitat at risk could lead to a listing on the Endangered Species Act, and that would mean more restrictions on everything from agriculture to energy.

Earlier this year, Ryan Zinke, Interior secretary, ordered a review of the sage-grouse plans and later released a report calling for changes to portions of the existing plan. The review and report were in response to industry representatives who said the current plan is too restrictive and expansive. Zinke said he's attempting to find balance between local economies and sage-grouse conservation. We hope that's the case and the Interior isn't attempting to appeal to a single group. Doing so will not protect sage-grouse or our Wyoming way of life.

[CA] Fears grow of wildfires merging in California

<http://thewashingtonpostnie.newspaperdirect.com/epaper/showarticle.aspx?article=b4c0fbe9-1a9b-4a1f-8740-110e8c326eae>> Washington Post [10/12/2017 4:56 AM, Cleve R. Wootson Jr., Kristine Phillips and Joel Achenbach, 3K] reports that the wind known as the Diablo is picking up again, the air is dry, there is no rain in sight and the killer wildfires that have scorched the wine country of Northern California remain almost completely uncontained. Officials warned Wednesday that some of the big fires could merge.

Statewide, 8,000 firefighters are working to contain 22 wildfires that cover 170,000 acres — a collective area larger than the city of Chicago. The worst are in Napa, Sonoma and Mendocino counties, where 4,500 homes and businesses had been burned at last count. The fire has put a strain on federal resources, too. Coming on the heels of catastrophic hurricanes, the California wildfires in total represent just one of 22 disasters that the Federal Emergency Management Agency is managing across the nation. Eighty-five percent of FEMA's 9,900 full-time employees are working "in the field," away from their assigned offices, agency spokesman Mike Cappannari said. With some of the fires in the Sierras and Southern California nearing containment, Cal Fire is shifting resources — which include 73 helicopters and 30 air tankers — to the most dangerous fires in and around wine country. The U.S. Forest Service said it has dispatched 740 personnel. "We are in a wickedly dangerous fire situation and when one of us needs help, all of us come," said Bob Baird, director of fire and aviation management for the Forest Service's Pacific Southwest region.

[CA] Whole towns evacuated as Northern California firestorm grows; at least 23 people are dead, 285 missing

<http://www.latimes.com/local/lanow/la-me-ln-fires-northern-california-20171011-story.html>

> Los Angeles Times [10/11/2017 10:05 PM, Phil Willon, Paige St. John, Louis Sahagun, Chris Megerian and Alene Tchekmedyian] reports the death toll rose to 21 Wednesday as multiple wildfires continued to spread across Northern California's wine country. As firefighters were dealing with wind shifts Wednesday afternoon, new evacuation orders were issued. All residents of Calistoga were ordered to leave their homes. State and federal officials portrayed an all-out effort to fend off the devastating wildfires at a news conference at a state emergency operations center outside Sacramento. The situation remains very dangerous, officials said. According to Cal Fire spokeswoman Heather Williams, 11 people have died in Sonoma County, six in Mendocino County, two in Yuba County and two in Napa County.

<<http://www.cnn.com/2017/10/11/us/california-fires-updates/index.html>> CNN

[10/11/2017 8:45 PM, Jason Hanna, Nicole Chavez and Steve Almasy] reports that in hard-hit Sonoma County, Sheriff Rob Giordano said his office has received 600 reports of missing people, of which detectives have been able to locate 315 people. Giordano believes many of the 285 people who are unaccounted for will be located once telecommunications issues are solved, but he also fears more bodies will be found.

<<https://ww2.kqed.org/news/2017/10/11/at-least-21-dead-3500-structures-destroyed-in-northern-california-fires/>> KQED

[10/11/2017 4:49 PM, Staff, 1027K, CA] reports that Cal Fire Chief Ken Pimlott gave an updated death toll late Wednesday morning, calling the series of wildfires in wine country "a serious, critical, catastrophic event." He says 8,000 firefighters are focusing on protecting lives and property as they battle the flames from 21 fires that are chewing through critically dry vegetation. Pimlott says Oregon, Nevada, Arizona and Washington are sending firefighters and the U.S. Forest Service is sending fire engines, bulldozers and hand crews.

<<http://www.governing.com/topics/public-justice-safety/tns-wine-country-wildfires-firefighters.html>> Governing

[10/11/2017 7:31 AM, Lizzie Johnson, Trisha Thadani, Melody Gutierrez and Peter Fimrite, 306K, DC] reports that the dire situation was clear as the U.S. Forest Service was called in to help exhausted state firefighters battle 17 active wildfires, which have blackened more than 115,000 acres statewide, and, Pimlott said, the number is expected to keep rising.

<<http://www.mercurynews.com/2017/10/11/as-death-toll-climbs-evacuations-expands-in-wine-country-fires/>> Mercury News [10/11/2017 12:06 PM, Mark Gomez, Katy Murphy, Erin Baldassari and David DeBolt, 4169K, CA] reports that at a news conference Tuesday morning, officials with the Governor's Office of Emergency Services, Cal Fire and other agencies reported that 17 fires statewide had burned a combined 115,000 acres and sent 3,200 evacuees to 28 shelters — and that the major fires in Napa and Sonoma were zero percent contained. Some 4,000 people are battling the fires, including crews from Nevada and the U.S. Forest Service. Air tankers dropped 266,000 gallons of retardant from the skies Monday.

<<http://my.tvey.es/Le67A>> Good Morning America [10/11/2017 10:05 AM, Staff, 32K, NV] reports that there were a new batch of evacuation orders in Northern California overnight, with thousands of people on the move. Everywhere you look you see melted metal, which goes on for block after block in a moonscape of gray ash; in many places the only thing left standing are the chimneys. As firefighters continue to defend downtown Santa Rosa from the onslaught of flames, from the ground and from the air, residents are taking stock of all they have lost in the heart of California wine country. The state of California is asking for reinforcement from the U.S. Forest Service. [Editorial note: consult source link for video] reports wildfires continue to strain government resources throughout California, creating a vicious cycle of fires and land burdened with excess fuels, which leads to bigger fires. About a third of California is federal land, where fire response and prevention falls mostly to the U.S. Forest Service. All Forest Service fire funds come from its base operating budget, so when firefighting costs shoot skyward as they have over the last several years, resources have to be cribbed from other budget lines like fire prevention and forest health in a system called "fire borrowing." The Forest Service has already spent a record-breaking $2 billion-plus on fire suppression this year, and it estimates that it will have to transfer more than a half-billion dollars from other Forest Service programs to cover fire response for the year.

[CA] Wildfires Burning Through Cash, Not Just Landscape

<https://ww2.kqed.org/news/2017/10/11/wildfires-burning-through-cash-not-just-landscape/>

KQED Public Radio [10/11/2017 3:00 PM, Ryan Levi, 920K, CA]

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue, who oversees the Forest Service, has repeatedly spoken out about the need for Congress to establish a dedicated reserve funding source for wildfires similar to what exists for other natural disasters like hurricanes. "This whole department at USDA is going to fight hard to communicate to Congress and the administration that we need permanent fire funding and stop this fire borrowing once and for all," Perdue said at an event last month to introduce new Forest Service Chief Tony Tooke.

[CA] Wildfires trample California's $58 billion wine industry

<http://www.msn.com/en-us/money/markets/wildfires-trample-californias-dollar>

58-billion-wine-industry/ar-AAthjmw> MSN [10/11/2017 9:28 AM, Jennifer

Kaplan, Lydia Mulvany and Jeffrey Taylor, 66K] reports that the fires ravaging Northern California stand to leave the area's renowned wine industry with damage that will be felt long after the final flames burn out.

At least four Napa Valley vineyards have been destroyed or significantly damaged, and the toll may be even worse in Sonoma County to the west. The fires mark the second natural disaster in three years for the area, which was hit by a magnitude 6.0 earthquake in 2014 that caused at least $500 million in economic damage, according to the U.S. Geological Survey. The efforts to quench the fires are far from complete, said Jonathan Cox, a spokesman for Cal Fire, the state's Department of Forestry and Fire Protection.

[CA] Will wine country disaster push Congress to fix fire budget?

<http://www.mcclatchydc.com/news/nation-world/national/article178381396.html>

McClatchy DC [10/12/2017 3:01 AM, Emily Cadei, 1478K, DC] reports that it's a rare point of bipartisan agreement in divided Washington: The federal system for funding firefighting is broken, and that's hurting our ability to prevent fires from breaking out in the first place. But lawmakers are at a loggerheads over how to fix the problem, a split that breaks down on largely regional, rather than partisan, grounds. Some in the House and Senate now hope that national coverage of Northern California's devastating fires could finally spur a congressional compromise, a bit of a silver lining emerging out of all the destruction.

At the root of the problem is the fact that forest fires are not treated like other natural disasters. While the Federal Emergency Management Agency can tap emergency funds for hurricane or tornado response, the U.S. Forest Service has to raid its other program budgets – including fire prevention – if it runs out of firefighting funds. That's become increasingly common in recent years, as fires have grown more intense and destructive. Sen. Jim Risch, R-Idaho notes that the Forest Service spent over half of its budget last year on firefighting, compared to 16 percent in 1995. In effect, the Forest Service has been transformed from a "management agency to a firefighting agency," Risch says.

[CA] Fire restoration activities planned

<http://www.trinityjournal.com/news/local/article_8b4c6c4a-ae20-11e7-9111-e7f11cc010b.html> The Trinity Journal [10/11/2017 9:15 AM, Sally Morris, 4K, CA] reports that once a fire is out, there's a lot more work to be done as soil scientists, hydrologists and other field experts assess the damage to predict and prepare for future environmental impacts within the burned areas. It is officially called the Burned Area Emergency Response process, and with the Helena fire more than 91 percent contained as of last week, that process is well underway through the multi-agency efforts of the U.S. Forest Service, BLM and the Natural Resources Conservation Service.

[CA] Rives Mansion hits the market for $1.3 million

<http://www.thedowneypatriot.com/articles/rives-mansion-hits-the-market-for-

13-million> The Downey Patriot [10/11/2017 11:56 AM, Alex Dominguez, 4K, CA] reports that Downey's historic Rives Mansion is officially for sale. After what has been a turbulent few years for Downey's iconic property, the foreclosed mansion officially went on the market Oct. 6 with the bank listing it at $1.3 million. Built in 1911, the home was constructed by L.A. County district attorney James Rives and is listed on the U.S. Department of the Interior's National Register of Historic Landmarks as "a most interesting link to its agricultural past before Downey's mass suburbanization after World War II."

Bureau of Indian Affairs

[MA] Taunton City Council extends emergency services agreement with tribe

<http://www.tauntongazette.com/news/20171011/taunton-city-council-extends-em

ergency-services-agreement-with-tribe> Taunton Daily Gazette [10/11/2017 12:38 PM, Charles Winokoor, 96K, MA] reports that the 151-acre site of the stalled Mashpee Wampanoag resort casino project in East Taunton will continue to be accessible to police, fire and emergency medical services – at least for the next six months. The Taunton City Council, on the recommendation of City Solicitor Jason D. Buffington, voted unanimously Tuesday night to extend a memorandum of understanding with the tribe, so that those first responders continue to have legal access to the land.

The barren Stevens Street site has been fenced off and devoid of construction activity since a federal judge in 2016 ruled in favor of 25 plaintiffs – who challenged the federal Department of the Interior and its 2015 decision to place the Taunton land and 170 acres in Mashpee "in trust" as Indian reservation territory.

[SD] Family sues Indian boarding school in Pierre for wrongful death

<http://www.argusleader.com/story/news/2017/10/11/wrongful-death-lawsuit-aga-inst-indian-boarding-school-family-girl-who-died-after-suicide-attempt-fed/753904001/>> Argus Leader [10/11/2017 1:34 PM, John Hult, 106K, SD] reports that the family of a girl who died after a suicide attempt at a federal Indian boarding school has filed a wrongful death lawsuit against the federal government. Emerson Little Elk of Todd County says the Pierre Indian Learning Center's staff failed to adequately monitor his granddaughter, who had a history of depression and threats of suicide, and that the center's staff was slow to respond when they were informed of her suicide attempt in October 2015. The family has charged negligence and asks a jury to award compensation for funeral expenses, compensation for pain and suffering and attorney fees. The case was filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in South Dakota. The girl was 14 years old when the incident took place at the Pierre boarding school, which is overseen by the Department of Interior's Bureau of Indian Education. The school serves Native American students from first through eighth grades, focusing on those with behavioral, mental health and emotional needs.

[MT] Homeland Hero

<<https://flatheadbeacon.com/2017/10/11/homeland-hero/>> Flathead Beacon

[10/11/2017 7:00 AM, Tristan Scott, 27K, MT] reports that as a Pikuni (or Blackfeet) warrior and veteran of the United States Marines Corps, Jesse DesRosier believes it is his duty and obligation to protect his country and lands, as well as to uphold the tribe's traditions and culture while safeguarding its natural resources for future generations.

DesRosier is marshaling resources to defend a critical aspect of Blackfeet identity — the natural landscape where Blackfeet derived much of their spirituality. Specifically, he and dozens of other Native American veterans and active-duty members have petitioned U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to defend a sacred ancestral homeland known as the Badger-Two Medicine, a 130,000-acre area named for the two rivers that define it. DesRosier and other tribal members, as well as numerous conservation groups, are seeking to furnish the wild and sacred Badger-Two Medicine with permanent protections from oil and gas drilling. They're currently calling on the Interior Department to defend the Obama administration's cancellation of the last remaining oil and gas leases and to protect the area in perpetuity.

[AZ] The Largest Coal-Fired Power Plant in the West Is Slated for Closure

<<http://www.sierraclub.org/sierra/2017-6-november-december/feature/largest-coal-fired-power-plant-west-slated-for-closure>>

Sierra Club
[10/12/2017 4:00

AM, Evelyn Nieves, 227K] reports that Percy Deal, 68, has been fighting the coal industry all of his adult life. In the late 1960s, Peabody Energy started to mine Black Mesa's vast coal deposits. In the process, the company began using billions of gallons of the Navajo Aquifer's water-as much as 3 million gallons a day-to move the coal via a slurry pipeline to the Mohave Generating Station, outside Laughlin, Nevada.

Deal's quest to find answers fueled a career in politics and made him a prominent voice in the grassroots movement to monitor the coal business on the reservation. Now, things are poised to change again as the coal mining and the coal-fired energy production on and around Black Mesa are winding down. The Navajo Generating Station, a 2,250-megawatt coal plant on Navajo land that is the largest coal-fired power plant west of the Mississippi River, is set to shut down as early as 2019. Since the NGS is the sole customer of Peabody's Kayenta Mine on Black Mesa, that, too, is supposed to close-unless the tribes can find a way to ship coal outside the region, which many industry analysts consider highly unlikely.

[AZ] Navajo Nation President Begaye Testifies before Congress to Fix Problems with 1974 Navajo-Hopi Land Settlement Act

<<http://nativenewsonline.net/currents/navajo-nation-president-begaye-testifies-congress-fix-problems-1974-navajo-hopi-land-settlement-act/>>

Native News
[10/12/2017 12:02 AM, Staff, 57K, MI] reports that on Wednesday, Oct. 4,

President Russell Begaye testified before the House Natural Resources Committee on Indian, Insular and Alaska Native Affairs supporting HR 2402.

The legislation aims to unencumber Navajo lands that have been encumbered by preference right lease applications (PRLAs). "This important legislation brings to a close one chapter of a four-decade-old federal statutory obligation to the Navajo Nation that was authorized in the Navajo Hopi Settlement Act of 1974," President Begaye said.

Introduced by Congressman Ben Ray Luján, HR 2402 is an attempt to rectify a quandary resulting from the Navajo-Hopi Settlement Act of 1974. The 1974 Act committed Congress to provide the Navajo unencumbered lands that the Nation would select from federal lands managed by the Bureau of Land Management.

[CA] Camp 4 Final Deal Getting Close

<<http://www.independent.com/news/2017/oct/12/camp-4-final-deal-getting-close>

/> Santa Barbara Independent [10/12/2017 5:54 AM, Kelsey Brugger, 81K, CA]

reports that resentment and bitterness has built up for years in the Santa Ynez Valley. Valley residents have adopted a "just say no" approach to the Chumash tribe's plans to expand the existing roughly 138-acre reservation.

This tentative agreement surrounds Camp 4, the 1,400-acre property east of Highway 154.

County supervisors Joan Hartmann and Das Williams met privately with Chumash chair Ken Kahn and vice chair Raul Armenta for six months after years of public negotiations failed. The tribe has for six years petitioned the U.S.

government to bring Camp 4 into the reservation, saying they need to build more housing. Annexation, which was granted on the last day of the Obama administration, frees the land from the county's firm development codes and property-tax rolls. The deal would stipulate that the tribe would pay $178,500 annually while the county would drop its formal opposition. The property would be divided into 143 one-acre plots, one for each tribal member. The agreement would be in place until 2040, which Hartmann said is about longest timeframe federal regulators at the Department of the Interior would likely allow.

Bureau of Land Management

[TN] Villagers help create a 'hidden gem'

<http://www.tellicovillageconnection.com/news/article_178952cc-21d8-5287-8573-c86acd9eb73e.html> The Connection [10/11/2017 8:00 AM, Staff, TN] reports that nestled in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains and spanning 31 miles along the eastern shore of Tellico Lake, the East Lakeshore Trail provides plenty of opportunity for those in the region to enjoy the outdoors. In 2002, Tennessee Valley Authority sold land for the development of what is now the WindRiver community. A small group of citizens from Tellico Village, Vonore and Greenback voiced concerns about possible damage the new development could cause. From there, the Watershed Association of the Tellico Reservoir, or WATeR, was born.

"It is an all volunteer, not-for-profit organization whose focus is on water pollution, soil erosion and promoting environmental education and appropriate outdoor recreational pursuits," Bob Martin, WATeR board member, said. "It has sponsored an annual lakeshore cleanup for many years." The East Lakeshore Trail was officially designated as a National Recreation Trail by the United States Department of the Interior on May 30, 2012.

[CO] Legal Protest Targets Trump Fracking Plan That Threatens Colorado River

<http://www.biologicaldiversity.org/news/press_releases/2017/fracking-10-11-2017.php> Center for Biological Diversity [10/11/2017 2:26 PM, Staff, 72K] reports conservation groups on Tuesday challenged a Bureau of Land Management decision to auction off more than 27,000 acres of western Colorado public lands in December for fracking operations. Fracking would threaten the dwindling water supply in the Colorado River, a water source for about 40 million people. It also would worsen Colorado's air, water and greenhouse gas pollution and further imperil endangered Colorado pikeminnow and razorback sucker. Warming temperatures driven by greenhouse gas pollution have already reduced flows in the Colorado River, which supplies water to seven western states and Mexico. Scientists project that flow declines could exceed 30 percent by mid-century and 55 percent by the end of the century if greenhouse gas emissions continue unabated.

[CO] Suit seeks to stop oil-gas drilling on 9 parcels

<<http://www.postregister.com/articles/west/2017/10/11/suit-seeks->

stop-oil-ga

s-drilling-9-parcels> Post Register [10/11/2017 8:17 AM, Associated Press, 47K, ID] reports that a Colorado county and three environmental groups have sued the federal government, saying the sale of nine oil and gas leases on public land in southwestern Colorado could harm the threatened Gunnison sage grouse. The lawsuit filed in Denver federal court Tuesday says the federal Bureau of Land Management didn't consult with wildlife managers and didn't conduct required reviews before selling leases in March. The lawsuit asks a judge to invalidate the leases. Agency spokesman Jayson Barangan said officials hadn't seen the lawsuit and couldn't comment. The Gunnison sage grouse was protected under the Endangered Species Act in 2014. Only about 5,000 remain, all in southwestern Colorado and southeastern Utah. The suit was filed by the San Miguel County commissioners, Rocky Mountain Wild, San Juan Citizens Alliance and Conservation Colorado.

[WY] US government halts Wyoming wild horse roundup amid dispute

<<http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2017/oct/11/us-government-halts-wyoming>

-wild-horse-roundup-ami/> The Washington Times [10/11/2017 4:29 PM, Mead Gruver, 3771K] reports the U.S. government has agreed to halt a Wyoming wild horse roundup amid a legal dispute over whether it should count foals toward the roundup quota. The U.S. Bureau of Land Management and roundup opponents agreed in a court filing Tuesday the roundup would stop at 1,560 horses of all ages, a number the BLM was set to reach Wednesday. U.S. District Judge Nancy Freudenthal in Cheyenne was set to rule within days whether to allow the roundup to resume while a lawsuit filed by the opponents moves ahead. The roundup began Sept. 23 and originally was expected to take four to six weeks. The Wild Horse Preservation Campaign and two photographers sued Friday, claiming the BLM was deviating from past practice by not counting captured foals toward the roundup's 1,560-horse limit. A spokeswoman for the BLM's Wyoming State Office, Kristen Lenhardt, declined comment citing agency policy not to comment on pending litigation.

<<http://www.sweetwaternow.com/blm-gathered-1062-horses-12-deaths/>>

SweetwaterNOW [10/11/2017 4:04 PM, Katie Glennemeier, 25K, WY] reports that as of October 10, the project has gathered 1,062 adults horses, 269 foals, and returned 4 animals to the range. Twelve horses been euthanized, all categorized as having chronic or pre-existing conditions diagnosed with a prognosis of "hopeless for recovery" by a veterinarian. Those conditions include conditions like poorly healed fractures, club feet, and deformities. According to the daily reports, the BLM has also shipped 1,148 horses to contracted holding facilities in Rock Springs; Axtell, Utah; and Bruneau, Idaho.

Additional reporting:

<<http://kgab.com/wyoming-wild-horse-roundup-halted/>> KGAB [10/11/2017 2:36 PM, Associated Press, 16K, WY]

<https://www.heraldandnews.com/news/local_news/blm-working-to-determine-caus-e-of-wild-horse-deaths/article_9cabb0e2-8e0d-5dd2-82b7-c2cb8f941fd7.html>

Herald and News [10/11/2017 6:45 PM, Staff, 28K, OR]

Bureau of Ocean Energy Management

Scientists Eavesdrop on Little-known Beaked Whales to Learn How Deeply They
Dive

<<http://www.sciencenewsline.com/news/2017101115440026.html>>

ScienceNewsline

[10/11/2017 8:46 PM, Staff, 12K] reports that scientists have reported the first dive depths for Gervais' and True's beaked whales, two of the least known beaked whale species known as mesoplodonts. The study is also the first to use a towed linear hydrophone array to document dive depths for beaked whales, and researchers say it's a promising method to obtain dive depths for other beaked whale species.

The findings by NOAA scientists from the Northeast Fisheries Science Center (NEFSC) in Woods Hole, Mass. and a colleague now at Hydroacoustics Inc in Rochester, NY were recently reported in the Journal of the Acoustical Society of America. "Much of what we know about beaked whales and their dive depths is from two or three species, and from a few locations. We know so little about Gervais' and True's beaked whales, but now we know something about how deep they dive and at what depths they are foraging, so this is a step forward," said Annamaria Izzi DeAngelis, lead author of the study and a marine mammal researcher in the passive acoustics group at the NEFSC. The study was funded by NOAA Fisheries, the U.S. Navy N45 Program, and the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management. Data were collected as part of the Atlantic Marine Assessment Program for Protected Species (AMAPPS) program.

[NJ] New Jersey Gov. Christie Rejects President's Offshore Drilling Plan

<<https://www.heartland.org/news-opinion/news/new-jersey-gov-christie-rejects>

-presidents-offshore-drilling-plan> The Heartland Institute
[10/12/2017 7:27

AM, Kenneth Artz, IL] reports that Gov. Chris Christie of New Jersey is officially objecting to President Donald Trump's proposal to open the Atlantic Ocean coastline to offshore oil and gas exploration and production. Gov. Chris Christie of New Jersey filed formal objections to President Donald Trump's proposal to open the Atlantic Ocean coastline to offshore oil and gas exploration and production.

In formal comments filed on August 16, the Christie administration reaffirmed the governor's opposition to any oil and gas production off the New Jersey coast, saying it would endanger the state's natural resources, coastal communities, and overall economy. New Jersey officials have long opposed drilling in the Atlantic, saying they believe any spills could put the state's $700 billion worth of coastal properties at risk. In addition, New Jersey's $45 billion shore-based tourism industry and its commercial fishing industry, which generates $8 billion annually and supports approximately 50,000 jobs, could also be harmed by a spill, state officials say. In a letter to the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management filed August 16, Bob Martin, commissioner of New Jersey's Department of Environmental Protection, outlined the state's opposition to any offshore drilling.

Bureau of Reclamation

[AZ] The Sierra Club's Shadowy History with the Navajo Generating Station

<<http://www.sierraclub.org/sierra/sierra-club-s-shadowy-history-navajo-gener> ating-station> Sierra Club [10/12/2017 7:27 AM, Bill Corcoran, CA] reports that when, in 2009, the Sierra Club launched a campaign pressing for the closure of the Navajo Generating Station, a massive power plant in the Four Corners region, the move seemed in-line with the organization's new priorities in the age of climate change. The Club's Beyond Coal campaign was beginning to hit its strides in halting or retiring coal-burning power plants nationwide, and the Navajo Generating Station, the largest coal plant west of the Mississippi River and the seventh largest source of carbon pollution in the United States, was a natural target.

While the Sierra Club had been working with Navajo and Hopi community leaders over many decades on a variety of issues, there had not been a clearing of the air about the organization's history regarding Navajo Generating Station. As the advocacy targeting the plant intensified, tribal activists rightly called for an airing of that history to ensure that the Sierra Club did not repeat past mistakes.

The story begins like this: In the early to mid-1960s, the Sierra Club spearheaded a national campaign to prevent construction of two hydroelectric dams in the Grand Canyon. For the Arizona political elite and the federal Bureau of Reclamation, the proposed dams would be the keystone of the Central Arizona Project—a massive infrastructure scheme to enrich agricultural and development interests by getting water and electricity to the booming cities of Phoenix and Tucson.

[Editorial note: consult source link for additional commentary]

Fish and Wildlife Service

250 Years After Washington Drained It, Feds Soak A Swamp

<https://www.wfdd.org/story/250-years-after-washington-drained-it-feds-soak-

swamp> 88.5 WFDD [10/11/2017 1:17 PM, Ben Finley, 8K, NC] reports that this is a story about a future president who tried to drain a swamp, and government workers who are making it wet again. By returning the habitat to its natural state, they just might keep the Great Dismal Swamp from heating up the planet. It was a young George Washington, working as a surveyor 254 years ago, who saw profits in the wetlands straddling the Virginia-North Carolina border. The seemingly impenetrable swamp had been dismissed as a deadly morass where explorers vanished and runaway slaves escaped. Today, scientists have discovered that the swamp's peat soil is a vital piece of the climate change puzzle, able to either contain or release a greenhouse gas that causes global warming. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is trying to undo damage by gradually "rewetting" the swamp. According to the U.S. Geological Survey, the last two big fires at the Great Dismal Swamp released an estimated total of 6.2 million metric tons of carbon dioxide – more than the annual output of a million cars.

The

<<http://democratherald.com/news/national/years-after-washington-drained-it-f> eds-soak-a-swamp/article_7d5a0d2d-b6f3-57ab-b1ce-e341db202c91.html> Albany

Democrat-Herald [10/11/2017 11:59 AM, Ben Finley, 49K, OR] reports that now a years-long project is under way to make the swamp wet again in the 113,000-acre national wildlife refuge in Virginia and North Carolina, where ditches dug to reach lumber dried out the peat, releasing climate-changing carbon and making wildfires more frequent. Scientists say that when peat is in its naturally wet state, it holds onto carbon from plants that have died over the course of centuries. Dried-out peat, however, releases that carbon into the atmosphere, contributing to global warming.

Mussel, once feared extinct, brought back to Ohio River

<<http://www.outdoornews.com/2017/10/11/mussel-feared-extinct-brought-back-oh> io-river/> Outdoor News [10/11/2017 11:29 AM, Associated Press, 18K, MN] A century ago, the mussel, named for the color of its inner shell and a small protuberance on its outer shell that resembles a feline foot, was also once found in streams as distant as Illinois, Indiana and Alabama, according to a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service fact sheet. In announcing the mussel's endangered status, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service declared that, unless reproducing populations of the purple cat's paw could be found or developed,

"the species will become extinct in the foreseeable future." With the world's only known population of purple cat's paw

pearlymusselsbarely

numbering two dozen, "a decision was made to relocate them and breed them in captivity and not to just rely on nature," said Michael Schramm, public outreach specialist for Ohio River Islands National Wildlife Refuge.

Bee-Killing Pesticide Found in 75 Percent of Global Honey Samples

<http://gearsofbiz.com/bee-killing-pesticide-found-in-75-percent-of-global-honey-samples/118833>> Gears Of Biz [10/11/2017 12:21 PM, Helen Clark, 223K]
reports that there's nothing sweet at all about the results of a recent study of honey from around the world. In samples from every continent except Antarctica, traces of neonicotinoid pesticides were found in 75 percent of them – even in honey from remote places like Tahiti. Almost half the samples contained at least two different types of pesticides.

The contamination rates were highest in North America, where a shocking 86 percent of the honey samples contained at least one neonicotinoid. For Asia, it was 80 percent; for Europe, 70 percent. The rate was lowest in South America (57 percent). In the study, published this month in the journal Science, researchers from the University of Neuchatel in Switzerland tested honey collected by citizen scientists from nearly 200 sites around the world. Earlier this month, the NRDC announced it is suing the Environmental Protection Agency for approving the use of neonicotinoids without consulting with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to ascertain the insecticides' impact on threatened or endangered species. The failure to do so is in violation of the federal Endangered Species Act.

[KY] Bald Eagle Population Soars in Kentucky

<<http://beforeitsnews.com/outdoors/2017/10/bald-eagle-population-soars-in-ke> ntucky-2477411.html> Before It's News [10/11/2017 10:26 AM, Meredith

Abercrombie, 578K] reports that the bald eagle population in Kentucky continues to flourish, with 164 nesting pairs recorded so far in 2017, according to the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. This is twice as many as seven years ago.

There are multiple factors that have contributed to the rise in the eagle population. The ban of DDT, a pesticide that caused eagle eggs to become fragile, has improved their health significantly. This, along with the nationwide reintroduction program for the birds and an increase in suitable habitats in the state such as water reservoirs and large wetlands, has helped the once-fleeting population come back to Kentucky, the Kentucky

Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources reports. This trend is also common nationwide, with breeding pairs increasing since the implementation of the Endangered Species Act of 1973, according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

[SD] The only ND man indicted in a SD sting for selling eagle parts is in custody

<http://www.grandforksherald.com/news/4342142-only-nd-man-indicted-sd-sting-

selling-eagle-parts-custody> Grand Forks Herald [10/11/2017 4:38 PM, Barry

Amundson, 87K, ND] A man who was the only North Dakotan to be indicted in an undercover operation where 15 people were indicted recently for selling and purchasing eagle and other protected migratory bird parts has denied the charges in a court appearance in federal court in Pierre. Sheldon Tree Top, 43, of Mandan, who faces up to two years in prison and a $250,000 fine, was taken into custody last Friday by the U.S. Marshal Service pending his trial. No trial date has been set. He entered a not guilty plea at the hearing. In a two-year operation, an informant with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service purchased protected eagle parts, as well as those from other migratory birds in danger, from a number of people mostly in South Dakota starting in 2014 and lasting into 2016.

[MT] Controversy Over Grizzly Bear Protection Continues

<<http://www.wbur.org/hereandnow/2017/10/11/grizzly-bear-protection-montana>>

90.9 WBUR [10/11/2017 12:26 PM, Cooper McKim, 783K, MA] reports that federal officials are considering removing grizzly bears in a northern Montana region from the endangered species list. This comes on the heels of a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service decision to delist bears in the Greater Yellowstone ecosystem – which took decades to resolve. But, the debate is far from over. Several groups have filed lawsuits to stop the switch and keep the grizzlies under federal management. Wyoming Public Radio's Cooper McKim reports.

[Editorial note: consult source link for audio]

[CA] Opinion: Tiny Mouse Is Huge Success Story for Endangered Species Act

<https://timesofsandiego.com/opinion/2017/10/11/tiny-mouse-huge-success-story-endangered-species-act/>

Times of San Diego [10/11/2017 5:15 PM, Brett Hartl, 60K, CA] reports hikers exploring the canyons and bluffs of Laguna Coast Wilderness Park may not know it, but they are in the midst of the incredible comeback of one of California's most endangered species. Pacific pocket mice recently released into the San Joaquin Hills by the San Diego Zoo have begun breeding on their own. It's a milestone for this tiny animal once thought extinct and a testament to the power of the Endangered Species Act. Habitat loss from development decimated the population to the point that it was believed to be extinct. Luckily a small population was "rediscovered" in 1993. They quickly received emergency endangered species protection from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and a captive breeding program was initiated shortly after.

US Forest Service

Wildfires: How They Form, And Why They're So Dangerous

<http://news.nationalgeographic.com/2017/10/wildfire-california-danger-environment-spd/>

National Geographic News [10/11/2017 2:27 PM, Austa Somvichian-Clausen, 10973K] reports as deadly wildfires continue to rage across Northern California's wine country, with winds picking up speed overnight and worsening conditions to now include a combined 54,000 acres of torched land, it now seems more important than ever to understand how wildfires work, and their lasting implications on our health and the environment. Though the exact source of Sonoma County's wildfires is unclear, authorities have pointed to the fact that 95 percent of fires in the state of California are started by people, according to CNN. Meteorologists aren't yet able to forecast wildfire outbreaks, but there are three conditions that must be present in order for a wildfire to burn. Firefighters refer to it as the fire triangle: fuel, oxygen, and a heat source.

The suppression of naturally occurring, low-intensity forest fires has actually aided in the ability for high-intensity wildfires to run rampant. In the first half of the 20th century, the U.S. Forest Service suffered from what historian Stephen Pyne calls "Pyrophobia," or the desire to suppress all wildfires. In some places, the path toward a safer, more ecologically sound relationship with fire is being blazed with prescribed fire, and what's being called by officials as "Managed wildfire." Fire crews put their efforts to suppress wildfires around the most fire-prone areas, such as communities, municipal watersheds, and sequoia groves. Otherwise they are learning to let some fires burn themselves out, as nature intended.

[NH] White Mountains forest fire still burning a week later

<<https://www.bostonglobe.com/metro/2017/10/11/white-mountains-forest-fire-has-burned-for-week/YwrgyRqhDY8HdsikVs9JI/story.html>> Boston Globe [10/11/2017 12:55 PM, Ben Thompson, 4047K, MA] reports that a forest fire that has burned for more than one week on a cliff in Woodstock, N.H., still covers around 70 acres and will continue to smolder until extinguished by heavy precipitation, the U.S. Forest Service said. "While rain over the weekend and holiday helped to dampen the fire's intensity, the fire is not out," U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Tiffany Bennasaid in a statement Tuesday. "Due to the very steep rugged terrain and fuels in the burn, this fire will continue to burn at various intensities until extinguished by a rain or snow event."

"The fire continues to retain heat and to burn in the duff and root systems," White Mountain National Forest acting Deputy Forest Supervisor Joe Koloski said in the statement. "Weather will play a large role in the fire's behavior over the next few weeks." The blaze first broke out early last Tuesday morning on Dilly Cliff near Lost River Gorge in Woodstock, and local, state, and federal firefighters have been on scene since then working to contain the fire.

[SC] More than 150 roads in need of repair around National Forest

http://counton2.com/2017/10/11/more-than-150-roads-in-need-of-repair-around

-national-forest/> Count On News 2 [10/11/2017 7:02 PM, Rebecca Collett, 66K, SC] reports potholes pepper the roads through the Francis Marion National Forest. Severe flooding in 2015 coupled with Hurricane Matthew in 2016, led to widespread erosion and damage impacting 157 National Forest System roads. Amid a News 2 investigation into the road problems, the National Forest Service release information they are working to fix the problems. "The Francis Marion and Sumter National Forest has been aware of our road system needs and has been taking steps to address this need," according to Francis Marion National Forest Acting District Ranger Warren Tucker. The agency recently awarded two contracts to fix the biggest problems. Priority will be given to arterial roads, roads within established school bus routes, roads leading to private residences and roads identified as emergency evacuation routes.

[IN] Region parks, parkways to lose hundreds of trees

http://www.nwitimes.com/news/local/region-parks-parkways-to-lose-hundreds-of

trees/article_253abbc2-91f6-59c0-bc4d-02e2aa7aac94.html

Times of

Northwest Indiana [10/12/2017 5:00 AM, Ed Bierschenk, 212K,

IN] reports that trees are beginning to show off their colorful fall finery, but unfortunately for hundreds of them, it will be their last appearance in parks and parkways in Hammond and other communities in Lake and Porter counties. Leaves actually already have left many of these trees, as they succumbed to the larvae of emerald ash borers that have decimated trees through much of Northwest Indiana and the nation.

Some 50 years after The Beatles invaded America, another set of invaders are leaving their mark on the U.S. This time the tune the beetles are singing could be titled, "I Want to Eat Your Land," and is not music to the ears of tree lovers. Hundreds of ash trees throughout Lake, Porter and LaPorte counties have come down over the last several years, and more will come down in the coming years. In Gary, summer interns with the city's Green Team, urban conservation team members and U.S. Forest Service workers tagged infested trees in public areas, including the Broadway corridor, GreenLink trail, and Barnes, Gateway, Jackson and Reed parks.

[OR] Forest Service needs to alter their procedures

<http://www.nrtoday.com/opinion/letters/forest-service-needs-to-alter-their-procedures/article_c041d941-786b-5801-96fa-b332289d1993.html> News Review
Today [10/11/2017 2:25 PM, Don Wilson, 36K, OR] reports that I found it disturbing that a Forest Service official stated that about 75 percent of the North Umpqua fires were "good" and just cleaned out the underbrush. Was it planned that way, or were we just lucky? I suspect the latter. I'm sure had areas been thinned, the taxpayers would have gotten a break from the timber sold, plus the fire would have been easier to contain - which would have saved money, and smoke wouldn't have filled the air for weeks, even if thinning slash were burned, because managers can choose days when winds are favorable. It seems to me if the Forest Service had an aggressive commercial thinning program 10,000 to 20,000 acres a year - yes, even cutting some big old trees, where managers decided when, where, what and how trees were removed - that the vital resources, soils, water and air would be better protected than if left to the whim of a lightning bolt.

[CA] Drought and heat, worsened by humans, help fuel California fires

<<https://www.aol.com/article/news/2017/10/11/drought-and-heat-worsened-by-humans-help-fuel-california-fires/23239738/>> Aol. [10/11/2017 7:31 AM, James Rainey, 15926K] reports that it may take weeks to determine the spark that touched off each of the firestorms that consumed hunks of more than a dozen

California communities this week. But the consensus in the scientific community is that the conditions that cleared a path for the tsunami of flame were made by humans. Decades of aggressive firefighting left too much fuel on the ground. And more than a century of carbon emissions exacerbated the state's drought and the record high temperatures that baked brush and timber to an explosive dryness.

The damage from the wind-driven flames – which destroyed thousands of buildings and killed at least 17 people – is also more grievous because of another man-made initiative: building more and more homes in hilly communities adjacent to brush and woodlands. The early 1900s brought a public campaign for fire suppression after a series of deadly blazes. The U.S. created the national Forest Service, whose founding mission was to suppress fire on public lands. "Consequently, there is now a forest 'fire deficit' in the western United States attributable to the combined effects of human activities, ecological, and climate changes," a paper by Jennifer R. Marlon of Yale's School on Forestry and Environmental Studies, concludes.

https://www.democracynow.org/2017/10/11/as_deadly_wildfires_rage_in_california

> Democracy Now [10/11/2017 11:57 AM, Amy Goodman and Juan Gonzalez, 359K, IL] In California, powerful winds and bone-dry conditions are fueling massive wildfires. The wildfires come after the US Forest Service warned last year that an unprecedented 5-year drought led to the deaths of more than 100 million trees in California, setting the stage for massive fires. Climate scientists believe human-caused global warming played a major role in the drought. Park Williams, bioclimatologist at Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Earth Observatory and co-author of a 2016 report, shows that global warming is responsible for nearly half of the forest area burned in the western United States over the past three decades.

[Editorial note: consult source link for video]

[CA] The Napa Fire Is a Perfectly Normal Apocalypse

<https://www.wired.com/story/the-napa-fire-is-a-perfectly-normal-apocalypse/>

Wired [10/11/2017 7:00 AM, Adam Rogers, 13620K, CA] reports that no one yet knows the cause of the more than a dozen fires ablaze around California, but fires start where humans meet the wild forests, where people build for solitude or space or beauty. Things go wrong in those liminal spaces, at the interface between the wilds and the built.

This past weekend it was Napa and Sonoma, and the town of Santa Rosa. At least 15 people are dead. More than 1,500 houses are gone. Pushed by the wind, fires can throw burning embers a mile and a half ahead. The fire front starts moving faster than anyone can respond, jumping from ridgeline to ridgeline. A fire's progress through the forests and wildlands of North America isn't exactly formulaic, but scientists understand it reasonably well. "A wildfire typically doesn't last in one spot more than a minute or two. In grass it can be like 10 seconds," says Mark Finney, a U.S. Forest Service researcher at the Missoula Fire Sciences Laboratory. "But structures can burn for a long time. That means they have a long time to be able to spread the fire, to be able to ignite adjacent structures." They throw off embers as they decompose, and those wide walls emit and transfer heat.

[CA] Bulldozing Forests Isn't the Answer to Controlling California's Wildfires. Here's What Is.

<<http://fortune.com/2017/10/11/wildfires-in-california/>> Fortune [10/11/2017 3:14 PM, Steve Pyne, 8011K] reports on October 8, 1542, Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, the first European to explore California, sighted smoke around San Pedro Bay. We've been sighting smoke in California and commenting on it ever since. The outbreak of wildfires in Napa and Sonoma, Calif. 475 years later reminds us that we may need to keep commenting until we truly learn what those smokes are signaling. They tell us that California is intrinsically fire-prone and that people have to live there in ways that accommodate this reality. For some fires, one factor may matter more than others, but they are all present. Still, two factors are particularly immediate and amenable, and they are the focus of a national cohesive strategy the American fire community has tried to promote. The first is that rural communities and exurban enclaves are towns and should be treated by the same codes and zoning that had taken fire out of America's long-combustible cities. The second is trickier because it involves cultural values and the landscapes that have become the breeding ground for fire.

[CA] Forest Service visitor-use surveys begin

<http://www.trinityjournal.com/news/local/article_able4248-ae23-11e7-af1b-6f

95cbebd47c.html> The Trinity Journal [10/11/2017 9:15 AM, Staff, 4K, CA]

reports that beginning in October 2017 and continuing through September

2018, volunteers in orange vests standing near signs saying "Traffic Survey Ahead" will be asking motorists at various locations across the Shasta-Trinity National Forest to participate in a visitor-use survey.

The

purpose of this survey is to determine what activities visitors pursue on National Forest System lands, how visitors evaluate the quality of their trips, and recreationists' opinions about facilities and management policies.

The information collected is useful for national forest management planning as well as local community tourism. Survey participation is voluntary, responses are confidential and surveys will take about 10-15 minutes to complete. When survey volunteers have the opportunity to speak with local people who use the forest, as well as out-of-area visitors, then all types of visitors may be represented in the study.

US Geological Survey

[WY] Geologists Map the Plumbing Beneath Yellowstone's Old Faithful Geyser

<<https://www.smithsonianmag.com/smart-news/seeing-beneath-old-faithful-18096>

5230/> Smithsonian [10/11/2017 11:04 AM, Ben Panko, 3009K] Dubbed "Old Faithful" in 1870, this natural wonder produces bursts of water every 60 to 110 minutes that spurt more than 100 feet in the air. But exactly what supplies the regular eruptions of water? In the new study, published in the journal Geophysical Review Letters, geologists took a more passive tact, writes Sean Reichard of Yellowstone Insider. They scattered 133 seismographs across a 250-acre region surrounding Old Faithful to measure the tiny vibrations the water and steam make as they move underneath the geyser. Over the course of two weeks, geologists tracked these tiny tremors, using them to measure the reservoir beneath Old Faithful. It turns out, it was surprisingly large, spanning more than 650 feet across and holding more than 79 million gallons of water—far more than the roughly 8,000 gallons released by the geyser in each of its eruptions. Water is heated by magma that underlies this massive chamber as the pressure climbs; the water is eventually ejected out of the surface cracks in a column of scorching-hot water.

[WY] 'Supervolcano' Under Yellowstone May Have Planet-Killing Potential

<<http://newyork.cbslocal.com/2017/10/11/supervolcano-yellowstone-national-pa> rk/> CBS New York [10/11/2017 12:56 PM, Staff, 1220K, NY] reports according to reports, a "Supervolcano" sleeping underneath Yellowstone National Park has the destructive capability to send the entire planet into a volcanic winter. Even more unnerving, researchers believe that the Yellowstone volcano could be ready to erupt within the next few decades. Researchers at Arizona State University have presented new data that claims pressure beneath Yellowstone may build up much quicker than previously thought. The findings are changing the timetable for a potential eruption from thousands of years to as early as the 2030's. In the hopes of preventing the

next global catastrophe, NASA has been working on a complicated plan to cool down the fiery time bomb. According to reports, NASA is looking to drill down
into the great volcano to open a path for water to be pumped in.
The plan may also unlock a new source of geothermal energy for use.

<<https://www.msn.com/en-us/weather/topstories/yellowstone-supervolcanos-nast> y-surprise-only-decades-to-prepare-for-an-eruption/ar-AAAtj7Kb>

MSN

[10/11/2017 2:20 PM, Trevor Nace, 880K] reports that scientists have relied upon is that when Yellowstone's supervolcano begins to rumble and its magma
chambers begin to fill, we would have centuries to prepare for the devastating eruption. Recent studies find that the speed at which the volcano can fill its magma chamber and erupt is on the order of a few decades. That means Yellowstone supervolcano could go from its usual activity like today to erupting in 2032s.

Additional reporting:

<<http://latestnewsnetwork.com/build-up-to-yellowstone-eruption-could-take-just-10-years/>>

LatestNewsNetwork [10/11/2017 10:12 AM, Staff, 8K]

<<http://philadelphia.cbslocal.com/2017/10/11/supervolcano-yellowstone-nation> al-park/> CBS Philly [10/11/2017 12:56 PM, Staff, 838K, PA] reports that with so much talk lately

National Park Service

National parks need investment from private companies to thrive

<http://www.elkharttruth.com/opinion/national-parks-need-investment-from-private-companies-to-thrive/article_be6597ee-0ca7-5628-9593-63d1c8f3aaa8.html>

vate-companies-to-thrive/article_be6597ee-0ca7-5628-9593-63d1c8f3aaa8.html>

Elkhart Truth [10/12/2017 6:00 AM, Frank Hugelmeyer and Thomas Dammrich, 13K, IN] reports that with fall upon us, millions of Americans will head to

America's iconic public lands and waters to soak up what's left of warmer weather and get a glimpse of fall's renowned foliage. Ensuring Americans' ability to enjoy our country's outdoor spaces is big business and critical to the $887 billion outdoor recreation industry. Given their significant role in providing healthy, outdoor recreation for Americans and the millions of jobs and thousands of small businesses they support, it's time our national parks, waterways and other public outdoor spaces get the attention they deserve.

In recent months, the decision by the Trump Administration to review the size of 27 National Monuments has spurred an important debate.

Yet, there is a much greater threat to the nation's recreation economy looming than monument borders and it is an issue that receives little to no attention.

Improvements to our outdated recreation infrastructure have gone largely unaddressed by both political parties for decades, no matter who lives in the White House or is in the majority on Capitol Hill. The good news is Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is trying something different. He has laid out a course of action that addresses the nearly $20 billion maintenance backlog crippling many of our outdoor spaces and emphasizes the need to modernize services, lodging, marinas and campgrounds.

No more parks?

<<http://www.sierraclub.org/lay-of-the-land/2017/10/no-more-parks>> Sierra Club [10/11/2017 11:58 AM, Emily Lande, 227K] On Wednesday, October 11th, the House Natural Resources Committee is going to take a vote on a piece of legislation that Chairman Rob Bishop and his anti-parks caucus have been building towards for years. This bill, H.R. 3990, would gut the Antiquities Act, one of the key tools for public lands protection that has been used by 16 Presidents, democrat and republican, since it became law in 1906. With Secretary of the Interior Zinke's sham monuments review we saw them going after existing monuments; this bill goes after future monuments by making it next to impossible for any president to designate a monument ever again.

[NY] Stonewall National Monument's rainbow flag plan was going fine, then things got weird

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/powerpost/wp/2017/10/11/stonewall-national-monuments-rainbow-flag-plan-was-going-fine-then-things-got-weird/?utm_term=.70cbe1784d5e> Washington Post [10/11/2017 6:01 PM, Juliet Eilperin and Darryl Fears, 967K] reports the plan to celebrate the rainbow flag flying over Stonewall National Monument was going smoothly. Then things got weird. Activists had pressed for months to get the flag - a long-standing symbol of the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community - hoisted atop the flagpole adjacent to the national monument that President Barack Obama designated last year to commemorate the LGBT civil rights movement. The National Park Service agreed to do it, providing a flag that went up Sept. 28, and it worked with activists to put on an event commemorating the act on Wednesday, which was also National Coming Out Day. Joshua Laird, commissioner of the National Parks of New York Harbor, said in an interview Wednesday that Interior Department officials had made "an inquiry" late last week to his office to determine whether the rainbow flag would be the first one to fly on the ground of a national monument.

NPS officials determined that the flagpole was on city property, rather than the 7.7-acre patch of land in Christopher Park that constitutes the monument itself. Laird emphasized that the rainbow flag was never removed and that the National Park Service has donated it to the city. He said that Interior Department officials in Washington did want to know whether "it was accurate" that the rainbow flag would set a precedent by flying on federal property but that he would not describe administration officials as raising "a concern" about it. "It's still up, it's still flying there," Laird said of the flag. "Visitors to Stonewall National Monument will see it, and 99 percent of them will not care if it's on our property or property."

The
<<http://www.sfchronicle.com/news/us/article/Rainbow-flag-flies-at-US-monument-but-not-on-12271009.php>> San Francisco Chronicle [10/11/2017 4:19 PM, Staff, 94110, CA] reports gay rights activists who worked to get a rainbow flag installed at the new Stonewall National Monument in New York City are upset the National Park Service says the flag isn't actually on federal land but on city property. The distinction may seem like a minor one because the flag is flying either way. The group that lobbied for the flag to be flown at the site says the Park Service's announcement the city, not the federal government, would be maintaining the flag seems like a betrayal.

<https://boston.edgemedianetwork.com/news/national/250157/trump_admins_natio_nal_park_service_kills_support_of_rainbow_flag_dedication_at_stonewall_monument> Edge Media Network [10/11/2017 2:11 PM, Staff, 2615K, MA] reports that the National Park Service (NPS), which had originally approved and sponsored a ceremony to be held Wednesday at 12:00 p.m. at Stonewall National Monument to dedicate the Rainbow flag, has suddenly withdrawn. The event, however, will go on. LGBT activists planning the event with NPS officials cite bureaucratic homophobia for the last-minute change in plans, as the Trump Administration has systematically rolled back LGBT rights at the federal level since January. This historic event had originally been planned as the first time that the LGBT flag will wave over federally-funded land, under the permanent stewardship of the National Park Service. NPS personnel were scheduled to speak at the event, but will no longer be in attendance.

[NC] Mysterious debris washes ashore in Hatteras, leading to a lot of questions

<https://pilotonline.com/news/local/aeronautical-debris-possibly-from-a-rock-et-washes-ashore-in-hatteras/article_133984be-00b4-556d-8449-14140254166e.html> Virginian-Pilot [10/11/2017 10:29 AM, Jeff Hampton, 633K, VA] reports that rough surf on the Outer Banks just keeps on giving. A piece of aeronautical debris washed ashore Sunday evening in Hatteras Village. It's white, about 15 feet long and maybe 10 feet wide, made of metal and synthetic material. The rounded piece had a serial number on it and appears broken from off from something else. It did not have many barnacles on the surface indicating it had not been in the water long.

Photographer Erin Everlee and her neighbors found the object. They called authorities with the National Park Service and later began an internet search. Rocket fairings – protective nose cones – are jettisoned after the rocket gets beyond the earth's atmosphere. Park rangers loaded the piece onto a flatbed truck and hauled it away. Air Force authorities were glad to help, and said they would let them know what it was soon.

[TN] Chimney Tops Trail reopens

<<http://www.smokymountainnews.com/outdoors/item/20963-chimney-tops-trail-reopens>> Smoky Mountain News [10/11/2017 4:03 PM, Staff, 10K, NC] reports that for the first time in nearly a year, the Chimney Tops Trail in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park is open to hikers. The trail was closed off last November when a small fire was discovered on the rugged Chimney Tops pinnacle, and when that fire metastasized into a fiery blaze that swept down through the park and into Gatlinburg, it severely damaged the summit, resulting in long-term trail closure.

The final quarter-mile of trail that once led to the Chimney Tops pinnacles is still closed, due to heavy fire damage resulting in safety concerns.

However, the trail is now open as far as a newly developed observation point that offers views of Mount LeConte and the Chimney Tops pinnacles. The Road Prong Trail, whose closure had coincided with that of Chimney Tops, is now open as well. "We are excited to complete the work on the Chimney Tops Trail in time for the fall color season in Great Smoky Mountains National Park," said Acting Superintendent Clay Jordan.

[MS] Barrier islands to remain closed after Nate

<<http://www.wtvm.com/story/36576102/barrier-islands-to-remain-closed-after-n>

ate> WTVM [10/11/2017 6:44 PM, Joyce Philippe, 55K, GA] reports that Mississippi barrier islands will remain closed after post-hurricane assessments revealed moderate to significant damage in multiple areas. The initial evaluations took place at West Ship and Horn Islands. Additional inspections will need to be completed on the other islands before they can be reopened to the public.

A structural engineering team from the National Park Service will arrive in the area on Thursday to begin formal assessments. The team will survey the Davis Bayou fishing pier, government dock, boardwalks and overlooks, as well as the infrastructure at West Ship and Horn Islands on Friday. Mississippi's barrier islands are managed by Gulf Islands National Seashore under the National Park Service. NPS officials say that all properties will open for public use once necessary repairs are completed.

[TX] New EPA Rule Will Allow Twice The Pollution From Texas

Coal Plants

<<http://hpr.org/post/new-epa-rule-will-allow-twice-pollution-texas-coal-pla> nts> High Plains Public Radio [10/11/2017 10:12 PM, Jonathan Baker, 5K, TX]

reports that a new rule enacted by Donald Trump's EPA will allow coal plants to increase the amount of pollution they pump into the atmosphere, reports

The Texas Observer. The new rule will allow coal power plants to emit almost twice as much sulfur dioxide as the previous restrictions instituted by the Obama Administration.

Sulfur dioxide is known to exacerbate respiratory illnesses like asthma, and the pollutant is a major contributor to acid rain. The substance famously created haze problems in Big Bend and Guadalupe Mountains national parks.

Texas resisted the previous pollution rule under the previous administration, until the Obama White House ultimately forced Texas to comply. In response, Texas sued. Now, it appears Texas coal plants have won the day.

[MT] Glacier National Park sets annual attendance record

<<http://mtstandard.com/news/state-and-regional/glacier-national-park-sets-an> nual-attendance-record/article_05b42339-2692-5703-a28a-7a81f1b702ab.html>

Montana Standard [10/11/2017 1:45 PM, Associated Press, 36K, MT] reports

National Park Service statistics show that more than 3 million people visited Glacier National Park so far this year, making 2017 the busiest year in park history. The Flathead Beacon reported Tuesday that 3.3 million people had visited the park through September, a nearly 13-percent increase during the same nine-month period in 2016. Last year, the park fell short of the 3 million mark by just 37,000 visitors. Total visitation in September, however, was down compared to the same month last year due to a fire that closed a large swath of the west side of the park, including the popular Going-to-the-Sun Road.

[WY] September 3rd busiest in Yellowstone's history

<<http://billingsgazette.com/lifestyles/recreation/september-rd-busiest-in-ye> llowstone-s-history/article_b11ec58c-9902-5359-804b-8c3a94a990df.html>

Billings Gazette [10/11/2017 12:20 PM, Staff, 195K, MT] reports that Yellowstone National Park hosted 640,068 visits in September, the third busiest on record, but down 8.79 percent from September 2016.

Visits may have declined due to several days of snowy weather. Road closures resulting from snow, ice and avalanche danger occurred on seven days.

Portions of the

Beartooth Highway were also closed from Sept. 15 to 28.

So far in 2017, the park has hosted 3,872,776 visits, down 2.47 percent from the same period in 2016 (which was the highest on record). Even with the decline, year-to-date visitation in 2017 is 19.6 percent higher than five years ago.

[WY] Traffic accident kills 4 bison in Grand Teton park

<<http://www.postregister.com/articles/west/2017/10/11/traffic-accident-kills>

-4-bison-grand-teton-park> Post Register [10/11/2017 8:19 AM, Associated Press, 47K, ID] reports that Grand Teton National Park rangers are investigating a traffic accident that left four bison dead in northwest Wyoming. The accident occurred Oct. 2 in the park on a foggy night on U.S. 26/89/191 when a pickup truck hit one bison on the highway, rolled and then struck and killed three more nearby bison.

The National Park Service says the Casper woman who was driving alone escaped with minor injuries. Park spokesman Andrew White tells the Jackson Hole News & Guide that a citation has not been issued but isn't out of the question if it's determined the motorist was traveling too fast for the conditions. Wildlife-vehicle collisions are common on the highway, which has posted speed limit of 45 mph at night.

[WY] Yellowstone Death Linked to a Search for Forrest Fenn's Treasure

<<http://www.kcwy13.com/content/news/Yellowstone-Death-Linked-to-a-Search-for>

-Forrest-Fenns-Treasure--450461673.html> KCWY [10/11/2017 11:26 PM, Penny Preston, 15K, WY] reports that Yellowstone National Park is confirming the first death there this year was connected to a search for the Forrest Fenn treasure. Forrest Fenn, a New Mexico art collector, hid a box with jewels and coins worth millions in the Rockies. Two men died while searching for the treasure in New Mexico. 53-year old Jeff Murphy reportedly started his day hike in Yellowstone on Rescue Creek trail June 7th, 2017. But, a park press release said Murphy's wife reported him missing the next day, so the search for Murphy began. On June 9th, searchers found Murphy's body. Park spokeswoman Morgan Warthin said he apparently died from a fall.

[WY] 'UFO' Sighted Zig-Zagging Over Yellowstone Supervolcano

<<http://beforeitsnews.com/survival/2017/10/ufo-sighted-zig-zagging-over-yell-owstone-supervolcano-2680071.html>> Before It's News
[10/11/2017 8:12 AM, Staff, 578K] A new video has surfaced on YouTube which shows what appears to be a UFO zig-zagging it's way over the Yellowstone supervolcano in northern Wyoming. Yellowstone has long been a hotspot for alien sightings and UFO enthusiasts. The famed Yellowstone volcano has garnered national interest in recent months, especially over the summer when more than 400 earthquakes hit in one week near the volcano. Experts at the U.S. Geological Survey say the risk of the Yellowstone supervolcano erupting is quite low, with a probability of one in 730,000.

[WY] Devils Tower plans prescribed fire

<http://rapidcityjournal.com/news/local/devils-tower-plans-prescribed-fire/article_9c1031a2-0a8a-5890-82f1-d136c37b4553.html> Rapid City Journal
[10/11/2017 7:00 AM, Staff, 107K, SD] reports that Devils Tower National Monument will implement a prescribed burn this fall as conditions permit, according to a news release. Fire management officials from the Northern Great Plains Fire Office and Devils Tower National Monument plan to burn 171 acres in the North Terrace Unit during the next few weeks. The last time a prescribed burn was completed in the North Terrace Unit was during the fall of 2005.

The burn is needed to remove buildup of dead fuels and woody herbaceous growth, and encourage the growth of native prairie grasses and forbs. If conditions are not acceptable on the scheduled day of the burn, it will be postponed until desirable conditions return.

[WY] Experts expect record year for lake trout removal

<<http://www.postregister.com/articles/west/2017/10/11/experts-expect-record-year-lake-trout-removal>> Post Register [10/11/2017 8:20 AM, Mark Davis, 47K, ID] reports that the cutthroat trout conservation team at Yellowstone National Park expects to break a record this year, ridding Yellowstone Lake of more than 360,000 lake trout. The high mark was set last year, with 358,000 removed from the lake. "They're on a record pace," said Jonathan Shafer, Yellowstone public affairs officer.

There are 35 to 40 miles of nets in the lake every day during the mid-May to mid-October effort. Crews made up of both Park Service employees and subcontractors man the nets six days a week in an attempt to crash the lake trout population. Nearly 3 million lake trout have been removed since the program began.

Office of Insular Affairs

[PR] Three weeks since Hurricane Maria, much of Puerto Rico still dark,

thirsty and frustrated

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/national/three-weeks-since-hurricane-maria-much-of-puerto-rico-still-dark-dry-frustrated/2017/10/11/3a263b22-ade7-11e7-9e58-e6288544af98_story.html?utm_term=.ac16cf50cd17>
Washington Post
[10/11/2017 7:56 PM, Manuel Roig-Franzia and Arelis R. Hernández] reports it has been three weeks since Hurricane Maria savaged Puerto Rico, and life in the capital city of San Juan inches toward something that remotely resembles a new, uncomfortable form of normalcy. Roughly half of Puerto Ricans have no working cellphone service, creating islands of isolation within the island and cutting off hundreds of thousands of people in regions outside the largest metropolitan areas from regular contact with their families, aid groups, medical care and the central government. Accompanying that vision of the future are worries about outbreaks of diseases such as scabies and Zika, which is transmitted by mosquitoes breeding in standing water. Just 63 percent of the island's residents have access to clean drinking water, and only 60 percent of wastewater treatment plants are operating, according to figures released by the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

[PR] Puerto Rico's hurricane death toll rises to 45

<<http://www.cnn.com/2017/10/11/us/puerto-rico-maria-crisis/index.html>> CNN
[10/11/2017 9:11 PM, Ray Sanchez] reports nearly three weeks after Hurricane Maria pummeled Puerto Rico, the vast majority of the island remains without power and the death toll from the storm has risen to 45, authorities said At least 113 people remain unaccounted for, according to Karixia Ortiz, a spokeswoman for Puerto Rico's Department of Public Safety. The recovery has moved slowly since Maria struck the US territory on September 20, leaving most of the island without basic services such as power and running water, according to residents, relief workers and local elected officials. As of Wednesday 89% of the island was without electricity and almost 47% had no phone service, according to a website set up by the Puerto Rican government. Some 43% of the island's 313 bank branches remained closed, it said.

[PR] Puerto Rico: US officials privately acknowledge serious food shortage

<<https://www.theguardian.com/world/2017/oct/11/puerto-rico-food-shortage-hurricane-maria>> The Guardian [10/11/2017 8:06 PM, Richard Wolffe, UK] reports federal officials privately admit there is a massive shortage of meals in Puerto Rico three weeks after Hurricane Maria devastated the island. Officials at the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) say that the government and its partners are only providing 200,000 meals a day to meet the needs of more than 2 million people. That is a daily shortfall of between 1.8m and 5.8m meals. The scale of the food crisis dwarfs the more widely publicized challenges of restoring power and communications. More than a third of Puerto Ricans are still struggling to live without drinking water. Conditions on Puerto Rico remain dire; just 16% of islanders having access to electricity. While commercial flights have resumed, and most gas stations have reopened, much of the island's economy remains at a standstill.

[PR] Trump's Puerto Rico video tells positive story, leaves misery on cutting-room floor

<http://www.philly.com/philly/news/politics/presidential/trump-puerto-rico-v
ideo-tells-positive-story-leaves-misery-on-cutting-room-floor-20171011.html>

Philadelphia Inquirer [10/11/2017 8:21 AM, Jenna Johnson, 2100K, PA] reports that a few minutes into a video about Puerto Rico relief efforts that President Trump tweeted out this week is a short clip about U.S.

Forest

Service workers clearing fallen trees off a road in the rural interior.

Over

the sound of chain saws, the Forest Service's fire chief explains how this will allow for the easier distribution of food, medical supplies and other aid. But his full comments are cut off by a shift to footage of a ship used as a hospital.

Had the road-clearing clip continued for 15 seconds, the president's millions of Twitter followers would have heard the fire chief praise the people of Puerto Rico for successfully clearing many roads before the federal government arrived. The sentiment seems contrary to the president's repeated criticism of local efforts and his claim in the tweet accompanying the video: "Nobody could have done what I've done for #PuertoRico with so little appreciation. So much work!"

[PR] Puerto Rico Relief Bill Cancels $16 Billion in Debt — But Not for Puerto Rico

<https://theintercept.com/2017/10/11/puerto-rico-relief-bill-cancels-16-bill> ion-in-debt-but-not-for-puerto-rico/> The Intercept [10/11/2017 12:01 PM, David Dayen, 1825K] reports that House Republicans unveiled a $36.5 billion disaster relief supplemental package Tuesday night, intended to pay for relief and rebuilding efforts for the floods, hurricanes, and wildfires of the past several months. It includes money for Puerto Rico's ongoing struggle with the aftermath of Hurricane Maria, though only a fraction of that headline number. In fact, $5 billion of the funds earmarked for Puerto Rico comes in the form of a loan, increasing the amount of money the island will eventually need to pay back. And in a cruel irony, the bill also contains $16 billion in debt relief – just not for Puerto Rico's crushing debt.

The full House chamber will vote on the bill from the House Appropriations Committee this week. The committee also proposes $576.5 million in U.S. Forest Service and Department of Interior grants for wildfire suppression and management.

[PR] Puerto Rico's treasured rainforest another victim of Hurricane Maria

http://www.post-gazette.com/news/nation/2017/10/11/Puerto-Rico-s-treasured-

rainforest-another-victim-of-Hurricane-Maria/stories/201710110228> Pittsburgh Post-Gazette [10/12/2017 6:30 AM, Luis Ferré-Sadurní, 968K, PA] reports that when you looked up, you could once see nothing but the lush, emerald canopy of tabonuco and sierra palm trees covering El Yunque National Forest. That was before Hurricane Maria obliterated the only tropical rain forest in the U.S. forest system. Left behind was a scene so bare that on a recent visit, it was possible to see the concrete skyline of San Juan about 30 miles west — a previously unimaginable sight.

El Yunque has been an enormous source of pride in Puerto Rico and one of the main drivers of the island's tourism industry. The 28,000-acre forest on the eastern part of the island h

<DOI Daily Briefing (10-12-17).docx>

<DOI Daily Briefing (10-12-17).pdf>

<image002.png>

From: Erika Walter
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: Speaker invitation for Secretary Zinke
Date: Thursday, July 06, 2017 5:17:36 PM

Truly appreciate the guidance that you passed along, Heather! As a quick re-introduction, I am the former press secretary for Majority Whip Steve Scalise. You and I coordinated when I bosses did the New Orleans morning show interview on WWLTV when they did the offshore energy tour together! What an incredibly heavy month it's been, huh?

I hope you are well and enjoying your new opportunity at Interior. I saw Zinke walking down the Mall with his wife and dog about a month ago and he waved at me. Please tell him it was so nice to see him.

Erika Walter
Press Secretary
Partnership for Public Service
202.775.9111

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, July 6, 2017 5:13 PM
To: Jim Seymour <JSeymour@ourpublicservice.org>
Cc: Erika Walter <EWalter@ourpublicservice.org>
Subject: Re: Speaker invitation for Secretary Zinke

scheduling@ios.doi.gov

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Jul 6, 2017 at 5:11 PM, Jim Seymour <JSeymour@ourpublicservice.org> wrote:

Thank you Heather.

Is Russell Roddy the appropriate person to contact, or do you recommend another POC?

Best,
Jim

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, July 6, 2017 4:45 PM
To: Jim Seymour <JSeymour@ourpublicservice.org>

Cc: Erika Walter <EWalter@ourpublicservice.org>

Subject: Re: Speaker invitation for Secretary Zinke

Hello there, Jim. Please contact the scheduling office with questions regarding event requests.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Jul 6, 2017 at 4:36 PM, Jim Seymour <JSeymour@ourpublicservice.org> wrote:

Dear Heather,

My colleague Erika Walter recommended that I contact you regarding the attached invitation to Secretary Zinke to speak at a town hall style event on Thursday, July 20 at the Partnership for Public Service. We have not heard back yet regarding the Secretary's participation and wonder if you might be able to help check his availability that afternoon. We are currently targeting 4:00-5:00 p.m. for his participation, but can be a little flexible on his actual start time, if needed.

Also attached are a couple press clips from Fox News and the New York Times honoring the dedicated and talented civil servants in our federal workforce. We hope to generate similar media attention around this conversation on the 20th.

The event will take place in the Partnership for Public Service's conference center and will include a networking reception for our Service to America Medal finalists and alumni and other leaders to connect and share experiences across federal agencies and deliver even better results for the American people.

Please feel free to call or email if you have any questions. I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Thank you and best wishes,

Jim Seymour

Director, Programs and Events

Partnership for Public Service

1100 New York Ave NW, Suite 200 East
Washington, DC 20005

(202) 775-2758 direct

(202) 775-9111 main

@RPublicService

From: Heather Swift
To: Chris Peterson
Subject: Re: Sperry Chalet rebuild
Date: Saturday, September 16, 2017 7:23:06 AM

:) happens to me all the time. It's amazing how embarrassing we get over typos.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 15, 2017, at 7:43 PM, Chris Peterson <cpeterson@hungryhorsenews.com> wrote:

Wife! Whups! THanks

On Fri, Sep 15, 2017 at 5:31 PM
Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Chris there's a typo in your headline. "Sherry"

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 15, 2017, at 10:24 AM, Chris Peterson
<cpeterson@hungryhorsenews.com> wrote:

Would he be available to talk about it a little bit?

On Sep 15, 2017, at 7:19 AM, Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

The Secretary more than supports rebuilding
Sperry, he has already begun the process.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov |
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Sep 13, 2017 at 12:32 PM, Chris Peterson
<cpeterson@hungryhorsenews.com> wrote:

In an interview with Sen. Jon Tester this morning, he noted that in order to rebuild the Sperry Cahlet, Sec. Zinke would have to support such a measure.

Does Ryan support rebuilding the chalet?

--

Chris Peterson
Hungry Horse News
(406) 892-2151
mobile (406) 249-4344

--

Chris Peterson
Hungry Horse News
(406) 892-2151
mobile (406) 249-4344

From: Swift, Heather
To: Michael Doyle
Subject: Re: statement on this?
Date: Monday, November 20, 2017 11:18:08 AM

This is what I sent to Ben.

DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and his wife. The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence.

It's not accurate to say staff advised against it. Staff simply stated it would need to get it approved by ethics under short notice, which we did.

Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Nov 20, 2017 at 11:10 AM, Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net> wrote:

Now, THAT'S what I call a statement.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, November 20, 2017 11:08 AM
To: Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: statement on this?

Politico continues it's rapid descent into tabloid sensationalism.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Nov 20, 2017 at 11:00 AM, Michael Doyle <mduoyle@eenews.net> wrote:

Hi:

Statement on this?

LOLA ZINKE ROLE SCRUTINIZED: New documents show Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's wife, Lola, used Interior staff time to coordinate some of her activities while traveling with her husband during jaunts that gave her access to high level politicians and GOP donors who could benefit her as a political operator in her own right, Pro's Ben Lefebvre reports. "These emails show that the leadership at the Department of Interior treats basic ethical standards like an inconvenience," Western Values Project Executive Director Chris Saeger said.

In one instance, records show the secretary's wife helped decide the guest list for a Young America's Foundation town hall forum with her husband on April 17 at its Reagan Ranch in Santa Barbara. She sent a "list of people I have invited to the event" to two Interior staffers, according to a series of April 7 emails. Interior says she pays her own way when she accompanies her husband and that travel is cleared by ethics officials in advance. "DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence" with the secretary, Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift said in an email Friday

Michael Doyle

Reporter

mduoyle@eenews.net

202-446-0467 x467

@MichaelDoyle10

E&E NEWS

122 C Street NW 7th Floor Washington, DC 20001

www.eenews.net | @EENewsUpdates

Energywire, Climatewire, Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM

From: Michael Doyle
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: statement on this?
Date: Monday, November 20, 2017 11:21:34 AM

thanks

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, November 20, 2017 11:17 AM
To: Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: statement on this?

This is what I sent to Ben.

DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and his wife. The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence.

It's not accurate to say staff advised against it. Staff simply stated it would need to get it approved by ethics under short notice, which we did.

Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Nov 20, 2017 at 11:10 AM, Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net> wrote:

Now, THAT'S what I call a statement.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, November 20, 2017 11:08 AM
To: Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: statement on this?

Politico continues it's rapid descent into tabloid sensationalism.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Nov 20, 2017 at 11:00 AM, Michael Doyle <mdoyle@eenews.net> wrote:

Hi:

Statement on this?

LOLA ZINKE ROLE SCRUTINIZED: New documents show Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's wife, Lola, used Interior staff time to coordinate some of her activities while traveling with her husband during jaunts that gave her access to high level politicians and GOP donors who could benefit her as a political operator in her own right, Pro's Ben Lefebvre reports. "These emails show that the leadership at the Department of Interior treats basic ethical standards like an inconvenience," Western Values Project Executive Director Chris Saeger said.

In one instance, records show the secretary's wife helped decide the guest list for a Young America's Foundation town hall forum with her husband on April 17 at its Reagan Ranch in Santa Barbara. She sent a "list of people I have invited to the event" to two Interior staffers, according to a series of April 7 emails. Interior says she pays her own way when she accompanies her husband and that travel is cleared by ethics officials in advance. "DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence" with the secretary, Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift said in an email Friday

Michael Doyle
Reporter
mdoyle@eenews.net
202-446-0467 x467
@MichaelDoyle10

E&E NEWS

122 C Street NW 7th Floor Washington, DC 20001

www.eenews.net | @EENewsUpdates

Energywire, Climatewire, Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM

From: Stephen Wackowski
To: Swift, Heather
Cc: Laura Rigas
Subject: Re: Steve - please review your press release
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 4:17:16 PM

In the boss's quote strike "enlisted" and replace with "served"

"It's an incredible honor to be asked to serve on Secretary Zinke's staff. I look forward to working with our state, local, and First Alaskan partners to help unlock Alaska's potential."

Sent from my iPhone

On May 30, 2017, at 11:23 AM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Steve- can you please drop in a quote and make any edits?

Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

(ANCHORAGE) Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs based out of Anchorage. Zinke made the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

“A lifelong Alaskan and Air Force Major, Steve is perfectly qualified to advise me on Alaskan issues,” said Secretary Zinke. “Like 10 percent of Alaskans, Steve enlisted in the military and then he continued his service as a civilian working for elected officials. His broad range of experience will prove to be invaluable as the Department focuses on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior’s management.”

QUOTE STEVE

Wachowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family’s halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary’s College, where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC-Berkeley’s Air Force ROTC program .

He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's "Top 40 under 40" Award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the US Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as the late Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's reelection campaign.

Steve is avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox lab, Cali.

From: Davis, Natalie
To: Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO
Cc: Swift, Heather; laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Thank you!
Date: Friday, July 07, 2017 1:30:21 PM

Brad,

It was great meeting you! So glad you both had a great time.

Have a great weekend,
Natalie

On Fri, Jul 7, 2017 at 1:19 PM, Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO

<(b) (6)> wrote:

Laura, Heather and Natalie,

Thank you for your kind invitation to join you for the 4th of July fireworks. My wife and I had a wonderful time and so appreciate all the work that went into it. Thank you all for being such wonderful hosts!

I hope that I can return sometime in the future! Thank you again!

All the best,

Brad

Brad Rateike
Assistant Director of Cabinet Communications

(b) (6)

Desk: (b) (6)

Mobile: (b) (6)

--

Natalie Davis, Special Assistant
Immediate Office of the Secretary
U.S. Department of the Interior
202.208.4928

From: Swift, Heather
To: Nachmany, Eli
Subject: Re: Todd Willens Press Release
Date: Tuesday, July 11, 2017 11:13:11 AM

General edits:

1. This is not a PAS position so POTUS did not nominate, Zinke appointed him.
2. Please draft quote from Sec and ask Todd for a quote.
3. Please ask Todd for a quote from Rep. Pearce

Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

Tribal Leaders, Congressional Officials Praise Selection as a Win for the West

(WASHINGTON) U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced the appointment of former Interior Department official and former chief of staff to Rep. Steve Pearce (NM) Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior . In that role, Willens will work closely with yet-to-be-confirmed Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt.

Willens brings with him more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and

the

private sector. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

DRAFT QUOTE SECRETARY

DRAFT QUOTE WILLENS

“The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior,” Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. “In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country.

As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset."

"I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular," Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. "Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration."

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017. During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

"Todd Willens has worked on difficult Indian Country issues, proving himself to be a close listener to Native concerns and demonstrating the diplomatic skills necessary in the government-to-government relationship between the United State and Native Nations," Jackson Brossy, Executive Director of the Navajo Nation Washington Office, said. "Todd's addition to the leadership at Interior will bring practical, on-the-ground experience with Indian Country, to the benefit of both Interior and Tribes. The Navajo Nation looks forward to working closely with Todd."

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill.

"For tribes, it is critically important to have knowledgeable and trusted leadership at Interior," Governor Kurt Riley of the Pueblo of Acoma said. "Todd has long proved his exceptional understanding of Indian issues and his willingness to work with tribes to find practical solutions. Todd is an outstanding choice for Assistant Deputy Secretary."

Willens is a native of California and is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

###

From: Swift, Heather
To: Nachmany, Eli
Subject: Re: Todd Willens Press Release
Date: Tuesday, July 11, 2017 12:50:00 PM

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Jul 11, 2017 at 12:29 PM, Nachmany, Eli <eli_nachmany@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

DRAFT QUOTE SEC. ZINKE:

“

In addition to being a westerner, Todd brings a strong combination of public and private sector experience to the Interior Department,” Secretary Ryan Zinke said. “Most of Interior’s holdings and responsibilities are in the west, and Todd’s intimate understanding of the West, from growing up in rural California to his previous time at Interior to his tenure with Congressman Pearce, will be a major asset to the people we serve. I look forward to Todd helping us advance Interior’s mission and the work of the Administration on behalf of local communities.”

On Tue, Jul 11, 2017 at 11:12 AM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

General edits:

1. This is not a PAS position so POTUS did not nominate, Zinke appointed him.
2. Please draft quote from Sec and ask Todd for a quote.
3. Please ask Todd for a quote from Rep. Pearce

Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

Tribal Leaders, Congressional Officials Praise Selection as a Win for the West

(WASHINGTON) U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced the appointment of former Interior Department official and former chief of staff to Rep. Steve Pearce (NM) Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

. In that role, Willens will work closely with yet-to-be-confirmed Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt.

Willens brings with him more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and

the

private sector. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

DRAFT QUOTE SECRETARY

DRAFT QUOTE WILLENS

“The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior,” Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. “In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country.

As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset.”

“I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular,” Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. “Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration.”

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017. During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

“Todd Willens has worked on difficult Indian Country issues, proving himself to be a close listener to Native concerns and demonstrating the diplomatic skills necessary in the government-to-government relationship between the United State and Native Nations,” Jackson Brossy, Executive Director of the Navajo Nation Washington Office, said.
“Todd's addition to the leadership at Interior will bring practical, on-the-ground experience with Indian Country, to the benefit of both Interior and Tribes. The Navajo Nation looks forward to working closely with Todd.”

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill.

“For tribes, it is critically important to have knowledgeable and trusted leadership at Interior,” Governor Kurt Riley of the Pueblo of Acoma said. “Todd has long proved his exceptional understanding of Indian issues and his willingness to work with tribes to find practical solutions. Todd is an outstanding choice for Assistant Deputy Secretary.”

Willens is a native of California and is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

###

From: Nachmany, Eli
To: Heather Swift
Subject: Re: Todd Willens Press Release
Date: Monday, July 10, 2017 7:00:21 PM

Also in Torres' quote we may want to change "leadership" to "leader" for grammar.

On Mon, Jul 10, 2017 at 6:59 PM, Nachmany, Eli <eli_nachmany@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Native American Leaders Praise Todd Willens as President Donald Trump's Nominee for Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

President Donald Trump has announced the nomination of former Interior Department official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior.

Willens brings with him to Interior more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and private businesses. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

"The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior," Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. "In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country. As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset."

At the Department, Willens will focus on the policy initiatives and daily workings of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Park Service, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the U.S. Geological Survey.

Charged with a host of responsibilities, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service oversees the protection of endangered species, the restoration and conservation of wildlife habitats, and the distribution of excise taxes to State fish and wildlife agencies. The National Park Service administers the United States' national parks. Additionally, the Bureau of Reclamation manages water and other resources in the American West, while the U.S. Geological Survey strives to better understand the Earth and its resources through scientific examination.

"I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular," Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. "Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration."

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017. During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

“Todd Willens has worked on difficult Indian Country issues, proving himself to be a close listener to Native concerns and demonstrating the diplomatic skills necessary in the government-to-government relationship between the United State and Native Nations,” Jackson Brossy, Executive Director of the Navajo Nation Washington Office, said. “Todd’s addition to the leadership at Interior will bring practical, on-the-ground experience with Indian Country, to the benefit of both Interior and Tribes. The Navajo Nation looks forward to working closely with Todd.”

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill.

“For tribes, it is critically important to have knowledgeable and trusted leadership at Interior,” Governor Kurt Riley of the Pueblo of Acoma said. “Todd has long proved his exceptional understanding of Indian issues and his willingness to work with tribes to find practical solutions. Todd is an outstanding choice for Assistant Deputy Secretary.”

Willens is a native of California and is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

From: Swift, Heather
To: Michael Coleman
Subject: Re: Todd Willens to DOI/ Zinke trip
Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2017 2:52:43 PM

Did you get this? I got a bounce back

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Jul 12, 2017 at 2:44 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Here you go, Michael. This is going around 2PM CT

Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

Tribal Leaders, Congressional Officials, Others Praise Selection

WASHINGTON – U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced the appointment of former Interior Department official and former Chief of Staff to Rep. Steve Pearce (NM) Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior. In this role, Willens will work closely with yet-to-be-confirmed Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt. Willens brings with him more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and the private sector. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

In addition to being a westerner, Todd brings a strong combination of public and private sector experience to the Interior Department," Secretary Ryan Zinke said. "Most of Interior's holdings and responsibilities are in the West, and Todd's intimate understanding of the West, from growing up in rural California to his previous time at Interior to his tenure with Congressman Pearce, will be a major asset to the people we serve. I look forward to Todd helping us advance Interior's mission and the work of the Administration on behalf of local communities."

"It is an honor and privilege to be appointed as Interior's Assistant Deputy Secretary," Willens said. "I thank Secretary Zinke for his confidence in my abilities to serve the Department and the Administration. I look forward to getting to work contributing to the implementation of the President's priorities for the Department and our Agencies, making America great again."

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017. During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

"Todd's dedication to New Mexico and the West made him a most effective manager of people and policies," Congressman Pearce said. "More than anything though, my wife Cynthia and I consider him a close friend. He has run my congressional operations for nearly seven years and been my top adviser on numerous items, delivering countless successes on my behalf. I congratulate Todd and the Administration on his appointment to this important position."

"The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior," Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. "In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country. As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset."

"I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular," Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. "Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration."

"The Tehama Colusa Canal Authority couldn't be more pleased with the selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary at the Department of the Interior," Jeff Sutton, General Manager of the Tehama Colusa Canal Authority, said. "A native of Northern California, Todd has a great deal of experience in Western water issues and, as a sportsman-conservationist, he has a long track record of delivering mutually beneficial policy outcomes for the benefit of fish, wildlife and water users throughout the Western United States. We look forward to working with Todd in his new capacity."

"The Civil War Trust strongly supports the appointment of Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior," James Lighthizer, President of the Civil War Trust, said. "In his previous service on Capitol Hill and in the Department of the Interior, Todd has been a champion of our national parks and historic battlefield sites. We are excited about the opportunity to partner with him to preserve America's battlefield parks as places of remembrance as well as heritage tourism destinations."

"The Boone and Crockett Club proudly supports Todd Willens' appointment," said Paul Phillips, co-chair of the Boone and Crockett Club's Policy Committee. "Mr. Willens is a conservationist who hunts. He has this personal passion and understands the ecological and economic benefits that follow for the public. His experience in the complexities of policy at the Department of the Interior will serve the country and conservation community all very well."

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill. A California native, Willens is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

###

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Jul 12, 2017 at 2:28 PM, Michael Coleman <mcolemab@abqjournal.com> wrote:
Muchas gracias!

Sent from my iPhone

On Jul 12, 2017, at 1:07 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hey there Michael - we are announcing Todd's role today. Will send you our press release ahead of time.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Jun 27, 2017 at 4:20 PM, Michael Coleman <mcolemab@abqjournal.com> wrote:

Hello:

Michael Coleman with the Albuquerque Journal DC bureau here. I'm hearing that Todd Willens, formerly Rep. Steve Pearce's chief-of-staff is headed to Interior to take a senior management role after the 4th.

Do you have any kind of statement or release on his hiring?

Also, any more details yet on when Sec. Zinke is headed to NM? Just want to make sure to keep an eye on that visit.

Thank you,

Michael Coleman

From: "Heather Swift" <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
To: "Michael Coleman" <mcoleman@abqjournal.com>
Cc: "interior press" <interior_press@ios.doi.gov>, "Alex Hinson" <alex_hinson@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 21, 2017 5:18:50 PM
Subject: Re: Zinke trip to NM

In progress

Sent from my iPhone

On Jun 21, 2017, at 5:10 PM, Michael Coleman <mcoleman@abqjournal.com> wrote:

Was just listening to the hearing webcast. He mentioned he's coming to NM in a couple of weeks at Sen. Heinrich's invitation. Have the dates been nailed down yet?

From: "Heather Swift" <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
To: "Michael Coleman" <mcoleman@abqjournal.com>
Cc: "interior press" <interior_press@ios.doi.gov>, "Hinson, Alex" <alex_hinson@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, June 21, 2017 4:41:01 PM
Subject: Re: Interior staff reorganization

Regarding reorganization: The Secretary draws inspiration from his days in the military and from the way the USDA and DOI co-manage wildfire fighting. The Secretary's planned reorganization will allow us to push more funding and resources to the local offices and parks through joint management areas. This will allow bureaus to work together and come to solutions that better suit local communities rather than operate in silos and deliver conflicting opinions.

Regarding moving Senior Executive Staff:
The President signed an executive order to reorganize the federal government for the future and the Secretary has been absolutely out front on that issue. In fact, he mentioned a Department-wide, front lines-focused reorganization on his first day address to all employees. Personnel moves are being conducted to better serve the taxpayer and the Department's operations through matching Senior Executive skill sets with mission and operational requirements.

Sent from my iPhone

On Jun 21, 2017, at 4:17 PM, Michael Coleman <mcoleman@abqjournal.com> wrote:

Hello:

Michael Coleman with the Albuquerque Journal Washington bureau here. I saw that Sen. Tom Udall of NM was questioning Sec. Zinke today about the management reorganization at Interior but I didn't get to see his responses (was in another hearing).

Has Interior issued any kind of statement about what is happening, or is there any guidance you can give me on making sure the secretary's rationale is reflected in what I write about it? I don't see anything on the subject in my inbox from Interior.

Thanks for any help you can provide.

Michael
202-329-4743

From: Laura Rigas
To: Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO
Cc: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: TPs
Date: Monday, December 04, 2017 11:05:57 PM

Many thx!!

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Dec 4, 2017, at 11:03 PM, Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)> wrote:

Hey guys, please see some guidance for off topic talking points.
I don't see the Secretary getting asked but want him to be prepared just in case.
Please let me know if you have any questions.
Thank you.

Budget And Government Shutdown

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

On Gen. Flynn:

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

Roy Moore:

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

On DOJ:

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

From: Swift, Heather
To: Ebbs, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Travel document release
Date: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 10:36:01 AM

On the Alaska portion of the trip, Mrs. Zinke stayed longer because Senator Murkowski invited her to participate in the Rolling Thunder ride and ceremony for Memorial Day.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Nov 21, 2017 at 10:26 AM, Ebbs, Stephanie <Stephanie.Ebbs@abc.com> wrote:

Thanks Heather.

Do you know if it was common for the spouse to come on trips with previous secretaries as well?

Stephanie Ebbs

ABC News-Washington

(desk) 202-222-7300

(cell) 202-875-4377

@stephebbs

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 10:04:47 AM
To: Ebbs, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Travel document release

It's a non-story and everything was in full compliance. The story is being pushed by a political group that's run by former campaign staff.

DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and the Governor's wife (a key point both Politico and WP left out). The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence. Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Nov 21, 2017 at 10:02 AM, Ebbs, Stephanie <Stephanie.Ebbs@abc.com> wrote:

Good morning,

Do you have a statement or any more information about the documents released regarding Mrs. Zinke's travel with the secretary? Was her travel approved by the ethics office and would you be able to share those documents?

Thank you

Stephanie Ebbs

ABC News-Washington

(desk) 202-222-7300

(cell) 202-875-4377

@stephebbs

From: Swift, Heather
To: Ebbs, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Travel document release
Date: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 10:33:43 AM

Yes. It is not uncommon for the spouse of the secretary to join at their own cost. On the Arctic trip, the spouses of the bipartisan group of Senators were invited and attended.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Nov 21, 2017 at 10:26 AM, Ebbs, Stephanie <Stephanie.Ebbs@abc.com> wrote:

Thanks Heather.

Do you know if it was common for the spouse to come on trips with previous secretaries as well?

Stephanie Ebbs

ABC News-Washington

(desk) 202-222-7300

(cell) 202-875-4377

@stephebbs

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Sent: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 10:04:47 AM
To: Ebbs, Stephanie
Subject: Re: Travel document release

It's a non-story and everything was in full compliance. The story is being pushed by a political group that's run by former campaign staff.

DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and the Governor's wife (a key point both Politico and WP left out). The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further,

DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence. Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Nov 21, 2017 at 10:02 AM, Ebbs, Stephanie <Stephanie.Ebbs@abc.com> wrote:

Good morning,

Do you have a statement or any more information about the documents released regarding Mrs. Zinke's travel with the secretary? Was her travel approved by the ethics office and would you be able to share those documents?

Thank you

Stephanie Ebbs

ABC News-Washington

(desk) 202-222-7300

(cell) 202-875-4377

@stephebbbs

From: Heather Swift
To: Jennifer A. Dlouhy
Subject: Re: travel, Heritage
Date: Friday, September 29, 2017 12:11:08 PM

She was not on the USVI flight or the Nevada flight. She paid personally for the Alaska CODEL flight. Several Congressional spouses were on the CODEL.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 12:05 PM, Jennifer A. Dlouhy (BLOOMBERG/ NEWSROOM:) <jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net> wrote:

Thank you. One follow up: I appreciate the clarity here on staff seats too. Did Lola Zinke travel on any of those three charter flights, and if so, how were her tickets paid?

Thanks,

Jen.

Jennifer A. Dlouhy
jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net / jendlouhyenergy@gmail.com
reporterjen@protonmail.com
Desk: 202.807.2159
Cell/Text/Signal: 202.905.3257
Twitter: @jendlouhyhc
Stories: <http://bloom.bg/23Crpvk>

From: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: travel, Heritage

On the record

As is consistent with the travel of previous Interior secretaries, the Secretary traveled on charter flights when there were no commercial options available. All travel is pre-approved by the ethics office and the travel lawyers in the Division of General Law (statement from them below) before booking, and the charter flights went through an additional level of due diligence.

Taxpayers absolutely have a right to know how much official government travel costs. It's common sense. At the Department we make those documents available to the public. Using tax dollars wisely and ethically is a big responsibility and is at the heart of good government. Unfortunately there are some times when Interior has to utilize charter services because we often travel to areas that don't have a lot of flight options.

Standard operating procedure is that the Secretary and staff fly on a commercial, government, coach fare whenever possible.

"The Scheduling Office meets regularly with the Departmental Ethics Office and the Division of General Law to ensure that all travel is thoroughly reviewed and approved in advance and that it is fully compliant with all applicable laws, rules, and regulations.

Consistent with this process, the trip was reviewed and approved in advance by both the Departmental Ethics Office and the Division of General Law. In short, the trip - including the Secretary's address to the hockey developmental squad - was completely compliant with all applicable laws, rules, and regulations." --Joint Statement from Melinda Loftin (Department of the Interior Designated Agency Ethics Official and Director of the Departmental Ethics Office) and Edward Keable (Deputy Solicitor - General Law). Both are career members of the Senior Executive Service.

On background

Regarding the ownership of the plane: the Secretary has never met or spoken to Mr Neilson and that the charter plane company is a vendor of the federal government. It was selected by career officials a thousand miles away in Boise or Atlanta after cost analysis. Furthermore, that company had years of federal contracts before the Secretary was even sworn into office.

The WP piece was false through omission where it said commercial flights are available between LAS and FCA. In fact there are exactly 0 commercial flights leaving after 8PM that would have got the Secretary to FCA in time for an 8:30AM meeting.

The WP was wrong when said there were multiple political events, there were not. He attended single political event for Senator Daines in Big Sky when he was already scheduled to be in the area and it was no cost to the Department.

The WP piece is false through omission on the Yellowstone aspect by making it sound like the itinerary was light. In fact, the itinerary in Yellowstone was robust. Yellowstone has a serious sexual harassment situation? The Secretary traveled there to meet with the superintendent and the staff about it. The park is also in hot negotiations with tribes on a number of fronts that needed the secretary's time. All of these things were also part of the secretary's trip in addition to meeting the employees he oversees.

On the point of the UNITED STATES Virgin Islands. Again another lie through omission and leading readers to believe he is at a foreign "Caribbean" islands rather than an American territory that is overseen by the Department. That itinerary included several hours of official government events and ceremonies as well as meeting with American military veterans from the territory and a visit to a National Park that is under the jurisdiction of the Department.

Lastly- The politico piece did not accurately describe the Montana portion of the trip. The Secretary's itinerary began with meetings at 8:30 AM then included a keynote speech to the Western Governor's Association (which is led by Montana's Democratic governor), a press conference, a working lunch with governors, and other engagements.

Three Charter Flights

3/31

Trip: USVI Centennial Transfer Day Ceremony (The 100 year anniversary of the Danish government turning over the Virgin Islands to the United States. DOI has jurisdiction over territories) Also attending the ceremonies were the Danish Prime Minister and Governor Mapp as well as several other high ranking government officials.

Flight Plan: St Croix --> St Thomas --> St Croix

Reason: No commercial flight were available for the itinerary of official government events.

Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

5/17

Trip: CODEL to Norway and Greenland with additional stops in Alaska

Senate Energy and Natural Resources

Committee organized the Arctic CODEL. The Committee organized and utilized a charter in northern Alaska.

Flight Plan: Deadhorse, AK --> Alpine, AK --> Fairbanks

Reason: Commercial flights were not an option
Payment: the Secretary and the staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

6/26

Las Vegas to Kalispell, MT for the Western Governors Association annual meeting.

The Secretary had events and speaking engagements in the evening in Nevada and in the morning in Montana.

Flight Plan: Las Vegas --> Kalispell

Reason: No commercial flight available to get the Secretary and necessary staff to the morning Montana events on time. The Secretary's speech ended at 7:45PM and he had a meeting at 8:30 the following morning. The charter landed at 1:30AM. The secretary had multiple events at the Western Governors Association

Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 11:57 AM, Jennifer A. Dlouhy (BLOOMBERG/ NEWSROOM:) <jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net> wrote:

Of course!

And yes -- agree

Jennifer A. Dlouhy
jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net / jendlouhyenergy@gmail.com
reporterjen@protonmail.com
Desk: 202.807.2159

Cell/Text/Signal: 202.905.3257
Twitter: @jendlouhyhc
Stories: <http://bloom.bg/23Crpvk>

From: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: travel, Heritage

Will you take on record and background?

Dang it's cold in here!

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 11:54 AM,
Jennifer A. Dlouhy (BLOOMBERG/NEWSROOM:) <jd louhy1@bloomberg.net>
wrote:

I have his statement just now, of course, but do you have the full details -- dates, costs -- of these trips, as provided to Politico?

Thanks,

Jen.

Jennifer A. Dlouhy
jd louhy1@bloomberg.net /
jendlouhyenergy@gmail.com
reporterjen@protonmail.com
Desk: 202.807.2159
Cell/Text/Signal: 202.905.3257
Twitter: @jendlouhyhc
Stories: <http://bloom.bg/23Crpvk>

From: Swift, Heather
To: Jennifer A. Dlouhy
Subject: Re: travel, Heritage
Date: Friday, September 29, 2017 3:14:57 PM

USVI flights were $3,150
Nevada flight was $12,375
We have not been billed for the military air wildfire trip

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, Sep 29, 2017 at 12:13 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
CORRECTION - Mrs Z was not on the charter in Alaska either.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 12:05 PM, Jennifer A. Dlouhy (BLOOMBERG/ NEWSROOM:) <jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net> wrote:

Thank you. One follow up: I appreciate the clarity here on staff seats too. Did Lola Zinke travel on any of those three charter flights, and if so, how were her tickets paid?

Thanks,

Jen.

Jennifer A. Dlouhy
jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net / jendlouhyenergy@gmail.com
reporterjen@protonmail.com
Desk: 202.807.2159
Cell/Text/Signal: 202.905.3257
Twitter: @jendlouhyhc
Stories: <http://bloom.bg/23Crvpk>

From: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: travel, Heritage

On the record

As is consistent with the travel of previous Interior secretaries, the Secretary traveled on charter flights when there were no commercial options available. All travel is pre-approved by the ethics office and the travel lawyers in the Division of General Law (statement from them below) before booking, and the charter flights went through an additional level of due diligence.

Taxpayers absolutely have a right to know how much official government travel costs. It's common sense. At the Department we make those documents available to the public. Using tax dollars wisely and ethically is a big responsibility and is at the heart of good government. Unfortunately there are some times when Interior has to utilize charter services because we often travel to areas that don't have a lot of flight options.

Standard operating procedure is that the Secretary and staff fly on a commercial, government, coach fare whenever possible.

"The Scheduling Office meets regularly with the Departmental Ethics Office and the Division of General Law to ensure that all travel is thoroughly reviewed and approved in advance and that it is fully compliant with all applicable laws, rules, and regulations. Consistent with this process, the trip was reviewed and approved in advance by both the Departmental Ethics Office and the Division of General Law. In short, the trip - including the Secretary's address to the hockey developmental squad - was completely compliant with all applicable laws, rules, and regulations." --

Joint Statement from Melinda Loftin (Department of the Interior Designated Agency Ethics Official and Director of the Departmental Ethics Office) and Edward Keable (Deputy Solicitor - General Law). Both are career members of the Senior Executive Service.

On background

Regarding the ownership of the plane: the Secretary has never met or spoken to Mr Neilson and that the charter plane company is a vendor of the federal government. It was selected by career officials a thousand miles away in Boise or Atlanta after cost analysis. Furthermore, that company had years of federal contracts before the Secretary was even sworn into office.

The WP piece was false through omission where it said commercial flights are available between LAS and FCA. In fact there are exactly 0 commercial flights leaving after 8PM that would have got the Secretary to FCA in time for an 8:30AM meeting.

The WP was wrong when said there were multiple political events, there were not. He attended single political event for Senator Daines in Big Sky when he was already scheduled to be in the area and it was no cost to the Department.

The WP piece is false through omission on the Yellowstone aspect by making it sound like the itinerary was light. In fact, the itinerary in Yellowstone was robust. Yellowstone has a serious sexual harassment situation? The Secretary traveled there to meet with the superintendent and the staff about it. The park is also in hot negotiations with tribes on a number of fronts that needed the secretary's time. All of these things were also part of the secretary's trip in addition to meeting the employees he oversees.

On the point of the UNITED STATES Virgin Islands. Again another lie through omission and leading readers to believe he is at a foreign "Caribbean" islands rather than an American territory that is overseen by the Department.

That itinerary included several hours of official government events and ceremonies as well as meeting with American military veterans from the territory and a visit to a National Park that is under the jurisdiction of the Department.

Lastly- The politico piece did not accurately describe the Montana portion of the trip. The Secretary's itinerary began with meetings at 8:30 AM then included a keynote speech to the Western Governor's Association (which is led by Montana's Democratic governor), a press conference, a working lunch with governors, and other engagements.

Three Charter Flights

3/31

Trip: USVI Centennial Transfer Day Ceremony (The 100 year anniversary of the Danish government turning over the Virgin Islands to the United States. DOI has jurisdiction over territories) Also attending the ceremonies were the Danish Prime Minister and Governor Mapp as well as several other high ranking government officials.

Flight Plan: St Croix --> St Thomas --> St Croix

Reason: No commercial flight were available for the itinerary of official government events.
Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

5/17

Trip: CODEL to Norway and Greenland with additional stops in Alaska

Senate Energy and Natural Resources

Committee organized the Arctic CODEL. The Committee organized and utilized a charter in northern Alaska.

Flight Plan: Deadhorse, AK --> Alpine, AK --> Fairbanks

Reason: Commercial flights were not an option

Payment: the Secretary and the staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget.

6/26

Las Vegas to Kalispell, MT for the Western Governors Association annual meeting.

The Secretary had events and speaking engagements in the evening in Nevada and in the morning in Montana.

Flight Plan: Las Vegas --> Kalispell

Reason: No commercial flight available to get the Secretary and necessary staff to the morning Montana events on time. The Secretary's speech ended at 7:45PM and he had a meeting at 8:30 the following morning. The charter landed at 1:30AM. The secretary had multiple events at the Western Governors Association

Payment: the Secretary and staff tickets were paid out of the DOI budget

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 11:57 AM, Jennifer A. Dlouhy (BLOOMBERG/ NEWSROOM:) <jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net> wrote:

Of course!

And yes -- agree

Jennifer A. Dlouhy
jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net / jendlouhyenergy@gmail.com
reporterjen@protonmail.com
Desk: 202.807.2159
Cell/Text/Signal: 202.905.3257
Twitter: @jendlouhyhc
Stories: <http://bloom.bg/23Crpvk>

From: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: travel, Heritage

Will you take on record and background?

Dang it's cold in here!

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Sep 29, 2017, at 11:54 AM,
Jennifer A. Dlouhy (BLOOMBERG/NEWSROOM:) <jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net>
wrote:

I have his statement just now, of course, but do you have the full details -- dates, costs -- of these trips, as provided to Politico?

Thanks,

Jen.

Jennifer A. Dlouhy
jdlouhy1@bloomberg.net /
jendlouhyenergy@gmail.com
reporterjen@protonmail.com
Desk: 202.807.2159

Cell/Text/Signal: 202.905.3257
Twitter: @jendlouhyhc
Stories: <http://bloom.bg/23Crpvk>

From: Daniel Jorjani
To: Heather Swift
Cc: Laura Rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Urgent inquiry inre: story on Secretary Zinke and Lola"s travels
Date: Tuesday, October 03, 2017 11:14:36 AM

Will take a look.

Daniel H. Jorjani
U.S. Department of the Interior
Acting Solicitor & Principal Deputy Solicitor
Main Interior Building, Suite 6356
' 202-219-3861 (Voice)

 202-706-9018 (Cell)

 daniel.jorjani@sol.doi.gov

This electronic message contains information generated by the US Department of the Interior solely for the intended recipients. Any unauthorized interception of this message or the use or disclosure of the information it contains may violate the law and subject the violator to civil or criminal penalties. If you believe you have received this message in error, please notify the sender and delete the email immediately.

Sent from my iPhone

On Oct 3, 2017, at 11:13 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Dan, I am beginning to get questions about Mrs. Zinke's travel while accompanying the Secretary. Would it be possible to get another joint statement from Ethics/General Law and also the rules and regulations that permit such travel?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

Begin forwarded message:

From: Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com>
Date: October 3, 2017 at 10:22:34 AM EDT
To: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Cc: "Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov" <Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Urgent inquiry inre: story on Secretary Zinke and Lola's travels

Hi Heather and Team,

Just following up here. Thanks for clarifying yesterday that Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with Secretary Zinke.

Still would like to know:

- How Lola got to Montana for the 3/10/17 tribal blessing
- Who paid for her travel
- How Lola got to California for 4/13/17 meeting with Gov. Brown
- Who paid for her travel
- Why she isn't on the manifest for any part of the California trip, including the meeting with Gov. Brown

thanks!

- Anthony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:46 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

My mistake on the name of the nation.

I'm not suggesting wrongdoing at all, just following up on a tip.

So if Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with the secretary, how did she travel to Montana and California to show up at those meetings? And why isn't she listed on Interior's manifest for the meeting with Gov Brown in California?

Thanks,

Tony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:38 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

I believe you mean the Blackfeet Nation.

She was on no flights with the Secretary.

Are you suggesting there is some wrongdoing here?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 2, 2017, at 5:33 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and DOI press team,

Hope you're having a good Monday afternoon. My name is Tony Smith, and I'm senior reporter for Mic. I'm writing a story on Secretary Zinke's travel, and I had a few questions.

1. I know from Interior's travel manifest that the secretary's wife, Lola, and their son, Wolfgang, showed up to the tribal blessing with the Blackstone Nation on Friday, Mar. 10 2017. However, neither Lola nor Wolfgang are listed on the flight manifest to Montana.

- How did Lola and Wolfgang travel there — on the March 9th flight (United 1532) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did they fly back to D.C.? Who paid for it?

2. I know from DOI's social media that Lola attended a trip to California with the secretary on April 13, 2017. However, she isn't listed on any part of Interior's manifest for that trip: neither for the meeting itself, nor the travel manifest.

- How did Lola travel to California — on the April 12th flight (United 291) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did she fly back to D.C.? Who paid for it?

Thank you so much for taking these questions. I'm on a tight deadline, and do need to publish this story in an hour. I appreciate your timely response.

- Tony

--

Senior Staff Writer, News

Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News

Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News

Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

From: Heather Swift
To: Daniel Jorjani
Cc: Laura Rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Urgent inquiry inre: story on Secretary Zinke and Lola's travels
Date: Wednesday, October 04, 2017 2:45:56 PM

If we could get a joint statement from gen law and ethics, I think that would be helpful. Then the answer to the question of payment is Mrs. Zinke personally pays for her expenses when she travels. She traveled on her own to meet her husband in Montana and California. She and all the other spouses traveled with the CODEL.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 4, 2017, at 2:33 PM, Daniel Jorjani <daniel.jorjani@sol.doi.gov> wrote:

Heather - Thank you. How can I help?

Sent from my iPhone

On Oct 4, 2017, at 2:29 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

Begin forwarded message:

From: Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com>
Date: October 4, 2017 at 2:07:01 PM EDT
To: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Cc: "Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov"
<Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Urgent inquiry inre: story on Secretary Zinke and Lola's travels

Hi Heather and Team,

Hope you're having a good afternoon. We're publishing a story today on the irregularities in Interior's travel manifest. Lola Zinke appears to be at the center of all of the irregularities we could glean. Your fast response here is greatly appreciated.

We have a few new questions on the matter, and we wanted to give the department a last chance to answer the ones we've asked repeatedly:

- Multiple sources with direct knowledge of the matter told Mic that Interior's photographer was instructed to crop Lola out in official photos from departmental meetings on trips she attended with her husband. Does Interior have a comment on that?

MONTANA

- How did Lola Zinke get to Montana in March 2017 so she could be present for the tribal blessing from the Blackfeet Nation.
- Who paid for Lola Zinke's share of the March 2017 Montana trip?
- How much was it?

CALIFORNIA

- How did Lola Zinke get to California for the secretary's meeting with Gov. Brown?
- Who paid for her share of the trip?
- How much was her share of the trip?
- Why isn't she on the manifest for any part of the trip, including the meeting with Gov. Brown?
- Why isn't she in any of the photos from the meeting currently available on the department's Flickr account?
- Were any photos of Lola at that meeting deleted from the Flickr account?

NORWAY + ALASKA

- We know from Politico and U.S. News that Ms Zinke was on the trip with the secretary to Norway and Alaska. Why isn't she listed on the manifests for any of the air travel related to those trips.
- Why isn't she listed on the manifest at all, except for the cookout at Denali National Park on 5/28?
- Was the cookout the only event she attended?

Thanks,

Anthony

On Tue, Oct 3, 2017 at 10:22 AM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and Team,

Just following up here. Thanks for clarifying yesterday that Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with Secretary Zinke.

Still would like to know:

- How Lola got to Montana for the 3/10/17 tribal blessing
- Who paid for her travel
- How Lola got to California for 4/13/17 meeting with Gov. Brown
- Who paid for her travel
- Why she isn't on the manifest for any part of the California trip, including the meeting with Gov. Brown

thanks!

- Anthony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:46 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

My mistake on the name of the nation.

I'm not suggesting wrongdoing at all, just following up on a tip.

So if Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with the secretary, how did she travel to Montana and California to show up at those meetings? And why isn't she listed on Interior's manifest for the meeting with Gov Brown in California?

Thanks,

Tony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:38 PM, Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

I believe you mean the Blackfeet Nation.

She was on no flights with the Secretary.

Are you suggesting there is some wrongdoing here?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 2, 2017, at 5:33 PM, Anthony Smith
<asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and DOI press team,

Hope you're having a good Monday afternoon. My name is Tony Smith, and I'm senior reporter for Mic. I'm writing a story on Secretary Zinke's travel, and I had a few questions.

1. I know from Interior's travel manifest that the secretary's wife, Lola, and their son, Wolfgang, showed up to the tribal blessing with the Blackstone Nation on Friday, Mar. 10 2017. However, neither Lola nor Wolfgang are listed on the flight manifest to Montana.

- How did Lola and Wolfgang travel there — on the March 9th flight (United 1532) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did they fly back to D.C.? Who paid for it?

2. I know from DOI's social media that Lola attended a trip to California with the secretary on April 13, 2017. However, she isn't listed on any part of Interior's manifest for that trip: neither for the meeting itself, nor the travel manifest.

- How did Lola travel to California — on the April 12th flight (United 291) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did she fly back to D.C.? Who paid for it?

Thank you so much for taking these questions. I'm on a tight deadline, and do need to publish this story in an hour. I appreciate your timely response.

- Tony

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

From: Anthony Smith
To: Heather Swift
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Urgent inquiry inre: story on Secretary Zinke and Lola's travels
Date: Wednesday, October 04, 2017 4:20:47 PM

Thanks, Heather.

On Wed, Oct 4, 2017 at 4:12 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Will look into this for you.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 4, 2017, at 2:09 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and Team,

Hope you're having a good afternoon. We're publishing a story today on the irregularities in Interior's travel manifest. Lola Zinke appears to be at the center of all of the irregularities we could glean. Your fast response here is greatly appreciated.

We have a few new questions on the matter, and we wanted to give the department a last chance to answer the ones we've asked repeatedly:

- Multiple sources with direct knowledge of the matter told Mic that Interior's photographer was instructed to crop Lola out in official photos from departmental meetings on trips she attended with her husband. Does Interior have a comment on that?

MONTANA

- How did Lola Zinke get to Montana in March 2017 so she could be present for the tribal blessing from the Blackfeet Nation.
- Who paid for Lola Zinke's share of the March 2017 Montana trip?
- How much was it?

CALIFORNIA

- How did Lola Zinke get to California for the secretary's meeting with Gov. Brown?
- Who paid for her share of the trip?
- How much was her share of the trip?
- Why isn't she on the manifest for any part of the trip, including the meeting with Gov. Brown?

- Why isn't she in any of the photos from the meeting currently available on the department's Flickr account?
- Were any photos of Lola at that meeting deleted from the Flickr account?

NORWAY + ALASKA

- We know from Politico and U.S. News that Ms Zinke was on the trip with the secretary to Norway and Alaska. Why isn't she listed on the manifests for any of the air travel related to those trips.
- Why isn't she listed on the manifest at all, except for the cookout at Denali National Park on 5/28?
- Was the cookout the only event she attended?

Thanks,

Anthony

On Tue, Oct 3, 2017 at 10:22 AM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and Team,

Just following up here. Thanks for clarifying yesterday that Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with Secretary Zinke.

Still would like to know:

- How Lola got to Montana for the 3/10/17 tribal blessing
- Who paid for her travel
- How Lola got to California for 4/13/17 meeting with Gov. Brown
- Who paid for her travel
- Why she isn't on the manifest for any part of the California trip, including the meeting with Gov. Brown

thanks!

- Anthony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:46 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

My mistake on the name of the nation.

I'm not suggesting wrongdoing at all, just following up on a tip.

So if Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with the secretary, how did she travel to Montana and California to show up at those meetings? And why isn't she listed on Interior's manifest for the meeting with Gov Brown in California?

Thanks,

Tony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:38 PM, Heather Swift

<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

I believe you mean the Blackfeet Nation.

She was on no flights with the Secretary.

Are you suggesting there is some wrongdoing here?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 2, 2017, at 5:33 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and DOI press team,

Hope you're having a good Monday afternoon. My name is Tony Smith, and I'm senior reporter for Mic. I'm writing a story on Secretary Zinke's travel, and I had a few questions.

1. I know from Interior's travel manifest that the secretary's wife, Lola, and their son, Wolfgang, showed up to the tribal blessing with the Blackstone Nation on Friday, Mar. 10 2017. However, neither Lola nor Wolfgang are listed on the flight manifest to Montana.

- How did Lola and Wolfgang travel there — on the March 9th flight (United 1532) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did they fly back to D.C.? Who paid for it?

2. I know from DOI's social media that Lola attended a trip to California with the secretary on April 13, 2017. However, she isn't listed on any part of Interior's manifest for that trip: neither for the meeting itself, nor the travel manifest.

- How did Lola travel to California — on the April 12th flight (United 291) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did she fly back to D.C.? Who paid for

it?

Thank you so much for taking these questions. I'm on a tight deadline, and do need to publish this story in an hour. I appreciate your timely response.

- Tony

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News

Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

From: Heather Swift
To: Anthony Smith
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Urgent inquiry inre: story on Secretary Zinke and Lola's travels
Date: Wednesday, October 04, 2017 4:12:18 PM

Will look into this for you.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 4, 2017, at 2:09 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and Team,

Hope you're having a good afternoon. We're publishing a story today on the irregularities in Interior's travel manifest. Lola Zinke appears to be at the center of all of the irregularities we could glean. Your fast response here is greatly appreciated.

We have a few new questions on the matter, and we wanted to give the department a last chance to answer the ones we've asked repeatedly:

- Multiple sources with direct knowledge of the matter told Mic that Interior's photographer was instructed to crop Lola out in official photos from departmental meetings on trips she attended with her husband. Does Interior have a comment on that?

MONTANA

- How did Lola Zinke get to Montana in March 2017 so she could be present for the tribal blessing from the Blackfeet Nation.
- Who paid for Lola Zinke's share of the March 2017 Montana trip?
- How much was it?

CALIFORNIA

- How did Lola Zinke get to California for the secretary's meeting with Gov. Brown?
- Who paid for her share of the trip?
- How much was her share of the trip?
- Why isn't she on the manifest for any part of the trip, including the meeting with Gov. Brown?
- Why isn't she in any of the photos from the meeting currently available on the department's Flickr account?

- Were any photos of Lola at that meeting deleted from the Flickr account?

NORWAY + ALASKA

- We know from Politico and U.S. News that Ms Zinke was on the trip with the secretary to Norway and Alaska. Why isn't she listed on the manifests for any of the air travel related to those trips.

- Why isn't she listed on the manifest at all, except for the cookout at Denali National Park on 5/28?

- Was the cookout the only event she attended?

Thanks,

Anthony

On Tue, Oct 3, 2017 at 10:22 AM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and Team,

Just following up here. Thanks for clarifying yesterday that Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with Secretary Zinke.

Still would like to know:

- How Lola got to Montana for the 3/10/17 tribal blessing
- Who paid for her travel
- How Lola got to California for 4/13/17 meeting with Gov. Brown
- Who paid for her travel
- Why she isn't on the manifest for any part of the California trip, including the meeting with Gov. Brown

thanks!

- Anthony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:46 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

My mistake on the name of the nation.

I'm not suggesting wrongdoing at all, just following up on a tip.

So if Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with the secretary, how did she travel to Montana and California to show up at those meetings? And why isn't she listed on Interior's manifest for the meeting with Gov Brown in California?

Thanks,

Tony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:38 PM, Heather Swift

<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

I believe you mean the Blackfeet Nation.

She was on no flights with the Secretary.

Are you suggesting there is some wrongdoing here?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 2, 2017, at 5:33 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and DOI press team,

Hope you're having a good Monday afternoon. My name is Tony Smith, and I'm senior reporter for Mic. I'm writing a story on Secretary Zinke's travel, and I had a few questions.

1. I know from Interior's travel manifest that the secretary's wife, Lola, and their son, Wolfgang, showed up to the tribal blessing with the Blackstone Nation on Friday, Mar. 10 2017. However, neither Lola nor Wolfgang are listed on the flight manifest to Montana.

- How did Lola and Wolfgang travel there — on the March 9th flight (United 1532) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did they fly back to D.C.? Who paid for it?

2. I know from DOI's social media that Lola attended a trip to California with the secretary on April 13, 2017. However, she isn't listed on any part of Interior's manifest for that trip: neither for the meeting itself, nor the travel manifest.

- How did Lola travel to California — on the April 12th flight (United 291) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did she fly back to D.C.? Who paid for it?

Thank you so much for taking these questions. I'm on a tight deadline, and do need to publish this story in an hour. I appreciate your timely response.

- Tony

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

From: Anthony Smith
To: Heather Swift
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Urgent inquiry inre: story on Secretary Zinke and Lola"s travels
Date: Friday, October 06, 2017 10:21:53 AM

Good morning Heather,

Just checking in on previous request. Also: Does Interior have comment on this suit, filed yesterday? <https://www.americanoversight.org/document/complaint-behalf-western-values-project>

On Thu, Oct 5, 2017 at 10:31 AM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Hope you're having a good morning. My deadline's been tightened on this — need answers from your team by 12:30 PM EST today.

Thanks for accommodating,

Anthony

On Wed, Oct 4, 2017 at 4:12 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Thanks, Heather.

On Wed, Oct 4, 2017 at 4:12 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Will look into this for you.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 4, 2017, at 2:09 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and Team,

Hope you're having a good afternoon. We're publishing a story today on the irregularities in Interior's travel manifest. Lola Zinke appears to be at the center of all of the irregularities we could glean. Your fast response here is greatly appreciated.

We have a few new questions on the matter, and we wanted to give the department a last chance to answer the ones we've asked repeatedly:

- Multiple sources with direct knowledge of the matter told Mic that Interior's photographer was instructed to crop Lola out in official photos from departmental meetings on trips she attended with her husband. Does Interior have a comment on that?

MONTANA

- How did Lola Zinke get to Montana in March 2017 so she could be present for the tribal blessing from the Blackfeet Nation.
- Who paid for Lola Zinke's share of the March 2017 Montana trip?
- How much was it?

CALIFORNIA

- How did Lola Zinke get to California for the secretary's meeting with Gov. Brown?
- Who paid for her share of the trip?
- How much was her share of the trip?
- Why isn't she on the manifest for any part of the trip, including the meeting with Gov. Brown?
- Why isn't she in any of the photos from the meeting currently available on the department's Flickr account?
- Were any photos of Lola at that meeting deleted from the Flickr account?

NORWAY + ALASKA

- We know from Politico and U.S. News that Ms Zinke was on the trip with the secretary to Norway and Alaska. Why isn't she listed on the manifests for any of the air travel related to those trips.
- Why isn't she listed on the manifest at all, except for the cookout at Denali National Park on 5/28?
- Was the cookout the only event she attended?

Thanks,

Anthony

On Tue, Oct 3, 2017 at 10:22 AM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and Team,

Just following up here. Thanks for clarifying yesterday that Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with Secretary Zinke.

Still would like to know:

- How Lola got to Montana for the 3/10/17 tribal blessing

- Who paid for her travel
- How Lola got to California for 4/13/17 meeting with Gov. Brown
- Who paid for her travel
- Why she isn't on the manifest for any part of the California trip, including the meeting with Gov. Brown

thanks!

- Anthony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:46 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

My mistake on the name of the nation.

I'm not suggesting wrongdoing at all, just following up on a tip.

So if Lola Zinke wasn't on any of the flights with the secretary, how did she travel to Montana and California to show up at those meetings? And why isn't she listed on Interior's manifest for the meeting with Gov Brown in California?

Thanks,

Tony

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 5:38 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

I believe you mean the Blackfeet Nation.

She was on no flights with the Secretary.

Are you suggesting there is some wrongdoing here?

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 2, 2017, at 5:33 PM, Anthony Smith <asmith@mic.com> wrote:

Hi Heather and DOI press team,

Hope you're having a good Monday afternoon. My name is Tony Smith, and I'm senior reporter for Mic. I'm writing a story on Secretary Zinke's travel, and I had a few questions.

1. I know from Interior's travel manifest that the secretary's wife, Lola, and their son, Wolfgang, showed up to the tribal blessing with the Blackstone Nation on Friday, Mar. 10 2017. However, neither Lola nor Wolfgang are listed on the flight manifest to Montana.

- How did Lola and Wolfgang travel there — on the March 9th flight (United 1532) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did they fly back to D.C.? Who paid for it?

2. I know from DOI's social media that Lola attended a trip to California with the secretary on April 13, 2017. However, she isn't listed on any part of Interior's manifest for that trip: neither for the meeting itself, nor the travel manifest.

- How did Lola travel to California — on the April 12th flight (United 291) with Secretary Zinke, or on another flight? When did she fly back to D.C.? Who paid for it?

Thank you so much for taking these questions. I'm on a tight deadline, and do need to publish this story in an hour. I appreciate your timely response.

- Tony

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

--

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

Senior Staff Writer, News
Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

|

--

Senior Staff Writer, News

Anthony Smith

@AnthonyBLSmith | 646.260.7531

From: Laura Rigas
To: Francesca Chambers
Cc: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Urgent: the secretary's wife
Date: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 9:11:21 AM

Thx. Pls call Heather if you need to speak with someone. She can answer questions.

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Nov 21, 2017, at 9:01 AM, Francesca Chambers <Francesca.Chambers@mailonline.com> wrote:

Hey Laura,

I also emailed Heather this am, hoping I'd get one of you.

I hear what you're both saying – which is why I wanted to speak to you.

If that's how DOI feels, someone has to say that – and Heather did, so I have that high up.

From: Laura Rigas [mailto:laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 8:57 AM
To: Francesca Chambers <Francesca.Chambers@mailonline.com>; interior_press@ios.doi.gov
Cc: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Urgent: the secretary's wife

External Sender

Hi Francesca — I am out this am but pls work with Heather our Press Secretary, CC'd. There's honestly not a story so I want to make sure you get all the facts.

Thanks,

L

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Nov 21, 2017, at 8:32 AM, Francesca Chambers
<Francesca.Chambers@mailonline.com> wrote:

I have been assigned to do something on the secretary's wife based on the Politico article.

This has a short fuse – I'm going to have to publish based on what's available in the next hour and a half.

I know you're quite busy, but I wanted to involve you, in case you want to talk on background/OTR.

Francesca Chambers

White House Correspondent

Daily Mail | 51 Astor Place, 9th Floor, New York, NY 10003

<image001.jpg>

<image002.jpg>

M: +1 913 755 8280

E: francesca.chambers@mailonline.com

Disclaimer

This e-mail and any attached files are intended for the named addressee only. It contains information, which may be confidential and legally privileged and also protected by copyright. Unless you are the named addressee (or authorised to receive for the addressee) you may not copy or use it, or disclose it to anyone else. If you received it in error please notify the sender immediately and then delete it from your system. Associated Newspapers Ltd. Registered Office: Northcliffe House, 2 Derry St, Kensington, London, W8 5TT. Registered No 84121 England.

From: Swift, Heather
To: Francesca Chambers
Subject: Re: Urgent: The secretary's wife
Date: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 8:51:26 AM

yes

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Nov 21, 2017 at 8:49 AM, Francesca Chambers
<Francesca.Chambers@mailonline.com> wrote:

Am I able to use that?

That's more or less what I was asking for/offering – the ability to comment and point me to anything you think is being left out here.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 8:48 AM
To: Francesca Chambers <Francesca.Chambers@mailonline.com>
Subject: Re: Urgent: The secretary's wife

External Sender

Nothing to discuss. It's a non-story pushed by a political hatchet group that's run by left wing campaign staff.

DOI did not pay for the meal with the Governor and the Governor's wife (a key point both Politico and WP left out). The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal. Further, DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence. Mrs. Zinke paid for her own commercial airfare home from Alaska.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Nov 21, 2017 at 8:44 AM, Francesca Chambers <Francesca.Chambers@mailonline.com> wrote:

That's what I was hoping I could get five minutes of your time to discuss....preferably on the phone....

Francesca Chambers

White House Correspondent

Daily Mail | 51 Astor Place, 9th Floor, New York, NY 10003

DailyMail.com

M: +1 913 755 8280

E: francesca.chambers@mailonline.com

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 8:42 AM

To: Francesca Chambers <Francesca.Chambers@mailonline.com>

Subject: Re: Urgent: The secretary's wife

External Sender

Just curious - what's the big bad wolf here? What did Mrs. Zinke or DOI do wrong?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Nov 21, 2017 at 8:32 AM, Francesca Chambers <Francesca.Chambers@mailonline.com> wrote:

Hey Heather,

I have been assigned to do something on the secretary's wife based on the Politico article.

This has a short fuse – I'm going to have to publish based on what's available in the next hour and a half.

I'm sure you're quite busy this am, but I'd obviously like to get your take. I saw you were quoted in the original piece.

Thanks.

Francesca Chambers

White House Correspondent

Daily Mail | 51 Astor Place, 9th Floor, New York, NY 10003

DailyMail.com

M: +1 913 755 8280

E: francesca.chambers@mailonline.com

Disclaimer

This e-mail and any attached files are intended for the named addressee only. It contains information, which may be confidential and legally privileged and also protected by copyright. Unless you are the named addressee (or authorised to receive for the addressee) you may not copy or use it, or disclose it to anyone else. If you received it in error please notify the sender immediately and then delete it from your system. Associated Newspapers Ltd. Registered Office: Northcliffe House, 2 Derry St, Kensington, London, W8 5TT. Registered No 84121 England.

Disclaimer

This e-mail and any attached files are intended for the named addressee only. It contains information, which may be confidential and legally privileged and also protected by copyright. Unless you are the named addressee (or authorised to receive for the addressee) you may not copy or use it, or disclose it to anyone else. If you received it in error please notify the sender immediately and then delete it from your system. Associated Newspapers Ltd. Registered Office: Northcliffe House, 2 Derry St, Kensington, London, W8 5TT. Registered No 84121 England.

Disclaimer

This e-mail and any attached files are intended for the named addressee only. It contains information, which may be confidential and legally privileged and also protected by copyright. Unless you are the named addressee (or authorised to receive for the addressee) you may not copy or use it, or disclose it to anyone else. If you received it in error please notify the sender immediately and then delete it from your system. Associated Newspapers Ltd. Registered Office: Northcliffe House, 2 Derry St, Kensington, London, W8 5TT. Registered No 84121 England.

From: Jones, Leslie
To: Laura Rigas
Cc: Heather Swift; Wade, Anne-Berry; Russell Newell; Joan Moody; Judy Nowakowski
Subject: Re: URL for USGS critical minerals report
Date: Tuesday, December 19, 2017 9:13:45 AM

No, he is not.

We are very pleased to announce the new Program Coordinator is Tom Crafford who holds a Bachelor's degree in Geology from the University of Washington and a Master's in Geology from Dartmouth College, where he conducted research in volcanology in Central America. He spent the next 38 years in Alaska in a succession of geological and geology-related positions. His professional career began as an exploration geologist for Anaconda Minerals in Alaska working on field programs from the Brooks Range to the Southeast Alaska Panhandle. He subsequently served as the primary exploration geologist at the Greens Creek Mine, a structurally and mineralogically complex Ag-Au-Pb-Zn volcanogenic massive sulfide deposit on Admiralty Island near Juneau. Tom then worked as Manager, Minerals and Coal, for Cook Inlet Region Inc. (CIRI), an Alaska Native Corporation, as well as Vice President of CIRI's mining subsidiary, North Pacific Mining Corporation. After working for several years as an independent geological consultant, Tom accepted a position as the Minerals Section Chief with the Alaska Department of Natural Resources (ADNR) before transitioning to the role of the Mining Coordinator where he was responsible for coordinating the environmental permitting of hardrock mining projects. His work as Mining Coordinator lead to his appointment as Director of the Office of Project Management and Permitting in the ADNR Commissioner's Office where he served under then Commissioner, now U.S. Senator, Dan Sullivan. In 2014, Tom, his geologist wife Liz Jones Crafford and his daughter, Alice, relocated to Washington, D.C. where Tom served as an Associate Director for Government Relations in the Alaska Governor's DC Office. Tom is truly tickled (his wording) to return to his geological roots as USGS's Minerals Program Coordinator.

On Tue, Dec 19, 2017 at 9:04 AM, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Also, is Tom a PhD? For title purposes? Thx.

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Dec 19, 2017, at 8:58 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

AB - is your team bringing copies of the PPT for the reporters?

Heather Swift

Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Dec 18, 2017, at 5:45 PM, Wade, Anne-Berry <abwade@usgs.gov> wrote:

Here is the url that will host the USGS critical minerals report. This is what the DOI should use as a hyperlink in your news release. It won't work until the report is actually posted.

<https://doi.org/10.3133/pp1802>

A.B. Wade
USGS Press Officer
703-648-4483 desk
703-317-7871 mobile

--

~~~~~
Leslie W. Jones
Science Publishing Network Chief and Deputy Associate Director, Office of Communications and Publishing
U.S. Geological Survey
MS 119 National Center
Reston, VA 20192
703-648-4354      FAX: 703-648-4466
ljones@usgs.gov
~~~~~

From: Laura Rigas
To: Moody, Joan
Cc: Heather Swift
Subject: Re: Wackowski bio and hunting pictures
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 3:22:33 PM

Thanks so much, Joan. Heather, any edits? Once you are ok, I'll work with Steve to answer Joan's questions and get a quote from him.

My best,
L

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

> On May 30, 2017, at 11:11 AM, Moody, Joan <joan_moody@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

>

> Heather, Please see the draft release attached and below. Please see the > highlighted queries. I would be glad to call Steve for a quote but thought > you might rather do so. Are there any photos of him with his family and dog?

> Joan

>

>

>

> Date: May 30, 2017

> Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

>

> Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

>

> ANCHORAGE--Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve > Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska affairs. Zinke made > the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

>

>

>

> "A lifelong Alaskan, Steve is Wackowski is especially suited to advise me > on matters in the state because of his exemplary military service; > extensive experience with public policy for U.S. senators from Alaska; and > work in the private sector with fish, wildlife, and oil and gas > operations," said Secretary Zinke. "His background is invaluable as we > focus on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska > Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior's > management including Denali and other crown jewels of the national park and > wildlife refuge systems." Zinke just returned from a tour of Denali[MJF1] .

>

>

>

> Wackowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik > for his family's halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After > graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA > football at Saint Mary's College, where he earned a degree in Computer > Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC Berkeley's Air > Force ROTC program[MJF2] .

>
> He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base > Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on > several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including > contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.
>
> After his last active duty tour Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the > remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in > Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for > oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and > helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's "Top 40 under 40" Award
> in 2015.
>
> His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff > member on the US Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and > as the late Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most > recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's > reelection campaign.
>
>
> Steve is avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished > by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with > their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox[MJF3] lab, Cali.
>
>
>
>
> -----
>
> [MJF1]Current location?
>
> [MJF2]Did he also go to UC Berkeley or just to the ROTC there while at St.
> Mary's College?
>
> [MJF3]Red fox Labrador?
> ----- Forwarded message -----
> From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
> Date: Tue, May 30, 2017 at 12:54 PM
> Subject: Fwd: Wackowski bio and hunting pictures
> To: Joan Moody <joan_moody@ios.doi.gov>, Laura Rigas < > laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
>
>
> Joan, would you mind drafting up a press release for today announcing > Stephen as Secretary Zinke's Senior Adviser for Alaskan Affairs. He will be > based in Anchorage and provide a direct line between Alaska and the Office > of the Secretary.
>
> Please be sure to note the uniqueness of Alaska and DOI relationship. The > vastness of DOI land and waters. Lots of parks, etc.
>
> Thanks!
>
>
> -
> Heather Swift
> Department of the Interior

> @DOIPressSec
> Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov
>
>
> Steve Wackowski is a lifelong Alaskan who grew up in Anchorage and > spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family's halibut and > salmon sportfishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High > School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary's > College where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission > in the Air Force Reserve from UC Berkeley's Air Force ROTC program.
>
> Steve is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base > Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served > on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including > contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.
>
> After his last active duty tour Steve moved home to Alaska to work as > the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in > Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens > for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally > recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's Top 40 > under 40 award in 2015.
>
> His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff > member on the US Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee > and as Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most > recently managed US Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's > reelection campaign, helping her to obtain her largest margin of > victory ever.
>
> Steve is avid hunter and fisherman who continually gets out-fished by > his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with > their red fox lab, Cali and two year old son, Lucas.
>
>
>
>
> --
> Joan Moody
> Senior Public Affairs Specialist
> Office of the Secretary MIB 6226
> U.S. Department of the Interior
> 1849 C Street, N.W.
> Washington, D.C. 20240
> 202-208-3280
> Joan_Moody@ios.doi.gov <Joan_Moody@ios.doi.gov>
> <IMG_7307.JPG>
> <IMG_7310.JPG>
> <IMG_7300.JPG>
> <05-30-17 Advisor for Alaska Affairs.docx>

From: Laura Rigas
To: Moody, Joan
Cc: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: Wackowski bio and hunting pictures
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 3:04:24 PM

Hi Joan -- sorry to ask when you were only asked 2 hour ago, but when might we be able to see a draft? We need to get this out asap today. Thx so much!

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On May 30, 2017, at 8:56 AM, Moody, Joan <joan_moody@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

will do

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 12:54 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Joan, would you mind drafting up a press release for today announcing Stephen as Secretary Zinke's Senior Adviser for Alaskan Affairs. He will be based in Anchorage and provide a direct line between Alaska and the Office of the Secretary.

Please be sure to note the uniqueness of Alaska and DOI relationship. The vastness of DOI land and waters. Lots of parks, etc.

Thanks!

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Steve Wackowski is a lifelong Alaskan who grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family's halibut and salmon sportfishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary's College where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC Berkeley's Air Force ROTC program.

Steve is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's Top 40 under 40 award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the US Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed US Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's reelection campaign, helping her to obtain her largest margin of victory ever.

Steve is avid hunter and fisherman who continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their red fox lab, Cali and two year old son, Lucas.

--

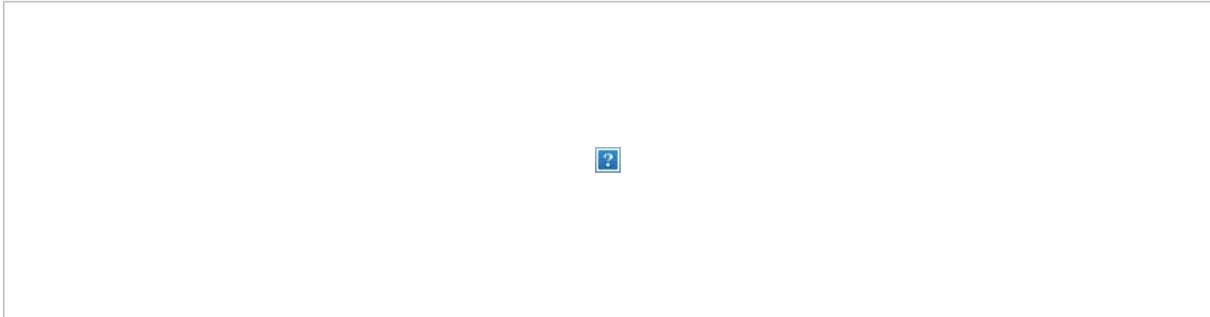

Joan Moody
Senior Public Affairs Specialist
Office of the Secretary MIB 6226
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20240
202-208-3280
Joan_Moody@ios.doi.gov

From: Moody, Joan
To: Heather Swift; Laura Rigas
Subject: Re: Wackowski bio and hunting pictures
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 3:34:59 PM
Attachments: 05-30-17 revAdvisor for Alaska Affairs \(1\).docx

i found a typo of mine in the second paragraph. On the attached copy, I have marked it and removed watermark

On Tue, May 30, 2017 at 3:11 PM, Moody, Joan <joan_moody@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Heather, Please see the draft release attached and below. Please see the highlighted queries. I would be glad to call Steve for a quote but thought you might rather do so. Are there any photos of him with his family and dog?
Joan

Date: May 30, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

ANCHORAGE--Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska affairs. Zinke made the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

“A lifelong Alaskan, Steve Wackowski is especially suited to advise me on matters in the state because of his exemplary military service; extensive experience with public policy for U.S. senators from Alaska; and work in the private sector with fish, wildlife, and oil and gas operations,” said Secretary Zinke. “His background is invaluable as we focus on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior’s management including Denali and other crown jewels of the national park and wildlife refuge systems.” Zinke just returned from a tour of Denali[MJF1] .

Wachowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family’s halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary’s College, where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC Berkeley’s Air Force ROTC program[MJF2] .

He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve’s work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska’s North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce’s “Top 40 under 40” Award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the US Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as the late Senator Ted Stevens’ last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski’s reelection campaign.

Steve is avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox lab, Cali.

[MJF1]Current location?

[MJF2]Did he also go to UC Berkeley or just to the ROTC there while at St. Mary's College?

[MJF3]Red fox Labrador?

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Date: Tue, May 30, 2017 at 12:54 PM

Subject: Fwd: Wackowski bio and hunting pictures

To: Joan Moody <joan_moody@ios.doi.gov>, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>

Joan, would you mind drafting up a press release for today announcing Stephen as Secretary Zinke's Senior Adviser for Alaskan Affairs. He will be based in Anchorage and provide a direct line between Alaska and the Office of the Secretary.

Please be sure to note the uniqueness of Alaska and DOI relationship. The vastness of DOI land and waters. Lots of parks, etc.

Thanks!

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Steve Wackowski is a lifelong Alaskan who grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family's halibut and salmon sportfishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary's College where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC Berkeley's Air Force ROTC program.

Steve is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's Top 40 under 40 award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the US Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed US Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's reelection campaign, helping her to obtain her largest margin of victory ever.

Steve is avid hunter and fisherman who continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their red fox lab, Cali and two year old son, Lucas.

--

Joan Moody
Senior Public Affairs Specialist
Office of the Secretary MIB 6226
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20240
202-208-3280
Joan_Moody@ios.doi.gov

--

Joan Moody
Senior Public Affairs Specialist
Office of the Secretary MIB 6226
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20240
202-208-3280
Joan_Moody@ios.doi.gov

From: Jorjani, Daniel
To: Swift, Heather
Cc: Laura Rigas
Subject: Re: Wash Post Q/A
Date: Monday, December 11, 2017 2:36:13 PM

Yes, it just (b) (5) . Give me a call when you have a chance at 202-706-9018.

Daniel H. Jorjani
Principal Deputy Solicitor
U.S. Department of the Interior
Main Interior Building, Suite 6356
202-219-3861 (Voice)
202-706-9018 (Cell)

daniel.jorjani@sol.doi.gov

This electronic message contains information generated by the US Department of the Interior solely for the intended recipients. Any unauthorized interception of this message or the use or disclosure of the information it contains may violate the law and subject the violator to civil or criminal penalties. If you believe you have received this message in error, please notify the sender and delete the email immediately.

On Mon, Dec 11, 2017 at 2:32 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Thanks, Dan. Can I say: The Western Values Project is a politically biased organization which is run by current and former Montana Democratic Party members and campaign staff.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Dec 11, 2017 at 2:29 PM, Jorjani, Daniel <daniel.jorjani@sol.doi.gov> wrote:

WVP is not a "political" organization as defined by the IRS, so edit your first statement to read as follows:

The Western Values Project is run by current and former Montana Democratic Party members and campaign staff.

That is objectively true and can be easily documented by going to the WVP website. Again, it is not a 527.

Daniel H. Jorjani
Principal Deputy Solicitor

U.S. Department of the Interior
Main Interior Building, Suite 6356
202-219-3861 (Voice)
202-706-9018 (Cell)

daniel.jorjani@sol.doi.gov

This electronic message contains information generated by the US Department of the Interior solely for the intended recipients. Any unauthorized interception of this message or the use or disclosure of the information it contains may violate the law and subject the violator to civil or criminal penalties. If you believe you have received this message in error, please notify the sender and delete the email immediately.

On Mon, Dec 11, 2017 at 1:59 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Here is the WP inquiry and below in pink is my proposed response.

WP

An advocacy group has shared some documents from a FOIA request that concern the Secretary's April 17-18 trip to the Channel Island. The documents show that the federal government incurred an extra government expense of more than $2,000 because the boat normally sails from Ventura Harbor. The reason for the change in harbor appears to be due to the fact that the Secretary chose to address the Young America's Foundation town hall in Santa Barbara.

There is an email on March 20 from Stephanie Burkhart (associate regional director, communications, oversight and analysis for NPS Pacific West Region) to NPS press staff in DC which says:

"Russell Galipeau (CHIS superintendent) heard from on-the-ground sources that SOI Zinke will be speaking to the Republican Club in Santa Barbara Apr. 17. Rumor has it that his staff asked NOAA to take him out to the islands. CHIS park staff are more than happy to take him out. Have you heard anything about this? Thanks!"

Now, this seems to indicate that it was the Secretary's staff that requested the trip, after booking the speaking event, but I just wanted to make sure it was not the other way around. Is that clearer?

Response

The Western Values Project is (b) (5)

The Secretary's visit to Channel Islands National Park was part of a multi-day visit to multiple Department of the Interior assets across the state from Sacramento all the way south to the Channel Islands. The Secretary had always planned to meet with the team at Channel Islands National Park, and the office of scheduling reached out to the superintendent's office as soon as it was clear when he could go. Discussion of the visit began in early April when the Secretary spoke with The Nature Conservancy, who helps manage the Islands.

Concerning the cost of boat, no costs were incurred due to Mrs. Zinke's presence. The Zinke's personally paid via check for aunt's boat fare.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Keable, Edward
To: Swift, Heather
Cc: Jorjani, Daniel; Scott Hommel; Boulton, Caroline; Laura Rigas
Subject: Re: Wash Post Q/A
Date: Monday, December 11, 2017 3:28:37 PM

OK, then I am good with this answer. Ed

On Mon, Dec 11, 2017 at 3:26 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Mrs. Zinke was brought up in an additional email from the reporter.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Dec 11, 2017 at 3:22 PM, Keable, Edward <edward.keable@sol.doi.gov> wrote:
Heather,

Even as amended, I am not sure why we would introduce Mrs. Zinke into the answer when she is not part of the question, at least not overtly. The question appears to be about the speech to the Republican Club of Santa Barbara and its origin, not about Mrs. Zinke.

Maybe I am missing something.

Ed

On Mon, Dec 11, 2017 at 2:29 PM, Jorjani, Daniel <daniel.jorjani@sol.doi.gov> wrote:
WVP is not a "political" organization as defined by the IRS, so edit your first statement to read as follows:

The Western Values Project is run by current and former Montana Democratic Party members and campaign staff.

That is objectively true and can be easily documented by going to the WVP website. Again, it is not a 527.

Daniel H. Jorjani
Principal Deputy Solicitor
U.S. Department of the Interior
Main Interior Building, Suite 6356
 202-219-3861 (Voice)
 202-706-9018 (Cell)

daniel.jorjani@sol.doi.gov

This electronic message contains information generated by the US Department of the Interior solely for the intended recipients. Any unauthorized interception of this message or the use or disclosure of the information it contains may violate the law and subject the violator to civil or criminal penalties. If you believe you have received this message in error, please notify the sender and delete the email immediately.

On Mon, Dec 11, 2017 at 1:59 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Here is the WP inquiry and below in pink is my proposed response.

WP

An advocacy group has shared some documents from a FOIA request that concern the Secretary's April 17-18 trip to the Channel Island. The documents show that the federal government incurred extra government expense of more than $2,000 because the boat normally sails from Ventura Harbor. The reason for the change in harbor appears to be due to the fact that the Secretary chose to address the Young America's Foundation town hall in Santa Barbara.

There is an email on March 20 from Stephanie Burkhart (associate regional director, communications, oversight and analysis for NPS Pacific West Region) to NPS press staff in DC which says:

"Russell Galipeau (CHIS superintendent) heard from on-the-ground sources that SOI Zinke will be speaking to the Republican Club in Santa Barbara Apr. 17. Rumor has it that his staff asked NOAA to take him out to the islands. CHIS park staff are more than happy to take him out. Have you heard anything about this? Thanks!"

Now, this seems to indicate that it was the Secretary's staff that requested the trip, after booking the speaking event, but I just wanted to make sure it was not the other way around. Is that clearer?

Response

The Western Values Project is (b) (5)

The Secretary's visit to Channel Islands National Park was part of a multi-day visit to multiple Department of the Interior assets across the state from Sacramento all the way south to the Channel Islands. The Secretary had always planned to meet with the team at Channel Islands National Park, and the office of scheduling reached out to the superintendent's office as soon as it was clear when he could go. Discussion of the visit began in early April when the Secretary spoke with The Nature Conservancy, who helps manage the Islands.

Concerning the cost of boat, no costs were incurred due to Mrs. Zinke's presence. The Zinke's personally paid via check for aunt's boat fare.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

--

Edward T. Keable
Deputy Solicitor-General Law
Office of the Solicitor
U.S. Department of the Interior
Phone: 202-208-4423
Fax: 202-208-5584
edward.keable@sol.doi.gov

This e-mail (including attachments) is intended for the use of the individual or entity to which it is addressed. It may contain information that is privileged, confidential, or otherwise protected by applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any dissemination, distribution, copying or use of this e-mail or its contents is strictly prohibited. If you receive this e-mail in error, please notify the sender immediately and destroy all copies. Thank you.

--

Edward T. Keable
Deputy Solicitor-General Law
Office of the Solicitor
U.S. Department of the Interior
Phone: 202-208-4423
Fax: 202-208-5584
edward.keable@sol.doi.gov

This e-mail (including attachments) is intended for the use of the individual or entity to which it is addressed. It may contain information that is privileged, confidential, or otherwise protected by applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any dissemination, distribution, copying or use of this e-mail or its contents is strictly prohibited. If you receive this e-mail in error, please notify the sender immediately and destroy all copies. Thank you.

From: Swift, Heather
To: Boulton, Caroline
Subject: Re: Wash Post Q/A
Date: Monday, December 11, 2017 2:22:15 PM

Thanks, thought I mentioned that but good catch!

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Dec 11, 2017 at 2:19 PM, Boulton, Caroline <caroline_boulton@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
They also paid for Lola's boat fare via check (since that seems like something they might nit-pick).

Technically my first invite from TNC was in late March if that matters.

On Mon, Dec 11, 2017 at 1:59 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Here is the WP inquiry and below in pink is my proposed response.

WP

An advocacy group has shared some documents from a FOIA request that concern the Secretary's April 17-18 trip to the Channel Island. The documents show that the federal government incurred extra government expense of more than $2,000 because the boat normally sails from Ventura Harbor. The reason for the change in harbor appears to be due to the fact that the Secretary chose to address the Young America's Foundation town hall in Santa Barbara.

There is an email on March 20 from Stephanie Burkhart (associate regional director, communications, oversight and analysis for NPS Pacific West Region) to NPS press staff in DC which says:

"Russell Galipeau (CHIS superintendent) heard from on-the-ground sources that SOI Zinke will be speaking to the Republican Club in Santa Barbara Apr. 17. Rumor has it that his staff asked NOAA to take him out to the islands. CHIS park staff are more than happy to take him out. Have you heard anything about this? Thanks!"

Now, this seems to indicate that it was the Secretary's staff that requested the trip, after booking the speaking event, but I just wanted to make sure it was not the other way around. Is that clearer?

Response

The Western Values Project (b) (5)

The Secretary's visit to Chanel Islands National Park was part of a multi-day visit to multiple Department of the Interior assets across the state from Sacramento all the way south to the Channel Islands. The Secretary had always planned to meet with the team at Channel Islands National Park, and the office of scheduling reached out to the superintendent's office as soon as it was clear when he could go. Discussion of the visit began in early April when the Secretary spoke with The Nature Conservancy, who helps manage the Islands.

Concerning the cost of boat, no costs were incurred due to Mrs. Zinke's presence. The Zinke's personally paid via check for aunt's boat fare.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

--

Caroline Boulton

Special Assistant to the Secretary

U.S. Department of the Interior

Office of Scheduling & Advance

Caroline_Boulton@ios.doi.gov | Scheduling@ios.doi.gov

From: Heather Swift
To: Davis, Aaron
Subject: Re: WashPost request
Date: Monday, October 30, 2017 8:51:14 AM

No she doesn't. She is a private person and has no need for a press person.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 29, 2017, at 3:17 PM, Davis, Aaron <aaron.davis@washpost.com> wrote:

Hi Heather, does Mrs. Zinke have a press person? Someone sent me Facebook interactions between Lolita Zinke and Amanda Techmanski. I have to ask how he two know each other socially.

Thank you,
Aaron

Aaron C. Davis
The Washington Post
Mobile: 202.302.3699
Office: 202.334.9599
Twitter: @byaaroncdavis

On Oct 20, 2017, at 11:53 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

The Secretary always politely listens when citizens and the small business community approach him with concerns and ideas. Neither the Secretary nor anyone in his office have taken any meetings or action on behalf of this company.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 20, 2017, at 11:40 AM, Davis, Aaron

<aaron.davis@washpost.com> wrote:

That's how I initially read it, so where's the response to the NBC report? Did Techmanski request help on PR transport, and what came of it?

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, October 20, 2017 11:39 AM

To: Davis, Aaron <aaron.davis@washpost.com>

Subject: Re: WashPost request

The last graph refers to 2016 congressional office

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 20, 2017, at 11:30 AM, Davis, Aaron
<aaron.davis@washpost.com> wrote:

Hey Heather, sorry to be a nag, question from editor: What part of the background below refers to the PR request? The field rep contact? The conversation in Columbia Falls? Both? When was the last time Techmanski and Zinke spoke?

A local field representative had a conversation with an employee of the business and politely referred him to the Senators' offices. The business owner was also at a public event the Congressman was at in Columbia Falls (a neighboring town) where he listened to the gentleman but no action was taken.

From: Swift, Heather

[mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Thursday, October 19, 2017 10:42 AM

To: Davis, Aaron <aaron.davis@washpost.com>

Subject: Re: WashPost request

That's all included in the background.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov |
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Oct 19, 2017 at 10:31 AM, Davis,
Aaron <aaron.davis@washpost.com> wrote:

10-4. And could you add one line directly addressing the NBC report? A la what we discussed otr?

From: Swift, Heather
[mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, October 19, 2017 10:15 AM
To: Davis, Aaron
<aaron.davis@washpost.com>
Subject: Re: WashPost request

affirmative. background please.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov |
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Oct 19, 2017 at 9:50 AM, Davis,
Aaron <aaron.davis@washpost.com> wrote:

Hi Heather, I want to make sure I'm reading the pronouns correctly in this section:

".. his son joined a friend who worked a summer job at one of their construction sites. "

Is this accurate: One of Zinke's sons "joined a friend who worked a summer job" at one of Techmanski's construction sites, according to Zinke's office.

Also, any chance you'll put it on the record?

From: Davis, Aaron
Sent: Wednesday, October 18, 2017 10:17 PM
To: Heather Swift
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: WashPost request

Thank you, Heather. But what's wrong with any of that being on the record? Sounds pretty benign - and would carry more weight with your name attached to it.

Aaron C. Davis
The Washington Post
Mobile: 202.302.3699
Office: 202.334.9599
Twitter: [@byaarondavis\[twitter.com\]](https://twitter.com/byaarondavis)

On Oct 18, 2017, at 9:44 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

On background:

The Secretary always politely listens when citizens and the small business community approach him with concerns and ideas. Neither the Secretary nor anyone in his office have taken any meetings or action on behalf of this company.

The Zinkes and the Techmanskis know each other because they both live in a small town (population 6,000) where everyone knows everyone and his son joined a friend who worked a summer job at one of their construction sites.

Previous reports of action by Zinke's Congressional office are inaccurate. A local field representative had a conversation with an employee of the business and politely referred him to the Senators' offices. The business owner was also at a public event the Congressman was at in Columbia Falls (a neighboring town) where he listened to the gentleman but no action was taken.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

On Oct 18, 2017, at 3:53 PM,
Davis, Aaron
<aaron.davis@washpost.com>
wrote:

Yes - I can call in 10 mins.

Aaron C. Davis
The
Washington
Post

Mobile: 202.302.3699

Office: 202.334.9599

Twitter: [@byaarondavis\[twitter.com\]](#)

On Oct 18,
2017, at 3:51
PM, Swift,
Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
wrote:

Hey
Aaron,
can you give me
a call off
the record?
202-208-5338

-

Heather
Swift
Department
of
the
Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov
|
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed,

Oct
18, 2017
at 2:54
PM,
Davis,
Aaron
<aaron.davis@washpost.com>
wrote:

Hi
Heather,
we are writing about
Whitefish
and that it has secured
a large share
of
the recovery
work
in Puerto Rico.

U.S.
Army Corps
of Engineers
and Department
of Energy say Whitefish

is working for PREPA
on
a separate track from their work
and
that it is an unusual setup, counter
to
the mutual aid arrangements
that are typically activated
in such disaster-response situations.

Given
that Sec.
Zinke
has advocated for
the company
before,

and
that it hails
from Whitefish,
we want
to make clear if
the
secretary intervened
to help
Whitefish secure
the job,
and/or
to what degree
he has helped
the company
in recent weeks as it had trouble deploying?

Happy
to talk through it
more:

202.302.3699

-

Aaron

From:

Swift,
Heather

[mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent:

Wednesday,
October
18, 2017
1:54
PM

To:

Davis,
Aaron

<aaron.davis@washpost.com>

Cc:

Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Subject:

Re:
WashPost request

Hello,
Aaron.
What's
your deadline
and can you please tell me
more about your article?

-

Heather
Swift
Department
of
the
Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov
I
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed,
Oct
18, 2017
at 1:47
PM,
Davis,
Aaron
<aaron.davis@washpost.com>
wrote:

Hello,
Aaron
Davis
at
The Washington
Post.
I
am working on an article
about electricity restoration
in Puerto Rico,

including
the role
of Whitefish
Energy.
I have a couple questions
for
the Secretary's
office:

1. NBC
Montana
[reports\[nbcmontana.com\]](https://www.nbcmontana.com)
that
Whitefish
and
Secretary
Zinke
have been
in contact
about facilitating
the company's work
in Puerto Rico:
“..
*[Whitefish CEO]
Andy
Techmanski
said planes are backed*

*up
at
the airports so getting
the personnel
and equipment down
there
has hit
a snag.
He's been
in touch with
Interior
Secretary Ryan
Zinke
to try
to free up
more resources..."*

What resources did Whitefish request
and what,
if any,
help
was Secretary

Zinke
able
to free
up
to assist
Whitefish personnel
and equipment
in reaching
PR?
What actions
did
the secretary take
to make
that happen?
What government resources were used,
did
the company need planes?
Priority landing approval
in PR?
Something else?

2. Did
Secretary
Zinke

help introduce Whitefish Energy
to PREPA?
Did
he encourage
the company
to seek
the relief work advertised by PREPA
following Hurricane Irma?
An industry official says
Doug Domenech
was involved.
Did
he reach out
at
the secretary's request?

3. Secretary
Zinke
has previously worked

to help
Whitefish,
[according
to reports\[hungryhorsenews.com\].](#)

“...
[Columbia Falls] said
the city would work with Montana’s congressional delegation, adding that
U.S.
Rep.
Ryan Zinke’s
office
has already reached out
to her about
the project...”

What
is
the relationship between
Secretary
Zinke
and
Andy

Techmanski?

Is
it accurate
to describe
Secretary
Zinke
as a supporter
of Whitefish?
The company
has
a low profile
and small number
of employees
in Montana,
does
the secretary see
Whitefish Energy
as a valued employer, if so,
why?

Thank
you
for your attention

to these questions.
Please feel free
to contact me
by phone if it would be more expedient,
Aaron
202.302.3699

[Aaron
C.
Davis
The Washington
Post](#)
202.334.9599

–
office
202.302.3699

–
mobile
aaron.davis@washpost.com
Twitter:
[@byaaroncdavis\[twitter.com\]](#)

From: Yakhour, Wadi
To: Heather Swift
Cc: Laura Rigas; Russell Roddy; Downey Magallanes
Subject: Re: Wednesday Press
Date: Wednesday, May 10, 2017 9:55:38 AM
Attachments: Trip5.6MontanaUtahMontana \(1\).docx

Here's the updated schedule.

Wadi (Wuh-dee-uh) Yakhour
DOI Office of the Secretary
Scheduling and Advance
O - (202) 208-5359
C - (202) 706-9041
Rm. 6013

On Tue, May 9, 2017 at 7:43 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Wonderful!

Sent from my iPhone

> On May 10, 2017, at 9:39 PM, Wadi Yakhour <wadi_yakhour@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

>

> Yes I just updated it so that it'll be at the monument prior to our > departure to the airport. I'll send it to you when I get up to my > computer and I'll also have a print out

>

> Sent from my iPhone

>

>> On May 10, 2017, at 7:35 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

>>

>> Do we have a new line by line schedule for today? We aren't found to >> do the one on one interviews at the airport

>>

>>

>> Sent from my iPhone

>>

>>> On May 10, 2017, at 6:31 AM, Wadi Yakhour <wadi_yakhour@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

>>>

>>> Raul says about 1.5 hours.

>>>

>>> Sent from my iPhone

>>>

>>>> On May 10, 2017, at 7:17 AM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

>>>>

>>>> How far away from the helo drop off is the air port?

>>>>

>>>> Sent from my iPhone

>>>>

>>>>> On May 10, 2017, at 12:58 AM, Roddy, Russell <russell_rodny@ios.doi.gov>

wrote:

>>>>>

>>>>> Hey...just looked at the schedule for tomorrow and saw something not sure about. From 5:00-6:00pm, RKZ is listed as participating in an afternoon event listed as "Hold for Media Interviews:...followed immediately by "Daily Media A.vailability" from 6:00-6:30 pm.

>>>>>

>>>>> Is his total time for press a 1.5 time frame? If not, it needs to be amended on schedule.

From: Swift, Heather
To: Nachmany, Eli
Subject: Re: Willens bio.
Date: Monday, July 10, 2017 6:14:52 PM

Many thanks! Apologies, I'm slammed today and didn't expect you to be up and running today. Alex had like three days of lag time with meetings, briefings, trainings, and tech issues. I'll have a more detailed plan for you and alex tomorrow.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Jul 10, 2017 at 6:11 PM, Nachmany, Eli <eli_nachmany@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Yes, I'm on it.

On Mon, Jul 10, 2017 at 6:06 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Eli - Below is bio information for Todd Willens, assistant deputy secretary. Can you please draft a press release announcing his position? I'll forward you supportive quotes to include. Please send by noon tomorrow.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Willens, Todd <todd_willens@ios.doi.gov>
Date: Mon, Jul 10, 2017 at 5:20 PM
Subject: Re: Willens bio.
To: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

I thought I did a good job over bloating myself. (is that even a term?)

On Mon, Jul 10, 2017 at 4:29 PM, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Super helpful.

Sent from my iPhone

On Jul 10, 2017, at 4:08 PM, Willens, Todd <todd_willens@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Heather,

This helpful? Can your team make sure I dont have any typos or grammar issues?

Todd Willens – Assistant Deputy Secretary

As the new Assistant Deputy Secretary, Todd Willens brings with him to Interior more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations and private businesses. Willens has a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's myriad of complex policies such as land, energy, wildlife and water management.

At the Department Willens will be focused on the policy and operations of the US Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Park Service, the Bureau of Reclamation and the US Geological Survey.

Prior to his service at the Department of the Interior, Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM). During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operation oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. Working closely with stakeholders, local government officials, Congress and the previous Administration to increase defense base operations, prevent job killing regulatory actions, and significantly increase federal accountability to the people of New Mexico.

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department he worked on the historic recovery of the Bald Eagle, and the National Parks Centennial. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. As the Senior Policy Advisor, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including passage of the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill.

Willens is a native Californian and a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, DC with his wife and four children.

--

Todd Willens
Assistant Deputy Secretary
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, NW -- MIB Room 6116
Washington, DC 20240
office: 202-208-6291

--

Todd Willens
Assistant Deputy Secretary
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, NW -- MIB Room 6116
Washington, DC 20240
office: 202-208-6291

From: Swift, Heather
To: Nachmany, Eli
Subject: Re: Willens Release
Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2017 11:28:11 AM

Edited below. Please send to Todd and let him know we will issue later today. Ask him to send edits by 1:00PM

Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

Tribal Leaders, Congressional Officials, Others Praise Selection

(WASHINGTON) U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced the appointment of former Interior Department official and former Chief of Staff to Rep. Steve Pearce (NM) Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior. In this role, Willens will work closely with yet-to-be-confirmed Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt. Willens brings with him more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and the private sector. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

In addition to being a westerner, Todd brings a strong combination of public and private sector experience to the Interior Department," Secretary Ryan Zinke said. "Most of Interior's holdings and responsibilities are in the west, and Todd's intimate understanding of the West, from growing up in rural California to his previous time at Interior to his tenure with Congressman Pearce, will be a major asset to the people we serve. I look forward to Todd helping us advance Interior's mission and the work of the Administration on behalf of local communities."

"It is an honor and privilege to be appointed as Interior's Assistant Deputy Secretary," Willens said. "I thank Secretary Zinke for his confidence in my abilities to serve the Department and the Administration. I look forward to getting to work contributing to the implementation of the President's priorities for the Department and our Agencies, making America great again."

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017. During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

"Todd's dedication to New Mexico and the West made him a most effective manager of people and policies," Congressman Pearce said. "More than anything though, my wife Cynthia and I consider him a close friend. He has run my congressional operations for nearly seven years and been my top adviser on numerous items, delivering countless successes on my behalf. I congratulate Todd and the Administration on his appointment to this important position."

"The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior," Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. "In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country. As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset."

"I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular," Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. "Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration."

"The Tehama Colusa Canal Authority couldn't be more pleased with the selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary at the Department of the Interior," Jeff Sutton, General Manager of the Tehama Colusa Canal Authority, said. "A native of Northern California, Todd has a great deal of experience in Western water issues and, as a sportsman-conservationist, he has a long track record of delivering mutually beneficial policy outcomes for the benefit of fish, wildlife and water users throughout the Western United States. We look forward to working with Todd in his new capacity."

"The Civil War Trust strongly supports the appointment of Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior," James Lighthizer, President of the Civil War Trust, said. "In his previous service on Capitol Hill and in the Department of the Interior, Todd has been a champion of our national parks and historic battlefield sites. We are excited about the opportunity to partner with him to preserve America's battlefield parks as places of remembrance as well as heritage tourism destinations."

"The Boone and Crockett Club proudly supports Todd Willens' appointment," said Paul Phillips, co-chair of the Boone and Crockett Club's Policy Committee. "Mr. Willens is a conservationist who hunts. He has this personal passion and understands the ecological and economic benefits that follow for the public. His experience in the complexities of policy at the Department of the Interior will serve the country and conservation community all very well."

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill. A California native, Willens is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

###

From: Eilperin, Juliet
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: would you mind giving me a call at your convenience?
Date: Wednesday, January 03, 2018 3:03:54 PM

OK, thanks. And I've got a meeting around 3:15, but if I miss you, I will just call you back.
Best, Juliet

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, January 03, 2018 3:02 PM
To: Eilperin, Juliet <Juliet.Eilperin@washpost.com>
Subject: Re: would you mind giving me a call at your convenience?

You'd have to call the VP's office if such a meeting occurred. It's not an official matter relating to the Interior so it wouldn't be my area.

I know the report you're talking about. Will call shortly.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Jan 3, 2018 at 2:57 PM, Eilperin, Juliet <Juliet.Eilperin@washpost.com> wrote:

On BIA, there's a report that came out about an employee this fall, which just came to my attention. He resigned in May, after it seemed that his superiors ignored the complaints for some time (under the previous administration, I would assume, though the timeline isn't exactly clear): [https://www.doi.gov/reports/insufficient-actions-bia-management-and-human-resource-officials-response-sexual-harassment\[doi.gov\]](https://www.doi.gov/reports/insufficient-actions-bia-management-and-human-resource-officials-response-sexual-harassment[doi.gov])

And it was also one of the agencies that ranked the highest in terms of employees complaining about harassment in the survey that you issued last month. (On sexual harassment specifically it was at 10.4%, same as NPS). So b/w those two items, I wondered if there was a larger issue there worth exploring.

On the issue of this meeting in the spring, why would the meeting with the vice president's staff be a personal matter? Wouldn't that be an official matter? Is there perhaps someone else I should direct the question to?

Thanks, Juliet

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, January 03, 2018 2:50 PM

To: Eilperin, Juliet <Juliet.Eilperin@washpost.com>

Subject: Re: would you mind giving me a call at your convenience?

I have no information on either. Do you have anything you can share on BIA so I can get some background from our people before I call?

I wouldn't have any info or Department position on Mrs. Zinke since that's a personal matter.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Jan 3, 2018 at 2:47 PM, Eilperin, Juliet <Juliet.Eilperin@washpost.com> wrote:

Dear Heather.

I just wanted to ask you about two different things. One is a question related to sexual harassment at the BIA, to determine if there's a story there. The second is just to get a sense of the topic of a meeting between Mrs. Zinke and the vice president's aides in May.

Thanks so much,

Juliet

Juliet Eilperin

Senior National Affairs Correspondent

Washington Post

Juliet.eilperin@washpost.com

(O) 202-334-7774

(C) 202-302-3663

@eilperin

From: Swift, Heather
To: Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO
Subject: Re: Zinke next week Mornings w Maria
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 1:24:56 PM

Yes.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 1:16 PM, Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO

<\(b\) \(6\)> wrote:

Hey! Apologies for the delay. Have you been coordinating with FEMA on the visit? Just want to double check.

I think it would be good to do press but I want to make sure we're sensitive about this and coordinating with DHS/FEMA.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, September 27, 2017 8:22 AM
To: Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO <\(b\) \(6\)>
Subject: Zinke next week Mornings w Maria

Alexa - Next week Zinke will be in south florida touring a lot of the hurricane damage at four national parks and also visiting some FEMA sites. Are you OK with Zinke doing FBN Mornings w/ Maria Thursday or Friday next week? We'd probably want to have a camera crew go to the tour he does at a FEMA site. We are also looking into if he can meet with displaced PR families. His wife Lola is a native spanish speaker so she will accompany as well.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Michael Coleman
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: Re: Zinke visit to NM
Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2017 3:54:23 PM

Thanks for the heads up, Heather - appreciate it!

Sent from my iPhone

On Jul 12, 2017, at 2:55 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hey Mike, this press release will go out soon, Mike. Feel free to publish.

news release

Date: July 12, 2017

Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

Tribal Leaders, Congressional Officials, Others Praise Selection

WASHINGTON – U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced the appointment of former Interior Department official and former Chief of Staff to Rep. Steve Pearce (NM) Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior. In this role, Willens will work closely with yet-to-be-confirmed Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt. Willens brings with him more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and the private sector. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

In addition to being a westerner, Todd brings a strong combination of public and private sector experience to the Interior Department," Secretary Ryan Zinke said. "Most of Interior's holdings and responsibilities are in the West, and Todd's intimate understanding of the West, from growing up in rural California to his previous time at Interior to his tenure with Congressman Pearce, will be a major asset to the people we serve. I look forward to Todd helping us advance Interior's mission and the work of the Administration on behalf of local communities."

"It is an honor and privilege to be appointed as Interior's Assistant Deputy Secretary," Willens said. "I thank Secretary Zinke for his confidence in my abilities to serve the Department and the Administration. I look forward to getting to work contributing to the implementation of the President's priorities for the Department and our Agencies, making America great again."

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017. During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

"Todd's dedication to New Mexico and the West made him a most effective manager of people and policies," Congressman Pearce said. "More than anything though, my wife Cynthia and I consider him a close friend. He has run my congressional operations for nearly seven years and been my top adviser on numerous items, delivering countless successes on my behalf. I congratulate Todd and the Administration on his appointment to this important position."

"The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior," Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. "In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country. As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset."

"I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular," Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. "Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration."

"The Tehama Colusa Canal Authority couldn't be more pleased with the selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary at the Department of the Interior," Jeff Sutton, General Manager of the Tehama Colusa Canal Authority, said. "A native of Northern California, Todd has a great deal of experience in Western water issues and, as a sportsman-conservationist, he has a long track record of delivering mutually beneficial policy outcomes for the benefit of fish, wildlife and water users throughout the Western United States. We look forward to working with Todd in his new capacity."

"The Civil War Trust strongly supports the appointment of Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior," James Lighthizer, President of the Civil War Trust, said. "In his previous service on Capitol Hill and in the Department of the Interior, Todd has been a champion of our national parks and historic battlefield sites. We are excited about the opportunity to partner with him to preserve America's battlefield parks as places of remembrance as well as heritage tourism destinations."

"The Boone and Crockett Club proudly supports Todd Willens' appointment," said Paul Phillips, co-chair of the Boone and Crockett Club's Policy Committee. "Mr. Willens is a conservationist who hunts. He has this personal passion and understands the ecological and economic benefits that follow for the public. His experience in the complexities of policy at the Department of the Interior will serve the country and conservation community all very well."

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill. A California native, Willens is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

###

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Jul 11, 2017 at 4:52 PM, Michael Coleman
<mcoleman@abqjournal.com> wrote:

got it -- thanks

From: "Heather Swift" <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
To: "Michael Coleman" <mcoleman@abqjournal.com>
Sent: Tuesday, July 11, 2017 4:49:30 PM
Subject: Re: Zinke visit to NM

nothing to announce - just for your own planning and not for publication but no announcement will be made until just before the secretary's visit due to security concerns regarding any cabinet secretary's travel schedule

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Jul 11, 2017 at 4:45 PM, Michael Coleman

<mcoleman@abqjournal.com> wrote:

Hi Heather:

Michael Coleman with the Albuquerque Journal here. Any new information on Sec. Zinke's visit to NM?

Also, I'm doing a Washington notebook for tomorrow (sorry for late notice - just realized I needed to do it) on the fact that the public comment period for the monuments review has ended. Any new comment or information regarding the secretary's intentions regarding NM or other monuments nationally?

Thank you,

Mike

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Readout of President Donald J. Trump's Meeting with U.S. Ambassador to Russia Jon Huntsman Jr.
Date: Friday, October 06, 2017 6:50:02 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
October 6, 2017

Readout of President Donald J. Trump's Meeting with U.S. Ambassador to Russia Jon Huntsman Jr.

President Donald J. Trump met with U.S. Ambassador to Russia Jon Huntsman Jr., and his wife, Mary Kaye Huntsman, to wish them well as they return to Moscow to represent the United States and work toward improving our relationship with Russia.

###

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: Swift, Heather
To: Nachmany, Eli; Laura Rigas; Russell Newell
Subject: Remarks - Ohio Heroes' Week
Date: Monday, July 24, 2017 11:53:34 AM
Attachments: Remarks_HeroesWeek_v1.docx

The Secretary wanted the remarks printed as is. No note cards. He also asked if they would be loaded into the prompter.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump After Security Briefing | 8/10/2017
Date: Thursday, August 10, 2017 7:27:07 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

10, 2017 For Immediate Release August

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AFTER SECURITY BRIEFING

Trump National Golf Club
Bedminster, New Jersey

3:41 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. We appreciate it. We are having a meeting today. We actually had a much larger group than this. This is the finals. But we discussed many things. One of them obviously was North Korea. We discussed Venezuela. We discussed Afghanistan and the Middle East, generally. We had some very good meetings, some very good ideas, very good thoughts, and lot of decisions were made. This was a very important day, actually. We made a lot of decisions.

With that, if you have any questions. Yes?

Q Did you make any decision on Afghanistan in order to add additional troops?

THE PRESIDENT: Yeah, we're getting close. We're getting very close. It's a very big decision for me. I took over a mess, and we're going to make it a lot less messy. But that has been a place -- 17 years -- our longest war, I read in one of your columns. And, frankly, it's going to be a decision that's going to be made very soon.

Q And do you have full confidence in your national security advisor?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, I do. General McMaster -- absolutely. He's our friend. He's my friend. And he's a very talented man. I like him and I respect him.

Q Sir, why did you decide to announce the transgender ban reversal a couple of weeks ago? And are you betraying a community that you pledged to support?

THE PRESIDENT: No, no. Look, I have great respect for the community. I think I have great support -- or I've had great support from that community. I got a lot of votes. But the transgender -- the military is working on it now. They're doing the work. It's been a very difficult situation. And I think I'm doing a lot of people a favor by coming out and just saying it. As you know, it's been a very complicated issue for the military. It's been a very confusing issue for the military. And I think I'm doing the military a great favor.

Q Mr. President, do you have any response to the Russian President expelling 755 workers from our embassies?

THE PRESIDENT: No. I want to thank him because we're trying to cut down on payroll. And as far as I'm concerned, I'm very thankful that he let go of a large number of people because now we have a smaller payroll. There's no real reason for them to go back. So I greatly appreciate the fact that they've been able to cut our payroll for the United States. We'll save a lot of money.

Q Mr. President, was it appropriate for the FBI to raid the home of Paul Manafort predawn?

THE PRESIDENT: I thought it was a very, very strong signal or whatever. I know Mr. Manafort. I haven't spoken to him in a long time, but I know him. He was with the campaign, as you know, for a very short period of time -- relatively short period of time. But I've always known him to be a good man.

Q He was the chairman.

THE PRESIDENT: I thought it was a very, you know -- they do that very seldom. So I was surprised to see it. I was very, very surprised to see it. We haven't really been involved.

Q Have you spoken to the FBI Director about it?

THE PRESIDENT: Excuse me?

Q Have you spoken to the FBI Director about it, or the Attorney General?

THE PRESIDENT: No, I have not. I have not. But to do that early in the morning, whether or not is was appropriate, you'd have to ask them. I've always found Paul Manafort to be a very decent man. And he's like a lot of other people -- probably makes consultant fees from all over the place. Who knows. I don't know. But I thought that was a very -- that was pretty tough stuff, to wake him up. Perhaps his family was there. I think that's pretty tough stuff.

Q Mr. President, speaking of the Attorney General, have you -- how would you categorize your relationship with Attorney General Sessions? Have you guys spoken about some of the differences you've had in the past?

THE PRESIDENT: It's fine. It is what it is. It's fine. He's working hard on the border. I'm very proud of what we've done on the border. I'm very proud of General Kelly, what he's done on the border. One of the reasons he's my Chief of Staff right now is because he did such an outstanding job at the border. We're down 78 percent. Nobody thought that would be -- I mean, in the old days, with other administrations, if you were down 1 percent, it was considered a big thing. We're down 78 percent at the border, and nobody thought that was possible. So I'm very proud of General Kelly. He's now Chief of Staff.

At the same time, I'm very proud of what we've done over the last six months, between Supreme Court, between tremendous amounts of legislation that's been passed. We had 42 to 48 bills passed. I'm not talking about just executive orders, I'm talking about bills passed. We had massive executive orders. We got rid of record-setting amounts of regulations, and a lot of it is statutory, where it's a 90-day period that you have to wait. Then it's another 90-day period, and you have to wait 30 days. Much more is coming now.

And I believe in regulation. You have to have to some regulation. But we're going to have a small percentage of regulation compared to what we have. And I think that's why you see business enthusiasm is the highest it's been in 18 years; why unemployment is the lowest it's been in 18 years. And the unemployment rate just came out; it's the lowest it's been in 18 years. And with that being said, we have companies moving into the United States, whether it's Foxconn. You saw the two large auto companies moving back; probably they'll go to Michigan, but they're negotiating with various states.

We have had -- we have done a lot in a short period of time. So I'm very proud of it. I think that General Kelly is going to be a fantastic Chief of Staff, however.

Q Mr. President, are you going to increase U.S. military presence in Asia?

THE PRESIDENT: We are going to look at what's happening in Asia. We're looking at it right now. We're constantly looking at it. I don't like to signal what I'm going to be doing, but we are certainly looking at it. And obviously we're spending a lot of time looking at -- in particular, North Korea. And we are preparing for many different, alternative events if North Korea -- if -- he has disrespected our country greatly. He has said things that are horrific. And with me, he's not getting away with it. He got away with it for a long time, between him and his family. He's not getting away with it. It's a whole new ballgame.

And he's not going to be saying those things, and he's certainly not going to be doing those things. I read about, 'We're in Guam by August 15th.' Let's see what he does with Guam. If he does something in Guam, it will be an event the likes of which nobody has seen before -- what will happen in North Korea.

Q What do you mean?

THE PRESIDENT: You'll see. You'll see. And he'll see. He will see.

Q Is that a dare?

THE PRESIDENT: It's not a dare, it's a statement. It has nothing to do with dare. That's a statement. He's not going to go around threatening Guam, and he's not going to threaten the United States. And he's not going to threaten Japan, and he's not going to threaten South Korea. No, that's not a dare, as you say. That is a statement of fact.

Q Mr. President, can you talk about the nuclear posture and what your priorities are there?

THE PRESIDENT: Yeah. Nuclear to me -- number one: I would like to de-nuke the world. I know that President Obama said global warming is the biggest threat. I totally disagree. I say that it's a simple one: Nuclear is our greatest threat worldwide. Not even a question, not even close. So I'd like to de-nuke the world. I would like Russia and the United States and China and Pakistan, and many other countries that have nuclear weapons, get rid of them.

But until such time as they do, we will be the most powerful nuclear nation on Earth by far. The first order I gave to my generals, as you know -- you know, Mike -- my first order was: I want this, our nuclear arsenal, to be the biggest and the finest in the world. And we spent a lot of money, a lot of time, and a lot of effort. And it's in tip-top shape, and getting better and getting stronger. And until such time as this scourge disappears, we will be so much better and so much stronger than anybody else. And nobody, including North Korea, is going to be threatening us with anything.

Q Sir, what specifically have you changed in the nuclear arsenal? And the reason I ask is that a lot of experts yesterday, in response to your tweet, said that modernizing the arsenal takes many years; it can't be done in six months. That's a long process, and that's only just begun.

THE PRESIDENT: We've done a lot of modernization, but we've done a lot of renovation. And we have it now in very, very good shape. And it will be in much better shape over the next six months to a year. It's a very important thing. Actually, it was the first -- the military is very important to me. As you know, I did extremely well with the military vote, Mike and I.

But we are -- my first order was, we have to do the military, but before we do the military per se, we're going to do the nuclear. And we are in very strong shape. We are going to be increasing our budget by many billions of dollars because of North Korea and other reasons having to do with the anti-missile. So we are going to be increasing our budget by many billions of dollars. We'll probably be able to report that over the next week.

As you know, we reduced it by 5 percent, but I've decided I don't want that. We're going to be increasing the anti-missiles by a substantial amount of billions of dollars.

Q Mr. President, can you share your latest thoughts on Iran, speaking of nuclear deals, and whether you feel like they are in compliance or will be in compliance?

THE PRESIDENT: I don't think Iran is in compliance. We wrote them a very tough letter to the -- as you know, to the Congress. I personally don't think they're in compliance. But we have time, and we're going to see. We also put down a lot of defaults, or potential default situations. I don't think they're living up to the spirit of the agreement. President Obama in his wisdom gave them $150 billion. He gave them $1.8 billion in cash, which is -- that's a hard one to figure. But that was his decision. I think it's a horrible agreement. But they are not in compliance with the agreement, and they are certainly not in the spirit of the agreement in compliance.

And I think you'll see some very strong things taking place if they don't get themselves in compliance. But I do not believe they are in compliance right now.

Q And, Mr. President, what's the latest on the leak investigation that the Attorney General announced late last week? And is there any separate investigation that you're looking at --

THE PRESIDENT: Yeah, sure. We're looking. We're always looking. You have two leaks. You have the leaks coming out of intelligence and various departments having to do with Syria, having to do with all sorts of different places, having to do, frankly, with North Korea. And those are very serious. And then you have the leaks where people want to love me and they're all fighting for love. (Laughter.) Those are not very important, but certainly we don't like them. Those are little inner-White House leaks. They're not very important. But, actually, I'm somewhat honored by them.

But the important leaks to me -- and they're leaks that the Attorney General is looking at very strongly -- are the leaks coming out of intelligence. And we have to stop them for the security and the national security of our country.

Q Mr. President, are you passing notes to the special counsel, Bob Mueller? Can you talk a little bit about --

THE PRESIDENT: No, not notes. We're working with him. I mean, we have a situation which is very unusual. Everybody said there's no collusion. If you look at the counsels that come in, we have a Senate hearing, we have judiciary, we have intelligence, and we have a House hearing. And everybody walks out, even the enemies, and they said, no, there is no collusion, there's no collusion.

So they're investigating something that never happened. There was no collusion between us and Russia. In fact, the opposite. Russia spent a lot of money on fighting me. And if you think about it, I want a strong military. You see our budget is up by -- it will be hundreds of billions of dollars, our military budget. Russia doesn't like that. Hillary was going to cut the budget substantially, the military budget. Russia is -- very important for Russia -- oil. Oil and gas. We are now an exporter -- because of an incredible six months that I have -- an exporter of oil and gas. That's bad for Russia.

I always said, I don't think Russia wants me because I want a strong military and I want low energy prices. Energy is a disaster. Low energy prices is a disaster for Russia. Additionally, it seems that Russia spent a lot of money on that false report, and that was Russian money, and I think it was Democrat money, too. You could say that was collusion. Plus, the Democrats colluded on the Ukraine. So they colluded. And then when you get down to it, why isn't the FBI looking at the DNC server? You have a server that they refuse -- the Democrats refuse to give to the FBI. Now, I don't know how the FBI can investigate something if the DNC, the Democrats, refuse to give the server.

So we have an investigation of something that never took place. And all I say is, work with them -- because this is an event that never took place.

Now, as far as somebody else, where did they file the right papers or did they forget to file a paper, you know, I guarantee if you went around to look at everybody that made a speech or whatever these people did, that's up to them. Did they do something wrong because they didn't file the right document or whatever? Perhaps. You'll have to look at them. But I guarantee you this: Probably a lot of people in Washington did the same thing.

Q Mr. President, given your harsh criticism of Democrats just now, how are you going to bring them in on things like infrastructure or --

THE PRESIDENT: Well, we'll have to see. I'm not sure that we will bring them in. I mean, maybe we'll bring them in, maybe not. I think the infrastructure bill will be bipartisan. In fact, frankly, it may have more support from the Democrats. I want a very strong infrastructure bill.

We've, as of this moment, spent over $6 trillion in the Middle East. As far as I'm concerned, when I say "spent," we've wasted $6 trillion in the Middle East, and yet we can't fix our roads and our bridges and our schools and our airports. And I think that's a very sad situation. So I'm very strong on infrastructure, and a lot of Republicans are, but I know a lot of Democrats are also. I think that will work out. I think it's going to work out very well.

Q Mr. President, have you sought -- thought about or considered leading the dismissal of the Special Counsel? Is there anything that Bob Mueller could do that would send you in that direction?

THE PRESIDENT: I haven't given it any thought. I mean, I've been reading about it from you people. You say, oh, I'm going to dismiss him. No, I'm not dismissing anybody. I mean, I want them to get on with the task, but I also want the Senate and the House to come out with their findings.

Now, judging from the people leaving the meetings -- leaks -- but they leave the meetings all the time and they say, no, we haven't found any collusion. There is no collusion. You know why? Because I don't speak to Russians.

Look, I won because I suppose I was a much better candidate than her. I won because I went to Wisconsin, I went to Michigan, I won Pennsylvania. I fought a smart battle. That's why I win. I didn't win because of Russia. Russia had nothing to do with me winning. We had a great team, and I guess I did a good job. And you know what, honestly, they spent much more money than I did, by a lot. You know that. They spent a lot more money, and, honestly, they did not do a very good job of campaigning.

Q And one more question about Senate Leader McConnell. You talked about him outside a little bit earlier, but have you reached out to him since your phone call yesterday?

THE PRESIDENT: No.

Q And have you given any consideration to asking his wife, your Transportation Secretary, to help bridge whatever --

THE PRESIDENT: Elaine is doing a very good job. We're very proud of Elaine as Secretary of Transportation -- as you know -- as you said, Mitch's wife. She is doing a very, very good job. I'm very disappointed in Mitch. But if he gets these bills passed, I'll be very happy with him. I'll be the first to admit it. But honestly, repeal and replace of Obamacare should have taken place, and it should have been on my desk virtually the first week that I was there -- or the first day that I was there. I've been hearing about it for seven years.

So repeal and replace should have taken place. The tax bill, tax cuts, tax reform, hopefully they get that done. I hope they get it done. And the other thing would be the infrastructure bill.

In addition to that -- you know, we've passed a lot of things. We passed accountability with the VA. We passed a lot. We're doing a lot of great work at the VA. And we're doing a lot of great work all over. You look at what's happening with the coal industry where they're putting on -- I mean, I looked at West Virginia the other day -- I was in West Virginia making a speech, and they are doing great as a state. The great governor of West Virginia, Jim -- who you saw -- he just became a Republican. He left. This is the first time in many, many years that a thing like that's happened. He just left the Democratic Party and he became a Republican, which was a great moment. Hasn't happened in many years.

So we're very, very happy with what's happened. We think it's been an incredible six months. We've done a lot of record-setting business. It's incredible. You look at what's going on with the economy. And, you know, to me, very important, you look at the enthusiasm of businesses. You look at companies moving back in. You just saw on Friday the two big car companies that are coming in. You saw last week, Foxconn. They make the Apple iPhones -- they make all of it -- desktops. They're the biggest in the world. They're coming into Wisconsin with an unbelievable plant like we've never seen before.

And I actually said to Tim Cook of Apple -- I said, you know, Tim, I won't consider myself successful as President unless I see you start building those big, beautiful plants that you have all over China -- if you start building them in the United States. And he's going to do that.

Q Mr. President, you were critical of the intelligence in the run-up to the Iraq War. Should we question the intelligence now we're hearing about North Korea?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, it's different intelligence. I have Mike Pompeo. I have great confidence in him. That doesn't mean I had confidence in his predecessor. Okay? Which I didn't, actually, although --

Q But all the intelligence (inaudible) --

THE PRESIDENT: Although he did say good things about me. He did say he had no information or no anything on collusion. So I shouldn't maybe say that, but I will say it. But I have tremendous confidence in Mike Pompeo. Dan Coats, fantastic. I mean, we have people. I think your new head of the FBI is going to be -- I think I've done a great service for this country. I think that Christopher will do a fantastic job as the head of the FBI.

So, look, nobody has greater respect for intelligence than Donald Trump, but you have to have the right leaders. I think we have great leaders right now. And you can look at the intelligence over the years. It was intelligence that got people to make one of the worst decisions ever made in the history of our country -- going into Iraq. Because they said there were no weapons. You know, you look at it -- it ended up being there were no weapons of mass destruction. I mean, listening to them, they said weapons of mass destruction were all over the place, but they were not there. That was intelligence.

I have great respect for intelligence as led by the people that I have in charge now. We have great people, and I think it's going to lead us to tremendous victories. And that's what we need.

Q What is that intelligence telling you about North Korea and the nuclear --

THE PRESIDENT: It's telling me a lot of things, but you'll probably find out about it before anybody else, right? (Laughter.) With your leaks. We got to stop the leaks. The leaks are very dangerous for our country. But I have great respect for the intelligence community. And I think with the leadership we have right now, hopefully it will be a very, very successful eight years for this country. And then, after that, we'll continue onward.

But we have a lot of things we have to straighten out. You have the Middle East, you have North Korea. We have a lot of places of tremendous conflict and tremendous danger for this country.

I will say, getting the 15-0 vote at the United Nations from the Security Council the other day, that's something that very few Presidents would have been able to get. And I have great respect for the fact that China and Russia went along with it. That was a tremendous day for the United States. I think it will have a strong impact on North Korea. I don't know that it will be the end all, but I think it will be a very, very -- I think it will have a big impact on North Korea and what they're doing.

Thank you all very much. Thank you. Thank you very much. Appreciate it.

END

4:01 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump and American Taxpayers on Tax Reform
Date: Wednesday, December 13, 2017 4:17:51 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

December 13, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AND AMERICAN TAXPAYERS
ON TAX REFORM

Grand Foyer

3:02 P.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. Thank you, everyone. Please.

We're joined today by college students, young entrepreneurs, families, workers, mothers, and fathers from all over our nation. You make this country run. It's an honor to be with you, and it's an honor to have you at the White House. And thank you all for being here -- really fantastic. Thank you. Great people. (Applause.)

As a candidate, I promised we would pass a massive tax cut for the everyday, working American families who are the backbone and the heartbeat of our country.

Now we're just days away -- I hope, I hope -- you know what that means, right -- from keeping that promise and delivering a truly amazing victory for American families. We want to give you, the American people, a giant tax cut for Christmas. And when I say giant, I mean giant. (Applause.)

As we speak, Congress has reached an agreement on tax legislation that will deliver more jobs, higher wages, and massive tax relief for American families and for American companies.

The typical family of four earning $75,000 will see an income tax cut of more than $2,000, slashing their tax bill in half. It's going to be a lot of money. You're going to have an extra $2,000.

But there are many more things than that. Our plan expands the child tax credit for working families. You'll hear the numbers very soon, but they're even larger than anticipated.

It nearly doubles the amount of income taxed at the rate of zero. I don't know if any of you are paying zero. I hope you're not; I hope you're paying above that. But a lot of people who are having it a little bit tough are going to be paying zero.

It closes special interest loopholes; it lowers tax rates for families; and our plan also cuts taxes on businesses, which is expected to raise income by an average of more than $4,000. So your income goes up. It's like having a $4,000 increase, which isn't bad, which isn't bad.

It's a lot of money to spend. A lot of jobs are going to be created with the money that you spend -- very special. And it makes America competitive again so we can bring back that simple but beautiful phrase, you've heard it before: Made in the USA. Right? I don't know if they've heard it, but you've heard it. (Applause.)

Our current tax code is burdensome, complex, and profoundly unfair. It has exported our jobs, closed our factories, and left millions of parents worried that their children might be the first generation to have less opportunity than the last. Our factories have left. So many of them, gone. But they're all coming back. And you see it, even before we do this, that they're starting to come back. Our country is starting to do really well again, and as a country we're being respected again. We're being respected again.

I'm here today to tell you that we will never let bad things happen, with respect to the economy of our country. We're not going to lose our businesses again like has happened over the last number of decades. America is coming back bigger and better and stronger than ever before. Okay? They'll see it, and they're going to see the result.

America isn't content just by getting by. America is about getting ahead, about finding the best in ourselves and in each other. We are reclaiming our destinies as Americans, a nation that thinks big, dreams bigger, and always reaches for the stars. We didn't become great through massive taxation and Washington regulation. And, by the way, we are cutting regulation at a rate never seen before in the history of our country.

We became great because our people, our families -- and because of our freedom. We became great because of our drive to find the next horizon, to unlock the next mystery, and to begin the next adventure. You know what I'm talking about. And that's who we are: a nation of strivers and builders and dreamers and doers, people who treasure their independence and don't know how to quit. Never quit. Never, ever give up -- never, ever.

I say that, also, to our great Cabinet. And they've done a great job. A lot of things have happened. Nobody's done the job that we've done.

When government loosens its grip, there is no summit we cannot reach. Our tax cuts will break down, and they'll break it down fast -- all forms of government, and all forms of government barriers -- and breathe new life into the American economy. They will unleash the American worker; they will tear down the restraints on discovery, innovation, and creation; and they will restore the hopes and dreams of the American family.

Millions of middle-class families will win under our plan. And today we are honored to hear from a few of those wonderful and truly great families.

Bryant and Ashley Glick -- right -- are from Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. I know it well. They have two beautiful children with a third on the way. Bryant manages a farm equipment store. Ashley works in healthcare. This year, they were in the 15-percent tax bracket.

Under our plan, they will drop to the 12-percent bracket. That's a big drop. Instead of itemizing their deductions, they will be able to file their taxes on a single, little, beautiful sheet of paper. That's good. That's good. (Applause.) And instead of paying $2,600 in income taxes, they will get it down to $2,000. They'll save at least $600 and probably more than that.

Bryant, Ashley, how about saying a few words? You want to? Come on. Thank you very much.

MR. GLICK: Well, thank you, Mr. President. It's an honor to be here. On behalf of the good people of Lancaster County; my family; and, specifically, my grandmother, Linda Martin, well done. Many of your predecessors promised that this reform was coming, but you did it. We are greatly excited about this.

With the tax savings that we are going to see, we are going to put that money into home renovations. And I'm excited that you were the one that got it over the finish line. Thank you, Mr. President.
(Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: The Kovacs family also joins us today from Ohio. That's a great state. A lot of success in Ohio. (Laughter.) Adam is a veteran who works in telecommunications, Lindsay works in administration admissions at a university, and they have two beautiful children.

This year, they're currently in the 25-percent bracket and pay nearly $14,000 in taxes. Our plan gives them their time back because they won't have to itemize, and it gives them nearly one-third of their money back -- more than $3,500 for one year.

I'd like to invite the Kovacs to explain what our tax cuts will mean for them. They've studied it very closely. These are very smart, sharp people. They know exactly what we're doing here, and they like it. Come on up. Thank you. (Applause.)

MR. KOVACS: Thank you, Mr. President. It is truly an honor that you invited the Kovacs family to the White House today. This is going to be great for our family. We have home renovations that we want to take care of, and hopefully save for our two children to go to college.

Thank you so much, Mr. President. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: The Giampolo family is from Polk County, Iowa. Anthony is a police officer and Aubyn is a 911 emergency dispatcher. When they're not at work protecting and serving their fellow citizens, their hands are full with four wonderful children.

This year, they were in the 25-percent bracket, their itemized deductions, and they've done everything they can. They paid more than $19,000 in taxes -- thank you very much, by the way; that's a lot of money. (Laughter.) Under our plan, they will file on a single page and save $2,700. Anthony, Aubyn, maybe you'd like to say a few words? Come on in. (Applause.)

MR. GIAMPOLO: I just want to thank President Trump. Education is very important to our family. Under this bill, our family will be able to save a lot of money. We have a lot of people going to school. My wife and I are both in graduate school, finishing up, and we still got three other -- four other kids to get through college. So, it will help out a lot. (Laughter and applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: Leon and Maria Benjamin are pastors of New Life Harvest Church -- and it's a beautiful church in Richmond, Virginia -- and they have three wonderful children.

Under our plan, they will get a larger tax refund to help them pay their bills. They'll receive a tax refund, this year, of $3,000. Leon and Maria, I would love you to discuss your middle-class tax cut a little bit with the millions of people watching right now on television. (Laughter.) You do very well, and we're very proud of you. And it is indeed a beautiful church. I got to see a very, very nice picture. We'll have to get there someday soon. Thank you. Come on in, please, please. (Applause.)

MR. BENJAMIN: (Laughter.) To God be the glory. Thank you, President Trump, for inviting us here. On behalf of the Benjamin family and of course, Richmond, Virginia, we represent a cadre of many families across the nation. African American families, urban communities, and families all across need this now. And it's time for a change, and it's time that we recognize that our President is making good on his promises. (Applause.) Thank you, Mr. President. God bless you, and we'll continue to keep praying for you and your team as you move forward and forge ahead with this new future in America. God bless you. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: He can be my minister anytime. (Laughter.)

The Howard family lives in Tenino, Washington. Issac owns an espresso machine service company, and Emily takes care of their four beautiful children. They are currently in the 15-percent bracket and pay $2,500 in taxes. Our plan will totally wipe out their tax bill, and they might even get a refund of substantially more than $700. I'd like to introduce them. Come on up. (Applause.)

MRS. HOWARD: I'm going to speak for us today. (Laughter.) We are absolutely blessed to be here, so thank you, Mr. President. It's our joy to stand before you guys. And what this means to us as a family is that we will be able to pour out into our community -- whatever that looks like -- giving away to families that are in need, or setting them up for success in any way that -- whatever God has planned for our family.

I think that that is our goal, and that we are blessed to have such an amazing President -- and what a good steward he is of our country.

So thank you, Mr. President. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: Well, thank you all. It's critically important for Congress to quickly pass these historic tax cuts, and that's going to take place, I think, even before the media -- I used the word "media." Did you notice? As opposed to "fake news media" -- I don't say. (Laughter.) Because today is a very important day. We want everybody to be covered very accurately.

So I'm excited to announce that if Congress sends me a bill before Christmas, the IRS -- this is just out, this is breaking news -- has just confirmed that Americans will see lower taxes and bigger paychecks beginning in February, just two short months from now. (Applause.) Just got that. We just got that.

Fifty-five years ago this week, President John F. Kennedy, a Democrat, launched a historic effort to pass sweeping top-to-bottom tax cuts. A half a century later, we're reminded that lowering taxes is neither a Republican or Democrat idea, but an American principle and an American idea.

The goal of my administration is for every American to know the dignity of work, the pride of a paycheck, and the satisfaction of a job well done. We want people to love waking up in the morning and going to work -- just with that incredible enthusiasm that we have in this country. And that's what we're going to be doing, and that's what's going to be happening.

Today we stand on the verge of a new economic miracle. Our economy has already surged to 3 percent growth -- far ahead of schedule, by the way -- far, far ahead -- in each of the last two quarters. And if we didn't have the hurricanes, we could have hit four last quarter. Four -- a number that was unthinkable two years ago when I started the campaign, and even my first month in office -- that was an unthinkable number. And I'll tell you what, it's going to go higher than that.

We've created 2.2 million jobs since the election. Unemployment is at a 17-year low. The unemployment rate in the manufacturing business is the lowest in recorded history. Consumer confidence is a 17-point high. Pensions and retirement accounts are soaring as the stock market hits 85 new record highs since the election. How are we doing? Are we doing okay? Not bad, right? (Applause.)

And if Congress sends me a tax reform, this is only a small beginning to the incredible things that our people will achieve over a very short period of time, and the tremendous heights that we will reach economically and so many other ways in our country.

Every day, as this victory draws closer -- I mean, we are so close, right now. So close. In fact, almost -- I don't want to talk about it. Maybe we shouldn't talk about it. (Laughter.)

The cynical voices that opposed tax cuts grow smaller and weaker, and the American people grow stronger. I heard one of our opponents stand up the other day and say, this is for the rich. They had no idea. They didn't even see the final bill. I didn't see the final bill. This is for the people of middle-income. This is for companies that are going to create jobs. This is for very, very special people, the great people of America.

Everyday, hardworking Americans know that the future of this nation will never belong to those who say you can't; it will always belong to the American people who will say we will.

It belongs to people like the Glicks, the Kovacs, the Giampolos, the Benjamins, the Howards, and the millions of Americans just like them across our nation, who pour out their hearts and souls every single day to take care of their families and the country they love and that we love.

We are going to have a country that celebrates you again -- hardworking, great people. You're being celebrated again. Remember that. Because you were a little bit forgotten. We had called it "the forgotten people." Somebody else called me and everybody else the "deplorables." Have you ever heard that term? Right? We're proud to be the deplorables, and we're doing well.

We're going to make our tax system work for you again. We're going to make our economy work for you again. And we are going to make the American Dream -- and that's the real dream -- that will be the dream that you want for your children and your grandchildren once again.

But we need your help to get Congress across that finish line. We'll have very little Democrat support, probably none, and that's purely for political reasons. They like it a lot, and they can't say it. They don't like what's happening. But they can't say it. Some day we have to come together and do bipartisan, and hopefully it can happen soon. Right? (Applause.)

If you make your voices heard, this moment will be forever remembered as a great new beginning, the dawn of a brilliant American future shining with patriotism, prosperity, and pride.

With your help, we will bring back our jobs; we will bring back our wealth as a country; and, for every citizen across this beautiful land, we will bring back our great American Dreams.

Thank you and God bless you all. Thank you very much. Thank you. (Applause.)

END

3:22 P.M. EST

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump and President Macron of France Before Bilateral Meeting
Date: Monday, September 18, 2017 4:23:55 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

Release For Immediate
September 18, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AND PRESIDENT MACRON OF FRANCE
BEFORE BILATERAL MEETING

Lotte New York Palace Hotel
New York, New York

3:16 P.M. EDT

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Thank you very much, everybody. It's a great honor to be with President Macron of France, who's had one of the great election victories of all time, I will tell you. That was an exciting evening. (Laughter.) And I must say that I watched every moment of it. It was a very, very exciting time.

He's doing a terrific job in France. He's doing what has to be done. He's respected by the French people, and I can tell you he's respected by the people of the United States.

So we have a lot of things to talk about. We'll be discussing many different elements. I'm not sure we should discuss all of it with the media -- (laughter) -- but they'll probably know before we know.

So I just want to thank you all for being here. I want to thank your representatives for being here, many of whom I know already. And we will have very productive meetings. France is a great country, it's a beautiful country. I won't soon forget our dinner on top of the Eiffel Tower where we really got to know each other and our families. And thank you very much.

PRESIDENT MACRON: Thank you, Donald. Thank you, everybody. I will say a few words. I totally concur with Donald on what did you state, so I will just say a few words in French for the French people here.

(President Macron speaks French.) (No English interpretation provided.)

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, thank you very much, Emmanuel. And I do want to say that I was your guest at Bastille Day, and it was one of the greatest parades I've ever seen. It was two hours on the button, and it was military might, and I think a tremendous thing for France and for the spirit of France.

And people don't know what great warriors they are in France, but when you see that and you see all the victories, it was a tremendous thing. And to a large extent, because of what I witnessed, we may do something like that on July 4th in Washington, down Pennsylvania Avenue. (Laughter.) I don't know. We're going to have to try and top it. But we had a lot of planes going over and we had a lot of military might, and it was really a beautiful thing to see. They had representatives from different wars and different uniforms. It was really so well done.

But I came back, and one of my early calls were, I think we're going to have to start looking at that ourselves. So we're actually thinking about 4th of July, Pennsylvania Avenue, having a really great parade to show our military strength.

You know, we're spending this year $700 billion -- more than we've ever spent on the military -- which is a good thing for you because we're friends. Okay? And I think we're looking forward to doing that. I'm speaking with General Kelly and with all of the people involved, and we'll see if we can do it this year. But we certainly will be beginning to do that.

So I appreciate it. And again, most importantly, I appreciate you being here. Thank you, Emmanuel.

PRESIDENT MACRON: Thank you. And I have to say just for the American people, that our people in France were very proud to have you and your wife, Melania, in Paris the 14th of July, for Bastille Day. And people were very proud to have you in front of them and participating to this ceremony and this parade.

Thanks very much for your presence.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, I was proud to be there. And also, when Emmanuel called me, he said, it's the 100th year in terms of timing of the first world war. One hundred years. And I said, well, that's a very important period. So we went and really -- I was very proud to say that we're very, very, very good friends with France. That was a beautiful day. And thank you very much. Thank you.

Thank you, everybody.

END

3:21 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump and President Moon of the Republic of Korea Before One-on-One Bilateral Meeting
Date: Tuesday, November 07, 2017 3:15:25 AM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

November 7, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AND PRESIDENT MOON OF THE REPUBLIC OF KOREA
BEFORE ONE-ON-ONE BILATERAL MEETING

Blue House
Seoul, Republic of Korea

3:39 P.M. KST

PRESIDENT MOON: (As interpreted.) As President of the United States, this is the first state visit to Korea in 25 years. And since the launch of my new administration, this is the first state visit that I'm receiving from overseas. I would like to warmly welcome you and Mrs. Trump both to Korea and to Cheong Wa Dae.

So I hope that I will have an opportunity to repay the warm hospitality that I received from you when I visited Washington, D.C. in June.

And I heard this past Sunday there was some tragic news from Texas. I believe that you would have the even more heavier heart because you were traveling overseas when this happened. On behalf of the Korean government and the Korean people, I would like to convey my heartfelt condolences to you, Mr. President, and the American people.

And also, I would like to congratulate you in advance. Tomorrow is your one-year anniversary of your election victory. And I believe it has not been one year yet, your time in office, but you have already -- you are already making great progress on making America great again, as you have promised on the campaign trail.

And I would like to congratulate you on the progress that you've been making on the economy and also the fact that the stock market has continued to break new records every day. And thanks to that, the stock market in Korea is also performing very well. It is good to know that both of us are doing very well.

And I would also like to commend you on your efforts in leading the international collaboration and unity when it comes to countering North Korea nuclear issue. I know that you have put this issue at the top of your security agenda.

So I hope that your visit to Korea and to the Asia Pacific region will serve as an opportunity to relieve some of the anxiety that the Korean people have due to North Korea's provocations, and also serve as a turning point in resolving the North Korean nuclear issue.

The Korean people welcome you as one, and we have great expectations.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Thank you very much. President Moon, I want to thank you so much for that beautiful ceremony. It doesn't get more beautiful than that, and I know the work that was put into it. And I watched all of those tens of thousands of people along the route in proudly waving your flag, your great flag, and also waving the American flag, in many cases. I was very happy to see such spirit. You have tremendous spirit in this country, and it's a great country.

I just have to say that it's an honor to be with you and your beautiful wife. And we look forward to having a very successful, really, day of talks. We'll start right now and we'll conclude sometime tomorrow. And then I go off to China, where we look forward to a tremendous success, also. We just left Japan, and there's a great spirit. It's a great part of the world, and it's a very tremendous honor to be here and to be with you.

And again, I very much appreciate the reception. Thank you very much.

END

3:45 P.M. KST

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump and President Niinistö of Finland in Joint Press Conference
Date: Monday, August 28, 2017 10:10:21 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

August 28, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AND PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ OF FINLAND
IN JOINT PRESS CONFERENCE

East Room

4:20 P.M. EDT

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Thank you. Thank you very much. It is my great honor to welcome President Niinistö to the White House. We've just concluded a very positive meeting.

And I want to begin today by extending my thoughts and prayers for those affected by Hurricane Harvey and the catastrophe of flooding and all of the other difficulties that they're currently going through in Houston, in southeast Texas, and now it's looking more and more like the state of Louisiana will be also affected.

My administration is coordinating closely with state and local authorities in Texas and Louisiana to save lives, and we thank our first responders and all of those involved in their efforts.

We're working directly with Texas Governor Greg Abbott -- who, by the way, is doing a fantastic job -- and his entire staff, likewise, as well as with Governor John Bel Edwards, who's very much involved in starting the process of Louisiana. We've pledged our full support as Texas and Louisiana battle and recover from this very devastating and historic storm. There's probably never been anything like this.

Under the supervision of FEMA Administrator Brock Long, there has been a tremendous amount of work done. He has been so outstanding in so many ways. More than 8,500 federal workers are involved in the Texas effort alone. I've also today declared emergencies in Louisiana at the request of Governor Edwards.

Recovery will be a long and difficult road, and the federal government stands ready, willing, and able to support that effort. Right now, the single most important thing is the safety and security of those still in harm's way, including the first responders who have been so terrific and brave. Protecting the lives of our people is my highest priority. Every asset at my command is at the disposal of local officials.

Tragic times such as these bring out the best in America's character. Strength, charity and resilience are those characters. We see neighbor helping neighbor, friend helping friend, and stranger helping stranger. And you see that all over. If you watch on television, you just see such incredible work and love, and teamwork.

We are one American family. We hurt together, we struggle together, and, believe me, we endure together. We are one family.

To the people of Texas and Louisiana: We are 100 percent with you. We're praying for you, we're working closely with your leaders and officials, and I will be visiting the impact zone tomorrow to ensure that you're receiving full support and cooperation from the federal government. And on Saturday, we think we're going back to Texas, and also we will be going to Louisiana.

Nothing can defeat the unbreakable spirit of the people of Texas and Louisiana. Right now, every American heart sends its love and support to those whose lives have been upended -- totally upended -- totally -- by this very horrible storm.

We ask God for his wisdom and strength. We will get through this. We will come out stronger. And, believe me, we will be bigger, better, stronger than ever before. The rebuilding will begin, and in the end it will be something very special. And I just want to thank everybody in the affected area, because it has been absolutely incredible to watch -- the spirit, the cooperation, and the love.

I would also like to share a message to the people of Finland who have recently suffered a terrorist attack in Turku: We stand in solidarity with you against the terrorist threat. We must all work together to deny terrorists safe havens, cut off their finances, and defeat their very wicked ideology.

Mr. President, Americans are grateful for your steadfast support as an ally in the fight against terrorism -- appreciate it -- including your membership in the coalition to defeat ISIS. Finland makes important contributions to the coalition and its effort in Afghanistan, and has troops on the ground in Iraq training Iraqi soldiers.

In Afghanistan, Finland provides troops and financial contributions to support the Afghan National Defense and Security Forces on a modern-day frontier between barbarism and civilization. That's what you have -- it's barbarism versus civilization. We are particularly grateful to the Finnish citizens who have sacrificed for our mutual security.

Finland is a leading expert in cybersecurity. In fact, we should be calling you pretty soon. You do do a fantastic job with cybersecurity, and I congratulate you. And I think in a very short period of time, we're going to be right there with you, believe me. The United States is a very proud partner of Finland's European Center of Excellence to counter modern threats, including cyberattacks.

In addition, we look forward to your leadership as chair of the Arctic Council. The Arctic region has strategic and economic importance for both of our nations -- very much so.

The foundation of our friendship is our shared love of freedom. On behalf of all Americans, I congratulate you and the Finnish people on the 100th anniversary of Finland's independence -- 100 years. Fantastic.

In honor of Finland's centennial, the United States is contributing an additional half-million dollars to the Fulbright Finland Foundation. Through the Fulbright program, we are sending more of our best and brightest to Finland, forging lasting connections between Americans and Finns.

On the economic front, we seek fair and reciprocal trade to benefit both of our countries. I applaud Finnish companies for their commitment to increase investment in the United States, adding new technologies and adding good jobs for hardworking Americans. Thank you.

The U.S.-Finnish partnership is rooted in our shared interests and common values. As President -- and I must say, and I want to thank you, President -- we've discussed and we look forward to further strengthening these bonds of culture, commerce, and cooperation between our two countries so that our citizens and our nations can thrive and prosper together.

Mr. President, I'd like to thank you very much for being at the White House and a great meeting in the Oval Office. It's my honor to have you here. Thank you. Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: Mr. President, I want to thank you for your very kind words. And I just want to tell you that it is a great pleasure and honor to be here today. I thank you also for the discussions we have had. They have been of most interest.

We have been closely following Hurricane Harvey. Our thoughts are with the people of Texas and Louisiana. They and you, Mr. President, have shown strength and courage to overcome this catastrophe. It has been touching to watch the TV and see how people help each other. That is what we basically are built of -- helping each other.

Finland highly appreciates our close relationship with the United States. Today, they are broader than ever, ranging from security to defense cooperation, to trade and innovation. We are indeed celebrating our 100 years of independence. I want to thank you for the generous gift presented to the Fulbright Finland Foundation.

I want to also take this opportunity to greet the almost 700,000 Americans who have Finnish origin. Mr. President and I exchanged views on several international issues. Our broad headline was security. We discussed the importance of the transatlantic bond between the European Union and the United States. History has taught us Europeans the value of unity.

The U.S. and NATO presence in Europe are -- and in Baltic Sea -- are most important, and they are increasing rapidly. Finland is doing its part. We promote dialogue. To reduce risks, Finland has proposed steps to improve flight safety in the Baltic Sea area. They are small, but positive steps in reopening dialogue between NATO and Russia. We remain committed to supporting Afghanistan, and we are a dedicated member of the global coalition against ISIS.

Finland took the chairmanship of the Arctic Council from the United States in May. We can't afford losing the pristine Arctic nature. Finland firmly believes that business and environment can both be winners in the Arctic. A good example is reducing black carbon.

Mr. President, I'm looking forward to even closer cooperation with you and your great nation.

I want to thank you. Thank you.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: So we'll take a couple of questions. How about we go to Texas. Todd Gillman. Todd.

Q Thank you, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Yes.

Q I'm wondering what you can tell the people of Texas to expect in terms of long-term recovery efforts. And, in particular, you have been feuding with some key congressional leaders. You've also threatened a government shutdown, potentially next month, over border wall funding. Are these going to hamper long-term -- the funding that will be needed long term for recovery?

PRESIDENT TRUMP: No, Todd. I think that you're going to very rapid action from Congress, certainly from the President. And you're going to get your funding. It's a terrible tragedy. Your governor has been absolutely outstanding in the job he's done, and his entire staff.

And I will say that -- I just spoke with Greg, and he is working like 24/7. We expect to have requests on our desk fairly soon, and we think that Congress will feel very much the way I feel. In a very bipartisan way -- that will be nice. But we think you're going to have what you need and it's going to go fast.

Texas is a unique place. It's a great, great state, great people, and I think you you'll be up and running very, very quickly. Really, very quickly. So, yeah, I think you're going to be in fantastic shape. I have already spoken to Congress and everybody feels for you and feels for what you're going through. But at the same time, they have great respect -- even additional respect for the state, because you've handled it so well, so brilliantly.

But it's a long road. Still pouring, still a lot of rain. Nobody has ever seen anything like it. I've heard the words "epic," I've heard "historic" -- and that's what it is. But you will have what you want, I think, very, very quickly.

And, Todd, you can ask a question the President.

Q Sure, thank you. Does this situation make you reconsider the possibility of a government shutdown?

PRESIDENT TRUMP: I think it has nothing to do with it, really. I think this is separate. This is going to go really very, very quickly. Again, I have spoken to many of the people we're talking about, and everybody feels the same way I do.

Q Thank you. And, Mr. President, I wanted to ask you: Your neighbor Russia has meddled in U.S. politics. They have a military exercise coming up in the next few weeks. In the Baltic, there are tensions over there. What kind of advice have you offered, and can you offer, to the United States in dealing with this adversary?

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: Sir, we are not feeling ourselves as advisors, but we are feeling ourselves as doing all what is possible to maintain peace. And that is what we are doing in Baltic Sea area too.

With the -- actually, you refer to a different kind military training, which is going to happen there. I have to tell you that a couple of weeks ago, I met President Putin, and there were media interested in why Chinese navy is having training together with Russians in Baltic Sea area. Putin answered that it is not a bloc, it is not against anybody. My answer was that we are also training in Baltic Sea with United States and Sweden, and it's not bloc, it's not against anybody.

So we have to be very careful that this huge training, huge military trafficking over politics doesn't cause any accidental problems. Because we know that from accidents might grow whatever. And that is why I think it's important that we continue to work with NATO to enhance, like I said, dialogue between Russia and NATO. And it is going forward.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: You have a question?

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: Finnish Broadcasting Company. Where you are? Okay.

Q Thank you, Mr. President. I have a question to President Trump, if I may. As President Niinistö told, he's been raising the issue about the security situation in the Baltic region and the Baltic Sea, specifically, and has been concerned about the Russian planes flying there without transponders on. So my question to you, Mr. President, would be: Mr. Trump, would you consider Russia as a security threat? Thank you.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, I consider many countries as a security threat, unfortunately, when you look at what's going on in the world today. As you know, a few weeks ago our great Vice President, Mike Pence, who's right here, was in the region and spent quite a bit of time there. We consider that a very, very important part of the world. We have great relationships there. We have a great relationship with Finland.

And so I would consider many countries threats, but these are all threats that we'll be able to handle if we have to. Hopefully, we won't have to handle them, but if we do, we will handle them.

Q Can I have a follow-up, as he had also? So if the situation in the Baltic were to escalate, what would the U.S. be ready to do in that unfortunate circumstances? Thanks.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, we are very protective of that region. That's all I can say. We are very, very protective. We have great friends there, great relationships there. We are extremely protective. Okay? Thank you.

Q Thank you, sir.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: A question for the President? Yes.

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: No. Sometimes he --

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Do you have a question for the President? Do you have a question for the President?

Q What if --

PRESIDENT TRUMP: It's all right. Somebody else could.

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: You don't have to. (Laughter.)

Q Mr. President, (inaudible) from Finland.

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: Okay.

Q Did you speak about climate change at all? And what about your, Mr. President Niinistö, initiative about cleaning up the Arctic and doing it together with the United States? What kind of response did your idea receive here in Washington, D.C.?

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: We discussed a lot about black carbon. And to explain to everybody: What happens is that, from atmosphere, black carbon covers the Arctic, and we know what happens when sunshine meets black. It melts the ice. And the problem is not only Arctic; if we lose the Arctic, we lose the globe. That is reality.

So we must fight against those emissions spreading black carbon. I understood that the United States is going to put it in half, and we know that black carbon sources are a lot of them in Russia. They are old-fashioned energy plants producing heating. The other problem is flaring. You know that in oil fields, they flare up the extra gas, and the amount is huge. Yearly, they flare 40 times more than Finland spent gas.

So if we can -- and here comes also a business picture -- it would be a good business to renew those old-fashioned plants, to make more with less energy. It would be the business to stop flaring, to take use of that gas which is now burned (inaudible).

And I think that these elements are shots that we can continue discussing in Arctic Council. We have inherited the chairmanship from the United States, and we continue the work.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: We had a very good discussion, in particular on the Arctic and black carbon. And I think we have much in agreement.

One of the things we also agree on: We want crystal-clean water, and we want clean air -- the cleanest ever. Very important. So we have a lot of agreement.

John Roberts, yes.

Q Mr. President, thank you so much. President Niinistö, I have a question for you as well, but if I could start with President Trump. In the middle of Hurricane Harvey hitting on Friday night, you chose to pardon former Sheriff Joe Arpaio. I wonder if you could tell us what was behind your thinking for issuing the pardon for the Sheriff. And, as well, what do you say to your critics, even some in your own party, who say it was the wrong thing to do?

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, a lot of people think it was the right thing to do, John. And actually, in the middle of a hurricane, even though it was a Friday evening, I assumed the ratings would be far higher than they would be normally. You know the hurricane was just starting, and I put it out that I had pardoned, as we say, Sheriff Joe.

He's done a great job for the people of Arizona. He's very strong on borders, very strong on illegal immigration. He is loved in Arizona. I thought he was treated unbelievably unfairly when they came down with their big decision to go get him right before the election voting started, as you know. And he lost in a fairly close election. He would have won the election, but they just hammered him just before the election. I thought that was a very, very unfair thing to do.

When I mentioned him the other night -- you saw the massive crowd we had. The people went crazy when I said, "What do you think of Sheriff Joe?" or something to that effect. The place went absolutely crazy when I was in Arizona last week.

And as far as pardons are concerned, I actually did this just before the meeting because I assumed that somebody would ask me the question. I didn't know it would be you, as you can attest. You didn't even know you were going to be called. But I thought I would. And, you know, Sheriff Joe is a great veteran of the military, great law enforcement person, somebody that's won many, many elections in the state of Arizona. But I wanted to look at some of the other people that were pardoned over the years.

And if you look at, as an example, President Clinton pardoned Marc Rich, who was charged with crimes going back decades, including illegally buying oil from Iran while it held 53 American hostages -- wasn't allowed to do that, selling to the enemies of the United States. He was pardoned after his wife donated hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Clintons.

Then you have dangerous criminals. President Clinton pardoned Susan Rosenberg, a member of the Weather Underground, charged as part of a bank robbery that led to a guard and two police officers being killed.

Drug dealers. President Clinton commuted the sentence of Carlos Vignali, a central player in a cocaine ring that stretched from California to Minnesota.

Criminal leaker. You've heard the word "leaker." President Obama commuted the sentence of Chelsea Manning, who leaked countless sensitive and classified documents to WikiLeaks, perhaps and others. But a horrible, horrible thing that he did. Commuted the sentence and perhaps pardoned.

President Obama commuted the sentence of Oscar Lopez Rivera, who was charged as part of a violent independence group from Puerto Rico, responsible for 28 Chicago-area bombings and many deaths in the 1970s and 1980s.

Sheriff Joe is a patriot. Sheriff Joe loves our country. Sheriff Joe protected our borders. And Sheriff Joe was very unfairly treated by the Obama administration, especially right before an election -- an election that he would have won. And he was elected many times.

So I stand by my pardon of Sheriff Joe, and I think the people of Arizona, who really know him best, would agree with me.

Thank you very much.

Q Mr. President, I'd like to claim prescience that you did all the research, but I'm afraid I have to confess the question was fairly obvious.

And President Niinistö, I'm sure that President Trump either briefed you today, or you're aware of his new plan for Afghanistan that really relies, at its core, in bringing the Taliban to the table for negotiations. Given the history and the ideology of the Taliban, do you ever believe that they would honor any kind of an agreement that was ever made? Or would they, when the United States and Finland and other countries leave Afghanistan, renege on that deal?

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: Yes, first of all, I want to underline that Finland has been involved from the very beginning to all the attempts to solve the situation in Afghanistan. We have troops there. We have also financial aid going on all the time.

We have to try. We have to try in all possible ways to solve the situation in Afghanistan. It has been ongoing quite a long time, for decades. But to solve it by negotiations, surely you have to have full respect to the one you negotiate, and to also full believe that what is negotiated is also fulfilled.

These elements have to be all the time present when you discuss with whichever party in Afghanistan.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: I know there might be a couple of more questions, but do you want to take one more? Would you want to take one more? Go ahead, pick. (Laughter.) Go ahead.

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: Please.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Again? You're going to give her the same one?

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: No, she's not the same lady. (Laughter.)

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Go ahead.

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: They are sitting side-by-side.

Q We have a lot of blonde women in Finland.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Go ahead.

Q Mr. President Trump, what kind of role do you see as Finland having in the U.S.-Russia relations? Do you think Finland could be of assistance, helping U.S. get better relations with Russia?

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, I hope that we do have good relations with Russia. I say it loud and clear, I've been saying it for years: I think it's a good thing if we have great relationships, or at least good relationships with Russia. That's very important, and I believe someday that will happen. It's a big country, it's a nuclear country, it's a country that we should get along with, and I think we will eventually get along with Russia.

Finland is respected by Russia. Finland has been free of Russia, really -- just about one of the few countries in the region that has been -- for 100 years. And Russia has a lot of respect for Finland, so that's always good. But I think Finland is doing fine with Russia, and I hope that the United States will someday be able to have a very good relationship with Russia also. I think that's very good for world peace and for other things.

Thank you.

Q As a follow-up, if Finland's relationship with Russia were to deteriorate, would the U.S. -- what kind of assistance would the U.S. be willing to give to Finland bilaterally, if we needed it?

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, as I said before, that, you know, our relationship with Finland is a very close one and we're always ready to help Finland. One of the things that is happening is you're purchasing large amounts of our great F-18 aircraft from Boeing, and it's one of the great planes, one of the great fighter jets, and you're purchasing lots of other military equipment, and, I think, purchasing very wisely. I know all of the military equipment and I actually agree with everything you purchased. We talked about it before.

I think Finland is really a respected country militarily. It's got large armed forces for its size as a country. Really, proportionally, probably one of the biggest in the world if you think of it.

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: I guess so.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: But they're very respected militarily, and they're respected beyond militarily. So hopefully it will never come to that. Thank you.

Q And President Niinistö? President Niinistö, did you discuss Russia? And did you offer any assistance to the U.S. with their relationship with Russia?

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: Well, like I said earlier on, we did discuss about Russia. But actually, I don't feel myself or Finland being any advisor to anybody, but we try to do our best, and hopefully we get also results from that.

I want to remind you that, in NATO meeting, a year ago approximately, it was stated by all NATO countries that with Russia you have to be deterrence, but you have to exercise dialogue too. These two-way elements have to be there.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Yeah, go ahead.

Q Thank you, Mr. President. Trey Yingst with One America News. In the aftermath of Hurricane Harvey, do you believe that cutting FEMA's budget is the right thing to do?

PRESIDENT TRUMP: No, I think what's going to happen is the FEMA money is relatively small compared to the rebuilding money. So FEMA -- right now, we have the money necessary for Texas and Louisiana, if we need, but the real number, which will be many billions of dollars, will go through Congress. I think it'll happen very quickly, it'll go very fast, and I want to congratulate you on the network. It's a great network.

Q Thank you. If I may follow up on one other question from earlier -- the southern border wall. Is your plan still to have Mexico pay for the wall?

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Yes, they will. One way or the other, Mexico is going to pay for the wall. That's right. It may be through reimbursement, but one way or the other, Mexico will pay for the wall.

We're right now negotiating NAFTA. In my opinion, Mexico has been very difficult, as they should be. Why wouldn't they be? They had a sweetheart deal for so many years. It's one of the great deals of all time for them. One of the worst trade deals ever signed. I guarantee you, Mr. President, Finland would never have signed NAFTA with Russia or whoever you wanted. This is not a deal that you would want to sign. This is not a deal that Finland would know about.

NAFTA is one of the worst trade deals ever signed at any time, anywhere in the world. And I can understand why Mexico is being difficult because why wouldn't they be? They've had it their way.

But, no, Mexico will pay for the wall. It may be through a reimbursement. We need the wall very badly. As you know, Mexico has a tremendous crime problem -- tremendous -- one of the number two or three in the world. And that's another reason we need it. And the -- just to add on, tremendous drugs are pouring into the United States at levels that nobody has ever seen before. This happened over the last three to four years in particular. The wall will stop much of the drugs from pouring into this country and poisoning our youth.

So we need the wall. It's imperative. We may fund it through the United States. But ultimately, Mexico will pay for the wall.

Q Sir, if I may follow up. On Tuesday, you said, if we have to close down our government, we are building that wall.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, I hope that's not necessary --

Q If Mexico is paying for wall, why would you close down our government?

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Let me just tell you -- yeah, I hope that's not necessary. If it's necessary, we'll have to see. But I hope it's not necessary. The wall is needed from the standpoint of security. The wall is needed from the standpoint of drug -- tremendous, the drug scourge, what's coming through the areas that we're talking about. As you know, I have General Kelly here. We stopped traffic coming through -- 78 percent. It's going to be, I think, 81 percent this quarter, which is a record. In other administrations, if they stopped it just a little bit, like one, or two, or three percent, they considered that a great thing. We're up to almost 80 percent. We'll soon be over 80 percent.

But you need the wall to do the rest, and you need the wall for the drugs. The drugs are a tremendous problem. The wall will greatly help with the drug problem, and ultimately that's a good thing for Mexico also. We have a very good relationship with Mexico, but I will say that dealing with them -- I've always said -- I've talked about NAFTA, you've heard me many times -- and I've said that we will either terminate it or renegotiate it.

We're in the process of renegotiating -- right now renegotiating the deal. I believe that you will probably have to at least start the termination process before a fair deal could be arrived at because it's been a one-sided deal. And this includes Canada, by the way. Great respect for Canada, great love for Canada, but it's been a one-sided deal for Canada and for Mexico.

And the United States workers, all of these incredible people who have lost their jobs because of NAFTA, they're not going to be suffering any longer. It's been unfair for too long.

So we will build the wall, and we will stop a lot of things, including the drug -- the drugs are pouring in at levels like nobody has ever seen. We'll be able to stop them once the wall is up.

Thank you very much. Thank you. Thank you, everybody.

PRESIDENT NIINISTÖ: Thank you.

END

4:54

P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump and President Rajoy of the Government of Spain in Joint Press Conference
Date: Tuesday, September 26, 2017 3:51:26 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

September 26, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AND PRESIDENT RAJOY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF SPAIN IN JOINT PRESS CONFERENCE

Rose Garden

1:56 P.M. EDT

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Good afternoon. I'm greatly honored to welcome President Mariano Rajoy of Spain, and it's a great honor to have you at the White House. Thank you very much.

We've just concluded a very productive conversation on a crucial range of economic and security issues.

Before we begin, I'd like to take a moment to send America's hearts and prayers to the people of Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands. Both have been devastated -- and I mean absolutely devastated -- by Hurricane Maria, and we're doing everything in our power to help the hard-hit people of both places, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. And a massive effort is underway, and we have been really treated very, very nicely by the governor and by everybody else. They know how hard we're working and what a good job we're doing.

As we speak, FEMA, our great first responders, and all available federal resources, including the military, are being marshaled to save lives, protect families, and begin a long and very, very difficult restoration process. I have directed all relevant departments and agencies to assist in the response and recovery effort.

As Governor Rosselló just told me this morning, the entire federal workforce is doing great work in Puerto Rico, and I appreciated his saying it. And he's saying it to anybody that will listen. Our team has been incredible after having gone through Texas and then Florida, with other stops along the way. And he further went on and he said, "And through the Trump administration's leadership, the relationship between FEMA and my team is very, very strong." I will be going to Puerto Rico on Tuesday. I'll also be going to the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Over the last several weeks our nation has been tested by the destructive force of Mother Nature, but we will respond to it with an even mightier force: the resolve of the American spirit. Texas, Louisiana, and Florida are in really good shape and moving along well. We thank all of the first responders and volunteers who have risked their lives. And that's what they did -- they risked their lives.

To all of those impacted by the trouble and these horrible hurricanes and storms that have affected and impacted our country, I thank you. The recovery process will be a very, very difficult one. We will get through this, and we will get through it together. We will be stronger. We will be bigger. We will be better. Thank you very much.

The United States and Spain are great friends and close allies.

Our bonds, culture, and commerce go back many centuries. Our schools teach American children about Spain's history of exploration. Our museums treasure beautiful Spanish works of art. And your country's contributions to architecture, music, and film are admired all over the world. It's a greatly admired country. The deep relationship between our two people is a strong foundation for lasting cooperation.

On behalf of the American people, I want to express our support and extend our prayers to all of those affected by the vile terror attack in Spain last month. I want to assure the people of Spain that America stands with you in confronting this evil that threatens all of humanity. We will continue to deny the terrorists their funding, their territory, and any form of support for their wicked ideology.

In this common fight, America greatly appreciates Spain's contribution to the coalition to defeat ISIS. Spanish troops and police have trained more than 30,000 members of the Iraqi security forces. We also thank the Spanish people for being such gracious hosts to the American servicemembers stationed at Spanish bases.

The United States and Spain together face many critical dangers and challenges, from North Korea, to Iran, to Venezuela. We thank Spain for its recent decision to expel its North Korean ambassador and for standing with us in our efforts to isolate the brutal North Korean regime.

It is time for all responsible nations to join forces to isolate the North Korean menace. North Korean nuclear weapons and missile development threaten the entire world with unthinkable loss of life. All nations must act now to ensure the regime's complete denuclearization.

I appreciate the United Nations Security Council voting twice, unanimously -- 15 to nothing, twice -- to adopt hard-hitting resolutions against North Korea. I have recently issued tough new sanctions against those who do business with this outlaw regime, and I applaud China's latest action to restrict its trade with North Korea. And, in particular, I applaud China for breaking off all banking relationships with North Korea -- something that people would have thought unthinkable even two months ago. I want to thank President Xi.

Here, in the Western Hemisphere, we have seen the heartbreaking tragedy of Maduro's socialist rule in Venezuela. Spain has been especially helpful in promoting the interests and wellbeing of the Venezuelan people, and we thank you for your efforts.

We hope our friends in the EU will soon follow the United States, Canada, and many Latin American nations in sanctioning the Maduro regime. We need everybody involved. The citizens of Venezuela have endured immense suffering, poverty, starvation, and dangerous political unrest under Maduro's oppressive socialist regime.

Together, Spain and the United States hope for peace, for the restoration of democracy, and for the release of all political prisoners. Wherever socialism spreads, misery follows. The people of Venezuela deserve a future of freedom. These are great people.

In the economic arena, we support trade that benefits both Spain and the United States, which means it must be fair and it must be reciprocal -- such an important word. It hasn't been used very much in the United States -- "reciprocal." Spain is the 10th largest investor in the United States, and I commend Spanish business leaders for their confidence in America and the American worker. And considering the fact that our stock market has just hit all-time highs, I think they probably like the United States very much right now.

This is a time for both tremendous opportunity for our world, but also serious dangers. As I said at the United Nations, which future really is up to us. If we empower our citizens, serve their needs, and appeal to all that is best in the human spirit, then I have no doubt we will succeed like never, ever before.

Mr. President, I look forward to working with you to build this future of prosperity and peace for both Spain and for the United States of America. Thank you very much. Thank you

PRESIDENT RAJOY: (As interpreted.) Ladies and gentlemen, good afternoon. I would like to start by expressing my solidarity -- that of my government and that of the Spanish people -- with the people in the U.S. government after the terrible events President Trump just referred to and that took place in Texas, Florida, and other U.S. regions, and in Puerto Rico.

We hope and we wish that even if what happened can't be changed, we hope that in the future we can do as best as possible for everyone.

President Trump and I had a working meeting today, which was very productive. And we went through our bilateral relations. Spain and the United States are two great partners. We share values, democracy, freedom, respect for human rights, the rule of law. And we have institutional and cultural -- corporate ties which are very important.

Relations between the two countries have been excellent, and we must continue to work to strengthen those relations even more, especially in the economic arena. That's why our priorities of strengthening the economy and job creation are key. Trade between the two countries is growing sustainably. The United States is our second top trading partner outside of Europe. The United States is our top destination of exports outside the European Union.

And regarding investments, it's the second top destination of Spanish investments and the top investor in Spain. For many years, Spanish companies have invested in the U.S. They're creating many stable and high-quality jobs in different sectors, such as the financial industry and energy. And this has been possible thanks to the establishment of subsidiaries in the United States by 600 Spanish companies, and they will continue to create jobs. That's why they follow closely investment opportunities in the United States, and they can contribute their technology and their experience to the United States.

I've also given details to President Trump on Spain's role in different crises, which are important to us all. For instance, he referred to our participation in the coalition against Daesh and the crisis due to nuclear proliferation in North Korea.

Combatting terrorism was something we talked about at length. Spain has a longstanding experience in this area. And just like the United States, we've been hit by jihadi terrorist attacks on our soil. Both countries agree on anti-terrorist policy, and we cooperate very closely on police, military, and intelligence areas. I've also said that I'm sure that we still have to do a lot in the area of intelligence. We need to improve the coordination mechanisms in the area of cybersecurity or preventing recruitment and financing of terrorists.

I've also underscored Spain's role as a member of the global coalition against terrorism, and our deployment in Iraq, which is very large. We're the fourth-largest contributor and we've trained over 32,000 officers. In addition to that, I've told President Trump that we would increase our commitment with the new phase after the fall of Mosul by contributing a new financial package to rebuild Iraq.

We also have long relations in the area of defense, both in NATO and bilaterally with the Spanish bases, which are used by both our countries in Rota and Moron, which are increasingly important strategically. Our defense agreement goes back to 1988. At the time, Spain was in the backseat of the alliance; right now we're at the forefront -- Daesh, Sahel, Libya. So the defense and security relation is excellent, but we would like that to spill over into other areas of the bilateral relation. President Trump and I have gone through the political and economic situation in our countries.

Regarding the international situation, we've agreed that the challenge by North Korea to the non-proliferation regime is an intolerable violation of the international legality. And I've expressed the full support of the Spanish government to the stepping up of sanctions, as approved by the United Nations the other day. As we know, the European Union is working on new additional measures, and in that context, Spain will continue to press for a firm, common stance supportive of the U.S. and its regional allies.

I've also reminded President Trump that the Spanish government has taken measures that have reduced the diplomatic presence of North Korea in our country. President Trump has thanked me for the firm position my government has taken and the measures we've adopted.

Regarding Venezuela, we've exchanged views on the worrying totalitarian direction the country is moving in and its impoverishment with the implications that has in the humanitarian area. We've noted that there's a need to sustain international pressure on the Venezuelan government so that it commits to negotiations which will enable us to find a democratic negotiated and peaceful solution to the current crisis. I've also reminded President Trump that Spain and the EU have spearheaded the adoption of sanctions, which were first individual and targeted.

So we've gone through the political and economic situation of both our countries. Spain and the United States are two democracies, friends and allies with many common values and interests. And we've agreed to work together in the area of defense of those values with a comprehensive and cooperative vision.

I would like to thank the warm welcome that was extended to us by President Trump and his team at the White House. And I would also like to underscore the friendship that exists between the United States and Spain. Thank you.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Thank you very much.

Steve Holland, please. Reuters. Don't get nervous, Steve.
(Laughter.)

Q There's some concern that you were preoccupied with the NFL instead of dealing with Puerto Rico. Why isn't that a fair assessment?

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, I wasn't preoccupied with the NFL. I was ashamed of what was taking place, because to me that was a very important moment. I don't think you can disrespect our country, our flag, our national anthem. To me, the NFL situation is a very important situation. I've heard that before about was I preoccupied. Not at all. Not at all. I have plenty of time on my hands. All I do is work.

And to be honest with you, that's an important function of working. It's called respect for our country. Many people have died -- many, many people. Many people are so horribly injured. I was at Walter Reed Hospital recently, and I saw so many great young people, and they're missing legs and they're missing arms. And they've been so badly injured. And they were fighting for our country. They were fighting for our flag. They were fighting for our national anthem. And for people to disrespect that by kneeling during the playing of our national anthem I think is disgraceful.

So I will also say that -- again, I read you part of his quote -- but the Governor of Puerto Rico is so thankful for the great job that we're doing. We did a great job in Texas, a great job in Florida, a great job in Louisiana. We hit little pieces of Georgia and Alabama. And frankly, we're doing -- and it's the most difficult job because it's on the island. It's on an island in the middle of the ocean. It's out in the ocean. You can't just drive your trucks there from other states.

And the Governor said we are doing a great job. In fact, he thanked me specifically for FEMA and all of the first responders in Puerto Rico. And we're also mentioning with that the U.S. Virgin Islands. It was devastated. So we are totally focused on that.

But at the same time, it doesn't take me long to put out a wrong, and maybe we'll get it right. I think it's a very important thing for the NFL to not allow people to kneel during the playing of our national anthem, to respect our country and to respect our flag.

Okay? Thank you.

Q If I could ask the Prime Minister -- if I could ask a Prime Minister a question. It's going to take a war to rein in North Korea. And what is your advice to the President on dealing with this?

PRESIDENT RAJOY: (As interpreted.) No one wishes for there to be a war anywhere in the world, but it's true that the recent events in North Korea with implications in the neighboring countries -- very important countries -- means that we all have to be forceful. And those of us who defend the values of democracy, freedom, and human rights have to let North Korea know that it isn't going anywhere in that direction.

For the time being, sanctions have been adopted. Spain will support any political decision which will contribute to putting an end to this situation, which has nothing to do with the principles and values most Western and global democracies defend.

Q (As interpreted.) Thank you. Jose Emil Blanco (ph) from SA. We don't know whether during your conversation you discussed the Catalan situation. And this is a question for President Trump. Do you support what the Spanish government is doing regarding Catalonia? And I'd like to ask the President of the Spanish Government whether he fears there might be a unilateral declaration of independence in Catalonia, and what would the government do then.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, I think that Spain is a great country and it should remain united. We're dealing with a great, great country, and it should remain united.

I've been watching that unfold, but it's actually been unfolding for centuries. And I think that nobody knows if they're going to have a vote. I think the President would say they're not going to have a vote. But I think that the people would be very much opposed to that.

I can say only speaking for myself, I would like to see Spain continue to be united.

PRESIDENT RAJOY: (As interpreted.) The decision to unilaterally declare independence is not something -- it's not a decision I would make. It's a decision which will have to be made, or not, by the Catalan government. I think it would be very wrong. And I think that right now, when everyone knows that the referendum can't take place because there isn't an electoral committee, there isn't a team at the Catalan government organizing the referendum. There aren't ballots, there aren't people at the voting stations. So it's just crazy. All this will lead to is noise. But certainly there can't be a valid democratic referendum with guarantees -- with minimum guarantees.

I think that what would make sense in a situation such as this is to go back to common sense and put an end to this whole story. The only thing it's doing is generating division, tensions, and it's not contributing in any way to the citizen situation. So I want this to be resolved as soon as possible. And I want us to go into a new stage where the rule of law, dialogue, and common sense will prevail. Thank you.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Thank you. Major Garrett. Yes, CBS.

Q Good afternoon.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Yes, hi.

Q The day began in Puerto Rico with government officials saying (inaudible) and talking about the threat of debt a mere hours away. Are you truly satisfied with what the government has done so far in Puerto Rico? And can you tell the people there that things are actually going great, and government officials there are (inaudible) people there? And you have an official meeting this afternoon. Are you contemplating the deployment of special naval assets or air assets to Puerto Rico to address the problems there?

And on North Korea, very quickly, the Foreign Minister said you have declared, effectively, war on North Korea. And the North Korean government has threatened to shoot down or aim at American planes flying in international airspace. I would like your reaction to that.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Okay, well, I'll answer the second one first. We're totally prepared for the second option; not a preferred option. But if we take that option, it will be devastating --I can tell you that -- devastating for North Korea. That's called the military option. If we have to take it, we will.

He's acting very badly. He's saying things that should never, ever be said. And we're replying to those things, but it's a reply. It's not an original statement; it's a reply. But the things that he said over the last year -- and if you look back, the things that he said to past administrations -- North Korea is a situation that should have been handled 25 years ago, 20 years ago, 15 years ago, 10 years ago, and five years ago, and it could have been handled much more easily.

You had various administrations -- many administrations which left me a mess. But I'll fix the mess. So we'll see what happens with North Korea.

As far as Puerto Rico is concerned, I think just the opposite. We have had tremendous reviews from government officials, as we have in Texas and Louisiana, and as we have in Florida, as you know, from Governor Scott and Greg Abbott. Great governors. And this morning, the governor made incredible statements about how well we're doing.

We understand it's a disaster; it's a disaster that just happened. The grid was in bad shape before the storm. And Puerto Rico didn't get hit by one hurricane, it got hit by two hurricanes, and they were among the biggest we've ever seen -- with the second one being even worse. I mean, the second one hit Puerto Rico as a Category 5. I don't believe anybody has ever seen that happen before -- hit land with that kind of velocity.

The governor has been extremely generous and I appreciated it. We right now have our top people from FEMA, and they have been there. We're are unloading, on an hourly basis, massive loads of water and food and supplies for Puerto Rico.

And this isn't like Florida where we can go right up the spine, or like Texas where we go right down the middle and we distribute. This is a thing called the Atlantic Ocean. This is tough stuff.

The governor has been so incredible in his statements about the job

we're doing. We're doing a great job. Don't forget, their police force has been decimated because many of the police in Puerto Rico have lost their homes. So, sure, they want to be police but they also want to be able to watch their families and find their families, and they have to live. So we're also very much involved in security in Puerto Rico.

So everybody has said it's amazing the job that we've done in Puerto Rico. We're very proud of it. And I'm going there on Tuesday. Now, with all of that being said, record -- if you look at the amount of water dropped on that island, between the two hurricanes -- and the first they just barely got by with, but they were devastated. And the second was a complete wipeout. I mean, this was a place that was destroyed.

So I think we've done a really good job. We're continuing to -- we are literally unloading, on an hourly basis, water, food, supplies. We have our top people from FEMA and our first responders and everybody else. We're going to be deploying Navy ships -- they've already been deployed. And we are going to do far more than anybody else would ever be able to do. And it's being recognized as such, but it is a tough situation.

Would you have a question or the President?

Q Mr. Prime Minister, if I may sir, do you share President Trump's hostility toward the Venezuelan regime? And what is your opinion, generally, of his -- that is to say, President Trump's suggestion that U.S. military intervention might be required if the Venezuelan government doesn't change course? Do you support that? And would you be an advocate within the EU for tougher sanctions against the Venezuelan government?

PRESIDENT RAJOY: (As interpreted.) Well, we're spearheading in the European Union a proposal to impose sanctions on Venezuela. What is happening in Venezuela is unacceptable. Venezuela, traditionally, was a democratic country, and at this time it's no longer a democratic country. There are political prisoners in Venezuela. There are people who are in jail only because they think differently than Mr. Maduro.

And I was the first Prime Minister to receive Lilian Tintori, who is the wife of Leopoldo López, who was jailed because Mr. Maduro didn't like him. But there were many others who were sent to jail.

In Venezuela, there was a parliament, and the government has made up this other parliament which has its meeting next to the other parliament, and it enacts legislation. They've created a commission for the truth, which is an anti-democratic tool which only serves to judge people without respecting minimum human rights standards.

Venezuela is on the road to dictatorship unless that can be stopped. So all of us who share values such as democracy, freedom, and human rights have to do something. At this time, sanctions are important. It's important that there be an international coalition putting pressure on Maduro so that political prisoners are freed and democracy is restored, because this lack of democracy and the attack against human rights and freedoms come in conjunction with a terrible economic situation with a 300 percent inflation rate, with problems supplying foods and medicines to people.

So it's a really tragic situation, and I think that we have -- we, the United States and Spain, have a responsibility towards Venezuela. There are a lot of Spaniards living in Venezuela, and I'm worried about them -- about them and the rest. But they certainly worry me. So I think that the international community should be forceful with regards to Venezuela.

Q Thank you. Pilar Santos from El Periódico de Catalunya. I have a question for each of you.

For President Trump: With the serious political crisis in Spain because of the referendum on Sunday, what solution do you think there is? Have you given advice to President Rajoy on this matter? Do you think there should be a dialogue between the Generalitat and the government to find a solution?

And now a question for Prime Minister Rajoy. It seems that what you're doing in Catalonia -- the way you're managing things in Catalonia -- is having an impact on the budget. And I would also like to know whether you think that situation with the PNV Party can be resolved, or do you think that you will have to call early elections. Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, I think the people of Catalonia have been talking about this for a long time. But I bet you if you had accurate numbers and accurate polling, you'd find that they love their country, they love Spain, and they wouldn't leave. So I'm just for united Spain.

I speak as the President of the United States, as somebody that has great respect for your President, and also has really great respect for your country. I really think the people of Catalonia would stay with Spain. I think it would be foolish not to. Because you're talking about staying with a truly great, beautiful, and very historic country.

PRESIDENT RAJOY: (As interpreted.) We will be delaying the budgets in parliament because we think that when we submit the budgets we will need the needed support to approve them. We're talking with different political parties, as you know, and I don't think we'll have any problems if we continue to work down this line. I don't think we'll have any problems in approving them within a reasonable timeframe, but we are looking for a majority, just like we did last time around when we voted the budget.

At any rate, I'm not thinking at all about calling early elections as a result of what we were saying.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Mr. President, thank you very much. Thank you.

END

2:27 P.M.

EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump and President Xi of China Before Expanded Bilateral Meeting | Beijing, China
Date: Thursday, November 09, 2017 5:52:53 AM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

Release For Immediate
November 9, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AND PRESIDENT XI OF CHINA
BEFORE EXPANDED BILATERAL MEETING

Great Hall of the People
Beijing, China

11:12 A.M. CST

PRESIDENT XI: (As interpreted.) (In progress) -- this government and Chinese people extending warm welcome to President Trump on your state visit to China.

From yesterday afternoon to the present, we have had in-depth exchange of ideas on China-U.S. relations and important issues of shared interest. We reached many common understandings. We both believe that China-U.S. relations are important to the wellbeing of our two peoples, and bear on peace, stability, and prosperity of the world.

For China and the United States, cooperation is the only viable choice, and win-win cooperation can take us to a better future. We agree that China-U.S. relations have made important progress this year. We have agreed to further promote strategic guidance of summit diplomacy for bilateral relations; strengthen interactions at high and all levels; make the most of the four high-level dialogue mechanisms; expand interactions and cooperation on economy and trade, mil-to-mil relations, law enforcement, people-to-people exchange, and in other areas; enhance communication and cooperation on the nuclear issue on the Korean Peninsula, Afghanistan, and other major international and regional issues; and work together to take China-U.S. relations to even greater development.

The China-U.S. relationship now stands at a new starting point. China is ready to work with the United States to enhance cooperation and properly manage differences in a spirit of mutual respect and mutual benefit. This way, it will enable our two peoples, the region, and people across the world to benefit more from China-U.S. relations. Thank you.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Mr. President, thank you very much. It's an honor to be with you. There can be no more important subject than China-U.S. relation. We have, between us -- and we have to include some other countries which would quickly come in -- we have a capacity to dissolve world problems for many, many years to come.

Our meeting last night was absolutely terrific. Our dinner was beyond that. We had a dinner that was going to last quickly -- 20, 25 minutes -- because I was traveling and you were so nice, and you said, we'll just do a quick dinner. And I think it had to last at least two hours, and we enjoyed every minute of it with your beautiful wife and Melania together. Their relationship is a great one, and our relationship has already proven to be a great one.

Our meeting this morning, in front of your representatives and my representatives, was excellent, discussing North Korea -- and I do believe there's a solution to that, as you do; discussing trade with the United States, knowing that the United States really has to change its policies because they've gotten so far behind on trade with China and, frankly, with many other countries.

And I have great respect for you for that, because you're representing China. But it's too bad that past administrations allowed it go get so far out of kilter. But we'll make it fair, and it will be tremendous for both of us.

My feeling toward you is an incredibly warm one. As we said, there's great chemistry, and I think we're going to do tremendous things for both China and for the United States. And it is a very, very great honor to be with you. Thank you very much.

The hosting of the military parade this morning was magnificent, and the world was watching. I've already had people calling from all parts of the world. They were all watching. Nothing you can see is so beautiful.

So I just want to thank you for the very warm welcome, and I look forward to many years of success and friendship, working together to solve not only our problems but world problems, and problems of great danger and security. I believe we can solve almost all of them and probably all of them.

Thank you very much for having us. Very much appreciate it.

END

11:18 A.M. CST

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump and Prime Minister Abe of Japan at State Dinner | Tokyo, Japan
Date: Monday, November 06, 2017 8:04:24 AM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

November 6, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AND PRIME MINISTER ABE OF JAPAN AT STATE DINNER

Akasaka Palace
Tokyo, Japan

7:31 P.M. JST

PRIME MINISTER ABE: (As interpreted.) Good evening, everyone. My name is Shinzo Abe. I'm extremely delighted to host tonight's banquet here at the State Guest House in honor of the very first visit to Japan by my dear friend, President Trump, and Madam First Lady, Ms. Melania Trump.

Yesterday's golf diplomacy between Donald and me attracted so much attention, and we actually made everything public, except for the score. And, through golf, we could demonstrate to the world how strong the bond is between Japan and the United States.

But Donald and I are not the first to promote this unique golf diplomacy. Just 60 years ago, my grandfather, Prime Minister Kishi, and President Eisenhower are the ones who initiated this tradition. And after the golf match, President Eisenhower shared two lessons with my grandfather. One, once you become a President of the United States, you need to be at a table with a group of people whom you don't like to hang out. Second, when it comes to playing golf, you can play golf only with those who you really, really like to hang out.

But speaking of my relationship with President Trump, that is not enough. If I may add another lesson to the legacy of Prime Minister Kishi and President Eisenhower, I would say it like this: When you play golf with someone not just once, but for two times, the person must be your favorite guy.

So, yesterday, we had the pleasure of playing golf together with Mr. Hideki Matsuyama. And, tonight, we are so honored to have the participation of Mr. Isao Aoki, who is a pioneer in Japanese golf. (Applause.)

Even during the time that played golf with President Trump, the President and I were talking about Mr. Aoki. It is all about how his putting that was something that the entire world were mesmerized. And Donald told me as follows: Mr. Aoki's putting was just like super, super artistic. But you should never try to do the same, because that is the only thing that Mr. Aoki can only do, and you will not be able to do that. So next time we play golf together, I would love to have Mr. Aoki to join us and enjoy the time that I will spend with Mr. Trump.

Speaking of the First Ladies, I understand that my wife Akie and Madam First Lady had a chance to try Japanese calligraphy. Each wrote one Chinese character, or kanji: "hei" by Madam First Lady, which means being smooth and calm; and "wa" by my wife Akie, which stands for harmony. And when combined, these two letters literally mean "peace." And I think their wonderful joint work represents our alliance very nicely.

Under our alliance, Japan and the United States work hand-in-hand to contribute to regional and global peace.

For two days, President Trump and I spent many, many hours together, and had an in-depth discussion on various global challenges. And I'm particularly grateful for President Trump and Madam First Lady, who kindly spent their time with a former abductee and the family members of those who had been abducted by North Korea.

And it's been only one year since I first saw President Trump in New York City. And looking back over the half-century history of Japan-U.S. alliance, we have never seen two leaders of Japan and the United States forging as close relationship as ours and as strong bond in ours in just one year.

Of course, I'm very proud of my relationship with President Trump, but we are not the only ones who have supported this invaluable friendship between Japan and the United States. And on this occasion, I would like to acknowledge tremendous efforts by leaders from various fields, including political, business, and cultural leaders who are here today.

In honor of such contribution to our invaluable friendship, I invited many distinguished guests who have been making every effort to deepen our friendship. And I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation and also ask for further support for the development of our bilateral relationship.

Last but not least, let me share with you my honest impression about President Trump's visit to Japan this time. As I said, this was the very first visit by President Trump and it was indeed a historic visit. And I do hope that you will enjoy your last night in Tokyo as you wish. And also, I sincerely hope that you will have a really successful trip to Asia this time, which started here in Japan.

So with that, I now would like to propose a toast wishing all the best to President Trump and Madam First Lady, and also wishing for the further development of the friendship between Japan and the United States.

(A toast is offered.) (Applause.)

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Prime Minister and Mrs. Abe, this has been a really wonderful two days. We have to spend more time together because I have enjoyed every minute of it, even though he's a very, very tough negotiator. And, Melania, a real friend of yours now is Mrs. Abe. And I know you enjoyed it with me. You enjoyed it in Florida and you enjoyed it here, and maybe even more so. But I want to thank you for the royal welcome.

And it was really a -- very much a working holiday, even on the golf course. So we can call it a couple of days off, but it wasn't. It was full work. Even as we played golf, all we did was talk about different things. (Laughter.) We better not go into it. But I have to tell you, we did, and we made a lot of progress on a lot of fronts.

I do want to congratulate Mr. Aoki. He was one of the great putters -- probably still is. They say you never lose your putting. When you're a great putter, you never lose your putting.

But I remember a specific tournament, believe it or not, because it was one of the best I ever saw. It was the greatest putting display that I ever saw. It was you and Jack Nicklaus. Was that the U.S. Open? The U.S. Open. And you would get up and sink a 30-footer. He'd get up and sink a 25-footer. And this went on for the whole back nine. And then, ultimately, Jack won by one stroke. I thought it was one of the greatest putting displays anybody has ever seen and there ever was. And I even know your putting stroke -- very flat.

And I spoke yesterday with the great Matsuyama, who is doing great, right? He's going to be a big star, and he's going to be great. I don't even know if he's with us tonight. I don't think he's with us tonight. But he does want to get together in New York, and we're going to get together. And even though I want to have a great interpreter, but he's rapidly learning the language.

But I will tell you that it's an honor to be with you because everyone in the world of golf talks about that one great afternoon. Just putt after putt, and it was really great. So congratulations. Great gentleman, great gentleman. (Applause.)

So my relationship with Shinzo got off to quite a rocky start because I never ran for office, and here I am. But I never ran, so I wasn't very experienced. And after I had won, everybody was calling me from all over the world. I never knew we had so many countries. (Laughter.)

So I was now President-elect. But I didn't know you were supposed to not see world leaders until after you were in office, which was January 20th. So you were just not supposed to because it was considered bad form. It was not a nice thing to do, and I understand that from the standpoint of the President whose place you were taking.

So you can only take so many calls from world leaders -- because, you know, everybody was calling. But Japan, you take. And some others -- we took Germany, we took Russia, we took China, we took -- we took your Prime Minister.

So it's November, and he said to me, "Congratulations on your victory, it was a great victory, I would like to see you. I would like to see you as soon as possible." And I said, "Anytime you want, just come on in, don't worry about it." But I was referring to after January 20th. (Laughter.) So I said, don't worry about it. Anytime you want, I look forward to seeing you. Just give us a call, no problem, anytime you want. And all of the sudden, I get a call from, actually, Japan press. And they said that our Prime Minister is going to New York to meet with the President-elect.

So the press is going crazy because the Prime Minister of Japan is coming to see me. I think it's absolutely fine, but I didn't really mean now. I meant some time in February, March, or April. Meaning, you have a very aggressive -- very, very aggressive, strong, tough Prime Minister. That's a good thing, by the way -- not a bad thing. (Laughter.)

So then the New York media started calling me, and I was getting all sorts of signals from Hope and Sarah, in a different position, and everybody. And they're going crazy. They're saying, "You cannot see him. It's so inappropriate. It looks bad." I say, "What's wrong?" They said, "It's a bad thing to see him. You have to wait until after, in all fairness, Barack Obama leaves office." And I said, "What do I do?" And they said, "Let's call."

So I called him, and he wasn't there. He was on the airplane flying to New York. (Laughter.) And I said, "You know what? There's no way he's going to land and I'm not seeing him."

So I saw him, and it worked out just fine. Do you agree with that? (Laughter.) And he actually brought me the most beautiful golf club I've ever seen. It was a driver that's totally gold. Right? It's gold. (Laughter.) And I looked at it -- I said, "If I ever use this driver -- me -- to use that driver at a golf club, I will be laughed off every course I ever go onto." But it is the most beautiful weapon I've ever seen, so I thank you for that.

But we had a great meeting. It lasted forever. It was a very long meeting in Trump Tower. And for some reason, from that moment on, we had a really -- and developed a really great relationship. And here we are today and better than ever, and we're going to work together. And it's going to get more and more special, and we're going to work out problems of Japan and problems of the United States. And it's going to be something very, very special for both countries.

And I just want to finish by saying that Melania and I today visited the palace. This is a beautiful, beautiful place. And we met two very beautiful people, the Imperial Majesties, the Emperor and the Empress, and spent a long time talking to them today. And there was a lot of love in that room for all of you people -- I can tell you -- from everyone from Japan. They love the people of Japan, they love this country dearly, and they have great, great respect for your Prime Minister. And they truly think that your Prime Minister did very, very well when he decided to marry -- or she decided to marry him, Mrs. Abe. But they have great, great respect -- I can tell you that.

And I just want to conclude by saying that our two great countries will have incredible friendship and incredible success for many centuries to come -- not years, not decades, but for many centuries to come.

And again, it's an honor to have you as my good friend, and I just want to thank you and Mrs. Abe. This is a very, very special two days. We will not forget, and we will be back soon. Thank you very much. Thank you. Thank you very much, everybody. Thank you.

(A toast is offered.) (Applause.)

END

7:55 P.M. JST

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump and Vice President Pence in a Meeting on Immigration with Republican Members of the Senate
Date: Thursday, January 04, 2018 1:28:38 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release
January 4, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP AND VICE PRESIDENT PENCE
IN A MEETING ON IMMIGRATION WITH REPUBLICAN MEMBERS OF THE SENATE

Roosevelt Room

11:34 A.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Important meeting. Thank you very much for being here. We're making a lot of progress on a lot of different things.

Today, I'm with the Senate working group on immigration. It's become a very big subject. I think that started around November 8th, and maybe a year and a half before that, starting with the campaign.

We're all working in an effort to develop an immigration reform plan that will serve the interests of the American workers and the American families and safety.

I want to thank Chairman Grassley, along with Senators Tillis and Lankford, Cornyn, Cotton, and Graham for being here today. These are great people. They've become friends of mine, and they love this country.

I also want to acknowledge Senator Perdue, who is likewise a terrific person, who has become a very close friend of mine. And he'll be briefed as to what's happening.

Our current immigration system fails Americans. Chain migration is a total disaster, which threatens our security and our economy and provides a gateway for terrorism. Likewise, the visa lottery is bad for our economy and very bad for security. You saw that recently in New York along the West Side Highway.

We need a physical border wall. We're going to have a wall -- remember that -- we're going to have a wall to keep out deadly drug dealers, dangerous traffickers, and violent criminal cartels. Mexico is having a tremendous problem with crime, and we want to keep it out of our country.

We need to ensure our immigration officers finally have the resources, tools, and authorities that they desperately deserve and need to save and protect American lives. Even the Border Patrol agents, as you saw recently, killed -- a couple of them killed; one very badly hurt. It's a rough job and they're incredible people, along with the ICE agents. These are incredible people. They've been with me right from the beginning, and they love what we're doing.

That's why our position has been clear and very clear from the beginning. Any legislation on DACA must secure the border with a wall.

It must give our immigration officers the resources they need to stop illegal immigration and also to stop visa overstays. And, crucially, the legislation must end chain migration. It must end the visa lottery. Dangerous. And I think many of the Democrats agree with us on that now.

The lottery system is a disaster. Tom and I talk about it all the time. They put down their probably worst people -- who knows. But they're not looking to get rid of their best people, so they put their worst people in the hopper, and we're picking out the people. And then we find out: What do we have? It's not a good situation. So we're going to end it. The lottery system has to be laughed at by countries outside of our country when they send these people in.

I want to thank the senators for working with us because it really has been a very collaborative effort. We are, believe it or not, working also with Democrats. I think that's correct. Right, Tom? We're moving across the aisle and trying to get support, and I think we have a lot of support. But we'll soon see. We'd love to take care of DACA, but we're only going to do it under these conditions. So we appreciate it very much.

Mr. Vice President, do you have anything to say?

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. President, you've made immigration a centerpiece in the national debate over the last year and a half. And you said all along the way we're going to build a wall and reform our immigration system. We're going to enforce the laws of this country for the citizens of this country.

But you've also said along the way we're going to do it with a big heart. And you've opened the door to an agreement on DACA, and today is part of an ongoing discussion with these Republican leaders but also with Democrats on Capitol Hill to accomplish that. And I look forward to being a part of it.

THE PRESIDENT: Very good. Thank you, Mike. And, Senator Grassley, anything to say?

SENATOR GRASSLEY: Of course, what you said, we were here, I think, with you on November the 8th. We set out a program that we all agreed to here. We know that there has to be negotiations in regard to that, but you've laid out some principles that we will not compromise on.

THE PRESIDENT: And you've been a great voice in a lot of different ways and we appreciate it. Thank you very much.

Lindsey used to be a great enemy of mine, and now he's a great friend of mine. I really like Lindsey. Can you believe that? I never thought I'd say that, but I do like him a lot.

SENATOR GRAHAM: Thank you. I like me too, so we have something in common. (Laughter.)

THE PRESIDENT: We all know that. (Laughter.)

SENATOR GRAHAM: Obama couldn't do it. Bush couldn't do it. I think you can do it. There's a bill to be had. If you want it bad enough, we'll get it and it will be good for the country. Everybody has got to give a little bit. But I've never been more optimistic about an immigration reform proposal making it to the President's desk right now.

THE PRESIDENT: I think we have a good chance. Tom Cotton?

SENATOR COTTON: Thank you for having us, Mr. President. As Senator Graham said, I think there's a deal to be had here. The President has made clear that he wants to provide some kind of protections for those who receive the DACA work permits, but at the same time, we have to deal with the negative consequences of that.

We have to end chain migration to prevent a future set of new chain migrants coming. We have to secure our border. We have to enforce our laws on the interior, as well, to decrease the illegal immigration that will inevitably encourage overstays.

The President and our group have been clear on that from the very beginning. And I hope the Democrats will sit down with us and finally take yes for an answer on it.

THE PRESIDENT: Good. I think we've got a good shot. I really do. Tom? Anything?

SENATOR TILLIS: Mr. President, I just want to say exactly what Lindsey did. And if you think about in the Obama administration, when you had the votes to pass Obamacare and you couldn't get the DREAM Act passed, then you know there's something structurally wrong with just the baseline. I mean, if you just think about it, you're providing the leadership to come up with a balance where you're going to produce a bipartisan solution and a solution that's consistent with your principles, which I think are important for us to fulfill the promises that we made to the American people. And we can provide certainty to the DACA population.

And shame on anybody for getting caught up in words. The wall, for example -- when we've got the opportunity to provide a solution, achieve your objectives, and do something good for the DACA population, then I think we should.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you, Tom, very much. You're right 100 percent. James?

SENATOR LANKFORD: Mr. President, thank you for bringing all of us together. I mentioned to you in September, when you first made the announcement about DACA, that you'd given a tremendous gift to the American people. It's been 20 years since we've had a vote on immigration of any type that's actually passed and become law.

The immigration issues are very hard, they're very emotional. But there's been no deadline. So every time that Congress starts to work on it, they work on it for a while and then drop it because it's difficult. You gave us a deadline, and setting that for March the 1st, and that's a tremendous gift to be able to get that done.

Thanks for your engagement on this. I do absolutely agree with your heart on the issues on DACA and for those kids, and be able to find -- we've got to get a legislative solution, but we've got to deal with every other issue as well or we'll just keep having DACA votes every 10 years, and we can't do that. So, thanks. And, by the way, thanks for the new leadership in DHS as well. And looking forward to seeing your leadership in the days ahead.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I have to tell you, James Lankford has been a tremendous help, not only on what we just passed, but will be a tremendous help on this. And, James, I want to thank you for your support.

SENATOR LANKFORD: Thank you, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: You've been really fantastic. And I can say that for all of the men and the people in this room. They've been fantastic. And, John, you have been really been -- we can't even call you the whip, but you have been more than a whip. You've been so fantastic on the taxes and the tax cuts and reform, and the success of that.

And certainly it wasn't easy. It went right to the last minute, and you were right there. And we all want to thank you. The job you did is fantastic.

So, Senator Cornyn, want to say a few words?

SENATOR CORNYN: Well, Mr. President, thank you for having us here. America is the most generous country in the world when it comes to legal immigration, but that generosity has been abused by people who are exploiting the vulnerabilities we have along the border with the lack of enforcement.

And we saw the previous administration that tried to usurp the authority that only Congress and the White House have in passing immigration laws. They tried to do it by executive action and the courts, who struck that down.

So I do think this is an important opportunity for those of us who care not only about the people and about our legal immigration system that's benefitted us all, but also are determined to eliminate and stop illegal immigration, along with the drugs and the harm that that causes. And I do think this is a great opportunity. I hope we make the most of it.

Coming from a border state with 1,200 miles of common border with Mexico, my constituents in Texas all understand the importance of border security and enforcement. At the same time, they're people with big hearts.

THE PRESIDENT: That's true.

SENATOR CORNYN: And like you and like the rest of us who want to do the right thing by these young adults who came here as children, and I think we have a great opportunity.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, thank you very much. And I have to tell you that as I walked into the room -- I don't know if you heard the latest, but the market is up about 150 points. And we broke a very, very big barrier -- 25,000. And there were those who'd say we wouldn't break 25,000 by the end of the eighth year, and we're in the eleventh month. We broke 25,000 just as we came in now. I have to be a little careful, because as we walk out maybe it goes down. (Laughter.) You always have to be careful with that, Tom.

But we did, in fact, break 25,000 -- very substantially break it, very easily. So I guess our new number is 30,000. (Laughter.) But what it means is every time you see that number go up on Wall Street it means jobs, it means success, it means 401(k)s that are flourishing.

I was in New York at a big event recently, and I take a lot of pictures with police and with firemen and with the military. And one of the policemen came up, an officer, and he said, "Sir, I want to thank you. My 401(k) is through the roof. My wife thinks I'm a brilliant investor." (Laughter.) He said he was up 39 percent. I said, "You should be doing better than that, actually." (Laughter.) But he said, "I'm up 39 percent in nine months." And he said, "I've never seen anything like it. My wife is so happy, my family is so happy."

And people with 401(k)s, unless they're really having difficulties in life, they're doing very, very well. So I just want to congratulate everyone in the room because you worked so hard.

I may finish off with our new secretary, who's just in the position but, I will tell you, respected by everybody. I got a very good vote. Got a very good vote. And would you like to say anything?

SECRETARY NIELSEN: Yes. I just want to thank you for your leadership on this issue. And I really appreciate your support of the men and women at DHS. They do have a very dangerous job, one that we don't often like to talk about. But they do put their lives in danger for all of us every day.

And I really look forward to working with all of you, and learning today about your progress. As you know, border security, we have to have the wall and the technology and personnel that go with that, but we also need to close the loopholes that we can do the expedited removal because that's a core part of border security.

So I look very much forward to working with you and others in Congress to get this done.

THE PRESIDENT: You're going to break all of General Kelly -- who's right over here -- you're going to break all of his records, rights? (Laughter.)

SECRETARY NIELSEN: Absolutely.

THE PRESIDENT: Because he had some pretty good records; 78 percent is -- so far, that's the best number. So you have to break 78 percent. That's tough, but you'll do it.

SECRETARY NIELSEN: All right. Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you all very much. Appreciate it.

Q Your message to DREAMers, Mr. President? Your message to DREAMers, Mr. President? What do you say?

THE PRESIDENT: Hopefully, everything is going to work out very well. We really want it to work out. I can tell you the Republicans want to see it work out very well. If we have support from the Democrats, I think DACA is going to be terrific. We have people that have been working on this issue for a long time. As Lindsey said, as others have said, we really are at a point where I think we could do something spectacular for the people on the border, the people coming through.

We have to be careful because there's a drug epidemic like the likes of which we've never seen in this country. We need protection. We need the wall. We need all of those things. And, frankly, I think a lot of Democrats agree with us. When they see what's happening, when they see the kind of problems we're having at the border, they really understand it. Whether they'll vote that way is another situation, but they really understand it.

So we want to thank you all for being here. We have a great spirit going in the Republican Party. I think it can be bipartisan. I hope it's going to be bipartisan. And we take care of a lot of problems. We can take care of a lot of problems. It would be really nice to do it in a bipartisan way. Okay?

Thank you all.

Q Did Steve Bannon betray you, Mr. President? Any words about Steve Bannon?

THE PRESIDENT: I don't know, he called me a great man last night. So, you know, he obviously changed his tune pretty quick. All right, thank you all very much.

Q (Inaudible.)

THE PRESIDENT: I don't talk to him. I don't talk to him. I don't talk to him. That's just a misnomer. Thank you.

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump at Ceremony Recognizing the First Responders to the June 14 Shooting Involving Congressman Scalise
Date: Thursday, July 27, 2017 5:19:31 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

July 27, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AT CEREMONY RECOGNIZING THE FIRST RESPONDERS
TO THE JUNE 14 SHOOTING INVOLVING CONGRESSMAN SCALISE

East Room

3:25 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Please sit down. Thank you. And thank you to Vice President for doing a fantastic job and for the introduction. We welcome you all, members of Congress and distinguished guests. We are gathered here today for a very, very special occasion, as we pay tribute to real heroes whose courageous actions under fire saved so many lives in Alexandria, Virginia just six weeks ago.

On the morning of June 14th, several members of Congress began their day on the baseball diamond, practicing for one of this town's greatest traditions -- the annual charity Congressional baseball game. It was just another beautiful morning until the unthinkable happened. The familiar sounds of baseball were suddenly interrupted by loud, vicious gunfire.

Matt Mika, Zachary Barth, and beloved Congressman, and my friend, Steve Scalise were each shot during an attack. Others were injured trying to evade the incoming bullets, of which there were many.

Fortunately, from the moment that gunman began to shoot, he was met by return fire. Capitol Police Special Agents David Bailey and Crystal Griner raced through the bullets -- and that's exactly what they did, they raced through the bullets -- and immediately engaged the gunman.

Minutes later, members of the Alexandria Police Department arrived on scene. Officers Nicole Battaglia, Kevin Jobe, and Alex Jensen joined the fight. Special Agent Griner was shot in the leg -- visited her in the hospital, she was hurt very badly -- and shrapnel injured Special Agent Bailey as bullets swirled around him.

Despite their injuries, both officers heroically continued to face down the gunman until they brought him down. And he had rifles; they had handguns. That's a big difference.

These officers saved the lives of every innocent person on the field that day -- many of them friends of Mike and myself. They are American heroes and we salute them. (Applause.) Fantastic. That is so beautiful. Thank you.

We also salute the members of Congress who acted with such bravery in the face of danger, shielding each other and caring for the injured. We honor today the emergency dispatchers who directed the first responders to the scene within seconds. They really acted quickly.

I especially want to recognize all of the personnel from the Alexandria Fire Department and the U.S. Park Police Aviation Unit for providing life support in a crisis where every second mattered. Thank you for what you did that day and for what you do every single day. Thank you very much. (Applause.)

We also express our deep appreciation for the paramedics, doctors, nurses, and surgeons from MedStar Washington Hospital and George Washington University Hospital for saving the lives of the wounded.

Joining us today is Congressman Scalise's medical team: Dr. Jack Sava -- where's Jack? Dr. Sava. Stand up, Jack. Come on. (Applause.) That's beautiful. MedStar's Director of Trauma Surgery, and Dr. Robert Golden, the Director of Orthopedic Trauma. Doctor, doctor -- congratulations. (Applause.) They were a lot more worried that night at the hospital, weren't they? Great job.

You have the gratitude of the entire nation. Thank you for caring for the victims and for your dear friend Steve -- and he is our dear friend. Steve is a fighter. We've known that for a long time.

This week, he was been discharged from the hospital and is now beginning weeks of intensive rehabilitation at an in-patient facility. He will recover. We are praying for him, we are pulling for him, and we are sending his family our support and our love.

Steve's great wife -- who I have gotten to know -- Jennifer is here with us today, and we applaud the strength and courage that she has shown throughout this incredible ordeal. Thank you, Jennifer. (Applause.) Thank you, Jennifer.

Other Americans responded to this tragedy in ways that remind us how much stronger we are when we are united. When the Congressional baseball game was played just one day later, nearly 25,000 people turned out -- by far, a record. They raised more than $1.5 million for charity -- also, by far, a record. The citizens of Steve's home parish organized a blood drive in his name, and Vice President Pence donated his blood at the Congressional blood drive. Thank you, Mike. (Applause.)

Just recently, House Republicans and Democrats introduced a bill to provide support to Capitol Police officers who are injured on duty. People have been looking at this for a long time. But Jennifer, you can tell Steve that he pulled it off, okay? That's better than being a whip. I hope it gets to my desk soon. I will sign it immediately. (Applause.)

The assault on June 14th reminded us that evil exists in this world. But it also reminded us that heroes walk in our midst, that love triumphs over tragedy, and that our resolve is stronger than ever. We praise America's law enforcement -- and I've been praising them for a long time, they are unbelievable people -- for doing a tough -- for doing the tough jobs, the dangerous jobs, and sometimes thankless job with tremendous integrity, devotion, and courage. So I just want to thank law enforcement generally. Thank you. (Applause.)

I can only tell you from the campaign, the people love you, they respect you, and they admire you. So I know you go through a lot, but they have great admiration. So just remember that, please.

Today I am deeply honored to present our nation's highest award for a public safety officer -- the Medal of Valor to Special Agent Crystal Griner, Special Agent David Bailey; and Alexandria Police Department Officers Nicole Battaglia, Kevin Jobe, and Alex Jensen.

The Medal of Valor is reserved for those who go above and beyond the call of duty as each of these men and women did on that fateful day. And they did it with great courage, and they did it with instinct. When our human instincts tell us to run -- there's danger -- our police and first responders run straight at it, standing in the breach, protecting the innocent, and keeping our loved ones safe.

Now I would like the military aide to read the citation, as these American heroes step forward to receive the Medal of Valor.

MILITARY AIDE: Special Agent Crystal Griner. Medal of Valor presented to Special Agent Crystal Griner, U.S. Capitol Police District of Columbia, for bravery and composure while engaged in an active shooter incident. Despite being shot, Special Agent Griner placed herself in mortal danger to save the lives of members of Congress, attending family members, and congressional staff during a charity softball practice at Eugene Simpson Memorial Park in Alexandria, Virginia. (Applause.)

Special Agent David Bailey. Medal of Valor presented to Special Agent David Bailey, U.S. Capitol Police District of Columbia, for taking brave and decisive action to subdue an active shooter. Special Agent Bailey was shot during the exchange of gunfire, but continued to advance the shooter without benefit of cover until the active shooter was subdued, saving the lives of members of Congress, attending family members, and congressional staff. (Applause.)

Officer Nicole Battaglia. Medal of Valor presented to Officer Nicole Battaglia, Alexandria Police Department, Virginia, for demonstrating extraordinary courage in saving the lives of two U.S. Capitol Police officers, members of Congress, their families, and congressional staff. Officer Battaglia engaged the assailant, exchanging gunfire at close range and ultimately neutralizing him. (Applause.)

Officer Alexander Jensen. Medal of Valor presented to Officer Alex Jensen, Alexandria Police Department, Virginia, for swift and valiant action in responding to an active shooter. Officer Jensen put himself in harm's way during the active shooter incident, moving without cover and drawing fire from the assailant until the assailant was subdued and the safety of the members of Congress, their families, and congressional staff was ensured. (Applause.)

Officer Kevin Jobe. Medal of Valor presented to Officer Kevin Jobe, Alexandria Police Department, Virginia, for placing himself in grave danger to protect two U.S. Capitol Police officers, members of Congress, their families, and congressional staff. Officer Jobe engaged an active shooter, neutralizing a volatile gunman, and preventing further injuries to innocent bystanders in the park. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: Very brave people. Great people. Congratulations to all of you. We are forever in your debt. Thank you. God bless you. God bless our truly amazing law enforcement. And God Bless America. Thank you very much. Thank you. (Applause.)

END

3:44 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump at Commissioning Ceremony for the USS Gerald R. Ford (CVN-78)
Date: Saturday, July 22, 2017 2:12:11 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

July 22, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AT COMMISSIONING CEREMONY FOR THE USS GERALD R. FORD (CVN-78)

Gerald R. Ford (CVN-78)
Newport News, Virginia

11:09 A.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much, Secretary Mattis, for that wonderful introduction and for your devoted service to our nation. Nobody has done it like you. I'm thrilled to be back on this magnificent ship for this historic moment with the amazing men and women of the United States Navy. (Applause.)

I was with you four months ago, and I knew that I had to be here today, and I told you I'd be back to congratulate you and the crew and everybody involved on commissioning the newest, largest, and most advanced aircraft carrier in the history of this world. That's a big achievement.

After today, wherever this ship sails, you will all carry a proud title: plankowner of the USS Gerald R. Ford. (Applause.) For the rest of your lives, you'll be able to tell your friends and family that you served on the greatest ship in the United States Navy and, in my opinion, on the greatest ship anywhere in the world. Everyone should take a moment to celebrate this incredible achievement.

I want to thank the many public servants who have joined us here today: Treasury Secretary Mnuchin, Governor Snyder, Governor McAuliffe, Senator Wicker, and members of Congress, Secretary Stackley, Admiral Richardson, senior military leaders, and, of course, the great Captain McCormack. (Applause.)

Captain, I know you will exemplify integrity at the helm. And have a good time doing it, Captain. Proud of you.

Thanks to the entire Ford family -- Susan, Jack, Steve, and Mike -- for all that you've done to support this ship on its voyage. Thank you, Susan. (Applause.) Thank you.

I also want to recognize two other people who were very special to President Ford. Thank you, Vice President Cheney and former Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld. Thank you. (Applause.) They look great. They look great.

As we put this stunning ship into the service of our nation, we must also pay tribute to the thousands of citizens, military and civilian, who helped design and build her. Their love of country has been poured into every rivet and bulkhead on this vessel. You hammered, chiseled, and sculpted this mighty hull.

You were there when the first steel was cut, when the turbines first roared to life, and when those beautiful bronze propellers first began to spin -- and spin they did. And now you are here to witness the moment when your incredible work of art becomes the pride of the United States Navy and a symbol of American power and prestige, no matter where in the world you go.

American steel and American hands have constructed a 100,000-ton message to the world: American might is second to none, and we're getting bigger, and better, and stronger every day of my administration. That I can tell you. (Applause.)

Wherever this vessel cuts through the horizon, our allies will rest easy and our enemies will shake with fear because everyone will know that America is coming and America is coming strong. (Applause.)

To every worker from Newport News Shipbuilding and every craftsman and engineer who helped build this incredible fortress on the sea, today we salute you. Thank you. (Applause.)

Your skill and your grit build the instruments of war that preserve peace. This ship is the deterrent that keeps us from having to fight in the first place. But this ship also ensures that if a fight does come, it will always end the same way; we will win, win, win. We will never lose. We will win. (Applause.)

When it comes to battle, we don't want a fair fight. We want just the opposite. We demand victory, and we will have total victory, believe me. (Applause.)

Having the best technology and equipment is only one part of the American military dominance. Our true strength is our people. Our greatest weapon is all of you. Our nation endures because we have citizens who love America and who are willing to fight for America. (Applause.) We are so very blessed with warriors who are willing to serve America in the greatest fighting force in the history -- the United States military.

Today this ship officially begins its role in the noble military history of our great nation. In a few moments, I will commission this wonderful, beautiful, but very, very powerful warship. Captain McCormack will assume command. He will set the first watch, and then the crew of the Gerald R. Ford will man the ship and bring her to life. (Applause.)

A ship is only as good as the people who serve on it, and the American sailor is the best anywhere in the world. Among you are great welders, radar technicians, machine operators, and pilots. You take pride in your work and America takes pride in you. We love you. We are proud of you. Thank you. (Applause.)

But that is why it is so fitting that this ship is named after a sailor of tremendous character, integrity, and wisdom. You know that, Susan. Gerald Ford was raised in American heartland. He grew up in Grand Rapids and became an Eagle Scout. He played football at the University of Michigan on a team that won two national championships. And listen to this: On that great team, he was named MVP. Not bad.

He then went to Yale Law School, and after Pearl Harbor, he volunteered to serve. President Ford joined the Navy and asked to be sent to sea. He wanted to do that very badly. He never really knew why; he felt it was a calling. He was assigned to a new carrier -- the Monterey -- becoming a plankowner himself on its commissioning in 1943.

From there, he sailed to the Pacific and saw action -- and a lot of action -- in the Pacific War. Like so many others of his generation, Gerald Ford returned home and started a family. He ran for Congress, where he served the people of Michigan with honor for many years. From there, he became Vice President and then President of the United States of America.

With this ship, we honor him for his lifetime of selfless and distinguished service. We also remember his wife, Betty -- I remember her well -- and we honor the bravery she showed in living her life so that her experiences could help others. Susan, she was a great woman -- a great woman. (Applause.)

Gerald Ford said that his time in the Navy convinced him that our lack of military preparation before World War II has only encouraged our enemies to fight harder and harder and harder. He learned a lot. In the future, Ford said, I felt the United States had to be strong. Never again could we allow our military to be anything but the absolute best. If he could see this ship today, President Gerald Ford would see his vision brought to life, and he would see his legacy of service being carried on by each and every one of you. (Applause.)

Gerald Ford embodied American values like few others: love of family, love of freedom, and, most of all, love of country. He knew that patriotism is the heartbeat of a nation. He knew that we must love our country in order to protect it. And he knew that we must have pride in our history if we are going to have confidence in our future.

The men and women of America's Armed Services are part of a living history. You uphold timeless customs and traditions, and you protect our nation and our freedom for the next generation to come. You are fulfilling your duty to this nation, and now it is the job of our government to fulfill its duty to you. (Applause.)

For years, our government has subjected the military to unpredictable funding and a devastating defense sequester. You remember that? Sequester -- not good. This has led to deferred maintenance, a lack of investment in new equipment and technology, and a shortfall in military readiness. In other words, it's been a very, very bad period of time for our military. That is why we reached a deal to secure an additional $20 billion for defense this year -- and it's going up -- and why I asked Congress for another $54 billion for next year.

Now we need Congress to do its job and pass the budget that provides for higher, stable, and predictable funding levels for our military needs that our fighting men and women deserve -- and you will get, believe me. President Trump, I will tell you -- you will get it. Don't worry about it. But I don't mind getting a little hand, so call that congressman and call that senator and make sure you get it. (Applause.)

And by the way, you can also call those senators to make sure you get healthcare. (Applause.)

We must end the defense sequester once and for all. We must also reform defense acquisitions to ensure that we are getting the best equipment at the best prices so that our dollars are used only for the best interests of our country and those who serve. We do not want cost overruns. We want the best equipment, but we want it built ahead of schedule and we want it build under budget. (Applause.)

This is the very least we can do for the patriots who have volunteered to give their sweat, their blood, and, if they must, their very lives for our great nation. The commissioning of this new American carrier marks the renewal of our commitment to a future of American greatness. Greater than ever before, remember that -- greater than ever before.

Just moments from now, the Captain will set the first watch on the USS Gerald R. Ford and, with God's grace, a watch will stand until the day she is decommissioned 50 years or more from now.

Most of you who will man this ship today are just about 20 years old. Together, you are embarking on a truly great adventure. The journey will require all of your talents, all of your efforts, and all of your heart. As you know, the sea holds many challenges and threats. But starting today, you will face, together as a team aboard this ship, which is your responsibility and your home.

Three generations of Americans will eventually man these decks. Perhaps even some of your own children and grandchildren someday. You will inspire many more American patriots to follow your lead and to serve. And one day, when you are old and have lived a long and hopefully happy and successful life, you may find yourselves back aboard this ship surrounded by your family to mark its decommissioning. And on that day, our entire nation will honor not just this carrier, it will honor you and the role you will have played in keeping America safe, strong, and free.

To every patriot who will serve on this ship today and throughout history, I say this: Keep the watch, protect her, defend her, and love her. Good luck and Godspeed. Thank you to the Ford family, and thank you to every sailor in the greatest navy on Earth. God bless you, God bless the Gerald R. Ford, and God bless the United States of America. Thank you very much. God bless you all. (Applause.)

CAPTAIN MCCORMACK: Thank you, Mr. President. And I would be honored if you would place Gerald R. Ford in commission.

Will the guests please rise. Ship's company, attention.

THE PRESIDENT: I hereby place United States Ship Gerald R. Ford in commission. May God bless and guide this warship and all who shall sail in her. God bless you. Thank you. (Applause.)

END

11:27 A.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump at Presentation of Medal of Honor to Captain Gary Michael Rose, United States Army
Date: Monday, October 23, 2017 4:36:41 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

October 23, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AT PRESENTATION OF MEDAL OF HONOR TO CAPTAIN GARY MICHAEL ROSE,
UNITED STATES ARMY

East Room

3:27 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much, Chaplain Hurley. Vice President Pence, Secretary Shulkin, members of Congress, members of the Armed Forces, and distinguished guests, please join me in welcoming Captain Gary Michael Rose to the White House. (Applause.)

For many years, the story of Mike's heroism has gone untold. But today we gather to tell the world of his valor and proudly present him with our nation's highest military honor.

Joining Mike today is his wife, Margaret, their three children, Sarah, Claire, and Michael, and their two grandchildren, Kaitlyn and Christian. Kaitlyn and Christian, I want you to know that the medal that we will present today will forever enshrine your grandfather -- and he is a good man. We just spoke to him for a long time, and you are great, great young people. But this will enshrine him into the history of our nation.

We're also grateful to be joined by nine previous Congressional Medal of Honor recipients. Their courage, character, and conviction is beyond measure. Please stand. (Applause.) We are honored to be in their presence.

This afternoon, I want to take a few moments to share with you the incredible story of Mike's heroic deeds.

Raised in Watertown, New York, Mike's father was a metalworker and a World War II veteran. He taught his son that we live in the greatest country in the world, and that we must love it, cherish it, and always defend it.

Mike took that very much to heart. After his first year in college, he enlisted in the Army, and by the time he was 22, Mike was a medic for the Fifth Special Forces Group in the Vietnam War.

On September 11, 1970, Mike was called on his second combat mission. He was the only medic for 136 men who embarked on one of the group's biggest missions of the war: Operation Tailwind.

Their goal was to prevent the North Vietnamese from funneling weapons along the Ho Chi Minh Trail to use against our American troops. Helicopters dropped the unit into Laos. Before they even touched the ground, enemy fire struck three men.

Once they landed in the clearing, they rushed to the jungle for much needed cover. Soon, another man was shot outside their defensive perimeter. Mike immediately rushed to his injured comrade, firing at the enemy as he ran. In the middle of the clearing, under the machine gun fire, Mike treated the wounded soldier. He shielded the man with his own body and carried him back to safety.

But this was just the beginning of Mike's harrowing four-day mission. Mike and his unit slashed through the dense jungle, dodged bullets, dodged explosives, dodged everything that you can dodge because they threw it all at him, and continuously returned fire as they moved deeper and deeper and deeper into enemy territory.

Throughout the engagement, Mike rescued those in distress without any thought for his own safety. I will tell you, the people with him could not believe what they were witnessing. He crawled from one soldier to the next, offering words of encouragement as he tended to their wounds.

On the second day, one of the allied soldiers was shot outside their company perimeter. Again, Mike raced to the side of the soldier, exposing himself to constant fire. As bullets flew in every direction, Mike fired at the enemy with one arm while dragging the injured soldier back to the perimeter with the other.

Soon after they returned to their unit, a rocket-propelled grenade exploded nearby and shot smoldering metal into Mike's back and into his leg. He was seriously, seriously wounded. The shrapnel left a gaping hole in Mike's foot. For the next 48 excruciating hours, he used a branch as a crutch and went on rescuing the wounded. Mike did not stop to eat, to sleep, or even to care for his own serious injury as he saved the lives of his fellow soldiers.

On the second and final night of the mission, the enemy surrounded the company. All night long, Mike treated the wound and dug trenches to protect them from blazing rockets and grenades. After four days of constant engagement with the enemy, and after successfully destroying an enemy base camp, Mike's unit prepared to evacuate.

When the helicopters arrived, Mike fought back the enemy as his fellow soldiers boarded the aircraft. He boarded the last chopper, limping up to the craft while still warding off the enemy forces that were fast approaching.

As Mike puts it, "If you don't believe in God, then you should have been with us that day. And I can tell you, it'll make a believer out of you because we should not [ever] have survived." Mike, today, we have a room full of people and a nation who thank God that you lived. (Applause.)

Mike's story doesn't end there. Soon after the helicopter lifted off the ground, the chopper was hit by enemy fire. Mike, this is serious stuff. (Laughter.) This was not a good four days. (Laughter.)

The bullets tragically struck a young Marine gunner in the throat. Again, Mike rushed to help. As he wrapped a cloth around the Marine's neck, the engine of the helicopter failed, and the aircraft crashed less than a mile from where it had taken off. Mike was thrown off the aircraft before it hit the ground, but he raced back to the crash site and pulled one man after another out of the smoking and smoldering helicopter as it spewed jet fuel from its ruptured tanks.

Finally, another helicopter rescued them, and by the time they reached the base, Mike was covered in blood. He refused treatment until all of his men had been cared for first. In every action during those four days, Mike valiantly fought for the life of his comrades, even if it meant the end of his own life.

Mike, you will -- I mean, I have to say, you really -- your will to endure, your love for your fellow soldier, your devotion to your country inspires us all. I have to tell you, that is something. Nations are formed out of the strength and patriotism that lives in the hearts of our heroes.

Mike never knew for certain whether or not that Marine gunner who was shot on the helicopter survived until earlier this year, when Mike learned that the Marine had endured a painful and difficult recovery, but that he had made it and lived a long and very full life before passing away in 2012. As Mike said, "That in itself made it all worth it."

That Marine was one of many men Mike saved. Throughout those four days, Mike treated an astounding 60 to 70 men. Their company disrupted the enemy's continual resupply of weapons, saving countless of additional American lives.

Today, we are joined by many of Mike's brothers-in-arms who fought alongside him in Operation Tailwind, along with brave airmen and Marines who provided critical support throughout the mission. As Mike put it, "If it wasn't for those air crews, all of us would still be in Laos."

Among those here today are 10 members of Mike's unit. Please stand up as I call your name: Sergeant Major Morris Adair, Sergeant Don Boudreau, First Sergeant Bernie Bright, Captain Pete Landon, Sergeant Jim Lucas, Lieutenant Colonel Gene McCarley, First Sergeant Denver Minton, Sergeant Keith Plancich, Specialist Five Craig Schmidt, and Staff Sergeant Dave Young.

Thank you very much. Thank you. (Applause.)

To Mike and all the servicemembers who fought in the battle: You've earned the eternal gratitude of the entire American nation. You faced down the evils of communism, you defended our flag, and you showed the world the unbreakable resolve of the American Armed Forces. Thank you. And thank you very much.

After serving in Operation Tailwind, Mike went on to become an officer in the Army and served for over 20 years.

Now Mike and his wife, Margaret -- Margaret, stand up, Margaret. (Applause.) I met Margaret. Margaret is lovely -- reside in a fantastic place, where I just left -- Huntsville, Alabama -- where he lives by a core conviction: You serve your country by fixing your block or fixing your neighborhood.

Mike volunteers with the American Legion, the Knights of Columbus, and many other organizations. He volunteers at a local soup kitchen, fixes broken appliances for elderly and disabled neighbors, donates his hair for those suffering from cancer, makes lunches for children in need, and organizes community gatherings to bring people closer together -- which is something we need all over the world and certainly in our country.

He's a loyal friend to his fellow servicemembers, many of whom are, in addition, here today. And every Wednesday, Kaitlyn and Christian come over for homework night with grandpa and grandma.

I think Kaitlyn and Christian will agree -- and I just met them. You have to stand up. Come on, Christian. Come on. Kaitlyn. (Applause.) But I think that Kaitlyn and Christian will agree this fieldtrip is their best homework assignment yet. Right? What do you think, Christian? (Laughter.) Yes? He said yes.

I'm told that recently Christian asked his grandfather, "What exactly is the Congressional Medal of Honor?" That is a wonderful question, Christian. It's the award given to America's bravest heroes who earn our freedom with their sacrifice. Those who receive the Medal of Honor went above and beyond the call of duty to protect their fellow servicemembers and defend our nation.

Kaitlyn and Christian, you are about to witness your grandpa receive our nation's highest military honor, and America is about to witness Captain Gary Michael Rose recognized as the true American hero that he is: a patriot who never gives up, never gives in, and always stands strong for God, for family, and for country.

Mike, we honor you, we thank you, we salute you, and with hearts full of admiration and pride, we present you with the Congressional Medal of Honor.

And now I would like the military aide to come forward and read the citation.

Thank you very much. Thank you. (Applause.)

MILITARY AIDE: The President of the United States of America, authorized for by Act of Congress, March 3rd, 1863, has awarded, in the name of Congress, The Medal of Honor, to Sgt. Gary M. Rose, United States Army for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty.

Sergeant Gary M. Rose distinguished himself by acts of gallantry and intrepidity while serving as a Special Forces Medic with a company-sized exploitation force, Special Operations Augmentation, Command and Control Central, 5th Special Forces Group (Airborne), 1st Special Forces, Republic of Vietnam.

Between 11 and 14 September 1970, Sergeant Rose's company was continuously engaged by a well-armed and numerically superior hostile force deep in enemy-controlled territory. Enemy B-40 rockets and mortar rounds rained down while the adversary sprayed the area with small arms and machine gun fire, wounding many and forcing everyone to seek cover.

Sergeant Rose, braving the hail of bullets, sprinted fifty meters to a wounded soldier's side. He then used his own body to protect the casualty from further injury while treating his wounds. After stabilizing the casualty, Sergeant Rose carried him through the bullet-ridden combat zone to protective cover.

As the enemy accelerated the attack, Sergeant Rose continuously exposed himself to intense fire as he fearlessly moved from casualty to casualty, administering life-saving aid.

A B-40 rocket impacted just meters from Sergeant Rose, knocking him from his feet and injuring his head, hand, and foot. Ignoring his wounds, Sergeant Rose struggled to his feet and continued to render aid to the other injured soldiers.

During an attempted medevac, Sergeant Rose again exposed himself to enemy fire as he attempted to hoist wounded personnel up to the hovering helicopter, which was unable to land due to unsuitable terrain.

The medevac mission was aborted due to intense enemy fire and the helicopter crashed a few miles away due to the enemy fire sustained during the attempted extraction.

Over the next two days, Sergeant Rose continued to expose himself to enemy fire in order to treat the wounded, estimated to be half of the company's personnel. On September 14, during the company's eventual helicopter extraction, the enemy launched a full-scale offensive.

Sergeant Rose, after loading wounded personnel on the first set of extraction helicopters, returned to the outer perimeter under enemy fire, carrying friendly casualties and moving wounded personnel to more secure positions until they could be evacuated.

He then returned to the perimeter to help repel the enemy ~~under~~ [until] the final extraction helicopter arrived. As the final helicopter was loaded, the enemy began to overrun the company's position, and the helicopter's Marine door gunner was shot in the neck.

Sergeant Rose instantly administered critical medical treatment onboard the helicopter, saving the Marine's life. The helicopter carrying Sergeant Rose crashed several hundred meters from the extraction point, further injuring Sergeant Rose and the personnel on board.

Despite his numerous wounds from the past three days, Sergeant Rose continued to pull and carry unconscious and wounded personnel out of the burning wreckage and continued to administer aid to the wounded until another extraction helicopter arrived.

Sergeant Rose's extraordinary heroism and selflessness above and beyond the call of duty were critical to saving numerous lives over that four-day time period. His actions are in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself, the 1st Special Forces, and the United States Army.

(The Medal of Honor is presented.) (Applause.)

(A prayer is given.) (Applause.)

END

3:47 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump at Presentation of Medal of Honor to Private First Class James C. McCloughan, U.S. Army
Date: Monday, July 31, 2017 4:52:04 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

July 31, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AT PRESENTATION OF MEDAL OF HONOR TO
PRIVATE FIRST CLASS JAMES C. MCCLOUGHAN,
UNITED STATES ARMY

East Room

3:15 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. Please be seated. Thank you, Chaplain Hurley. Secretary Mnuchin, Secretary Mattis, Secretary Shulkin, Senator Stabenow, Congressman Upton, and members of the Armed Forces: Thank you for joining us as we award our nation's highest military honor to Specialist Five James C. McCloughan.

Today, we pay tribute to a veteran who went above and beyond the call of duty to protect our comrades, our country, and our freedom.

Joining Jim today is his wife Cherie, his brothers Mike and Tom, his sons Jamie and Matt, and many other members of his very large and beautiful family.

We're also gratified to be joined by eight previous Medal of Honor recipients. Now, Jim's name will stand forever alongside theirs in our history and in our hearts. I want to take a few minutes to tell you about Jim and how he earned this place among legends.

Jim was raised in Bangor, Michigan. His father built their house from scratch and worked 40 years at a piano factory. Jim's dad taught him a simple but powerful lesson: Never do anything halfway. Always do your best. Jim took that lesson very much to heart. He played for four varsity sports in high school and three in college.

In August of 1968, Jim was drafted into the Army. Within six months, he was trained as a medic and arrived in Vietnam. Right away, Jim poured all of himself into his duties treating the sick and the wounded. Before long, all his fellow soldiers called him "Doc."

On May 13, 1969, less than three months after he arrived, Jim was one of 89 men in Charlie Company to embark on a mission to secure a transportation route near Nui Yon. As Jim and his men jumped out of the helicopter, it quickly became clear that they were surrounded by enemy troops. Within minutes, two choppers were shot down, and one of his men was badly wounded in the middle of an open field.

Jim did not hesitate. He blazed through 100 meters of enemy fire to carry the wounded and the soldier to safety. But this was only the first of many heroic deeds Jim would perform over the next 48 hours.

After tending to the first wounded soldier, Jim joined a mission to advance toward the enemy, and advance they did. Before long, they were ambushed. Again, he ran into danger to rescue his men. As he cared for two soldiers, shrapnel from a rocket-propelled grenade slashed open the back of Jim's body from head to foot.

Yet that terrible wound didn't stop Jim from pulling those two men to safety, nor did it stop him from answering the plea of another wounded comrade and carrying him to safety atop his own badly injured body. He was badly injured.

And so it went, shot after shot, blast upon blast. As one of his comrades recalled, whoever called "medic" could immediately count on McCloughan. He's a brave guy.

As day turned to dusk, nearly all of those who could and really, really had to make it back -- they were finally within their night defensive position, except for one soldier whose plea Jim could not ignore.

Again, "Doc" did not hesitate. He crawled through a rice paddy thick with steel rain. That means bullets all over the place. As soldiers watched him, they were sure that was the last time they would see "Doc." They thought that was the end of their friend, Jim.

But after several minutes passed, Jim emerged from the smoke and fire carrying yet another soldier. He immediately ~~badgered~~ [bandaged] and fixed and worked, but he got the wounds fixed and lifted the soldier to a medevac helicopter.

His lieutenant ordered Jim to get in, too. "Get in," he said, "get in." But Jim refused. He said, "You're going to need me here." As Jim now says, "I would have rather died on the battlefield than know that men died because they did not have a medic."

Over the next 24 hours, Jim fired at enemy soldiers, suffered a bullet wound to his arm, and continued to race into gunfire to save more and more lives.

And yet, as night approached again, after nearly two days of no food, no water, and no rest, Jim volunteered to hold a blinking light in an open field to signal for a supply drop. He would not yield, he would not rest, he would not stop, and he would not flinch in the face of sure death and definite danger.

Though he was thousands of miles from home, it was as if the strength and pride of our whole nation was beating inside of Jim's heart. Jim did what his father had taught him -- he gave it his all and then he just kept giving.

In those 48 hours, Jim rescued 10 American soldiers and tended to countless others. He was one of 32 men who fought until the end. They held their ground against more than 2,000 enemy troops.

Jim, I know I speak for every person here when I say that we are in awe of your actions and your bravery. But let me tell you one thing, and one more story about Jim. On the second day of that bloody fight, Jim found a few soldiers and a fellow soldier who had been shot badly in the stomach. He knew the soldier wouldn't make it if he flung him on the back, so he lifted him up and carried him in his arms.

As Jim was carrying the soldier, a thought flashed through his mind. Although Jim had always been very close to his father, he realized that it was not since he had been a young boy that he had told his dad those three very simple but beautiful words: "I love you."

In that moment, Jim offered up a prayer. He asked God, "If you get me out of this hell on Earth so I can tell my dad I love him, I'll be the best coach and the best father you could ever ask for." As he prayed, a great peace came over him. And if it was God's will for him to live, he'd keep his promise to God as soon as he had the chance.

Jim made it out of that hell on Earth. He made it; here he is. And the first thing he did when he arrived back on American soil was to say those beautiful words: "I love you, Dad. I love you." Jim said those words over and over again for the next 22 years until the last time he saw his father, the night before his dad passed on.

Today, I'd venture to say his dad is the proudest father in heaven. Jim fought with all of the love and courage in his soul. He was prepared to lay down his life so his brothers-in-arms could live theirs.

With us today are 10 of the men who fought alongside Jim, and five of those he saved. To Bill, Randy, Mike, Joe, Kent, Robert, John, Charles, Michael, Orestes -- thank you for your service and sacrifice. Stand up wherever you may be. Where are you? Where are you? (Applause.) Thank you, fellas. That's great.

For over two centuries, our brave men and women in uniform have overcome tyranny, fascism, communism, and every threat to our freedom -- every single threat they've overcome. And we've overcome these threats because of titans like Jim whose spirit could never be conquered.

That's what this award is, and Jim's life represents so well: America's unbreakable spirit. It's been 48 years since Jim's battle in Vietnam. He is now a husband, a father, and a grandfather. He coached high school football, wrestling, and baseball for 38 years, just like he said he would. And he brought together every member he could find of his beloved Charlie Company.

To many people in this room, Specialist Five McCloughan has always been their friend, "Jim." To others, he's been "Coach." To those who bravely served with him in Vietnam, he's still called their "Doc." To his parents Scotty and Margaret, both watching from heaven, he will always be their son. But today, [to] 320 million grateful American hearts, Private McCloughan carries one immortal title -- and that title is "hero."

Specialist Five McCloughan: We honor you. We salute you. And with God as your witness, we thank you for what you did for all of us.

Now I would like the military aide to come forward and read the citation.

MILITARY AIDE: The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress, March 3rd, 1863, has awarded in the name of Congress the Medal of Honor to Private First Class James C. McCloughan, United States Army, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty.

Private First Class [James] C. McCloughan distinguished himself by acts of gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty from May 13th through 15th, 1969, while serving as a combat medic with Charlie Company, 3rd Battalion, 21st Infantry, 196th Light Infantry Brigade, Americal Division.

The company air assaulted into an area near Tam Ky and Nui Yon Hill. On May 13th, with complete disregard for his life, he ran 100 meters in an open field through heavy fire to rescue a comrade too injured to move and carried him to safety. That same day, 2nd Platoon was ordered to search the area near Nui Yon Hill when the platoon was ambushed by a large North Vietnamese Army force and sustained heavy casualties.

With complete disregard for his life and personal safety, Private First Class McCloughan led two Americans into the safety of a trench while being wounded by shrapnel from a rocket-propelled grenade. He ignored a direct order to stay back, and braved an enemy assault while moving into the "kill zone" on four more occasions to extract wounded comrades.

He treated the injured, prepared the evacuation, and though bleeding heavily from shrapnel wounds on his head and entire body, refused evacuation to safety in order to remain at the battle site with his fellow soldiers who were heavily outnumbered by the North Vietnamese Army forces.

On May 14th, the platoon was again ordered to move out towards Nui Yon Hill. Private First Class McCloughan was wounded a second time by small arms fire and shrapnel from a rocket-propelled grenade while rendering aid to two soldiers in an open rice paddy. In the final phases of the attack, two companies from 2nd North Vietnamese Army Division and an element of 700 soldiers from a Viet Cong regiment descended upon Charlie Company's position on three sides.

Private First Class McCloughan, again with complete disregard for his life, went into the crossfire numerous times throughout the battle to extract the wounded soldiers, while also fighting the enemy. His relentless and courageous actions inspired and motivated his comrades to fight for their survival. When supplies ran low, Private First Class McCloughan volunteered to hold a blinking strobe light in an open area as a marker for a nighttime resupply drop. He remained steadfast while bullets landed all around him and rocket-propelled grenades flew over his prone, exposed body.

During the morning darkness of May 15th, Private First Class McCloughan knocked out a rocket-propelled grenade position with a grenade, fought and eliminated enemy soldiers, treated numerous casualties, kept two critically-wounded soldiers alive through the night, and organized the dead and wounded for evacuation at daylight. His timely and courageous actions were instrumental in saving the lives of his fellow soldiers.

Private First Class McCloughan's personal heroism, professional competence, and devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, the Americal Division, and the United States Army.

(The Medal of Honor is presented.) (Applause.)

(A prayer is given.)

THE PRESIDENT: Jim, thank you. God bless you. God bless your family. God bless the United States of America. Thank you, Jim. (Applause.)

END

3:35 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump at Tax Reform Event
Date: Wednesday, September 27, 2017 5:52:42 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

September 27, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AT TAX REFORM EVENT

Farm Bureau Building
Indianapolis, Indiana

3:30 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. You just want massive tax cuts. That's what you want. That's the only reason you're going so wild. (Applause.)

But it's wonderful to be back in the great state of Indiana. What a place. (Applause.)

I want to thank Senator Todd Young, Senator Joe Donnelly, Representative Jackie Walorski, Representative Susan Brooks, and Representative Mike [sic] Messer for joining us today. Thank you very much. Thank you very much for being here. Appreciate it. (Applause.)

I also want to thank members of my economic team, Secretary Steven Mnuchin and Director Gary Cohn, for joining us, as well. We appreciate it. (Applause.)

Let me begin by saying that our hearts and prayers go out to the people of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands who are suffering in the wake of yet another catastrophic hurricane. I mean, their island was virtually destroyed. Federal agencies are working closely with local partners to help these communities get back on their feet as soon as possible.

Texas, Florida, and Louisiana are doing great, and the recovery process is happening very, very quickly.

I will be going down to Puerto Rico next week to get an on-the-ground briefing about the disaster recovery and to see all of our great first responders and to meet a lot of the people who were so affected by these storms. We are with you now, I tell them, and we will be there every step of the way until this job is done. It is truly catastrophic what happened in Puerto Rico. (Applause.)

And massive amounts of water, food, and supplies, by the way, are being delivered on an hourly basis. It's something that nobody has ever seen before from this country, I can tell you that. And I'm very proud of all of the folks that have worked so hard in FEMA, all of our first responders, all of our police that have gone to the island because their police force has been so badly affected. And many of their policemen -- in fact, most of the police people have lost their homes, and it's been a tough go. But we are -- we're going to get it back.

Before we go on to discuss the largest tax cut in our country's history, I also want to provide a brief update on healthcare. We have the votes on Graham-Cassidy. But with the rules of reconciliation, we're up against a deadline of Friday -- two days. That's just two days. And yes-vote senator -- we have a wonderful senator, great, great senator -- who is a yes vote, but he's home recovering from a pretty tough situation. And with so many great features, including all of the block granting, the money to the states, et cetera, et cetera, our healthcare plan is really going to be something excellent. It's going to be better managed for the people that it serves. Having local healthcare representatives is far better than having healthcare managed from Washington, D.C. Not even a contest. (Applause.)

And many, many governors, as you also see, have agreed with us and approved it and really look forward to running it properly. But again, because the reconciliation window is about to close, we have to wait a few months until it reopens before we take a vote. So we're getting all of the good signs from Alaska and the others to repeal and replace Obamacare. And I was hoping this would be put on my desk right after we won the election, and I'd come in and sign. But it didn't work that way. There were a couple of people that -- I won't say anything. (Laughter.) But early next year when reconciliation kicks back in, in any event long before the November election, we're going to have a vote. And we're going to be able to get that through, and I think we'll actually get it through very easily and the time makes it easier.

But speaking of reconciliation, the Republican Senate needs to get rid of the filibuster rule, which is blocking so many great legislative reforms the American people badly want and deserve. By the way, the Democrats, if they had the opportunity, which hopefully they won't for many, many years, they would get rid of it on day one. And most of you know exactly what I'm talking about.

We're here today in Indiana to announce our framework to deliver historic tax relief to the American People. (Applause.)

This is a once-in-a-generation opportunity, and I guess it's probably something I can say that I'm very good at. I've been waiting for this for a long time. We're going to cut taxes for the middle class, make the tax code simpler and more fair for everyday Americans, and we are going to bring back the jobs and wealth that have left our country -- and most people thought left our country for good. (Applause.)

We want tax reform that is pro-growth, pro-jobs, pro-worker, pro-family, and, yes, tax reform that is pro-American. (Applause.) It's time to take care of our people, to rebuild our nation, and to fight for our great American workers. (Applause.)

Indiana is a tremendous example of the prosperity that is unleashed when we cut taxes and set free the dreams of our citizens. This state has claimed a powerful competitive edge built on low taxes and less regulation -- and are we cutting regulation? (Applause.)

And businesses all across the country have taken notice. In recent years, Indiana has welcomed dozens of companies fleeing high taxes and high-tax states. Thousands of new jobs and massive capital investment have followed -- meaning a better quality of life for the people of Indiana.

All of this is possible because the people of this state have made a decision. They chose to make Indiana competitive again. They chose, and their choice was so important. It included electing a governor, who you may have heard of -- (laughter) -- who signed the largest income tax cut in the state's history, our very, very terrific person and terrific Vice President, Mike Pence. (Applause.)

It's time for Washington to learn from the wisdom of Indiana. We need Washington to promote American jobs instead of obstructing them. That is what I have been working to achieve every day since I took office. That is what I talked about on the campaign trail.

Already, we're seeing the results of an economic policy that finally puts America first. (Applause.) Unemployment is at a 16-year low. Unemployment for African Americans is near its lowest point since the turn of the millennium. It's really a fantastic thing to see. (Applause.)

Wages are rising. Optimism among manufacturers has reached all-time highs. GDP growth last quarter reached 3 percent way ahead of schedule; nobody thought that was going to happen for a long time. (Applause.) And this quarter, I believe, would have been better, but the hurricanes will have an impact. But other than that, it would have been, in my opinion, even better.

Your government is working for you once again, not for the donors, not the special interests, but the hardworking taxpaying citizens of our country. (Applause.)

America is back on the right track. And I see so many red hats -- Make America Great Again. That's what we're doing -- Make America Great Again. (Applause.) But our country and our economy cannot take off like they should unless we dramatically reform America's outdated, complex, and extremely burdensome tax code. It's a relic. We've got to change it. We have to compete -- compete with other countries.

The current tax system is a colossal barrier standing in the way of America's economic comeback because it can be far greater than it's ever been. But we're going to remove that barrier to create the tax system our people finally, finally, finally -- and want and deserve.

For several months, my administration has been working closely with Congress to develop a framework for tax reform. Over the next few months, the House and Senate will build on this framework and produce legislation that will deliver more jobs, higher pay, and lower taxes for middle-class families -- for the working man and woman -- and for businesses of all sizes. I look forward -- (Applause.) Thank you.

I look forward to working with Congress to deliver these historic tax cuts and reforms to the American people. These tax cuts are significant. There's never been tax cuts like what we're talking about.

Our framework is based on four key ideas: First, we will cut taxes for the everyday, hardworking Americans -- the people that work so long, so hard, and they've been forgotten. But they're not forgotten anymore. I think we proved that on November 8th. (Applause.)

Under this framework, the first $12,000 of income earned by a single individual will be tax free, -- (applause) -- and a married couple won't pay a dime in taxes on their first $24,000 of income. So, a married couple -- up to $24,000 -- can spend their money on their family, on their children, on what they have to do. So much better.

In other words, more income for more people will be taxed at a rate of zero. (Applause.) At this zero percent rate, taxable income will be subject to just three tax rates of 12 percent, 25 percent, and 35 percent.

Jonathan Blanton and his wife Jamie from Greentown are here with us today. Where are they? Oh, hello, Jonathan. How are you? (Applause.)

Jonathan does industrial janitorial work and Jamie works at an auto company. Together they're raising four beautiful children, and last year they earned less than $90,000. Under our tax plan they would have saved more than $1,000, and it could be substantially more. And that's just on federal taxes. So they would have saved at least $1,000.

Middle-income families will save even more money with an increased child tax credit for children under the age of 17, which so many families have been calling for. (Applause.)

We will eliminate the marriage penalty in the existing credit and expand eligibility to include even more middle-income families. Greatly expanded.

We're also expanding the child tax credit because we believe the most important investment our country can make is in our children. (Applause.) And this is just one more critical way that we're targeting relief to working families.

In addition, under our framework, those caring for the elderly loved -- and we love these people, but we're caring, and we take such care of the elderly and other adult dependents -- will receive financial relief in the form of a $500 tax credit. (Applause.)

We're doing everything we can to reduce the tax burden on you and your family. By eliminating tax breaks and loopholes, we will ensure that the benefits are focused on the middle class, the working men and women, not the highest-income earners. (Applause.)

Our framework includes our explicit commitment that tax reform will protect low-income and middle-income households, not the wealthy and well-connected. They can call me all they want. It's not going to help. I'm doing the right thing, and it's not good for me. Believe me. (Applause.)

But what is good for me -- not only as President and legacy -- what is good for me is if everything takes off like a rocket ship, like it should have for 20 years. That's good for me. That's good for everyone. (Applause.) And that's what I think is going to happen. (Applause.) And a lot of very wealthy people feel the same way, believe me.

In fact, we are eliminating most itemized deductions that primarily benefit the wealthiest taxpayers. We've also given Congress the flexibility to add an additional top rate on the very highest income earners to provide even more tax relief for working people.

Second, our framework will make the tax code simple, fair, and easy to understand, finally. (Applause.)

Americans waste money. Americans waste so much money -- billions and billions of dollars and many hours each year to comply with our ridiculously complex tax code. More than 90 percent of Americans use assistance to prepare their taxes. Under our framework, the vast majority of families will be able to file their taxes on a single sheet of paper. (Applause.)

We are also repealing the alternative minimum tax, or AMT. About time. (Applause.)

The AMT is actually a shadow tax system that requires many people to calculate their taxes two different ways and pay the higher of the two amounts. You're all familiar with it. Under our framework, the AMT will make even less sense because we are repealing many of the special interest tax breaks that it was designed to deal with. We are making our taxes simple again. We are simplifying our tax system.

To protect millions of small businesses and the American farmer, we are finally ending the crushing, the horrible, the unfair estate tax, or as it is often referred to, the death tax. (Applause.)

That means, especially for all of you with small businesses that are really tremendous businesses, you'll be able to leave them to your family, and your family won't have to run out and do a fire sale to try and get the money to pay the tax -- lose the business, ends up going out of business. All of those jobs are lost. The farmers in particular are affected. They have wonderful farms, but they can't pay the tax, so they have to sell the farm. The people that buy it don't run it with love. They can't run it the same way, and it goes out. So that death tax is a disaster for this country and a disaster for so many small businesses and farmers. And we're getting rid of it. (Applause.)

Now if you don't like your family, it won't matter, okay?
(Laughter.) But for those that love your family, it matters a lot.
(Laughter.)

With us today is Kip Tom, a family farmer from Leesburg -- Where's Kip? Go ahead, Kip. Hi, Kip -- (applause) -- who fears that his family's farming heritage -- it's been a long time. How long, Kip? A hundred and eighty-seven years -- that's peanuts, Kip. (Applause.) Wow. That's a long time. But that great heritage could come to an end because of the death tax, or the estate tax, and could make it impossible for him to pass that legacy to his wonderful family. We're not going to let that happen.

We are not going to allow the death tax to steal away the American Dream from these great, great families, many of which are in this room today. (Applause.)

We will protect our farmers, our ranchers, and our small businesses, and we will make taxes simple, easy, and fair for all Americans. Okay? (Applause.)

Third, we will cut taxes on American businesses to restore our competitive edge and create more jobs and higher wages for American workers. (Applause.)

In Indiana, you have seen firsthand that cutting taxes on businesses makes your state more competitive and leads to more jobs and higher paychecks for your workers. Now, we want to do the same thing for America, making our country more competitive with other nations. And in many cases, those other nations are taking advantage of us in so many ways. They say they're friends, and perhaps they are, but believe me, I am renegotiating our trade deals, including NAFTA, including many other trade deals. (Applause.)

And through regulation, all you have to do is look at the massive pipelines -- Dakota Access. You take a look, 48,000 jobs immediately approved. So we're letting that happen.

But in terms of the tax and the tax strategy that Ronald Reagan used to create an economic boom in the 1980s: When our economy took off, the middle class thrived, and the family income of all families was increasing more and more. And it was a beautiful sight to behold.

Since then, other nations have adopted, unfortunately, our playbook and ran it even better than we did. And I shouldn't say even better because we didn't run it well at all, and we let other nations come in and take advantage of us and take our jobs away and take our businesses out. And we're stopping that, and you see it right here what we've done.

Today, our total business tax rate is 60 percent higher than our average foreign competitor in the developed world. That's not good. We have surrendered our competitive edge to other countries, but we're not surrendering anymore. We're not surrendering anymore.

Under our framework, we will dramatically cut the business tax rate so that American companies and American workers can beat our foreign competitors and start winning again. (Applause.) We will reduce the corporate tax rate to no higher than 20 percent. That's way down from 35 and 39 -- (applause) -- which is substantially below the average of other industrialized nations.

This is a revolutionary change, and the biggest winners will be the everyday American workers as jobs start pouring into our country, as companies start competing for American labor, and as wages start going up at levels that you haven't seen in many years. (Applause.)

When our companies move to other countries, it's our loyal American workers who get hurt. And when companies stay in America, and come to America, it's our wonderful workers who reap the rewards.

And I just left the United Nations last week, and I was told by one of the most powerful leaders of the world that they're going to be announcing, in the not-too-distant future, five major factories in the United States -- between increasing and new -- five. (Applause.) You'll be hearing about that very soon.

And I said thank you very much, and he said, "you know what? It's starting to happen in the United States. It's starting to happen." So I just wanted to let you know that. I promised I wouldn't say who. I'll keep my word. Okay? (Laughter.) Unless you force me. (Laughter.)

AUDIENCE MEMBERS: Who?

THE PRESIDENT: Members of both parties -- it happens to be in the automobile industry. That's a good industry. (Laughter.) Members of both parties should agree that we need a tax code that keeps jobs in our country and brings jobs back to our country. (Applause.)

And for the millions of small businesses and farms that file their taxes as sole proprietors, S corporations or partnerships, we will cap the tax rate they pay at 25 percent -- much lower. Big difference. (Applause.) This will be the lowest top marginal income tax rate for small and mid-size businesses in this country in more than 80 years. (Applause.)

To give businesses even more reason to boost their investment in America, for the next five years, our framework will allow to fully write off -- listen to this -- the cost of equipment in the year they buy it. That is big. (Applause.) And that's instead of having to take deductions and deduct the cost over a long period of time. Now that's called incentive. That's called incentive. (Applause.) This will be tremendously important to help American businesses afford the heavy industrial machinery and other capital investments they need to grow big and grow strong.

Joining us today is John Gannon, the owner of a custom wood fencing and deck construction company in Indianapolis. John is the father of nine children, and recently celebrated his 35th wedding anniversary. Congratulations, John. (Applause.)

And John is in the fencing company, as you heard, and I'm just thinking -- I have to mention this -- you know, we have a fence around the White House. (Laughter.) We have a fence around the White House, and they want to build a new fence. And I figured, you know -- I'm pretty good at construction -- I figured, I don't know, maybe a million, maybe a million-and-a-half. And this has been taking place over a long period of time -- previous administrations.

So I said, "how much is the fence you're talking around the White House?" "Sir, the fence will cost approximately $50 million." I said, "What?" (Laughter.) I kid you not, and we have thousands of things like that. Thousands. We're going to get it all down, but think of that: $50 million. Now, I assume it's a strong fence. (Laughter.) Okay? So, John, do you think you could do it for slightly less than $50 million? I think he could take $49 off right now and he'd have plenty of profit. Right? Right, John? It's crazy. (Applause.) It's crazy. Never understand it, but we're working on it.

John says that a tax cut like we're proposing will make his business more competitive, allowing him to expand, hire more workers, and raise wages for his current employees. Right, John?

Also with us is Aaron Williams, a father of two who works in the field of information technology. Where's Aaron? Hello, Aaron. Hi. (Applause.) It's a good field.

Aaron has seen the disastrous effects of high -- and just literally, high corporate tax rates right up close and personal, as more and more high-tech jobs are shipped overseas. You've been watching it, Aaron. Right? All over. Like millions of other Americans, Aaron wants to bring those jobs back to the United States.

We're going to reduce the tax rate on American businesses so they can keep jobs in America, Aaron; create jobs in America; compete for workers in America; and raise wages right here in America. You're going to be in a much different position. Okay? (Applause.) Thank you. Tremendous incentives.

We want more products proudly stamped with those four beautiful words: Made in the USA. Right? (Applause.) Made in the USA.

Finally, our framework encourages American companies to bring back the trillions and trillions of dollars in wealth that's parked overseas. Our current tax system -- (applause) -- trillions. And by the way, for years I've been hearing it's 2.5 trillion. So I've been hearing this for about five years, so I assume it's much more. Right? But Democrats want to do it, and Republicans want to do it. For years -- who doesn't want to do it? They want to bring -- but they can't do it because it's so restrictive, and the taxes are so ridiculous. So they can't do it. So the money stays in other countries, and it's invested in other countries. We want to bring it back.

But think of it, it's one of the few things -- Democrats want it and Republicans want it. So they both want it, and yet for years they haven't been able to do it. Now we're doing it. We're doing things. (Applause.)

You know, it's one thing when we want a healthcare and they want a healthcare, and there's a dispute. But here's something everybody wants and they can't do it. So you can tell you, there's a broken system in D.C., but we're getting it fixed rather -- I think -- rather rapidly. You'll be seeing that over the next few months.

Our current tax system makes us one of the few developed nations in the world to punish our companies when they bring wealth earned overseas back into our country. We're punishing them for bringing the money back in.

As a result, corporations have parked many trillions of dollars in foreign countries, and many have incorporated abroad in order to avoid our punitive tax system altogether. And some companies actually leave our country because they have so much money overseas -- so much, it's an incredible amount -- that they move the company to get their money. We're going to let them bring the money back home. (Applause.)

Our framework will stop punishing companies for keeping their headquarters in the United States. We're punishing companies under our codes for being in the United States. We will impose a one-time low tax on returning money that is already offshore so that it can be brought back home to America where it belongs and where it can be put to work and work and work. (Applause.)

The framework I've just described represents a once-in-a-generation opportunity to reduce taxes, rebuild our economy, and restore America's competitive edge. Finally. (Applause.)

And I have to say, just before coming here we released some of the details of the tax and the tax reform and the tax cuts, and it has really received tremendous, tremendous reviews. And if Senator Donnelly doesn't approve it, because you know he's on the other side, we will come here. We will campaign against him like you wouldn't believe. (Applause.) I think they're going to approve it. I think we'll have -- actually, I think we'll have numerous Democrats come across because it's the right thing to do.

These reforms will be a dramatic change from a failed tax system that encourages American businesses to ship jobs to foreign countries that have much lower tax rates. It's what we can't do. Our competitors have much lower tax rates. But no longer. My administration strongly rejects this offshoring model, and we have embraced the new model. It's called -- the American model. (Applause.)

Under the American model, we are reducing burdens on our businesses as long as they do business in our country. That's what we want. We want them to do business in our country, not to leave our country like a number of firms from Indiana. Some made some great promises to me, but those promises are only being partially kept because they're incentivized to leave. But now they're going to be incentivized to stay. And if that doesn't work, then we'll get even tougher than that. Okay?

We want our companies to hire and grow in America and to raise wages for American workers, and to help rebuild American cities and towns. (Applause.)

That is how we will all succeed together and grow together as one team, one people, and one American family. We want it to happen here. (Applause.)

Tax reform has not historically been a partisan issue, and it does not have to be a partisan issue today. I really believe we're going to have numerous Democrats come over and sign because it's the right thing to do. I believe that it's the right thing to do, and I know many of them. And they're telling me it is the right thing to do. President Reagan's tax cuts were passed with significant bipartisan majorities at a time when there was a Democrat majority in the House and a Democrat Speaker -- Tip O'Neill.

Before that, Democrat President John F. Kennedy championed tax cuts that surged the economy and massively reduced unemployment. As President Kennedy very wisely said, "The single most important fiscal weapon available to strengthen the national economy is the federal tax policy. The right kind of tax cut at the right time" -- at the right time, this is the right time -- "is the most effective measure that this government could take to spur our economy forward." That was President Kennedy. (Applause.)

My fellow Americans, this is the right tax cut, and this is the right time. Democrats and Republicans in Congress should come together, finally, to deliver this giant win for the American people and begin middle-class miracle -- it's called a middle-class miracle, once again. It's also called a miracle for our great companies; a miracle for the middle class, for the working person.

I truly believe that many Democrats want to support our plan, and with enough encouragement from the American people, they will find the courage to do what is right for our great country. (Applause.) But they'll only do it if you, the American people, make your voices heard. Only if you tell Congress to give us a tax code that puts American jobs first. And that's what we're doing. (Applause.)

History has proven time and time again that there is no power on Earth more awesome than the will of the American people. That is why today I am asking all Americans -- Republican, Democrat, independent -- to join with me, and with each other to demand tax reform that will truly, truly, truly make America great again. (Applause.)

Call your congressmen. Call your senators. Let them know you're watching. Let them know you're waiting. Tell them that today is the day for decision. That now is the time to heal this self-inflicted economic wound. And that with their action, the future will belong to all of us.

If you demand it, the politicians will listen. They will answer, and they will act. And someday, many years from now, our children and our grandchildren will remember this moment in history as the time when ordinary Americans took control of their destiny and chose a future of American patriotism, prosperity, and pride. (Applause.)

With your help and your voice, we will bring back our jobs, we will bring back our wealth, and for every citizen across this land, we will bring back our great American dreams.

Thank you, God bless you, and God bless the United States of America. (Applause.)

END

4:13 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump at the 2017 Values Voter Summit
Date: Friday, October 13, 2017 11:46:02 AM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

October 13, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AT THE 2017 VALUES VOTER SUMMIT

Omni Shoreham Hotel
Washington, D.C.

10:22 A.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much, Tony. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you very much. (Applause.)

AUDIENCE: USA! USA! USA!

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. You know, I've been here before. (Laughter.) You do know that. Before the big day on November 8th, I was here. I want to thank Mark Meadows and all of the folks that have really made this possible. And, Tony, tremendous guy.

We have some incredible people that we love and that we're involved with. So we all know that. And I'm being followed by Mr. Bennett -- you know that, right? And I've been watching him say nice things about me before I knew him. Those are the ones I like -- (laughter) -- where they speak well of you before you know them. Right?

But I really want to thank everybody, and, Tony, for your extraordinary leadership of this organization. And I want to thank, also, Lawana, for your dedication to the faith community and to our nation. Work so hard.

It's great to be back here with so many friends at the 2017 Values Voter Summit, and we know what that means. (Applause.) We know what that means. America is a nation of believers, and together we are strengthened and sustained by the power of prayer. (Applause.)

As we gather for this tremendous event, our hearts remain sad and heavy for the victims of the horrific mass murder last week in Las Vegas. It was an act of pure evil.

But in the wake of such horror, we also witnessed the true character of our nation. A mother laid on top of her daughter to shield her from gunfire. A husband died to protect his beloved wife. Strangers rescued strangers, police officers -- and you saw that, all of those incredible police officers, how brave they were, how great they were running into fire. (Applause.) And first responders, they rushed right into danger.

Americans defied evil and hatred with courage and love. The men and women who risked their lives to save their fellow citizens gave proof to the words of this scripture: "The light shines in the darkness, and the darkness has not overcome it." (Applause)

All of America is praying for the wounded and the grieving, and we will be with them today and we will be with them forever. (Applause.)

Just want to finish by saying that -- really, and we understand it was so horrific to watch and so terrible -- but to those who lost the ones they love: We know that we cannot erase your pain, but we promise to never, ever leave your side. We are one nation, and we all hurt together, we hope together, and we heal together. (Applause.)

We also stand with the millions of people who have suffered from the massive fires, which are right now raging in California, and the catastrophic hurricanes along the Gulf Coast, in Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands. And I will tell you, I left Texas, and I left Florida, and I left Louisiana, and I went to Puerto Rico, and I met with the ~~president~~ [governor] of the Virgin Islands.

These are people that are incredible people. They've suffered gravely, and we'll be there. We're going to be there. We have, really -- it's not even a question of a choice. We don't even want a choice. We're going to be there as Americans, and we love those people and what they've gone through. And they're all healing, and their states and territories are healing, and they're healing rapidly.

In the wake of the terrible tragedies of the past several weeks, the American people have responded with goodness and generosity, and bravery. You've seen it. The heroism of everyday citizens reminds us that the true strength of our nation is found in the hearts and souls of our people.

When America is unified, no force on Earth can break us apart. (Applause.) We love our families. We love our neighbors. We love our country. Everyone here today is brought together by the same shared and timeless values. We cherish the sacred dignity of every human life. (Applause.)

We believe in strong families and safe communities. We honor the dignity of work. (Applause.) We defend our Constitution. We protect religious liberty. (Applause.) We treasure our freedom. We are proud of our history. We support the rule of law and the incredible men and women of law enforcement. (Applause.) We celebrate our heroes, and we salute every American who wears the uniform. (Applause.)

We respect our great American flag. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.

And we stand united behind the customs, beliefs and traditions that define who we are as a nation and as a people.

George Washington said that "religion and morality are indispensable" to America's happiness, really, prosperity and totally to its success. It is our faith and our values that inspires us to give with charity, to act with courage, and to sacrifice for what we know is right.

The American Founders invoked our Creator four times in the Declaration of Independence -- four times. (Applause.) How times have changed. But you know what, now they're changing back again. Just remember that. (Applause.)

Benjamin Franklin reminded his colleagues at the Constitutional Convention to begin by bowing their heads in prayer.

Religious liberty is enshrined in the very first amendment of the Bill of Rights. And we all pledge allegiance to -- very, very beautifully -- "one nation under God." (Applause.)

This is America's heritage, a country that never forgets that we are all -- all, every one of us -- made by the same God in Heaven. (Applause.)

When I came to speak with you last year, I made you a promise.

Well, one of the promises I made you was that I'd come back. See? (Applause.) And I don't even need your vote this year, right? That's even nicer. (Laughter.)

But I pledged that, in a Trump administration, our nation's religious heritage would be cherished, protected, and defended like you have never seen before. That's what's happening. That's what's happening. You see it every day. You're reading it.

So this morning I am honored and thrilled to return as the first sitting President to address this incredible gathering of friends -- so many friends. (Applause.) So many friends. And I'll ask Tony and all our people that do such a great job in putting this event together -- can I take next year off or not? (Laughter.) Or do I have to be back? I don't know.

AUDIENCE: No!

THE PRESIDENT: He's saying -- they're saying no. Lawana is saying no. That's means no. (Laughter.)

So I'm here to thank you for your support and to share with you how we are delivering on that promise, defending our shared values, and in so doing, how we are renewing the America we love.

In the last 10 months, we have followed through on one promise after another. (Applause.) I didn't have a schedule, but if I did have a schedule, I would say we are substantially ahead of schedule. (Applause.)

Some of those promises are to support and defend the Constitution. I appointed and confirmed a Supreme Court Justice in the mold of the late, great Justice Antonin Scalia, the newest member of the Supreme Court, Justice Neil Gorsuch. (Applause.)

To protect the unborn, I have reinstated a policy first put in place by President Ronald Reagan, the Mexico City Policy. (Applause.) To protect religious liberty, including protecting groups like this one, I signed a new executive action in a beautiful ceremony at the White House on our National Day of Prayer -- (applause) -- which day we made official. (Applause.)

Among many historic steps, the executive order followed through on one of my most important campaign promises to so many of you: to prevent the horrendous Johnson Amendment from interfering with your First Amendment rights. (Applause.) Thank you. We will not allow government workers to censor sermons or target our pastors or our ministers or rabbis. These are the people we want to hear from, and they're not going to be silenced any longer. (Applause.)

Just last week, based on this executive action, the Department of Justice issued a new guidance to all federal agencies to ensure that no religious group is ever targeted under my administration. It won't happen. (Applause.)

We have also taken action to protect the conscience rights of groups like the Little Sisters of the Poor. You know what they went through. (Applause.) What they went through -- they were going through hell. And then all of the sudden they won. They said, how did that happen? (Laughter.)

We want to really point out that the Little Sisters of the Poor and other people of faith, they live by a beautiful calling, and we will not let bureaucrats take away that calling or take away their rights. (Applause.)

We are stopping cold the attacks on Judeo-Christian values. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you very much. And something I've said so much during the last two years, but I'll say it again as we approach the end of the year. You know, we're getting near that beautiful Christmas season that people don't talk about anymore. (Laughter.) They don't use the word "Christmas" because it's not politically correct. You go to department stores, and they'll say, "Happy New Year" and they'll say other things. And it will be red, they'll have it painted, but they don't say it. Well, guess what? We're saying "Merry Christmas" again. (Applause.)

And as a Christmas gift to all of our hardworking families, we hope Congress will pass massive tax cuts for the American people. (Applause.) That includes increasing the child tax credit and expanding it to eliminate the marriage penalty. (Applause.) Because we know that the American family is the true bedrock of American life. So true. (Applause.) This is such an exciting event because we are really working very hard, and hopefully Congress will come through.

You saw what we did yesterday with respect to healthcare. It's step by step by step. (Applause.) And that was a very big step yesterday. Another big step was taken the day before yesterday. And one by one it's going to come down, and we're going to have great healthcare in our country. We're going to have great healthcare in our country. (Applause.) We're taking a little different route than we had hoped, because getting Congress -- they forgot what their pledges were. (Laughter.) So we're going a little different route. But you know what? In the end, it's going to be just as effective, and maybe it will even be better. (Applause.)

For too long, politicians have tried to centralize the authority among the hands of a small few in our nation's capital. Bureaucrats think they can run your lives, overrule your values, meddle in your faith, and tell you how to live, what to say, and how to pray. But we know that parents, not bureaucrats, know best how to raise their children and create a thriving society. (Applause.)

We know that faith and prayer, not federal regulation -- and, by the way, we are cutting regulations at a clip that nobody has ever seen before. Nobody. (Applause.) In nine months, we have cut more regulation than any President has cut during their term in office. So we are doing the job. (Applause.) And that is one of the major reasons, in addition to the enthusiasm for manufacturing and business and jobs -- and the jobs are coming back.

That's one of the major reasons -- regulation, what we've done -- that the stock market has just hit an all-time historic high. (Applause.) That just on the public markets we've made, since Election Day, $5.2 trillion in value. Think of that: $5.2 trillion. (Applause.) And as you've seen, the level of enthusiasm is the highest it's ever been, and we have a 17-year low in unemployment. So we're doing, really, some work. (Applause.)

We know that it's the family and the church, not government officials, that know best how to create strong and loving communities. (Applause.) And above all else, we know this: In America, we don't worship government -- we worship God. (Applause.) Inspired by that conviction, we are returning moral clarity to our view of the world and the many grave challenges we face.

This afternoon, in a little while, I'll be giving a speech on Iran, a terrorist nation like few others. And I think you're going to find it very interesting. (Applause.)

Yesterday, things happened with Pakistan, and I have openly said Pakistan took tremendous advantage of our country for many years, but we're starting to have a real relationship with Pakistan and they're starting to respect us as a nation again, and so are other nations. They're starting to respect the United States of America again, and I appreciate that. (Applause.) And I want to thank the leaders of Pakistan for what they've been doing.

In this administration, we will call evil by its name. (Applause.) We stand with our friends and allies, we forge new partnerships in pursuit of peace, and we take decisive action against those who would threaten our people with harm. (Applause.) And we will be decisive -- because we know that the first duty of government is to serve its citizens. We are defending our borders, protecting our workers, and enforcing our laws. You see it every single day like you haven't seen it in many, many years -- if you've seen it at all. (Applause.)

In protecting America's interests abroad, we will always support our cherished friend and partner, the State of Israel. (Applause.) We will confront the dangers that imperil our nation, our allies, and the world, including the threat of radical Islamic terrorism. (Applause.)

We have made great strides against ISIS -- tremendous strides. I don't know if you've seen what's going on, but tremendous strides against ISIS. They never got hit like this before. (Laughter.)

AUDIENCE MEMBER: (Inaudible.)

THE PRESIDENT: Stand up. Stand up. Let me see -- he's a rough guy. I can see it.

But they've been just ruthless and they've ruthlessly slaughtered innocent Christians, along with the vicious killing of innocent Muslims and other religious minorities. And we've made their lives very, very difficult -- believe me. (Applause.)

We've done more against ISIS in nine months than the previous administration has done during its whole administration -- by far, by far. (Applause.) And ISIS is now being dealt one defeat after another. We are confronting rogue regimes from Iran to North Korea, and we are challenging the communist dictatorship of Cuba and the socialist oppression of Venezuela. And we will not lift the sanctions on these repressive regimes until they restore political and religious freedom for their people. (Applause.)

All of these bad actors share a common enemy, the one force they cannot stop, the force deep within our souls, and that is the power of hope. That is why, in addition to our great military might, our enemies truly fear the United States. Because our people never lose faith, never give in, and always hope for a better tomorrow.

Last week, Melania and I were reminded of this in a powerful way when we traveled to Las Vegas. We visited a hospital where some of the survivors were recovering from absolutely horrific wounds. We met a young man named Brady Cook. He's 22 and a brand-new police officer. That night was Brady's second day in field training -- his second day as a policeman, can you believe that? But when the shooting began, he did not hesitate. He acted with incredible courage, rushing into the hail of bullets, and he was badly shot in the shoulder.

This is what Brady said: "I didn't expect it, but it's what I signed up for. When stuff goes down, I want to be there to face evil and to protect the good, innocent people that need it." And here's a young guy, great guy -- and second day. I said, Brady, don't worry about it, it's going to be easier from here. (Laughter and applause.) Brady is a hero, and he can't wait to get back on the job.

Several weeks before, when Hurricane Harvey hit Houston, a local furniture storeowner, who's known in Texas as "Mattress Mack," decided he had to help. When the rain began to flood the streets of the city, he sent out his furniture trucks to rescue the stranded. He brought them back to his stores, and gave them food and a clean, dry place to stay, even if it meant ruining countless dollars' worth of furniture.

As "Mattress Mack" put it, "My faith defines me, it's who I am." "We can afford [the cost]...what we can't afford" -- we can't -- and he said this very strongly, "what we can't afford is to cause people to lose hope."

In Brady and Mack, we see the strength of the American spirit. This spirit of courage and compassion is all around us, every day. It is the heartbeat of our great nation. And despite certain coverage, that beat is stronger than it's ever been before. You see right through it. (Applause.) That beat is stronger than it's ever been.

We see this spirit in the men and women who selflessly enlist in our armed forces and, really, who go out and risk their lives for God and for country. And we see it in the mothers and the fathers who get up at the crack of dawn; they work two jobs and sometimes three jobs. They sacrifice every day for the furniture and -- future of their children. They have to go out. They go out. They work. The future of their children is everything to them. They put it before everything. And they make sure that the future of their children has God involved in it. So important to them. (Applause.)

We see it in the church communities that come together to care for one another, to pray for each other, and to stand strong with each other in times of need.

The people who grace our lives, and fill our homes, and build our communities are the true strength of our nation, and the greatest hope for a better tomorrow.

As long as we have pride in our country, confidence in our future, and faith in our God, then America will prevail.

We will defeat every evil, overcome every threat, and meet every single challenge. We will defend our faith and protect our traditions. We will find the best in each other and in ourselves. We will pass on the blessings of liberty, and the glories of God, to our children. Our values will endure, our nation will thrive, our citizens will flourish, and our freedom will triumph.

Thank you to the Value Voter Summit. Such an incredible group of people you are. Thank you to all of the faithful here today. And thank you to the people of faith all across our nation and all over the world.

May God bless you. May God bless the United States of America. Thank you very much, everybody. (Applause.)

END

10:51 A.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump at the National Thanksgiving Turkey Pardoning Ceremony
Date: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 1:59:13 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

November 21, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AT THE NATIONAL THANKSGIVING TURKEY PARDONING CEREMONY

Rose Garden

1:07 P.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Well, thank you all for being here, and welcome to the White House. A very special place. On behalf of Melania, Barron, and the entire Trump family, I want to wish you and all Americans a very happy and blessed Thanksgiving. And I hear that beautiful turkey. (Laughter.)

We are here today to continue a wonderful American tradition. Today, in the spirit of Thanksgiving, I will grant a presidential pardon to a turkey. (Laughter.)

I'm especially pleased that we're joined for this great occasion by Carl Wittenburg, Chairman of the National Turkey Federation, along with his wife, Sharlene, and sons, Nate and Wyatt.

It was 70 years ago that the National Turkey Federation first presented the National Thanksgiving Turkey to President Harry Truman -- who, I might add, did not grant the pardon. He refused. He was a tough cookie. (Laughter.) Today, I'm going to be a much nicer President.

Over the past 10 months, Melania and I have had the pleasure of welcoming many, many special visitors to the great White House. We've hosted dozens of incredible world leaders, members of Congress, and, along the way, a few very strange birds. But we have yet to receive any visitors quite like our magnificent guest of honor today -- Drumstick. Hi, Drumstick. Oh, Drumstick, I think, is going to be very happy.

I'm pleased to report that, unlike millions of other turkeys at this time of the year, Drumstick has a very, very bright future ahead of him. Drumstick was raised on Carl and Sharlene's turkey farm in Douglas County, Minnesota, with the help of five young women from the Douglas County 4-H chapter who are here with us today. And I want to say, great work. Where are they? Please stand. Great job you've done. (Applause.) 4-H. That's great. Thank you.

Upon being pardoned, Drumstick and his friend, Wishbone, will live out their days at "Gobbler's Rest" -- beautiful place. It's custom-built; it's an enclosure on the campus of Virginia Tech. Tremendous school. There, they'll join Tater and Tot, the two turkeys pardoned last year by President Obama.

As many of you know, I have been very active in overturning a number of executive actions by my predecessor. However, I have been informed by the White House Counsel's Office that Tater and Tot's pardons cannot, under any circumstances, be revoked. So we're not going to revoke them. So, Tater and Tot, you can rest easy.

I'd also like to thank the National Turkey Federation for bringing along two other turkeys from Jaindl's Turkey Farm in Orefield, Pennsylvania -- the great state of Pennsylvania. We're donating these turkeys to Martha's Table, a truly fantastic charity right here in Washington D.C., which provides warm meals to people in need. They do a fantastic job.

Before we get to the pardon, I would like to take a moment to extend our very heartfelt special message: Thanks. Thanks, folks -- to the finest and bravest people in the entire world, our great men and women in uniform: the military, law enforcement, first responders. These are incredible people. So, thank you.

Many of you are always -- and you know your loved ones -- and you're far away, and you spend so much time away. This Thanksgiving, I want each of you to know that we're forever grateful for the incredible job and for the incredible sacrifices that you and your families make in defense of our nation, our freedom, and our truly great American flag.

I'd also like to express my thanks to the wonderful citizens of our country -- the people who care for our communities, raise America's children, uphold our laws and our values, and make this amazing land into our national home.

As we gather together with our families on Thanksgiving and give thanks for our many blessings, we are reminded of the national family to which we all belong as citizens of this incredible country.

This Thursday, as we give thanks for our cherished loved ones, let us also renew our bonds of trust, loyalty, and affection between our fellow citizens as members of a proud national family of Americans.

And now I think Drumstick and Wishbone would be very thankful if we would just get around to the pardon. They say, "Enough talk, please pardon us."

So I want to thank everybody for being here today and wish everybody a very, very happy Thanksgiving -- very special people a very special country.

Thank you very much. Thank you. (Applause.)

END

1:14 P.M. EST

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump at the Opening of the Mississippi Civil Rights Museum
Date: Saturday, December 09, 2017 8:37:12 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

December 9, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP

AT THE OPENING OF THE MISSISSIPPI CIVIL RIGHTS MUSEUM

Mississippi Civil Rights Museum

Jackson, Mississippi

11:05 A.M. CST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. Thank you. And I do love Mississippi. It's a great place.

And thank you, Governor Bryant, for that kind introduction and for honoring me with this invitation to be with you today.

I also want to recognize Secretary Ben Carson and his wonderful wife, Candy, for joining us. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you, Ben. Thank you, Candy.

I especially want to thank you, Justice Reuben Anderson -- great man with a great reputation -- even outside of the state of Mississippi. I have to tell you that. (Applause.) So, thank you. Thank you very much. And you are an inspiration to us all. Thank you, Judge.

And we're here today to celebrate the opening of two really extraordinary museums -- and I just took a tour -- the Mississippi State History Museum and the Mississippi Civil Rights Museum.

To all who helped make these wonderful places possible, we are truly grateful. We thank you. We admire you. It was hard work. It was long hours. It's a lot of money, and I know the Governor helped with that, and that was a great thing you've done. That's a great legacy, Phil, right there. Just that in itself. But it really is a beautiful, beautiful place. And it's an honor.

These museums are labors of love -- love for Mississippi, love for your nation, love for God-given dignity written into every human soul.

These buildings embody the hope that has lived in the hearts of every American for generations -- the hope in a future that is more just and more free.

The Civil Rights Museum records the oppression, cruelty and injustice inflicted on the African-American community, the fight to end slavery, to break down Jim Crow, to end segregation, to gain the right to vote, and to achieve the sacred birthright of equality here. (Applause.) And that's big stuff. That's big stuff. Those are very big phrases. Very big words.

Here, we memorialize the brave men and women who struggled to sacrifice, and sacrificed so much so that others might live in freedom.

Among those we honor are the Christian pastors who started the Civil Rights movement in their own churches preaching, like Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr. -- a man that we have studied and watched, and admired for my entire life -- that we're all made in the image of our Lord.

Students like James Meredith, who were persecuted for standing up for their right to the same education as every other American student. Young people, like the nine brave students who quietly sat. And they sat very stoically, but very proudly, at the Jackson Public Library in 1961. And, by the way, I would add the word "very bravely" -- they sat very bravely.

And, finally, martyrs like Sergeant Medgar Wiley Evers -- (applause) -- whose brother I just met at the plane, and who I liked a lot -- I have to -- stand up, please. Come on. Stand up. You were so nice. I appreciate it. (Applause.) You were so nice. Thank you very much.

Medgar joined the U.S. Army in 1943, when he was 17 years old. He fought in Normandy in the Second World War. And when he came back home to Mississippi, he kept fighting for the same rights and freedom that he had defended in the war. Mr. Evers became a civil rights leader in his community. He helped fellow African Americans register to vote, organize boycotts, and investigated grave injustices against very innocent people.

For his courageous leadership in the Civil Rights movement, Mr. Evers was assassinated by a member of the KKK in the driveway of his own home.

We are deeply privileged to be joined today by his incredible widow -- somebody that's loved throughout large sections of our country -- beyond this area. So I just want to say hello to Myrlie. Myrlie. Where is Myrlie? (Applause.) How are you, Myrlie? Thank you so much. Highly respected. Thank you. Thank you, Myrlie. And his brother, Charles. Thank you, Charles, again.

For decades, they have carried on Medgar's real legacy -- and a legacy like few people have and few people can even think of. And I want to thank them for their tremendous service to our nation.

Less than a month before Mr. Evers's death, he delivered a historic televised address to the people of Jackson on the issue of civil rights.

In that speech, he said the following: The African American "has been here in America since 1619. This country is his home. He wants to do his part to help make this city, state, and nation a better place for everyone, regardless of color or race."

Medgar Evers loved his family, his community, and his country. And he knew it was long past time for his nation to fulfill its founding promise: to treat every citizen as an equal child of God. (Applause.)

Four days after he was murdered, Sergeant Evers was laid to rest in Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors. In Arlington, he lies beside men and women of all races, backgrounds, and walks of life who have served and sacrificed for our country. Their headstones do not mark the color of their skin, but immortalize the courage of their deeds.

Their memories are carved in stone as American heroes. That is what Medgar Evers was. He was a great American hero. That is what the others honored in this museum were: true American heroes.

Today, we strive to be worthy of their sacrifice. We pray for inspiration from their example.

We want our country to be a place where every child, from every background, can grow up free from fear, innocent of hatred, and surrounded by love, opportunity, and hope.

Today, we pay solemn tribute to our heroes of the past and dedicate ourselves to building a future of freedom, equality, justice, and peace.

And I want to congratulate your great Governor, and all of the people in this room who were so inspirational to so many others to get out and get this done. This is an incredible tribute, not only to the state of Mississippi -- a state that I love, a state where I've had great success -- this is a tribute to our nation at the highest level.

This is a great thing you've done, and I want to congratulate you, and just say God bless you, and God bless America.

Thank you very much. Thank you. Thank you all very much.
(Applause.)

END

11:15 A.M. CST

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump at Visit with Survivors from the USS Arizona
Date: Friday, July 21, 2017 4:51:09 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

July 21, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
AT VISIT WITH SURVIVORS FROM THE USS ARIZONA

Oval Office

2:51 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. Today it's my distinct privilege to welcome to the White House three of the five living survivors of the USS Arizona. This is their first time to our nation's capital -- Ken, Lauren, and Don. I hope this trip does honor to you and your truly heroic service and we wanted to thank you all. That is so good. Thank you very much. Thank you for giving me the nicest hardware, plus a beautiful patch. Thank you.

For these three World War II veterans, December 7th, 1941, the brutal attack on Pearl Harbor is forever seared into their memories. It's also seared into America's memory because, on that grim day, this mighty nation was roused to defend freedom itself.

Each of them has a harrowing story of courage to share. They tell us of the American spirit under fire, and of the will of our people to defeat threats to our nation and to the civilized world.

One of the heroes with us today is Ken Potts. Ken was on the shore at Pearl Harbor when the attack began. Rather than flee from the fire and the chaos, he drove his small boat into the blazing hot water. He climbed aboard the sinking Arizona, and he carried off passengers one by one.

Ken, it is an honor to meet you, an American hero whose love of our country and love of his brothers was greater than his concern for his own safety. And he paid a very big price. He's gone through life in a little bit worse condition than he could have but he was very, very happy that he did it.

We're deeply grateful that you are here today with us nearly 76 years after that December morning. You are a living witness to history and a living example of true American courage. Ken, how are you doing? Are you all right?

MR. POTTS: All right.

THE PRESIDENT: You doing good?

MR. POTTS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: You're feeling good?

MR. POTTS: Yes.

THE PRESIDENT: You better believe it. (Laughter.) He looks good to me. Thank you very much. Thank you.

Lauren Bruner and Donald Stratton are also with us. They were on the deck of the USS Arizona, doing their duty, when the ship was engulfed by massive, massive flames. They were both fortunate enough to be rescued by another courageous hero, Joe George, whose daughter, Joe Ann, is with us today.

Joe was in a boat next to the USS Arizona, and when he saw several men still standing, he hurled a rope onto the deck of the ship at tremendous risk to himself. Lauren and Don clung to that rope and, hand over hand, they crossed through the 70 feet of flames, burning endlessly.

The story of Lauren and Don's devotion and duty doesn't end there. Despite suffering terrible burns, still with them today, they both served in the Navy for years after, fighting in some of the greatest Pacific engagements in World War II. Lauren and Don, thank you very much for your lifetime of service and your lifetime of sacrifice. Thank you very much. Thank you.

MR. STRATTON: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Feel pretty good, right? How long have you been married? Have long are you together? Listen to this one, folks.

MR. STRATTON: Sixty-seven years. My wife.

THE PRESIDENT: That's a long time. That's beautiful. That's beautiful. Thank you.

MR. STRATTON: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: That is beautiful.

As Lauren and Don will tell you, they're here because one man, Joe George, stopped at nothing to save them. Joe George rescued six men that day. He is no longer with us, but he will always honor and remember a man -- we will always do this -- whose courage knew no limits. His name will go down in history -- very brave, very strong.

Joe Ann, your father makes us all proud. Thank you for inspiring our nation by telling the story of your father -- a true patriot; a well-known man; a man that goes down, really, in the history with the Arizona; and a total hero. Thank you very much.

MS. TAYLOR: We're very proud of him.

THE PRESIDENT: You should be, right? That's so nice. Thank you for being here. I think you loved him, right?

MS. TAYLOR: I loved him very much. And I know you understand because you have your daughters.

THE PRESIDENT: I do.

MS. TAYLOR: You understand the relationship.

THE PRESIDENT: That's true. Thank you, Joe Ann. Appreciate it.

There are many remarkable things that I witness as President, but nothing can take the place of meeting heroes like those with us today. In them we see the strength of our nation, the courage of our men and women in uniform, the resolve to never accept failure, and the belief that justice will always triumph and that the America -- and the America that we know and love -- the United States -- will always prevail. We will always prevail.

And by the way, we're building it up bigger -- you know this. We're building it up bigger and stronger and better than ever before. Our military is very proud again, aren't they?

LIEUTENANT PREVITS: That's right.

THE PRESIDENT: You see what's happening.

LIEUTENANT PREVITS: Indeed.

THE PRESIDENT: They look at the day's budget, and so they're seeing lots of ships, right? Lots of planes. Lots of great equipment.

LIEUTENANT PREVITS: Yes, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Ken, Lauren, Don, and Joe Ann, I want to thank you for reminding us who we are, where we come from, and why we never, ever give up. Your story gives us all inspiration to do the right thing for our country, our countrymen, and for our God. Thank you very much for being here. Thank you very much. It's a great honor. Thank you. Thank you all.

Q Mr. President, what are you trying to accomplish with your staff shakeups today? Can you explain to us what you're trying to accomplish?

THE PRESIDENT: Make America great again.

You want to hear this, fellas? It's very interesting. Very interesting. Very beautiful statement. Very beautiful statement.

MR. STRATTON: All the people we met today and all the people who were lined along -- that we've been with, you could tell, with our military and everything, that this country is coming together again, and we're going to be there.

THE PRESIDENT: That's good. And now I know why you married this guy such a long time. (Laughter.) That's beautiful. Thank you.

I could never have said it that well, believe me. (Laughter.) Believe me. Thank you. That's so nice.

END

2:59 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump Before Marine One Departure
Date: Wednesday, October 25, 2017 3:19:52 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release
October 25, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
BEFORE MARINE ONE DEPARTURE

South Lawn

12:50 P.M. EDT

Q What's your reaction to Democrats paying for the dossier?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think it's very sad what they've done with this fake dossier. It was made up, and I understand they paid a tremendous amount of money, and Hillary Clinton always denied it. The Democrats always denied it. And now only because it's going to come out in a court case, they said, yes, they did it. They admitted it, and they're embarrassed by it.

But I think it's a disgrace. It's just really -- it's a very sad -
- it's a very sad commentary on politics in this country.

Q Do you know which Republicans helped fund that?

Q Mr. President, (inaudible) Senator Bob Corker and his chairmanship?

THE PRESIDENT: I don't think so. I think it's fine the way it is. We have actually great unity in the Republican Party. Yesterday, I was --

Q (Inaudible) Bob Corker and Jeff Flake?

THE PRESIDENT: That's okay. Look, you know they have to do their thing. We have great unity. If you look at what happened yesterday at the meeting, we had, I guess, virtually every senator, including John McCain. We had a great conversation yesterday -- John McCain and myself -- about the military.

I think we had a -- I called it a lovefest. It was almost a lovefest. Maybe it was a lovefest. But we -- standing ovations. There is great unity. If you look at the Democrats with Bernie Sanders and Hillary Clinton, that's a mess. There's great unity in the Republican Party.

Q (Inaudible) this country is in the gutter right now. Do you agree with that? Do you bear any responsibility for that?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think it's sad. But I think to a large extent, in all due respect, I think the media causes a lot of it. Fake stories are being reported. A lot of bad things are being reported that aren't true, and I think to a certain extent, maybe I can blame the media.

But politics is a rough business. There's no question about it. I will say this: I think the Republican Party has a pretty good unity. When I looked at that room yesterday at lunch -- and you know, and you reported on it very well, Kristen. You gave it a very good report. The fact is there was tremendous unity in that room, and we're really unified. We're really unified on what we want to do.

We want tax cuts for the middle class. We want tax cuts for businesses to produce jobs. There's great unity.

Yes.

Q What about Senator Flake saying you are a danger to democracy?

THE PRESIDENT: Look, he was against me from before he ever knew me. He wrote a book about me before I ever met him, before I ever heard his name. His poll numbers in Arizona are so low that he couldn't win, and I don't blame him for leaving. I think he did the right thing for himself.

But if you know, long before he ever knew me, during the campaign, even before the campaign -- I mean, he came out with this horrible book, and I said, who is this guy?

In fact, I remembered the first time I saw him on television I had not really been -- nobody knew me in terms of politics. But the first time I saw him on television, I said, I assume he's a Democrat. Is he a Democrat? They said he's a Republican. I said, that's impossible.

So, look, his poll numbers are terrible. He's done terribly for the great people of Arizona, a state that likes Donald Trump very much as even you will admit. And he would have never won. In fact, even in the primary, he's way down in the primary. So he did the smart thing for himself. This way he can get out somewhat gracefully. But --

Q What about the comments that you're (inaudible).

THE PRESIDENT: Well, he's saying that -- he's saying that because he has nothing else to say.

But I do think this -- I do think this: I wish him well. I really believe he's going to do the right thing for the country. He's going to vote for tax cuts because we desperately need tax cuts to put our people back to work. We need tax cuts also to be able to compete with other countries.

Q (Inaudible) Bob Corker -- "liddle" Bob Corker?

THE PRESIDENT: You know what, I hope Bob -- and I really believe that Bob Corker is going to do the right thing also.

Yes, go ahead.

Q (Inaudible), Mr. President -- do you feel like that's (inaudible)?

THE PRESIDENT: I can't hear you. I can't -- what? Say it again.

Q (Inaudible.)

THE PRESIDENT: Well, Senator Flake did vote with me. I understand it was about 91 or even more than that. So from that standpoint, good.

No, I think I'll be boosted in Arizona because he's very unpopular. I think the fact that he did it the way he did it probably -- I mean, I'm very high in Arizona. I love the people; they like me. They like security at the border. You know, all of the things.

But I think I'm probably helped greatly in Arizona by what happened with Senator Flake.

Q (Inaudible.)

THE PRESIDENT: I don't think they'd do that. I really know that they want tax cuts. They know we need it. We need it for the country, we need it for the people, we need it for the middle class, we need it for jobs. I don't think they'd do that. I really don't.

I know them well enough. I don't know Flake very well, but I know Bob Corker. I think they really would do it. I think they feel they have to do it for the country.

Q (Inaudible.)

THE PRESIDENT: Say it?

Q (Inaudible) Democrats?

THE PRESIDENT: I think we're going to get some Democrat votes, yeah. I do believe -- I haven't started the process, but I believe that there are certain Democrats that, if they don't vote for these massive tax cuts for business, for jobs, and for the middle class, they will lose their races in '18.

Q Mr. President, should you be more civil (inaudible)?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think the press makes me more uncivil than I am. You know, people don't understand -- I went to an Ivy League college, I was a nice student, I did very well, I'm a very intelligent person.

The fact is, I think -- I really believe -- I think the press creates a different image of Donald Trump than the real person.

Q In that vein, Mr. President, would you ever apologize to Sergeant La David Johnson's wife?

Q When is it okay for you to (inaudible) your punches --

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think it's always okay -- when somebody says something about you that's false, I think it's always okay to counterpunch or to fight back.

John.

Q You have talked, Mr. President, about the idea that any changes to tax-free contributions to 401(k)s are off the table. That was the source of your spat --

THE PRESIDENT: I wanted to end that quickly. 401(k)s, to me, are very important. And they're important because that's one of the great benefits to the middle class. I didn't want that to go too far. That's why I ended it very quickly.

Q But Kevin Brady, who is the Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said this morning it could be on the table.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, maybe it is, and maybe we'll use it as negotiating. But trust me, that's one of the great things. You know, there are certain elements of deals you don't want to negotiate with. 401(k)s -- and Kevin knows it, and I think Kevin Brady is fantastic, but he knows how important 401(k)s are.

Q You told me last week you thought that the uranium sale to Russia was one of the big stories of the decade. Three congressional committees are now looking at that. We haven't heard you comment on it since those investigations were launched.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think the uranium sale to Russia and the way it was done, so underhanded, with tremendous amounts of money being passed -- I actually think that's Watergate, modern age.

Q Mr. President, what more do you want to know about the mission in Niger? And what have you asked the Pentagon to tell you and tell the country?

THE PRESIDENT: Say it again, please.

Q What more do you want to know about the mission in Niger? And what have you asked the Pentagon to tell you and tell the country about what went wrong?

THE PRESIDENT: I can't --

Q What more do you want to know about the mission in Niger --

Q And what went wrong, and what do you want the country to know about that.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, we're going to look at it. Now, I have to say, we are decimating ISIS in the Middle East. What's happening is, they'll go to parts of Africa, they'll go to other places. When they get there, we meet them. It's a dangerous business -- I have to say, it's a dangerous business. So what --

Q (Inaudible.)

THE PRESIDENT: No, I didn't. Not specifically. But I have generals that are great generals. These are great fighters. These are warriors and --

Q You gave them authority to do this mission.

THE PRESIDENT: I gave them authority to do what's right so that we win. That's the authority they have. I want to win and we're going to win, and we're beating ISIS very badly. You look at what's happened in the Middle East -- we have done more in eight months than the previous administration has done in many years.

Now, what happens is, you decimate them and that's all we've done. We have decimated ISIS in the Middle East. They go to Africa, they go to places. When they get there, we meet them there. That's what goes on. It's a tough business. It's a tough war, but we are winning it. And you know what? We're going to continue winning it.

With that being said, my generals and my military, they have decision-making ability. As far as the incident that we're talking about, I've been seeing it just like you've been seeing it. I've been getting reports. They have to meet the enemy and they meet them tough, and that's what happens.

Q Did Sergeant Johnson's wife (inaudible). Would you ever apologize to her?

THE PRESIDENT: I was extremely nice to her. She sounds like a lovely lady. I've never seen her. I've never met her, but she sounds like a lovely lady. But I was extremely nice to her. I was extremely courteous, as I was to everyone else.

You know, it's interesting, you folks have called many people that I spoke to. Everybody has said unbelievable, good thing about me, but you never report that.

Q We reported that.

Q Mr. President, but she was really upset by your phone call --

THE PRESIDENT: Did you report it? Did you report it?

Q We have reported that. You've talked about the --

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you.

Q You're welcome. But what about your --

THE PRESIDENT: I can only say this: I was really nice to her. I respect her. I respect her family. I certainly respect La David, who - I, by the way, called La David right from the beginning. Just so you understand, they put a chart in front -- "La David." It says, La David Johnson.

So I called right from the beginning. There's no hesitation. One of the great memories of all time. There was no hesitation. I think she's a fantastic woman. I was extremely nice to her, extremely respectful.

Q You made four phone calls to four different families that day. Did you say anything different to Myeshia Johnson than you did to any of the other three families?

THE PRESIDENT: I would say, basically, we talked condolence. I mean, it's all about condolence, it's about warmth. In many cases you listen, because in so many cases -- one of the families, they were saying, yes, he was a great football star.

And honestly, they pour their heart out, John. It's the hardest calls. They pour their heart out. But I am always -- and look, you people have called many people that I've spoken to, and every one of them has said I couldn't have been nicer. Now, it's a rough time for these people. I mean, how tough is it? There's nothing tougher. But I have such respect for those families. Nobody has more respect than I do -- nobody.

Q In the budget deal in December, do you want DACA in that?

THE PRESIDENT: We're looking at DACA. We have to get something for it, but we are looking at DACA. And we'll see what happens. I would love to do a DACA deal, but we have to get something very substantial for it, including the wall, including security, including a strong border. We have to be able to stop drugs from pouring into our nation.

Q On taxes, sir, you talk about what the American people will get out of your tax plan. Why not tell them how it will affect you by releasing your taxes?

THE PRESIDENT: The tax plan is going to be incredible for this country. It's going to bring back jobs, it's going to cut taxes tremendously. We're going to bring back $4 trillion, I think at least from overseas. That money is going to be put back to work in our country instead of other countries. The tax cut is going to be massive. It's going to keep companies from leaving our country. So important.

Q Have any of your family members or advisors been interviewed by the special counsel?

THE PRESIDENT: Not that I know of, no.

Q Have you been contacted --

THE PRESIDENT: And I have to say, the whole Russian thing is what it's turned out to be. This was the Democrats coming up with an excuse for losing an election. It's an election that's very hard for a Democrat to lose because the Electoral College is set in such a way that it's very hard to lose that election for a Democrat. They lost it. They lost it very badly and very easily.

I mean, you look at the votes; it was 306 to what -- 223 or something. They lost it by a lot. They didn't know what to say, so they made up the whole Russia hoax. Now it's turning out that the hoax has turned around. And you look at what's happened with Russia, and you look at the uranium deal, and you look at the fake dossier. So that's all turned around.

Q (Inaudible), yes or no?

THE PRESIDENT: No, not at all.

Q (Inaudible.)

THE PRESIDENT: No. We have a very good relationship. Honestly, when you look at -- when you take a look at what's happened with Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders, and the hatred and the division and the animosity -- I'll tell you what, honestly, the Republicans are very, very well united.

Q Opioids --

THE PRESIDENT: We're going to have a big meeting on opioids tomorrow. We're going to be doing a very, very important meeting sometime in the very short -- the very near future on opioids, in terms of declaring a national emergency, which gives us power to do things that you can't do right now.

Q This Fusion GPS investigation began on the Republican side of things during the primary. Do you have any idea who it was who was collecting opposition data on you?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, they say it began with the Republicans. I think I would know, but I won't say. It'll be determined. It'll be determined.

Look, Hillary would have never announced it was them, except for this great court case that's going on where the judge was going to reveal it. So they figured, we'll do it first. They're very embarrassed by it. It's a disgrace. Yes, it might have started with the Republicans early on in the primaries. I think I would know, but let's find out who it is. I'm sure that will come out.

Q Do you know who those Republicans are?

THE PRESIDENT: I think I would have, if I were to guess, I have one name in mind.

Q What's the name?

THE PRESIDENT: It will probably be revealed.

Q The DMZ. Yes or no, are you going? Yes or no?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I'd rather not say but you'll be surprised.

END
P.M. EDT

1:05

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump Before Marine One Departure
Date: Friday, October 13, 2017 2:40:56 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

October 13, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
BEFORE MARINE ONE DEPARTURE

South Lawn

1:38 P.M. EDT

Q What do you say to critics who say that you ending the CSRs, the subsidies under Obamacare, will throw the markets into chaos?

THE PRESIDENT: What it's going to do is it's going to be time to negotiate healthcare that's going to be good for everybody. That money is a subsidy for insurance companies. Take a look at their stocks. Look where they are. They're going through the roof, from past -- I don't know about today. But the insurance companies that made a fortune, that money was a subsidy and almost, you could say, a payoff for insurance companies.

And what we have to do is come up with great healthcare. Now, that's what I did partially yesterday; that's going to cover a big segment. But now, for the rest, we have to come up with great -- whether it's going to be block grants or something else. And we just about have the votes.

Now, if the Democrats were smart, what they'd do is come and negotiate something where people could really get the kind of healthcare that they deserve, being citizens of our great country.

Q Mr. President, on the Iranian nuclear deal, why not just scrap it altogether now? You threatened to do so. Why not just end it now, withdraw?

THE PRESIDENT: Because we'll see what happens over the next short period of time. And I can do that instantaneously. I like a two-step process much better.

Q (Inaudible) healthcare?

THE PRESIDENT: Because I think what we'll do is we'll be able to renegotiate so that everybody gets to. We just took care of a big chunk, and now we'll take care of the other chunk. What would be nice -- if the Democratic leaders could come over to the White House, we'll negotiate some deal that's good for everybody. That's what I'd like. But they're always a block vote against everything. They're like obstructionists. If they came over, maybe we could make a deal. But the subsidy is really a subsidy to the insurance company. That's not going to people; that's making the insurance companies rich.

Q Mr. President, you had said you were going to rip the Iran deal up, and you called it the worst ever.

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I may do that. I may do that. The deal is terrible. So what we've done is, through the certification process, we'll have Congress take a look at it, and I may very well do that. But I like a two-step process much better.

John.

Q The moves that you've made on Obamacare here, with the executive order yesterday and then removing the subsidies --

THE PRESIDENT: We have great support.

Q -- is that a way for you to put pressure on Democrats and say, look, you're going to lose it -- come to the table and negotiate with them?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, they've already lost a big chunk, because as you know that's a big chunk and it's very popular. And you will have millions and millions of people sign up under that. You could say -- I mean, I'm not doing that consciously. I will say this, John -- I will say that the Democrats should come to me; I would even go to them. Because I'm only interested in one thing: getting great healthcare for this country. That was a big chunk. And as far as the subsidy is concerned, I don't want to make the insurance companies rich. If you look at their stock price over the last number of years, take a look at what's happened with those insurance companies. They're making a fortune by getting that kind of money.

Q How long will you give Rex Tillerson to get this new deal? And are strikes on Iran still a possibility if you don't get what you want?

THE PRESIDENT: We will see what happens with Iran. We're very unhappy with Iran. They have not treated us with the kind of respect that they should be treating. They should have thanked Barack Obama for making that deal. They were gone. They were economically gone. He infused $100 [billion] to $150 billion into their economy. He gave them $1.7 billion in cash. And they should be, "Thank you, President Obama." They didn't say that.

Q On opioids, your wife is with you. She's been talking about the opioid crisis. You said you would declare a national emergency more than two months ago. What's taking so long?

THE PRESIDENT: We are studying national emergency right now. Believe it or not, doing national emergency, as you understand, is a very big statement.

We will be doing that. My wife, Melania, who happens to be right here, finds that subject to be of such vital importance, and she's very much involved. And as you know, she's on the committee and really wants to be involved in that process.

Q Have you spoken with Theresa May or Emmanuel Macron about the Iranian Deal?

THE PRESIDENT: Yes.

Q What did they say to you? What did you say to them?

THE PRESIDENT: They would love me to stay in, only for one reason: Look at the kind of money that's being sent. You know, Iran is spending money in various countries.

And I've always said it, and I say to them: Don't do anything. Don't worry about it. Take all the money you can get. They're all friends of mine.

Actually, Emmanuel called up, and he talked to me. And I said, look, Emmanuel, they just gave Renault a lot of money. Take their money; enjoy yourselves. But we'll see what happens.

Iran has to behave much differently.

Q You promised that you would help people who are struggling. The CSR payment looks like it will hurt low-income people.

THE PRESIDENT: The CSR payments, if you take a look at CSR payments, that money is going to insurance companies to prop up insurance companies.

Q To help lower-income people.

THE PRESIDENT: That money is going to insurance companies to lift up their stock price, and that's not what I'm about.

Take a look at who those insurance companies support, and I guarantee you one thing: It's not Donald Trump.

Q So you don't think it will raise premiums at all?

Q Mr. President, the JCPOA fix that's being floated by Senators Cotton, Corker, and Rubio that would remove the sunset provisions, strengthen IAEA inspections, do some other things. Does that meet the bar for you, or do you need more?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think we're going to take a look, John, at what happens. We're going to see what happens. We're going to see what they come back with. They may come back with something that's very satisfactory to me, and if they don't, within a very short period of time, I'll terminate the deal.

And as far as Puerto Rico is concerned, I love Puerto Rico.

Q (Inaudible) going down to Puerto Rico, and saying you won't stay there forever. You didn't say that about Texas or Louisiana. You said it about Puerto Rico. Why?

THE PRESIDENT: We've done a great job. We've done a great job in Puerto Rico. Puerto Rico has to get the infrastructure going. We're helping them with their infrastructure.

But most important on Puerto Rico is their electric plants are essentially gone. Now, they were gone before the hurricane; they were in bankruptcy, they owed $9 billion -- I think it was $9 billion. But the plants, as you know, were -- the electric was a disaster. After the storm, even more so.

We have to help them get the plants rebuilt. That's a long-term project, unfortunately. But we have to help them.

But I love the people of Puerto Rico, and we're going to help them.

Q On Puerto Rico, Mr. President, do you want to make sure that there remains a very bright line between hurricane relief and debt relief so that the two don't become so mingled?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, you have to watch -- you can't say there was a hurricane, and now we're going to spend X dollars. And we also have to do something with all the money that's been invested, mostly private. The government is going to have to become before that money, because the government is going to want security. They're going to have to become before that money. And I'm sure we'll be able to work that out.

But the Puerto Rican people have tremendous spirit. When I was there and I looked at the way that -- what they have to go through. They have a lot of problems. We're going to help them straighten it out.

Q Could you clarify where you are on North Korea? You raised some eyebrows when you said this is "the calm before the storm." What's next on North Korea?

THE PRESIDENT: We're going to see what happens with North Korea. That's all I can say. We're going to see what happens. We're totally prepared for numerous things. We are going to see what happens with North Korea.

I will say, look, if something can happen where we negotiate, I'm always open to that. But if it's going to be something other than negotiation, believe me, we are ready, more so than we have ever been.

Thank you very much. Thank you.

END

1:46 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump in an Update from Disaster Relief Organizations on Hurricane Harvey Recovery Efforts
Date: Friday, September 01, 2017 5:18:30 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the President

For Immediate Release

September 1, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
IN AN UPDATE FROM DISASTER RELIEF ORGANIZATIONS ON HURRICANE HARVEY RECOVERY EFFORTS

Oval Office

1:28 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. The First Lady and I are pleased to welcome Gail McGovern of the American Red Cross, David Hudson of the Salvation Army, and Kevin Ezell of Southern Baptist Disaster Relief. These people have been absolutely incredible at what they've done.

I would like to thank them, and their staff and volunteers for the incredible work they're doing and in helping people affected by Hurricane Harvey. Sounds like a very innocent name but it's not an innocent hurricane, that I can tell you. It's of epic proportion.

These organizations and the many other non-profits involved represent the generosity, determination, and unbreakable spirit of the American people.

And Mike Pence was there yesterday and represented his country so well, in the love and the care, and I had so many just great comments about your visit, so I appreciate it.

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Thank you Mr. President.

THE PRESIDENT: When a disaster strikes, they work to help others in the time of need, which was over the last week, believe me. They've already provided tens of thousands of displaced Gulf Coast residents with meals, water, shelter, fresh blankets, and clean clothing.

When one American suffers -- and I say this quite a bit, especially lately, when you see what's going on -- we all suffer. We're one American family brought together in times of tragedy by the unbreakable bonds of love and loyalty that we have for one another. And there is a great love and a great loyalty in this country, and I think we've all seen it, maybe more so than ever before over the last four days. So I think we really have seen it. Nowhere is our unity more evident than in the actions of our volunteer and charitable organizations that rally to their neighbors' aid when disaster strikes.

The people of Texas and Louisiana were hit very hard by a historic flood. In their response, they have taught us all a lesson -- a very, very powerful lesson: There was no outbreak in crime. There was an outbreak of compassion only -- real beautiful, strong compassion. And they've really inspired us as a nation. To be honest, they've inspired the world, because the world is watching.

We're pleased to receive an update from Gail, David, and Kevin on the work of the Red Cross, Salvation Army, and the Southern Baptist Disaster Relief. The federal government is on the ground bringing in significant resources to bear. And I want to assure these organizations and the others involved that we will continue to coordinate with them and bring all of the relief and the comfort and everything else that we absolutely can to the Gulf Coast.

And I want to also thank the Governor and Lieutenant Governor of Texas. They have been outstanding. Just the coordination and the level of relationship has been, I think, pretty much unprecedented. So I just want to thank them. I want to thank all of the folks working on the ground for the administration. Tom Bossert is here today. Tom, thank you very much, we appreciate it. Every American heart is with the people of Texas and Louisiana. They're strong and resilient, and they have really overcome.

And we're in the process of just about, where I can I say, overcome this horrible devastation. Now it's going back to work, but the Coast Guard in particular, I have to also thank. They saved probably thousands of lives -- we were just talking about it -- going onto seas that very few people would want to be on in the worst of times, when they were saving a lot of people out there.

Together, we will help them all recover from this tragedy. We'll renew our hope and community, and we'll renew our hope and rebuild those homes, and businesses, and schools, and places of worship where the strength and vigor that comes from the love within our souls.

And I just authorized and signed a proclamation for prayer. And we're going to have, on Sunday, a prayer Sunday. And, Mike, that was something that was very special, just took place. So I think it's going to be something to see and to witness. It's been a long time. And our country deserves it right now.

I want to thank my wife, Melania, the First Lady. She's been so involved in this and helping so much. And so I want to thank you. Would you like to say a few words to start off?

MRS. TRUMP: It's great to be here with amazing people, and I want to thank all the volunteers all across the country dedicated to help to Texas -- and fantastic job. And we're going tomorrow to visit them, and I just want to tell them to be strong and everything will be okay.

THE PRESIDENT: See, I didn't tell her I was going to do that, Stewart. And she did a great job. (Laughter.) But she really has; she's been so dedicated to this. This has very much affected her, what's happened in Texas and neighboring states, frankly.

So I want thank you, First Lady. Thank you.

Salvation Army.

COMMISSIONER HUDSON: Yes, well, we're first of all very appreciative of this opportunity, appreciative of our partners in service. We are working hand-in-hand with groups like the Red Cross, where they provide shelter for people, and we're able to provide meals. And even though we're limited in being able to get in to a lot of the impacted areas, we've already served hundreds of thousands of meals, and literally millions of meals will be served.

And we can only do this as we partner together. And as I've told my coworkers, this is a time that we're all Texans. And no matter where you're from, we're all about serving Americans in need. And I'd like to thank you, Mr. President, the Red Cross, and the Baptists and all the other agencies that partner with us. Together we can make a difference.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. That's very nice.

Southern Baptists.

MR. EZELL: We're three different organizations, but we work best as one. And the joy of this is we really do lock arms and have the capacity to feed over 400,000 people a day. And, Mr. President, thank you for FEMA. They've been incredible through this. We've gone through many disasters, and they've done just a fantastic job stepping to the plate and being prepared and allowing us to volunteer (inaudible).

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I think we should thank Brock Long and all of the people at FEMA, and the people at Homeland and, I have to say General Kelly, who has been so much involved. As you know he just left, and he's now in the White House. But his spirit and anything else that's been involved over the last few weeks getting ready. Because, really, this has been probably now almost two weeks since we felt that it was probably going to hit that area. But General Kelly has done a fantastic job. And Elaine Duke has been terrific. So I want to thank all of our folks.

Red Cross, how are we doing?

MS. MCGOVERN: Sir, first of all, our hearts go out the people of Texas, and on behalf of the entire American Red Cross, so many people have lost everything and presented in our shelters with just the clothes on their back. I visited one of the shelters outside of Austin, and it housed about 200 people. And I had the opportunity to call to all the families -- everyone from a six-month-old baby to a 6'8" man -- and everybody in between.

And you heard stories of heartbreak and heartache. But the one thing that I hadn't seen in the nine years that I've been with the American Red Cross is the incredible resiliency of the American people. They are bound and determined to build back, and there are about 40,000 people in our shelters right now across the state of Texas. And our volunteers are pouring in, giving them comfort, hope. We served about 390,000 meals and snacks. And the incredible thing is our partners are there. They are getting the hot meals into our hands so that we can serve them.

Government has just been phenomenal. And when we had a hard time getting our volunteers in, the city gave us dump trucks so we could get volunteers and cots in. The Department of Defense gave us high-water vehicles -- 20 of them -- so we could break in and bring needed supplies.

So I'm just so appreciative of the teamwork. I'm appreciative of your support. And again, our hearts go out to the people of Texas.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. Very nice. 390,000 --

MS. MCGOVERN: Meals and snacks.

THE PRESIDENT: And that's up until now. Just up to -- as of last night.

THE PRESIDENT: You'll be doubling that. That's a tremendous job.

MS. MCGOVERN: I'm quite sure we will.

THE PRESIDENT: Tremendous job.

Mike, would you like to say something?

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Just, Mr. President, having -- I just returned from southeast Texas yesterday. We heard the resilience, the character, and the faith of the people of east Texas. We heard their gratitude to you and the First Lady for the administration's support, for your compassion, your admiration for our first responders from FEMA, down to local leadership.

But I also heard, Mr. President, about their gratitude for volunteer organizations that have literally been there from the very outset of this storm. And I want to thank you and the First Lady for taking the opportunity to call attention to the Salvation Army and the Red Cross and Southern Baptist Disaster Relief.

Anyone looking on should know that while the federal government is going to be there at your direction, we'll be seeking resources from the Congress to make sure that disaster relief is available for individuals and businesses. Literally, the work of meeting people's human needs each and every day will take all of us, and these volunteer organizations need resources and they need people.

And I would just add, Mr. President, that anyone looking on can go to NVOAD.org -- it's our website where all these organizations are listed. People can find out how they can be supportive of national volunteer organizations that at this very hour, and for weeks and months ahead, will be coming alongside families as they rebuild their lives.

THE PRESIDENT: That's good. Thank you, Mike. Thank you very much.

This is just some of the locations that over a very short period of time, they and others have managed to go to some of these locations, as you know very well. Some of the press has been there, and I will say they are devastated. Two days ago there was water like nobody has ever seen before. I guess in the history of our country we've never had an amount of water like we've had. And yet you were able to occupy all of these different locations and take care of people -- you and the others.

So we want to just thank you. That's really a special, special job. Thank you all very much. Appreciate it.

Q Do you think DACA is illegal? Do you think DACA is illegal? (Inaudible) later today, possibly?

THE PRESIDENT: We'll be releasing on DACA sometime over the weekend, probably Sunday, Saturday. Latest will be Monday. Great feeling for DACA.

Q Do you think it's illegal? DACA is illegal -- is that your sense?

Q Sir, will you be making the spending request today?

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, we'll be making a request. Absolutely. For the state of Texas, yes -- and Louisiana.

And tomorrow I'm going to Louisiana with the First Lady, and Texas. So it will be Texas, Louisiana.

Thank you, everybody.

END

1:40 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump in Meet-and-Greet with Vietnam War Veterans
Date: Friday, November 10, 2017 3:47:55 AM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

November 10, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
IN MEET-AND-GREET WITH VIETNAM WAR VETERANS

Hyatt Regency Da Nang Resort and Spa
Da Nang, Vietnam

2:15 P.M. ICT

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Hello, everybody. And I assume that by now you're pretty exhausted. The media must be absolutely exhausted, looking to go home.

But we have had a tremendous time. And we're in Vietnam tomorrow, we go to the Philippines, and then back to the United States. We'll be landing in Washington. And I think we've had a tremendous period of time, starting in Japan, going to South Korea, going to China.

Last night's celebration in China was something, the likes of which few people have ever seen before. So we've had a very exciting time.

I'm very honored to be representing our country, and I will say that, when you speak of honors, one of my great honors is to present the people standing right behind me -- great, great warriors and veterans of the Vietnam War.

Our veterans are a national treasure, and I thank them all for their service, sacrifice, and patriotism.

To each of you with me today, you are the heroes who fulfill your duty to our nation. And each of you, under the most difficult conditions, did what you had to do, and you did it well.

My administration, as you all know, is committed to rebuilding our military and honoring the hard work and sacrifices of all veterans. We're extremely proud of what we've done with the Veterans Administration. Dr. Shulkin has done an amazing job with choice and accountability and so many other things that we are doing and in the process of doing. The Veterans Administration is a whole different place.

Our accountability efforts in Vietnam are very, very important to all of us. We will not rest until all of the 1,253 missing veterans are returned home. I want to thank the government of Vietnam for their assistance in our efforts.

Today, I'm signing a proclamation to honor the veterans of the Vietnam War. This is part of the ongoing 13-year commemoration of their sacrifice for freedom. And I just want to thank these seven very brave people for being here. I got to know them for a few minutes upfront, and they are definitely tough, smart cookies. We like them. I think they like me too. I'm not sure, but I think -- (applause) -- no, I think they do. I think they do. I think they see what we're doing for our military.

Would you like to say a few words, any of you guys? Would you like to say something? Huh?

MR. HOPPER: Sure.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Come on. Come on up here. Here's your chance. You can be a big star now.

MR. HOPPER: Well, I'm not sure about that. But just on behalf of many of us standing up in the front of the room today, I just want to say what an honor and privilege it is to be with our President. I so admire what you're doing for our country.

Thank you for your dedication to our military, our country. And we're all behind you in making America great again.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Thank you very much. That's so nice. Thank you very much.

MR. HOPPER: Thank you. Thank you. (Applause.)

MR. REYNOLDS: It's an honor to be here. My family is so proud. My wife loves you. (Laughter.) She does. We all love you.

All of the veterans that I represent in my community asked me to say to you: Keep doing what you're doing. We need to win. We need to make America great again. And we definitely think you are on the right track. So, thank you. It's honor to meet you, sir.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: We will keep it going, and we will get it done.

MR. REYNOLDS: Absolutely.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: No doubt.

MR. REYNOLDS: I believe it. Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Anybody?

MR. MORGAN: Mr. President, from my heart, thank you for your support of the military, and it's an honor to be here as one of seven Vietnam veterans representing the 58,000 heroes who never made it home.

Thank you so much.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Thank you so much. (Applause.)

MR. MORGAN: Thank you, sir. Thank you.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: You nervous?

MR. GOODE: I am nervous.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: I don't think so. I don't think so.

MR. GOODE: I am nervous.

You know, it's an honor for me to be here today to meet the President of the United States that's doing such a fine job for America. I'm so proud of him and what he's doing, and I'm also really proud to represent all those veterans that are back home to be one of seven of these veterans that are here today. It's such an honor to represent the rest of those veterans in the United States of America.

Thank you.

PRESIDENT TRUMP: Well, I just want to thank everybody. These are special, special people. And just in speaking to them, before I came up -- they were so warm and so loving of our country -- I said, "Hey, would you like to say a few words?" And they said them better than anybody can say them.

They're brave, they're strong, they're great patriots. And we just want to thank you and all of the thousands and thousands and all of the people that served with you and in all of the other wars.

And, you know, one of the things, again, that I'm so happy with is what we're doing with the whole Veterans Administration. It is a whole different ballgame.

And I'm going to sign a proclamation, and I'll sign it with one pen, but we're going to make sure we have seven pens. And we're going to get you each one. But it's an important proclamation, and we'll do it right now.

Thank you all. You have done a fantastic job. I appreciate it. Thank you very much.

So this is the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the Vietnam War by the President of the United States of America. It's a proclamation. And thank you very much.

(The proclamation is signed.)

END

2:21 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump in Meeting with the Senate Finance Committee
Date: Wednesday, October 18, 2017 12:22:51 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

October 18, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
IN MEETING WITH THE SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE

Cabinet Room

11:34 A.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. I'm honored to welcome Republican and Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee to the White House. And especially, I'd like to thank Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch -- thank you, Orrin -- and Ranking Member Ron Wyden for joining us today. Thank you very much. Thank you, Ron.

We're here to discuss our plan to deliver historic tax cuts for American families, businesses, workers. It will be the largest tax cut in the history of our country.

Here's some of the highlights from our framework. We are doubling the amount of income that is taxed at the zero bracket. In other words, the zero bracket -- many people will be able to take advantage of that bracket that are not in that bracket.

We're increasing the child tax credit. We will end the estate tax, sometimes referred to as the death tax.

We will cut the business tax rate from the highest in the developed world at 35 percent to no more than 20 percent. According to the Council of Economic Advisers, reducing the corporate tax rate from 35 to 20 percent would increase average household income by $4,000 a year. So each household, on average, would take in $4,000, and they'll go out and they'll spend that money and that will be great for the economy.

We're cutting taxes on small businesses to the lowest rate in more than 80 years. For 30 million Americans who own small businesses, it will be a 40 percent tax cut, and they will thrive and they will expand, and they will be happy.

For at least the next five years, businesses and manufacturers will be able to expense the full value of new equipment in the year in which they buy it -- something which nobody even thought in terms of, and something which will have, I think, one of the biggest impacts on our economy.

We will impose a one-time low tax on trillions of dollars of wealth parked overseas to encourage companies to bring back those profits and bring them back home, and spend the money at home where it belongs. Right now, they can't bring the money back in because of bureaucratic problems, because of certain legislation, and most importantly because the tax rate is so high that only a very foolish company head would bring the money back in. I think the numbers could even hit the $4 trillion mark. People have been saying $2.5 trillion for many years, but we know it's now much higher than that.

The vast majority of Americans will be able to file their taxes on a single sheet of paper, because not only will these be massive tax cuts, but these will be a big simplification. It's going to be a very big simplification. So it's really tax cuts and reform, but I focus on tax cuts because it's such an important weapon to get our country really moving.

So we'll go from being one of the highest-taxed nations in the world to the one of the lowest taxed, meaning more jobs, higher wages, and more products stamped with the words: Made in the USA.

This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, in my opinion. This is something that will be really unique. The timing is right. I have had people on both sides -- and I promised not to mention the name of the people on the other sides, or names -- but a lot of people are liking this very much, and I think we're going to have tremendous support.

We're going to restore America's competitive edge, rebuild America's middle class -- very much aimed at the middle class -- and renew the promise of the American Dream.

We're going to have companies pouring back into our country instead of leaving our country. And we're not going to have them leave and fire everybody, and make products and sell them back into our country totally untaxed. All we do is end up with lots of people without jobs and no product. It's not going to happen anymore.

So I just want to thank everybody for being here. It's a great honor. We're going to have a great discussion today, and I'm sure we'll have unanimous support. (Laughter.) I have no doubt, right? Right, Ron? I think, right.

So thank you very much, everybody. Appreciate it.

Q Mr. President, what did you say to Sergeant Johnson's widow on the phone yesterday?

THE PRESIDENT: I didn't say what that congresswoman said; didn't say it all. She knows it. And she now is not saying it. I did not say what she said, and I'd like her to make the statement again because I did not say what she said. I had a very nice conversation with the woman, with the wife who was -- sounded like a lovely woman. Did not say what the congresswoman said, and most people aren't too surprised to hear that.

Q What was the (inaudible), Mr. President?

THE PRESIDENT: Let her make her statement again and then you'll find out.

Q She is saying that you said this -- the congresswoman.

THE PRESIDENT: Let her make her statement again and then you'll find out.

Q Mr. President, on healthcare, where do you stand on the bipartisan healthcare bill?

THE PRESIDENT: We'll see the bipartisan. We're going to see the bipartisan. And Lamar Alexander is working on it very hard from our side. And if something can happen, that's fine. But I won't do anything to enrich the insurance companies because right now the insurance companies are being enriched. They've been enriched by Obamacare like nothing anybody has ever seen before. I am not going to do anything to enrich the insurance companies.

Okay, thank you very much, everybody. Thank you very much.

EDT

END

11:40 A.M.

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: scott_hommel@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump on Antiquities Act Designations
Date: Monday, December 04, 2017 3:34:22 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

December 4, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
ON ANTIQUITIES ACT DESIGNATIONS

Utah State Capitol
Salt Lake City, Utah

12:20 P.M. MST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you to a very special man, Orrin Hatch, for the introduction. And that was truly a nice introduction and I appreciate it.

You are a true fighter, Orrin. And I have to say, I've gotten to know him very well. I've gotten to know a lot of people very well. You meet fighters and you meet people that you thought were fighters but they're not so good at fighting. He's a fighter. We hope you will continue to serve your state and your country in the Senate for a very long time to come. (Applause.)

I want to especially thank you for the tremendous work in ushering massive tax cuts and reform through the Senate. Just happened, and we have a final step to go. And I predict we're going to be very successful. We're talking about massive, massive tax cuts. (Applause.) It's tax cuts and reform, but I always mention tax cuts first because that's what people like to hear.

We're now one huge step closer to delivering to the American people the historic tax relief as a giant present for Christmas. Remember I said we're bringing Christmas back? Christmas is back, bigger and better than ever before. We're bringing Christmas back. (Applause.) And we say it now with pride. Let me just say, to those here today and all across the country: Merry Christmas to everybody. (Applause.) And also, happy holidays and a great New Year. We're going to have a great, great year.

Joining us at this ceremony are many other tremendous leaders from Utah, including your great senator, Mike Lee. Where's Mike? Mike, come! Come here, Mike. Get up here, Mike. (Applause.) He worked along with Orrin and the rest of them. We got it done. Mike, thank you very much. (Applause.)

You want to say something?

SENATOR LEE: It's not every day the President of the United States asks you to take the microphone from him. But I want to say, Mr. President, thank you for your leadership. Thank you for being here. Thank you for standing with the people of Utah. We appreciate it deeply. (Applause.)

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you, Mike.

I also want to recognize your fantastic representatives who are with us -- Rob Bishop, John Curtis, Chris Stewart, and Mia Love. Thank you all. You're here. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.

And I have to say, really -- talk about a very special guy that I made Secretary of the Interior. Does he know the interior. He's knows it, he loves it. He loves seeing it and riding on it. Ryan Zinke, who truly believes in protecting America -- he is protecting America. And nobody loves it more. Ryan. (Applause.) Thank you. Just as he protected America as an officer of the legendary Seal Team Six. He's a tough cookie and you've done a great job. Thank you, Ryan.

Governor Gary Herbert. Where is Gary? Come on Gary. Come on, Gary. Get over there, Gary. So they can -- (applause) -- and you're your wife, the First Lady, is fantastic. Thank you very much. First Lady. Thank you, First Lady.

Attorney General Sean Reyes. Sean, thank you. (Applause.) Thank you. An original supporter of mine. You know, you always remember those original supporters. Greg Hughes. Greg, thank you. (Applause.) He was an original right at the beginning. Thank you, Greg. He had a feeling.

Finally, I want to recognize the members of the local Utah Navajo. Thank you very much. (Applause.) Thank you very much. Thank you very much. Really appreciate it. We're profoundly honored by your presence here today, and I'm thrilled to be here with so many wonderful friends, so many people that saw something a little special and they said, we're with him, and I'm really working hard to put it back. And that's what we're doing today. This magnificent capitol, in your incredible state. And it is special people in a special state. Thank you very much for being here.

I've just come from touring Welfare Square with Senator Hatch and some amazing people from the leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints. (Applause.) Special. I spent a lot of time with them. In fact, I went around the store, I wanted a nice can of tuna fish -- (laughter) -- and they had plenty. They really help people. Incredible.

After our visit, I can truly say firsthand that Utah's awesome natural beauty is exceeded only by the warmth and grace and hospitality of its citizens. This state has many natural treasures, but its greatest treasure by far is its people. (Applause.) And we will ensure the right of the people to live according to the faith in their hearts, which is why we will always protect your religious liberty. (Applause.) And we've been doing that.

I know all of you feel blessed to be living among some of the most glorious natural wonders anywhere in the world. You cherish Utah's gleaming rivers and sweeping valleys. You take inspiration from its majestic peaks. And when you look upon its many winding canyons and glowing vistas, you marvel at the beauty of God's great creation. (Applause.)

And that is why I'm here today: Because some people think that the natural resources of Utah should be controlled by a small handful of very distant bureaucrats located in Washington. And guess what? They're wrong.

The families and communities of Utah know and love this land the best, and you know the best how to take care of your land. You know how to protect it, and you know best how to conserve this land for many, many generations to come.

Your timeless bond with the outdoors should not be replaced with the whims of regulators thousands and thousands of miles away. They don't know your land, and truly, they don't care for your land like you do. (Applause). But from now on, that won't matter. I've come to Utah to take a very historic action to reverse federal overreach and restore the rights of this land to your citizens. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.

But before I began -- because I understood how big it is -- I'm a real estate developer. When they start talking about millions of acres, I say, say it again? That's a lot. So, before I began, I met with Senator Orrin Hatch, who loves Utah and loves the people of Utah. I called Senator Mike Lee, who loves Utah and loves the people of Utah. I called your governor. I called my original -- where is he? There he is. I called all of the friends that I have in Utah. I said, what do you think? I said, will this be good for our country, and will it be good for your state? They said this would be incredible for our country, will be incredible for Utah. Finally, you would be giving people back their access to the land they know, to the land they understand, and most importantly, to the land that they love.

I also said, will it be at all controversial? They all told me no. (Laughter.) How did that happen? I don't think it is controversial, actually. I think it's so sensible.

Therefore, today, on the recommendation of Secretary Zinke, and with the wise counsel of Senator Hatch, Senator Lee, and the many others, I will sign two presidential proclamations. These actions will modify the national monuments designations of both Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante. (Applause.)

As many of you know, past administrations have severely abused the purpose, spirit, and intent of a century-old law known as the Antiquities Act. This law requires that only the smallest necessary area be set aside for special protection as national monuments. Unfortunately, previous administrations have ignored the standard and used the law to lock up hundreds of millions of acres of land and water under strict government control.

These abuses of the Antiquities Act give enormous power to faraway bureaucrats at the expense of the people who actually live here, work here, and make this place their home. This is where they raise their children. This is the place they love.

For example, the previous administration designated more than a half a billion acres of land and water, including Bears Ears. It did so over the loud objections of the people of this state and their elected representatives. Governor -- right?

The results have been very sad and very predictable. Here, and in other affected states, we have seen harmful and unnecessary restrictions on hunting, ranching, and responsible economic development. We have seen grazing restrictions prevent ranching families from passing their businesses and beloved heritage on to the children -- the children that they love.

We've seen many rural families stopped from enjoying their outdoor activities. And the fact they've done it all their lives made no difference to the bureaucrats in Washington.

We have seen needed improvements, like infrastructure upgrades and road maintenance, impeded and foreclosed. We have seen how this tragic federal overreach prevents many Native Americans from having their rightful voice over the sacred land where they practice their most important ancestral and religious traditions. (Applause.)

These abuses of the Antiquities Act have not just threatened your local economies; they've threatened your very way of life. They've threatened your hearts.

Our precious national treasures must be protected. And they, from now on, will be protected. (Applause.) Under my administration, we will advance that protection through a truly representative process, one that listens to the local communities that knows the land the best and that cherishes the land the most. (Applause.)

With the action I'm taking today, we will not only give back your voice over the use of this land, we will also restore your access and your enjoyment. Public lands will once again be for public use -- (applause) -- because we know that people who are free to use their land and enjoy their land are the people most determined to conserve their land.

One values the splendor of Utah more than -- I'll tell you what, there's nobody out there. I just came in, and I'm looking around with Orrin and with Mike and with the governor and with everybody, and I'm just saying, what a beautiful picture it is. But no one values the splendor of Utah more than you do, and no one knows better how to use it.

With your help in treating our natural bounty with respect, gratitude, and love, we will put our nation's treasures to great and wonderful use. Families will hike and hunt on land they have known for generations, and they will preserve it for generations to come. Cattle will graze along the open range. Sweeping landscapes will inspire young Americans to dream beyond the horizon. And the world will stand in awe of the artistry God has worked right here in your great state.

Together, we will usher in a bright new future of wonder and wealth, liberty and law, and patriotism and pride all across this great land.

Thank you to the wonderful people of Utah. May God bless you and may God bless America. Thank you very much. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you very much. Thank you. (Applause.)

And in your honor, I will now, with your representatives, sign this very, very important proclamation. Thank you very much, everyone. Thank you. (Applause.)

(The proclamation is signed.)

END

12:37 P.M. MST

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump on His Trip to Asia
Date: Wednesday, November 15, 2017 5:05:03 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

2017 For Immediate Release

November 15,

REMARKS PRESS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
ON HIS TRIP TO ASIA

Diplomatic Reception Room

3:35 P.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much.

Last night, I returned from a historic 12-day trip to Asia. This journey took us to five nations to meet with dozens of foreign leaders, participate in three formal state visits, and attend three key regional summits. It was the longest visit to the region by an American President in more than a quarter of a century.

Everywhere we went, our foreign hosts greeted the American delegation, myself included, with incredible warmth, hospitality, and most importantly respect. And this great respect showed very well our country is -- further evidence that America's renewed confidence and standing in the world has never been stronger than it is right now.

When we are confident in ourselves, our strength, our flag, our history, our values -- other nations are confident in us. And when we treat our citizens with the respect they deserve, other countries treat America with the respect that our country so richly deserves.

During our travels, this is exactly what the world saw: a strong, proud, and confident America.

Today, I want to update the American people on the tremendous success of this trip and the progress we've made to advance American security and prosperity throughout the year.

When I came into office, our country was faced with a series of growing dangers. These threats included rogue regimes pursuing deadly weapons, foreign powers challenging America's influence, the spread of the murderous terror group ISIS, and years of unfair trade practices that had dangerously depleted our manufacturing base and wiped out millions and millions of middle-class jobs.

The challenges were inherited, and these products really showed what previous mistakes were made over many years -- and even decades -- by other administrations. Some of these mistakes were born of indifference and neglect. Others from naïve thinking and misguided judgement. In some cases, the negative influence of partisan politics and special interests was to blame. But the one common thread behind all of these problems was a failure to protect and promote the interests of the American people and American workers.

Upon my inauguration, I pledged that we would rebuild America, restore its economic strength, and defend its national security. With this goal in mind, I vowed that we would reaffirm old alliances and form new friendships in pursuit of shared goals. Above all, I swore that in every decision, with every action, I would put the best interests of the American people first.

Over the past 10 months, traveling across the globe and meeting with world leaders, that is exactly what I have done.

Earlier this year, in Saudi Arabia, I spoke to the leaders of more than 50 Arab and Muslim nations about our strategy to defeat terrorists by stripping them of financing, territory, and ideological support. And I urged the leaders to drive out the terrorists and extremists from their societies. Since that time, we have dealt ISIS one crushing defeat after another.

In Israel, I reaffirmed the unbreakable bond between America and the Jewish State, and I met with leaders of the Palestinian Authority and initiated an effort to facilitate lasting peace between the Israelis and the Palestinians.

In Brussels, I urged our NATO allies to do more to strengthen our crucial alliance and set the stage for significant increases in member contributions. Billions and billions of dollars are pouring in because of that initiative. NATO, believe me, is very happy with Donald Trump and what I did.

In Warsaw, I declared to the world America's resolve to preserve and protect Western civilization and the values we hold so dear.

In Rome, Sicily, Hamburg, and Paris, I strengthened our friendships with key allies to promote our shared interests of security and prosperity.

In September, at the United Nations General Assembly in New York, I urged that the nations of the world join in confronting rogue regimes that threaten humanity and laid out a model for international cooperation grounded in respect for sovereignty and the responsibilities that come with it.

On each trip, I have worked to advance American interests and leadership in the world.

And to each of these places, I have carried our vision for a better -- a vision for something stronger and sovereign -- so important -- sovereign and independent nations, rooted in their histories, confident in their destinies, and cooperating together to advance their security, prosperity, and the noble cause of peace.

It was this same vision that I carried to Asia two weeks ago. And it was this same commitment to you, the American people, that was always at the forefront of my mind and my thinking.

Our trip was defined by three core goals. First: to unite the world against the nuclear menace posed by the North Korean regime, a threat that has increased steadily through many administrations and now requires urgent action.

Second: to strengthen America's alliances and economic partnerships in a free and open Indo-Pacific, made up of thriving, independent nations, respectful of other countries and their own citizens, and safe from foreign domination and economic servitude.

And third: to finally -- after many years -- insist on fair and reciprocal trade. Fair and reciprocal trade -- so important. These two words -- fairness and reciprocity -- are an open invitation to every country that seeks to do business with the United States, and they are a firm warning to every country that cheats, breaks the rules, and engages in economic aggression -- like they've been doing in the past, especially in the recent past.

That is why we have almost an $800-billion-a-year trade deficit with other nations. Unacceptable. We are going to start whittling that down, and as fast as possible.

With these goals, it was my profound honor to travel on this journey as your representative. I explained to all of the world leaders, and across Asia, how well the United States is doing. Economic growth has been over 3 percent the last two quarters and is going higher. Unemployment is at its lowest level in 17 years. The stock market has gained trillions of dollars in value since my election and has reached record highs. We are massively increasing our military budget to historic levels. The House has just passed a nearly $700 billion defense package, and it could not come at a better time for our nation.

Once again our country is optimistic about the future, confident in our values, and proud of our history and a role in the world.

I want to thank every citizen of this country for the part you have played in making this great American comeback possible. In Asia, our message was clear and well received: America is here to compete, to do business, and to defend our values and our security.

We began our trip in Hawaii to pay our respects to brave American servicemembers at Pearl Harbor and the United States Pacific Command, the guardian of our security and freedom across the Indo-Pacific region.

As our country prepared to observe Veterans Day, we remembered the incredible sacrifices and courage of all of the veterans whose service has preserved our liberty and a way of life that is very special. We also thanked military families for their support for our brave servicemen and women.

From Hawaii, we traveled to Japan, a crucial U.S. ally and partner in the region. Upon landing in Japan, my first act was to thank the American servicemembers and Japanese Self-Defense Forces who personify the strength of our enduring alliance.

Prime Minister Abe and I agreed on our absolute determination to remain united to achieve the goal of denuclearized North Korea. Shortly following our visit, Japan announced additional sanctions on 35 North Korean entities and individuals. Japan also committed to shouldering more of the burden of our common defense by reimbursing costs borne by American taxpayers, as well as by making deep investments in Japan's own military. This will include purchases of U.S. advanced capabilities -- from jet fighters to missile defense systems worth many, many billions of dollars -- and jobs for the American worker.

The Prime Minister and I also discussed ways we can deepen our trade relationship based on the core principles of fairness and reciprocity. I am pleased that since January of this year, Japanese companies have announced investments in the United States worth more than $8 billion -- 17,000 jobs. Thank you.

Oh, they don't have water? That's okay. What? That's okay.

(Drinks water.)

THE PRESIDENT: Japanese manufacturers, Toyota and Mazda, announced that they will be opening a new plant in the United States that will create 4,000 jobs.

We also signed agreements between our nations to enhance infrastructure development, increase access to affordable energy, and advance our foreign policy goals through economic investment.

From Japan, we traveled to another key American ally in Asia -- the Republic of Korea. My official state visit to South Korea was the first by an American President in 25 years.

Speaking before the National Assembly of the Republic of Korea, I spoke the truth about the evil crimes of the North Korean regime, and I made clear that we will not allow this twisted dictatorship to hold the world hostage to nuclear blackmail.

I called on every nation, including China and Russia, to unite in isolating the North Korean regime -- cutting off all ties of trade and commerce -- until it stops its dangerous provocation on -- and this is the whole key to what we're doing -- on denuclearization. We have to denuclearize North Korea. We have ended the failed strategy of strategic patience, and, as a result, we have already seen important progress -- including tough new sanctions from the U.N. council -- we have a Security Council that has been with us and just about with us from the beginning.

South Korea agreed to harmonize sanctions and joined the United States in sanctioning additional rogue actors whose fund and funds have helped North Korea and North Korea's nuclear and ballistic missile programs. It's unacceptable to us.

The United States welcomed the decision of President Moon to remove the payload restrictions on missiles to combat the North Korean threat. And together we reaffirmed our commitment to a campaign of maximum pressure.

Like Japan, South Korea is increasing its defense contributions. During our meetings, President Moon acknowledged his desire for equitable cost-sharing for the United States military forces stationed in South Korea. And I visited soldiers at Camp Humphreys, a brand-new, joint American-South Korean base, paid for almost entirely by the South Korean government. At that base, I discussed with the United States and South Korean military leaders both military options and readiness to respond to North Korean provocation or offensive actions.

During our visit, President Moon and I also discussed America's commitment to reducing our trade deficit with South Korea. At my discretion and direction, we are currently renegotiating the disastrous U.S.-Korea trade agreement signed under the previous administration. It has been a disaster for the United States.

Last week, 42 South Korean companies announced their intent to invest in projects worth more than $17 billion dollars in the United States, and 24 companies announced plans to purchase $58 billion dollars in American goods and services.

From South Korea, Melania and I traveled to China, where, as in Japan and South Korea, we were greatly honored by the splendor of our reception. Our trip included the first official dinner held for a foreign leader in the Forbidden City since the founding of the modern China, where we enjoyed a very productive evening hosted by President Xi and his wonderful wife, Madam Pung.

During our visit, President Xi pledged to faithfully implement United Nations Security Council resolutions on North Korea and to use his great economic influence over the regime to achieve our common goal of a denuclearized Korean Peninsula.

President Xi recognizes that a nuclear North Korea is a grave threat to China, and we agreed that we would not accept a so-called "freeze for freeze" agreement like those that have consistently failed in the past. We made that time is running out and we made it clear, and all options remain on the table.

I also had very candid conversations with President Xi about the need to reduce our staggering trade deficit with China and for our trading relationship to be conducted on a truly fair and equitable basis. We can no longer tolerate unfair trading practices that steal American jobs, wealth, and intellectual property. The days of the United States being taken advantage of are over.

In China, we also announced $250 billion worth in trade-investment deals that will create jobs in the United States.

From China, I flew to the city of Da Nang in Vietnam, to attend the Leaders Meeting for APEC -- Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation. There, I spoke to a major gathering of business leaders, where I reminded the world of America's historic role in the Pacific as a force for freedom and for peace.

Standing on this proud history, I offered our vision for robust trading relationships in which Indo-Pacific nations can all prosper and grow together. I announced that the United States is ready to make bilateral trade deals with any nation in the region that wants to be our partner in fair and reciprocal trade.

We will never again turn a blind eye to trading abuses, to cheating, economic aggression, or anything else from countries that profess a belief in open trade, but do not follow the rules or live by its principles themselves.

No international trading organization can function if members are allowed to exploit the openness of others for unfair economic gain. Trade abuses harm the United States and its workers -- but no more. No more.

We will take every trade action necessary to achieve the fair and reciprocal treatment that the United States has offered to the rest of the world for decades.

My message has resonated. The 21 APEC leaders -- for the first time ever -- recognized the importance of fair and reciprocal trade, recognized the need to address unfair trade practices, and acknowledged that the WTO is in strong need of reform. These leaders also noted that countries must do a better job following the rules to which they agreed.

I also made very clear that the United States will promote a free and open Indo-Pacific in which nations enjoy the independence and respect they deserve.

In Vietnam, during a state visit in Hanoi, I also met with President Quang and Prime Minister Fook to discuss the growing friendship between our countries. Our Vietnamese partners are taking new actions to enforce sanctions on North Korea. In addition, we committed to expand trade and investment between our countries, and we pledged to address the imbalances. I am particularly pleased that the United States and Vietnam recently announced $12 billion in commercial agreements, which will include $10 billion in U.S. content.

Finally, I visited the Philippines, where I met with numerous world leaders at the U.S.-ASEAN and East Asia Summits. At ASEAN -- the Association of Southeast Asian Nations -- we made it clear that no one owns the ocean. Freedom of navigation and overflight are critical to the security and prosperity of all nations.

I also met with the Prime Ministers of India, Australia, and Japan to discuss our shared commitment to a free and open Indo-Pacific.

During our visit, President Duterte of the Philippines thanked the American people and our armed forces for supporting the recent liberation of Marawi from ISIS. We pledged to strengthen and deepen our long-standing alliance.

At the East Asia Summit, the United States negotiated and signed four important leaders' statements on the use of chemical weapons, money laundering, poverty alleviation, and countering terrorist propaganda and financing.

And crucially, at both summits and throughout the trip, we asked all nations to support our campaign of maximum pressure for North Korean denuclearization. And they are responding by cutting trade with North Korea, restricting financial ties to the regime, and expelling North Korean diplomats and workers.

Over the last two weeks, we have made historic strides in reasserting American leadership, restoring American security, and reawakening American confidence.

Everywhere we went, I reaffirmed our vision for cooperation between proud, independent and sovereign countries -- and I made clear that the United States will be a reliable friend, a strong partner, and a powerful advocate for its own citizens.

The momentum from our trip will launch us on our continued effort to accomplish the three core objectives I outlined: to unite the world against North Korean nuclear threat, to promote a free and open Indo-Pacific region, and to advance fair and reciprocal economic relations with our trading partners and allies in the region.

We have established a new framework for trade that will ensure reciprocity through enforcement actions, reform of international organizations, and new fair trade deals that benefit the United States and our partners.

And we have laid out a pathway toward peace and security in our world where sovereign nations can thrive, flourish, and prosper side-by-side.

This is our beautiful vision for the future. This is a where this vision -- this dream -- is only possible if America is strong, proud, and free.

As long as we are true to ourselves, faithful to our founding, and loyal to our citizens, then there is no task too great, no dream too large, no goal beyond our reach.

My fellow citizens: America is back. And the future has never looked brighter.

Thank you. God Bless you and God Bless the United States of America. Thank you very much. Thank you. Thank you all.

END

3:56 P.M. EST

Unsubscribe

The White House 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW Washington DC 20500 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump on Tax Reform | Springfield, MO
Date: Wednesday, August 30, 2017 4:56:01 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

August 30, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
ON TAX REFORM

Loren Cook Company
Springfield, Missouri

1:41 P.M. CDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. Thank you. (Applause.) Thank you very much. It's so nice. And we appreciate it. And all of the people outside that were waving proudly the American flag -- believe me, we appreciate it very much.

I want to thank Jerry Cook, Steve Burney -- (applause) -- and all of the tremendous employees here at the Loren Cook Company for hosting us today. Where is Jerry? Where is Jerry? (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you, Jerry. What a job. I've heard so much about you. It's a great honor to know you, Jerry. Thank you.

I also want to welcome the many distinguished guests who are here with us for this very important event: Secretary of the Treasury, Steve Mnuchin. (Applause.) Thank you, Steve. Secretary of Commerce, Wilbur Ross. (Applause.) Small Business Administrator -- which, by the way, is a very large business, I will tell you that -- Linda McMahon, a friend of mine. (Applause.) And from the purely political world, a really great friend who did such an incredible job with his beautiful wife at the inauguration, Senator Roy Blunt. Thank you. Thank you. (Applause.) Where's Roy? Thank you, Roy.

Governor Greitens is here, who is doing some job. (Applause.) Thank you, Governor. Special. Lieutenant Governor Parson. Lieutenant Governor, thank you, Lieutenant Governor. And our great members of ~~Commerece~~ [Congress], I want to thank you all for coming. There are so many. I was asking the Governor and Roy, I said, do you think I should announce them all? I have so many. But I'm honored that they're here.

Representative Sam Graves. (Applause.) Representative Vicky Hartzler, who has been terrific. (Applause.) My friend for a long time, and just somebody that he liked me from the beginning and I liked him, Billy Long. Where's Billy? (Applause.) Billy. Right, Billy? Right from the beginning. Blaine Luetkemeyer -- where's Blaine? Good. Thank you, Blaine. (Applause.) Representative Jason Smith. (Applause.) Jason, thank you for everything, Jason. Representative Ann Wagner. Hi, Ann. Good job, Ann. (Applause.)

And, I don't know, we have so many more. Anybody I forgot? Right? Everything okay? Good, I got it. You, I remember more than anybody. Thank you all very much. I appreciate it. And to the congressmen and congresswomen, we very much appreciate you all being here. Thank you very much. (Applause.)

Before we begin, I'd like to take a few moments to discuss the deeply tragic situation in Texas and Louisiana. As we all know, our

Gulf Coast was hit over the weekend with a devastating hurricane of historic proportion. Torrential rains and terrible flooding continue to pose a grave danger to life and to property. Our first responders have been doing absolutely heroic work to shepherd people out of harm's way, and their courage and devotion has saved countless lives. They represent truly the very best of America. (Applause.)

We must be vigilant. We must protect the lives of our people. I was on the ground in Texas yesterday to meet with Governor Abbott -- who is doing, by the way, an incredible job -- and local officials so that we could coordinate the very big and unprecedented federal response.

In difficult times such as these, we see the true character of the American people: their strength, their love, and their resolve. We see friend helping friend, neighbor helping neighbor, and stranger helping stranger. And together, we will endure and we will overcome. (Applause.)

To those affected by this storm, we are praying for you and we are here with you every single step of the way. And I can speak, I know, for the people in this room -- every step of the way. (Applause.)

To those Americans who have lost loved ones: All of America is grieving with you, and our hearts are joined with yours forever. The citizens of Texas and the Gulf Coast need all the prayers, support, and resources our communities have to offer. Recovery will be tough, but I have seen the resilience of the American spirit firsthand, all over this country.

To the people of Houston, and across Texas and Louisiana: We are here with you today, we are with you tomorrow, and we will be with you every single day after to restore, recover, and rebuild.

As our thoughts and prayers remain firmly with the citizens and our fellow people -- people -- great, great people -- all affected by this tragedy. We're also glad to be back in the heartland with the very, very fine folks of Missouri. (Applause.)

And I said to Senator Blunt and I said to Billy Long on the plane coming in -- can I say "Missouri," or should I say "Missouruh"? Okay? And they said, whatever you want is okay. So I said, good. But I'm especially pleased to be here in Springfield, the birthplace of a great American icon, the legendary Route 66. Who would have known that? (Applause.)

This is the place where the "Main Street of America" got its start, and this is where America's main street will begin its big, beautiful comeback that -- you are seeing it right now. This is a comeback of historic proportions. You're seeing it happen right now. (Applause.) Right? You're seeing it.

We're here today to launch our plans to bring back Main Street by reducing the crushing tax burden on our companies and on our workers. (Applause.) Our self-destructive tax code costs Americans millions and millions of jobs, trillions of dollars, and billions of hours spent on compliance and paperwork. And you have seen what's happening with regulations -- they're going fast. We need regulations, but many of them are unnecessary, and they're going fast. (Applause.)

That is why the foundation of our job creation agenda is to fundamentally reform our tax code for the first time in more than 30 years. I want to work with Congress, Republicans and Democrats alike, on a plan that is pro-growth, pro-jobs, pro-worker -- and pro-American. (Applause.)

There is no more fitting place to launch this effort than right here in the American heartland, surrounded by hardworking men and women whose skill, determination, and drive are truly second to none.

(Applause.)

And, by the way, before I start, Ivanka Trump -- I see my beautiful daughter is in the audience. Stand up, honey. (Applause.) She's working very hard. I'm very proud of Ivanka.

For many decades, Route 66 captured the American spirit. The communities along this historic route were a vivid symbol of America's booming industry. Truck drivers hauled made-in-America goods along this vital artery of commerce. Families passed through bustling towns on their way to explore the great American West. And high-quality manufacturing jobs lifted up communities, gave Americans a paycheck that could support a family. Mr. Cook is a great example of the people that do it. (Applause.) Stand up. Stand up Mr. Cook. Stand up. (Applause.) I think they like you. And provided millions of our fellow citizens with the pride and dignity that comes with work.

But, in recent years, millions of Americans have watched that prosperity slip away in the rearview mirror. And it wasn't pleasant to watch, especially for me. I would sit back -- I was in business -- and I could see what was happening. It wasn't good.

If we want to renew our prosperity, and to restore opportunity, then we must reduce the tax burden on our companies and on our workers. (Applause.)

In the last 10 years, our economy has grown at only around two percent a year. If you look at other countries and you look at what their GDP is, they're unhappy when it's seven, eight, nine. And I speak to them -- leaders of the countries -- how are you doing? "Not well, not well." Why? "GDP is down to seven percent." And I'm saying, we were hitting one percent just a number of months ago. So we're going to change that around, folks, that I can tell you. And we're going change it around fast. (Applause.)

And today -- a very appropriate day that this should happen -- we just announced that we hit three percent in GDP. It just came out. (Applause.) And on a yearly basis, as you know, the last administration, during an eight-year period, never hit three percent. So we're really on our way.

If we achieve sustained three percent growth, that means 12 million new jobs and $10 trillion dollars of new economic activity over the next decade. That's some numbers. (Applause.) And I happen to be one that thinks we can go much higher than three percent. There's no reason why we shouldn't. (Applause.)

So this is our once-in-a-generation opportunity to deliver real tax reform for everyday hardworking Americans, and I am fully committed to working with Congress to get this job done. And I don't want to be disappointed by Congress, do you understand me? Do you understand? (Applause.)

Congress -- I think Congress is going to make a comeback. I hope so. (Laughter.) I tell you what, the United States is counting on it. (Applause.)

Here are my four principles for tax reform: First, we need a tax code that is simple, fair, and easy to understand. (Applause.) That means getting rid of the loopholes and complexity that primarily benefit the wealthiest Americans and special interests.

Our last major tax rewrite was 31 years ago. It eliminated dozens of loopholes and special interest tax breaks, reduced the number of tax brackets from fifteen to two, and lowered tax rates for both individuals and businesses. At the time, it was really something special.

Since then, our tax laws have tripled in size, and the tax code itself now spans more than 2,600 pages, and most of it is not understandable. Tax rates have increased, and special interest loopholes have crept back into the system. The tax code is now a massive source of complexity and frustration for tens of millions of Americans.

In 1935, the basic 1040 form that most people file had two simple pages of instructions. Today, that basic form has one hundred pages of instructions, and it's pretty complex stuff. The tax code is so complicated that more than 90 percent of Americans need professional help to do their own taxes.

This enormous complexity is very unfair. It disadvantages ordinary Americans who don't have an army of accountants while benefitting deep-pocketed special interests. And most importantly, this is wrong. (Applause.) Thank you.

First and foremost, our tax system should benefit loyal, hardworking Americans and their families. (Applause.) That is why tax reform must dramatically simplify the tax code, eliminate special interest loopholes -- and I'm speaking against myself when I do this, I have to tell you. And I might be speaking against Mr. Cook, and we're both okay with it, is that right? It's crazy. We're speaking -- maybe we shouldn't be doing this, you know? (Laughter.) But we're doing the right thing. (Applause.) True. And allow the vast majority of our citizens to file their taxes on a single, simple page without having to hire an accountant.

Second, we need a competitive tax code that creates more jobs and higher wages for Americans. It's time to give American workers the pay raise that they've been looking for for many, many years. (Applause.)

In 1986, Ronald Reagan led the world by cutting our corporate tax rate to 34 percent. That was below the average rate for developed countries at the time. Everybody thought that was a monumental thing that happened. But then, under this pro-America system, our economy boomed. It just went beautifully -- right through the roof. The middle class thrived and median family income increased.

Other countries saw the success. They looked at us. They saw -- what is America doing? What's happening with the United States? And they acted very swiftly by cutting their taxes lower, and lower, and lower, and reforming their tax systems to be far more competitive than ours.

Over the past 30 years, the average business tax rate among developed nations fell from 45 percent to less than 24 percent. And some countries have an unbelievably low tax, including, by the way, China and some others that are highly competitive, and really doing very well against us. They are taking us, frankly, to the cleaners. So we must -- we have no choice -- we must lower our taxes.

And your Senator, Claire McCaskill, she must do this for you. And if she doesn't do it for you, you have to have to vote her out of office. (Applause.) She's got to make that commitment. She's got to make that commitment. If she doesn't do it, you just can't do this anymore, with the obstruction and the obstructionists. If we don't get tax cuts and reform approved, potentially, the biggest ever -- we are looking for the biggest ever -- jobs and our country cannot take off the way they should, and it could be much worse than that. But, at a minimum, they won't take off the way they should.

The Dems are looking to obstruct tax cuts and tax reform, just like they obstructed so many other things, including administration appointments and healthcare. Not one vote. We got not one vote to try and fix healthcare and get rid of Obamacare.

The strategy of our economic rivals has worked. They made their taxes lower -- and far lower, in many cases, than ours -- and jobs left our country. Large corporations changed their business models by exporting jobs to other countries and then shipping their goods back to the United States, where they'd make massive profits, and they wouldn't be paying tax to us either. So we lost the jobs, we lost the taxes, they closed the buildings, they closed the plants and factories. We got nothing but unemployment. We got nothing.

Other businesses -- even classic American brands -- switched their headquarters to foreign countries. Because of this and other reasons, like weak borders, America remains stuck in the past. Although I have to tell you, we have General Kelly here today, and we stopped 78 percent -- going up to 80 percent -- on the border traffic coming through, in just a short period of time. (Applause.) He has done some job. A whole different world out there right now.

Today, we are still taxing our businesses at 35 percent, and it's way more than that. And think of it: In some cases, way above 40 percent when you include state and local taxes, in various states. The United States is now behind France, behind Germany, behind Canada, Ireland, Japan, Mexico, South Korea, and many other nations. Also, with these countries and almost every country, we have massive trade deficits -- numbers that you would not believe.

But this administration is going to fix that. One by one, we're fixing it. We're working right now on NAFTA -- the horrible, terrible NAFTA deal that took so much business out of your state and out of your cities and towns, and we're working on it. Let's see what happens. (Applause.)

Mexico is not happy. (Laughter.) But as I told them, you made a lot of money for a lot of years and everybody left you alone. We got to change this deal. And hopefully we can renegotiate it. But if we can't, we'll terminate it and we'll start all over again with a real deal. (Applause.)

So when it comes to the business tax, we are dead last. Can you believe that? So this cannot be allowed to continue any longer. America must lead the way, not follow from behind.

We have gone from a tax rate that is lower than our economic competitors, to one that is more than 60 percent higher. We have totally surrendered our competitive edge to other countries. We have totally surrendered. We're not surrendering anymore. (Applause.)

Ideally -- and I say this for our Secretary of the Treasury -- we would like to bring our business tax rate down to 15 percent, which would make our tax rate lower than most countries, but still, by no means the lowest, unfortunately, in the world. But it would make us highly competitive.

In other words, foreign companies have more than a 60 percent tax advantage over American companies. They can pay their workers more, sell their products and services at lower cost, and still make more money than their U.S. competitors.

We cannot restore our wealth if we continue to put our businesses at such a tremendous disadvantage. We must reduce the tax rate on American businesses so they keep jobs in America, create jobs in America, and compete for workers right here in America -- the America we love. (Applause.) Thank you. Thank you very much.

Because when businesses compete for labor, your wages will go up. Lower taxes on American business means higher wages for American workers, and it means more products made right here in the USA. (Applause.)

When I was growing up, I always used to see the signs, and it was always stamped on the product: Made in the USA. You don't see it anymore. We're going to go back to Made in the USA -- Made in the USA." (Applause.)

The third principle for tax reform is a crucial one: tax relief for middle-class families. (Applause.) In a way -- and I've been saying this for a long time -- they've been sort of the forgotten people, but they're not forgotten any longer. I can tell you that. (Applause.)

We will lower taxes for middle-income Americans so they can keep more of their hard-earned paychecks, and they can do lots of things with those paychecks. And that really means buying product ideally made in this country, but that means they'll go out, and they'll spend their money. And it will be a beautiful thing to watch. This includes helping parents afford childcare and the cost of raising a family. That's so important to Ivanka Trump. (Applause.) Very, very important to everybody in this room, but so important to my daughter. It's one of her real big beliefs. And she's very committed to that. Right, Ivanka?

We believe that ordinary Americans know better than Washington how to spend their own money, and we want to help them take home as much of their money as possible and then spend it. (Applause.) So they'll keep their money. They'll spend their money. They'll buy our product. Our factories will be moving again. Companies are going to move back into our country, jobs are going to prosper, and our country is going to be just like it says on that beautiful red hat -- it says: Make America Great Again. That's what we're going to do. (Applause.) Right?

Fourth and finally, we want to bring back trillions of dollars in wealth that's parked overseas. Because of our high tax rate and horrible, outdated, bureaucratic rules, large companies that do business overseas will often park their profits offshore to avoid paying a high United States tax if the money is brought back home. So they leave the money over there.

The amount of money we're talking about is anywhere from $3 trillion to $5 trillion. Can you believe that? By making it less punitive for companies to bring back this money, and by making the process far less bureaucratic and difficult, we can return trillions and trillions of dollars to our economy and spur billions of dollars in new investments in our struggling communities and throughout our nation.

It's time to invest in our country, to rebuild our communities, and to hire our great American workers. (Applause.)

My administration is embracing a new economic model. It's called very simply: The American Model. Under this system, we will encourage companies to hire and grow in America, to raise wages for American workers, and to help rebuild our American cities and communities. That is how we will all succeed and grow together, as one team, with one shared sense of purpose, and one glorious American destiny. (Applause.)

So today I'm calling on all members of Congress -- Democrat, Republican and independent -- to support pro-American tax reform. They have to do it. It's time. (Applause.) They have to do it. It is time.

I'm calling on Congress to provide a level playing field for our workers and our companies, to attract new companies and businesses to our shores, and to put more money into the pockets of everyday, hardworking people and also into the pockets of our companies so they can continue to grow and expand. (Applause.)

What could possibly be more bipartisan than allowing families to keep more of what they earn and creating an environment for real job and wage growth in the country that we love so much? (Applause.)

So let's put -- or at least try to put -- the partisan posturing behind us and come together as Americans to create the 21st century tax code that our people deserve. (Applause.)

If we do this, if we unite in the name of common sense and the name of common good, then we will add millions and millions of new jobs, bring back trillions of dollars, and we will give America the competitive advantage that it so desperately needs and has been looking for for so long. It's time. (Applause.)

Products made with American hands, American labor, and American grit will once again be delivered throughout the world. It's true. (Applause.) It's time. Instead of exporting our jobs, we will export our goods. (Applause.) Our jobs will both stay here in America and come back to America. We'll have it both ways. Millions of struggling citizens will be lifted from welfare to work. They will love getting up in the morning. They will love going to their job. They will love earning a big, fat, beautiful paycheck. They will be proud again. (Applause.)

That is the future I want for our people. That is the future I want for America -- a nation where we are proud, prosperous, united, and free.

Today, I am asking every citizen to join me in dreaming big and bold and daring things -- beautiful things -- for our country. I am asking every member of Congress, of which we have many with us today, to join me in unleashing America's full potential. I am asking everyone in this room and across the nation to join me in demanding nothing but the best for our nation and for our people.

And if we do these things, and if we care for and support each other, and love each other, then we will truly make America great again.

Thank you. God bless you. (Applause.) God bless you, everybody. Thank you. Thank you very much. Governor, thank you. Thank you, Governor. Thank you, Senator. Thank you. Thank you, everybody.

END

2:14 P.M. CDT

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump Saluting American Heroes | Struthers, OH
Date: Tuesday, July 25, 2017 8:54:39 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

July 25, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
SALUTING AMERICAN HEROES

AMVETS Post 44
Struthers, Ohio

6:28 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Look at all those cameras back there. Isn't that nice? (Laughter.) We love Ohio. Boy, do we love Ohio. (Applause.)

AUDIENCE MEMBER: Ohio loves you!

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you. And I'm going to be speaking about you in a couple of minutes. You are something. You are brave and strong, and we're going to be talking about you. And that's why we're here, to talk about you. So thank you very much.

And thank you, Secretary Shulkin, for the introduction -- a special guy. And he's doing a tremendous job in leadership of the VA. He's working every day to keep our promise to take care of our great veterans.

Now, I went all over Ohio, but I went all over almost every state, and the veterans were a very, very big topic for me. You know that. And I think what we're doing, it's never been done before. We just had a bill -- the VA Accountability bill. They've been trying to get it for many, many decades. They were unable to get it, and we got it. That means people are accountable. (Applause.) That means people are accountable for taking care of our vets. And if they don't care proper care, we hold them accountable. So I think it's just great.

So, Secretary, thank you very much. I appreciate it.

I also want to recognize two veterans here with us who now serve the American people as members of our Cabinet -- Secretary Zinke and Secretary Perry. And we're going to be a net exporter of energy very shortly. Where is our Perry? Come here. (Applause.)

And Secretary of the Interior controls about, what, 22 percent of the entire United States. So when somebody thinks they're big landlords, they're actually very small compared to him. (Laughter.)

SECRETARY ZINKE: He's in real estate. He knows. (Laughter.)

THE PRESIDENT: It's great to be back in Youngstown. It was an incredible time we had. And you know the numbers, and you saw for many, many years Democrats -- and they're really great -- but Democrats, they win in Youngstown. But not this time. (Laughter and applause.) Right? They started to get a little nervous at the beginning of that evening when they see Youngstown seems to be going the other way. That hasn't happened in a lot of decades.

And I hear we're doing better in the polls, even right now, than we were even on election night, in so many different places -- swing states, et cetera -- because they see what we're doing with jobs. The jobs are the best they've been in 17 years. The stock market hit another all-time high today. We're doing trade deals. And, you know, we have statutory length problems where you have to wait statutorily before you do them. But everybody has been put on notice.

We're renegotiating NAFTA. And if we don't get the deal we want, we'll terminate NAFTA. NAFTA has been a disaster for Youngstown. It's been a disaster for Ohio. And people are coming back, if you look at Ohio. But if you look at Michigan and other places, the auto industry is starting to come back in a very, very big way. You see what's happening with coal. Coal is coming -- clean coal. We love clean coal. And it's coming back.

I especially want to thank John and Jan Brown whose leadership in AMVETS has improved the lives of so many. Thank you. Thank you. (Applause.) Thank you, John. Thank you, Jan. And they were with us right from the beginning, first time I was here. First time. We really appreciate it, Jan. Thank you very much. Is he a good husband? Or just average? (Laughter.)

MRS. BROWN: (Inaudible.)

THE PRESIDENT: I know he is.

To all the veterans with us this evening, we're here to honor you, to celebrate your service, and to thank you for your sacrifice. A grateful nation salutes you. And that's from the bottom of the President's heart -- a truly grateful nation salutes you.

All week at the White House, we are celebrating American heroes. And nothing fills our hearts with more pride than to be with those who risked everything to protect our citizens and preserve our way of life.

This evening, we're joined by veterans from every major engagement since World War II. You have crossed oceans, trekked deserts, scaled mountains, and cut your way through jungles to secure our nation and defend our people. And nobody -- throughout history, nobody has done it better than you.

You gave all that you have for our country and for victory. We love victory, don't we? (Applause.) We haven't had enough victory, but we're having it now. We're seeing it. We're having it now. You carried out your duty with honor, courage and devotion. And with your sacrifice, you earned our freedom.

In my administration, we will always protect those who protect us. Believe me, we will protect you because you have protected us.

AUDIENCE MEMBER: Thank you, sir.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you, sir. Thank you very much. I tell you, thank you very much. That includes reforming the Department of Veterans Affairs -- where David is doing such an incredible job -- so we can serve you as faithfully as you served our nation.

Since my first day in office, we've taken one action after another to make sure that our veterans get the care they so richly deserve. We've begun to process a -- seamlessly transferring veterans' medical records. Horrible situation. You couldn't get your medical records. And now it's so easy and so good. And the system is fixed, finally, after all of these years. (Applause.)

We've published wait times at every VA facility. I used to go around and talk about the veterans and they'd stand on line for nine days, seven days, four days -- that was a good one -- fifteen days. People that could have been given a prescription and been better right away end up dying waiting on line. That's not happening anymore.

And we have choice. If that happens, you're going to go out to the doctor. We're going to have choice, David. And it seems so obvious to me. Even before I really got into the nitty-gritty of the VA, it just seemed like -- why would this great veteran, who protected us, stand on line for days and days and days and wait for a simple solution where it became a big problem because of those time delays.

And we are now doing choice. And you go out and you take care of it with a great doctor. Hopefully, you have a great doctor. If he's not so good, you get another one, right? (Laughter.)

We've delivered same-day mental health services at every VA medical center. And so many of the veterans would come up to me during the campaign, and they really stressed how important the mental health aspect of what we're doing is.

We have nearly doubled the number of veterans given approvals to see the doctor of their choice. So not only is it choice, but we've doubled up and now we're going to be tripling up very shortly.

And, so importantly, I have signed new historic legislation to ensure that every single federal VA worker has to do what they have to do. They're going to be held accountable. (Applause.)

The pushback on that bill was unbelievable. I said to myself, oh, that should be easy. And then I looked at 40 years of turmoil trying to get it through. And we won't attack any particular group, but you understand why it was not easy to get through. Because some people didn't want that. They wanted it to be that certain workers could do a horrible job. And most of the workers are great. And the doctors -- a lot of the doctors in the VA are phenomenal talents -- phenomenal. But now we're going to be able to get to those doctors.

You've put America first every day of your lives, and now we have a VA that will truly put our veterans first -- veterans. Your stories are America's stories, and your names are the names of true American heroes.

I'd like to honor one such hero who is with us tonight: Robert M. Bishop. (Applause.) He looks good.

Nearly 76 years ago, Bob was a gunner aboard the USS Tennessee in Pearl Harbor when the Japanese bombs struck the turrets of that once-great ship.

During the attack, Bob was below the deck at his battle station for four excruciating hours of fire and hell. Five of his crewmembers never made it off the ship, giving their last breath in this courageous and incredible service to our country.

Bob stayed with his ship after the attack. And once it was repaired -- which went, actually, much faster than it goes today, folks -- you'll have to explain that one, folks. (Laughter.)

AUDIENCE MEMBER: And it cost less.

THE PRESIDENT: It cost a lot less. (Laughter.) He served on the Tennessee for another four-and-a-half years, fighting in some of the greatest engagements in the Pacific Ocean.

After World War II, Bob and his wife Doris moved back to Ohio. Good choice, Bob. That is a good choice. I love this state. Remember at the beginning, they always said, there is no victory without Ohio. Right, Mr. Chairman? Boy, did we win Ohio. Right? Remember? (Applause.) And it wasn't like it was close. That was a -- that was a big one.

AUDIENCE MEMBER: Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you. Thank you very much. Where Bob served in the Navy Reserve and also worked in the steel industry for over 50 years. This year, Bob and Doris celebrated -- now, you're going to have to explain this to me -- their 74th wedding anniversary. Wow. (Applause.) That is fantastic. That is so beautiful.

He's been back to Pearl Harbor eight times to pay tribute to his comrades. And it is with his -- really, this great wish of his and the great wish of so many people that know Bob, that he will attend the 80th anniversary of Pearl Harbor on the eve of his 101st birthday. And if your party gets -- (applause) -- and Bob, if your party gets a little bit cheap with the money, I'll pay for it, okay? (Applause.) Right? Right?

So, Bob, the depth of your love for the country -- you really inspire us all. Today, I'm truly honored to present you with a Certificate of Recognition for your heroic sacrifice, your lifetime of service, and your undying devotion to our great nation. Thank you, Bob.

Where is that beautiful certificate? Oh, nice frame. They never give me frames. They just give me the paper. I have to go out and get my own frame. It's never great. Thank you, Bob. Thank you. Congratulations. (Applause.)

To every veteran here this evening, your courage is the strength of our nation, and your patriotism is the beating heart of our shared destiny. Your stories will inspire generations of Americans to fight and to win for our country and for our great, beautiful American flag that we all honor.

May God bless you. May God bless our veterans. And may God bless the United States of America. And thank you very much, it's such an honor to be with you again. You are special people in a special state. Thank you. Thank you. (Applause.)

END

6:42 P.M. EDT

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump to Civilian Heroes and Law Enforcement Officials
Date: Wednesday, October 04, 2017 5:46:42 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

Release For Immediate
October 4, 2017

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
TO CIVILIAN HEROES AND LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICIALS

Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department
Las Vegas, Nevada

12:54 P.M. PDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much, Governor. And we really appreciate that. And I will tell you, the people of Nevada and the extraordinary city have shown the world their incredible character, courage, and resolve. Nevada really is a very, very special place.

I'm honored to be here today at the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department in the company of heroes. Thank you to our police, our firefighters, and to our first responders, and of course to Sheriff Lombardo. Incredible job you've done.

Mayor Goodman -- hello, Mayor Goodman. Senator Heller, thank you very much. Senator Cortez Masto. Majority Leader. Where is Kevin -- Majority Leader? Kevin McCarthy. Adam Laxalt. All of the great congressmen that we have with us today from both parties, we just are very honored that you could be with us.

And on behalf of a grateful nation, Melania and I thank each and every one of you in law enforcement. In the depths of horror, we will always find hope in the men and women who risk their lives for ours. The mass murder that took place on Sunday night fills America's heart with grief. America is truly a nation in mourning.

I visited the hospital earlier today where many victims are still recovering from their wounds, and we ask God to ease their suffering and to speed their healing. We pray for the recovery of the injured and those injured officers who so bravely threw themselves into danger when duty called. And we grieve the loss of the law enforcement personnel who were killed in this vicious attack.

Many families tonight will go to bed in a world that is suddenly empty. The people they so dearly love were torn away from them forever.

Our souls are stricken with grief for every American who lost a husband or a wife, a mother or a father, a son or a daughter. We know that your sorrow feels endless. We stand together to help you carry your pain. You're not alone. We will never leave your side.

Here at the police department, we remember one of our own who died this week, Charles Hartfield. He was a very, very special person. Officer Hartfield was a proud veteran, a devoted husband, a loving father. His death is a tragic loss for this police force, for this city, and for our great nation.

We struggle for the words to explain to our children how such evil can exist, how there can be such cruelty and such suffering. But we cannot be defined by the evil that threatens us, or the violence that incites such terror.

We're defined by our love, our caring, and our courage. In the darkest moments, what shines most brightly is the goodness that thrives in the hearts of our people. That goodness is our lighthouse. And our solace is knowledge that the souls of those who passed are now at peace in Heaven.

Here on Earth, we are blessed to be surrounded by heroes. As one eyewitness recounted this week: "While everyone else was crouching, police officers were standing up as targets, just trying to direct people and tell them where to go." The officers were standing up in the line of fire to help those in danger and to find out where those horrible shots were coming from.

Words cannot describe the bravery that the whole world witnessed on Sunday night. Americans defied death and hatred with love and with courage. When the word -- and the worst of humanity strikes -- and strike it did -- the best of humanity responds.

Parents and spouses used their own bodies as shields to protect their loved ones. Americans dashed into a hail of bullets to rescue total strangers.

Joining us today are many of the heroes who were here during that horrible moment, that horrible night, including Las Vegas Metropolitan Police officers Tyler Peterson and Tana Gurule, and civilian Aaron Stalker.

Officer Peterson was on his second day on the job when the shooting began. I just visited with him in the hospital. Within minutes, he joined a group of officers rushing between flying bullets to clear the fairground and save lives.

Officer Gurule was off-duty attending the concert. Although she was unarmed, as soon as the shooting began, she threw on a yellow police vest and began evacuating victims.

And Aaron Stalker, a veteran, rushed to the scene to search for his loved ones, but when he couldn't find them, he began helping every person he could. As he recounts: "We used the plastic barriers as gurneys to carry the injured to transportation. I made splints out of whatever I could find and used anything to stop the horrible bleeding."

Among the wounded was the mother of Aaron's girlfriend. She is still in the hospital, and we are all pulling for her.

To every hero we [who] helped -- every hero saved so many lives. And believe me, a grateful nation thanks you. The example of those whose final act was to sacrifice themselves for those they loved should inspire all of us to show more love every day for the people who grace our lives.

In the months ahead, we will all have to wrestle with the horror of what has unfolded this week, but we will struggle through it together. We will endure the pain together. And we will overcome together as Americans.

May God bless and watch over those who protect us. May God bring healing to the families of the wounded, the injured, and the fallen. And may God bless our great country, America. Thank you very much. Thank you. Thank you, Governor. Thank you very much.

END

1:02 P.M.

PDT

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Remarks by President Trump to the American Farm Bureau Annual Convention | Nashville, TN
Date: Monday, January 08, 2018 6:02:57 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release
8, 2018

January

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT TRUMP
TO THE AMERICAN FARM BUREAU ANNUAL CONVENTION

Gaylord Opryland Resort and Convention Center
Nashville, Tennessee

3:11 P.M. CST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. Oh, you're so lucky. You people know real estate because they have -- all these rooms all over this beautiful building are packed, but you're here with us. Right? (Applause.) And I say, packed with our people, so it's great.

But thank you very much, Secretary Perdue, for the kind introduction. There could be no better person to be our Secretary of Agriculture -- a man known, trusted, and respected by your industry. That's for sure.

I'm thrilled to be back in the amazing state of Tennessee. (Applause.) Here, as the state slogan goes, we see America at its absolute best. And you're doing well. You're doing a lot better since November 8th, I might add. (Laughter and applause.)

At the same time, it's true of the people gathered here today, in our nation's farmer -- and you know that -- our nation's farmers are just the most incredible people, and we are doing a job for you. You're seeing it like nobody else -- regulation, death tax, so much. You're a big beneficiary, and you're really producing like nobody else. So I just want to thank you for that. (Applause.)

And that's why I'm so honored to be the first President to address the American Farm Bureau in more than 25 years. What happened? Where are they? What happened? (Applause.) What happened? Where are they?

And you know this is your 99th year, so I was very disappointed to hear that. (Laughter.) You understand. A hundred is so much cooler, I have to be honest. (Laughter.) So I'll be back, I think. Next year,

I'll come back. All right? We'll come back. (Applause.)

I want to thank Governor Haslam and Mrs. Haslam -- wonderful people -- for joining us, along with members of the Tennessee congressional delegation. And I, sort of, have this beautiful list that I wrote. Some of us came in on Air Force One. And they're great people, and they're fighting for you.

In addition to the Governor and your great Secretary, Senator Bob Corker. And they're out here someplace. Bob? (Applause.) Senator Lamar Alexander is here. Senator Pat Roberts. (Applause.) Thank you, Pat. Oh, does he love the farmers. Pat, does he love those farmers. Right, Pat? Stand up, Pat. Do you love the farmers, Pat? "Yes." He'll come in -- we're talking about a different subject, he'll say, "What about the farmers?" That's good. That's why they love you.

Representative Diane Black -- terrific woman. (Applause.) Representative Marsha Blackburn. Marsha. (Applause.) Representative Scott DesJarlais. I love that name. (Applause.) Hi, Scott. Thank you, Scott. Right from the beginning. Representative Chuck Fleischmann. (Applause.) Representative David Kustoff. Thank you, David. (Applause.) Representative Phil Roe. (Applause.)

I talk about Zippy, so I don't have to mention Zippy Duvall. I'll talk about him in this speech. (Applause.)

Tom Nassif. Where's Tom? Tom? Thank you, Tom. And Mark Morris, State Senate Majority Leader.

All right, I've done my job now. All right? Okay. (Applause.) I've done my job. Did I do a good job? Did I leave out anybody? I hope not. It's always trouble when you do that. You left out one person; it's like for the rest your life they never speak to you, so -- (laughter) -- it's always very dangerous. Thank you very much.

I'm also thrilled to see one of my good friends and early supporters -- and that is Tom. And I just said, president and CEO Tom Nassif.

I also want to thank the American Farm Bureau and -- Zippy, I said I was going to mention you, and I am going to mention you because you have been there since the beginning. And that tractor that you drove during the inauguration was a very, very special moment. So I want to thank Zippy Duvall. Thank you, Zippy. Thank you. Thank you. (Applause.) It was a special day.

From that day on, we have been working every day to deliver for America's farmers just as they work every single day to deliver for us.

We know that our nation was founded by farmers. Our independence was won by farmers. Our continent was tamed by farmers. So true. Our armies have been fed by farmers and made of farmers. And throughout our history, farmers have always, always, always led the way. Are you surprised to hear that, farmers? I don't think so. (Applause.) You have led the way. Great people.

The men and women in this room come from different backgrounds and from all across our land, but each of you carries the same title that's been proudly borne by patriots and pioneers, inventors and entrepreneurs, the title of -- very proudly -- American farmer. Thank you very much. (Applause.)

You embody the values of hard work, grit, self-reliance and sheer determination we need to -- did you ever hear this expression? -- make America great again. Has anybody ever -- (applause) --

And we're seeing already -- it's very early -- 11 months -- the incredible results. We have created more than 2 million new jobs since the election. Substantially more. Economic growth has surged past 3 percent, something that wasn't supposed to happen for a long time. We're way ahead of schedule. Unemployment is at a 17-year low. By the way, African American unemployment is the lowest it's ever been in the history of our records. (Applause.) Great. I told you.

The stock market is hitting one all-time record after another, boosting your 401(k)s and retirement accounts for everyday Americans. Everybody happy with your 401(k)? (Applause.) Because if you're not, there's something very wrong. (Laughter.)

I had a policeman in New York come up to me and said, Mr. President -- I was shaking hands -- I love our -- do we love our police and our uniform? (Applause.) And he came up -- he was on line and we're taking pictures, and nice event, and he said, "Sir, I want to thank you for my 401(k)." I'd never thought in terms of this way. I said, I think I'm going to use this every once in a while. He said, "My 401(k) is up 39 percent. It's so good, my wife thinks I'm" -- don't forget this is like in nine months when I met him -- he said, "My wife thinks I'm an investment genius. Thank you, sir. Thank you." (Laughter.)

And I said, you know what, based on the stocks, 39 is not that good. You're not really doing that well. (Laughter.) Don't tell your wife that.

The American Dream is roaring back to life. And we have just signed into law the most significant tax cuts and reforms in American history. (Applause.) It's a total of $5.5 trillion in tax cuts, with most of those benefits going to working families, small businesses, and who? The family farmer. (Applause.) And I hate to say this, but your competing party wants to raise those taxes. They want to raise them. Can't let that happen. We've worked too hard to get them.

Businesses across America have already started to raise wages, and more than 100 companies have already given bonuses and other benefits to hundreds of thousands of workers as a result of these massive tax cuts. You see it happening every day. Today, they just announced more -- $1,000, sometimes more, per employee. Hundreds of thousands of employees, and overall millions of employees.

We have over a million workers that have already received a tax cut bonus, something that nobody even thought when we made the bill. Nobody thought of that. It happened. AT&T came out, another one came out, another one. Then they started copying. Now the ones that didn't get it, everyone is saying where's mine? So they're all going to have it. So we never thought about it, and frankly, that worked out fantastically well -- even before the February date, where you're going to start seeing a lot more money in your paycheck.

And yet, every Democrat in the House and every Democrat in the Senate voted against tax cuts for the American farmer and for the American worker. But Republicans came together and delivered historic relief for our farmers and our middle class. (Applause.) And it wasn't easy. And we cannot let anything happen to that. And if the Democrats ever had the chance, the first thing they would do is get rid of it and raise up your taxes, sometimes by 40, 50, 60 percent higher than you're paying right now. We can't have that. That will undermine everything that we've done. You see the record business all over the world; they're talking about the United States again, all over the world. We cannot let anything happen to what we're doing. (Applause.)

Under the really large tax cut -- I always call it massive; sometimes they say huge. (Laughter.) Not a bad one. Huge tax cut. But our huge tax cut that we just passed, Americans will be paying less in taxes and keeping more of their own money to do what you want. You can save it. You can spend it. But it's all good for our country.

We've lowered tax rates, nearly doubled the standard deduction, and doubled the child tax credit. (Applause.) It's a big thing.

Under this new law, the typical family of four earning $75,000 will see an income tax cut of more than $2,000 each, slashing their tax bill in half each year. (Applause.)

American businesses are going from the highest tax rate in the developed world last year -- the highest in the developed world, think of it -- to one of the most competitive this year. From 35 percent -- which is unacceptable -- all the way down to 21 percent. And on top of that, you have a lot of advantages.

Small- and mid-size businesses will receive massive tax cuts. So a lot of the folks in this room. (Applause.) They'll be able to deduct 20 percent of their business income. All American businesses, including American farmers, will be able to deduct 100 percent of the cost of new equipment in the year you make the investment. That is something that is tremendous. (Applause.) That is something that I think is going to be the sleeper of the bill. You deduct it all in one year, as opposed to over many years. That's a tremendous thing.

And from now on, most family farms and small-business owners will be spared -- and you're going to be spared, and it really is the word punishment of the deeply unfair estate tax, known as the death tax -- so you can keep your farms in the family. (Applause.) Get up. (Laughter.) That was a tough one to get. That was a tough one. (Applause.) Obviously, you love your families; otherwise, you wouldn't be standing for that one. Not going to help you much; going to help them a lot. (Laughter and applause.)

And what's been happening is, you know, you have a farm and it does well, but its value is more than the income really would justify. And what happens is families were forced to take these farms and sell them at a fire-sale price. And they go out and borrow too much money, and then they end up losing the farm. It's not going to happen anymore, folks. It's not going to happen. So I congratulate you. That was a tough one to get approved of all of them. (Applause.)

In every decision we make, we are honoring America's proud farming legacy. Years of crushing taxes, crippling regulations -- and it's never been worse than it was before I got here; it was horrible -- and corrupt politics left our communities hurting, our economy stagnant, and millions of hardworking Americans completely forgotten.

But they, guess what, are not forgotten anymore. No more. (Applause.) I used to call them the forgotten men and women, and then when everyone saw them coming into the polls, the other side said, "How do we get some of them?" They were unbelievable. They are forgotten no more. Remember that. You're forgotten no more. (Applause.) Thank you.

We're fighting for our farmers and we're fighting for our country, and for our great American flag. We are fighting for that flag. (Applause.) We want our flag respected. We want our flag respected. And we want our national anthem respected also. (Applause.)

AUDIENCE: USA! USA! USA!

THE PRESIDENT: There's plenty of space for people to express their views and to protest, but we love our flag, we love our anthem. And we want to keep it that way. (Applause.)

As we put money back in the pockets of all Americans, including our farmers and ranchers, we're also putting an end to the regulatory assault on your way of life. And it was an assault indeed.

For years, many of you have endured burdensome fines, inspections, paperwork, and relentless intrusion from an army of regulators at the EPA, the FDA, and countless other federal agencies. Is that right, by the way? (Applause.)

That's why I'm truly proud to report that within our first 11 months, my administration has cancelled or delayed over 1,500 planned regulatory actions or assaults -- more than any President in the history of the United States.

We have cut twenty-two regulations for every one new regulation. Think of that one. (Applause.) You remember when I would talk to you -- when I'd come down to Tennessee and different places, I'd say, for every new regulation, we're going to cut one extra regulation. Right? We did better. One -- and we cut twenty-two. Instead of two, it was twenty-two. So we're very honored by that. (Applause.)

If the Democrats got their way, they would reinstate every single regulation that we're cutting, and add many more burdensome rules that don't do anything but hamstring our economy and burden our people and our farmers.

My administration is in the process of rolling back a rule that hit our farmers and ranchers very, very hard -- the terrible Waters of the United States rule. You know about that. (Applause.) It sounds so nice. It sounds so innocent. And it was a disaster. You know that. It sounded so good. The title is so beautiful. That's where it stopped. (Laughter.)

It was absolutely -- and I have to say this: When I signed it, I said, oh, I'm going to be killed on this one. And you know what? People came to me and they saw me, and they were crying. Men that were tough and strong, women that were tough and strong -- they'd see me, their tears coming down their eyes because I gave them back their property, I gave them back their farms. They couldn't use them. (Applause.) We ditched the rule, I call it. We ditched the rule. (Applause.)

We're streamlining regulations that have blocked cutting-edge biotechnology, setting free our farmers to innovate, thrive, and to grow. Oh, are you happy you voted for me. (Laughter.) You are so lucky that I gave you that privilege. The other choice wasn't going to work out too well for the farmers, I hate to tell you -- (laughter) -- or the miners or anybody else. Because we know that our farmers are our future. So true.

We are removing harmful restrictions on forestry so you can log more timber, plant more trees, and export more renewable resources to other countries. Make money doing it. (Applause.)

We're restoring the rule of law and protecting our cherished Second Amendment. (Applause.) That was another thing that would have been gone had the other side won, but that wasn't so close. It didn't turn out to be. Remember? (Laughter.) "There is no way to 270." And there wasn't; we got 306 or 304. (Laughter.) "There was no way to 270." We ended up with 304, after two were taken away from us somehow. I don't know how that one -- we have 306, then it ended up being 304. You'll explain that to me some day.

To level the playing field for our great American exporters -- our farmers and ranchers, as well as our manufacturers -- we are reviewing all of our trade agreements to make sure they are fair and reciprocal -- reciprocal, so important.

On NAFTA, I am working very hard to get a better deal for our country and for our farmers and for our manufacturers. It's under negotiation as we speak. (Applause.) But think of it: When Mexico is making all of that money, when Canada is making all of that money, it's not the easiest negotiation. But we're going to make it fair for you people again.

Now we want to see even more victories for the American farmer and for the American rancher. Here today is Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Pat Roberts. And I'm looking forward to working with Congress to pass the Farm Bill, on time, so that it delivers for all of you. And

I support a bill that includes crop insurance, unless you don't want me to. (Applause.) Thank you. I guess you like it. Right? Good, because if I heard no applause, I'd say, forget it, give it up. (Laughter.) Now I can't do that. No, we're working hard on the farm bill and I think it's going to go well.

We're also moving swiftly to bring hope and prosperity to struggling rural communities. Last April, I commissioned a task force to meet with farmers and local communities to find the greatest barriers to rural prosperity.

Today, this task force is releasing its final report, and I am taking action right at that beautiful table, right out of the hills of Tennessee, right there. I'm going to be signing two very important bills.

The task force heard from farmers that broadband Internet access is an issue of vital concern to their communities and businesses. Is that a correct statement? (Applause.)

That is why today, in a few minutes, I will take the first step to expand access to broadband Internet in rural America -- (applause) -- so you can compete on a level playing field, which you were not able to do. Not fair. I will sign two presidential orders to provide broader and faster, and better Internet coverage. Make sure you look up @realDonaldTrump. Right? (Laughter.) I have a feeling you get that anyway. It's our only way around the media. Fake media. (Applause.)

I also want to thank Congresswoman Marsha Blackburn, who is here with us today, for her leadership on getting broadband. She's very, very strong on it -- getting it to rural America. Thank you, Marsha. (Applause.)

The task force also focused on the need to rebuild our crumbling rural infrastructure. We've already slashed harmful restrictions that delayed critical infrastructure projects for decades and decades. Hard to believe. And we are proposing infrastructure reforms to ensure that our rural communities have access to the best roadways, railways, and waterways anywhere in the world. And that's what's happening. We're going to be spending the necessary funds, and we're going to get you taken care of. It's about time. (Applause.) And these projects are going to be built -- like I do -- under budget and ahead of schedule. Right? (Applause.)

We are confronting the scourge of drug addiction and overdoses that plagues far too many of our rural communities and claims too many American lives all over our country.

We are fighting the opioid epidemic, and we are proudly supporting the men and women of law enforcement, including our wonderful ICE officers and Border Patrol Agents. These are incredible people who endorsed me during the campaign, and they are incredible. (Applause.) They're doing a great job at the border, by the way.

We are going to end chain migration. We are going to end the lottery system, and we are going to build the wall. (Applause.)

Every American child deserves to grow up in a safe community and to live a life full of dignity, purpose and hope. That is the future we all seek and we will fiercely defend for all Americans.

We see the promise of tomorrow in the incredible young farmers who have joined us today -- students who are achieving incredible things through amazing organizations like FFA and 4-H. (Applause.) Great people. Great people. Thank you. Great people. It's the future of our country. That's the future of our country. Great young people. Their devotion to our nation inspires us all. Really does.

But to ensure that our young people reach their potential, and our nation fulfills its destiny, we must remember and honor our history. We have to remember our history. Mostly good, some not so good, but you learn from it. We have to remember our history.

That is why I want to close my remarks today by commemorating one of the most important days in American history -- today, January 8th. The story began right here in Tennessee. And like so many of the great stories of American history, many of its heroes were American farmers.

It was a pivotal moment in the War of 1812. At the time, the British Army seemed totally unstoppable. They had just beaten Napoleon in Europe, and set fire to the United States Capitol. But that did not stop a man named General Andrew Jackson of Tennessee. Did you ever hear of Andrew Jackson of Tennessee? (Applause.) He was a great general and a great President, and his ragtag militia of patriots who were ready to fight to defend American independence.

In December of 1814, Jackson and his Tennessee volunteers had made their way to New Orleans to defend that crucial port from the British. Through grueling winter weeks, horrible weather, icy rain, hunger, and sleepless nights, a few thousand American patriots fought to hold back a British force nearly twice as large and that everybody thought was totally unstoppable.

Finally, on this day, 203 years ago, the British launched their full-scale attack, and it was brutal. It was brutal. They expected to secure swift victory and seize control of the Mississippi River. And that would have been catastrophic for what we were doing.

It was not the first time the British had underestimated the American spirit. Do you notice how so many people underestimate the Americans? They're not underestimating us so much anymore, folks. (Applause.)

But Jackson's men quickly proved them very, very wrong. Within only one half an hour, an outnumbered force -- the American force -- achieved victory over one of the world's mightiest empires and one of the strongest armies ever seen. Tennessee -- congratulations, Tennessee. (Applause.) I like you too. I like you too, Tennessee.

The Americans held their ground. Independence was secured. Andrew Jackson's name was etched into history. And those patriot farmers proved once again that, in the words of Andrew Jackson, farmers are the "basis of society, and true friends of liberty." Great story. Love that story. Have great respect for Andrew Jackson. (Applause.)

Today, the Battle of New Orleans lives on in the American soul, and it lives on in each and every one of you.

Our task is to preserve the freedom that American soldiers have fought for and died for in every generation.

Our task is to uphold the values and principles that define who we are as a nation and as a people.

Our task is to love, cherish, and protect the flag and the Constitution of the United States.

If we do these things, if we reawaken the confidence that inspired Jackson's victory -- our country is getting its confidence back again -- the character that stormed the beaches of Normandy, and the courage that sent pilgrims across the ocean and astronauts to the moon, then there is nothing we can't do. (Applause.)

For America, there is no task too great, no goal too large, no dream beyond our reach. We are witnessing a new era of patriotism, prosperity, and pride. And at the forefront of this exciting new chapter is the great American farmer. Thank you. (Applause.)

A phrase that I've heard all my life, but I will repeat right now -

- very simple, but very, very accurate and concise: Farm country is God's country. So true. (Applause.)

Thank you very much, Tennessee. And thank you for the honor of speaking here this afternoon. I'm thrilled to stand with you today, and I will be standing with you for many years to come. Together, we truly are making America great again.

God bless you. God bless everyone. Thank you. Thank you very much. (Applause.)

* * * * *

(The President moves to signing table and back to podium.)

"Streamlining and expediting requests to locate broadband facilities in rural America." (Applause.)

(The executive order is signed.)

Might as well be efficient. We'll do the other one while I'm here. Nice job in putting a mic at that table, folks. (Laughter.)

"Supporting broadband tower facilities in rural America and federal properties managed by the Department of the Interior." Those towers are going to go up, and you're going to have great, great broadband. Thank you. (Applause.)

(The presidential memorandum is signed.)

Thank you, everybody.

END

3:45

P.M. CST

Unsubscribe

Thank you, XXXXXX, for that introduction.

I love Alaska. My wife Lola and I actually both have ties. Her dad worked up here while she was growing up and I did quite a bit of training while I was in the military.

And, as I say to my friend Senator Murkowski, Montana and Alaska aren't all that different...both states have a robust outdoor culture and a frontier outlook and we're both blessed with abundant energy resources.

Speaking of, some of you may know that my path to Interior Secretary was a little different than most. I hadn't spent much time in Washington, D.C., or served as a career politician. Instead, I served in the military, just like 10 percent of all Alaskans. Your state and mine have highest percentage of veterans. We should be proud of that.

So during my Navy years, in addition to getting up to Alaska to train, I also spent a lot of time in the Middle East on oil platforms. Though it was a little different than what you all did. I was mostly keeping bad guys off of them.

I'm pleased to be with the thousands of forward-looking and hard-working men and women of the Alaska energy industry.

In my view, energy is important for three reasons.

First, it's better for the environment that the U.S. produces energy. Thanks to advancements in technology, we can responsibly develop our energy resources and return the land to equal or better quality than it was before.

I've spent a lot of time overseas, and I can tell you with 100 percent certainty it is better to develop our energy here under reasonable regulations, than have it produced overseas under little or no regulations.

Second, energy production is an absolute boon to the economy, supporting more than 9 million jobs and supplying affordable power for manufacturing, home heating, and transportation needs. And I can tell you, it's going to take a whole lot of energy to rebuild America's aging infrastructure.

And lastly, achieving American energy independence will strengthen our national security by reducing our reliance on foreign oil and allowing us to assist our allies with their energy needs.

As a military commander, I saw how the power of the American economy and American energy defeated our adversaries around the world. The world is safer when American is strong.

I am an unabashed supporter of Teddy Roosevelt whose views about America's holdings are best inscribed on the Roosevelt Arch at Yellowstone National Park – “for the benefit and enjoyment of the people.”

Contrary to what some believe, being a good steward of our land and resources does not mean locking it up and banning public access. Teddy Roosevelt himself said that, "Conservation means development as much as it does protection."

Yet during the previous administration, nearly 94 percent of the Outer Continental Shelf was off limits for responsible development. And about half of the National Petroleum Reserve-Alaska was out too.

As of March 1, 2017, only 16 million acres in the OCS (out of a total 1.7 billion acres) are under lease for oil and gas development. Of the little area that is open to development, more than 97 percent of the leases are in the Gulf of Mexico.

Offshore leasing revenues have been the second highest source of revenue to the Treasury behind personal income taxes paid. In 2008 the U.S. Treasury collected nearly $18 billion in federal OCS leasing revenues.

Yet by contrast, last year in 2016, leasing revenues collected fell to only $2.8 billion.

That's a drop of more than $15 billion that would otherwise partially go toward funding important conservation programs like the Land and Water Conservation Fund, Infrastructure, and our parks.

That's in part why President Trump and I got to work to rewrite the Five-Year Plan and get more people back to work on rigs, platforms, and other onshore oil and gas jobs.

I recognize that not all areas are appropriate for energy development, but many places provide the perfect opportunity to balance energy and conservation priorities. Thanks to new developments in science and technology, it is possible to responsibly develop American energy resources while being good stewards of the environment.

There is no debate that the federal government should regulate energy production within its borders and that the taxpayer should get fair value for the resources extracted. But when regulation becomes a punitive tool of political advocacy rather than public interest, there needs to be a change of course.

President Trump's America First Offshore Energy Executive Order began that course correction. That order directed me to conduct a review of the current five year offshore development plan for the Outer Continental Shelf, streamline permitting for seismic research and reconsider a host regulations hampering development.

The President and I are committed to energy dominance and his executive order was a decisive step in common sense energy policy for the benefit of the American people.

I then took immediate action to implement the President's offshore energy policy by signing two Secretarial Orders.

Those orders are meant

- to enhance opportunities for energy exploration, leasing, and development on the Outer Continental Shelf;
- establish regulatory certainty for OCS activities; and
- promote conservation stewardship, by providing jobs, energy security, and revenue for the American people.

The first order directed the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management to immediately initiate development of a new “Five Year Outer Continental Shelf Oil and Gas Leasing Program,” with full consideration given to leasing the OCS offshore Alaska, the mid- and south-Atlantic, and the Gulf of Mexico. It also directs expedited consideration of appealed, new, or resubmitted seismic permitting applications for the Atlantic and the review or rescission of other regulations outlined in the President’s executive order.

Just a couple weeks ago, I appointed Scott Angelle the new Director of the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement and he will work with our energy team to promote safety, protect the environment and conserve resources through the regulatory oversight and enforcement of energy industry operations on the U.S. Outer Continental Shelf.

He joined the bureau after more than 30 years of reforming agencies and organizations in both the public and private sectors of Louisiana. His career is characterized by a strong desire to achieve results that lead to greater success.

Today, I am announcing additional steps in our common sense energy policy for the benefit of the American people.

Today, I am signing a third Secretarial Order that will jump-start Alaskan energy production in the National Petroleum Reserve – Alaska and update resource assessments for the "1002 area" of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

The order calls for the development of a revised Integrated Activity Plan for the National Petroleum Reserve that strikes an appropriate statutory balance for promoting development while protecting surface resources.

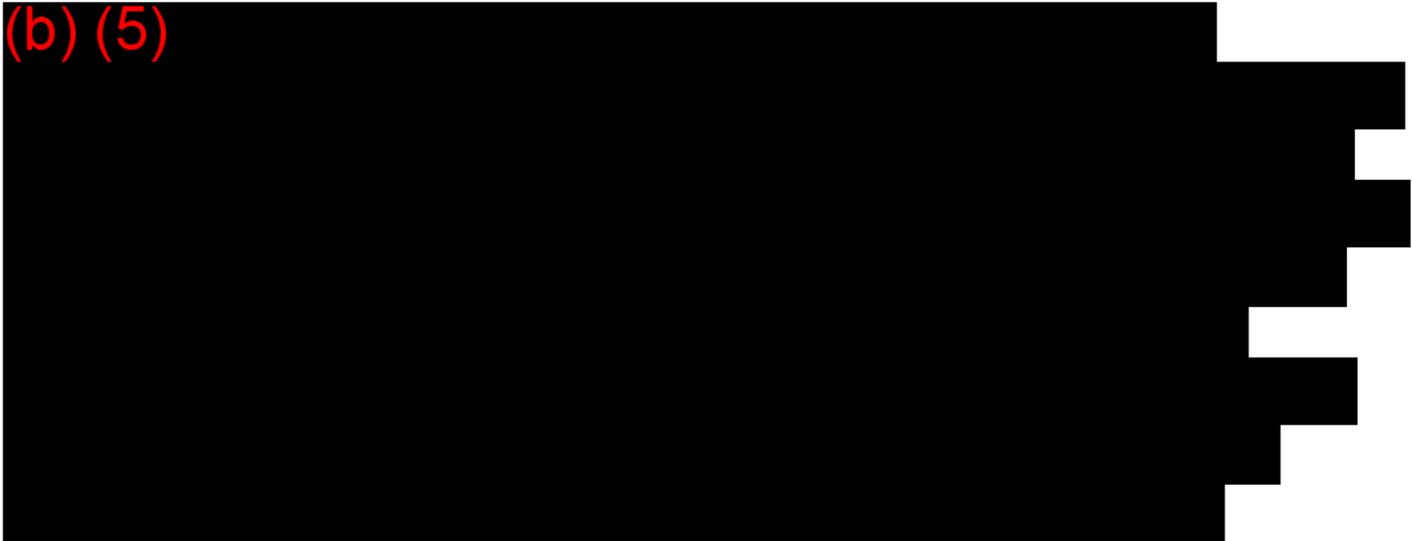

It also calls for an evaluation, under the existing Integrated Activity Plan, of ways to efficiently and effectively maximize the tracts offered for sale during the next National Petroleum Reserve lease sale.

The order also directs the Assistant Secretaries of Land and Minerals Management and Water and Science to submit a joint plan to the Counselor to the Secretary for Energy Policy for updating assessments of undiscovered, technically recoverable oil and natural gas resources on Alaska's North Slope, focusing on Federal lands that include the National Petroleum Reserve and the Section 1002 Area of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

This joint plan shall include consideration of new geological and geophysical data, as well as the potential for reprocessing existing geological and geophysical data.

(b) (5)

Regarding the National Petroleum Reserve, this land was set up with the sole intention of oil and gas production and serves a critical role in both our energy and national security. However, years of policy politics put roughly half of the National Petroleum Reserve off-limits.

Using this land for its original intent will create good paying jobs and revenue for our Northern-most city and strengthen our energy and national security.

Working with the Alaska Native community, Interior will identify areas in the National Petroleum Reserve where responsible energy development makes the most sense and devise a plan to extract resources.

We will do it in a way that respects both the environment and traditional uses of the land and maintains subsistence hunting and fishing access.

Let me close by saying that for all the needed changes we are making to the previous administration's energy policies, one thing does not change -- and that is our commitment to safety and our environment.

That remains our priority.

Nothing in the Secretarial Order I am signing today would reduce, eliminate, or modify any environmental or regulatory requirements for energy development.

We have thousands of talented and dedicated employees working on our frontlines ~~in Bureau of Ocean Energy Management and the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement~~, who are focused on ~~strict adherence to the laws governing safe development and maintaining a strong offshore safety culture~~ the safe and responsible development of our nation's energy resources.

We are going to keep it that way and we will hold companies accountable. Good stewardship of our lands and waters and ~~responsible offshore development~~ maintaining U.S. energy dominance are not mutually exclusive.

Thanks very much for the opportunity to be here today. I'll now sign this order with you.

###

- Chairman McCain, Ranking Member Reed, Members of the Committee...I'd like to introduce my friend, an American patriot
- Captain Cully Stimson is President Donald Trump's nominee for General Counsel of the United States Navy.

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE (Most Qualified for the Job)

- Important for Navy to have the most-qualified individuals in positions of leadership—Capt. Stimson fits the bill.
- We served together in the Navy, he has 20+ years experience as a lawyer, first served in Navy JAG Corps in 1990s.
- I worked with him and Congressman DeStefano on a bill to ensure victims of sexual assault in the military receive the legal services they deserve.
- Captain Stimson's story is a lifetime of commitment to both community and country.
 - Captain of the Men's Soccer Team at Kenyon College
- Graduated George Mason University School of LaW
- Navy JAG Corps – 5 years active duty
- Called back to active duty 2001, to support Joint Special Ops Task Force JAG for SEAL Group Two.
- Served as Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Detainee Affairs under Pres. George W. Bush
 - Advised Secretaries of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and Robert Gates about Pentagon detention operations.
- Has been with Heritage Foundation as a Senior Legal Fellow & Manager of their Nat'l Security Law Program since 2007
- Served our nation 2+ decades in Navy, recently as Dep. Chief Judge of Navy-Marine Corps Trial Judiciary & adjunct law prof./instructor at Naval Justice School in reserve capacity.

PERSONAL LIFE (High-Character Human Being, Fit to Serve)

- Teaching high school/coaching & mentoring young Americans—devoted countless hours to cultivating next generation.
- Chairman of the Board, U.S. Soccer Foundation (charitable arm of U.S. Soccer): offers assistance to 35,000+ underserved and minority children.
- Captain Stimson has been married since 1995. He and his wife adopted four orphans.

- Epitome of a military officer: always first one to help others
 - Dozens of rec. letters for his students
 - Quietly paid tuition for two of his mentees who could not afford to take the Law School Admission Test.
 - Founded the Bryon J. Horn Memorial Scholarship Fund in honor of a fallen fraternity brother.

BIPARTISAN LEADER (comfortable working across party lines)

- Worked with Jeh Johnson, then-General Counsel of the Dept of Defense, on a number of issues to keep our nation safe.
 - Eventually led to Capt. Stimson extending, and Johnson accepting, invitation to speak to the Heritage Foundation.
 - In that speech, Sec. Johnson remarked: “The office of General Counsel of the Defense Dept., particularly in the post-9/11 world, is in the middle of many difficult, front page issues.”
 - As General Counsel of the Navy, Capt. Stimson will confront a host of these difficult issues as well. I have full confidence in his ability to tackle them.

- Friend & brother-in-arms Capt. Stimson: Navy gaining an eminently qualified attorney, an honorable military officer, and an individual with vast experience/fidelity to law & our country.
- Long career of exemplary service in law & defense, excellent fit for the position to which he was nominated. No doubt he will be a wonderful General Counsel of the Navy.

Chairman McCain, Ranking Member Reed, and members of the Committee: it is an honor to be here today to tell you about an American patriot, a mentor, and a good friend, Captain Cully Stimson.

Captain Stimson is President Donald Trump's nominee for General Counsel of the United States Navy. I can think of no one more qualified for this job.

As a retired Navy SEAL Commander, I know just how important it is for the Navy to have the most-qualified individuals in positions of leadership, and the man I am introducing today fits the bill.

Captain Stimson and I served together in the Navy; he brings over two decades of experience as a lawyer, having first served in the Navy's Judge Advocate General's Corps, also known as the JAG Corps, in the 1990s.

In addition to our time together in the Navy, I also had the pleasure of working with him and Congressman DeStefano on a bill to ensure victims of sexual assault in the military receive the legal services they deserve.

To tell Captain Stimson's story is to tell of his lifetime of commitment to both his community and his country. He has been a leader from very early on, serving as Captain of the Men's Varsity Soccer Team at Kenyon College.

He went on to graduate from The George Mason University School of Law, and he joined the Navy as a young lawyer in 1992. For five years, he was on active duty, serving in both San Diego, California and London, England.

Captain Stimson was called back to active duty in 2001, to support the Joint Special Operations Task Force JAG for SEAL Group Two.

In President George W. Bush's administration, Captain Stimson was a Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Detainee Affairs, providing advice and counsel to Secretaries of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and Robert Gates about the Pentagon's detention operations.

Since leaving public service, he has been with the Heritage Foundation as a Senior Legal Fellow and Manager of their National Security Law Program.

Captain Stimson has served our nation for over two decades in the Navy, more recently serving as Deputy Chief Judge of the Navy-Marine Corps Trial Judiciary and an adjunct law professor and instructor at the Naval Justice School in a reserve capacity.

A bulleted list of Captain Stimson's professional achievements, however, does not paint the full picture of how this man has demonstrated himself to be the kind of high-character human being fit for service.

From teaching high school to coaching and mentoring hundreds, if not thousands, of young Americans, Captain Stimson has devoted countless hours to cultivating the next generation. He is Chairman of the Board of the U.S. Soccer Foundation, the charitable arm of U.S. Soccer, which offers assistance to more than 35,000 underserved and minority children.

A devoted family man, Captain Stimson has been married since 1995. He and his lovely wife adopted four orphans.

Captain Stimson is the epitome of a military officer, representing honor, integrity and service. He has always been the first one willing to help others, whether that has meant writing dozens of letters of recommendations for colleges, graduate schools, judicial clerkships, and jobs, or quietly paying the tuition of two of his mentees who could not afford to take the Law School Admission Test. He also founded the Bryon J. Horn Memorial Scholarship Fund, in honor of a fallen fraternity brother.

Captain Stimson is the type of public servant who is comfortable working across party lines. When President Obama's Department of Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson was General Counsel of the Department of Defense, he and Stimson worked together on a number of tough issues aimed to keep our great nation safe.

This bipartisan partnership eventually led to Captain Stimson extending, and Johnson accepting, an invitation to speak to the Heritage Foundation.

In that speech, Secretary Johnson spoke about his job, and one line from his remarks stands out in particular. "The office of General Counsel of the Defense Department," he said. "Particularly in the post-9/11 world, is in the middle of many difficult, front page issues."

In his job as General Counsel of the Navy, Captain Stimson will confront a host of these difficult issues as well. I would not be here today if I did not have full confidence in his ability to tackle them.

Captain Stimson's partnership with Secretary Johnson was not an isolated event, either; he also developed partnerships with Stephen Preston, who served as General Counsel of both the Department of Defense and the CIA under President Obama. Preston recently spoke on a panel that Captain Stimson hosted at Heritage.

In my friend and brother-in-arms Captain Stimson, the Navy is gaining an imminently qualified attorney, an honorable military officer, and an individual with vast experience, and fidelity to the law and our country.

He has a long career of exemplary service in law and defense, and is an excellent fit for the position to which he was nominated.

I have no doubt he will be a wonderful General Counsel of the Navy.

Testimony of U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan K. Zinke in support of the nomination of Captain Charles Stimson to the Department of Defense

Senate Armed Services Committee

Wednesday, July 11, 2017

Chairman McCain, Ranking Member Reed, and members of the Committee: it is an honor to be here today to tell you about an American patriot, a mentor, and a good friend, Captain Cully Stimson.

Captain Stimson is President Donald Trump's nominee for General Counsel of the United States Navy. I can think of no one more qualified for this job.

As a retired Navy SEAL Commander, I know just how important it is for the Navy to have the most-qualified individuals in positions of leadership, and the man I am introducing today fits the bill.

Captain Stimson and I served together in the Navy; he brings over two decades of experience as a lawyer, having first served in the Navy's Judge Advocate General's Corps, also known as the JAG Corps, in the 1990s.

In addition to our time together in the Navy, I also had the pleasure of working with him and Congressman DeStefano on a bill to ensure victims of sexual assault in the military receive the legal services they deserve.

To tell Captain Stimson's story is to tell of his lifetime of commitment to both his community and his country. He has been a leader from very early on, serving as Captain of the Men's Varsity Soccer Team at Kenyon College.

He went on to graduate from The George Mason University School of Law, and he joined the Navy as a young lawyer in 1992. For five years, he was on active duty, serving in both San Diego, California and London, England.

Captain Stimson was called back to active duty in 2001, to support the Joint Special Operations Task Force JAG for SEAL Group Two.

In President George W. Bush's administration, Captain Stimson was a Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Detainee Affairs, providing advice and counsel to Secretaries of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and Robert Gates about the Pentagon's detention operations.

Since leaving public service, he has been with the Heritage Foundation as a Senior Legal Fellow and Manager of their National Security Law Program.

Captain Stimson has served our nation for over two decades in the Navy, more recently serving as Deputy Chief Judge of the Navy-Marine Corps Trial Judiciary and an adjunct law professor and instructor at the Naval Justice School in a reserve capacity.

A bulleted list of Captain Stimson's professional achievements, however, does not paint the full picture of how this man has demonstrated himself to be the kind of high-character human being fit for service.

From teaching high school to coaching and mentoring hundreds, if not thousands, of young Americans, Captain Stimson has devoted countless hours to cultivating the next generation. He is Chairman of the Board of the U.S. Soccer Foundation, the charitable arm of U.S. Soccer, which offers assistance to more than 35,000 underserved and minority children.

A devoted family man, Captain Stimson has been married since 1995. He and his lovely wife adopted four orphans.

Captain Stimson is the epitome of a military officer, representing honor, integrity and service. He has always been the first one willing to help others, whether that has meant writing dozens of letters of recommendations for colleges, graduate schools, judicial clerkships, and jobs, or quietly paying the tuition of two of his mentees who could not afford to take the Law School Admission Test. He also founded the Bryon J. Horn Memorial Scholarship Fund, in honor of a fallen fraternity brother.

Captain Stimson is the type of public servant who is comfortable working across party lines. When President Obama's Department of Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson was General Counsel of the Department of Defense, he and Stimson worked together on a number of tough issues aimed to keep our great nation safe.

This bipartisan partnership eventually led to Captain Stimson extending, and Johnson accepting, an invitation to speak to the Heritage Foundation.

In that speech, Secretary Johnson spoke about his job, and one line from his remarks stands out in particular. "The office of General Counsel of the Defense Department," he said. "Particularly in the post-9/11 world, is in the middle of many difficult, front page issues."

In his job as General Counsel of the Navy, Captain Stimson will confront a host of these difficult issues as well. I would not be here today if I did not have full confidence in his ability to tackle them.

Captain Stimson's partnership with Secretary Johnson was not an isolated event, either; he also developed partnerships with Stephen Preston, who served as General Counsel of both the Department of Defense and the CIA under President Obama. Preston recently spoke on a panel that Captain Stimson hosted at Heritage.

In my friend and brother-in-arms Captain Stimson, the Navy is gaining an imminently qualified attorney, an honorable military officer, and an individual with vast experience, and fidelity to the law and our country.

He has a long career of exemplary service in law and defense, and is an excellent fit for the position to which he was nominated.

I have no doubt he will be a wonderful General Counsel of the Navy.

Big thanks to my my good friend Secretary and Air Force Captain Rick Perry. You know Texas has a history of pilots who run for governor who run for president :-)

Every week in the Trump Administration is Heroes week.

President Trump values the military, values veterans, and recognizes that veterans have more to give their country after they take off the uniform.

A third of the President's cabinet has military experience. I'm proud to be among those ranks.

As veterans you and I know our service to our country doesn't end when we take off that uniform

We all have a responsibility to continue fighting for our country and our communities – whether through public service, elected office, or going the extra mile at home.

Many of you return home to start businesses, raise families, and in some cases – I'd like to see more of – run for office. Nobody understands and appreciates our great nation like you all do.

And also, as Veterans we need to look out for our own and if we see a brother or sister struggling with the transition from soldier to civilian it's all of our responsibility to help that teammate out.

At Interior, I'm proud to have 20% of the staff is made-up of military veterans – and we plan on increasing that number.

The service and sacrifice of our warriors and their families is incredible.

This story is probably true for a lot of you: At one point during the war in Iraq, my wife Lola was at home with our two young boys while her husband, daughter, and son in law were all forward deployed.

Lola was both parents and held our small military community together while the team was deployed.

To all of the military spouses in the room today THANK YOU.

Now I'd like to introduce somebody who proves that you don't have to serve to be a true advocate and fighter for veterans and military families. Please meet my friend Secretary Dave Shulkin

Every week in the Trump Administration is Heroes week.

President Trump values the military, values veterans, and recognizes that veterans have more to give their country after they take off the uniform.

A third of the President's cabinet has military experience. I'm proud to be among those ranks.

As veterans you and I know our service to our country doesn't end when we take off that uniform

We all have a responsibility to continue fighting for our country and our communities – whether through public service, elected office, or going the extra mile at home.

Many of you return home to start businesses, raise families, and in some cases – I'd like to see more of – run for office. Nobody understands and appreciates our great nation like you all do.

And also, as Veterans we need to look out for our own and if we see a brother or sister struggling with the transition from soldier to civilian it's all of our responsibility to help that teammate out.

At Interior, I'm proud to have 20% of the staff is made-up of military veterans – and we plan on increasing that number.

The service and sacrifice of our warriors and their families is incredible.

This story is probably true for a lot of you: At one point during the war in Iraq, my wife Lola was at home with our two young boys while her husband, daughter, and son in law were all forward deployed.

Lola was both parents and held our small military community together while the team was deployed.

To all of the military spouses in the room today THANK YOU.

Now I'd like to introduce another veteran. Air Force Captain – you know Texas has a history of pilots who run for governor who run for president - my good friend Secretary Rick Perry.

OUTDOOR INDUSTRY ASSOCIATION ECONOMIC IMPACT OF REC ON PUBLIC LANDS

Thank you to Amy from OIA for the introduction. Good to see members of our business community, conservation community, and Congress represented.

I'm a 5th generation Montanan who grew up with a fly rod or rifle in hand. I grew up in America's public lands.

One of the things that scares me the most is seeing hunting and fishing become an elite sport where only wealthy landowners can afford to take their kids out.

Some of my best memories I have with my family is getting home from deployment and taking Lola and the kids deep in the wilderness to rock climb, float, hike, fish or hunt.

Recreation on public lands is both a part of our heritage and a major economic engine for our nation. Today's report is proof.

Over the years, I saw my hometown of Whitefish and Bozeman economies boom thanks to access to public lands and recreation opportunities.

The National Park Service is a major factor in the outdoor recreation economy. Visitor spending supported 318,000 jobs, provided $12.0 billion in income, and $34.9 billion in economic output to the U.S. economy last year.

In 2016, a record 330 million people visited our parks, and we are on pace to break that record in 2017– and in order to support that, we will look at innovative ways to enhance the visitor experience.

Yesterday I met with a group of outdoor recreation business leaders to discuss ways we can partner together to achieve that goal.

Under my leadership the Department will prioritize public access to public lands.

I've said it before and I'll say it again, the President and I are against the sale or transfer of federal lands. Period.

I support opening up public access to public lands.

Earlier this month I took a stand against transferring the National Bison Range.

I also opened up areas for recreation vehicles on public lands in Utah. This will allow persons with disabilities and people who just don't get around like they used to enjoy the area.

And on my first day I directed the entire department to look at opportunities across the board where we can open up access for hunting, fishing and recreation.

You'll see more from my office in the coming years on this subject.

I'm honored to be here and help highlight the important role outdoor recreation plays in our national economy. Thank you.

Outdoor Recreation Industry Roundtable At Shenandoah National Park

Thank you to Frank and Derrick for hosting me today. I see my fellow Montanan, KC Walsh is here. Good to see members of our business community, conservation community, and the Park Service represented.

I'm a 5th generation Montanan who grew up with a fly rod or rifle in hand. I grew up in America's public lands.

One of the things that scares me the most is seeing hunting and fishing become an elite sport where only wealthy landowners can afford to take their kids out.

Some of my best memories I have with my family is getting home from deployment and taking Lola and the kids deep in the wilderness to rock climb, float, hike, fish or hunt.

Recreation on public lands is both a part of our heritage and a major economic engine for our nation. Today's report is proof.

Over the years, I saw my hometown of Whitefish and Bozeman economies boom thanks to access to public lands and recreation opportunities.

The National Park Service is a major factor in the outdoor recreation economy. Visitor spending supported 318,000 jobs, provided $12.0 billion in income, and $34.9 billion in economic output to the U.S. economy.

In 2016, a record 330 million people visited our parks, and we are on pace to break that record in 2017– and in order to support that, we will look at innovative ways to enhance the visitor experience.

Under my leadership the Department will prioritize public access to public lands and public-private partnerships.

I've said it before and I'll say it again, the President and I are against the sale or transfer of federal lands. Period.

I support opening up public access to public lands.

Earlier this month I took a stand against transferring the National Bison Range.

I also opened up areas for recreation vehicles on public lands in Utah. This will allow persons with disabilities and people who just don't get around like they used to enjoy the area.

And on my first day I directed the entire department to look at opportunities across the board where we can open up access for hunting, fishing and recreation.

You'll see more from my office in the coming years on this subject.

So today I'm here to learn from you. How can we work together to bring our parks into the next century and improve visitor experience and tackle the maintenance backlog?

I'm honored to be here and I look forward to hearing your ideas about public-private partnerships in our parks. Thank you.

From: Twitter
To: Ragnar Zinke
Subject: Rep. Eric Swalwell Tweeted: Was struck at mental health forum to hear of @realDonaldTrump effect in schools, making more bullies. "Remarkable how abrupt difference is."
Date: Sunday, July 30, 2017 6:04:39 PM

Your Highlights

 Rep. Eric Swalwell
@RepSwalwell

Was struck at mental health forum to hear of @realDonaldTrump effect in schools, making more bullies. "Remarkable how abrupt difference is."

 880  9.2K  17K

 David Nather
@DavidNather

And now Price hints they're going to weaken the individual mandate. @axios

Price hints HHS might weaken individual mandate

He says the mandate is driving up costs, but insurers say premiums will rise even more without... more

axios.com

 15  47  26

 Philip Rucker
@PhilipRucker

NEW: Trump taps Kelly to enforce order, but can 'animals in the zoo' be tamed? My latest w/ @costareports & @danbalz

Trump enlists Kelly to enforce order, but can the 'animals in the zoo' be tamed?

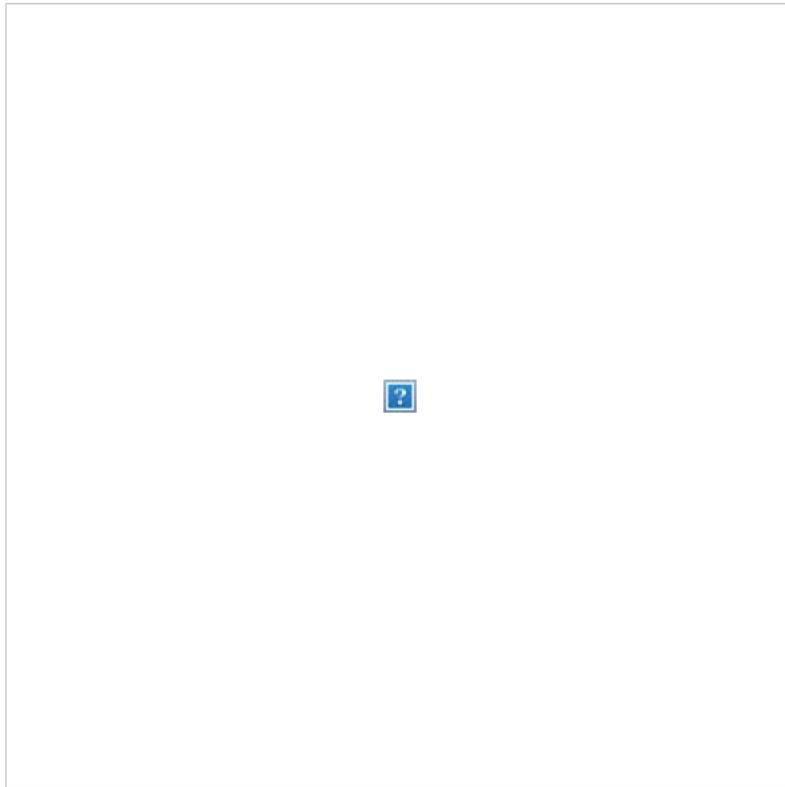

As some administration officials texted and called each other Saturday to discuss Kelly, ther... more

washingtonpost.com

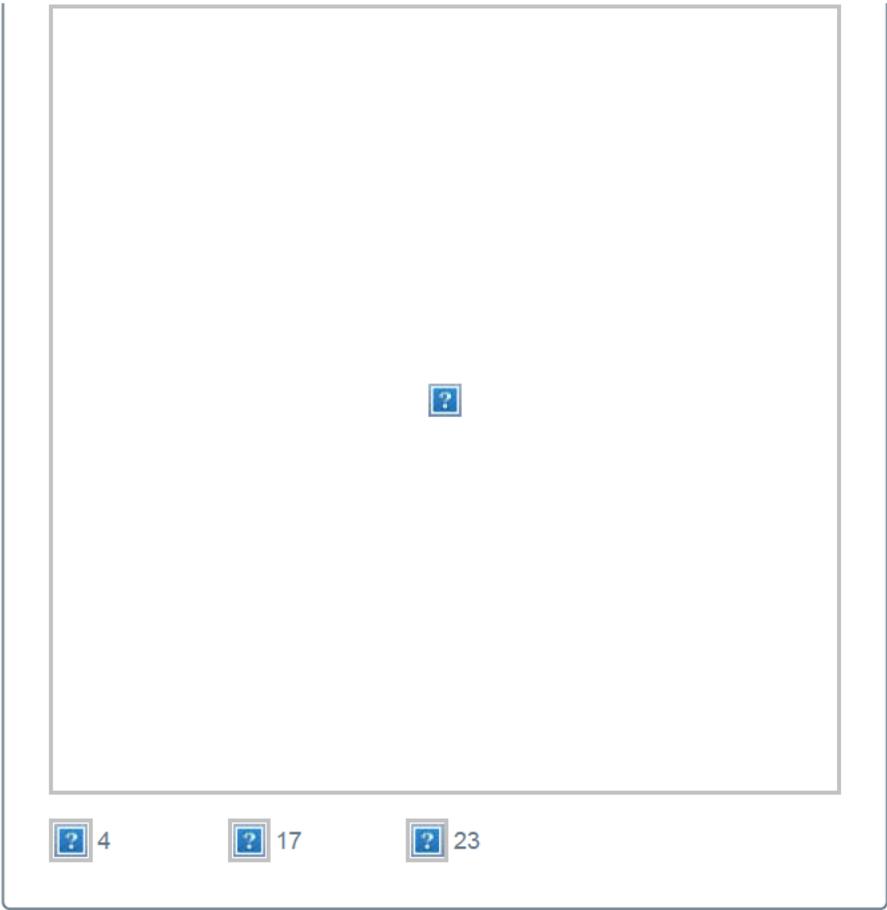

CNN
@CNN

This is the face of deportation: A dad with no criminal record, an American wife and two kids cnn.it/2u54OHg

Axios
@axios

For those at @Politicon this weekend, be sure to catch @mikeallen moderating a panel on deconstructing the election.

 Daniella Diaz
@DaniellaMicaela

.@TomiLahren: "Luckily I'm 24 and I'm still on my parents health care." #Politicon2017

 890  1.8K  5.7K

See more on Twitter

Settings | Help | Unsubscribe

We sent this email to @DogDayInterior

Twitter, Inc. 1355 Market Street, Suite 900
San Francisco, CA 94103

From: Clegg, Ellen
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Cc: Marjorie Pritchard
Subject: Response from the Boston Globe Editorial Page
Date: Saturday, November 25, 2017 12:30:45 PM

Heather,

Marjorie Pritchard shared your email with me. The Globe's editorial represents an opinion based on reporting in other media outlets, on document research, and on interviews with sources. Much of the source material – reporting by the New York Times, the Washington Post, and POLITICO – was linked in the piece. Reports by Reuters, the Chicago Tribune, and the Associated Press were also reviewed. We do not intend to retract our opinion; you are welcome to write a letter to the editor to rebut The Globe's institutional position.

Whitefish Energy does in fact have ties to Secretary Zinke. As Richard Perez-Pena reported in the New York Times on Oct. 27, 2017, Secretary Zinke and Andy Techmanski, the chief executive of Whitefish Energy, know each other, and the secretary's son worked on a Whitefish job over the summer.

POLITICO reviewed records from Interior made public after a FOIA by The Western Values Project that documented last-minute requests from Lola Zinke related to travel and high-level dinners. It is our opinion, legitimately drawn, that these requests caused extra work for staffers and, as the editorial noted (and as POLITICO's Ben Lefebvre reported on Nov. 21, 2017) raised questions about misuse of government resources. Washington Post reporters Lisa Rein and Drew Harwell reported on Nov. 16, 2017 that Deputy Inspector General Mary Kendall sent the secretary's office an alert that her investigation into allegations of improper travel has been stymied by "absent or incomplete documentation for several pertinent trips." This memo stated that Interior Department officials have not shown evidence that they have been able to "distinguish between personal, political and official travel" or cost-analysis documents to justify his choice of military or charter flights, according to the Post's reporting on Kendall's alert.

This same Kendall memo shows that the travel of Lola Zinke is also being reviewed; according to the Post, "Kendall wrote that the department's documentation was so lacking that investigators cannot determine 'the full extent' of her travel and how it was paid for." In addition to the last-minute requests reported by POLITICO, this very investigation of Lola Zinke's travel constitutes a burden on government resources, in the Globe's opinion. When that investigation concludes, please let us know.

Harwell and Rein also reported in the Post on Sept. 28, 2017: "Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke chartered a flight from Las Vegas to near his home in Montana this summer aboard a plane owned by oil-and-gas executives, internal documents show. The flight, along with private flights during a trip to the Virgin Islands, could propel Zinke into the growing debate over the costs of travel by Cabinet secretaries, some of whom have chosen expensive charter jets and military planes at high expense to taxpayers over the cheaper option of flying commercial.” That flight, from Las Vegas to Kalispell, cost taxpayers $12,375, according to an Interior Department spokeswoman (and I assume that spokeswoman is you, and that you were correctly quoted.) Commercial flights are much cheaper.

The use of the term “cleaned house” is a legitimately drawn opinion based on facts reported by the New York Times about Interior staff reassignments. On July 25, 2017, Coral Davenport and Nicholas Fandos of the Times reported:

“Between 7 and 8 p.m. on June 15, at least two dozen senior career officials at the Interior Department received emails informing them that they would be reassigned to new positions. While it is not unusual for new administrations to make personnel moves, some of the transferred employees said the moves appeared intended to undermine the department’s work on environmental priorities.” The story continues:

“Joel Clement, a climate change expert, received an email reassigning him to a position in an office overseeing fees and royalties from fossil fuel drilling. ‘I’m the climate change guy, and they moved me to the accounting office that collects fossil fuel royalties,’ said Mr. Clement, who went public with his complaints in a Washington Post opinion article last week. ‘They couldn’t have found a job less suited for me, or that sent a clearer signal that they were trying to get me to quit.’

“On Monday, Senator Maria Cantwell of Washington, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, sent a letter to the Interior Department’s deputy inspector general, calling for an investigation into the personnel moves.

“The appointments and the policies have drawn cheers from the oil industry. ‘You’re hearing a desire to promote oil and natural gas opportunities on all lands, and on federal lands,’ said Erik Milito, the director of upstream issues for the American Petroleum Institute, which lobbies for oil companies. ‘And doing so on federal lands is a great way to bring in more revenue.’”

On Nov. 20, 2017, Anne Gearan of the Washington Post reported that President Trump called elephant hunting a “horror show” and “strongly suggested he will permanently block imports of elephant trophies from two African nations despite his administration’s earlier approval of the practice.” That story said: “Following strong bipartisan criticism of the administration’s decision to allow imports of trophy carcasses for the first time since the practice was halted under the Obama administration, Trump had moved Friday to put the imports on hold.” This followed an initial story by Darryl Fears and Juliet Eilperin of the Post on Nov. 17, 2017, headlined: “Trophies from elephant hunts in Zimbabwe were banned in the US; Trump just reversed that”

Like the Post story, our editorial characterized the import of trophies from Zimbabwe and Zambia as a reversal of a ban under President Obama. Our editorial opinion is reasonable, given the fact base. Under the Obama administration, elephant hunting trophies were allowed in South Africa, as you mention, because USFWS determined that South Africa had proved its management of elephants enhanced the endangered population. In 2015, the Obama administration determined that Zimbabwe had not provided sufficient proof and halted such imports.

Finally, illegal ivory sales in Massachusetts involve both imported trophies from hunts, as well as ivory from illegal poaching. There are concerns at the state level, in Massachusetts and elsewhere, about this trade in ivory objects, its impact on conservation of the endangered African elephant, and its role in funding terror in African nations. Ivory is often sold on Craigslist without clear provenance; the Massachusetts bills in the state legislature would address the sale of ivory acquired by any means.

You observe that the Obama administration racked up bills for charter flights, and attribute other failings to Obama’s leadership of the Interior Department. But the Trump administration took office 11 months ago vowing to “drain the swamp” – which a reasonable mind might interpret as putting an end to some of these practices. It is our editorial opinion that the current leadership of the Interior Department is continuing these questionable travel practices, making partisan staff changes without regard to individual expertise, and sending confusing signals on import of elephant trophies. We do not intend to retract our editorial opinion, but we would consider a letter to the editor; letters should be addressed to Matthew.Bernstein@globe.com. If Secretary Zinke would be interested in writing an op-ed piece on how he intends to protect national parks and national monuments in an era when there is a call for expanded oil and gas exploration on federal lands, kindly send a draft to Marjorie Pritchard, whose email you have.

Sincerely,

Ellen Clegg

Editorial Page Editor

The Boston Globe

Office: 617-929-3339

From: SHeavey@thomsonreuters.com
To: Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov; Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov
Cc: timothy.gardner@thomsonreuters.com; valerie.yolcovic@thomsonreuters.com
Subject: Reuters query on Politico report on Zinke
Date: Wednesday, October 11, 2017 9:37:15 AM

Dear Heather et al,

Does the Interior Department or the secretary have any comment on this report from Politico? (Below)

Many thanks in advance,

Susan Heavey

Correspondent

Reuters News, Washington Bureau

Office (202) 898 8322

E-mail: sheavey@thomsonreuters.com

Thomson Reuters

MORE QUESTIONS ON ZINKE TRAVEL -- "Zinke's travels: Ski resort and Alaskan steakhouse," by Esther Whieldon and Ben Lefebvre: "Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has attended at least two additional political fundraisers while traveling for official business, including a weekend ski getaway less than three weeks after he was sworn in where donors paid up to $3,000 to attend, according to sources and documents reviewed by POLITICO.

"Zinke's previously undisclosed attendance at the events adds to scrutiny he is facing over his habit of mixing political activities with official business when traveling outside of Washington, D.C., and to questions over travel expenses incurred by members of President Donald Trump's Cabinet. In addition to the fundraisers, Zinke has held at least a half-dozen other events with big donors or influential conservative organizations while on official trips.

"Zinke, a former Montana congressman who became secretary March 1, started his fundraising appearances even before attending a March 30 Virgin Islands Republican Party fundraiser in St. Croix that POLITICO reported last week, at which donors paid up to $5,000 per couple for a photo with him. The Justice Department's Office of Special Counsel, which is investigating Zinke's use of travel and political activities in office, has been asked by a watchdog group to look into his appearance there." <http://politi.co/2xw560K>

From: Anna Palmer Jake Sherman Daniel Lippman [<mailto:politico@politico.com>]

Sent: Wednesday, October 11, 2017 6:46 AM

To: sheavey@reuters.com

Subject: POLITICO Playbook, presented by Chevron: NBC: Trump wanted nearly tenfold increase in nuclear arsenal, leading to Tillerson's 'moron' comment -- BIG MONEY: 36.5 billion for disaster relief -- SCOOPS: HOWIE KURTZ'S new book ... Josh Pitcock to ORACLE

View online version | Add politico@politico.com to your address book.

Today's POLITICO Playbook presented by Chevron

By ANNA PALMER (anna@politico.com: @apalmerdc), JAKE SHERMAN (sherman@politico.com: @JakeSherman) and DANIEL LIPPMAN (daniel@politico.com: @dlippman)

Listen to today's Audio Briefing | Subscribe on iTunes | Visit the online home of Playbook

DRIVING THE DAY

BIG NBC SCOOP -- "Trump Wanted Dramatic Increase in Nuclear Arsenal in Meeting With Military Leaders," by Courtney Kube, Kristen Welker, Carol Lee and Savannah Guthrie: "President Donald Trump said he wanted what amounted to a nearly tenfold increase in the U.S. nuclear arsenal during a gathering this past summer of the nation's highest ranking national security leaders, according to three officials who were in the room.

"Trump's comments, the officials said, came in response to a briefing slide he was shown that charted the steady reduction of U.S. nuclear weapons since the late 1960s. Trump indicated he wanted a bigger stockpile, not the bottom position on that downward-sloping curve.

"According to the officials present, Trump's advisers, among them the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, were surprised. Officials briefly explained the legal and practical impediments to a nuclear buildup and how the current military posture is stronger than it was at the height of the build-up. In interviews, they told NBC News that no such expansion is planned. The July 20 meeting was described as a lengthy and sometimes tense review of worldwide U.S. forces and operations. It was soon after the meeting broke up that officials who remained behind heard Tillerson say that Trump is a 'moron.'" <http://nbcnews.to/2yYtoMX>

-- ONE OF THESE THINGS IS NOT LIKE THE OTHER: A rare Savannah Guthrie byline.

E TU, TOM BARRACK?-- "He's better than this,' says Thomas Barrack, Trump's loyal whisperer," by WaPo's Michael Kranish in New York: "Barrack, in interviews with The Washington Post, said he has been 'shocked' and 'stunned' by some of the president's rhetoric and inflammatory tweets. He disagrees with some of Trump's proposals, including his efforts to ban immigrants from certain Muslim countries and his push for a border wall with Mexico. He wonders why his longtime friend spends so much of his time appealing to the fringes of American politics.

"He thinks he has to be loyal to his base,' Barrack said. 'I keep on saying, 'But who is your base? You don't have a natural base. Your base now is the world and America, so you have all these constituencies; show them who you really are.' In my opinion, he's better than this.' I tell him all the time: I don't like the rhetoric,' Barrack, who runs a large real estate investment company, said at his Manhattan office."

<http://wapo.st/2guNhc>

-- WHAT TRUMP WANTS TO FOCUS ON: @realDonaldTrump at 6:21 a.m.: "Stock Market has increased by 5.2 Trillion dollars since the election on November 8th, a 25% increase. Lowest unemployment in 16 years and.....if Congress gives us the massive tax cuts (and reform) I am asking for, those numbers will grow by leaps and bounds. #MAGA" ... at 6:31 a.m.: "It would be really nice if the Fake News Media would report the virtually unprecedented Stock Market growth since the election. Need tax cuts" ... at 6:36 a.m.: "The Democrats want MASSIVE tax increases & soft, crime producing borders. The Republicans want the biggest tax cut in history & the WALL!"

-- TO BE SURE: Some Republicans don't want the wall.

Good Wednesday morning. QUICK BULLETIN -- 2017 GENIUS GRANT WINNERS -- The MacArthur Foundation awards $625,000 grants each year to a group of people they think exhibits "exceptional creativity." Here is the list of the 2017 winners <http://nyti.ms/2guJB5R>

SCOOP -- HOWARD KURTZ is writing a book about the relationship between PRESIDENT DONALD TRUMP and the news media. Regnery expects to publish the book early next year.

CONGRESS PONYING UP ... -- BLOOMBERG: "House to Add $36.5 Billion for Hurricane Relief, Puerto Rico Aid," by Kevin Whitelaw: "House lawmakers unveiled a bill Tuesday night that would provide $36.5 billion in emergency funding for hurricane and wildfire relief requested by the Trump administration. With Congress under pressure to provide urgent help to storm victims in Texas, Florida and Puerto Rico, the House measure includes $18.7 billion for the Federal Emergency Management Agency's disaster relief fund, as well as $16 billion to replenish the nation's flood insurance program." <https://bloom.bg/2glfHW8>

WILDFIRES RAVAGING NORCAL -- L.A. TIMES: "Toll from Northern California firestorms sharply rise: 2,000 structures destroyed, at least 17 dead," by Paige St. John, Phil Willon, Louis Sahagun, Sonali Kohli, and Nina Agrawal: "The toll from Northern California's ranging wildfires continued to grow Tuesday evening as officials said the fires destroyed up to 2,000 structures and killed at least 17 people. The devastating losses establish firestorms among the most destructive in California history. The estimated losses of homes, businesses and other buildings jumped from 1,500 to 2,000, and officials fear the death toll will also continue to rise.

"Sonoma County alone has received about 200 reports of missing people since Sunday night, and sheriff's officials have located 45 of those people, said county spokeswoman Maggie Fleming. The majority of the fatalities are from Sonoma County, where huge swaths of the city of Santa Rosa were leveled by the Tubbs fire. Eleven people have died in Sonoma County as of 7 p.m. Tuesday, officials said. Two people have died in Napa County, three in Mendocino County and one in Yuba County, Cal Fire officials said." <http://lat.ms/2y6qAAJ>

-- "Seen From Above: Entire California Communities Reduced to Ash," by NYT's Josh Haner, Troy Griggs and Anjali Singhvi: <http://nyti.ms/2fZ9LNa>

WHAT D.C. WILL BE TALKING ABOUT TODAY -- Nationals vs. Cubs, 4 p.m., TBS. If the Nats lose, the season is over. Dusty is going with Tanner Roark over Stephen Strasburg. If you don't know about baseball and someone asks you what you think, tell them you think this is a really ... well ... curious decision. Blame Jake if you get yelled at. (You likely won't.) Today is the kind of day that could shape the D.C. sports psyche for years. The Nationals have become part of the fabric of our city. Cross your fingers.

WHAT TRUMP IS READING -- @NBCNews: "JUST IN: In letter to NFL owners, Roger Goodell says: 'We believe that everyone should stand for the National Anthem.'" <http://bit.ly/2yZErpb>

OUR ALLIES ...

-- "Wall Street Journal Reporter Sentenced to Prison by Turkish Court," by WSJ's Thomas Grove: "A Turkish court sentenced Wall Street Journal reporter Ayla Albayrak to two years and one month in prison Tuesday, declaring her guilty of engaging in terrorist propaganda in support of a banned Kurdish separatist organization through one of her Journal articles. ... Ms. Albayrak ... is currently in New York ... 'This was an unfounded criminal charge and wildly inappropriate conviction that wrongly singled out a balanced Wall Street Journal report,' said Wall Street Journal Editor in Chief Gerard Baker. 'The sole purpose of the article was to provide objective and independent reporting on events in Turkey, and it succeeded.'" <http://on.wsj.com/2yf4GuC>

-- "How Israel Caught Russian Hackers Scouring the World for U.S. Secrets," by NYT's Nicole Perloth and Scott Shane: "It was a case of spies watching spies watching spies: Israeli intelligence officers looked on in real time as Russian government hackers searched computers around the world for the code names of American intelligence programs. What gave the Russian hacking, detected more than two years ago, such global reach was its improvised search tool -- antivirus software made by a Russian company, Kaspersky Lab, that is used by 400 million people worldwide, including by officials at some two dozen American government agencies. The Israeli officials who had hacked into Kaspersky's own network alerted the United States to the broad Russian intrusion, which has not been previously reported, leading to a decision just last month to order Kaspersky software removed from government computers." <http://nyti.ms/2yfWwBQ>

JOSH ROGIN in WaPo, "The Dalai Lama speaks on Trump and 'America first':" "Your ancestors really considered the importance of liberty, freedom, democracy, these things,' the Dalai Lama said in response to my question about his current view of the United States. 'The present president, in the very beginning he mentioned 'America first.' That sounded in my ear not very nice.' The Dalai Lama is concerned that the United States, despite being 'the leader of the free world,' was becoming more 'selfish, nationalist,' he said." <http://wapo.st/2ygbJir>

THE LATEST ON IRAN DEAL -- "Democrats brace for Iran deal upheaval," by Elana Schor and Nahal Toosi: "Democrats and other defenders of the Iran nuclear deal have all but given up on President Donald Trump as he prepares to push the pact to the brink. So they've adopted a new strategy, if you can call it that: Appeal to cooler heads in Trump's orbit who want to keep the agreement in place, their boss' rhetoric notwithstanding.

"The aim is to avoid further inflaming tensions with U.S. allies or slowly strangling the deal after Trump declares Tehran out of compliance, which is expected to happen as soon as Thursday. European diplomats, former U.S. officials and like-minded activists are joining in with a ramped-up lobbying effort designed to dissuade the GOP-led Congress from responding to Trump by reimposing sanctions that are likely to destroy the deal." <http://politi.co/2hBjLYk>

 A message from Chevron: When an endangered butterfly was found near a Chevron refinery, we protected the habitat and still plant the only thing they eat-buckwheat. Watch the video: <http://politi.co/2y5XNvF> *****

NEW POLITICO/MORNING CONSULT POLL -- STEVEN SHEPARD -- "Majority backs stricter gun control laws after Vegas shooting": "A new POLITICO/Morning Consult poll shows that a majority of voters support stricter gun control laws in the wake of last week's mass murder of 58 concertgoers in Las Vegas by a single man with nearly two dozen firearms shooting from the window of his 32nd-floor hotel room.

"On most of the proposals to regulate gun ownership -- including background checks, restrictions on where Americans can carry firearms and prohibitions against accessories like the 'bump fire' stocks used by the Las Vegas gunman -- large majorities express support in the poll, conducted last Thursday through Monday.

"But despite those findings, voters still don't think the chances are high that Congress will act to strengthen federal firearm laws, even after the deadliest mass shooting in modern American history. And slightly more voters still say it's more important to protect Americans' right to own guns than it is, in general, to limit gun ownership." <http://politi.co/2guDZbE>

MORE QUESTIONS ON ZINKE TRAVEL -- "Zinke's travels: Ski resort and Alaskan steakhouse," by Esther Whieldon and Ben Lefebvre: "Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has attended at least two additional political fundraisers while traveling for official business, including a weekend ski getaway less than three weeks after he was sworn in where donors paid up to $3,000 to attend, according to sources and documents reviewed by POLITICO.

"Zinke's previously undisclosed attendance at the events adds to scrutiny he is facing over his habit of mixing political activities with official business when traveling outside of Washington, D.C., and to questions over travel expenses incurred by members of President Donald Trump's Cabinet. In addition to the fundraisers, Zinke has held at least a half-dozen other events with big donors or influential conservative organizations while on official trips.

"Zinke, a former Montana congressman who became secretary March 1, started his fundraising appearances even before attending a March 30 Virgin Islands Republican Party fundraiser in St. Croix that POLITICO reported last week, at which donors paid up to $5,000 per couple for a photo with him. The Justice Department's Office of Special Counsel, which is investigating Zinke's use of travel and political activities in office, has been asked by a watchdog group to look into his appearance there." <http://politi.co/2xw560K>

MURPHY TAKES A PASS ... -- "Democratic Sen. Chris Murphy says he's ruling out a 2020 presidential run" - CBS News: <http://cbsn.ws/2wNDUGa>

2018 WATCH -- "Senate Democrats worry Russia could jeopardize reelection bids," by Kyle Cheney, Elana Schor, and Cory Bennett: "Democratic senators fighting to hold on to their seats next year are increasingly worried about a troubling reality: Russia appears set to mess with U.S. elections - again. ... Democratic senators such as Heidi Heitkamp of North Dakota, Bob Casey of Pennsylvania and Jon Tester of Montana - who hail from states President Donald Trump won in 2016 - know they're already facing stiff reelection challenges.

"Now they're concerned the Trump administration is dragging its feet on thwarting sophisticated Russian cyber operations that could have significant impact on their races - and could even sway which party wins control of the Senate. The red- and purple-state Democratic seats are top targets for Republicans hoping to expand their two-seat majority in the Senate; Democrats likely would have to hold all of them if they are to have any hope of retaking the chamber. 'If there isn't some effort to take steps against Russian interference, every campaign is going to have to be on guard and working against it,' said Casey, describing himself as 'very concerned.'" <http://politi.co/2g0MwT4>

DACA UPDATE ...

-- "Meet the Republican who might cut a Dreamers deal," by Seung Min Kim: "As Donald Trump was pressing his hardline immigration platform en route to the GOP nomination last year, Republican Sen. Thom Tillis decided to go in a different direction entirely. Tillis, a reliable Republican on most issues, approached the No. 2 Senate Democrat, Dick Durbin, to discuss the fate of hundreds of thousands of 'Dreamers.' Sooner or later, Tillis thought, they would be at risk - a view that's come to life after Trump announced last month that nearly 700,000 young immigrants would begin losing legal protections early next year unless Capitol Hill intervenes.

"The freshman senator from North Carolina is now making his biggest immigration play yet, unveiling a plan to provide permanent relief to the undocumented immigrants who came here as minors. If a deal can be done to win over the warring parties and a president who has swung back and forth on the issue, it might start with Tillis, who has methodically carved out a profile as a pro-immigration Republican at a time when the GOP has swerved sharply to the right." <http://politi.co/2g0oyrf>

RUSSIA WATCH -- "Carter Page says he won't testify before Senate Intelligence panel in Russia probe," by Ali Watkins: "Carter Page, a former foreign policy adviser to the Trump campaign, informed the Senate Intelligence Committee on Tuesday that he will not be cooperating with any requests to appear before the panel for its investigation into Russian meddling in the 2016 election and would plead the Fifth, according to a source familiar with the matter. A former naval-officer-turned-energy consultant, Page came under fire last year after reports emerged that he had met with high-level associates of Russian President Vladimir Putin in Moscow in 2016. While Page denied those meetings occurred, the Trump campaign distanced itself from the adviser not long after, with former officials saying that Page and Trump had never met."

<http://politi.co/2zcViFP>

ON PUERTO RICO -- "Trump's Puerto Rico video tells positive story but leaves a lot on cutting-room floor," by WaPo's Jenna Johnson: "The 8-minute-48-second video provides the kind of narrow, positive view of relief efforts in Puerto Rico that the president has been trying to convey amid the humanitarian crisis there -- a montage of stacks of bottled water, helicopters moving concrete slabs and supplies, boats carrying medical items and trucks hauling diesel. There are many more federal workers and military members featured than Puerto Ricans in need of aid, and there is no mention of the fact that 84 percent of the island is still without power and more than one-third of residents do not have access to clean drinking water. The last 81 seconds are devoted to documenting Trump's four-hour visit to the island last week." <http://wapo.st/2yflTJl> ...
The video <http://bit.ly/2zeJmn0>

-- "José Andrés, Patrick O'Connell, and Aaron Silverman Will Cook a Michelin All-Star Dinner at Pineapple and Pearls," by Washingtonian's Anna Spiegel: "ThinkFoodGroup restaurateur José Andrés, chef Patrick O'Connell of the Inn at Little Washington, and Pineapple and Pearls chef/owner Aaron Silverman are teaming up at the latter restaurant on October 18 to raise funds for hurricane victims in Puerto Rico, and those affected by the earthquakes in Mexico. ... Tickets are $595 per person ... [and] the chefs are thinking nine dishes, or three each ... Online reservations will go live on the Pineapple and Pearls website on Wednesday, October 11 at 10 a.m. Only 56 seats are available for two seatings." <http://bit.ly/2ycPKeG> ... Where to try to get tickets at 10 a.m. <http://bit.ly/2yg9akf>

-- ANOTHER INTERESTING TAKE AWAY from the POLITICO/Morning Consult Poll: Only 32% believe the federal government has done enough for Puerto Rico compared to 47 percent for Texas and Louisiana and 46 percent for Florida. AND... 47% believe Puerto Rico should be a state while 26% disagree. The breakdown on party lines: 60% of Democrats say yes, while 17% say no. 36% of Republicans say yes, while 38% say no.

FOR YOUR RADAR -- "U.S. flies bombers over Korea as Trump discusses options," by Reuters' Christine Kim in Seoul and Eric Beech in Washington: "The U.S. military flew two strategic bombers over the Korean peninsula in a show of force late on Tuesday, as President Donald Trump met top defense officials to discuss how to respond to any threat from North Korea." <http://reut.rs/2zeqPqY>

-- "Navy fires two officers over USS McCain collision, says deadly accident was 'preventable,'" by WaPo's Andrew deGrandpre: "The U.S. Navy on Tuesday fired the USS John S. McCain's top two officers, calling the warship's deadly August collision with an oil tanker 'preventable.' Cmdr. Alfredo J. Sanchez, the McCain's commander, and Cmdr. Jessie L. Sanchez, its executive officer, were relieved of their duties and reassigned, Navy officials announced in a statement. Both were fired due to a lack of confidence, officials said. The McCain, a guided-missile destroyer, collided with the merchant vessel Alnic MC on Aug. 21 near Singapore. Ten American Sailors died and five others were injured." <http://wapo.st/2ybDTNT>

-- "McMaster: 'We have devolved responsibility back to the departments,'" by Bryan Bender: "National Security Adviser H.R. McMaster [on Tuesday] said he is steadily seeking to return more power to the Pentagon, State Department and other Cabinet agencies after what he characterized as a misuse of the National Security Council in recent years. McMaster, at an appearance at the Center for Strategic and International Studies marking the 70th anniversary of the NSC, said he believes too much operational authority was centralized in the White House body - originally designed as the president's principal forum for addressing security and foreign policy matters but not to carry out policy. 'It did cross a line,' the three-star Army general said, 'into an execution arm of the government.'"

-- "Experts: North Korea Targeted U.S. Electric Power Companies," by NBC News' Andrea Mitchell and Ken Dilanian: "The cybersecurity company FireEye says in a new report to private clients, obtained exclusively by NBC News, that hackers linked to North Korea recently targeted U.S. electric power companies with spearphishing emails. The emails used fake invitations to a fundraiser to target victims ... A victim who downloaded the invitation attached to the email would also be downloading malware into his or her computer network ... The company did not dispute NBC's characterization of the report, but declined to comment." <http://nbcnews.to/2yX8xKl>

TRUMP'S WEDNESDAY -- Trump will meet with Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau. He will travel to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, to give a speech on tax reform and talk to Sean Hannity. He will then return to Washington.

-- On the agenda: Trump and Trudeau will talk trade and international security and "discuss strengthening the excellent bilateral relationship between our two countries by creating new opportunities for economic growth on both sides of the border," according to a Trudeau spokesman. TRUDEAU is also going to Capitol Hill.

THE JUICE ...

-- JOSH PITCOCK, former chief of staff to VP Mike Pence, is joining Oracle's government affairs team, Nancy Cook and Anna report. <http://politi.co/2zdqaGt>

-- PARTY TIME: POLITICO's annual 50 List party is here. Sign up for more information on the Oct. 12 event. <http://bit.ly/2kEvzTM> ... The full list <http://politi.co/2wBYXOw>

-- HOT ONLINE: EMINEM's verses on Donald Trump <http://bit.ly/2yXAu4q>

-- "Twitter reverses decision, will allow Blackburn to promote Senate ad," by Kevin Robillard: <http://politi.co/2i20jgt>

SPORTS BLINK -- "USA Misses World Cup as Domsday Scenario Plays Out Across CONCACAF," by Sports Illustrated's Grant Wahl in Couva, Trinidad and Tobago: "On the most surreal and embarrassing night in U.S. soccer history, the U.S. men's national team lost 2-1 to Trinidad and Tobago (the worst team in the CONCACAF Hexagonal) and was eliminated from contention for World Cup 2018. ... All the U.S.

needed to do to qualify for the World Cup was to win or tie. And they lost, a deserving defeat that ended a miserable qualifying campaign—three wins in 10 Hexagonal games—and will raise enormous questions about the overall direction of the U.S. Soccer Federation, the players and coach Bruce Arena." <http://on.sj.com/2ycPoob>

#WOMENRULE PODCAST -- Anna sat down with SoulCycle CEO Melanie Whelan to talk about politics in the studio, how she doesn't believe work-life balance is a thing, why yellow is the new color for millennials and how women can succeed in their careers. Listen to the podcast <http://politi.co/2olmtJ7>

PLAYBOOK READS

PHOTO DU JOUR The sun rises through a cloud of smoke after a wildfire swept through the area in Sonoma County on Oct. 10 in Santa Rosa, Calif. | Paul Kitagaki Jr /The Sacramento Bee via AP

REVOLVING DOOR -- "Trump hires Hogan Gidley as a White House spokesman," by WaPo's Phil Rucker: "President Trump has hired Hogan Gidley, a longtime Republican campaign operative with deep roots in the conservative movement, to serve as a deputy White House press secretary ... This will be a reunion of sorts for [Sarah Huckabee] Sanders and Gidley, who worked together on campaigns for the press secretary's father, former Arkansas governor Mike Huckabee. Gidley served as a communications strategist on two presidential campaigns, Huckabee's in 2016 and former senator Rick Santorum's (Penn.) in 2012, logging tens of thousands of miles with both candidates." <http://wapo.st/2zeGJlo>

--SPOTTED: Hogan Gidley celebrating his new job with friends last night at Bluejacket in Navy Yard

GABE DEBENEDETTI in Bozeman, Montana: "Steve Bullock and the Lost Art of Political Persuasion": <http://politi.co/2yfgCwr>

HOLLYWOODLAND -- TMZ: "Harvey Weinstein Flying to Europe Tonight for Sex Addiction Rehab" <http://bit.ly/2yg163B>

--"Ronan Farrow on Harvey Weinstein Story: 'I Was Threatened With a Lawsuit,'" by Variety's Brian Steinberg: "Ronan Farrow didn't break the first story of shocking allegations about movie mogul Harvey Weinstein, but his New Yorker piece published Tuesday has added a new sordid dimension to the scandal. Farrow discussed his story Tuesday evening on MSNBC's 'The Rachel Maddow Show,' and there's good reason: He started the story under NBC's auspices. Asked why the story ran in the New Yorker rather than on NBC, Farrow told Maddow, 'You would have to ask NBC and NBC executives about the details.'

"I will say that over many years, many news organizations have circled this story and faced a great deal of pressure in doing so,' he continued. 'There are now reports emerging about the kind of pressure news organizations have faced. That is real. And in the course of this reporting, I was threatened with a lawsuit personally by Mr. Weinstein.' He also challenged NBC's statement that the version of the story they saw wasn't publishable. 'I walked into the door at the New Yorker with an explosively reportable piece that should have been public,' he said. 'Immediately the New Yorker recognized that and it was not accurate to say that it was not reportable. In fact, there were multiple determinations at NBC that it was reportable.'" <http://bit.ly/2yaLVsy> ... Ronan's piece <http://bit.ly/2yEUf4r>

--"Harvey Weinstein's Wife Georgina Chapman Is Leaving Him: 'My Heart Breaks for All the Women Who Have Suffered,'" by People's Mary Green and Jodi Guglielmi: <http://bit.ly/2yXu7hw>

--@CBSNews: "DCCC says they will donate all of Harvey Weinstein's donations to non-profit Futures Without Violence, @edatpost reports on Red & Blue." <http://bit.ly/2zfFimD>

--"NYPD Was Ready to Arrest Harvey Weinstein in 2015 After Model Said She Was Groped," by The Daily Beast's Michael Daly: <http://thebea.st/2g0Xnwx>

 A message from Chevron: This is a story about DOERS, butterflies, and buckwheat. In '75, the endangered El Segundo Blue butterfly was found near a Chevron refinery. We protected the habitat and planted the only thing they eat—buckwheat. We're still planting and keeping an eye on our littlest neighbor. Watch the video: <http://politi.co/2y5XNvF> *****

MEDIAWATCH -- Jessica Bennett is the new gender editor of the New York Times. She is the author of "Feminist Fight Club," and has been a columnist for Time.com and also worked for Newsweek and Tumblr. ... Ashley Feinberg has been hired as a senior reporter at HuffPost. She most recently has been a senior writer at Wired and is also a Gawker alum.

PLAYBOOKERS

SPOTTED at Capitol Lounge last night for a party in honor of former Rep. Jason Altmire's (D-Pa.) book, "Dead Center: How Political Polarization Divided America and What We Can Do About It" -- $19.33 on Amazon <http://amzn.to/2i2W7gt> ... Staff reunion pics <http://bit.ly/2yace2o>: Reps. Debbie Wasserman Schultz (D-Fla.), Bill Shuster (R-Pa.), Kathy Castor (D-Fla.), Val Demings (D-Fla.), Darren Soto (D-Fla.), Carlos Curbelo (R-Fla.), Kurt Schrader (D-Ore.), and Jerry McNerney (D-Calif.), former Reps. Nick Rahall, Jack Kingston, Jim Moran, Bob Carr, Jeff Miller, Cliff Stearns, Allen Boyd, and Earl Pomeroy, Tom Scully, Rachael Heisler, Bob Cusack, Reid Wilson, Greg Giroux, Justin Sayfie, Fred Graefe.

-- SPOTTED: Chelsea Clinton keynoting the Girl Scouts National Convention: G.I.R.L. 2017 over the weekend in Columbus, Ohio -- pic <http://bit.ly/2guRkAT>

TRANSITIONS - Former Rep. Joe Garcia (D-Fla.) is the new co-chairman of Mercury and will be based in the firm's Miami office. ... Fabian Seaton is the new communications director of the Maryland Democratic Party. He most recently was press secretary for Rep. Elijah Cummings (D-Md.) and also worked for former Sen. Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.).

... Marcus Reese is joining Crosscut Strategies as a senior adviser. He is former VP of government affairs at Herbalife and is an alum of the Bush-Cheney 2004 campaign and was also chief of staff at Tusk Strategies.

BIRTHDAY OF THE DAY: Charlie Black, chairman of the Prime Policy Group, is 7-0. How he's celebrating: "My wife Judy and I are going on a cruise ship around the Greek Islands next week, with good friends, including Trisha and Trent Lott." Read his Playbook Plus Q&A: <http://politi.co/2gbDy9p>

BIRTHDAYS: USTR Robert Lighthizer is 7-0 ... Katie Boyd, comms director for Sen. Roy Blunt (R-Mo.) ... Maura Gillespie, comms director for Rep. Adam Kinzinger (R-Ill.) ... Veronica Walsh ... Sen. Patty Murray (D-Wash.) is 67 ... former Defense Secretary William Perry is 9-0 ... Jamie Weinstein, founding partner of JMW Strategies, is 34 ... Ron Prosor ... Tishman and Speyer CEO Rob Speyer ... Joel Riethmiller ... Trey Bohn ... Bruce DePuyt ... Bruce Bartlett is 66 ... Wendy Riemann ... USA Today alum Cooper Allen ... Mike Riggs, reporter at Reason magazine ... BuzzFeed's Tarini Parti ... Rep. Chuck Fleischmann (R-Tenn.) is 55 ... Rep. Sam Johnson (R-Tex.) is 87 ... Politico's Sara Smith ... John Lipp ... Ben Mendelson ...

... Lauren Culbertson, public policy manager at Twitter ... Kristina Costa, CAP senior fellow ... Mandy Frohlich, COO of the American Physical Therapy Association (h/t Michael Frohlich) ... John Robinson, a Gore and Edwards alum (h/t Ryan Morgan) ... Bill Triplett ... Ashley Drummond Garcia ... Jennifer Williams ... Rachel Deahl ... ProPublica's Talia Buford ... former Rep. Bob Inglis (R-S.C.) is 58 ... Meaghan Gilmore ... Maggie Fly ... Alice Berman ... Marcus Veazey ... Ken Danieli ... Sandra Klassen ... Frank Lucician ... Mike Wolfe ... Karen Sommer Shalett ... Jessica Lerner ... Amanda Cooper (h/ts Teresa Vilmain)

 A message from Chevron: This is a story about DOERS, butterflies, and buckwheat. In '75, the endangered El Segundo Blue butterfly was found near a Chevron refinery. We protected the habitat and planted the only thing they eat-buckwheat. We're still planting and keeping an eye on our littlest neighbor. Watch the video: <http://politi.co/2y5XNvF> *****

SUBSCRIBE to the Playbook family: POLITICO Playbook <http://politi.co/2lQswhh> ... Playbook Power Briefing <http://politi.co/2xuOiqh> ... New York Playbook <http://politi.co/1ON8bqW> ... Florida Playbook <http://politi.co/1OypFe9> ... New Jersey Playbook <http://politi.co/1HLKltE> ... Massachusetts Playbook <http://politi.co/1Nhtq5v> ... Illinois Playbook <http://politi.co/1N7u5sb> ... California Playbook <http://politi.co/2blvcPl> ... London Playbook <http://politi.co/2xfDPuK> ... Brussels Playbook <http://politi.co/1FZeLcw> ... All our political and policy tipsheets <http://politi.co/1M75Ubx>

View online

To change your alert settings, please go to <https://secure.politico.com/settings>

This email was sent to sheavey@reuters.com by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

Please click here and follow the steps to unsubscribe

MEDIA CONFERENCE
CHANNEL ISLANDS NATIONAL PARK
February 9, 1987

- 9:00 a.m. Introduction and Overview: National Park Service Regional Director Howard Chapman will introduce. . .
- 9:05 a.m. U. S. Senator Pete Wilson
Speech
Will introduce. . .
- 9:15 a.m. U. S. Representative Robert Lagomarsino
Speech
- 9:30 a.m. Questions from floor
- 9:45 a.m. Opportunities for interviews and pictures

GOOD MORNING! IT'S A PLEASURE TO BE HERE TO CELEBRATE THE TRANSFER OF SANTA ROSA ISLAND TO THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE. I WANT TO THANK ALL OF YOU FOR TAKING THE TIME TO COME AND PARTICIPATE IN THIS IMPORTANT EVENT.

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS HAVE ALWAYS BEEN VERY SPECIAL TO ME.
EVERY DAY UP AND AT HOME IN CALIF, EXCEPT ON DAYS I
THEY ARE LIKE NO OTHER ISLANDS IN THE WORLD AND LONG AGO I

REALIZED WHAT A TREASURE THEY WERE TO THE PEOPLE OF CALIFORNIA
WHO COULD APPRECIATE AND ENJOY THEIR BEAUTY AND UNIQUENESS.

HOWEVER, I, ALONG WITH MANY OTHER PEOPLE, FELT THESE MAGNIFICENT ISLANDS SHOULD BE SHARED WITH EVERYONE. CONSEQUENTLY, AFTER MANY YEARS OF HARD WORK AND NEGOTIATIONS AND THROUGH THE COOPERATION AND EFFORTS OF THE PRIVATE LANDOWNERS - THE VAIL FAMILY AND THE

VERY FORGIVE DAYS I RECALL
LOOK OUT
+ SEE
THAT

GHERINI FAMILY - AND THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE, THE CHANNEL ISLANDS NATIONAL PARK WAS CREATED BY CONGRESS IN 1980. AS ONE OF
THE PRIMARY AUTHORS OF THE LEGISLATION WHICH ESTABLISHED THE PARK, IT WAS TREMENDOUSLY REWARDING FOR ME TO SEE THIS DREAM BECOME A REALITY. THE CREATION OF THE PARK WAS CERTAINLY A MAJOR MILESTONE IN CONSERVING AND PROTECTING THE UNIQUE ENVIRONMENT OF

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS - IN CONTINUING INTO THE FUTURE THE GOOD MANAGEMENT AND
STEWARDSHIP OF THE OWNERS - DR. GARY STANBA & GHERINI VAIL
VIENE

SINCE THEN, THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE, THROUGH THE OUTSTANDING LEADERSHIP OF THE PARK SUPERINTENDENT, BILL EHORN, HAS BEEN WORKING TO PROTECT THE RESOURCES, PROVIDE INTERPRETIVE
PROGRAMS FOR THE PUBLIC AND DEVELOP THE ISLANDS FOR APPROPRIATE PUBLIC USE.

BILL IS TRULY TO BE COMMENDED FOR HIS EFFORTS TO, ~~IF YOU WILL,~~
"BRING THE ISLANDS TO THE PUBLIC." ~~I BELIEVE~~ THESE ISLANDS ARE A 3
PART OF BILL AND HE SHOWS HIS LOVE AND CARE FOR THEM ON A DAILY BASIS. - AS A MATTER OF FACT, BILL'S ENTHUSIASM AND PROFESSIONALISM WERE LARGELY RESPONSIBLE FOR CREATION OF THE PARK IN THE FIRST PLACE.

IN ADDITION, THOSE OF US IN CONGRESS HAVE BEEN WORKING TO FURTHER PROTECT THE CHANNEL ISLANDS. I HAVE SPONSORED LEGISLATION IN CONGRESS FOR SEVERAL YEARS TO CODIFY IN PUBLIC LAW
THE EXECUTIVE ORDER WHICH ESTABLISHED THE CHANNEL ISLANDS
NATIONAL MARINE SANCTUARY. IN ADDITION, ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS I HAVE PERSONALLY REQUESTED SECRETARY OF INTERIOR HODEL TO PLACE
THE CHANNEL ISLANDS MARINE SANCTUARY OFF-LIMITS TO OIL AND GAS DEVELOPMENT. I AM PLEASED THAT HE HAS AGREED WITH ME AND

PROHIBITED SUCH DEVELOPMENT IN EVERY CALIFORNIA OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF LEASE SALE, AND HAS MOST RECENTLY RECOMMENDED SUCH A 4
PROHIBITION IN THE PROPOSED OCS FIVE-YEAR PROGRAM FOR CALIFORNIA.

FURTHERMORE, WE HAVE BEEN WORKING TO SECURE THE APPROPRIATIONS FUNDING NEEDED BY THE PARK SERVICE TO ACQUIRE THE PRIVATE LANDS. I HAVE TESTIFIED BEFORE THE HOUSE INTERIOR APPROPRIATIONS SUBCOMMITTEE FOR SIX YEARS TO REQUEST ACQUISITION
FUNDING FOR THE CHANNEL ISLANDS. THROUGH OUR EFFORTS IN THE HOUSE, AS WELL AS THOSE IN THE SENATE, PARTICULARLY BY SENATOR PETE WILSON, WE HAVE FINALLY BEEN SUCCESSFUL IN OBTAINING THE

(5)

FUNDS TO PURCHASE SANTA ROSA. THIS HAS BEEN AN UPHILL BATTLE WHERE WE HAVE CONSISTENTLY FACED NUMEROUS OBSTACLES, LARGELY DUE TO CONGRESSIONAL EFFORTS AIMED AT REDUCING THE FEDERAL DEFICITST ~~+~~ COMPETING PROJECTS. BUT WE HAVE MADE IT AND WE ARE HERE TODAY TO CELEBRATE THIS VICTORY!!

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS HAVE LONG BEEN RECOGNIZED NATIONALLY AND INTERNATIONALLY, AS WELL AS LOCALLY, FOR THEIR OUTSTANDING NATURAL, CULTURAL, SCENIC AND GEOLOGICAL RESOURCES. THE PLANT AND ANIMAL LIFE BOTH ON THE ISLANDS AND IN THE WATERS AROUND THEM ARE ABUNDANT AND DIVERSE AND MANY NEW SPECIES UNIQUE TO THE ISLANDS HAVE EVOLVED DUE TO THEIR ISOLATION FROM THE MAINLAND.

(6)

SANTA ROSA ISLAND IS, AT NEARLY 53,000 ACRES, THE SECOND LARGEST OF THE CHANNEL ISLANDS. IT COMPRISES APPROXIMATELY 44 PERCENT OF THE PARK'S TOTAL LAND AREA AND ABOUT 78 PERCENT OF THE LANDS TO BE MANAGED BY THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE. A MAJOR FAULT CUTS ACROSS THE ISLAND RESULTING IN SOME OUTSTANDING GEOLOGICAL AND PALEONTOLOGICAL FEATURES. LARGE PORTIONS OF THE ISLAND ARE CURRENTLY IN GRASSLAND, BUT UNIQUE STANDS OF TORREY PINES, IRONWOOD TREES AND ENDEMIC ISLAND OAKS ARE ALSO FOUND ON SANTA ROSA. ANIMAL LIFE ON THE ISLAND INCLUDES SEABIRD AND PINNIPED ROOKERIES AS WELL AS MANY NON-ACQUATIC ANIMALS INCLUDING THE ISLAND FOX.

THE VICKERS AND VAIL FAMILY HAS MANAGED A CATTLE RANCHING OPERATION ON THE ISLAND FOR MANY YEARS WHICH IS, CONSEQUENTLY, A VERY IMPORTANT PART OF SANTA ROSA'S HISTORY. THE VAILS HAVE BEEN EXCELLENT STEWARDS OF THE LAND. WHILE MANAGING THEIR CATTLE OPERATION, THEY HAVE BEEN CAREFUL TO PRESERVE AND PROTECT THE NATURAL RESOURCES OF THE ISLAND, INCLUDING THE MANY DIFFERENT
SPECIES OF ANIMALS. BECAUSE OF THEIR SPECIAL CARE OF THE LAND, SANTA ROSA WILL BE ABLE TO BE ENJOYED BY PEOPLE TODAY AS WELL AS FUTURE GENERATIONS. THEREFORE, I AM HOPEFUL THAT A LEASING
AGREEMENT CAN BE REACHED BETWEEN THE LANDOWNERS, RUSS AND AL
VAIL, AND THE PARK SERVICE TO ENABLE CURRENT RANCHING OPERATIONS
TO CONTINUE. I BELIEVE THIS WOULD BE HELPFUL FOR THE PARK SERVICE INTERPRETIVE PROGRAM, AS WELL AS ALLOWING THE PARK SERVICE ADDITIONAL TIME WHICH MAY BE NEEDED TO ADJUST TO THE

7

MANAGEMENT OF SUCH A LARGE LAND AREA — AND NO SMALL THING THESE DAYS - SAVE THE TAXPAYERS
A LOT OF MONEY.
THROUGH MY DISCUSSIONS WITH SUPERINTENDENT EHORN, I BELIEVE
THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE IS ALSO PLANNING FUTURE PUBLIC USE FACILITIES ON THE ISLAND INCLUDING LIMITED CAMPGROUNDS AND BACKCOUNTRY CAMPING SITES. THEREFORE, THE ACQUISITION OF SANTA ROSA IS A MAJOR STEP TOWARDS THE PREPARATION OF THE ISLAND FOR THE PUBLIC'S USE AND ENJOYMENT.

8

THERE ARE MANY PEOPLE I WANT TO THANK TODAY. BUT PARTICULARLY, I WANT TO THANK RUSS AND AL VAIL FOR THEIR COOPERATION AND PATIENCE THROUGHOUT THIS LONG PROCESS. I REALIZE

IT HAS BEEN A HARDSHIP FOR THEM AND WE COULD HAVE NEVER REACHED THIS MILESTONE WITHOUT THEIR ASSISTANCE AND THEIR GENEROSITY IN AGREEING TO INCLUDE SANTA ROSA IN THE PARK. I ALSO WANT TO THANK BILL KELLY FROM THE LAW FIRM OF LATHAM, WATKINS AND HILLS, IN WASHINGTON, D.C., WHO HAS BEEN VERY INSTRUMENTAL IN THE LAND ACQUISITION PROCESS.

9

THANKS TO THE NAVY AT POINT MUGEL AND PORT HUENENE WITH SPECIAL KUDOS TO

LES MORGAN FOR ALL OF THEIR CONTINUING HELP & COURAGE

FURTHERMORE, MY THANKS AGAIN TO BILL EHORN FOR ALL OF HIS OUTSTANDING WORK ON THE ISLANDS. ALSO, HOWARD CHAPMAN, THE WESTERN REGIONAL DIRECTOR OF THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE, DESERVES RECOGNITION FOR HIS INVOLVEMENT IN THE SANTA ROSA ISLAND ACQUISITION PROCESS. SENATOR PETE WILSON, AND ALSO MICHAEL WOOTTON, PETE'S LOS ANGELES OFFICE MANAGER, AND FORMERLY MY

BILL MOTT, THE DIRECTOR

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT, ARE ALSO TO BE COMMENDED FOR THEIR MANY EFFORTS ON BEHALF OF THE CHANNEL ISLANDS, PETE HAS BEEN A STRONG VOICE IN THE SENATE FOR THE CHANNEL ISLANDS AND I AM CONFIDENT WILL CONTINUE TO WORK ON THE PARK'S BEHALF. IN ADDITION, SENATORS JIM MCCLURE OF IDAHO AND TED STEVENS OF ALASKA HAVE BEEN ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL IN PROVIDING FUNDS FOR LAND ACQUISITION AND WILL HOPEFULLY CONTINUE TO ASSIST US IN THIS ENDEAVOR.

STILL AKA FORMERLY ON MY PERSONAL STAFF & NOW MINORITY ASSISTANT TO ME ON THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

THE FRIENDS OF THE ISLANDS PARK CONTINUE TO HELP THE LATE PHIL BURTON WAS ESSENTIAL

WE MUST NOW CONTINUE FORWARD AS WORK STILL REMAINS TO BE DONE. AS ADDITIONAL FUNDING IS NEEDED FOR PARK SERVICE OPERATIONS AND MAINTENANCE ON SANTA ROSA ISLAND, YOU HAVE MY COMMITMENT TO WORK IN WASHINGTON WITH SENATOR WILSON, SENATOR

CRANSTON AND THE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEES TO SECURE THE NECESSARY FUNDING. IN ADDITION, AS THE VICE-CHAIRMAN FOR NATIONAL PARKS OF THE HOUSE SUBCOMMITTEE ON NATIONAL PARKS AND PUBLIC LANDS, I WILL CONTINUE TO MONITOR THE CHANNEL ISLANDS AND PROVIDE ASSISTANCE WHEREVER AND WHENEVER IT IS NEEDED.

FURTHERMORE, AS WORK PROGRESSES ON THE FISCAL YEAR 1988 BUDGET, I WILL CONTINUE MY EFFORTS TO OBTAIN ACQUISITION APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE PRIVATE PROPERTY ON EASTERN SANTA CRUZ ISLAND IN ORDER TO COMPLETE THIS MAGNIFICENT PARK.

Handwritten in blue ink:
A large circle around the word "I" in the second paragraph.
The initials "E. Bradley" written vertically.

THANKS AGAIN TO EVERYONE WHO PLAYED A ROLE IN THIS HISTORIC EVENT. I AM HOPEFUL THAT YOU WILL ALL BE ABLE TO, IF YOU HAVE NOT ALREADY DONE SO, VISIT THE CHANNEL ISLANDS AND ENJOY THEIR BEAUTIFUL AND UNIQUE RESOURCES AND PARTICULARLY THOSE FOUND ON THE NEWEST ADDITION, SANTA ROSA ISLAND. THIS IS A VERY SPECIAL PLACE TO BE SHARED BY EVERYONE!!

From: Swift, Heather
To: Timothy Bergling
Subject: Script heroes week
Date: Monday, July 24, 2017 12:19:25 PM
Attachments: Script_HeroWeek.docx

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Hi, I'm Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke.

This week, the Trump Administration is taking the time to celebrate American heroes from the U.S. military, law enforcement, and first responders.

It's an important reminder that real heroes don't wear capes.

At Interior, we have more than 35-hundred uniformed law enforcement personnel who keep our communities and visitors safe.

Like Bureau of Reclamation security officer Ivan Hernandez. He courageously dove into the water in an attempt to save the life of a trapped motorist whose vehicle crashed in the lake.

And just last month, the Washington, D.C., based U.S. Park Police helicopter pilot and crew provided a life-saving medivac flight during the attack on Members of Congress during baseball practice.

At Interior, we also have more than 45-hundred people who help battle wild fires in command centers and on the front lines across the west.

Our wildland firefighters battle the blazes from the air and ground. The most highly-trained firefighters – the smoke jumpers – even drop into the center of the fires by parachute.

Many firefighters have desk jobs throughout the year and are called on to deploy across the country at a moment's notice.

And to honor the men and women who have served in the U.S. military, the National Park Service, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and other bureaus maintain and manage dozens of war memorials, historical sites, and battlefields.

These historic grounds stretch from World War 2's fabled Midway Island in the Pacific to the streets of Boston and Philadelphia where our independence was born.

Interior also helps maintain hallowed ground like Arlington National Cemetery, where more than 300,000 heroes and their family members – including 360 Medal of Honor Recipients - have been laid to rest since 1866.

As a former military commander myself, I'm often overcome with gratitude and love of country when my wife and I walk the grounds of Arlington.

Heroes aren't just on the Hollywood movies, they are all around us. They run into the danger when everyone else is running away.

At Interior, we're dedicated to honoring their service and sacrifice every day.

This week, take a moment to pay tribute to the heroes in your community. Work with a service organization to clean up a memorial, volunteer with a VSO, or just shake the hand of a local hero and thank them for their service.

On behalf of everyone at the Department of the Interior, Thank you for your time.

May God bless America, and may God bless the men and women who defend her.

From: Swift, Heather
To: Laura Rigas; (b) (6)
Subject: Sec. Zinke GQ
Date: Thursday, May 25, 2017 11:29:03 AM

Hi Renee, thanks for the call. Below are some topline messaging on the Secretary and his bio. Let me know if there's anything else you need.

TOPLINE

- Secretary Ryan Zinke is a fifth-generation Montanan and a 23-year veteran of the U.S. Navy SEALs
 - Zinke is a guy that the average American connects with. He's a veteran, comes from a blue collar family (three generations of plumbers), and like the President is incredibly close with his wife and adult children.
- Zinke is a total work horse whose leadership at Interior has been bold and decisive.
 - Zinke has signed a number of Secretarial orders to implement the President's American Energy First agenda.
 - Zinke is a hands-on leader who does extensive travel to the places impacted by his Department, like his four-day trip to Utah to conduct a review of the national monuments under the President's executive order.
- He is well-liked and well-respected by his colleagues in the cabinet and in the White House.
 - Zinke is always willing to go the extra mile and collaborate on projects

Secretary Ryan Zinke Bio

Ryan Zinke was sworn in as the 52nd Secretary of the Interior on March 1, 2017.

A fifth-generation Montanan and former U.S. Navy SEAL Commander, Ryan Zinke built one of the strongest track records in the 114th Congress on championing sportsmen's access, conservation, regulatory relief, forest management, responsible energy development, and smart management of federal lands.

“As a former Navy SEAL, Ryan has incredible leadership skills and an attitude of doing whatever it takes to win,” President Donald Trump said in nominating the former congressman, who built an impressive portfolio on Interior issues ranging from federal mineral leases to tribal affairs to public lands conservation.

Growing up in a logging and rail town near Glacier National Park, Ryan has had a lifelong appreciation for conserving America's natural beauty while honoring Teddy Roosevelt's vision of multiple-use on our public lands. He has consistently led the efforts to renew the Land and Water Conservation Fund in Congress, and has also been a firm advocate for our nation's sportsmen to gain access to our public lands with the SCORE Act and SHARE Act. Zinke also coauthored the Resilient Federal Forest Act, which initiated new reforms for revitalizing America's timber towns and preventing wildfires by emphasizing the collaborative process.

Zinke is widely praised for his voting record supporting the Teddy Roosevelt philosophy of managing public lands, which calls for multiple-use to include economic, recreation and conservation. He has pledged to explore every possibility for safely and responsibly repealing bad regulations and using public natural resources to create jobs and wealth for the American people.

"I am honored and humbled to serve Montana and America as Secretary of the Interior," Zinke said. "I shall faithfully uphold Teddy Roosevelt's belief that our treasured public lands are 'for the benefit and enjoyment of the people'. I will work tirelessly to ensure our public lands are managed and preserved in a way that benefits everyone for generations to come. Most importantly, our sovereign Indian Nations and territories must have the respect and freedom they deserve. I look forward to making the Department of the Interior and America great again."

As Secretary of the Interior, Zinke leads an agency with more than 70,000 employees who are stewards for 20 percent of the nation's lands, including national parks, monuments, wildlife refuges and other public lands. The department oversees the responsible development of conventional and renewable energy supplies on public lands and waters; is the largest supplier and manager of water in the 17 Western states; and upholds trust responsibilities to the 567 federally recognized American Indian tribes and Alaska Natives.

Ryan Zinke represented the state of Montana in the U.S. House of Representatives since 2014. Before that he served in the Montana State Senate from 2009 to 2011, but the bulk of his public service was 23 years as a U.S. Navy SEAL officer.

Zinke enlisted in the Navy in 1985 and was soon selected to join the elite force where he would build an honorable career until his retirement in 2008. He retired with the rank of Commander after leading SEAL operations across the globe, including as the Deputy and Acting Commander of Joint Special Forces in Iraq and two tours at SEAL Team Six. Zinke was the first Navy SEAL elected to the U.S. House and is the first SEAL to serve as a cabinet secretary.

Zinke holds a Geology degree from the University of Oregon, where he was an All-PAC 10 football player; a Master's degree in Business Finance from National University; and a Master's degree in Global Leadership from the University of San Diego. Ryan and his wife Lolita (Lola) have three children and two granddaughters. Zinke is proud to be an adopted member of the Assiniboine Sioux Tribe at the Fort Peck Reservation in Northeast Montana.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

- Chairman McCain, Ranking Member Reed, Members of the Committee...I'd like to introduce my friend, an American patriot
- Captain Cully Stimson is President Donald Trump's nominee for General Counsel of the United States Navy.

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE (Most Qualified for the Job)

- Important for Navy to have the most-qualified individuals in positions of leadership—Capt. Stimson fits the bill.
- We served together in the Navy, he has 20+ years experience as a lawyer, first served in Navy JAG Corps in 1990s.
- I worked with him and Congressman DeStefano on a bill to ensure victims of sexual assault in the military receive the legal services they deserve.
- Captain Stimson's story is a lifetime of commitment to both community and country.
 - His start as a leader: Captain of the Men's Varsity Soccer Team at Kenyon College
- Graduated George Mason University School of Law 1992, joined Navy JAG Corps – 5 years active duty
 - Called back to active duty 2001, to support Joint Special Ops Task Force JAG for SEAL Group Two.
- Served as Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Detainee Affairs under Pres. George W. Bush
 - Advised Secretaries of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and Robert Gates about Pentagon detention operations.
- Has been with Heritage Foundation as a Senior Legal Fellow & Manager of their Nat'l Security Law Program since 2007
- Served our nation 2+ decades in Navy, recently as Dep. Chief Judge of Navy-Marine Corps Trial Judiciary & adjunct law prof./instructor at Naval Justice School in reserve capacity.

PERSONAL LIFE (High-Character Human Being, Fit to Serve)

- Teaching high school/coaching & mentoring young Americans—devoted countless hours to cultivating next generation.
- Chairman of the Board, U.S. Soccer Foundation (charitable arm of U.S. Soccer): offers assistance to 35,000+ underserved and minority children.
- Captain Stimson has been married since 1995. He and his wife adopted four orphans.
- Epitome of a military officer: always first one to help others
 - Dozens of rec. letters for his students
 - Quietly paid tuition for two of his mentees who could not afford to take the Law School Admission Test.
 - Founded the Bryon J. Horn Memorial Scholarship Fund in honor of a fallen fraternity brother.

BIPARTISAN LEADER (comfortable working across party lines)

- Worked with Jeh Johnson, then-General Counsel of the Dept of Defense, on a number of issues to keep our nation safe.
 - Eventually led to Capt. Stimson extending, and Johnson accepting, invitation to speak to the Heritage Foundation.
 - In that speech, Sec. Johnson remarked: “The office of General Counsel of the Defense Dept., particularly in the post-9/11 world, is in the middle of many difficult, front page issues.”
 - As General Counsel of the Navy, Capt. Stimson will confront a host of these difficult issues as well. I have full confidence in his ability to tackle them.
- Friend & brother-in-arms Capt. Stimson: Navy gaining an eminently qualified attorney, an honorable military officer, and an individual with vast experience/fidelity to law & our country.
- Long career of exemplary service in law & defense, excellent fit for the position to which he was nominated. No doubt he will be a wonderful General Counsel of the Navy.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

MAY 5, 2017 - MAY 6, 2017 - MAY 7, 2017 - MAY 8, 2017 - MAY 9, 2017 - MAY 10, 2017

TOP STORIES – MAY 5, 2017

1. With National Monuments Under Review, Bears Ears Is Focus Of Fierce Debate

NPR, May 5 / Kirk Siegler

A lot of the anger over federal public land in rural Utah today can be traced back to a windy, gray day in Arizona in September 1996. At the Grand Canyon, President Bill Clinton formally designated the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument in Utah, more than 100 miles away.

2. Record-setting southern Utah tourism highlights stakes of national monument debate

KSL News, May 5 / Dave Cawley

SALT LAKE CITY — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's plan to visit southern Utah next week will place him, and by extension the Trump Administration, in the middle of two bitter fights over public lands in the state.

3. Patagonia to Zinke: 'Conserve Our Shared Public Lands for Future Generations'

EcoWatch, May 5 / Yvon Chouinard and Rose Marcario

Dear Secretary Zinke,

As Secretary of the Interior, you hold the solemn responsibility to steward America's public lands and waters on behalf of the American people who own them. Our public lands, including the national monuments you are now reviewing, represent a vital part of our nation's heritage—a legacy that belongs not just to us, but to all future generations of Americans. It is an important part of your job to safeguard this legacy by making careful and informed decisions about what federal lands can be used for development and what special or vulnerable areas should be preserved for the future.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

4. INTERIOR: Agency suspends advisory panels even as decisions loom

E & E News, May 5 / Scott Streater

The Interior Department is formally reviewing the "charter and charge" of more than 200 advisory panels that assist federal agencies managing hundreds of millions of acres of public lands at a time when the Trump administration is considering significant changes to land-use designations and management practices.

5. 27 national monuments under Interior Dept. review

David DeMille, May 5 / David DeMille

ST. GEORGE, Utah — Nearly two dozen national monuments will face a federal review period following an executive order by President Trump.

TOP STORIES – MAY 6, 2017

BACK

6. Native American advocates size up Trump administration

KPAX News, May 6 / Eleanor Mueller

With President Donald Trump's first 100 days in office in the rearview mirror, lawmakers and advocates are uncertain but hopeful about the impact the new administration will have on the Native American community.

7. Op-ed: Utah Farm Bureau applauds review of national monuments

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 6 / Ron Gibson

Utah Farm Bureau applauds President Trump's review of presidential national monument designations over the past two decades, including the highly controversial 1996 Grand Staircase-Escalante and 2016 Bears Ears National Monument.

8. Much at stake as Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke visits Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 6 / Amy Joi O'Donoghue

SALT LAKE CITY — To all in the fight over the Bears Ears monument designation, there is much to win, a way of life to lose, and very little room on any side to compromise.

9. Supporters of Bears Ears, Grand Staircase rally in advance of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's visit

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 6 / Peggy Fletcher Stack

After his birth in Utah's Monument Valley, James Adakai's umbilical cord was buried at Bears Ears.

10. In our opinion: Reviewing the Antiquities Act is an important course of action

The Deseret News, May 6 / Deseret News editorial board

We believe in the importance of conservation. The nation's public and shared lands are a vital treasure that need to be preserved.

11. Op-ed: Will Bears Ears Be the Next Standing Rock?

The New York Times, May 6 / Terry Tempest Williams

After seven years of organizing, the Bears Ears Intertribal Coalition — made up of the Hopi, Navajo, Uintah and Ouray Ute, Ute Mountain Ute and Zuni Nations — played a key role in securing the protection of 1.35 million acres surrounding Bears Ears from development and resource extraction just before President Obama left office.

12. Zinke promises to hear out protestors of rescinding national monuments

The Washington Times, May 6 / Ben Wolfgang

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Sunday launched a “listening tour” across Utah designed to quell an uproar over his department's controversial review of national monuments.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

13. National Monuments: Presidents Can Create Them, but Only Congress Can Undo Them

Govexec.com, May 6 | Nicholas Bryner, Eric Biber, Mark Squillace and Sean B. Hecht

On April 26 President Trump issued an executive order calling for a review of national monuments designated under the Antiquities Act. This law authorizes presidents to set aside federal lands in order to protect “historic landmarks, historic and prehistoric structures, and other objects of historic or scientific interest.”

14. Op-ed: National monuments are a positive economic force for rural communities

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 6 | Amy Roberts

The next several months are pivotal for the future of America's public lands. It is not easy to articulate how we have gotten to this point – but here we are.

TOP STORIES – MAY 7, 2017

BACK

15. Rallies over Bears Ears act as prelude to Zinke's visit

KSL News, May 7 | Jasen Lee and Marjorie Cortez

SALT LAKE CITY — For scores of Utahns, preserving the monument status of the state's newest protected public lands and one of its more revered places was more than enough reason to spend a weekend afternoon at the state Capitol.

16. Zinke met by protest as he arrives to consider Utah voices on national monuments

The Deseret News, May 7 | McKenzie Romero

SALT LAKE CITY — While protestors clogged the sidewalk outside, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said he will be gathering perspectives of people on all sides of a deeply controversial issue as he reviews the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante national monuments.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

17. Zinke starts review of Utah's Bears Ears National Monument

The Las Vegas Review-Journal, May 7 | Michelle L. Price and Brady McCombs, AP

SALT LAKE CITY — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke will start a four-day Utah trip Sunday to assess whether 3.2 million acres of national monuments in the state's southern red rock region should be scaled down or even rescinded.

18. The new range war

The Christian Science Monitor, May 7 | Amanda Paulson

MAY 7, 2017 SALMON, IDAHO—Merill Beyeler bears the classic look of a Western rancher. He's got the leathery face of someone who has spent a lot of time outdoors. He wears flannel shirts, jeans, and a bone-colored cowboy hat.

19. The Latest: Zinke says he may not favor shrinking monuments

NewsOK, May 7 | The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Latest on a visit to Utah by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to review the designation of national monuments (all times local):

20. Zinke says monument designations have been an 'effective tool,' though 'very few ... are to the scale of the recent actions'

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 7 | Matthew Piper

As he embarked on a tour of Utah to review two national monuments, Ryan Zinke said he sees no evidence Native American proponents of Bears Ears National Monument were exploited by special interest groups, as state leaders have suggested.

21. Zinke Begins Utah Listening Tour

KUER News, May 7 | Judy Fahys

Utahns for and against national monuments have been asking the Trump administration to weigh in on Bears Ears ever since it was created in December. U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke arrived in Utah Sunday to hear their concerns firsthand.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

TOP STORIES – MAY 8, 2017

BACK

22. Zinke in southern Utah to tour Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 8 | Amy Joi O'Donoghue

BLANDING — Native American supporters of the new Bears Ears National Monument talked Monday about the sacred nature of the rugged landscape and why it's so important to protect.

23. Zinke kicks off Utah tour in national monuments review

The Hill, May 8 | Timothy Cama

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is in Utah this week to tour two controversial national monuments that the Trump administration is considering rescinding or shrinking.

24. Mr. Zinke, Keep Channeling Teddy Roosevelt

The New York Times, May 8 | The Editorial Board

On his first day on the job, Ryan Zinke, President Trump's secretary of the interior, rode a horse to work, in plain imitation of Teddy Roosevelt, who as president used to gallop around Washington, and whose admirable record as a conservationist Mr. Zinke says he hopes to emulate.

25. Could management shift to states even if public lands remain federally owned?

The Las Vegas Sun, May 8 | Daniel Rothberg

At a Lake Tahoe fundraiser in August, Elko County Commissioner Demar Dahl — a leader in the movement to transfer federal land to the states — met privately with then-candidate Donald Trump. According to a story Dahl has told many times since then, he asked Trump how he would feel operating a 10-floor hotel in which eight floors were owned by a bureaucracy 2,500 miles away.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

26. Could management shift to states even if public lands remain federally owned?

The Center for American Progress, May 8 / Mary Ellen Kustin

On April 26, President Donald Trump launched an attack on national parks, public lands, and waters. His executive order called on U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke to “review” the 54 national monuments that presidents have designated or expanded since 1996. The order gives wide discretion to the secretary to recommend actions that the president or Congress should take to alter or rescind the protections for these natural, historical, and cultural treasures.

27. US Interior secretary tours hotly contested Utah monument

The Washington Post, May 8 / Michelle L. Price and Brady McCombs, AP

SALT LAKE CITY — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Monday will get a bird’s-eye view of one of 27 national monuments he’s been ordered to review as he flies over 1.3 million acres of southern Utah’s red rock plateaus, cliffs and canyons graced with sagebrush, juniper trees and ancient cliff dwellings in one of America’s newest and most hotly contested monuments.

28. Interior Secretary Zinke in southern Utah to tour Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 8 / Amy Joi O'Donoghue

BLANDING — Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke landed in San Juan County Monday to begin his first full day exploring the rugged footprint of the new Bears Ears National Monument.

29. Bears Ears: Hatch, Utah delegation lead pushback effort

The Spectrum, May 8 / David DeMille

After signing an executive order calling for a review of more than two dozen national monuments, President Donald Trump handed the pen to U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch, crediting the Utah Republican for being a driving force behind the order.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

30. San Juan County residents welcome visit from Secretary Zinke

ABC 4 Utah, May 8 / Glen Mills

Interior secretary Ryan Zinke is touring two national monuments, and taking input from local stakeholders.

31. Interior Turns Down Meetings With 2 Groups Supporting Utah Monuments

The Morning Consult, May 8 / Jack Fitzpatrick

The Department of the Interior turned down meetings this week with at least two groups supporting national monument designations in Utah, spurring complaints that the Trump administration's review of monuments may be one-sided.

32. Zinke: Monument status may not be best to save sacred land

The Washington Post, May 8 / Michelle L. Price and Brady McCombs, AP

BLANDING, Utah — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said sacred tribal lands he toured Monday in America's newest and most hotly contested monument should be preserved but he questioned whether the monument designation was the right way to do it.

33. Interior Secretary visits Bears Ears National Monument to decide its fate

Fox 13 News, May 8 / Ben Winslow

BEARS EARS NATIONAL MONUMENT -- Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke hiked past the lines of protesters out into the desert landscape.

34. Interior Secretary visits Bears Ears National Monument to decide its fate

KUTV 2 News, May 8 / Daniel Woodruff

Blanding, Utah — (KUTV) As the sun set over San Juan County Monday evening, Blanding, Utah, was buzzing.

35. Interior secretary tours Bears Ears, hotly contested monument in Utah

PBS Newshour, May 8 | Michelle L. Price and Brady McCombs, AP

BLANDING, Utah — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke took an aerial tour Monday of one of America's newest and most hotly contested monuments — one of 27 he's been ordered to review by President Donald Trump to determine if they were properly established.

36. Zinke flies over Bears Ears as critics urge him to 'Make San Juan County Great Again' and rescind monument

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 8 | Brian Maffly

Blanding • When Hank Stevens' family hunted under Bears Ears Buttes, they always honored the deer whose life they had taken and the place that nurtured it.

37. Tribal leaders demand apology from Hatch after he said they 'don't fully understand' Bears Ears implications

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 8 | Mariah Noble

After Sen. Orrin Hatch said Sunday that American Indians "don't fully understand" what they would lose if Bears Ears is "made clearly into a monument," tribal leaders have called his comments offensive, and they demand an apology.

TOP STORIES – MAY 9, 2017

BACK

38. Boyd Matheson: The Navy SEAL and the Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 9 | Boyd Matheson

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, a former Navy SEAL commander, is touring Utah this week in response to President Donald Trump's executive order calling for a review of national monument designations over the past 21 years. There will be many who want to get in the secretary's ear as he visits the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante areas. I hope he can shun and shut out the strident and vitriolic voices in order to truly listen to and hear all the parties who have something constructive to say.

39. The public is invited to comment as Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke tours monuments Utah politicians want abolished or shrunk

The National Geographic, May 9 | Laura Parker

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is touring a pair of controversial national monuments in Utah on horseback this week at the behest of President Trump, who is reconsidering their merits. Zinke's four-day visit will take in Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante in southern Utah, the main targets in a review of 27 large monuments Trump ordered last month. The president assigned Zinke to examine whether his predecessors over-stepped their authority and made these monuments too large or ignored objections from the public.

40. The Case for the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument

The Center for American Progress, May 9 | Jenny Rowland

President Donald Trump's national monuments executive order is an attack on American national parks, public lands, and oceans. One of its specific targets is the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument in Utah.

41. NATIONAL MONUMENTS: Standing in Bears Ears, Zinke says protections may change

E & E News, May 9 | Jennifer Yachnin,

BLANDING, Utah — Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke questioned yesterday whether a monument designation is the "right vehicle" to protect tracts in southern Utah, suggesting that other public lands categories could be more appropriate for the 1.35-million-acre Bears Ears National Monument.

42. The Latest: Utah Rancher Tells Zinke Monument Unnecessary

US News, May 9 | The Associated Press

MONTICELLO, UTAH - Fifth-generation Utah rancher Bruce Adams has enjoyed a prime seat next to U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke this week as he reviews a national monument created on lands that Adams' ancestors helped settle in 1879.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

43. Executive Order gives ranchers hope

Livestock News, May 9 | Karin Schiley

The signing of a recent executive order by the president is giving ranchers hope that the administration is taking steps to reverse what some consider governmental land-grabs throughout history.

44. NATIONAL MONUMENTS: Bears Ears won't become a national park — Zinke

E & E News, May 9 | Jennifer Yachnin

MONTICELLO, Utah — Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke today ruled out the possibility that he will recommend converting Bears Ears National Monument into a national park but said he remained open to all other options for the 1.35 million acres of public lands.

TOP STORIES – MAY 10, 2017

BACK

45. Tribune Editorial: Hatch continues to belittle Native Americans in Bears Ears dispute

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 10 | Tribune Editorial

No, Sen. Hatch, we won't just take your word for it.

Utah's senior senator put his foot very firmly into his mouth Monday by attacking the intelligence and the integrity of the five Native American nations whose elected leaders joined together to work for and, in the final days of the Obama administration, win national monument status for 1.35 million acres in southeast Utah known as Bears Ears.

46. Will National Monuments Get a “Fair Hearing” on Zinke’s Listening Tour?

Sierra, May 10 | Stacey Bare

On Sunday, Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke stood in front of a small, windowless conference room in Salt Lake City next to one of the long-standing generals of the Sagebrush Rebellion, Senator Orrin Hatch.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

47. Trump's national monument plan could easily fail — but he'll still declare victory

The Los Angeles Times, May 10 | Evan Halper

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke tangled with protesters, weaved through media hives and trotted on horseback across a Utah moonscape this week in pursuit of President Trump's executive order targeting national monuments.

48. Gehrke: What Zinke isn't hearing, seeing during his trip to Utah

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 10 | Robert Gehrke

Blake Spalding and Jen Castle opened the doors of Hell's Backbone Grill in 1999, drawn to the remote town of Boulder by their love of wilderness and the nearby Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument.

49. Trump Takes Aim at Western Monuments That May Hold Oil Riches

Bloomberg News, May 10 | Jennifer A Dlouhy

Bears Ears National Monument in Utah boasts stretches of red-and-yellow sandstone so brilliant they appear to be ablaze and rock structures so precarious they appear to defy gravity.

50. Interior Secretary Zinke admires national monuments he'll likely recommend removing

The Washington Times, May 10 | Ben Wolfgang

Based on the beautiful pictures and effusive praise he has posted to Twitter this week from one of the nation's newest national monuments, you might never guess that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke could set into motion the process to erase it from the map.

51. Interior Secretary Orders Protester To 'Be Nice' During Visit To Bears Ears

The Huffington Post, May 10 | Chris D'Angelo

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke lost his manners during a visit to Bears Ears National Monument on Monday after being repeatedly questioned about why he hasn't spent more time talking with tribal leaders as part of his national monuments review.

52. Bears Ears National Monument: Zinke gets mixed reactions during visit

Fox News, May 10 | Andrew O'Reilly

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke spent the first day of his listening tour of the country's national monuments visiting the famed Anasazi ruins in Utah's Butler Wash and trying to assuage concerns of Utahns that undoing or shrinking the designation of the controversial 1.3-million acre Bears Ears National Monument would not automatically result in lots of oil rigs or mining equipment.

53. Op-ed: Attempts to undo national monuments will rally formidable opposition

The Hill, May 10 | Glenn Nelson

The Trump administration is well advised to gauge the political blowback as it contemplates an assault — disguised as a review — on the Antiquities Act, as well as two decades of amplifying diverse and inclusive stories in this country. During its final months, the Obama administration shrewdly protected a string of cultural landmarks that should form a formidable firewall around those designations, as well as earlier sacred sites, such as the Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial in D.C. and the César E. Chávez National Monument in California.

54. Hunting, fishing businesses unite support of National Monuments

Ammoland, May 10 | Joe Evans

WASHINGTON -(Ammoland.com)- More than 100 hunting and fishing business owners and sporting organizations sent a letter today to Congress to show their support for national monuments and the responsible use of the Antiquities Act.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

55. The best way to save sacred land? 'The issue is whether the monument is the right vehicle'

The Journal, May 10 | Michelle L. Price and Brady Mccombs, AP

BLANDING, Utah – U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said sacred tribal lands he toured Monday in America's newest and most hotly contested monument should be preserved but he questioned whether the monument designation was the right way to do it.

56. NATIONAL MONUMENTS: Zinke: 'All of the above' possible for Bears Ears

E & E News, May 10 | Jennifer Yachnin

MONTICELLO, Utah — Make the mistake of asking Heidi Redd how many animals her Indian Creek Cattle Co. owns, and she'll only laugh good-naturedly and ask if you want to know her annual income, too.

57. Zinke rides with cattle ranchers working on Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 10 | Amy Joi O'Donoghue

BEARS EARS, San Juan County — Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said Tuesday that in the context of Bears Ears National Monument, "cattle ranchers matter, too."

58. NATIONAL MONUMENTS: Zinke review could open 2.7M acres to development — report

E & E News, May 10 | Jennifer Yachnin

BLANDING, Utah — Boundary changes to a half-dozen national monuments could open up 2.7 million acres of land to fossil fuel extraction, according to a new analysis released by Greenpeace this morning.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

1. With National Monuments Under Review, Bears Ears Is Focus Of Fierce Debate

NPR, May 5 / Kirk Siegler

A lot of the anger over federal public land in rural Utah today can be traced back to a windy, gray day in Arizona in September 1996. At the Grand Canyon, President Bill Clinton formally designated the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument in Utah, more than 100 miles away.

"On this remarkable site, God's handiwork is everywhere in the natural beauty of the Escalante Canyons," he said.

But Clinton didn't set foot in Utah. The planning for the monument was largely done in secret, and state leaders had little warning it was coming.

Now, nearly 21 years later, mistrust toward the federal government persists, in the tightknit, mostly Mormon town of Blanding, Utah. Folks can't help but draw a parallel to how President Barack Obama's sweeping Bears Ears National Monument ended up in their backyard.

"I don't understand how it would protect the land when you're inviting thousands of footprints in," says Laura O'Donnell.

O'Donnell, who works at Blanding's modest visitor center, says she is uncomfortable with her town suddenly being the flashpoint in the heated debate over the future of federal public lands.

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is keeping a promise to travel into rural Utah beginning this weekend to hear from locals who live around the new 1.35 million-acre Bears Ears monument and the established 1.8 million-acre Grand Staircase monument to the west. The Trump administration has launched a 45-day review over whether large national monuments like these that protect federal land should be rescinded or shrunk.

In Blanding, Zinke's visit is highly anticipated. Here, opposition to the monument runs deeper than the usual anxieties in sagebrush country about adding more protections to public land that would restrict future mining and other development.

"Monuments should be an honor to an area, and we feel like this one is nothing but a punishment," says Jami Bayles, who founded a group called the Stewards of San Juan County.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

From her office at a small college, you can see the twin Bears Ears buttes framing the distant horizon out on the vast Cedar Mesa west of town. While not as visually dramatic as the famous national parks nearby, the area is dense with cliff dwellings and ancient artifacts.

Bayles and many of her neighbors felt offended when the federal government announced additional protections under a new monument because they felt it sent a message that the land was being threatened.

"We keep that place pristine, we keep it clean, we check on it all the time," Bayles says. "I guess my argument is, 'OK, yeah, it belongs to everybody, but not everybody has been taking care of it.' "

Bayles says that the monument is being pushed by extreme, out-of-state environmentalists and that her side has struggled to be heard.

There are deep pockets behind the campaign to protect Bears Ears.

San Juan County is about 50 percent Native American. A short drive down the road, on the Navajo Nation Reservation, tribal leaders say it's a lie for people in Blanding to argue that the monument is being pushed on them from the outside.

"For them to be here for 130 years, they should at least understand the Native Americans now," says Kenneth Maryboy, a chapter president.

Native Americans from around the Four Corners region, where Utah, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona meet, who back the new monument are open about the fact that they're getting outside help and money because they didn't have a voice before, according to interviews with tribal leaders. Many tribes in the region have officially come out in support of the monument, though not all.

Maryboy was involved with the first talks with Utah's congressional delegation almost a decade ago about protecting Bears Ears as a National Conservation Area. They broke down last year, then came Obama's executive order.

"Our gripe and our fight is to preserve what's there, the Native American artifacts, the antiquities and all the shrines and the ruins," Maryboy says.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The sacred burial grounds of the famous Navajo leader Manuelito are included in the new monument. Maryboy sees the monument as crucial to protecting these antiquities from vandalism and looting, a historical problem in San Juan County.

"The San Juan County good ol' boys don't want to see this happen," says Maryboy. "They adamantly, openly said, 'This is our land. The damn Navajos need to go back to the reservation.'"

It's not an overstatement to say that Zinke will see deep tension and polarization when he arrives at Bears Ears late this weekend for a two-day tour.

Tribes here point to a history of broken promises with the U.S. government. If the Trump administration moves to abolish Bears Ears, it's not hard to imagine a Standing Rock-inspired protest here. On the other hand, if the monument stays intact, some wonder whether the militias that support rancher Cliven Bundy and his sons would arrive in San Juan County.

Back in Blanding, some locals like Ferd Johnson are floating a compromise. Why not just shrink the monument and protect the cliff dwellings and other antiquities themselves, they say.

"All these environmentalists, these Navajos, Hopis and the other Indians didn't even know where the Bears Ears was," Johnson says. "Why is it so sacred if they don't even know where it is?"

The tribes dispute this. Some have already signaled they'll sue if, after Zinke's Utah trip, the Trump administration moves to rescind Bears Ears.

BACK

2. Record-setting southern Utah tourism highlights stakes of national monument debate

KSL News, May 5 | Dave Cawley

SALT LAKE CITY — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's plan to visit southern Utah next week will place him, and by extension the Trump Administration, in the middle of two bitter fights over public lands in the state.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

One, a white-hot battle over the 1.3-million-acre Bears Ears National Monument in San Juan County, erupted last December when then-President Barack Obama created the monument at the request of tribal representatives and against the wishes of county and state leaders.

The other fight has simmered for two decades. It deals with an older and even larger monument, blamed by many in southern Utah for slowly strangling the life out of their communities. Yet the disagreement over Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument is coming back to a boil even as tourism in the region sets new records year after year.

A review of economic indicators by KSL, including employment data, visitation statistics, tourism-related tax revenues and county building permit records obtained through an open records request, reveals both the struggles and opportunities facing places like Cannonville, Kanab, Boulder and Big Water.

The simmering dispute

An irritated Rep. Mike Noel, R-Kanab, was sick of hearing about the values of southern Utah's tourism economy. During a meeting of the state's House Natural Resource, Agriculture and Environment Committee in late February, the lawmaker unloaded on his colleagues from Salt Lake City.

"People tell me there's all kinds of jobs down there; everything's going great," Noel said. "I really kind of get a gutful of it up here, I really do. It bothers me because it sends a false premise."

Noel represents House District 73, a giant swath of territory covering all of Kane, Garfield, San Juan, Wayne and Piute Counties, as well as pieces of Beaver and Sevier Counties. He chastised urban lawmakers for suggesting federal management of Utah lands has had a positive influence by driving visitors, and by extension their tax dollars, into the rural region he represents.

"I've lived there for 41 years. I've seen what's happened down there and my ancestors have lived there for over 100 years and it's not in a good condition as far as you say, as far as economically and what's happening to families," Noel said.

In recent years Noel has helped lead the charge in several high-profile efforts to take control of federal lands. Key among those lands is the monument at the heart of his district — Grand Staircase-Escalante.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The maligned monument

As designated by President Bill Clinton in 1996, Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument covered roughly 1.9 million acres. It's bounded on the east by Capitol Reef National Park and Glen Canyon National Recreation Area, and on the west by Bryce Canyon National Park. The monument's northern edge abuts the Dixie National Forest, while its southern extremity touches the Arizona border.

Wrapped within it sits a maze of twisted river canyons, eroded sandstone pinnacles and arches, relics of pioneer history and fossilized dinosaur bones.

Rep. Noel's cry to turn over those lands to state management, or to at least prioritize cattle grazing, ATV use and mineral extraction, have support from people like Garfield County Commissioner Leland Pollock.

"200,000 acres would be a stretch, to say that there's antiquities, things of value that meet the Antiquities Act criteria," Pollock said. "What is it? It's BLM range. It's brush land. It's sage brush."

The Bureau of Land Management administers the monument, unlike most other Utah monuments which are instead operated by the National Park Service.

Prior to the designation two decades ago, a bitter fight had raged between the mining company Andalex Resources, Inc. and environmental groups over the company's plans to extract large amounts of coal from the region. Andalex held federal mineral leases around the Kaiparowitz Plateau.

The wording of President Clinton's declaration made clear those existing leases were to be honored. However, the company made the decision not to develop the resources and ultimately gave up the leases in exchange for $14 million from the Department of the Interior.

Miners were not the only ones with claims to the land. Ranchers also held leases that allowed them to graze their cattle over much of what is now in the monument. Those uses were largely respected and allowed to continue by the Bureau of Land Management, though some parcels were withdrawn from use.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Monument critics believe the coal reserves could still be developed, to the economic benefit of the region, were the federal land managers not standing in the way.

Recreation opportunities on the monument are expansive, though not without difficulty.

Unlike many national parks, where trails are paved and shuttle buses run on tight schedules, Grand Staircase-Escalante is almost entirely primitive. It holds just three established campgrounds: Calf Creek along state Route 12 between Boulder and Escalante, Deer Creek on the Burr Trail Road and White House on the Paria River. Roads to most popular destinations are unpaved and at times impassable due to weather or damage.

“They did not want tourism,” Pollock said. “The monument itself, they would tell me when I was first sworn in as a commissioner, ‘this wasn’t created for tourism. It was created to study science.’”

The popularity explosion

Want them or not, tourists are coming to Grand Staircase-Escalante in record numbers.

Visitation statistics maintained by the National Park Service show Zion led the pack of Utah parks in 2016, taking in 4.3 million people. Bryce Canyon, the state’s second-most-visited park, welcomed almost 2.4 million. Both figures are nearly double the visitation recorded in 1996, when Grand Staircase-Escalante was born.

BLM records show the monument has also almost doubled its annual visitation during the same period. It set a high-water mark of 923,236 visitors last year, placing it above even Canyonlands and about on par with Capitol Reef National Park.

The rate of visitation growth for Zion, Bryce and Arches accelerated sharply in 2013. Kem C. Gardner Policy Institute Director Natalie Gochnour noted that in recent years, the Utah Office of Tourism has heavily advertised the parks with the Mighty Five campaign.

“There’s a lot of money that goes into promoting our state and it’s proven to be very well invested ... but you have to be really careful that you also invest in the quality of that experience,” Gochnour said. “Whether it’s roads or campgrounds or bridges or water treatment plants, amenities, you need to invest in the tourism infrastructure business to get a payback from it.”

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

In Washington County, home to St. George and the Zion gateway community of Springdale, taxes on short-term lodging and restaurant sales have followed a similar curve as the park's visitation. Grand County, too, has shown strong tourism-related tax growth, boosted by visitors to Arches who also stay and spend in Moab.

The visitation spike has helped accelerate recovery in Washington and Grand Counties following the recession of the late 2000s.

"The tax revenues related to tourism and travel are going up, have been for the last five years," Jennifer Leaver said. She works as a research analyst at Gardner Institute and has spent a good deal of time examining the economics of southern Utah. "Jobs have been either remaining flat or going up. Wages have been going up."

But while Garfield County is home to Bryce Canyon, it has not seen quite the same boost.

Challenges of the tourism economy

The tiny town of Boulder is made up of little more than a few buildings and farms snuggled into the valley where state Route 12 and the Burr Trail meet on the southern slopes of Boulder Mountain. As of the 2010 Census, Boulder claimed a population of 226.

Yet it's exactly where Blake Spalding and her partner chose to start their business, Hell's Backbone Grill, shortly after Grand Staircase-Escalante's creation.

"We really just built it up. This is our 18th season. We have about 45 employees that work with us year after year," Spalding said.

Hell's Backbone Grill, which is located on the grounds of the Boulder Mountain Lodge, has received numerous accolades from both local and national press over the years. It draws clientele with its menu and its reputation, but finding qualified help has proved to be one of the restaurant's biggest challenges.

"There's not a business from a construction company to the school to the towns themselves, certainly my restaurant, that isn't hiring right now. We have jobs aplenty," Spalding said. "What we don't have is residents to fill them."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Making a life in a place like Boulder can be incredibly difficult, especially for someone accustomed to urban living. Cell phone service is spotty. Cultural options are limited, though outdoor recreation is in abundant supply. Grocery runs can require long drives to bigger towns. And while there are jobs available, many are not the kind capable of providing a steady living.

Lecia Langston, a regional economist with the Utah Department of Workforce Services, said tourism jobs tend to come and go.

“For Garfield County particularly they see a huge amount of seasonality so that during the summer they basically have to import a lot of their labor because they need it, but they don’t need it in the winter,” Langston said.

People who can’t afford to stay the winter on what they earned are forced to leave in search of other opportunities, as work in other more stable fields can prove tough to find.

“Garfield County has the highest percentage of leisure and hospitality services jobs in the state. They run about 43 percent of their total non-farm employment,” Langston said.

The result is a yo-yoing effect. In March, the most recent month for which numbers are available, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in Garfield County was 7.1 percent. That was the lowest it’s been since the end of the recession but it was still well above the statewide average of 3.1 percent.

“If you were to look at the raw rate in July for Garfield County it would be very, very, very low,” Langston said. Conversely, it would be much, much higher in December. “Kane County (in March) actually looks fairly low, given the fact that they do have a lot of seasonality. Their unemployment rate right now is 3.2 percent, which is comparable to the state average.”

Kanab on the cusp

Kane and Garfield Counties have much in common, making that difference in their unemployment rate very conspicuous.

“What’s interesting about Kane County is they do have a couple of unusual employers that make their employment numbers look a little bit different,” Langston said. “Kane County’s largest employer is actually Best Friends Animal Sanctuary. They show up in what we call ‘other services’ so they have a really high percentage of employment in that sector. The other thing

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

that's important to know about Kane County is they do have some manufacturing. Stampin' Up was a homegrown company that started in Kane County and still has a sizable employment presence."

That little bit of diversity helps make Kane's economy more resilient. Kane County Office of Tourism Executive Director Camille Johnson said the addition of steady jobs has allowed for more stability and, as a result, investment in the visitor experience.

"We had Comfort Suites and Hampton Inn open up in the last year and we've got a La Quinta on line to open in 2018. Then I just learned of one of our local partners that's doing an expansion," Johnson said. "We've had a lot of new restaurants open up."

The city also has geography to its advantage. Kanab sits within striking distance of Zion, Bryce Canyon, the Grand Canyon, Lake Powell and the Wave. The county is promoting Kanab as a place to base camp while visiting the whole variety of southern Utah destinations. The goal is to keep visitors in town long enough to help the local economy, rather than having them simply pass through on their way to another place.

Johnson said overcrowding in the banner locations like Zion also has Kane County pointing increasingly more visitors toward hidden gems outside of the Mighty Five.

"Because tourism is such a hot industry for us right now, we're having a little bit of a labor force crisis and a housing crisis," Johnson said. "With the two new hotels opening up and several restaurants, it spread our already thin labor force even thinner."

Up in Garfield County though, the hospitality industry has grown more slowly since the creation of Grand Staircase-Escalante.

Commercial building permit papers obtained by KSL through an open records request reveal much of the new lodging construction over the last 20 years has focused Ruby's Inn or the Bryce Canyon gateway communities. Recently, more rustic rental options like cabins, yurts or RV parks have started to open around Escalante and Tropic.

Back in Kanab, some fear the rapid growth could dilute the history and western character of the region.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

“Locals will say to me ‘we don’t want to be like Moab, we don’t want to be like Springdale, please don’t let that happen’,” Johnson said. “They’re afraid that we’ll lose the spirit of our community and our heritage and then it won’t be appealing for locals to stay here and then they uproot and then we lose that heritage.”

The tale of two Utahs

The loss of locals is already happening and not just in Kanab. It’s evident from the average age in many rural Utah counties.

“There are two different economic realities in our state. We call it ‘the tale of two Utahs’,” Natalie Gochnour said. “They basically have children who left the counties, presumably for employment opportunities, schooling and they don’t come back. And so these counties get older and older and older.”

Why don’t they come back? Experts agree it’s a lack of high-paying skilled work in rural communities.

“It’s kind of a catch-22 because there aren’t necessarily the kinds of jobs young people want, or that pay the kind of wages that they’d really like to have, so they leave and you don’t get the population growth that you need to spur the economic growth,” Lecia Langston, the Workforce Services regional economist, said.

Garfield County even declared a state of emergency in 2015 due to declining enrollment at Escalante High School.

“In 1996 you had about 144 children enrolled at Escalante school, seventh through 12th grade,” Commissioner Leland Pollock said. “When we declared that state of emergency it was down to 51.”

Pollock points to Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument as the primary reason for the drop. Others though see the problem in more nuanced terms.

“I think it’s really a time to think very purposefully about rural Utah, particularly rural Utah that’s hurting, and figure out how do we connect and unify and help,” Gochnour said.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

She suggested that could mean having policymakers lean on urban Utah's strength, investing the fruits of Wasatch Front productivity into rural counties through infrastructure improvements like better roads or broadband access. At the same time, battles over public lands could be quieted by some good-faith deal-making.

“I think a really productive place for state decision makers to focus is on land exchanges and making all of these state institutional trust lands that are locked up inside federal lands, not accessible, getting them closer to the cities, closer to the towns and letting those towns grow,” Gochnour said.

The Wasatch Front could in turn benefit in the form of reduced air pollution and traffic congestion, as more people disperse into areas outside of the urban core. Gochnour suggested outdoor gear companies already operating in the state could lead the charge, choosing to locate their manufacturing facilities in areas like Kanab.

“Maybe it's time for the state and the federal government, locals, recreationists to all come together and say ‘there is a path forward that can address our needs’.”

BACK

3. Patagonia to Zinke: 'Conserve Our Shared Public Lands for Future Generations'

EcoWatch, May 5 | Yvon Chouinard and Rose Marcario

Dear Secretary Zinke,

As Secretary of the Interior, you hold the solemn responsibility to steward America's public lands and waters on behalf of the American people who own them. Our public lands, including the national monuments you are now reviewing, represent a vital part of our nation's heritage—a legacy that belongs not just to us, but to all future generations of Americans. It is an important part of your job to safeguard this legacy by making careful and informed decisions about what federal lands can be used for development and what special or vulnerable areas should be preserved for the future.

That is why the arbitrary 120-day deadline for you to review whether to shrink or rescind dozens of national monuments is absurd. As you know, the process to establish a national monument often takes years, if not decades. It involves significant study of the area of the proposed monument—including its ecological, cultural, archeological, economic and recreation value—and robust consultation with local communities and their elected representatives at every level. Given the unique and complex histories of each monument, there is simply no way to meaningfully review dozens of individual monuments in such a short period.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

You justify this review on the false premise that the American people have not yet been heard on the designation of these national monuments. But the communities near the national monuments under your review have already made their voices heard during public input and stakeholder engagement periods prior to designation. For example, notwithstanding the rhetoric of Utah Governor Gary Herbert and members of the Utah Congressional delegation, the designation of Bears Ears National Monument involved years of public input gathered by the Obama administration. This process included a series of public meetings in Southeastern Utah in 2016, including several sessions attended by former Interior Secretary Sally Jewell. It also included significant engagement with the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition, which represents tribal nations for whom the land is sacred and contains archeological artifacts with immense cultural value. Additionally, in a recent poll, 68 percent of voters in seven Western states said they prioritize the protection of land, water and wildlife for recreation on public land, compared with 22 percent who prioritized increased production of fossil fuels. Your review must account for this extensive record of consultation as you purport to seek public input.

As you undertake this review, we urge you to consider the enormous economic benefits of protected public lands for nearby communities, including many rural areas. A recent study showed that areas in the West with protected lands consistently enjoy better rates of employment and income growth compared to those with no protected lands. In the 22 years since the Grand Staircase-Escalante in Utah was declared a national monument, jobs grew by 38 percent in two neighboring counties. The designation of 17 national monuments—including nine monuments covered under your review—led to significant increases in per capita income in regions adjacent to the newly-protected areas.

Rescinding or shrinking the national monuments under review also threatens the fast-growing outdoor recreation economy, which relies significantly on recreation access to protected public lands. These lands are not "locked up," as the Trump administration has said repeatedly declared—they are extremely productive. As you know, since you participated in the outdoor industry's announcement of a new economic study last week, the recreation economy drives $887 billion in consumer spending every year and supports more jobs (7.6 million) than oil, natural gas and mining combined. Rescinding or shrinking the national monuments under review would significantly impact the strength of the outdoor recreation economy and limit our ability to create and sustain jobs.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Patagonia has been outfitting outdoors people and protecting public lands for more than 30 years. The debate over land and water conservation is always complex and sometimes divisive. But we have never witnessed the legacy of America's federal lands encountering greater risk than we see right now. As you visit these protected places and report back to the president, I urge you to follow in the tradition of President Teddy Roosevelt and conserve our shared public lands for future generations.

BACK

4. INTERIOR: Agency suspends advisory panels even as decisions loom

E & E News, May 5 | Scott Streater

The Interior Department is formally reviewing the "charter and charge" of more than 200 advisory panels that assist federal agencies managing hundreds of millions of acres of public lands at a time when the Trump administration is considering significant changes to land-use designations and management practices.

The Bureau of Land Management has told members of its 30 resource advisory councils (RACs) to postpone scheduled meetings through at least September as part of the new national review of Interior's advisory panels, both internal and external.

That includes canceling meetings of six other BLM advisory committees affiliated with specific sites within the agency's National Conservation Lands system, as well as two other high-profile panels: the National Wild Horse and Burro Advisory Board and the North Slope Science Initiative Science Technical Advisory Panel in Alaska.

It also affects other panels, such as the National Park System Advisory Board, which advises the NPS director and Interior secretary "on matters relating to the National Park Service, the National Park System, and programs administered by the National Park Service," including the Antiquities Act, which has been targeted by GOP congressional leaders.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The timing means some land management recommendations — including a high-profile review of national monuments — will be completed without the advisory panels' input.

Heather Swift, an Interior spokeswoman, told E&E News in an email today that the review is part of an ongoing effort by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke aimed at "restoring trust in the Department's decision-making."

Swift said the review of "the charter and charge of each Board/Advisory Committee" is designed to "maximize feedback from these boards and ensure their compliance with the Federal Advisory Committee Act," the 1972 law that ensures that advice by various advisory committees is objective and accessible to the public.

"This review process necessitates the temporary postponement of advisory committee meetings," Swift said.

But Swift said the review is also designed to ensure compliance with "the President's recent executive orders."

President Trump in the last month has signed a number of executive orders, including one requiring the review of all policies that may "potentially burden" energy production activity on federal lands.

Trump last week also signed one requiring Interior to review the boundaries of dozens of national monuments designated within the last two decades and to decide whether they should be altered or eliminated (Greenwire, April 26).

That executive order is targeted at more than 30 national monuments designated since 1996 that comprise at least 100,000 acres. It will initially focus on the fate of the recently designated 1.35-million-acre Bears Ears National Monument but will ultimately include sites like the 1.9-million-acre Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, both in Utah.

That executive order requires Zinke to submit a report with his recommendations on the national monuments to the president within 120 days, before the Interior review of the advisory committees and boards is completed and the postponement of the meetings lifted.

That means the Utah resource advisory council that provides recommendations to BLM on management of the 22.9 million acres of federal public lands in the state will not weigh in on the national monument issue; neither, presumably, will the members of the agency's Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument advisory committee.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

That concerns Greg Zimmerman, deputy director of the Center for Western Priorities.

"The Trump administration and Interior Secretary Zinke talk a big game about including Western communities in decisionmaking on public lands, but this action proves it's nothing more than talk," Zimmerman said. "They are shutting out input from communities just as the administration takes unprecedented steps toward wiping national monuments from the map."

It's a particular concern for BLM, critics say.

Canceling the BLM RAC meetings "sends a clear signal that Secretary Zinke intends to make decisions behind closed doors and not through an open and transparent public process," Zimmerman said.

The agency's 30 RACs, whose members are appointed by the Interior secretary, are designed to help guide BLM administrators on a wide variety of issues involving major projects such as multistate transmission lines and energy projects.

The advisory panels typically have 10 to 15 members, who are supposed to represent a cross-section of local residents, state government agencies, industry and conservation leaders. They evaluate and submit recommendations on "land use planning, fire management, off-highway vehicle use, recreation, oil and gas exploration, noxious weed management, grazing issues, wild horse and burro herd management issues," and other topics, according to BLM.

Recommendations from the RACs, established by Interior in 1995 during the Clinton administration, are supposed to carry significant weight with BLM leaders.

But there have been some high-profile examples in the past two years where BLM ignored the recommendations of its RACs.

BLM in January approved the final two segments of the Gateway West Transmission Line Project in Idaho over the objections of an eight-member subcommittee of the BLM Boise District's RAC that concluded the route would unnecessarily affect communities, natural resource values and private landowners (Greenwire, Jan. 20).

And last year, BLM formally approved the 287-megawatt Soda Mountain Solar Project in the Southern California desert, despite the recommendation of BLM California's Desert District RAC against the project and its impacts on wildlife, groundwater quality and other natural resources (E&E News PM, April 5, 2016).

BACK

5. 27 national monuments under Interior Dept. review

David DeMille, May 5 | David DeMille

ST. GEORGE, Utah — Nearly two dozen national monuments will face a federal review period following an executive order by President Trump.

The Department of the Interior, under new Trump appointee Secretary Ryan Zinke, released the names of 27 monuments Friday that it will put under a review, including a public comment period that will run for 60 days.

“Today’s action, initiating a formal public comment process finally gives a voice to local communities and states when it comes to Antiquities Act monument designations,” Zinke said in a written release. “There is no pre-determined outcome on any monument. I look forward to hearing from and engaging with local communities and stakeholders as this process continues.”

Trump ordered the reviews last week, covering a 21-year period bookended by two of the more controversial monument designations in recent memory, both in Utah: the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument designated by President Clinton in 1996 and the Bears Ears National Monument designated by President Obama late last year.

Zinke is scheduled to visit both monuments next week, meeting with local officials.

Either Congress or the president can protect federal land by designating a national monuments, with the 1906 Antiquities Act giving the president authority to quickly preserve land without waiting for legislation from Congress. There were 129 monuments nationwide at the start of the year, with recent presidents tending to designate more land than most of their predecessors. George W. Bush and Obama each designated more than 200 million acres as monument lands.

The Bears Ears designation was especially contentious in recent years, with many Utah officials comparing it to the Grand Staircase-Escalante designation two decades earlier.

No president has ever moved to rescind a designation made by a previous president.

BACK

6. Native American advocates size up Trump administration

KPAX News, May 6 / Eleanor Mueller

With President Donald Trump's first 100 days in office in the rearview mirror, lawmakers and advocates are uncertain but hopeful about the impact the new administration will have on the Native American community.

Trump's choice of Ryan Zinke to be secretary of the interior quelled the concerns of some; as a former congressman from Montana, Zinke has experience representing Native Americans in Washington, which is seen as a promising sign by many of the community's top advocates.

But some of the President's executive actions and controversial comments, including a recent reference to Democratic Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren as "Pocahontas," have raised some concerns. Lawmakers serving on the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs have voiced trepidation about the impact the new administration may have on Native American health care, education funding and sovereignty, among other issues.

However, community stakeholders say they trying to balance those concerns with optimism as the President's first term unfolds.

Zinke takes over

In interviews, lawmakers expressed trust in Zinke's demonstrated ability to understand the issues important to Native Americans across the nation. Hailing from a state with seven Indian reservations, Zinke possesses "a degree of knowledge" not typical of the interior secretary position, said Sen. John McCain, the current longest-serving member and former chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs.

"Secretary Zinke has much more experience on Native American issues than his predecessor -- who had literally none," the Arizona Republican told CNN in an interview. "My initial impression is President Trump and the people around him support sovereignty and the Native American population. They can have a degree of knowledge and involvement in Native American issues that was not the case amongst their predecessors."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The interior secretary under former President Barack Obama was Sally Jewell, the previous CEO of outdoor retailer REI. The Interior Department did not respond to requests for comment.

In 2015, then-Rep. Zinke sought to make tax breaks on coal mined from American Indian reservations permanent -- a move viewed as boosting the communities' revenue and creating jobs for tribal members. In a statement emailed to CNN, the National Congress of American Indians expressed their support for Zinke, citing "his approach to the (Bureau of Indian Affairs) as well as his commitment to giving tribal nations a seat at the table across the federal government."

"Ryan Zinke has a long history of fighting for our country," NCAI President Brian Cladoosby said in the statement. "Throughout his service as a congressman for Montana, he fought for Montanans and Montana's tribes in the halls of Congress. We have no doubt that Secretary Zinke will continue fighting for all tribes as secretary of interior."

Tribal sovereignty

The densest cloud of uncertainty surrounds the matter of tribal sovereignty, or the US agreement to protect the ability of individual tribal governments to govern themselves.

While Zinke's congressional track record reflects commitment to Native American self-determination, Trump's past is not as clear.

"Secretary Zinke has always supported the principles of tribal sovereignty and self-determination," McCain said. "That's an important pillar of our tribal relations."

In 1993, Trump's comments in a congressional hearing on Indian casinos shocked lawmakers and others.

"Go up to Connecticut, and you look (at the Mashantucket Pequots)," Trump told the House Natural Resources Native American affairs subcommittee. "They don't look like Indians to me."

In June 2016, then-presidential candidate Trump labeled Democratic Sen. Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts "Pocahontas" -- a reference to her claimed Indian heritage.

"Pocahontas is at it again!" Trump wrote in a tweet. "Goofy Elizabeth Warren, one of the least productive U.S. Senators, has a nasty mouth."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The President resurfaced the comment in Atlanta on April 28 this year, telling a crowd of National Rifle Association members that "it may be Pocahontas" pursuing the Democratic presidential nomination in 2020.

The remarks were condemned by the National Council of American Indians, who in a May 3 statement called them "derogatory."

"I'm disturbed by some comments the President has made," Sen. Tom Udall, vice chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, told CNN. "He has made some very derogatory comments about tribes. I hope Secretary Zinke encourages President Trump about the importance of self-determination, teach him about that, understand what it's all about."

Recent executive actions have done little to assuage these worries, the New Mexico Democrat said. On the Dakota Access Pipeline and the planned border wall (which would cut a reservation in half), Trump has moved ahead "without talking to" American Indian stakeholders, Udall said.

"He's taken action without consultation," Udall said. "One of the cores of trust and responsibility is government-to-government consultation, talking with tribes that are concerned."

"It shows a complete lack of understanding of tribal sovereignty, self-determination -- things very, very important to tribes," Udall added.

However, these are missteps that could be remedied with future collaboration, Udall said.

"The tribes are a little apprehensive," Udall said. "But I think if they see an outreached hand, it is going to help get some things done."

Education

One issue that's already on Zinke's plate at Interior is Native American education. Speaking at a March 8 hearing of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, the secretary acknowledged the failings of the Bureau of Indian Education.

"Words cannot capture how terrible it is that children in schools overseen by Bureau of Indian Education are so poorly served," Zinke said.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Many lawmakers agree that the schools should be a top priority for the new administration. But though Zinke has said he supports upgrading the schools, actually making changes is more difficult.

"He responded as you might expect (during the March 8 hearing) -- that he was committed to it, that he understood the challenges and the situation, and he said it was on his highest priority list," McCain said. "He gave the right answers. And I believe him. But I've heard those same answers for years and years."

Among the things McCain said he would like to see: More federal funding for school choice initiatives.

"The answer to that in my view is to give the tribe access to BIE funds to be used for private tuition, tutors, classes, charter schools, so Native families have more choices," McCain said. "I'm not saying charter schools are better or worse -- although I personally believe they're better -- but Native American parents should be able to have a choice where they want their children to go."

According to a 2014 Government Accountability Office report, the Bureau of Indian Education spent about $15,391 per pupil annually -- compared to the average of $9,896 per student at public schools nationwide.

Despite this, Government Accountability Office reports have found that BIE students have higher dropout rates, lower scores on college admission tests and lower college entrance rates than their public school counterparts.

"We have a long way to go when it comes to Indian education," Udall said.

And the confirmation of Betsy DeVos as secretary of education has done little to assuage the New Mexico Democrat's concerns: "The thing that worries me the most is the new education secretary," he said.

DeVos's efforts to "voucherize education" "could well apply to the Bureau of Indian Education," Udall said.

"I think that would be a real disaster," Udall said. "It would be draining resources away from already depleted resources pool. That is not a good idea."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Health care

Also on Zinke and lawmakers' wish lists are improvements to Native American health care.

"The one (issue) I would really start with would be Indian health care," Udall said. "It's been a hot-button issue."

During his January 17 confirmation hearing, Zinke told lawmakers that "as bad as the VA is, (Native American health) is worse."

With the ongoing GOP efforts to repeal the Affordable Care Act, lawmakers and advocates are unsure what the future may hold for the health care of the Native American community.

According to Udall, Republicans are "not involving Democrats" in health care reform discussions; an exclusion that makes it difficult for the party to advocate for Indian-American rights.

"It's a closed-door affair," Udall said. "The best advocates for Native Americans excluded from the table."

Given the underfunding of the Indian Health Service, many tribal members "rely heavily" on the Affordable Care Act's health exchange, Udall said. Were the federal government to cut discretionary spending -- as proposed in the President's budget -- and repeal Obamacare, tribes across the country would suffer, Udall said.

"The proposal in the budget is to increase defense dramatically at the expense of the domestic side," Udall said. "With that proposal and the proposal on the Affordable Care Act, that could be a big hit on the tribes across the country."

Speaking at the March 8 hearing, Paul Torres, the chairman of Al Pueblo Council of Governors, also voiced concerns about the budget cuts.

"These across-the-board cuts are alarming because the majority of programs serving Indian Country fall under the category of discretionary spending and are not exempted under the President's proposed plan," Torres said.

BACK

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

7. Op-ed: Utah Farm Bureau applauds review of national monuments

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 6 / Ron Gibson

Utah Farm Bureau applauds President Trump's review of presidential national monument designations over the past two decades, including the highly controversial 1996 Grand Staircase-Escalante and 2016 Bears Ears National Monument.

It is refreshing, remembering President Bill Clinton sitting on the south rim of the Grand Canyon in Arizona without consulting local officials or notifying Utah's elected leaders of his intention to set aside 1.9 million acres in the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument. Or, that one month before the end of his presidency, Barack Obama would unilaterally lock up another 1.35 million acres in the Bears Ears National Monument. Certainly, a closer look is warranted!

The president has authority under the Antiquities Act to "protect objects of historic and scientific interest" but it must be "confined to the smallest area compatible with the proper care and management of the objects to be protected." Such was the case when Teddy Roosevelt made the 1,300-acre Devils Tower the first National Monument in 1906. Sadly, things have taken a drastic turn toward massive monuments since President Jimmy Carter in the 1970s.

Did protection of unique features or politics of the day drive the designation of nearly 3.5 million acres being locked away in the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument and Bears Ears National Monuments? It's obvious the politics of Clinton and Obama didn't line up with Utah. The courts have declared there is no need to protect common sagebrush ground with no scientific or historic value. While there are clearly beautiful areas of historic and cultural importance that can be preserved in these monuments, much of it is common sagebrush that should be open for multiple uses.

A review of land ownership in the most affected counties – Kane, San Juan and Garfield – would bring into focus whether or not the designation of these national monuments is excessive and regulatory overkill. These rural county governments already struggle to meet their citizens' needs and to educate their children with only 10 percent (Kane), 8 percent (San Juan) and a paltry 5 percent (Garfield) of the land in these counties privately owned.

National monument designations in these three counties have, and will continue, to adversely impact generations-old sheep and cattle ranching families, as well as other multiple uses such as recreation and resource development. Livestock ranching, a major economic contributor going back to pioneer settlement, must now deal with a new level of Resource Management Planning by the Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Forest Service.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

In Utah, with 67 percent of the state owned and controlled by the federal government, family sheep and cattle ranchers have been compelled for generations to combine their limited private land and water with the public domain to have sustainable and economically viable businesses. While this model worked historically for these family businesses, increasing uncertainty in how public lands are managed makes going forward difficult. Ranchers have already had to absorb a reduction of 70 percent of livestock grazing numbers in the past 50 years.

Cattle ranching and its economic contribution in Southern Utah's Kane, Garfield and San Juan Counties has been hard hit by the presidential orders. Approximately 40,000 head of cattle were harvesting the annually renewing forage in these counties in 2016, generating more than $33 million in direct sales. Using a conservative multiplier, as ranching families spend those dollars and they ripple through the small towns, cattle sales will generate more than $50 million to the local economy. And that is a contribution that can renew itself every year.

Livestock grazing on the public lands is an important part of the history and culture of rural Utah and is a critical component of these rural economies. Harvesting the renewable forage provides an affordable protein for American dinner tables, contributes to the health of the ecosystem, reduces the potential for catastrophic wildfires, and supports rural, local economies.

The Utah Farm Bureau welcomes President Trump's desire to review these monuments for the past 20 years to ensure they're keeping with the stated intent of the Antiquities Act. With all the economic growth taking place along the Wasatch Front, it's important for us all to support one of the pillars of economic success for these rural Utah counties – agriculture.

Ron Gibson is president of the Utah Farm Bureau Federation.

BACK

8. Much at stake as Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke visits Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 6 | Amy Joi O'Donoghue

SALT LAKE CITY — To all in the fight over the Bears Ears monument designation, there is much to win, a way of life to lose, and very little room on any side to compromise.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

When Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke steps off the plane Sunday in Utah, he will become the key witness to a dramatic showdown over the fate of the 1.35 million-acre monument, and for the next several days, the man everyone in this fight will want to meet.

If the monument stands, Native Americans, environmental groups and conservation organizations that spent millions of dollars on the effort for a new monument in San Juan County can set about on the next steps.

Monument status elevates the cultural, historical and spiritual significance of the rugged country, they say, and puts federal land managers on a path to protecting thousands upon thousands of ancient artifacts.

A monument designation for the region gives five Native American tribes not only a reason to celebrate, but a reason to hope that strong bonds will be forged with an American government that over centuries has let them down at best or betrayed them at worst.

To these Native American men and women who fight for the survival of the Bears Ears National Monument, it assures their spiritual connection there will live on, cradled in the arms of wind-swept buttes, pine-dotted mountaintops and sprawling Cedar Mesa sandstone.

But a loud chorus of people in San Juan County say they love the land as well, but hate the monument.

They're offended that a place hailed for its beauty and solitude suddenly needs an absentee landlord in Washington, D.C., to exercise oversight when generations have grown up with it as their backyard.

Regardless of the promises in President Barack Obama's Bears Ears proclamation, they see monument status as the wedge in the door of access that the federal government will eventually slam shut.

They fear hunting, fishing, grazing, collecting firewood, motorized travel — multiple uses of the land — will be chipped away and restricted until the activities are eventually gone. In their place will rise a Moab-esq atmosphere with monument signs, a visitor center, lines of cars and hoards of selfie-taking tourists intent on scratching one more destination off their to-do list.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

With 65 percent of land within Utah's borders already owned and controlled by the federal government, the state's leaders and county governments are indignant that one more layer of government control — over their objections — was hoisted upon a county that is already the poorest in the state, where jobs are already tough to come by.

Against this backdrop, Zinke — a former Navy Seal Team Six leader — will wade into the fray by visiting Bears Ears and meeting with local residents before he returns to Washington, D.C., to eventually advise President Donald Trump on what its fate should be.

"The fact that he has agreed to come and visit, I think, is a good thing for everybody," Gov. Gary Herbert said. "He needs to come and look at the public lands issues we have here in the Intermountain West and particularly in Utah. He needs to look at some of the areas of controversy. I think he needs to come with an open mind and an unbiased attitude, and take a look and listen to the pros and cons."

Zinke's visit to the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante national monuments — also under fire but in a blaze that was set 21 years ago when it was created — comes as a result of an executive order issued by President Trump on April 26.

That order directs a 45-day review centered around Bears Ears with resulting recommendations for the president, as well as a look at designations of monuments with more than 100,000 acres since 1996.

With a sympathetic president at the helm who campaigned on the promise to return power to the states and power to the people — and also unravel federal regulations — Utah's leaders are practically giddy at the prospect there will be some sort of presidential directive on Bears Ears.

While no president has ever rescinded a monument, and therefore that executive power has never been tested in court, five presidents have significantly reduced monuments. In the most extreme example, President Howard Taft reduced the Navajo National Monument by 89 percent.

Over time, 11 national monuments have been abolished through acts of Congress, according to the National Park Service, most typically because their importance was overstated or the resources for which they were established were diminished.

In Utah, a legal battle raged to overturn Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, but that proved unsuccessful.

History, then, offers a mosaic of executive branch and congressional reactions to controversial monument creations.

For supporters of Bears Ears, a rescission is akin to blasphemy — and any reduction in size as a so-called "compromise" is untenable.

"Friends of Cedar Mesa is committed to on-the-ground stewardship of these public lands whatever the politicians decide," said Josh Ewing, the group's executive director. "However, any shrinkage of the monument just makes it that much harder for us to do good stewardship to benefit the landscape as we're forced into legal/political/policy battles to stop bad things from happening to lands that should have been protected in the first place."

Jami Bayles, president of Stewards of San Juan County, said the designation goes against what residents want and won't automatically come with protections supporters want. The monument designation needs to go.

"It is appalling that nonlocal voices have drowned out those who treasure this land the most. Long before established bureaus arrived, it was and has always been the local people who have protected and cared for this land. We are the reason it is pristine," Bayles said.

BACK

9. Supporters of Bears Ears, Grand Staircase rally in advance of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's visit

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 6 / Peggy Fletcher Stack

After his birth in Utah's Monument Valley, James Adakai's umbilical cord was buried at Bears Ears.

The Navajo Nation's commissioner for Bears Ears now worries such a sacred spot will be lost unless Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke agrees to meet with the state's tribal authorities during his four-day visit to Utah — a face-to-face conversation the secretary has so far declined.

Zinke needs to "listen to everyone," Adakai told a crowd of more than 1,000 supporters of the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante national monuments gathered on the Capitol's steps Saturday afternoon.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Zinke intends to be in the Beehive State from Sunday to Wednesday as part of President Donald Trump's plan to review 27 large monuments designated since 1996.

The review could lead Trump to shrink the size of some monuments or possibly attempt to rescind one, which has never happened. Zinke has until June 10 to report back on the 1.35 million-acre Bears Ears monument, the last one created by President Barack Obama just weeks before his term ended. The secretary has a few more months to make recommendations on the others, including Grand Staircase. Zinke's fact-finding trip will be highly watched and highly political, with a much smaller anti-monument rally held in Blanding on Saturday.

Many in the larger Capitol crowd — including a contingent of American Indians — held signs that read "Save our monuments — antiquities in stone and bone," "Don't Trump Utah," "Don't give our public lands to greedy local politicians," "Rural Born Utahn for Bears Ears" and "Honor Tribal Sovereignty."

As they filled the Capitol's steps and spilled down the lawns, Gavin Noyes, executive director of Utah Dine Bikeyah, told The Salt Lake Tribune he hoped Zinke would "walk the land with traditional tribal elders whose past and future is tied to Bears Ears." His group, which is led by Native Americans, sought the creation of the controversial monument over the objection of Utah's members of Congress and most state leaders.

Noyes opened the 1 p.m. rally under a blazing sun with a call for the Cabinet official to listen to more than just Utah's top politicians.

"Don't touch our monuments," he said. "Listen to the people, not the delegation."

The Dine Bikeyah director urged attendees to plant pro-monument signs in their yards so that when the Interior secretary arrives Sunday for meetings in Salt Lake City, he will be visually bombarded. Noyes further instructed supporters to pack Zinke's news conference scheduled for 4 p.m. Sunday to make their wishes known.

Evangeline Gray, a Navajo medicine woman, offered a prayer to the Creator Spirit, calling on the divine to "get people to hear our voices ... that the land is precious to us ... and to touch [the delegation's] heart."

Virgil Johnson, chairman of the Utah Tribal Leaders Association, said: "We are stewards of this land ... protective of our land and beliefs."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Noting tribal sovereignty, Johnson said he asked for a meeting with Zinke while the Cabinet member was in Utah but was declined.

"We are not being heard," he said. "Our rights are being swept aside. ... It needs to stop."

That was followed by wild applause.

During Utah's legislative session earlier this year, state representatives passed resolutions asking the president either to reduce the size of Grand Staircase and Bears Ears or eliminate Bears Ears altogether.

"I represent a conservative district," state Rep. Patrice Arent, D-Millcreek, said "but I didn't hear from one person asking me to vote for these bills."

These lands are not just valuable to Utahns, but "all over the nation and world," Arent told the crowd. "We cannot afford to auction them off to the highest bidder."

She further argued that tourists visiting these monuments have helped, not hurt, the local economy — a point reiterated by Nate Waggoner, of the Boulder Chamber of Commerce, near the Grand Staircase monument.

At the same time supporters were meeting in Salt Lake City, dozens of Bears Ears opponents gathered in Blanding's Pioneer Park.

"Unlike the rally being held 300 miles away at the state Capitol, the San Juan celebration of local voices is about bringing together those who know and love our public lands the most," Ryan Bennaly, vice president of Stewards of San Juan County, wrote on the group's website. "For the monument advocates far, far away, San Juan County is a vacation spot. For First Nations people, it's our home."

At the Blanding rally, Jami Bayles urged participants to meet back at the park Monday, when they hope to meet with the secretary in person.

"San Juan County is eager to have Secretary Zinke visit our home and see firsthand why locals oppose the national monument designation," Bayles wrote on the site. "We have worked tirelessly to advocate for what's best for this land, and it's nice to know that someone is finally listening."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Back at the Capitol rally, attended by many Native Americans and some residents of San Juan County, Jared Campbell of Salt Lake City brought his 3-year-old daughter, Phoebe, because she's "grown up living in the outdoors."

Recently, Campbell spent four days in the designated area, drinking in its beauty and grandeur.

After that experience, he wondered if monument opponents across the state have "touched the soil" there.

Zinke will have his chance this week. He plans a full day of meetings in San Juan County on Monday, followed by a visit to Bears Ears on Tuesday. He'll then travel to Kanab and a part of the Grand Staircase monument on Wednesday.

BACK

10. In our opinion: Reviewing the Antiquities Act is an important course of action

The Deseret News, May 6 / Deseret News editorial board

We believe in the importance of conservation. The nation's public and shared lands are a vital treasure that need to be preserved.

Yet, legislators must fix the Antiquities Act and allow for greater local input and decision-making power before monuments are made.

As Utah welcomes U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke to the state this weekend, we also welcome his department's review of the Antiquities Act.

Sec. Zinke's visit to Utah comes as President Trump directed the Department of the Interior to review national monument designations made under the Antiquities Act since 1996 that exceed 100,000 acres. On Friday, the department released a list of 15 monuments under review and invited public comment. The Bears Ears (1,353,000 acres) and the Grand Staircase-Escalante (1,700,000 acres) monuments in Utah both made the list.

The review is a worthwhile endeavor to see what public input went in to the designations. It should help lead to legislative revisions of the Antiquities Act, which is being used to lock up land without the consent of local citizens.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Conservationists, of course, are fearful that this review will lead to rescinding or reducing of the Bears Ears National Monument. But, in the long-run, the important question for America is what should be the proper political process for declaring a monument designation that permits local involvement.

When President Theodore Roosevelt championed the Antiquities Act in the early 20th century, the legislation was enacted to protect Native American artifacts and sacred burial sites from looting and to preserve historic edifices or areas of scientific importance. Designations under the act were to “be confined to the smallest area compatible with proper care and management of the objects to be protected.”

In recent years, however, with the stroke of a pen, the executive branch has restricted access to millions of acres of land without, in some instances, even consulting the local citizenry or their political representatives. No matter the original intent of the Antiquities Act, the law is increasingly used to sanction unacceptable federal overreach.

Shared governance and compromise is part of what makes the American system unique — abuse of the Antiquities Act is antithetical to those principles.

Reporting by Deseret News’ Jesse Hyde uncovered the behind the scenes political maneuvering that led to the Trump administration’s decision to review the law. Utah’s senior Sen. Orrin Hatch played a major role in persuading Trump to look at rescinding or reducing the Bear’s Ears National Monument.

It’s well known that Utah’s political leaders have been lobbying the administration to reverse the order by President Obama creating the Bear’s Ears monument. In announcing the review, President Trump made it clear that he philosophically sides with Utah’s political leadership, saying, “The Antiquities Act does not give the federal government unlimited power to lock up millions of acres of land and water, and it is time we ended this abusive practice.”

If the administration is inclined to follow the advice of Utah’s governor, legislative leaders and congressional delegation and ultimately rescind or make changes to national monuments in Utah, it will immediately trigger lawsuits and a judicial review of the president’s authority to do so.

What will come of such a legal battle is unclear, but the real long-term solution to this problem is to fix the legislation. Whether or not Bear’s Ears should be rescinded is a question separate from the legitimacy of the Antiquities Act. Polls show Utahns are largely split on the issue of Bear's Ears. We believe the region deserves protection.

Political leaders, however, have couched the most recent designation as a “betrayal” by the Obama Administration of good-faith efforts by the state to cobble together a consensus on how best to protect the land. Supporters of the monument argue, with some justification, that the state’s efforts in that direction were doomed to succumb to political pressures as they stumbled through the legislative process in Washington. Others counter by pointing out that the prospect of a presidential monument designation caused negotiations to go no where since conservationists were confident they would get their monument anyway.

The solution, however, should not be that the executive branch steps in to pick a winner. Rather, the U.S. needs a system that fosters the kind of compromise and local solutions that were being worked out.

Reviewing the Antiquities Act with an eye toward congressional revision is an important course of action and one that will hopefully lead to good conservationism and sound practices of shared governance.

BACK

11. Op-ed: Will Bears Ears Be the Next Standing Rock?

The New York Times, May 6 | Terry Tempest Williams

“Rising from the center of the southeastern Utah landscape and visible from every direction are twin buttes so distinctive that in each of the native languages of the region their name is the same: Hoon’Naqvut, Shash Jáa, Kwiyaqatu Nukavachi, Ansh An Lashokdiwe, or ‘Bears Ears.’ For hundreds of generations, native peoples lived in the surrounding deep sandstone canyons, desert mesas ... one of the densest and most significant cultural landscapes in the United States.”

— Proclamation by President Barack Obama establishing Bears Ears National Monument, Dec. 28, 2016

After seven years of organizing, the Bears Ears Intertribal Coalition — made up of the Hopi, Navajo, Uintah and Ouray Ute, Ute Mountain Ute and Zuni Nations — played a key role in securing the protection of 1.35 million acres surrounding Bears Ears from development and resource extraction just before President Obama left office.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

But in our climate of political myopia, President Trump recently ordered the Interior Department to review the size and scope of national monuments larger than 100,000 acres created since 1996. He complained that these designations “unilaterally put millions of acres of land and water under strict federal control,” called them a “massive federal land grab” and directed Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to review and reverse some of them.

There is a subtext here, as his order made clear. Monument designations, the document said, can “create barriers to achieving energy independence” and “otherwise curtail economic growth.” Among the likely beneficiaries of any reversals are the oil and gas industries, mining and logging interests and commercial development.

In issuing this order, President Trump — who has never visited Bears Ears — apparently chose to listen to the bellicose politicians of Utah and do the bidding of Senator Orrin Hatch and Representatives Rob Bishop and Jason Chaffetz, who complain that Utahns were cut out of the process. Call that another alternative fact. The lawmakers claim it was an endgame move by the departing President Obama to create a “midnight monument.”

The truth is, the establishment of Bears Ears National Monument was a healing moment of historic importance. A unique agreement was reached between Indian tribes and the United States government for a collaborative approach to the management of Bears Ears. It was a clasp of hands across history. It was also about America looking into the deep future rather than into the narrow exhaust pipe of today. It was about drilling for hope and dignity, rather than fossil fuels.

But now Bears Ears could very well become another Standing Rock in both desecration and resistance — the latest example of a new colonialism, with the government bulldozing Indian sovereignty and privileging Big Oil. “If the Trump administration moves forward with their interests, they are taking us backward 100 years, rupturing trust once again between the federal government and Indian people,” Regina Lopez-Whiteskunk, a former councilwoman from the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, said.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

No president has ever attempted to abolish a national monument, and it is unclear whether a president has the power to do it without Congress. And no president in the last half-century has reduced the size of a monument.

Bears Ears is a cradle of Native American history. Far from creating a “midnight monument” willed into existence at the slash of a presidential pen, the Obama designation provides these sacred lands with the protection that has long been in the prayers and dreams of tribal leaders.

“Bears Ears is all about Indian sovereignty,” said Russell Begaye, the president of the Navajo Nation.

The removal of one square inch from Bears Ears National Monument will be seen as an assault on the home ground of Native Americans in the American Southwest, a disrespect for their ceremonial lives and the traditional knowledge of their ancestors. Hundreds of thousands of artifacts are buried in the serpentine canyons and shifting pink sands of Cedar Mesa, hidden, until exposed by rain or wind or theft. The desecration of Indian graves has prompted F.B.I. raids and convictions.

But it’s not just about local desecration. So much of the American West these days is under threat of development and fossil fuel extraction. Our very sense of wildness and wilderness is at stake, from Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument in Utah to the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks in New Mexico. “This is a war on our public lands,” said Senator Tom Udall, Democrat of New Mexico. Our national parks and monuments and other public lands are breathing spaces for a society increasingly holding its breath.

“We are not just protecting these lands for our people, but all people,” Jonah Yellowman, a Navajo medicine person and spiritual leader, said.

As a Utahn, I have spent considerable time in the pinyon-juniper-laced mesas and sandstone canyons of Bears Ears. This is a landscape of immense stillness where ancient handprints left on red rock walls are a reminder of who came before us and who will follow.

If President Trump is successful in rescinding Bears Ears National Monument, it will be a breach of faith with our future and our past. Over 330 million visits were made to the national parks last year. One park or monument at risk means all are at risk. Pick yours: Yellowstone, Yosemite, Grand Canyon, Big Bend, Acadia. The federal Bureau of Land Management has proposed issuing oil and gas leases just outside Zion National Park, one of the nation's most visited parks. Forty national parks are vulnerable to oil and gas extraction.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

A portrait of Andrew Jackson has been newly hung in the Oval Office over Donald Trump's shoulder. The portrait might remind our 45th president of how Jackson signed the 1830 Indian Removal Act, which lit the match to America's criminal treatment of native people. The Trail of Tears is just part of Jackson's legacy. His face still remains on the $20 bill — fitting perhaps, since so much of the battle over land is the battle over the dollar.

No amount of money is a substitute for beauty. No amount of political power can be matched by the power of the land and the indigenous people who live here. If we do not rise to the defense of these sacred lands, Bears Ears National Monument will be reduced to oil rigs and derricks, shining bright against an oiled sky of obliterated stars.

Terry Tempest Williams is the author, most recently, of "The Hour of Land: A Personal Topography of America's National Parks." She teaches at Dartmouth.

BACK

12. Zinke promises to hear out protestors of rescinding national monuments

The Washington Times, May 6 | Ben Wolfgang

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Sunday launched a "listening tour" across Utah designed to quell an uproar over his department's controversial review of national monuments.

Mr. Zinke is spearheading a federal study of more than two dozen land and marine monuments following an executive order from President Trump last month.

The process is likely to lead to the first revocation of a U.S. monument, though there are still outstanding legal questions about whether a president has the power to make such a rescission.

Attempts to un-designate any monument surely will be met with legal challenges from environmental groups and tribal groups.

Mr. Zinke's review notably includes Utah's Bears Ears National Monument, established late in President Barack Obama's tenure and a prime example, critics say, of the previous administration stretching the century-old Antiquities Act to its breaking point in declaring vast areas of land as monuments and shutting them off from energy exploration and other activities.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Mr. Zinke met Sunday afternoon in Salt Lake City with members of the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition, kicking off a trip that will include a stop at Bears Ears on Tuesday and conclude Wednesday.

While Sunday's meeting was not open to the public or press, about 500 people protested outside the building as it occurred, carrying signs and shouting "Save our monuments, stand with Bears Ears!"

Talking with reporters after the meeting, Mr. Zinke said the local Indians are "smart, capable, passionate, and have a deep sense of tie to their culture and want to preserve it."

He said no decisions had been made and that he was coming to Utah "without any predisposition of outcome."

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican, said Sunday evening that the Indians might be being manipulated by left-wing political groups.

More broadly, the monuments review includes sites dating back to 1924's Craters of the Moon National Monument in Idaho through Bears Ears.

Other notable monuments under review include Utah's Grand Staircase-Escalante, Hanford Reach in Washington, Grand Canyon-Parashant in Arizona, the Papahānaumokuākea marine monument off the coast of Hawaii and a host of others.

Though the review need not mean any will be stripped of their designations, it's clear the administration intends to shrink the number of monuments and, in the process, open up that land for energy development.

Critics charge that the listening tour, along with the fact that the Interior Department is soliciting public comments as part of its study, is a sham.

"Trump and Zinke pretend to care what the public thinks, but they're really only listening to the oil, gas and timber industries. It's special interests, not the public, that want these monuments to lose protection," said Randi Spivak, public lands director at the Center for Biological Diversity.

“We must leave these spectacular cultural and national treasures just as they are. Our grandchildren won’t look back and wish we’d cut down more trees or drilled for more oil.”

BACK

13. National Monuments: Presidents Can Create Them, but Only Congress Can Undo Them

Govexec.com, May 6 | Nicholas Bryner, Eric Biber, Mark Squillace and Sean B. Hecht

On April 26 President Trump issued an executive order calling for a review of national monuments designated under the Antiquities Act. This law authorizes presidents to set aside federal lands in order to protect “historic landmarks, historic and prehistoric structures, and other objects of historic or scientific interest.”

Since the act became law in 1906, presidents of both parties have used it to preserve 157 historic sites, archaeological treasures and scenic landscapes, from the Grand Canyon to key landmarks of the civil rights movement in Birmingham, Alabama.

President Trump calls recent national monuments “a massive federal land grab,” and argues that control over some should be given to the states. In our view, this misrepresents the law. National monuments can be designated only on federal lands already owned or controlled by the United States.

The president’s order also suggests that he may consider trying to rescind or shrink monuments that were previously designated. Based on our analysis of the Antiquities Act and other laws, presidents do not have the authority to undo or downsize existing national monuments. This power rests with Congress, which has reversed national monument designations only 10 times in more than a century.

Contests over land use

Trump’s executive order responds to opposition from some members of Congress and local officials to national monuments created by Presidents Bill Clinton and Barack Obama. It calls for Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to review certain national monuments created since 1996 and to recommend “Presidential actions, legislative proposals, or other actions,” presumably to shrink or eliminate these monuments. The order applies to monuments larger than 100,000 acres, as well as others to be identified by Secretary Zinke.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

When a president creates a national monument, the area is “reserved” for the protection of sites and objects there, and may also be “withdrawn,” or exempted, from laws that would allow for mining, logging or oil and gas development. Frequently, monument designations grandfather in existing uses of the land, but prohibit new activities such as mineral leases or mining claims.

Zinke said that he will examine whether such restrictions have led to “loss of jobs, reduced wages and reduced public access” in communities around national monuments. Following Secretary Zinke’s review, the Trump administration may try either to rescind monument designations or modify them, either by reducing the size of the monument or authorizing more extractive activities within their boundaries.

Two of the most-contested monuments are in Utah. In 1996 President Clinton designated the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, a region of incredible slot canyons and remote plateaus. Twenty years later, President Obama designated Bears Ears National Monument, an area of scenic rock formations and sites sacred to Native American tribes.

Utah’s governor and congressional delegation oppose these monuments, arguing that they are larger than necessary and that presidents should defer to the state about whether to use the Antiquities Act. Local officials have raised similar complaints about the Gold Butte National Monument in Nevada and the Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument in Maine, both designated by Obama in late 2016.

What the law says

The key question at issue is whether the Antiquities Act gives presidents the power to alter or revoke decisions by past administrations. The U.S. Constitution gives Congress the power to decide what happens on “territory or other property belonging to the United States.” When Congress passed the Antiquities Act, it delegated a portion of that authority to the president so that administrations could act quickly to protect resources or sites that are threatened.

Critics of recent national monuments argue that if a president can create a national monument, the next one can undo it. However, the Antiquities Act speaks only of designating monuments. It says nothing about abolishing or shrinking them.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Two other land management statutes from the turn of the 20th century – the Pickett Act of 1910 and the Forest Service Organic Act of 1897 – gave the president authority to withdraw other types of land, and also specifically stated that the president could modify or revoke those actions. These laws clearly contrast with the Antiquities Act’s silence on reversing past decisions.

In 1938, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt considered abolishing the Castle-Pinkney National Monument – a deteriorating fort in Charleston, South Carolina – Attorney General Homer Cummings advised that the president did not have the power to take this step. (Congress abolished the monument in 1951.)

Congress enacted a major overhaul of public lands law in 1976, the Federal Land Policy and Management Act, repealing many earlier laws. However, it did not change the Antiquities Act. The House Committee that drafted the 1976 law also made clear in legislative reports that it intended to prohibit the president from modifying or abolishing a national monument, stating that the law would “specifically reserve to the Congress the authority to modify and revoke withdrawals for national monuments created under the Antiquities Act.”

The value of preservation

Many national monuments faced vociferous local opposition when they were declared, including Jackson Hole National Monument, which is now part of Grand Teton National Park. But over time Americans have come to appreciate them.

Indeed, Congress has converted many monuments into national parks, including Acadia, the Grand Canyon, Arches and Joshua Tree. These four parks alone attracted over 13 million visitors in 2016. The aesthetic, cultural, scientific, spiritual and economic value of preserving them has long exceeded whatever short-term benefit could have been derived without legal protection.

As Secretary Zinke begins his review of Bears Ears and other national monuments, he should heed that lesson, and also ensure that his recommendations do not overstep the president’s lawful authority.

BACK

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

14. Op-ed: National monuments are a positive economic force for rural communities

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 6 / Amy Roberts

The next several months are pivotal for the future of America's public lands. It is not easy to articulate how we have gotten to this point – but here we are.

It seems like only yesterday that the outdoor industry and outdoor recreation economy were tiny blips on the radar of our national economy and jobs figures, yet over the last 20 years, the outdoor recreation economy has grown exponentially and contributes $887 billion per year to the nation's GDP, and is responsible for over 7 million American jobs across the country.

The outdoor recreation economy, and the industry that supports it, is a major force in international trade, economic development, job creation and public lands policy and is a major financial contributor to programs that get kids and families outside across the nation. It is a growing economy that is uniquely American.

The outdoor industry supports protecting our nation's public lands, not just because the American landscape and its rugged, natural beauty sets our nation apart from the rest of the world, but also because America's public lands are the very foundation, the infrastructure, of the massive outdoor recreation economy.

So, why are the next few months so pivotal? President Trump signed an Executive Order last month ordering the Department of the Interior to review the designation of National Monuments over 100,000 acres in size and created between 1996 and the end of 2016 under the authority of the Antiquities Act, a Teddy Roosevelt-era law that has protected more of America's landscapes and waterways than perhaps any other law. Interestingly, the majority of Utah's National Parks were first protected as monuments.

As part of his department's review, Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke has stated that he is committed to a transparent process that will take into account the views of multiple stakeholders. This is a good starting point, and we look forward to working with the Administration, Secretary Zinke and others to highlight the significant, beneficial role National Monuments and the Antiquities Act play in our American heritage, the protection of iconic places, and the development of local economies built on recreation and tourism.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The notion that monuments are harmful to their surrounding communities and result in net job loss is demonstrably false. Cities and towns that have protected lands like National Parks and Monuments attract employers in fast-growing economic sectors like tech and health care. It is proven that the communities that protect and invest in recreation infrastructure end up having more diverse economies and are better prepared to weather potential economic downturns.

While it is true that some traditional jobs do, at times, decrease with the designation of a monument in the short-term, those losses tend to stabilize even as the local economy transitions. The addition of monuments in most cases speeds up the economic diversification of the local community from traditional rural economies to a more dynamic combination of energy development, agriculture, ranching, tourism and outdoor recreation that coexist on the land. These economies and the local tax base that supports schools and government services benefit from adding more recreation-related businesses such as guide services, retailers, manufacturers and additional service related jobs such as doctors, engineers and teachers. Outdoor recreation generates $59 billion in state and local tax revenue.

As Secretary Zinke visits Utah this week and begins the evaluation of past monument designations, we ask that he remember that our national monuments are already the people's lands and that he consider the full and positive impact they have on the overall physical and economic health of our nation. We hope he notes the benefits they provide to our rural communities by counting ALL of the businesses and jobs added over a period of time after a designation, and the growth of the community's economy before and after the designation. As we have seen in Garfield County, Utah or Chaffee County, Colorado, if the process is truly transparent, the findings will be enlightening and should inform any eventual decision by this Administration on existing and future national monuments.

Amy Roberts is executive director of the Outdoor Industry Association.

BACK

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

15. Rallies over Bears Ears act as prelude to Zinke's visit

KSL News, May 7 | Jasen Lee and Marjorie Cortez

SALT LAKE CITY — For scores of Utahns, preserving the monument status of the state's newest protected public lands and one of its more revered places was more than enough reason to spend a weekend afternoon at the state Capitol.

Hundreds of people fanned out across the front lawn and stairs leading up to the Capitol on Saturday to show their support for the national monument status of Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante.

The "Monumental Rally," as it was called, was organized as "an urgent call to action" because the two monuments are in the crosshairs of powerful political interests, including Utah's congressional delegation and members of the Trump administration.

Opponents call the designations by two Democratic presidents — Barack Obama for Bears Ears and Bill Clinton for Grand Staircase-Escalante — federal overreach that didn't take into account the feelings and sensibilities of local interests.

Contrarily, supporters believe the designations preserve the land considered hallowed by Native Americans for centuries.

"My ancestors lived in the area and traded with other Native Americans in the area," explained Hank Stevens, member of the Navajo Nation. "The land is sacred in Native American culture. It's very important."

Stevens expressed concern that if the monument status were rescinded by the Trump administration, revered artifacts may be destroyed and many of the traditions practiced by local tribes could be lost.

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is scheduled to be in Utah this week to visit with stakeholders concerned about the designation of Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante as national monuments. The Trump administration has directed Zinke to conduct a 45-day review of the Bears Ears monument and a 120-day review of Grand Staircase-Escalante, then offer some recommendations.

The state Capitol rally was organized by Gavin Noyes, executive director of Utah Diné Bikéyah — a nonprofit organization that supports indigenous communities in protecting culturally significant ancestral lands.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Noyes said Utahns must show Zinke that supporters intend to defend culturally important places such as Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante.

"This event is really important to remind Utahns that this is not a political issue," he said. "All Utahns care about our public lands and monuments. I'm proud to see so many of my fellow citizens out here supporting each other and supporting the land, and standing up for what's best for our future.

"We (also) want to remind people that local voices matter, and they should have a say in how lands are treated in this state. The governor and the Utah (congressional) delegation are out of touch."

Buoyed by a strong turnout, with throngs of people wearing "Protect Bears Ears" T-shirts and many hoisting signs supporting the individual causes of both national monuments, Noyes said he believes the message of the people will resonate with Zinke while he's in Utah.

"If Secretary Zinke gets a full understanding of who we are as Utahns and what our landscapes are like, I absolutely think that he would stand with us defend these lands," Noyes said.

Salt Lake City resident Ian Wade said because Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante are such "special" places, they deserve the added protection of monument status. He attributed much of the opposition to the monument status to partisanship.

"It's a political thing. People are just opposed to the idea that President Obama designated something in Utah just like they hated President Clinton when he designated Grand Staircase," Wade said. "Just the simple anger that a Democrat would do something in a Republican state."

Meanwhile, opponents of the monument designation gathered simultaneously at Pioneer Park in Blanding for a rally organized by Stewards of San Juan County.

Unlike monument supporters who are backed by corporations and the likes of actor Leonardo DiCaprio, Stewards of San Juan County has been a true grass-roots effort, said the organization's president, Jami Bayles.

People have literally walked up to her and other leaders of the group on the streets, offering the cash in their pockets to fight the designation, she said.

Ultimately, "it's a fight about what's right and what's wrong," Bayles said.

Area residents have been slighted by name-calling, insults, purposely left out by organizations conducting public opinion polls, and personal accounts of some opponents of the designation have even been dismissed as "fake news," she said.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

“We’ve been told by out-of-state recreation enthusiasts that, ‘My hobby is more important than your livelihood. If you don’t like it, go live somewhere else,’” Bayles said.

Through it all, area residents have stood resolute against the designation in the waning days of the Obama administration.

“The best part is we did this together. We did this on our own time and, we did this on our own dime. We paid for all this ourselves,” Bayles said.

San Juan County Commissioner Phil Lyman urged those in attendance to be “loud and controversial.” Otherwise, the county “is going to be steamrolled,” he said.

Still, Bayles and Lyman urged opponents to comport themselves with grace and decency during Zinke’s upcoming visit to the area and the ongoing fight.

"It's San Juan County's opportunity to show who we are with dignity and respect," Lyman said.

While Bears Ears is one of 27 national monuments that will be reviewed under an executive order by President Trump signed Friday, the outcome is yet unknown. Bayles said opponents of the designation will continue to fight “long and hard. We’re going to fight with everything that we have.”

Sen. Mike Lee, R-Utah, addressing the rally via FaceTime, said he will urge Zinke during his upcoming visit to Utah to end the monument designation.

“It’s time to expect, my fellow Americans, to expect more. It’s time to expect freedom,” Lee said.

Eva Clarke, secretary of Stewards of San Juan County, said the fight has been a painful reminder that area residents must constantly be engaged to protect the land and way of life.

Area residents have joined forces with “my ancestors ... who first loved this beautiful, red earth,” Clarke said.

“Thank you so much. Keep up the good fight,” she said.

BACK

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

16. Zinke met by protest as he arrives to consider Utah voices on national monuments

The Deseret News, May 7 | McKenzie Romero

SALT LAKE CITY — While protestors clogged the sidewalk outside, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said he will be gathering perspectives of people on all sides of a deeply controversial issue as he reviews the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante national monuments.

Zinke landed in Salt Lake City on Sunday bound for his four-day "listening tour" regarding the monuments — both designated by Democratic presidents and decried by Utah Republicans — but the voices on the street expressed their doubt the secretary will listen much at all.

Speaking to reporters in the offices of Utah's Bureau of Land Management, Zinke said that while many of the nearly 30 national monuments he will be reviewing enjoy widespread support, he doesn't believe that's the case with Bears Ears.

"The Bears Ears is not widely supported or accepted in the state of Utah," Zinke said, citing the outcry from state legislators and congressmen over the designation, and a Native American population he says is at odds with one another.

Zinke went on to say he has no doubt the area will be a breathtaking "cultural treasure," but he isn't decided about how it should be protected.

"I'm sure what I'm going to find over the next couple of days is beautiful, beautiful land worthy of protection. What vehicle that takes, I don't want to be predisposed because I haven't see it and haven't talked to everybody yet," Zinke said.

Outside, Dena Williams, of Salt Lake City, stood with her two sons among the crowd of protesters watching for a glimpse of Zinke's motorcade. The family carried signs demanding, "Keep public lands in public hands."

"This is important because this is about their future, their quality of life, and everything they hold important today and in the future is at risk," Williams said of her two boys.

Asked if she thinks Zinke will listen to that plea, Williams said she "wants to remain hopeful, but it's hard to tell."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Nikolas Johnson, 14, and Lukas Johnson, 12, are active with the Boy Scouts of America, going often to Grand Staircase to hike, camp and enjoy nature.

"The president or anyone else shouldn't be controlling the lands. It should be the people," Nikolas said.

Lukas said he wants the nature he enjoys to be preserved for other kids in the future, voicing concern that without protections, "lousy coal and oil" will take over the land.

Under an executive order from President Donald Trump, Zinke will conduct a 45-day review of the Bears Ears monument and a 120-day review of Grand Staircase-Escalante before sending his recommendations to the White House.

"I'm looking at making sure we follow the law, what the Antiquities Act was intended to do, talking to all parties, and getting a perspective of making sure Utah and the stakeholders have a voice," Zinke said of the reviews.

While Zinke acknowledged no U.S. president has ever rescinded a national monument, he noted that few monuments "are to the scale of the recent actions," and saying it's not uncommon for a monument and its boundaries to be modified.

Rallies for and against the monument designations over the weekend prefaced Zinke's visit.

Opponents of the monuments say the designations by Democratic presidents Barack Obama and Bill Clinton are examples of federal overreach that didn't take into account the feelings and sensibilities of local interests.

But supporters believe setting the areas aside under the Antiquities Act preserves land considered hallowed by Native Americans for centuries and ensures they will remain intact for future generations to enjoy.

Zinke met Sunday with the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition, which is made up of leaders of the Hopi Tribe, Utah Navajo Chapter of Olijato, Navajo Nation Council, Ute Indian Tribe and Zuni Tribe.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The secretary called it the first time the tribal leaders have had an opportunity to voice their perspectives about the monument designations, describing the mistrust he believes they feel over a history of efforts to manage the land.

A similar mistrust, Zinke says, is felt by Utahns living near the monuments, the state's elected leaders and others.

However, at least some representatives of Native American groups in the state say they have been cut out of the conversation. Virgil Johnson, tribal chairman of the confederated tribes of the Goshute nation, was among the protestors Sunday and said his letter requesting a meeting with Zinke was denied.

"The executive order gives us a right to come to the table, but they're making decisions without native voices at the table," Johnson said. "What we would like is for him to see why we are very protective of our sacred grounds and the artifacts that are left there."

Throughout his media appearance, Zinke called himself a Montana man; a former geologist who is fascinated by archaeology; a military commander who wants to see "the frontlines" of any situation; an admirer of President Teddy Roosevelt, who created the Antiquities Act and designated the first national monument; and someone who is not an advocate of transferring or selling public lands.

Zinke also met Sunday with Sens. Orrin Hatch and Mike Lee, both R-Utah, followed by meetings with the State Historic Preservation Office and Utah Department of Heritage; legislative leadership and Utah Attorney General Sean Reyes; and the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration.

At the media appearance, Hatch introduced the secretary as someone who is "experienced in Western lands" and "understands what we're up against."

Afterward, Hatch said Native Americans in Utah "may not understand" how a national monument designation restricts what they are able to do on the land. Asked to provide examples of what tribes would no longer be able to do, Hatch simply said the reasons would take too much time to go into.

"They would be severely restricted on what they could or could not do on the land," Hatch said. "I can just tell you it will never cease until the far left gets their way in locking up all these lands in Utah, and we're just not going to allow that."

Hatch said there are a number of political obstacles between different Native American groups in the state and that sometimes different groups are "manipulated." He also said the state's elected leaders "love Utah" and will ensure it's protected without being "shoved around by radical people from elsewhere, on either side of the issues."

On Monday, Zinke will be joined by Gov. Gary Herbert and members of the state's congressional delegation as he flies over Bears Ears and takes a tour of the House of Fire site.

Moving forward, Zinke encouraged Utahns wanting to weigh in on the review to visit regulations.gov in the coming weeks to leave a comment.

BACK

17. Zinke starts review of Utah's Bears Ears National Monument

The Las Vegas Review-Journal, May 7 | Michelle L. Price and Brady McCombs, The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke will start a four-day Utah trip Sunday to assess whether 3.2 million acres of national monuments in the state's southern red rock region should be scaled down or even rescinded.

The re-evaluation of the new Bears Ears National Monument on sacred tribal lands and the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, created in 1996, is part of an executive order signed last month by President Donald Trump calling for a review of 27 national monuments established by several former presidents.

The Bears Ears monument, a source of ire for Utah's conservative leadership, is a top priority in the review.

Zinke has been tasked with making a recommendation on that monument by June 10, about 2 ½ months before a final report about all the monuments.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Utah Republican leaders, led by U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch, campaigned hard to get President Donald Trump to take a second look a monument designated by President Barack Obama near the end of his term.

Hatch and others contend the monument designation is a layer of unnecessary federal control that hurts local economies by closing the area to new energy development.

Hatch said in a statement he looks forward to hosting Zinke and showing him “our beautiful state and working with him to give the people of San Juan County a voice in protecting the lands they’ve lived on for generations.”

Zinke will spend Sunday in Salt Lake City before traveling Monday to the southeastern corner of Utah to spend time in the Bears Ears area.

On Wednesday, he’ll be in the area near the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument.

Interior officials haven’t made public the details of whom Zinke plans to meet with. But officials with a coalition of five tribes that pushed for the Bears Ears designation said they have a one-hour meeting with Zinke Sunday in Salt Lake City.

Natasha Hales, the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition lead staffer, said members plan to tell Zinke about their long history with the Bears Ears land and the landscape’s sacred importance.

They also plan to reiterate that they willing to take legal action to defend the monument if needed.

“The Utah congressional delegation is cherry picking a few voices in opposition to this but there’s overwhelming support for this,” Hales said. “We wanted to take Secretary Zinke out on the ground with our people and show him around but that invitation was never extended.”

The monument review is rooted in the belief Trump and other critics that a law created by President Theodore Roosevelt to designate the monument has been improperly used to protect wide expanses of lands instead of places with particular historical or archaeological value.

Grand Staircase-Escalante is 1.9 million acres, about the size of Delaware. Bears Ears is a bit smaller at 1.3 million acres.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Conservation groups counter that the review puts in limbo protections on large swaths of land home to ancient cliff dwellings, towering Sequoias, deep canyons and oceans habitats where seals, whales and sea turtles roam.

Environmental groups have vowed to file lawsuits if Trump attempts to rescind monuments, which would be unprecedented.

Patagonia, the outdoor clothing company, put ads in newspapers in Utah and Montana over the weekend playing off Trump's own comments at the signing of the executive order in which he said, "I've heard a lot about Bears Ears, and I hear it's beautiful."

"Mr. President, Bears Ears National Monument is beautiful," the ad said, listing how it has more species diversity than Yellowstone and darker skies than Yosemite.

Zinke has said the report will recommend whether any monuments should be abolished or resized.

He promises an open-minded approach and said he remains opposed to selling any federal land or transferring it to state or local control.

Congress might weigh in as well. Numerous bills on the issue were introduced in the previous session, including measures to prevent the president from establishing or expanding monuments in particular states and to require consent of Congress or state legislatures.

BACK

18. The new range war

The Christian Science Monitor, May 7 | Amanda Paulson

MAY 7, 2017 SALMON, IDAHO—Merill Beyeler bears the classic look of a Western rancher. He's got the leathery face of someone who has spent a lot of time outdoors. He wears flannel shirts, jeans, and a bone-colored cowboy hat.

Mr. Beyeler, whose family roots in Idaho's Lemhi County extend back to the 1850s, is also a rock-ribbed Republican. True, in Idaho, one of the reddest states in the nation, most people are Republican. But in Lemhi County, a hauntingly beautiful expanse of bald, taupe mountains and verdant river valleys wedged up against the Montana border, virtually no one puts a Democratic bumper sticker on his or her pickup. So you'd think that people like Beyeler would be happy at the prospect of the new Trump administration, buttressed by one of the most conservative cabinets in decades, ushering in a dramatic change in the management of public lands in the West. You'd think that they would relish the prospect of federal agencies either opening up more expanses to ranchers and commercial interests or giving more control back to the states.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

You'd be wrong.

While Beyeler occasionally chafes at the way federal lands are managed, he doesn't want US Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management land opened up unconditionally to loggers or developers, or – worse – handed over to bureaucrats in Boise and sold off. “The reason you come home is that this is the soul of our people,” he says. “When you look at our public lands in that respect – as an economic driver and as the soul of our state – the idea of losing that, or risking that, is just too great.”

As the Trump administration works to fashion an identity in Washington, one of the big questions is how much the federal government will change its stewardship of public lands in the West. With Republicans in control of Congress, many envision a significant shift in access to and development of public expanses similar to what happened under the Reagan administration 35 years ago. They believe it could be one of the signature achievements of the Trump era. A few on the right are even pushing for an outright transfer of some of those lands back to state control.

Yet others – including many Republicans – occupy a more pragmatic middle. Like Beyeler, they are looking for a recalibration rather than a land-management revolution. They believe that the natural landscape is as much a part of the region's identity as coal seams and oil shale and requires at least some federal stewardship. And they believe firmly that public lands need to stay public – not sold off to private interests.

When Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R) of Utah recently introduced a bill in Congress to sell 3.3 million acres of federal lands in the West, he was forced to withdraw the legislation days later because of the backlash from his own constituents, many of whom regularly fish for steelhead trout or hunt elk on federal lands.

“I've been working in this field for 17 years, and no one has ever seen a congressman introduce a bill and then withdraw it within a week,” says Land Tawney, director of Backcountry Hunters and Anglers, a nonprofit that fiercely opposed the bill. “The sportsman community is about 70 percent conservative. We’re finding this is a unifying issue, with folks on both sides of the aisle. There can be nothing more American than our public lands.”

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The land-use decisions of the next four years will have the most impact in places like Lemhi County, which is 92 percent owned by the federal government. Few areas of the United States are more remote than the high desert sagebrush area here.

Salmon, the county’s largest town, is 90 miles from a railroad, and 150 miles from an airport, the Interstate, or a Wal-Mart. The county is empty, stark, and stunning. Local ranchers and residents differ – even within families – over how public lands should be managed. But some of them are also working with government officials in a way that could become a model for solving future land wars in the West.

The battle over public lands and resources is as old as westward expansion itself. It extends from early fights over mining and water claims in the 1800s to the Sagebrush Rebellion of the 1970s to the anti-Washington “wise-use movement” of the 1980s and ’90s. The only constant in it all is the ebb and flow of tensions between Western residents and the largest landholder, Washington.

“The political side of it dates all the way back to the creation of the country,” says Robert Keiter, a law professor at the University of Utah and director of the Wallace Stegner Center for Land, Resources, and the Environment.

Last year, simmering frustrations about federal control over Western lands culminated most visibly in the occupation of the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge in Oregon by militant ranchers. Yet Westerners’ grievances have been finding an outlet through various assaults in Washington as well.

In late April, the Trump administration ordered the Interior Department to review some 30 places that have been designated national monuments over the past 20 years. The White House believes the designations have increasingly set aside more land than was intended under the 1906 Antiquities Act, costing the nation jobs. Environmentalists see the move undermining one of the most important tools for protecting national parks and public lands.

The change could affect places such as the Bears Ears National Monument, in the red-rock area of southern Utah, which was protected in the waning days of the Obama administration. Several Utah lawmakers, including Mr. Chaffetz and Republican Rep. Rob Bishop, have been pressing to overturn the designation. (In response, the Outdoor Industry Association pulled a trade show, which brings about $45 million a year to Utah, from Salt Lake City.)

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Western lawmakers have also been pushing the idea of selling off some public lands to private parties, or transferring them to state ownership. And the Trump administration is trying to repeal a regulation that requires oil and gas firms operating on public lands to control their methane emissions.

Behind all the rebellious moves is the size of Washington's real estate portfolio. The federal government owns 47 percent of all the land in 11 Western states. That ranges from a high of 85 percent in Nevada to a low of 30 percent in Montana.

"It's a long-standing irritation, and at times it becomes more pronounced," says Lynn Scarlett, global managing director for public policy for The Nature Conservancy and a former deputy Interior secretary under President George W. Bush. Ms. Scarlett says tensions have always simmered over how the federal government manages those lands in regard to energy development, mining, grazing rights, and endangered species.

What's new in the latest backlash, she says, is the focus on the lack of maintenance on public lands, which is largely the result of federal agencies getting less funding. Departments such as the Forest Service, BLM, and US Fish & Wildlife Service had hoped that highlighting the backlog of work would help them garner more funds. Instead, critics have just seized on the maintenance issues to buttress their argument that the federal government isn't the right steward of public lands.

"The bottom line is that we want our public lands to be managed in a way that's responsible," says Jennifer Fielder, a Montana state senator and chief executive officer of the American Lands Council, a leader in the call to transfer federal land to state control. "Those of us who live near here are sick of seeing the lock-it-up and let-it-burn policies out of Washington."

Senator Fielder says she watches the ineptitude from her living-room window in Montana. The Feds' inability or unwillingness to thin underbrush and perform other basic management practices, she says, led to a wildfire last summer becoming much larger, and more expensive, than it needed to be. "Forty thousand acres burnt to a crisp, habitat destroyed," she says.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Others believe that having an absentee landlord isn't the best way to care for property and that the people closest to the land are the ones who know best how to manage it – and should reap the benefits from it.

“Without these lands, you can't operate as a republican form of government inside your state,” says Jim Chmelik, a former Idaho county commissioner and a leader of the land-transfer movement. “If you don't have access to your resources, you can't provide good-paying jobs and you can't provide a good quality of life.”

Yet critics of shifting control to the states believe it will either lead to lands being sold off to private interests or an oil derrick being put on top of every ridge, despoiling the natural beauty that attracts people from around the country – and contributes to regional economies. States also have far fewer resources than Washington to manage the vast public expanses. And most states are required to balance their budgets, which could put pressure on them to sell lands in lean times, even if they vow not to do so.

As proof, critics point out that 11 Western states were granted a total of almost 77 million acres of land at statehood. They've sold off about 44 percent of those lands. Nevada, granted 2.7 million acres at its founding, now has just 3,000 acres of public state land.

“Study after study has shown states can't afford” to manage public lands well, says Mr. Tawney of Backcountry Hunters and Anglers.

Just south of Lehmi lies Custer County – home of some of the most spectacular wilderness in Idaho. The celebrated Middle Fork of the Salmon River flows through the area, and the rugged Sawtooth Mountains rise steeply from the plains. It's the third largest county in Idaho, but home to barely 4,000 people. Roughly 96 percent of the county is federal land.

“Custer County is the size of Connecticut, but we have one sheriff and four deputies,” says Wayne Butts, a county commissioner who has lived in Challis, the county seat, since he was 8. “There's no tax bases.”

Sitting next to the warmth of a wood-burning stove in his small-motor repair shop, he ticks off the economic limitations of living in a remote area: The county has a 100-year-old jail with just six beds in one room, making it impossible to house men and women at the same time. Local roads are in desperate need of repair, but no money exists to fix them. A decrease in grazing rights on federal lands has led to fewer ranchers, resulting in less local revenue. A molybdenum mine, once the county's largest employer, shut down in 2014.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

People come from all over the country to hike, fish, and play in Custer County, but don't add much to the economy, says Mr. Butts: Many of them drive in from Boise, bring their own food and camping supplies. They don't even buy gas in Custer.

"Old-time customs and culture – that's the way we like it," says Butts. To him, that means ranching, mining, logging. He's frustrated that federal lands increasingly seem to be managed to inhibit those activities.

Still, despite all those irritations, Butts isn't willing to back transferring lands to state ownership unless he sees a budget proposal that makes sense to him. He thinks either the state or local communities could do a better job managing the lands, but he is well aware of the costs involved. Instead, he wants to see limits put on turning any more private land into public land and hopes that the Trump administration and Republican Congress will help roll back some of the more onerous environmental protections on federal lands that already exist.

A few dozen miles to the east of Challis, in the shadow of Idaho's tallest peak, Mt. Borah, Steve Smith shares many of Butts's grievances. Mr. Smith and his parents live on his family's 2,800-acre ranch, where they have a herd of 400 cows.

Just a mention of public lands is enough to set Smith and his father, Wiley, off, venting about their years of vexation in dealing with the BLM and Forest Service. This has included navigating around what they see as burdensome protections for the sage grouse, as well as a BLM water-rights claim that took them years to defeat.

Yet even this father and son don't agree on whether control of public lands should be shifted from Washington to the states. Despite his virulent criticism of federal management, Wiley doesn't believe states have the resources to care for public lands.

Steve would like to see a modest transfer – perhaps 2 percent of total holdings – provided states have a plan for how they will manage the areas. "The ranchers, the miners, the loggers – they're the ones that have taken care of these areas," he says. "[Federal officials] put a black mark on those industries and don't see that [the land] has been in their care for 150 years."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Others are more adamant in their opposition to state control. On a cold, rainy Saturday in March, nearly 3,000 people gathered at the State Capitol in Boise to support public lands staying public – and under federal stewardship.

The demonstration attracted plenty of traditional environmentalists, but also hunters, anglers, and dirt-bike riders. “Rednecks and hippies unite!” read one sign. “I fill my freezer on public lands,” said another.

In between various chants – such as “Keep public lands in public hands!” – the crowd listened to speakers ranging from a member of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes to a fifth-generation Idaho woman who talked of accompanying her mother on her first moose hunt when she was 8 days old.

“I hunt and I fish on public lands,” says Travis Long, who came to the rally from Kuna, Idaho, outfitted in camouflage. “I’ve got four kids and I want to make sure public lands remain that way.”

It is too early to know what a Trump administration will mean for public lands. Much of the push to undermine the power of federal oversight agencies, or to transfer or sell off public lands, is coming from Congress, and President Trump’s Interior secretary, Ryan Zinke, has repeatedly said he would never transfer or sell them.

“I think we’re in a better place with [Mr. Trump and Mr. Zinke] than we would have been with others interviewed for the Interior secretary, or with Ted Cruz,” says Whit Fosburgh, president and chief executive officer of the Theodore Roosevelt Conservation Partnership, a nonprofit that represents sportsmen and sportswomen.

At the same time, Mr. Fosburgh and other conservation leaders say they’re concerned about legislation that has been passed or proposed. In March, for instance, the Trump administration rescinded Barack Obama’s three-year moratorium on coal leases on federal land. A proposed bill in Congress would strip the Forest Service and BLM of their law enforcement powers, putting the job of policing environmental and other rules in the hands of local sheriffs.

“It’s one more attempt to weaken management of public lands,” says Fosburgh.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Trump's proposed budget also includes a 12 percent cut to the Interior Department, which could make maintenance of public lands even more problematic and give states more leverage in their quest to take over.

Eventually, it's possible that some of the hostility to Washington's handling of public lands will die down under the new administration. The Sagebrush Rebellion subsided once Reagan came to power.

"In the big picture politically, it would not surprise me if [the transfer movement] slowly disappears from the radar screen with Republicans in control of Congress and the White House," says Mr. Keiter, the Utah law professor. "It works as an oppositional strategy to more progressive or environmentally friendly policies of Democratic administrations."

Perhaps the best hope for ending the standoffs over public lands is a more collaborative approach in the canyons and valley floors of the West itself – far from the politics of Washington and statehouses. One such effort is under way in Salmon, where ranchers, federal agencies, and conservation groups are finding common ground.

"What doesn't get attention is the really good, responsible, productive work taking place on the Western landscape," says Beyeler, the Lemhi County rancher.

At the same time that the Malheur standoff was occurring, he notes, the Forest Service and BLM were working with a local rancher to help him get seven miles of pipeline approved in an area that includes an important salmon spawning tributary. Endangered sockeye salmon travel more than 900 miles, up 6,500 feet of elevation, to spawn in rivers and lakes here.

"It was a collaborative process," says Beyeler. "I worry that this tension on whether the state or federal government should own [public lands] distracts from the collaborative work."

Tom Page, another Salmon Valley rancher, got into ranching in part because he wanted to see if he could do it in a conservation-minded way – and make money. He is surprised by how hard it has been to navigate all the environmental rules and by how difficult lawsuits filed by activists make it for local landowners.

When he recently sought to get approval for 200 feet of fence on his grazing allotment, to keep cows from straying into restricted forest land, federal officials told him not to apply for the permit. Because it would disturb fish and sage grouse habitat, the US Forest Service "knows they have to write a thick document for those 200 feet of fence,” says Mr. Page, and that they’re likely to be sued by environmentalists – which was not worth it, in their view, for such a small project.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The Upper Salmon area, Page agrees, has become a model for conservation and collaboration – but only because it has nonprofits and both federal and private money helping to support that work. In rural counties with less federal attention, there tends to be a lot less trust, he says.

Bob Cope has seen both cooperation and conflict. A large man with a deep voice and earthy sense of humor, he is a veterinarian for all the local ranchers as well as a Lemhi County commissioner. He has served on numerous state and federal committees representing Western interests.

With face-to-face collaboration and local involvement, he says public-lands disputes are solvable. But he understands people’s frustrations, especially when they see onerous rules being made by people back East.

“We can work with our federal officials, but [local people] get handcuffed,” he says. “We’ve had management by legislation and litigation. There’s still a lot of mistrust on both sides.... People feel like they have no voice.”

Over on the 25,000-acre ranch he’s managed for 20 years, Shane Rosenkrance epitomizes the attitude of many people in this part of Idaho. He harbors a deep love for the lands he manages and the public holdings that surround them. Mr. Rosenkrance points to the imposing peaks rising out of the desert floor – the Lost River Range, the Pioneer Mountains, Mt. Borah. He wants them to remain in federal hands and not be sold to individuals who might turn them into their own private preserves.

“You can go anywhere you want,” says Rosenkrance, whose family has lived in the valley for seven generations. “Residents appreciate that more than anyone. But we don’t want some guy in New York telling us how to manage these lands, or to lock them up.”

BACK

19. The Latest: Zinke says he may not favor shrinking monuments

NewsOK, May 7 | The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Latest on a visit to Utah by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to review the designation of national monuments (all times local):

6:40 p.m.

U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke says he may not necessarily recommend that President Donald Trump rescind or shrink two Utah national monuments, and it's possible that once he views the red rock areas, he could decide the monuments need to be larger.

Zinke told reporters Sunday in Salt Lake City that his visit is a listening tour and he wants to ensure that the Antiquities Act was used as intended when Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante monuments were declared.

The Interior secretary spoke to reporters after a closed-door meeting with leaders of a tribal coalition that campaigned for the monument.

His visit comes after an executive order signed last month by President Donald Trump called for a review of 27 national monuments established by several former presidents.

—

5:05 p.m.

More than 500 protesters urging the protection of Utah's Bears Ears National Monument are demonstrating outside a Salt Lake City building where U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is meeting with tribal leaders.

Protesters carried signs Sunday and shouted "Save our monuments, stand with Bears Ears!" as Zinke started a four-day Utah trip.

He's assessing whether 3.2 million acres of the state's red rock region should remain national monuments or have borders scaled down.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Zinke's meeting with the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition, which pushed for the monument, was not open to the public or media.

His visit comes after an executive order signed last month by President Donald Trump called for a review of 27 national monuments established by several former presidents.

—

4:15 p.m.

U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is meeting with a coalition of five tribes that pushed for President Barack Obama to designate Bears Ears National Monument.

Zinke's hour-long meeting Sunday with the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition came as the Interior secretary kicked off a four-day tour in Utah.

The meeting was not open to the public or media, but Zinke is expected to speak to reporters later in the day.

While in Utah, he's expected to assess whether the designation of 3.2 million acres of national monuments in the state's southern red rock region should be scaled back or rescinded.

His visit comes after an executive order signed last month by President Donald Trump called for a review of 27 national monuments established by several former presidents.

—

9:20 a.m.

U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is set to start a four-day Utah trip to assess whether the designation of 3.2 million acres of national monuments in the state's southern red rock region should be scaled back or rescinded.

Zinke arrives in Salt Lake City Sunday to launch the re-evaluation of the new Bears Ears National Monument and the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument.

His visit comes after an executive order signed last month by President Donald Trump's called for a review of 27 national monuments established by several former presidents.

The Bears Ears monument is a source of ire for Utah's conservative leadership and is a top review priority.

Zinke must make a recommendation on that monument by June 10 ahead of a final report about all the monuments.

BACK

20. Zinke says monument designations have been an 'effective tool,' though 'very few ... are to the scale of the recent actions'

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 7 | Matthew Piper

As he embarked on a tour of Utah to review two national monuments, Ryan Zinke said he sees no evidence Native American proponents of Bears Ears National Monument were exploited by special interest groups, as state leaders have suggested.

"I think they're smart, capable, passionate, and have a deep sense of tie to their culture and want to preserve it," the secretary of the Interior said after a meeting with the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition, which requested the monument on behalf of five tribes, at Salt Lake City's Bureau of Land Management office on Sunday.

Minutes later, however, Sen. Orrin Hatch said Native Americans are "manipulated sometimes by people" and that the "far left" has further designs on the 1.35 million acres in southeastern Utah protected by President Barack Obama on Dec. 28.

"The Indians, they don't fully understand that a lot of the things that they currently take for granted on those lands, they won't be able to do if it's made clearly into a monument or a wilderness," Hatch said.

Asked to describe which activities Obama's designation would prevent Native Americans from doing, Hatch said, "That'd take too much time right now."

Pressed further for one example, Hatch said: "Once you put a monument there, you do restrict a lot of things that could be done, and that includes use of the land. ... Just take my word for it."

Navajo nation delegate Davis Filfred, who serves as member of both the tribal coalition and a tribal commission created to provide input on management of the monument, said Sunday night that the meeting with Zinke was overdue.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

"I told him today that you met with the Utah delegation more than a couple of times thus far and this is the first time that we are meeting," Filfred said. "I'm requesting equal time."

While Filfred and others fight to defend it, Hatch and other state leaders have four days to convince Zinke that the Bears Ears National Monument designation constituted federal overreach and defied the will of most of the region's inhabitants.

Zinke then has until June 10 to recommend to President Donald Trump a fate for the newborn monument.

He also will stop within the boundaries of Grand Staircase-Escalante — whose 1996 designation by President Bill Clinton is the starting point for a review of 27 large monuments that was ordered by Trump. Utah leaders hope Trump will drastically reduce the boundaries of the 1.9 million-acre monument.

Zinke said he arrives in Utah "without any predisposition of outcome."

"Over the course of our history, I think it's undisputed that the monuments have been an effective tool to save [and] preserve some of our greatest cultural treasures," Zinke said, though he later added that "very few monuments are to the scale of the recent actions.

"Some of the monuments are, I don't want to say universally but certainly widely, supported and accepted," Zinke said. "The Bears Ears is not widely supported or accepted in the state of Utah."

His tour is reminiscent of one conducted last July by his predecessor, Sally Jewell, to inform Obama's decision.

Jewell witnessed striking vistas and delicate archaeological treasures as she weighed varied opinions about who should oversee them, and she concluded her visit by soliciting public comment for three hours inside a cramped Bluff Community Center.

The eventual designation hewed closely to boundaries in the Public Lands Initiative proposed by Utah's delegation, but if Obama's monument was intended as a compromise, it wasn't viewed that way by Utah leaders.

Hatch said Sunday that Obama made the declaration "without talking to any members of the delegation."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

"It was pretty pathetic," he said.

Zinke's entourage drove past about two dozen protesters lining the 200 South border of The Gateway shopping mall as he accessed BLM offices Sunday for his first meeting with a full complement of the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition. Zinke met earlier with Sens. Hatch and Mike Lee, Gov. Gary Herbert, Utah Attorney General Sean Reyes and state legislative leaders.

Proponents of the two disputed national monument designations worry that their voices will be absent from the Interior secretary's upcoming agenda.

Zinke's office rejected repeated requests to meet with members of the roundly pro-monument Boulder-Escalante Chamber of Commerce, writing "his current schedule is quite full and it's unlikely that he'll be able to accommodate any additional engagements." Chamber members were invited to comment on a forthcoming feedback website.

Members of Utah Dine Bikeyah, a grassroots nonprofit that supports the monument, also have called publicly for a meeting and sent Zinke's office a letter Sunday describing two previous letters and "several email and verbal requests" to meet.

Executive Director Gavin Noyes said Sunday that the Bears Ears boundaries were drawn based on the group's conversations with 75 Native American elders.

"We want to make sure that he doesn't trim any boundaries without talking to people who know the Bears Ears area the best," Noyes said. "The biggest risk at this point is that he believes that [largely anti-monument] Blanding and Monticello residents are the only people that he needs to meet with."

The Center for Western Priorities' Greg Zimmerman declared in a Sunday statement that Zinke's itinerary "[makes] it clear he intends for his visit to Utah to be a one-sided affair, ignoring input from local stakeholders who support national monuments at Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante."

Tribal leaders who pushed for the monument have said they will sue to preserve the protections, if necessary.

Filfred said Zinke agreed to meet with members of the intertribal coalition only last Wednesday, after multiple requests went unanswered.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Sunday's hourlong meeting was insufficient for them to state their case for the monument, he said. He was unimpressed by Zinke's posture and took a cellphone photo of the secretary reclining in his chair.

"You're asking this question as if we're supposed to answer it in one sentence, one phrase, one paragraph," Filfred said.

Zinke said Sunday that it's clear involved Native Americans "have roots in that area. They recognize that this is the first time that they're at the table, and there is some distrust of previous efforts that the tribe and tribes, in this case, aren't heard. Remarkably, that's the same argument I hear from many counties and many elected officials: that the federal government by and large has not heard the local voice."

As a freshman representative from Montana, Zinke opposed a GOP effort to transfer federal lands to states.

"The federal government needs to do a much better job of managing our resources, but the sale or transfer of our land is an extreme proposal, and I won't tolerate it," he said last June after voting against a bill that would have given states the option to buy 2 million federal acres for logging.

He also took sides against Rob Bishop when the Utah representative, who serves as Natural Resources Committee chairman, tried to block funding to the Land and Water Conservation Fund that the government uses to buy and conserve potentially threatened lands.

In January, however, Zinke said there was "no doubt the president has the power to amend a monument" and "[i]t will be interesting to see if a president can nullify a monument."

Utah's Legislature resolved during this year's session to ask Trump to rescind Bears Ears despite legal scholars' doubts that he has such authority.

Rep. Mike Noel, R-Kanab, who has been supported by Utah leaders as a candidate to lead the Bureau of Land Management, has said that "a whole lot of just plain old sagebrush" that could be ranched or mined lies within the boundaries of the two monuments.

A recent poll conducted by Dan Jones & Associates and commissioned by UtahPolicy.com found that a small majority of Utahns support reducing the acreage in Bears Ears or eliminating it altogether, while a similarly slim majority say Trump should leave the Grand Staircase as is.

BACK

21. Zinke Begins Utah Listening Tour

KUER News, May 7 | Judy Fahys

Utahns for and against national monuments have been asking the Trump administration to weigh in on Bears Ears ever since it was created in December. U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke arrived in Utah Sunday to hear their concerns firsthand.

Around two hundred protestors gathered outside the federal Bureau of Land Management's state office as Zinke met inside with leaders of the five tribes that will help manage the new Bears Ears National Monument.

"There's a lot of anger out there," he said afterward, speaking with reporters. "There's a lot of mistrust out there."

Zinke's visit coincides with an open public comment period on 27 national monuments that have been created in the past two decades. He invited all Utahns and all Americans to voice their concerns. Zinke insists his mind is NOT made up.

"I'm talking to all parties," he said, "and getting a perspective of making sure that Utah and all the stakeholders have a voice."

He's scheduled to tour the new Bears Ears National Monument on foot, in a plane and on horseback over the next two days. Then he visits the Grand Staircase Escalante Monument.

The Interior Secretary also met Sunday with Utah Republican leaders. They've organized the tour to make a case that Bears Ears should be rescinded and the Grand Staircase should be shrunk.

"We're going to make sure Utah functions the way it should function and that it's protected and that it's not just shoved around by radical people from elsewhere," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, a Utah Republican who joined Zinke Sunday at the BLM.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Native Americans and conservationists throughout the state are among the monument supporters who complain they're being excluded from the Zinke meetings.

BACK

22. Zinke in southern Utah to tour Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 8 | Amy Joi O'Donoghue

BLANDING — Native American supporters of the new Bears Ears National Monument talked Monday about the sacred nature of the rugged landscape and why it's so important to protect.

At an event hosted by Utah Dine Bikeyah, reporters and photographers in town for Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's visit were given aerial tours of the San Juan County monument.

The 30-minute flights come in advance of Zinke's scheduled hike to the House on Fire ruins near Mule Canyon, inside the monument footprint.

Utah Gov. Gary Herbert is expected at the hike, as well as several staffers from Utah's congressional delegation.

Willie Grayeyes, chairman of the board of Utah Dine Bikeyah, said he hopes Zinke realizes that as Interior secretary he has a "trust responsibility" to Native Americans.

That responsibility, he added, should be part of Zinke's decision on whether the monument stands as Grayeyes hopes.

Members of Utah's congressional delegation have been united in opposition to Bears Ears' designation by former President Barack Obama late last year. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah led out on the effort that led to President Donald Trump signing an executive order on April 26 to review monument designations going back to 1996.

San Juan County commissioners were also at the airport for Zinke's arrival, which has stirred up residents. This is the second time in less than in a year that a secretary of the Interior has visited the region. Last summer, then-Secretary Sally Jewell was here.

“The windup has been pretty intense,” said San Juan County Commissioner Phil Lyman, who said it was clear Zinke intended to listen to the variety of viewpoints about the December 2016 designation.

“He's gone above and beyond in that respect,” he said. Lyman said the county leaders remain adamantly opposed to the monument.

"In this country we value consent, and this was done without our consent," he said.

This story will be updated throughout the day.

BACK

23. Zinke kicks off Utah tour in national monuments review

The Hill, May 8 | Timothy Cama

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is in Utah this week to tour two controversial national monuments that the Trump administration is considering rescinding or shrinking.

Zinke arrived Sunday for meetings with stakeholders, including elected officials and a group of American Indian tribes that pushed for the creation of the Bears Ears National Monument.

At a news conference with Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) late Sunday, Zinke said that, unlike many other national monuments, Bears Ears doesn't enjoy local support, according to the Salt Lake Tribune.

“Over the course of our history, I think it's undisputed that the monuments have been an effective tool to save [and] preserve some of our greatest cultural treasures,” Zinke said, adding later that “very few monuments are to the scale of the recent actions.”

“Some of the monuments are, I don't want to say universally, but certainly widely, supported and accepted,” he continued said. “The Bears Ears is not widely supported or accepted in the state of Utah.”

Zinke pushed back on the narrative that the five nearby tribes that supported former President Barack Obama's decision to protect the land were misled by environmentalists.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

“I think they’re smart, capable, passionate, and have a deep sense of tie to their culture and want to preserve it,” Zinke said, according to the Tribune.

Zinke had met earlier with the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition.

Hatch, however, said he thinks the tribes were tricked.

“The Indians, they don't fully understand that a lot of the things that they currently take for granted on those lands, they won't be able to do if it's made clearly into a monument or a wilderness,” said Hatch, who declined to name specific activities that aren't allowed within the monument area.

Dozens of protesters supporting the monuments faced Zinke outside the Salt Lake City offices of the Bureau of Land Management when he arrived, the Deseret News reported.

Zinke, Rep. Rob Bishop (R-Utah) and others are taking a plane trip Tuesday to see Bears Ears from the air. Later in the week, he'll tour parts of Bears Ears and the Grand Staircase-Escalante national monument on horseback.

Interior will also take formal comments soon via mail and online as they consider a revision of those monuments and two dozen others.

BACK

24. Mr. Zinke, Keep Channeling Teddy Roosevelt

The New York Times, May 8 | The Editorial Board

On his first day on the job, Ryan Zinke, President Trump's secretary of the interior, rode a horse to work, in plain imitation of Teddy Roosevelt, who as president used to gallop around Washington, and whose admirable record as a conservationist Mr. Zinke says he hopes to emulate.

By all accounts, Mr. Zinke, a former Navy SEALs member and congressman from Montana, is not a dope. He therefore knows that he cannot possibly match Mr. Roosevelt if he embraces the dismaying anti-environmental agenda Mr. Trump has saddled him with.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

As David Roberts of Vox has pointed out, that agenda is both plutocratic and lazy. It seeks to confer new benefits on oil and gas interests that are already richly favored. Yet it requires nothing of Mr. Trump himself. All he has done is issue executive orders that tell someone else to do the work. He cannot scrap the clean power rule or President Barack Obama's aggressive fuel efficiency standards; the relevant federal agencies will have to face the laborious and uncertain process of writing new rules and whatever court challenges those rules bring.

In similar fashion, in two separate orders, Mr. Trump has instructed Mr. Zinke to review Obama policies designed to protect important landscapes for the enjoyment of future generations and the oceans from catastrophic oil spills. The wording in both orders makes it clear that Mr. Trump wants the policies revised or jettisoned altogether, and in the end, great damage could be inflicted on the environment. It's up to Mr. Zinke to make sure that does not happen.

One order instructs Mr. Zinke to review all national monument designations made under the Antiquities Act after Jan. 1, 1996, that encompass 100,000 or more acres. Since Mr. Roosevelt signed the law in 1906, eight Republican (including T.R.) and eight Democratic presidents have used it to unilaterally protect threatened landscapes from commercial intrusion. Mr. Trump complains that such designations prohibit new mining and drilling projects that could create jobs, but a close look at his order shows that it makes no economic sense and is little more than cynical genuflection to the Utah congressional delegation.

The order's bookends are the 1.9 million-acre Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, established by President Bill Clinton in 1996, and the 1.35 million-acre Bears Ears National Monument established just last year by Mr. Obama. The designations have stuck in the craw of two Republican warhorses, Senator Orrin Hatch and Representative Rob Bishop.

Both monuments contain magnificent landscapes and priceless artifacts. Neither contains significant oil and gas reserves, and the Grand Staircase designation has led to a big growth in tourism. Bears Ears is likely to do the same. Both have popular support, and both are best left alone.

The second order deals with oil and gas exploration. The United States is producing robust supplies, from both federal and private lands, but the oil industry wants more, and so does Mr. Trump. He has therefore ordered Mr. Zinke to draw up a new five-year exploration plan, roll back an Obama rule from last December withdrawing America's Arctic waters from drilling, and "reconsider" several safety regulations implemented after the disastrous BP oil spill.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Five-year plans come and go; every nearly every administration draws up a new one. Mr. Trump's plan calls for drilling in the Atlantic, an idea Mr. Obama rejected after protests from coastal states. The instructions on Alaska and safety precautions are simply irresponsible. Mr. Obama withdrew Alaskan waters using existing legal authority and for a very good reason: An oil spill in the inhospitable waters of the Arctic would be a disaster. Further, after Shell's bumbling and ultimately fruitless $7 billion attempt to find oil, companies have been abandoning old leases right and left, and, whatever their ambitions elsewhere, do not seem to be seeking new ones in the Arctic.

As for revising and presumably weakening the safety regulations — common-sense efforts to strengthen specific pieces of offshore drilling equipment, like blowout preventers, that failed in the 2010 gulf disaster — it's hard to believe that even industry wants something that stupid.

Back to Mr. Zinke's first day on the job. The day after he got off his horse, he addressed his employees and promised to defend them against brutal budget cuts that Mr. Trump had already threatened. That's all well and good, but the real measure of his leadership is whether he will also defend the crucially important work his employees are involved in, and, like Mr. Roosevelt, decide to protect and add to the public lands and waters instead of diminishing them.

BACK

25. Could management shift to states even if public lands remain federally owned?

The Las Vegas Sun, May 8 / Daniel Rothberg

At a Lake Tahoe fundraiser in August, Elko County Commissioner Demar Dahl — a leader in the movement to transfer federal land to the states — met privately with then-candidate Donald Trump. According to a story Dahl has told many times since then, he asked Trump how he would feel operating a 10-floor hotel in which eight floors were owned by a bureaucracy 2,500 miles away.

“He caught right on,” Dahl said.

This is how Dahl sees Nevada's position relative to the federal government, which owns more than 85 percent of the state. “So many of the rules and regulations we have to live by are made

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

so far away in Washington by people who are not really familiar with our problems out here,” he said.

In late April, Dahl flew to Washington, D.C., to discuss the future of public lands with President Trump’s staff, after the administration invited him to a signing ceremony for an executive order on education. The political landscape around the land issue had changed since August. Trump’s administration had veered away from the pro-transfer position included in the Republican Party’s platform.

“I’m adamantly opposed to the sale or transfer of public lands,” Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke said at an Outdoor Industry Association event that same week in April. “So is my boss.”

That position, which has hardened in recent weeks, has forced land-transfer advocates in the West to look at more modest proposals for giving states more control over federal lands. At the meeting in April, for instance, Dahl suggested transferring more management responsibilities to the states.

When asked about such proposals, a spokesperson for the Interior Department said in an email that Zinke “believes the federal government needs to be a better manager and a better neighbor and that bureaus need to work more closely with one another and local and state governments on local land management policy.” She added: “What works for Seattle doesn’t exactly work for Henderson.”

State legislators across the West introduced bills this year encouraging Congress to revisit the idea of wholesale land transfers — ceding large parcels of land to the states, which could then sell the land for development and extraction, or manage it for the public. Those bills face an uphill battle.

The federal government, which owns the majority of land in Nevada, Oregon and Utah, sits on nearly 47 percent of all Western land. It’s a reality that has existed since statehood, when the federal government ceded land to newly formed states looking to raise revenue for public services. Nonetheless, it’s a development that remains a thorn in the side of land-transfer advocates, who argue that local jurisdictions should make choices about how their land is managed.

Politicians supporting the land-transfer movement, though, have had difficulty making gains, facing headwinds from both sides of the partisan spectrum.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Conservationists and sporting groups believe that transferring federal land could constrict space for hunting, fishing and outdoor recreation. It's likely that these groups would oppose Dahl's suggestion — to transfer management, not the land, to the states.

"That gets to be a very slippery slope," said Alex Boian, vice president of governmental relations for the Outdoor Industry Association. "It's not a real compromise."

A spokesperson for Montana-based Backcountry Hunters and Anglers echoed Boian's concern. She too called such proposals a slippery slope and likened the protection of public lands to a "second Second Amendment."

The groups flexed their political muscle this year with a successful social media campaign that urged Rep. Jason Chaffetz, R-Utah, to withdraw a bill to sell 3.3 million acres of federal land. "It's the first shot across the bow," Land Tawney, executive director for Backcountry Hunters and Anglers, told Outside Magazine in February. "We don't have the money, but we have the people."

At a recent lunch meeting with members of the Congressional Western Caucus, Zinke reiterated his opposition to divesting federal land, U.S. Rep. Mark Amodei, R-Nev., said in an interview with The Sunday.

Zinke declined to discuss whether there would be any exceptions, said Amodei, who introduced legislation in 2014 that would have transferred about 7.5 million acres of federal land to Nevada.

"That's not in the cards at this time," Amodei said.

Amodei instead plans to prioritize smaller gains for the land-transfer movement. He stressed the importance of monitoring land use around Yucca Mountain, funding for the Southern Nevada Public Land Management Act and proposed expansions of Air Force facilities at Nellis and Fallon. He said he expected the administration to be open to land bills that address county-by-county issues.

While Dahl was in D.C., Trump signed a directive ordering Zinke to review national monument designations dating back to the Clinton administration. The request asked the Interior Department to look at downsizing or eliminating any recent monuments declared through presidential powers. .

The American Lands Council, a group that Dahl co-founded, applauded the order. But the group said on its website: “reforms need to go much further.”

BACK

26. Could management shift to states even if public lands remain federally owned?

The Center for American Progress, May 8 / Mary Ellen Kustin

On April 26, President Donald Trump launched an attack on national parks, public lands, and waters. His executive order called on U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke to “review” the 54 national monuments that presidents have designated or expanded since 1996. The order gives wide discretion to the secretary to recommend actions that the president or Congress should take to alter or rescind the protections for these natural, historical, and cultural treasures.

While the order is written in such a way that all recent national monuments—including the Stonewall, César E. Chávez, Belmont-Paul Women’s Equality, and Pacific Remote Islands Marine national monuments—are subject to the 120-day review, Secretary Zinke publicly called out two monuments: The “bookends” of his review will be the Grand Staircase-Escalante and Bears Ears national monuments, both located in Utah. These two monuments later made the list of monuments Secretary Zinke is initially reviewing.

It has been widely reported that the Utah congressional delegation was the driving force behind President Trump’s executive order. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) and Rep. Rob Bishop (R-UT) have been particularly outspoken in their opposition to the Antiquities Act writ large and to Utah’s national monuments specifically. Indeed, both were at the signing ceremony for the executive order; Utah Gov. Gary Herbert (R) and Sen. Mike Lee (R-UT) were also in attendance. President Trump gave Sen. Hatch the pen he used to sign the order after recognizing Hatch as “tough” for repeatedly calling Trump to say “you got to do this.”

The national monument review will be a legal, moral, and political minefield. President Trump’s embrace of the Utah delegation and its pet cause is especially interesting given that most of the delegation’s members were vocal in their opposition to him during the presidential primary. For a president known to keep a list of those who speak ill of him, it is a curious alliance. The Center for American Progress’ analysis suggests that a closer look at the oil, gas, and coal underneath

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Utah's national monuments—and the fossil fuel industry's influence on Trump and the Utah delegation—might help explain this newly formed partnership.

The Trump administration and the Utah delegation's history of disagreement

President Trump struggled to find support in Utah during his campaign, with the majority of the state's voters supporting someone else in both the Republican caucuses and the general election. Rep. Bishop reluctantly voted for Trump, saying, "Unless he resigns, I must support the Republican nominee as my only option." Sen. Hatch eventually supported Trump, but only after endorsing two other Republican candidates first. And Utah's junior senator, Mike Lee, another critic of the Bears Ears National Monument, told constituents that Trump "scares [him] to death." Similarly, Utah Rep. Chris Stewart (R) said last year that "Donald trump does not represent republican ideals, he is our Mussolini."

In addition, the Trump administration's early policy statements on land management differ from those of the Utah delegation. During the campaign, Trump indicated in an interview with Field & Stream magazine that his administration would be "great stewards" of public lands and that he did not "like the idea" of transferring federal lands to the states. His pick of Secretary Zinke, who resigned his delegate post at the Republican National Convention over the party's platform on this issue, underscored that commitment. By contrast, Rep. Bishop, Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT), and Sen. Lee (R-UT) have all introduced legislation that would make it easier to sell off public lands.

It is noteworthy, then, that President Trump is pushing an executive order that is a thinly veiled land seizure. He even parroted a land seizure activist talking point—embraced by Rep. Bishop and other proponents of diminishing federal land management—just before signing the order, saying he would "give that power back to the states and to the people, where it belongs." Curious, perhaps, until one remembers that this rhetoric traces its roots to industry-backed front groups with vested interests in selling off public lands for private gain.

Extractive industries threaten national monuments in Utah

Both President Trump and members of the Utah delegation, particularly Rep. Bishop, have benefited from oil, gas, and coal industry contributions. Trump's presidential campaign received more than $1.1 million from the fossil fuel industry. And coal, oil, and gas interests contributed $1 out of every $10 raised—a total of at least $10 million—for Trump's inaugural celebrations.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

These events were not subject to the same campaign finance restrictions as donations made during the election.

Rep. Bishop, meanwhile, received the highest percentage of out-of-state campaign contributions of anyone in the House, and the oil and gas industries—including the American Petroleum Institute, a trade association that represents hundreds of oil and gas companies—contributed more to his campaigns than any other industry. Although Bishop has repeatedly claimed that his issues with the Grand Staircase-Escalante and Bears Ears national monuments have nothing to do with the fossil fuel interests located below them, both monuments appear to be in the sights of this heavily invested industry.

The American Petroleum Institute was quick to send a letter to House Natural Resources Committee Chairman Bishop and his counterpart in the Senate shortly after the 115th Congress convened, imploring them to “re-examine the role and purpose of the Antiquities Act.” The organization argued that the law threatens the extraction of fossil fuels from public lands and waters. In addition, the oil and gas industry group Western Energy Alliance, or WEA, has indicated interest in drilling in Bears Ears. WEA President Kathleen Sgamma has said about the monument, “There certainly is industry appetite for development there, or else companies wouldn’t have leases in the area.” And geologists have known for years that the Grand Staircase-Escalante area has coal, oil, and mineral deposits.

The following maps reveal why special interests would want access to mine and drill within the boundaries of both Grand Staircase-Escalante and Bears Ears national monuments. A new analysis by CAP and Conservation Science Partners, or CSP, finds that Grand Staircase-Escalante scored in the 72nd percentile for oil and gas and the 37th percentile for mineral resources among similarly sized Western landscapes. The boundary of Grand Staircase-Escalante also encompasses the extensive coal beds found in the Kaiparowits Plateau. As CAP and CSP previously reported, when compared with similarly sized landscapes in the West, Bears Ears scored above the 50th percentile for both mineral resources and oil and gas. Without protection, Grand Staircase-Escalante and Bears Ears would be at great risk of destructive mining and oil and gas development.

These national monuments are also two of the wildest and most ecologically valuable places in the West. The new analysis indicates that Grand Staircase-Escalante is in the top 4 percent for ecological intactness and the top 6 percent for connectivity, which are essential to biodiversity and landscape-level conservation. As CAP and CSP previously showed, Bears Ears is in the top 10 percent of similarly sized places in the West for these two important factors.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Even though national monuments are public lands that, by definition, belong to the people, President Trump said he was signing the executive order to “return control to the people—the people of Utah, the people of all the states, the people of the United States.” However, it appears the people he has in mind may be those with close industry ties.

Methodology

To determine the ecological importance of Bears Ears National Monument and Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, CAP and CSP mapped and summarized 10 landscape-level indicators of resilience to climate change; ecological connectivity; and intactness, biodiversity, and remoteness. Publicly available spatial data and published methods of analysis were used to create indicator maps across 11 Western states to compare Bears Ears National Monument and Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument with equivalently sized areas throughout the West. The same was done with each of seven national parks. A mixture of iconic Western national parks known for their ecological importance and Utah national parks were selected for comparison. CAP and CSP also assessed Bears Ears for two threat indicators: mineral resource potential and oil and gas resource potential. No coal resources were found within Bears Ears National Monument. Similarly, CAP and CSP assessed Grand Staircase-Escalante for three threat indicators: mineral resource potential, oil and gas resource potential, and coal resource potential.

CAP and CSP determined the values of each of the indicators relative to the larger landscape using a simple scoring system based on percentile ranks. Specifically, the mean value of each indicator within Bears Ears National Monument and Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument was compared with the distribution of means of a large random sample of 1,000 areas across the 11 Western states, including all jurisdictions. The size of the random samples was equivalent to the size of the monument. CAP and CSP did the same for the seven national parks. Scores on indicators ranged from 0 to 100. For example, a score of 98 for a given indicator signified that the mean value of that indicator in the monument was greater than or equal to 98 percent of the equivalently sized random samples. Scores of 50 or higher suggested a relatively important indicator.

A more detailed description of methods and data can be found here.

Mary Ellen Kustin is the Director of Policy for Public Lands at the Center for American Progress.

BACK

27. US Interior secretary tours hotly contested Utah monument

The Washington Post, May 8 | Michelle L. Price and Brady McCombs, AP

SALT LAKE CITY — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Monday will get a bird’s-eye view of one of 27 national monuments he’s been ordered to review as he flies over 1.3 million acres of southern Utah’s red rock plateaus, cliffs and canyons graced with sagebrush, juniper trees and ancient cliff dwellings in one of America’s newest and most hotly contested monuments.

His tour guide aboard the helicopter will be Gov. Gary Herbert, one of several prominent Republican leaders in the state who oppose the Bears Ears National Monument. Herbert, U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch and the rest of the all-GOP Congressional delegation consider the monument creation by former President Barack Obama an unnecessary layer of federal control that will hurt local economies by closing the area to new energy development and isn’t the best way to protect the lands.

During the first day of a four-day trip to Utah to see two monuments, Zinke was serenaded in Salt Lake City by about 500 protesters who chanted, “Save our monuments, stand with Bears Ears.” They represented tribal leaders and conservationists on the other side of the debate who are imploring Zinke to leave Bears Ears alone to preserve lands considered sacred to the tribes.

After holding a closed-door meeting with a coalition of tribal leaders who pushed for the monument, Zinke spoke on Sunday of his admiration for President Theodore Roosevelt, who created the law that gives presidents the power to create monuments.

Zinke, a Montana Republican, said that “it is undisputed the monuments have been an effective tool to save, preserve our greatest cultural treasures.”

He insisted there is no predetermined outcome of his review, saying he may not recommend the monuments be made smaller or rescinded, and he might even recommend an addition. Zinke has been tasked with making a recommendation on the monument by June 10, about 2½ months before a final report about on all the monuments.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

“I’m coming in this thing as a Montanan, a former congressman and now the secretary of the Interior without any predispositions of outcome,” Zinke said at a news conference Sunday evening in Salt Lake City. “I want to make sure that the public has a voice, that the elected officials have a voice.”

The two monuments he’s reviewing in Utah are quite large. Created in 1996, Grand Staircase-Escalante is 1.9 million acres (7,700 square kilometers), about the size of Delaware. Bears Ears is a bit smaller at 1.3 million acres (5,300 square kilometers).

Hatch, who appeared with Zinke at the Sunday news conference, said he is grateful the Interior secretary was making the visit.

“He understands that there are two sides. Maybe more than two sides,” Hatch said.

Hatch led the campaign by Utah Republican to get President Donald Trump to take a second look a monument designated by President Barack Obama near the end of his term.

The monument review is rooted in the belief of Trump and other critics that a law signed by President Theodore Roosevelt allowing presidents to declare monuments has been improperly used to protect wide expanses of lands instead of places with particular historical or archaeological value.

Conservation groups contend that the monument review puts in limbo protections on large swaths of land that are home to ancient cliff dwellings, towering Sequoias, deep canyons and ocean habitats where seals, whales and sea turtles roam.

Environmental groups have vowed to file lawsuits if Trump attempts to rescind monuments, which would be unprecedented.

Congress might weigh in as well. Numerous bills on the issue were introduced in the previous session, including measures to prevent the president from establishing or expanding monuments in particular states and to require the consent of Congress or state legislatures.

Zinke and Herbert are scheduled to hold a news conference Monday afternoon before hiking up to the House on Fire, one of dozens of intact ancient ruins within the monument.

On Tuesday, he plans to tour the area by while riding a horse, mentioning his horseback commute through the streets of Washington, D.C., on his first day on the job in March.

“I think, sometimes, the best way to see things is slow and easy with a horse,” Zinke said.

BACK

28. Interior Secretary Zinke in southern Utah to tour Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 8 / Amy Joi O'Donoghue

BLANDING — Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke landed in San Juan County Monday to begin his first full day exploring the rugged footprint of the new Bears Ears National Monument.

Zinke's midmorning arrival created much fanfare at the tiny airport on the southern edge of Blanding, where Native American monument supporters pressed their case to the media.

Zinke is expected to stay in Utah through Wednesday, and he is being accompanied on this trip by Rep. Rob Bishop, R-Utah.

Earlier Monday, Native American supporters talked about the sacred nature of the rugged landscape and why it's so important to protect. At an event hosted by Utah Diné Bikéyah, reporters and photographers in town for Zinke's visit were given aerial tours of the monument.

Zinke took his own aerial tour of the Bears Ears region in one of three Blackhawk helicopters before a scheduled hike later Monday to the House on Fire ruins near Mule Canyon, inside the monument footprint.

Utah Gov. Gary Herbert is expected at the hike, as well as several staffers from Utah's congressional delegation.

Ecoflight pilot Bruce Gordon, who has been flying 30 years, said he thinks having the "bird's eye" view of a landscape helps to further the conservation discussion.

"We give the land a voice and we try to be objective," he said. "The aerial perspective gives people a better view."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Willie Grayeyes, chairman of the board of Utah Diné Bikéyah, said he hopes Zinke realizes that as Interior secretary he has a "trust responsibility" to Native Americans.

That responsibility, he added, should be part of Zinke's decision on whether the monument stands as Grayeyes hopes.

Diné Bikéyah describes itself on its website as a nonprofit organization that "works toward healing of people and the Earth by supporting indigenous communities in protecting their culturally significant, ancestral lands."

Woody Lee, the legislative district assistant for the Navajo Nation Council, said he hopes Zinke makes time to meet with members of the nation. He said the Bears Ears region "is something we all hold sacred. It's like the U.S. Capitol building that all Americans hold sacred."

Members of Utah's congressional delegation have been united in opposition to Bears Ears' designation by former President Barack Obama late last year. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah led out on the effort that led to President Donald Trump signing an executive order on April 26 to review monument designations going back to 1996.

San Juan County commissioners were also at the airport for Zinke's arrival, which has stirred up residents. This is the second time in less than a year that a secretary of the Interior has visited the region. Last summer, then-Secretary Sally Jewell was here.

"The windup has been pretty intense," said San Juan County Commissioner Phil Lyman, who said it was clear Zinke intended to listen to the variety of viewpoints about the December 2016 designation.

"He's gone above and beyond in that respect," he said. Lyman said the county leaders remain adamantly opposed to the monument.

"In this country we value consent, and this was done without our consent," he said.

The morning brought together a pair of men who were engaged in an amiable discussion over the monument, despite holding polar opposite views.

Mathew Gross, with the Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance, and Matthew Anderson, with the conservative Sutherland Institute, even posed for photos together.

"We may be opposites, but everybody cares about this land," Anderson said.

BACK

29. Bears Ears: Hatch, Utah delegation lead pushback effort

The Spectrum, May 8 / David DeMille

After signing an executive order calling for a review of more than two dozen national monuments, President Donald Trump handed the pen to U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch, crediting the Utah Republican for being a driving force behind the order.

"Believe me, he's tough," Trump said, nodding to Hatch during the April 26 signing ceremony. "He would call me and say, 'You gotta do this.' Is that right, Orrin?"

Two weeks later, Hatch and the rest of Utah's all-Republican congressional delegation were meeting with newly-appointed Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke ahead of his on-site visit to the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante national monuments, Utah's two largest and the two that Hatch calls examples of Washington-ordered "land grabs" that lock out local communities.

The 83-year-old was already a 20-year veteran of the Senate when then-President Bill Clinton signed the Grand Staircase into monument status in 1996, and when he saw Bears Ears leaning the same direction two decades later he said the similarities were obvious.

"Nearly 20 years ago, the Clinton administration blindsided Utah with a massive 1.9-million-acre monument designation in Southern Utah," Hatch said, saying that in both cases a monument designation would go against the will of Utah's elected representatives and local residents.

The debate over those two monuments has made Utah ground zero in what is likely to become a wide-ranging political battle over monument designations, one that most observers expect to end up being fought in the courtroom.

On one side is the contention that Bears Ears, like other western monuments, is among the places most in need of protection, an undulating collection of mountainous terrain rich in cultural significance to native tribes, thousands of archaeological sites, paleontological resources, scenic landscapes and some of the nation's darkest night skies.

A large coalition of tribal leaders, environmentalist groups, archaeologists and others fought for the monument designation.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The monument proposal had the support of six of the seven Navajo chapters in the state, along with representatives from some two dozen other tribes and the National Congress of American Indians, as well as organizations like the Friends of Cedar Mesa and the Utah Diné Bikéyah, a conservation organization led by Native Americans.

"National monuments are designated so they may be preserved for all the people of the United States," said Madison Hayes, content manager for the advocacy group Alliance for a Better Utah. "These are national treasures. Once they are lost and sold off for development and extraction, there is no way to return these beautiful lands to their original state."

But Bears Ears, like the nearby Grand Staircase, is also rich with natural resources that area leaders contend could help prop up poor economies.

When Clinton signed the Grand Staircase into law, it closed ideas of mining coal out of potentially rich beds beneath the Kaiparowits Plateau, where the U.S. Geological Survey had suggested there were some 30 billion tons of minable coal.

Both monuments house what researchers suggest could be rich deposits of gas, oil, uranium and other resources.

Utah officials have long argued that environmental protections could be maintained while allowing for some resource extraction, and most have argued that both monuments ignored the wishes of local leadership.

"Utahns deserve a collaborative land management process that ensures local residents have a seat at the table," said U.S. Rep. Chris Stewart, whose district includes the Grand Staircase monument.

Legal experts suggest Trump would have difficulty unilaterally rescinding a national monument designated by a previous president, since that ability is not spelled out in the Antiquities Act.

But there are arguments that he could amend or shrink the borders of monuments.

Congress has acted in the past to remove monument status and to make changes to existing monuments, and Utah's lawmakers have been among those proposing legislative changes to the 1906 law.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Last year, Hatch and Sen. Mike Lee proposed one measure that would have allowed monument designations to expire if states didn't sign off on them, and then a second bill that proposed exempting Utah from any new monuments. Neither made it to a vote.

Similarly, the Public Lands Initiative, legislation developed by Utah Reps. Rob Bishop and Jason Chaffetz as an alternative to the Bears Ears monument designation, never saw a vote.

But Trump's win on Election Day has raised the hopes of state officials that a Republican administration might take a different look at the monuments.

Utah's back-and-forth with federal agencies over control of federally-controlled lands within its borders goes back decades, reaching a fevered pitch in recent years as state lawmakers propose suing over control of about 31 million acres.

County commissioners, along with county and municipal leadership across the region, Utah Gov. Gary Herbert and other state leaders have pushed for changes to the monument designation.

The Legislature passed a resolution this year demanding the federal government revisit the issue.

BACK

30. San Juan County residents welcome visit from Secretary Zinke

ABC 4 Utah, May 8 | Glen Mills

Interior secretary Ryan Zinke is touring two national monuments, and taking input from local stakeholders.

This is the latest step in a bitter battle over public lands in Utah. Both sides say their way of life is at risk, and they are doing all they can to protect it.

On Main Street in Blanding, Utah sits the JC Hunt Company. Carl and DeeAnn Hunt are the owners. They distribute petroleum to farmers and ranchers in the Four Corners area.

All around their business you will find a strong statement on public lands. They want the Bears Ears National Monument rescinded.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

"We are afraid we will lose those rights to go on the land, and to enjoy the land the way that we have," said DeeAnn Hunt.

The Hunts say the process under the Obama Administration was hijacked, and local voices weren't heard.

"Everybody was against the designation of the monument, and yet that was never taken into consideration. We feel like the monument was a foregone conclusion," said Carl Hunt.

Now opponents are getting a second chance under President Trump's Executive Order calling for a review of the Antiquities Act.

Over the next few days Secretary Zinke will get an up close look at the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase- Escalante monuments, which combine for about 3.2 million acres.

He's also meeting with local stakeholders to get their input on the impact. Even monument supporters are welcoming the visit.

"I'm glad he's coming to educate himself, and also walk the lay of the land, to have a better understanding," said Mark Maryboy, with Utah Dine Bikeyah, and former San Juan County Commissioner.

But, Maryboy says they are ready to file a lawsuit with the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals if President Trump decides to rescind the monument or alter the size.

They say it's about protecting sacred traditions.

"Go baby, go baby drill. That's their philosophy, and we are all about conservation, Mother Earth, protect the land. We believe in climate change," said Maryboy.

The Hunts say they too want to preserve the land. They say it's in their blood, but they say the monument consumes way too much land.

"We've lived here, we love the land, we take care of it. We've been taught as young people to be stewards over the land and to take care of it," said DeeAnn Hunt.

Secretary Zinke is viewing the Bears Ears National Monument by helicopter and horseback on Monday. No decisions will be made during this trip.

BACK

31. Interior Turns Down Meetings With 2 Groups Supporting Utah Monuments

The Morning Consult, May 8 | Jack Fitzpatrick

The Department of the Interior turned down meetings this week with at least two groups supporting national monument designations in Utah, spurring complaints that the Trump administration's review of monuments may be one-sided.

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is in Utah through Wednesday to meet with stakeholders about a review of potential changes to two national monuments in the state. But Interior has not announced any public meetings in the area, though the department is taking written comments online and Zinke has met with some major stakeholders.

Bears Ears National Monument and Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument are among 27 national monuments the administration is considering altering or revoking under an executive action signed by President Donald Trump in April. Designation as a monument limits the number of activities that can take place on the land, such as energy production.

Opponents of the monuments criticized former Presidents Bill Clinton and Barack Obama for creating them without enough public input, using the 1906 Antiquities Act to unilaterally designate the monuments without approval from Congress.

But as Zinke starts a 45-day review of Bears Ears and a 120-day review of the others, monument supporters say he has not engaged enough with the local community.

Interior turned down requests for meetings with Utah Diné Bikéyah, a nonprofit that supports Bears Ears and coordinates with five nearby tribes, Executive Director Gavin Noyes said. The department also declined to meet with some members of the Escalante & Boulder Utah Chamber of Commerce, Vice President Kris Waggoner said.

“We feel like our board members and the elders in the local community have critical knowledge that he [Zinke] needs to understand before he recommends any changes to the monument,” Noyes said in a phone interview Monday. “So we don't quite understand why he hasn't felt it necessary to engage us, but we'll certainly continue trying to get that critical information to him. We had hoped to walk the land with him.”

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Zinke met with the Utah congressional delegation Monday morning, Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) said in a statement. Interior also planned several stops to talk to local press Sunday through Wednesday, but Waggoner said she is not aware of any public meetings at which she could voice her support for the monuments.

Interior did not respond to requests on Monday for details on whom Zinke would meet during his tour.

The Salt Lake Tribune reported that Zinke on Sunday met with the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition, which supports the Bears Ears monument designation.

Noyes said he is concerned Zinke will not spend enough time in the southern half of San Juan County, Utah, an area with a more predominantly Native American population. That southern half of the county is where the most people hope to preserve the land for cultural reasons, he said.

“The people who use Bears Ears daily for cultural purposes, those are all south of where it seems he is going to visit,” Noyes said. “It seems like he’s spending his time primarily in the Anglo [northern] half.”

Bears Ears has also attracted criticism from some local tribal organizations, such as the Utah-based Aneth Chapter of Navajo and the Blue Mountain Diné, an organization that represents Navajos living in San Juan County.

In lieu of meeting in person with Zinke, Noyes said his group still hopes to hold a conference call with him before Zinke finishes his Bears Ears review. Waggoner said she will organize a “party” May 12-14 at a business she owns, where she will set up computers for guests to submit online comments on the monuments review.

BACK

32. Zinke: Monument status may not be best to save sacred land

The Washington Post, May 8 | Michelle L. Price and Brady McCombs, AP

BLANDING, Utah — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said sacred tribal lands he toured Monday in America’s newest and most hotly contested monument should be preserved but he questioned whether the monument designation was the right way to do it.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Zinke's aerial and ground tour of the Bears Ears National Monument was part of a review ordered by President Donald Trump to determine if 27 monuments were properly established.

Zinke spent the day getting familiar with the 1.3-million acre (5,300 square kilometers) swath of southern Utah with red rock plateaus, cliffs and canyons on land considered sacred to tribes.

His tour guide was Utah Gov. Gary Herbert, one of several prominent Republican leaders in the state who oppose Bears Ears National Monument.

Zinke, a Montana Republican, said he wants to make sure Native American culture is preserved but cautioned that not all tribal members share the same opinion about the monument designated by former President Barack Obama near the end of his term.

He spoke before taking a short, winding hike in the afternoon sun with Herbert and other state and local officials to a lookout post above ancient ruins.

"Of course, the legacy and what I've seen should be preserved," Zinke said, "The issue is whether the monument is the right vehicle."

Herbert, U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch and the rest of the all-GOP congressional delegation consider the monument creation by former President Barack Obama an unnecessary layer of federal control that will hurt local economies by closing the area to new energy development. They also say it isn't the best way to protect the land.

In Blanding, with a population of 3,400 people, two large banners read, "#RescindBearsEars," reflecting the popular sentiment among residents.

Bears Ears supporters made their voices heard too. They believe the monument adds vital protections to tribal lands where members perform ceremonies, collect herbs and wood for medicinal and spiritual purposes, and do healing rituals.

Tara Benally, a member of Navajo Nation, was standing just outside the Blanding airport wearing a shirt commemorating the December declaration of Bears Ears National Monument.

"We want it left as is. We have history going through there," said Benally, who lives south of the nearby town of Bluff. "That was basically my mom's playground as she was growing up."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

A group of Bears Ears supporters greeted Zinke when he arrived to the trailhead. One woman asked why he only met with tribal leaders for an hour.

Zinke, who was shaking another supporter's hand, turned around to face the woman and said: "Be nice." The woman responded that she always is.

The monument review is rooted in the belief of Trump and other critics that a law signed by President Theodore Roosevelt allowing presidents to declare monuments has been improperly used to protect wide expanses of lands instead of places with particular historical or archaeological value.

Conservation groups contend that the monument review puts in limbo protections on areas across the country that are home to ancient cliff dwellings, towering Sequoias, deep canyons and ocean habitats where seals, whales and sea turtles roam.

After his arrival Sunday in Salt Lake City, Zinke was met by about 500 protesters who chanted, "Save our monuments, stand with Bears Ears."

He held a closed-door meeting with a coalition of tribal leaders who pushed for the monument then spoke of his admiration for Roosevelt.

Davis Filfred of the Navajo Nation said Monday that the one-hour meeting Sunday wasn't enough time for the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition to make their points to Zinke. Filfred, who was in the meeting, said it seems Zinke is listening more to opponents of the monument than people who want it preserved.

Zinke insisted there is no predetermined outcome of his review, saying he may not recommend the monuments be made smaller or rescinded, and he might even recommend an addition.

The two monuments he's reviewing in Utah are quite large. Created in 1996, Grand Staircase-Escalante is 1.9 million acres (7,700 square kilometers), about the size of Delaware. Bears Ears is smaller at 1.3 million acres.

Zinke has been tasked with making a recommendation on the Bears Ears monument by June 10, about 2½ months before a final report about all the monuments.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Environmental groups have vowed to file lawsuits if Trump attempts to rescind monuments — a move that would be unprecedented.

On the way back from his hike to the ruins, Zinke stopped at the trailhead and spoke with several people on horseback and admired their horses. On Tuesday, Zinke plans to tour more of the Bears Ears area on horseback.

He said his upcoming decision is not just about how the local tribes, county officials or the governor feel about the monument, but it's also about how the entire country feels about it because it's America's public land.

“President Trump, I’m going to tell you, is a great boss. The reason why I think he felt so strongly about this is he feels like sometimes Washington makes these rules and we don’t have a voice,” Zinke said. “He put this in motion to make sure that local communities count. States count. America counts.”

BACK

33. Interior Secretary visits Bears Ears National Monument to decide its fate

Fox 13 News, May 8 / Ben Winslow

BEARS EARS NATIONAL MONUMENT -- Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke hiked past the lines of protesters out into the desert landscape.

Accompanied by Governor Gary Herbert, Congressman Rob Bishop, members of the Utah State Legislature and news reporters, Zinke took in his surroundings.

"It is drop dead gorgeous country, no question about it!" he declared. "Beautiful vistas."

The Secretary of the Interior is here in Utah's most controversial national monument to help decide its fate. He's spending the next couple of days in San Juan and Kane counties as part of a review of national monuments ordered by President Trump.

Zinke is touring Bears Ears National Monument on Monday and Tuesday. He'll then stop by Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument on Wednesday.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The president signed an executive order to review the use of the Antiquities Act, used to create national monuments. Bears Ears was basically the catalyst, having been created by President Obama at the end of his term.

At 1.35 million acres, the newly created national monument outraged Utah political leaders.

"I think there is a reverence for and a desire to be good stewards of the land and I think monuments are more restrictive," said House Speaker Greg Hughes, R-Draper. "Access becomes a lot harder."

Environmental and Native American tribal groups argue the area deserves protection. Filled with ancient petroglyphs and dwelling sites, they argue it is archaeologically rich and culturally sensitive.

"We call it holy places. We have offerings, we have prayer ceremonies done. We have places where our ancestors are buried. This is a sacred place," said Woody Lee, a Navajo Nation Council District Liaison.

San Juan County Commissioner Bruce Adams said locking up so much land in a national monument designation hurts the potential for development and hurts the local economy. He urged President Trump to rescind it.

"I want him to see what the economy and San Juan looks like. I want him to see how the monument might affect school children and see how it might affect the people who live here and work here every day of their life," Adams told FOX 13 as he waited to meet with Zinke.

Speaking to reporters on Monday, Zinke said he was not an advocate for selling public lands (some Utah lawmakers have advocated such a move). Asked by FOX 13 if Bears Ears should be preserved, Zinke replied: "Yes."

"Of course what I've seen should be preserved. The issue is whether the monument is the right vehicle," he said. "Whether it's not the right vehicle, it's public land."

Zinke insisted he is listening to all sides as he makes his recommendation to President Trump. He has 45 days to decide Bears Ears and has asked for public comment online by May 12.

If he recommends rescinding Bears Ears, tribal and environmental groups said they will sue.

"We're going to have to try to do something. I mean, we're not going to take this lying down," said Kenneth Maryboy, the Mexican Water Chapter President of the Navajo Nation.

BACK

34. Interior Secretary visits Bears Ears National Monument to decide its fate

KUTV 2 News, May 8 / Daniel Woodruff

Blanding, Utah — (KUTV) As the sun set over San Juan County Monday evening, Blanding, Utah, was buzzing.

"I'm really happy," Nicole Francom said as she stood with family and friends outside her home, waiting for a glimpse of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's motorcade to pass by.

When he did, Zinke gave them a big wave. Francom and her group yelled "thank you" and "Trump this monument!"

"I feel like everyone in Blanding just got so much hope back," Francom said.

She feel this way because Zinke is touring the 1.3-million acre Bears Ears National Monument in southeastern Utah. He is tasked with making a recommendation about what to do with the newly designated monument to President Trump by June.

Many in Blanding want the monument gone.

"Rescind it," said Wendy Black, "and then come back and do it the right way -- with the people, not against us."

Zinke said he hasn't made a decision yet.

"I'm actually optimistic at the end of the day we'll make a recommendation that I think will be best for our country," he told reporters Monday afternoon before he and a group of local and state elected officials hiked in to see some ancient Native American ruins. "We want to make sure that everyone's voice is heard."

But some feel that isn't happening.

"It seems like he's trying to lean his ear the other way," said Kenneth Maryboy, a member of the Navajo nation.

He and other native Americans say the monument protects their sacred lands. They want it left as it is.

"The intent is to leave it as a monument to where it will be for all people," said Woody Lee. "Not only natives, but for all people from now until eternity."

BACK

35. Interior secretary tours Bears Ears, hotly contested monument in Utah

PBS Newshour, May 8 | Michelle L. Price and Brady McCombs, AP

BLANDING, Utah — U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke took an aerial tour Monday of one of America's newest and most hotly contested monuments — one of 27 he's been ordered to review by President Donald Trump to determine if they were properly established.

Zinke's tour guide for the helicopter ride over the 1.3-million acre (5,300 square kilometers) swath of southern Utah with red rock plateaus, cliffs and canyons was Gov. Gary Herbert, one of several prominent Republican leaders in the state who oppose Bears Ears National Monument.

Herbert, U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch and the rest of the all-GOP congressional delegation consider the monument creation by former President Barack Obama an unnecessary layer of federal control that will hurt local economies by closing the area to new energy development. They also say it isn't the best way to protect the land.

"The only way to truly learn about and understand a place is with boots on the ground," Zinke posted to Twitter after landing in Blanding for the second day of his four-day trip to see Bears Ears and the Grand Staircase-Escalante.

Zinke and Herbert were expected to hold a news conference later in the day before taking a hike to one of the ancient ruins within the Bears Ears site.

The monument review is rooted in the belief of Trump and other critics that a law signed by President Theodore Roosevelt allowing presidents to declare monuments has been improperly

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

used to protect wide expanses of lands instead of places with particular historical or archaeological value.

Conservation groups contend that the monument review puts in limbo protections on areas that are home to ancient cliff dwellings, towering Sequoias, deep canyons and ocean habitats where seals, whales and sea turtles roam.

In Blanding, with a population of 3,400 people, two large banners read, “#RescindBearsEars,” reflecting the popular sentiment among residents.

Those who want Zinke to leave Bears Ears alone to preserve lands considered sacred by tribes made their voices heard, too. Tara Benally, a member of Navajo Nation, was standing just outside the Blanding airport wearing a shirt commemorating the December declaration of Bears Ears National Monument.

“We want it left as is. We have history going through there,” said Benally, who lives in the nearby town of Bluff. “That was basically my mom’s playground as she was growing up.”

After his arrival Sunday in Salt Lake City, Zinke was met by about 500 protesters who chanted, “Save our monuments, stand with Bears Ears.”

He held a closed-door meeting with a coalition of tribal leaders who pushed for the monument then spoke of his admiration for Roosevelt,

Zinke, a Montana Republican, said “it is undisputed the monuments have been an effective tool to save, preserve our greatest cultural treasures.”

He insisted there is no predetermined outcome of his review, saying he may not recommend the monuments be made smaller or rescinded, and he might even recommend an addition.

Zinke has been tasked with making a recommendation on the Bears Ears monument by June 10, about 2½ months before a final report about all the monuments.

“I’m coming in this thing as a Montanan, a former congressman and now the secretary of the Interior without any predispositions of outcome,” Zinke said. “I want to make sure that the public has a voice, that the elected officials have a voice.”

The two monuments he's reviewing in Utah are quite large. Created in 1996, Grand Staircase-Escalante is 1.9 million acres (7,700 square kilometers), about the size of Delaware. Bears Ears is a bit smaller at 1.3 million acres.

Environmental groups have vowed to file lawsuits if Trump attempts to rescind monuments — a move that would be unprecedented.

On Tuesday, Zinke plans to tour the Bears Ears area on horseback.

"I think, sometimes, the best way to see things is slow and easy with a horse," Zinke said, referring to his commute ride through the streets of Washington, D.C., on his first day as Interior secretary.

BACK

36. Zinke flies over Bears Ears as critics urge him to 'Make San Juan County Great Again' and rescind monument

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 8 | Brian Maffly

Blanding • When Hank Stevens' family hunted under Bears Ears Buttes, they always honored the deer whose life they had taken and the place that nurtured it.

"We respect the animal where it dropped," said the Navajo tribal leader Monday while flying over the new Bears Ears National Monument in southeastern Utah.

"We do a little ritual where we leave the intestine, testicles and the antlers there. We only take the meat and the buck hide."

Below, sinuous canyons fell away from the juniper-topped mesas surrounding Bears Ears Buttes, the 1.35-million-acre monument's namesake and home to tens of thousands of sites left by ancestral Puebloans.

The sky view was also enjoyed Monday by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke who is in Utah this week.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Under orders from President Donald Trump, Zinke is reviewing 27 large national monuments designated since 1996, starting with Bears Ears, which former President Barack Obama designated at the request of five tribes with ancestral ties to these public lands.

The designation has sparked an intense backlash from Utah's political leaders denouncing it as "federal overreach" and a "land grab."

Joined by an entourage composed entirely of anti-monument politicians, Zinke flew over the landscape aboard three Army Black Hawk helicopters and later hiked to Butler Wash, a popular destination overlooking cliff dwellings left by ancient American Indians.

"It's been a while since I flew in a Black Hawk without people shooting at me," said Zinke in joking reference to his stint as a Navy Seal commander.

"The trip today verified it is drop-dead gorgeous country. No question about it," Zinke told reporters gathered Monday at the Butler Wash trailhead. "We want to make sure everyone's voice is heard. A lot of the anger out there in our country is local communities and states don't feel like they had a voice. Washington has done things that seem heavy handed without coordination."

Zinke's remarks echoed criticism of the monument designation leveled by Utah's top political leaders, including Gov. Gary Herbert, who joined the hike.

"We know you are going to take a good look at this with an open mind and unbiased attitude, and I know your challenge is to get some recommendations on what to do to bring us together and resolve some of these conflicts," Herbert told Zinke.

But many pro-monument Navajo, including Stevens, complain that they are being excluded from the discussion.

President of the Navajo Mountain tribal chapter, Stevens was among several members of Utah Dine Bikeyah, the grass-roots Navajo nonprofit that has long lobbied to conserve what it considers a sacred landscape, gathered at the Blanding Airport on Monday morning, hoping for a word with Zinke.

The new secretary, who has earned a reputation for respecting tribal interests as a Montana politician, gathered inside with state and local leaders who want Trump to rescind the monument.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Bikeyah board Chairman Willie Grayeyes tried to enter but was barred by Utah Highway Patrol troopers.

"We are asking for equal time and it's not happening," said group member Woody Lee. "It happens all the time."

On Sunday in Salt Lake City, Zinke met with tribal leaders who support the monument, but his staff declined a formal meeting request submitted by Utah Dine Bikeyah. On the street outside the Bureau of Land Management headquarters, hundreds of Bears Ears supporters clamored for equal hearing and respect for tribal sovereignty.

Ute, Navajo and Puebloan tribal leaders are dismayed that the first national monument created at the request of American Indians could become the first undone by a succeeding president. But undoing or reducing the monument would not mean opening Bears Ears to extraction, Zinke said.

"Yes, of course the legacy and what I've seen should be preserved. The issue is whether the monument is the right vehicle," said Zinke, who was trained as a geologist. "What vehicle of public land is appropriate to preserve the cultural identity, to make sure the tribes have a voice and make sure you preserve the traditions of hunting and fishing and public access?"

He said he is concerned about how monument rules would restrict land uses.

"If you live in the county, making a living is a good thing, too," he said. "Having your access limited is a problem."

Zinke is scheduled to continue his tour Tuesday with a ride through Bears Ears Buttes on a towering 17-hand horse provided by San Juan County Commissioner Bruce Adams.

He will conclude his tour Wednesday in Kanab, where he will review the 1.9-million-acre Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, designated 20 years ago by President Bill Clinton.

At the Blanding airport Monday, Adams, a Monticello rancher, passed around white cowboy hats emblazoned with the Trumpian slogan: "Make San Juan County Great Again."

"By getting rid of this layer of this monument, we can get back to the greatness of where we were," Adams said.

He and other monument critics fear restrictions that come with monument status on the 1.35 million acres west of Blanding will thwart economic development, impede public access and undermine local schools by disrupting possible revenue sources.

On Monday, local monument opponents, including American Indians, presented their case for erasing the monument at the Utah State University Blanding campus and later at a park, where Zinke briefly joined them.

"We are concerned by the divisiveness created in our county among the people," Adams said. "We want to see the people unified and want to see them brought together and work together to make San Juan County great."

But Lee, the Bikeyah member, had a different take on Adams' idea of greatness.

"It's great as long as Indians don't say anything," Lee said.

BACK

37. Tribal leaders demand apology from Hatch after he said they 'don't fully understand' Bears Ears implications

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 8 / Mariah Noble

After Sen. Orrin Hatch said Sunday that American Indians "don't fully understand" what they would lose if Bears Ears is "made clearly into a monument," tribal leaders have called his comments offensive, and they demand an apology.

Willie Grayeyes, chairman of the pro-monument Utah Dine Bikeyah board, said in a written statement Monday that it's "offensive" to believe "that Native Americans do not have a will of their own, or if they do take a position that their position is influenced by a non-native person."

American Indians "understand the special and sacred landscapes at Bears Ears National Monument better than anyone," Grayeyes said, and "have stewarded these landscapes for thousands of years." He said American Indians are "very pleased with the language used in the proclamation that protects the things we care about and gives us a voice in our future."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Hatch "does not understand what he is working so hard to take away," Grayeyes said. "If he would just listen to us, he would stop fighting against what we stand for because it is not a threat to him or anyone else," Grayeyes said.

The Utah League of Native American Voters called Hatch's comments "blatantly racist, misinformed and condescending [in] tone."

Hatch also said Sunday that American Indians are "manipulated sometimes by people" and that the "far left" has further designs on the 1.35 million acres in southeastern Utah protected by President Barack Obama on Dec. 28.

"The Indians, they don't fully understand that a lot of the things that they currently take for granted on those lands, they won't be able to do if it's made clearly into a monument or a wilderness," Hatch said.

BACK

38. Boyd Matheson: The Navy SEAL and the Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 9 / Boyd Matheson

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, a former Navy SEAL commander, is touring Utah this week in response to President Donald Trump's executive order calling for a review of national monument designations over the past 21 years. There will be many who want to get in the secretary's ear as he visits the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante areas. I hope he can shun and shut out the strident and vitriolic voices in order to truly listen to and hear all the parties who have something constructive to say.

Zinke will need to rely on the training and leadership lessons of the SEAL teams he once led to navigate an issue that is deep and divisive, complex and infested with confusing rhetoric and an abundance of loud voices. Of late, the national monument issue has become filled with fictional claims and fraught with false choices. SEAL team members are known for their ability to drop into hostile environments, assess the situation and then act in the best interest of the country. Those skills will be priceless for his time here in Utah.

I hope the secretary brought his Navy SEAL Trident badge with him to remind him of what to do and how to act in dangerous or high-stakes circumstances. The Trident badge is unique in the military. Normally, the eagle is placed on military decorations with its head held high. On the Navy SEAL badge, however, the eagle's head is lowered to remind each SEAL team member that humility is the true measure of a warrior's strength. Zinke understands that humility is not weakness and there is real power in listening.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

I remember attending a dinner meeting for new members of Congress when Zinke was a newly elected congressman from Montana. He arrived with many of the other freshmen, but it was easy to tell he was different from his new congressional colleagues. He had a quiet confidence about him. I sensed he knew exactly why he was there and what his mission was going to be as a representative. I watched him throughout the evening. Many of the other people in the room seemed obsessed with getting a word in, making a point, sounding smart, dropping names and talking about how they won their elections. Zinke didn't just listen; he listened intently and was one of only two people in the room taking notes. He said little, which actually spoke volumes about him as a leader. He asked a lot of questions instead of making statements. When he finally commented on an issue, it was clearly thought out and it concluded with a call to action.

I suspect that everyone, on all sides of the Bears Ears issue, will walk away feeling heard and understood this week.

I hope the secretary will lead the discussion this week to issues such as: 1. What do the people whose lives and livelihoods are dependent upon the Bears Ears area think about the monument designation? 2. Does the Antiquities Act's "smallest area possible" necessary to preserve and protect antiquities really require 1.3 million acres? 3. How multiple use and local input can transcend the all-or-nothing false choices of conserving land or unchecked commercialization. (There really won't be an oil rig on top of Bears Ears or under Delicate Arch.) 4. How the Native American tribes who live in San Juan County (not national tribal groups) and the other local citizens (not from the Wasatch Front or the rest of the nation) feel about the monument designation and its impact on their lives and futures. 5. Is a presidential declaration the right process for national monuments? Local and state input is critical to ensuring that national monuments preserve antiquities and empower local communities.

I believe what happens in Utah this week will lead to an important dialogue across the country and in Congress about the president, of either party, having the power to declare such vast monuments. Trump's executive order could be a rarity in that it actually reduces or limits executive branch power. That would be a welcome change. Restoring power to the people's representatives and ultimately to the people is vital for the people of Utah, and especially those in San Juan County.

Zinke's visit is important to Utah and to the nation. His Navy SEALs training will come in most handy. As he hears from big business, big government and big environmental groups, I hope he also remembers his Navy SEAL ethos to "humbly serve as a guardian to my fellow Americans, always ready to defend those who are unable to defend themselves."

And then I hope he remembers that a wealthy man's playground should never come at the expense of a working man's dream.

Boyd C. Matheson is president of Sutherland Institute, a conservative think tank that advocates for a free market economy, civil society and community-driven solutions.

BACK

39. The public is invited to comment as Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke tours monuments Utah politicians want abolished or shrunk

The National Geographic, May 9 / Laura Parker

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is touring a pair of controversial national monuments in Utah on horseback this week at the behest of President Trump, who is reconsidering their merits. Zinke's four-day visit will take in Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante in southern Utah, the main targets in a review of 27 large monuments Trump ordered last month. The president assigned Zinke to examine whether his predecessors over-stepped their authority and made these monuments too large or ignored objections from the public.

The monuments under review are those created since 1996 by Presidents Clinton, Bush, and Obama. All but one are at least 100,000 acres in size. Bears Ears, which totals 1.35 million acres, was created by Obama in the final days of his presidency. The 1.7-million-acre Grand Staircase was designated by Clinton in 1996.

Utah lawmakers have been steamed for more than two decades about the creation of the Grand Staircase, which essentially locked up Utah's largest coal seam. They want the monument's size to be reduced so the coal can be mined. They also have been pushing to have Bear Ears revoked since Obama created it.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

A public comment period begins May 12. Information about submitting comments online or by mail can be found at the Interior Department's website here.

The Antiquities Act, passed by Congress and signed into law by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1906, gives the president broad authority to set aside federal land for protection as national monuments. No president has ever revoked any monuments named by his predecessors; the question of whether a president can revoke a national monument has never been tested in court. The law does not require presidential consultation with anyone prior to creating a new monument. The Supreme Court dealt with the issue of size when it upheld Roosevelt's designation of the Grand Canyon National Monument in 1908.

Congress has the authority to abolish monuments outright, but it rarely does largely because of monuments' popularity with the public. More often, Congress has resized monuments, including Grand Staircase.

In addition to the Utah monuments, two others that have drawn fire are on Trump's list:

The creation of the 4,913-square-mile Northeast Canyons and Seamounts Marine National Monuments in the Atlantic Ocean off New England has been challenged in court by five commercial fishing organizations, in part because commercial fishing is now prohibited within the monument's boundaries. And, the 87,560-acre Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument in Maine, also created by Obama, was added to the list after Gov. Paul LePage complained that there had not been adequate public comment before its designation. It is the only monument under review smaller than 100,000 acres.

Zinke, a Republican and fifth generation Montanan who touts his western heritage, rode horseback to the Interior Department on his first day on the job. A Republican, he served as Montana's lone congressman before Trump tapped him for Interior and says his voting record reflects a philosophy about public lands that aligns with Roosevelt's legacy as the conservation president.

Zinke resigned as a delegate to the Republican National Convention last summer because he disagreed with a party platform plank that endorsed the transfer of public lands to the states.

The Interior Department "is the steward of America's greatest treasures and the manager of one-fifth of our land," Zinke said in a statement. "Part of being a good steward is being a good neighbor and listening to the American people who we represent."

He said the review “finally gives voice to local communities and states” and added “there is no pre-determined outcome on any monument.”

Details about the monuments under review are from presidential proclamations published in the Federal Register as well as Interior Department websites for each of the monuments.

BACK

40. The Case for the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument

The Center for American Progress, May 9 | Jenny Rowland

President Donald Trump’s national monuments executive order is an attack on American national parks, public lands, and oceans. One of its specific targets is the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument in Utah.

Although some Utah politicians argue that this monument has had a negative impact on the surrounding area, the reality on the ground is quite different: By a margin of better than 2 to 1, Utahns believe that the monument’s designation was good for their state. Even the Utah Office of Tourism cites the monument as one of its “most visited parks” and boasts about its vast size and “phenomenal” allure. The truth is that Grand Staircase-Escalante is valuable. It deserves its status as a national monument for a multitude of reasons and should not be targeted by Trump’s misguided attempts to sell out U.S. public lands.

This column details just some of the reasons why Grand Staircase-Escalante should remain protected as a national monument.

The local economy is thriving because of the monument

- Rural Western counties with more protected public lands, including national monuments, have faster-growing populations, employment rates, and personal incomes than those with less protected land. In fact, since Grand Staircase-Escalante’s designation in 1996, per capita incomes have risen 28 percent and employment has risen 40 percent in the communities adjacent to the national monument. While such statistics do not prove causation, they do disprove the idea that the national monument prevented economic growth.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

- The vice president of the Escalante Chamber of Commerce has attested to the region's economic success following designation, noting that the tourism industry has continued to grow and that local businesses are employing more people than ever.
- Arguments that the monument has hurt ranchers by limiting grazing are untrue. Grazing within the monument has remained virtually unchanged since the designation. In fact, it has shrunk by less than 0.5 percent.

Grand Staircase-Escalante is full of antiquities and areas of scientific and archeological interest

- The monument's scientific, natural, and cultural value, as well as its more than 20,000 archeological sites, deserved protection when the monument was designated—and still do today. The monument's Bureau of Land Management, or BLM, webpage notes that its "size, resources, and remote character provide extraordinary opportunities for geologists, paleontologists, archeologists, historians, and biologists in scientific research, education, and exploration." A BLM archeologist has also emphasized that the "wholeness" of the archeological record is what makes the area unique.
- The monument has been called a dinosaur "Shangri-La" due to its high volume of well-preserved fossils from the late Cretaceous Period. Twenty-one never-before-seen dinosaurs have been discovered in the monument since its designation.
- Grand Staircase-Escalante is in the top 4 percent of similarly sized places in the West for ecological intactness and in the top 7 percent for ecological connectivity and night sky darkness—higher than the Grand Canyon or Yellowstone national parks. These indicators are necessary for high biodiversity and landscape-level conservation.

The courts have ruled that there is no question as to the monument's legality under the Antiquities Act

- In 2004, a federal judge ruled that former President Bill Clinton was well within his legal authority in designating the monument. The judge rejected claims made by a group of Utah counties that the size of the monument exceeded what is allowed under the Antiquities Act.

Congress has confirmed and clarified the boundaries of the monument

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

- At its creation, Grand Staircase-Escalante encompassed small pockets of land that were owned by the Utah School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration. An agreement was reached with the federal government in which state officials swapped the inholdings for more resource-rich federal land elsewhere in the state. In addition to receiving a $50 million payment upon completion of the deal, the lands that the state government acquired in the exchange have generated more than $310 million for Utah's public schools, counties, and other institutions.
- Importantly, the land exchange passed through Congress in 1998, codifying the new boundaries into law.

The monument holds oil, gas, and coal resources, raising questions about the motivations of those who want to roll back protections

- President Trump's executive order is part of a larger effort to sell off the nation's public lands to the highest bidder. Industry groups, including the American Petroleum Institute and the Western Energy Alliance, have already expressed interest in drilling in Utah's national monuments. Including Grand Staircase-Escalante in the review is yet another nod to the power of the fossil fuel industry to influence the administration's actions.
- The discussion on coal mining in the monument was settled 18 years ago, when the coal company that had leases within the monument's boundaries was compensated with a generous sum of $14 million. At a time when most major coal companies have been in and out of bankruptcy and the price of coal has declined to around $40 per ton, reversing protections on Grand Staircase-Escalante to appease special interests would not make economic sense. But it would sacrifice the rural economic gains driven by protection of natural and cultural heritage.

Conclusion

The Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument is one of many national treasures under attack by the Trump administration. Any attempt by President Trump to eliminate or alter the monument would undermine the cultural and natural resources it protects.

Jenny Rowland is the Research and Advocacy Manager for the Public Lands Project at the Center for American Progress.

BACK

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

41. NATIONAL MONUMENTS: Standing in Bears Ears, Zinke says protections may change

E & E News, May 9 | Jennifer Yachnin,

BLANDING, Utah — Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke questioned yesterday whether a monument designation is the "right vehicle" to protect tracts in southern Utah, suggesting that other public lands categories could be more appropriate for the 1.35-million-acre Bears Ears National Monument.

Zinke made the remarks in the midst of his visit to the Beehive State this week, as he meets with local officials in the course of a review of dozens of national monuments. He also drew criticism from some monument supporters over the lack of a public forum and for allegedly refusing to meet with them.

Following an aerial tour of the Bears Ears site with Utah Gov. Gary Herbert (R), Zinke spoke with reporters at the Butler Wash, a site inside the monument several miles south of the city of Blanding.

"Of course the legacy of what I've seen should be preserved," Zinke said. "The issue is whether the monument is the right vehicle or if it's not the right vehicle. It is public land. It was public land before the monument. It'll be public land after the monument."

Zinke added that he must recommend the "appropriate" type of public land to preserve the area's "cultural identity," as well as access for hunting and fishing.

"How best do we look at the future of what it should be?" Zinke asked. He pointed to the current mix of lands in the monument, which is managed by both the Bureau of Land Management and the Forest Service.

Under President Trump's executive order mandating the review, Zinke has until June 10 to issue an interim report on Bears Ears and until late August to issue his recommendations for all monuments under review.

But he suggested the interim report could be simply that, and specific changes to Bears Ears may not be determined by next month.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

"Now, my recommendation doesn't have to be so detailed that it's the final solution," Zinke said, adding that he wanted to speak to additional archaeologists, state officials and others. "Let's get the information."

Trump's order charged Zinke with making recommendations on whether to reduce or eliminate some monuments created since 1996 that include more than 100,000 acres, or suggesting changes to management plans for those sites.

The Interior Department announced Friday it will examine 27 monuments, including two in Utah, the Bears Ears site created by President Obama and the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument designated by President Clinton.

Protesters

Zinke has faced criticism during his visit from members of the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition — which represents the Hopi, Navajo, Ute Indian Tribe, Ute Mountain Ute and Zuni — who complained he did not spend sufficient time with the group, as well as from individuals who assert he has focused his time with opponents of the monument, including House Natural Resources Chairman Rob Bishop (R-Utah) and San Juan County commissioners.

In addition to those officials, Zinke was joined yesterday by Herbert, Utah House Speaker Greg Hughes (R) and other local officials who did not speak publicly.

Zinke brushed back questions over a lack of public forums during his visit to the state, arguing that Interior's decision to create a public comment forum for the monuments review on the agency's website will allow more individual voices to be heard.

But proponents of the monument, including the nonprofit Utah Diné Bikéyah and members of the Escalante & Boulder Utah Chamber of Commerce, said Zinke had rejected their requests for meetings.

"We are concerned and worried that he's not listening to the tribes," said Cassandra Begay, who serves as the tribal liaison on the board of the Salt Lake City-based Peaceful Advocates for Native Dialogue & Organizing Support.

Begay, who grew up in White Mesa in San Juan County, recalled gathering willow in what is now the Bears Ears monument to make Navajo baskets with her grandmother.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

"This is land we see as having a pulse: a living being," said Begay, one of a few dozen protesters who gathered at Butler Wash to encourage Zinke to retain the monument.

Begay later faced off with Zinke as she shouted questions at the secretary about whether he planned to meet again with the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition.

"Sir, is there a reason why you're not listening to them more?" Begay shouted in a video she provided to reporters of the exchange. When the former Montana House lawmaker did not respond, she continued: "Zinke, are you going to visit with the tribes more?"

Zinke then turned and wagged a finger at the 31-year-old Begay and forcefully said: "Be nice."

She responded: "I'm so nice." Zinke continued: "Be nice. Don't be rude."

Legal fight

Bishop, who accompanied Zinke to the monument yesterday, praised the secretary's visit to his state.

"They're doing this the right way," said Bishop, who backed a legislative alternative to the Bears Ears designation known as the Utah Public Lands Initiative.

Bishop criticized former Obama administration Interior Secretary Sally Jewell for what he saw as shifting responsibility for the monument designation to the White House.

"This time, the White House told the secretary of Interior to be involved with it. That's exactly what should be done," Bishop said.

But whether the Trump administration can rescind the Bears Ears monument without congressional action remains to be seen.

While the conservative Pacific Legal Foundation and the American Enterprise Institute have asserted the president has inherent powers to alter decisions made under the Antiquities Act of 1906, legal scholars elsewhere suggest commanders in chief are limited to designating monuments (E&E News PM, March 29).

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Although past presidents have reduced the size of monuments — notably the then-Mount Olympus National Monument and Grand Canyon II National Monument — those decisions were never challenged in court.

While Zinke is scheduled to spend another day focusing on Bears Ears before moving on to the Grand Staircase-Escalante monument near Kanab tomorrow, he acknowledged yesterday that he will not be visiting every monument facing a review.

"I've got 27 monuments, and not all the monuments, quite frankly, are controversial," he said.

'Holding pattern'

In the meantime, key decisions on management of the monument remain in limbo.

Bureau of Land Management Utah State Director Ed Roberson, who accompanied Zinke and other officials on a short hike to historic cliff dwellings near Butler Wash, said the agency has yet to recruit a Monument Advisory Committee needed to proceed with planning.

"We're in that holding pattern," he said.

Under the proclamation establishing the Bears Ears monument, both a Bears Ears Commission representing tribal leaders and a 12-member MAC will collaborate on the management plan.

While the Bears Ears Commission announced its members in March, membership of the MAC remains undecided. Moreover, the Interior Department issued a temporary freeze on its more than 200 advisory panels through at least September (Greenwire, May 5).

In the meantime, Roberson said BLM is proceeding with some decisions on the site, such as debating artwork to be featured on expected signage. Images could include the House on Fire ruin located in the monument.

BACK

42. The Latest: Utah Rancher Tells Zinke Monument Unnecessary

US News, May 9 | The Associated Press

MONTICELLO, UTAH - Fifth-generation Utah rancher Bruce Adams has enjoyed a prime seat next to U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke this week as he reviews a national monument created on lands that Adams' ancestors helped settle in 1879.

Adams, a county commissioner who opposes the monument, sat next to Zinke on a helicopter ride Monday and narrated the landscape of the Bears Ears National Monument. On Tuesday morning, Adams was scheduled to saddle up horses for Zinke's ride in the monument, one of 27 that President Donald Trump ordered Zinke to review to determine if they were properly established.

Adams gave Zinke a cowboy hat bearing the phrase "Make San Juan County Great Again" and delivered a clear message: The national monument designation is unnecessary and could hurt our ability to make a living off grazing and agriculture while taking away trust fund revenue for public schools.

"A monument is an overlay of protections that are already there. And so it becomes about control," Adams said. "Not only control of the land, but control of the people that are living there and trying to make a living on the land."

Echoing a common refrain from many locals in this southeastern corner of Utah, Adams said he and the locals cherish and take care of the vast expanse of tribal lands, canyons and plateaus where people hunt, fish and go camping. In Blanding, with a population of 3,400 people, banners are up around town that say "#RescindBearsEars."

"Let us just live our lives here in San Juan County," Adams said. "We're respectful people."

Zinke is getting an earful from locals and Utah's top Republican leaders who think President Barack Obama went too far in designating Bears Ears National Monument. They hope to persuade the administration to reverse the decision or at least downsize the 1.3 million acre (5,300 square kilometers) monument.

Supporters of the monument are making their voices heard, too, to let Zinke know that they worked behind the scenes for years to get protections from sacred tribal lands home to an estimated 100,000 archaeological sites, including ancient cliff dwellings. Tribal members visit the area to perform ceremonies, collect herbs and wood for medicinal and spiritual purposes and do healing rituals.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

They offer a counterpoint to Adams, suggesting the monument will help the economy by bringing more visitors who will spend money at hotels and restaurants. They point out that the monument designation still allows grazing, hiking, hunting and fishing.

Bears Ears supporters have greeted Zinke throughout his trip. After his arrival Sunday in Salt Lake City, Zinke was met by about 500 protesters who chanted, "Save our monuments, stand with Bears Ears."

In Bears Ears on Monday, supporters stood with signs as he arrived to take a hike to an ancient ruin. One woman asked why he only met with tribal leaders for an hour. Zinke, who was shaking another supporter's hand, turned around to face the woman and said: "Be nice." The woman responded that she always is.

Zinke has insisted there is no predetermined outcome of his review, rooted in the belief of Trump and other critics that a law signed by President Theodore Roosevelt allowing presidents to declare monuments has been improperly used to protect wide expanses of lands instead of places with particular historical or archaeological value.

Zinke said Monday that it's clear that sacred tribal lands in Bears Ears should be preserved, but openly questioned if a monument is the right way. He is due to make a recommendation about Bears Ears by June 10 and issue a final report on all monuments about 2½ months later.

Conservation groups contend that the monument review puts in limbo protections on areas across the country that are home to ancient cliff dwellings, towering Sequoias, deep canyons and ocean habitats where seals, whales and sea turtles roam.

Environmental groups have vowed to file lawsuits if Trump attempts to rescind monuments — a move that would be unprecedented.

On Wednesday, Zinke is set to head west and visit the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, created in 1996. It is the oldest monument on the list of those to be reviewed.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Zinke has said multiple times that he wants to hear from locals and from different points of view — including from Native Americans who may not be in lockstep with a coalition of five tribes that pushed for the monument.

"A lot of the anger that is out there in our country is that local communities and states just don't feel like they've had a voice," Zinke, a Montana Republican, said.

BACK

43. Executive Order gives ranchers hope

Livestock News, May 9 | Karin Schiley

The signing of a recent executive order by the president is giving ranchers hope that the administration is taking steps to reverse what some consider governmental land-grabs throughout history.

The Executive Order for a Review of Designation under the Antiquities Act of the Department of the Interior signed by President Trump on April 26 calls for the Department of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to review the monument designations made under the Antiquities Act by previous presidents.

"The Antiquities Act does not give the federal government unlimited power to lock up millions of acres of land and water, and it's time we ended this abusive practice," said President Trump at the signing.

"That's why today I am signing this order and directing Secretary Zinke to end the abuses and return control to the people—the people of Utah, the people of all of the states, the people of the United States," Trump further declared.

The Antiquities Act of 1906 grants the President of the United States the authority, through a presidential proclamation, to create national monuments on public lands. The executive order asks the Department of Interior to review monument designations made under the Antiquities Act since 1996 that include 100,000 acres or more. To date, more than 80 natural areas have been set aside as park or preservation lands, including nearly 137 million acres of public lands.

"The Antiquities Act was meant to preserve objects of antiquity—sites, objects, not thousands of acres of sagebrush grassland," said Dr. Angus McIntosh, the executive director of the Range

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Allotment Owner's Association. The association represents the 22,000 ranchers who graze on public land allotments, many of whom have been impacted when a monument designation restricted or cut off their grazing rights completely.

"The attempt to propose designations by these federal bureaucrats has excluded cattle from grazing allotments, closed roads and launched a full-out assault on private landowner rights," said McIntosh.

The National Cattlemen's Beef Association believes that this a good first step but that more legislation is needed for states to gain control over monument designations in the future.

In a press release, NCBA President Craig Uden said, "The Executive Order is an important first step to reining in past designations that were pushed through without local input. However, in order to bring the Act back to its original intent, Congress must act. Senator Murkowski's bill S. 33 Improved National Monument Designation Process Act would require Congressional approval of new designation, taking power away from the Administration and placing back into the hands of those most impacted."

Ethan Lane, Executive Director of the Public Lands Council agrees that the order is a measured first step in a political process that has been needed all along. "One of the most important aspects of this is that the president has asked Secretary Zinke to come back to him with congressional recommendations. What President Trump has said is 'Give me some ideas on how to fix it.'—that is incredibly refreshing."

While many of those impacted by previous monument designations may be hoping that the executive order means that those monument designations will be quickly rescinded, Lane says that the review process will take some time and patience along the way. Staffing issues, such as a new director of the BLM, must be addressed before the review process can begin.

Then, after each monument designation has been reviewed and reported back to the president, there is the legality regarding the complete rescinding of any monument designations is still under question.

"We believe that the monuments can be rescinded but there is some legal debate about that," said Lane. "Changing the boundaries of the monument designations may be simpler. You can still protect Bear's Ears with out taking a million acres around it."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

McIntosh believes the review needs to be taken a step further to include all prior landowner rights. "Most of these national monument designations have included up to almost 2 million acres of land without any consideration that there is private land included inside the boundaries of these designations," said McIntosh.

"There needs to be a review and report to congress on the prior rights that exist on these lands on why these designations should not be allowed to stand."

The news that rights are being put back into the hands of the states and the people residing in them gives western ranchers, who feel like they have been fighting a losing battle, hope that things can turn around in the future.

David Johnson, an Arizona rancher who has had his share of struggles dealing with the federal land management system, believes things may be finally turning in private landowners favor.

"We don't know what's going to happen but it does give us a little bit of hope," said Johnson. "The last years, we felt like we were doomed. They just kept designating more land and it felt like it was never going to change. This does give us a little hope."

Several years ago, Johnson lost his job when a federal park expansion cancelled the 200 head grazing permit of his employer. In more recent years, Johnson has watched federal land expansion swallow more and more land where he ranches in an area called the "Arizona strip."

While they do have hope for the future, the relationship between federal land employees and local private landowners has been strained for so long it will take a change in the attitude of the entire system to improve the existing climate.

"There is a difference between policing the land and managing the land. Federal employees have stopped people here and held them at gunpoint until they can get a law enforcement officer to write a ticket," said Johnson. It's left many with bitter taste that they have a hard time forgetting.

Still, the recent executive order is giving Johnson and other ranchers a reason to believe that their voices may finally be heard.

"The ones making the decisions are not from this area. None of us has had any say in what happens. Maybe things can start going in the other direction now."

BACK

44. NATIONAL MONUMENTS: Bears Ears won't become a national park — Zinke

E & E News, May 9 | Jennifer Yachnin

MONTICELLO, Utah — Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke today ruled out the possibility that he will recommend converting Bears Ears National Monument into a national park but said he remained open to all other options for the 1.35 million acres of public lands.

In a press conference at the Nature Conservancy's Dugout Ranch — which sits inside the monument's boundaries — Zinke said he would not endorse changing any or all of the Bears Ears site to a national park, something that would require congressional action.

"A national park has some distractors on it," Zinke said, although he did not offer specific details. "I don't think a national park is on the table."

According to the Congressional Research Service, about half of the existing national parks began as national monuments before being converted by Congress.

He added that he remains open to designations including a national conservation and recreation area.

"The rest of it is on the table. Right now, I'm still in the listening mode on it," Zinke said.

The former Montana House lawmaker is visiting southern Utah this week as he undertakes a review of dozens of national monuments, including a specific focus on Bears Ears, which was created by President Obama in his final weeks in office.

Zinke suggested yesterday that a national monument status might not be the "right vehicle" to protect the Bears Ears area and said he could recommend alternative statutes when he is due to submit an interim report to President Trump on June 10 (Greenwire, May 9).

Trump signed an executive order last month requiring the Interior Department to review all monuments created since 1996 that contain more than 100,000 acres of land, and to issue recommendations on whether those sites should be eliminated or reduced, or if there should be changes to their respective management plans.

Utah Gov. Gary Herbert (R) and state legislators, as well as Utah's all-GOP congressional delegation, have been vocal opponents of the Bears Ears monument and have likewise targeted the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, created by President Clinton, for revisions.

Zinke is set to tour Grand Staircase-Escalante tomorrow on the final day of his trip.

BACK

45. Tribune Editorial: Hatch continues to belittle Native Americans in Bears Ears dispute

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 10 | Tribune Editorial

No, Sen. Hatch, we won't just take your word for it.

Utah's senior senator put his foot very firmly into his mouth Monday by attacking the intelligence and the integrity of the five Native American nations whose elected leaders joined together to work for and, in the final days of the Obama administration, win national monument status for 1.35 million acres in southeast Utah known as Bears Ears.

This patronizing, condescending — if not downright racist — theme has been a constant throughout the debate over the monument plan. The five nations, and their supporters from many other tribes, are cruelly dismissed as dupes, pawns, unwitting tools of far-away radical environmentalists who must be fooling the tribes, paying them off, or both.

"The Indians, they don't fully understand that a lot of the things that they currently take for granted on those lands, they won't be able to do if it's made clearly into a monument or a wilderness," Hatch said.

It's already a monument. Nobody is proposing that the land receive the much more restrictive designation of "wilderness" — something that only Congress can do.

And, when pressed, Hatch couldn't name anything that the Indians can do now, or could do last year, that they won't be able to do under monument management. Management that, as specifically laid out in President Obama's proclamation, will include a formal voice for the affected nations.

"Just take my word for it," Hatch said.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The tribes know better than to do that. They know exactly what they are doing, what they wanted, what they got and how to make the most of it going forward.

Leaders of Utah Dine Bikeyah called Hatch out for his patronizing words and demanded an apology.

Well. The Hollywood stereotype of the Native American includes a large dose of studied stoicism. Which is likely what they will need if they wait for Hatch to recant.

All this was part of a tour in which Hatch and other anti-monument Utah Republicans ushered Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke around the area as part of Zinke's mission to reassess national monuments in Utah and elsewhere.

Zinke made some hopeful noises about meeting with people on both sides of the issue, including the tribes whose leaders sought the designation. But the focus of his attention has been on the anti-monument side, state and local officials who drone on about federal overreach while disrespecting the Indians and clinging to pie-in-the-sky dreams about some fossil fuel or mining bonanza that will fall from the skies if the monument goes away.

So would it be condescending to say that it's Hatch who don't fully understand? Because he clearly doesn't.

BACK

46. Will National Monuments Get a “Fair Hearing” on Zinke’s Listening Tour?

Sierra, May 10 | Stacey Bare

On Sunday, Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke stood in front of a small, windowless conference room in Salt Lake City next to one of the long-standing generals of the Sagebrush Rebellion, Senator Orrin Hatch.

He was there to kick off a listening tour in response to President Trump’s recently signed executive order, which calls on the secretary to make sure any national monument in the United States larger than 100,000 acres created since 1996 gets a “fair hearing,” as Zinke put it. The Utah monuments that bookend the timeframe of Trump’s EO review, Grand Staircase–Escalante and Bears Ears, are located just a few hours to the south of where Zinke stood: millions of acres of land sacred to Native Americans that contain treasured archaeological sites, redrock,

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

sagebrush, dark night skies, breathtaking ecological diversity, and miles of open vistas. They also happen to be objects of contempt for Utah's Republican leadership.

Zinke began his remarks by reminding the assembled group of media that the executive order does not strip any existing national monument of their designation. He reiterated that neither he nor President Trump supported the transfer or sale of public lands, and that there was no predetermined outcome for the process triggered by Trump's executive order. He affirmed that he was a "firm believer in NEPA [the National Environmental Policy Act, a critical environmental permitting process]" and saw the NEPA process as an important tool to protect clean air and water (his remarks happened to fall on the same day the Trump administration removed five scientists from a prominent EPA advisory board).

Zinke then turned to the importance of the monument-designation process as an effective tool to save and preserve our nation's shared cultural and natural treasures. He referenced the first national monument, Wyoming's Devils Tower—a Native American holy site like Bears Ears. Zinke argued that, even at just 1,200 acres, Devils Tower was controversial for its size at the time, no doubt drawing a stiff contrast to the vast, 1.35 million acres now under protection at Bears Ears.

The beauty of Bears Ears did not escape him, he made clear. Zinke spoke about the importance of considering tribal sovereignty in any decision-making, and how excited he was to again be riding a horse through Bears Ears to experience it firsthand—something he hadn't done since his first day as the secretary when, D.C. traffic be damned, he rode a horse to work.

Federal lands belong to all of America, he said—not just the purview of those who happen to neighbor their borders; each voice, whether local or far away, should weigh equally in the final judgement (though he did acknowledge that the Department of Interior needed to rebuild its relationship with some local communities that have lost trust in the agency, specifically because they feel their voices had not been heard).

In one response about the importance of access to public lands, Zinke talked about the benefits of time outdoors. He even spent time discussing his vision of an interconnected system of public lands to increase access and opportunities for people to get outside.

It all sounded great. Zinke is a good public speaker. He comes off as warm, understanding, compassionate, and the type of guy that will hold fast to his word.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

He and I have both served our country in uniform; however different our jobs, we have some shared values. I wanted to believe him.

But then, the real listening tour got underway—one in which Zinke seemingly had ears for one point of view.

While in Utah, Zinke only met with a carefully curated batch of interest groups. Pro-monument supporters were sidelined or chastised when they confronted Zinke. Worse, important pro-monument stakeholders—even the chamber of commerce for the two rural communities most heavily impacted by the monuments, Boulder-Escalante—were denied meetings, along with military veterans and pro-monument Native American community organizations.

Zinke is taking public comment for 15 days to potentially override years of consultation. He continues to carry the message that there is no support for Bears Ears. He says there is no preconceived outcome, but after meeting with special-interest groups, and being shepherded through our state with the Republican delegation—which likely hasn't told him that the boundaries of Bears Ears closely match their own Public Lands Initiative proposal—it sure feels like he already has an outcome in mind.

I want him to be my guy. I want to believe him, but I just can't.

When the online comment period opens up for these monuments later this month, the public needs to speak up. People need to make sure that Secretary Zinke listens to all our voices as he embarks on his listening tour—about why we need, love, and want our existing monuments; about how they fit, in his own words, “the Muir model.”

While you wait for the comment period to open up, you can take immediate action on Bears Ears by signing our online petition here or here.

Finally, get in touch with Senator Hatch. Prior to the media briefing on Sunday, he told Native Americans they would not be able to do what they wanted on the land if it stayed as a monument. When pressed on what specifically the Native American community could not do, he said he did not have time for the answer, and to “take my word” for it. Give him a phone call, send a postcard, fax, or email, and ask him to clarify what he meant.

BACK

47. Trump's national monument plan could easily fail — but he'll still declare victory

The Los Angeles Times, May 10 | Evan Halper

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke tangled with protesters, weaved through media hives and trotted on horseback across a Utah moonscape this week in pursuit of President Trump's executive order targeting national monuments.

It's a directive that may prove legally tenuous but is nonetheless creating rich political theater for the White House.

Trump struggled during the campaign in deeply Republican Utah, particularly with its politically potent landowner rights movement. But now the Queens-born president is polishing his bona fides with that crowd by dispatching a rugged Cabinet secretary on a quest that is rankling environmentalists and Native American tribes.

Over four days ending Wednesday, Zinke is surveying two hotly contested monuments: the 1.35-million-acre Bears Ears, which President Obama established at the behest of tribes and conservationists in the final weeks of his administration, and the 1.9-million-acre Grand Staircase Escalante, which has riled local developers and energy companies since President Clinton created it in 1996.

In the hardscrabble communities nearby, these monuments are often derided as a "betrayal," depriving them of potential jobs from energy extraction and other uses. Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch invoked the word yet again recently while railing against the Bears Ears designation on the Senate floor.

The administration's campaign against monuments was launched in Utah by design. The state is a hotbed of resistance to federal control of land. It has even passed a law calling on the federal government to cede control of most of its vast holdings to the state.

"They are trying to work with a favorable audience," said Rep. Raul Grijalva of Arizona, the ranking Democrat on the House Natural Resources Committee. "Once they leave the confines of Utah and start looking at all those other monuments, the politics dramatically changes."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Even in Utah, polls show the public is divided on whether the Bears Ears designation should be rescinded. But the state's political leadership is largely united, and Zinke is getting his fill of attaboys on this trip.

"We now have an opportunity to discuss and deliberate like we didn't even have during the Bush administration," said Ken Ivory, a Utah legislator who is leading a multi-state federal land push that would go much further than Trump's executive order. Ivory's crusade, which has a number of allies in Congress, seeks to export nationally the Utah approach of pushing the federal government to transfer its land to state control.

It's a sensitive political issue for Trump and Zinke, who are aligned with a large coalition of hunters, anglers and outdoor outfitters anxious about what states would do with the federal land. Both men consider themselves outdoorsmen and have made assurances the Trump administration will not be relinquishing federal control of the millions of acres at issue. But Ivory is nonetheless encouraged by the move against the monuments. "This will continue the discussion," he said.

The protected lands Zinke came to survey are at the core of Trump's order for a review of all monuments created since 1996 that are larger than 100,000 acres, which is ultimately expected to end with Zinke suggesting both areas either get stripped of the monument designation altogether or be downsized substantially. Zinke is in a race to review those and 19 other monuments, including six in California, before producing two lists of suggested eliminations and rollbacks. He will present the first list in mid-June.

There is ample evidence the exercise could go sideways, as some of Trump's other executive orders have. Trump's ban on visitors from six predominantly Muslim nations and his bid to punish sanctuary cities are both unraveling in court. The executive order Trump vowed would force builders of the Keystone XL oil pipeline to use American steel actually won't.

"The review of these monuments is predicated on the idea that the president has this authority that he doesn't have," said Kate Kelly, who was an advisor to former Interior Secretary Sally Jewell. "There is no legal basis for it."

The last time a president moved to get rid of a monument on his own authority was in 1938, when Franklin D. Roosevelt sought to jettison the Castle-Pinckney National Monument in South Carolina. His attorney general looked into options at the time and reported back that Roosevelt couldn't do that. It would take an act of Congress, which ultimately authorized the federal government to offload the property in the 1950s. The president's authority to undo monument designations, environmentalists argue, has only shrunk since the Roosevelt administration, after Congress passed laws solidifying the federal protection.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Attorneys affiliated with some of the conservative think tanks influential in guiding Trump's agenda argue the Roosevelt administration got it all wrong. They say that not only does the president have explicit authority to scotch monuments, but that many of the monuments created under the century-old Antiquities Act were done so illegally. The act, their argument goes, was never intended to preserve sprawling land masses the size of Delaware.

By this line of reasoning, even Teddy Roosevelt was out of bounds when he designated the Grand Canyon a national monument. (It has since become a national park, and thus universally agreed to be untouchable by Trump's executive order).

"I think the president is in a strong position," said Todd Gaziano, an attorney at the Sacramento-based Pacific Legal Foundation, a conservative advocacy group.

While no president has ever successfully eliminated national monuments, several have changed their shapes, and even shrunk them. John F. Kennedy substantially redrew the boundaries of the Bandelier National Monument in New Mexico, shaving off nearly 4,000 acres and adding 3,000, saying the borders of what needed to be preserved had evolved. When Olympic National Park in Washington was still a monument, it was reduced in size multiple times to enable timber harvesting, including in 1915 when logs were needed to build Navy ships for World War I.

But there was a big difference between those parings and the ones Trump may be on the verge of trying to make now: the earlier presidential moves to redraw monument boundaries were not contested. The courts have yet to weigh in on whether the president can take such action when stakeholders such as American Indian tribes, environmental groups and lawmakers vehemently object.

Those groups have made clear that they won't let Trump lift protections off a single acre of monument land without a bitter court fight.

Justin Pidot, a former deputy solicitor general at the Interior Department who now teaches law at the University of Denver, said if he were working for this administration he would be warning Zinke that the legal arguments are shaky. But, Pidot allowed, that may not be an overriding concern in this case.

“A lot of things this administration does, it does for political theater,” he said. “They can say they have done them, and then they get to rail against the courts for stopping them.”

BACK

48. Gehrke: What Zinke isn't hearing, seeing during his trip to Utah

The Salt Lake Tribune, May 10 | Robert Gehrke

Blake Spalding and Jen Castle opened the doors of Hell's Backbone Grill in 1999, drawn to the remote town of Boulder by their love of wilderness and the nearby Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument.

Their business, as well as the adjacent Boulder Lodge, has flourished, and when I visited a few weeks ago, the restaurant was full with the booming tourism season just gearing up.

Business has more than doubled in the last three years as a portion of the nearly million visitors drawn to the monument each year stop in for a bite at the only restaurant in the state to be in contention for the prestigious James Beard Award.

Spalding and Castle employ 45 people between the restaurant and their organic farm where they grow their own ingredients, and pay $700,000 in wages — a significant boost to the economy in the town of about 200 people.

You'd think it's the type of information that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke might want to hear as he visits the area to assess the impact of both the Grand Staircase and the newly designated Bears Ears National Monument.

Nope.

The Interior Department refused a request for Zinke to meet with Spalding and a handful of other members of the Escalante-Boulder Chamber of Commerce, business leaders in the communities that are most affected by the decisions the secretary and President Donald Trump will make in coming weeks.

"The fact of the matter is that there isn't a business or company or school or clinic in this county that isn't hiring right now," Spalding told me this week. "So the idea that somehow Garfield County is in economic crisis because of the monument, it's alternative facts. But they are alternative facts that our county commissioners and governor are really wed to and basically, on this tour with Zinke, they're only having him interact with people that confirm his bias or the governor's bias that the monument needs to be rescinded or reduced."

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Nathan Waggoner, who opened Escalante Outfitters in Escalante 11 years ago, said the chamber of commerce gathered letters of support for the monument from 150 business owners in the communities surrounding the monument and delivered them to Washington and never got any response from Zinke or the Interior Department.

"We reached out as many times as we can in as many different ways to try to talk to him and we're just concerned about the economic impact of eviscerating the national monument," said Waggoner, who now operates an outfitter, a hotel, a restaurant, an outdoor equipment store and a guide service.

While the tourism industry gets knocked for creating seasonal jobs, Waggoner said the 27 people who work for him are invested in their community, building homes and starting their own businesses.

"We really feel like our community is on the cusp of becoming something great, but because of this old anger some of these county commissioners and others harbor, they hold us back," he said.

Waggoner said his group of business owners will keep trying to convey their message to Zinke and anyone else who will listen.

When Zinke's predecessor, Interior Secretary Sally Jewell, came to the region on a listening tour last year ahead of the designation of Bears Ears, she sat in a sweltering hall and heard scores of locals, for and against, voice their opinions. She met with tribal leaders who overwhelmingly supported the creation, and county commissioners who were steadfastly opposed.

Zinke did meet with the Bears Ears Inter-tribal Coalition and Interior has announced it will accept written comments from the public. But overall, his visit comes off as more scripted, with the narrative tightly controlled to present one side of the story rather than the full picture of the stunning landscape.

And the case being made against the value of monuments is obviously subject to challenge.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Last week, Herbert's public lands director, Kathleen Clarke, was in Washington and told a House committee that monuments can severely damage local communities. I've asked the governor's office a half-dozen times since then for the evidence supporting her claim. They haven't provided any.

The common refrain among monument opponents — and, last session, the Utah Legislature — is that grazing has fallen by a third, the timber industry disappeared, and vast coal resources have been locked up.

Actually, according to recent figures, the active grazing in the monument has barely changed, aside from some grazing rights that were voluntarily retired. A lumber mill that closed in 2002 got most of its timber from the Dixie National Forest and was unrelated to the monument.

The Kaiparowits coal was and is locked up, but ask Carbon and Emery County if coal is a good bet these days. It's hard to know if that would have been developed or would be developed, given the plummeting demand, if Trump attempts to change the monument boundaries.

No doubt, rural Utah is suffering for a wide variety of reasons. But I have seen two studies of the economic impact of the Grand Staircase. One, by a pair of Utah State University faculty members critical of public lands, said the monument's a net wash.

The other, done by Headwaters Economics in 2011, said that communities around the monument, like Escalante and Boulder, saw strong growth in the number of jobs and income since the monument was designated.

That's the type of information that it might be good for Secretary Zinke to hear, the type of story that Spalding could have told him, if he was serious about learning all of the perspectives. But she's not giving up yet.

"Regardless of how it turns out, I want to say in the end I did everything I could to protect the monument," Spalding said. "I'm not going to go quietly, either, because I really believe this monument is precious. ... I never thought in my lifetime that this monument would seriously be under threat or I wouldn't have staked my life's work to it.

"Now we have to fight."

BACK

49. Trump Takes Aim at Western Monuments That May Hold Oil Riches

Bloomberg News, May 10 | Jennifer A Dlouhy

Bears Ears National Monument in Utah boasts stretches of red-and-yellow sandstone so brilliant they appear to be ablaze and rock structures so precarious they appear to defy gravity.

The rugged terrain south of the Colorado River also has reserves of oil and natural gas that are currently off limits to new leasing -- restrictions that may end as the Trump administration reviews 27 large-scale monuments his predecessors set aside for protection.

Industry groups and Republican lawmakers have praised President Donald Trump's order to review those monument designations, calling it a welcome reconsideration of federal overreach. Yet, environmental groups are concerned Trump will scrap or scale back those designations, and the net result will be a boost to the fortunes of oil drillers and mining companies.

"Oil and gas is definitely a factor -- particularly given that with Trump it's been something he's talked about consistently," said Tim Donaghey, a research specialist with Greenpeace. "They're going to try to knock down as many barriers as possible to expanded oil and gas drilling."

Under the 1906 Antiquities Act, presidents can set aside land to protect historic landmarks, structures or other objects of historic or scientific interest. Most recent monument proclamations have barred new mining claims and oil, gas and mineral leases, but typically protect existing rights, according to an assessment by the Congressional Research Service. Unlike national parks, which must be established by Congress, each monument has its own rules for how the land can be used.

Presidents of both parties have used the law to designate increasingly large parcels of land, raising the hackles of Republican lawmakers worried the protections will constrain energy development and animal grazing on the sites. Former President Barack Obama issued protections for a record amount of Western land -- much of it also rich in oil or minerals.

Republicans objected to what they have termed a "land grab," and Trump made reconsidering those designations an initial priority. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is traveling through Utah this week to see the sites, complete with a hike to Bears Ears' "House on Fire" ruins.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

More than 90 percent -- or 1.34 million acres -- of the Bears Ears national monument overlaps with potential reserves of oil, gas and coal, according to an analysis of U.S. government data by Greenpeace that was reviewed and checked by Bloomberg. The area also contains significant uranium resources, according to the Center for American Progress.

Those fossil fuels could lurk under some 2.7 million acres of five monuments, including Bears Ears, that are now under review, spanning an area bigger than Yellowstone National Park, according to Greenpeace's analysis.

The energy resources were illustrated by U.S. Energy Information Administration maps of dense oil and gas formations known to contain the fossil fuels and sedimentary basins likely to. The analysis also drew on U.S. Geological Survey data that shows recoverable coal.

Representative Rob Bishop, a Republican from Utah who heads the House Natural Resources Committee, has focused his ire on Bears Ears, the remote, stretch of desert designated by Obama just a month before he left office. Although environmentalists and some indigenous groups backed giving Bears Ears monument status, Bishop said out-of-state support drowned out local voices of opposition.

"They're trying to make this monument to protect it from being raped by oil and gas development, which is so ludicrous," Bishop said in an April interview.

Bishop has argued in favor of a similar, slightly smaller package of land protections, worked out with local officials. The set aside, which would need congressional approval, would allow recreation and grazing on some territory and tribal protections in another. Oil and mineral leasing would be banned in the protected zone but encouraged in other areas in the state.

At Grand Staircase-Escalante in Utah, which was also established by Obama in December, the potential riches include coal, according to the U.S. Geological Survey. More than 40 percent of its total area holds oil, gas or coal, according to the government data. The entirety of the Canyons of the Ancients monument just across the Utah border in Colorado has fossil fuel deposits.

To be sure, the government's geological data is not definitive -- the sedimentary basins don't necessarily contain abundant oil, gas or coal. But there is plenty of evidence of industry interest in some of the national monuments now under scrutiny.

For instance, EOG Resources last year won state approval to drill on state trust lands near Bears Ears. More than four dozen dormant wells were drilled in California's flower-dappled Carrizo Plain National Monument before it was protected. And a subsequently rescinded resource management plan governing Montana's Upper Missouri River Breaks National Monument included plans for new oil and gas wells in the site.

Industry Appetite

"There certainly is industry appetite for development there, or else companies wouldn't have leases in the area," Kathleen Sgamma, head of the Western Energy Alliance, told E&E News regarding Bears Ears.

The presence of oil, gas and coal changes the political landscape amid the fight over this geological one.

"It's not just the fact that the resources are there, but that industry has been on the record stating that there's interest in development," said Kate Kelly, public lands director at the Center for American Progress. "We have to wonder who they are going to be listening to when they make these determinations."

BACK

50. Interior Secretary Zinke admires national monuments he'll likely recommend removing

The Washington Times, May 10 | Ben Wolfgang

Based on the beautiful pictures and effusive praise he has posted to Twitter this week from one of the nation's newest national monuments, you might never guess that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke could set into motion the process to erase it from the map.

Mr. Zinke, tapped by President Trump to conduct a thorough review of more than two dozen national monuments, on Tuesday visited Bears Ears National Monument, a sprawling 1.35-million-acre stretch of land in Utah. It has become ground zero in the broader debate over whether the previous administration vastly overstepped its authority in cordoning off huge swaths of earth and sea as monuments to close them off from energy exploration and other human activities.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Critics of former President Barack Obama expect Mr. Zinke, after his detailed review, to determine that the designation of Bears Ears and other national monuments should be revoked, or at least reduced.

The secretary fully opened that door this week by saying Monday that he is not sure a monument designation is the “right vehicle” to protect Bears Ears and retweeting a group opposed to the monument with the hashtag #RescindBearsEars.

At the same time, Mr. Zinke has tweeted numerous photos of the wondrous sights he has been taking in — including breathtaking helicopter shots of Bears Ears. He also has been upfront about his deep love and appreciation for America’s monuments and public lands, sending something of a mixed signal to those on both sides of the debate.

“The trip today verified it is drop-dead gorgeous country. No question about it,” Mr. Zinke told reporters Monday, according to The Salt Lake Tribune. “We want to make sure everyone’s voice is heard.”

Bears Ears is just one part of the broader review. More than two dozen other land and marine monuments also will be studied, including Utah’s Grand Staircase-Escalante, set aside by President Clinton during the height of his re-election campaign in 1996.

Since his nomination by Mr. Trump, Mr. Zinke has cast himself as a fierce defender of public lands and as someone who truly appreciates the importance of America’s monuments.

That has led critics to question how he possibly could recommend rescinding or shrinking those monuments and whether he is laying the groundwork to “cut a deal” that allows him to claim to be protecting public lands while placating those who want the size and scope of monuments diminished.

“Zinke seems like he is readying to cut a deal, protect some of the area, drill, frack other parts,” said Randi Spivak, public lands program director at the Center for Biological Diversity. “But the monument boundaries have already been reduced from the original proposal. Any further reduction in boundaries will put at risk from destructive mining and oil and gas development one of the most wild and ecologically important areas in the West.”

So far this week, Mr. Zinke has met with a number of stakeholders in Utah, including tribal groups in favor of and opposed to the Bears Ears monument.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

On much of his trip, he also has been joined by Rep. Rob Bishop, chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee, and Gov. Gary Richard Herbert, both Utah Republicans who oppose the Bears Ears designation.

Officials from the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition — a group of tribal leaders approved by the Obama administration to oversee the monument — said Mr. Zinke has not given them the amount of time he has given to those who favor revocation.

Many of those officials visited Washington last week and demanded a meeting with Mr. Zinke but were denied.

“We’re asking for equal time, and it’s not happening,” the Inter-Tribal coalition tweeted Tuesday.

Mr. Zinke tweeted this week that he is intent on speaking with all sides of the issue, and the Interior Department has flatly rejected claims that tribal leaders and other advocates of Bears Ears are being locked out of the process.

Some conservationists say Mr. Zinke’s eventual outcome — the rescission of the Bears Ears monument — is clear from his actions this week.

“He has cherry-picked the people who he’s talking to, and the list of people who he’s actually listening to is even smaller,” said Meghan Kissell, a spokeswoman for the Conservation Lands Foundation. “If Zinke wants to truly emulate Teddy Roosevelt in spirit, not just photo ops, he will start to take the time to understand the full breadth of the Bears Ears proclamation and not just pay lip service to this so-called review.”

Mr. Zinke’s supporters see the matter differently. They argue that his review process, and his trip to Utah this week, are key steps toward getting all the facts and coming to the right conclusion.

At the same time, however, they stress that the administration simply cannot allow the status quo to continue, and they favor a rewriting of the century-old Antiquities Act to limit how much power presidents have in establishing monuments.

“The Bears Ears Monument is only a symptom of something much greater. The real problem lies in the 111-year-old Antiquities Act. The act must be modernized,” Mr. Bishop said in a statement Tuesday. “I am confident the secretary understands there must be legislative reform to the underlying problem, the Antiquities Act.”

BACK

51. Interior Secretary Orders Protester To ‘Be Nice’ During Visit To Bears Ears

The Huffington Post, May 10 | Chris D’Angelo

Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke visited the Bears Ears National Monument in Utah to review its use under the Antiquities Act, which gives the president unilateral power to declare lands as historic. President Donald Trump signed an executive order April 26 directing Secretary Zinke to consult communities across the country about national monuments that take up more than 100,000 acres as part of this review. Native advocates in Utah say that Zinke set aside just one hour to hear from tribes.

Zinke was apparently irked by the persistence of Cassandra Begay, a tribal liaison with the group Peaceful Advocates for Native Dialogue & Organizing Support. She was following the secretary as he greeted those gathered at Bears Ears, a 1.35 million-acre area in southeastern Utah that is one of 27 monuments threatened by President Donald Trump’s recent executive orders.

Their encounter can be seen in a video made by Begay and posted to YouTube and Facebook.

“When are you going to meet with the tribal leaders?” she asks. “It’s kind of unfair that you’ve only met with them for one hour, sir. Is there a reason why you’re not listening to them more?”

After being twice ignored, Begay presses Zinke again. He turns around and walks up to the much-shorter Begay. Holding up his finger, Zinke forcefully says, “Be. Nice.”

“I’m so nice,” Begay replies.

“Be nice,” Zinke says again. “Don’t be rude. Thank you.”

The video cuts off as Begay begins to fire back.

In her Facebook post, Begay described Zinke’s behavior as “demeaning and belittling.”

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

“I was scared, and my heart was racing,” she said in a press statement. “It felt condescending and unnecessarily aggressive. I have no idea why asking a simple question to somebody who is on a listening tour would react so aggressively.”

The Department of the Interior did not respond to HuffPost’s request for comment on Tuesday.

Zinke’s appearance on Monday was part of a four-day “listening tour” regarding two Utah monuments, Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante, that were designated by Presidents Barack Obama and Bill Clinton, respectively. One of Trump’s executive orders directs the Interior Department to give a second look to all land monuments that cover more than 100,000 acres and were established since Jan. 1, 1996.

To be fair, Zinke has met twice this month with members of the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition, a group of five Native American tribes that co-manages the Bears Ears monument. The first meeting, in Washington, D.C., came after the coalition held a press conference to demand the Trump administration’s attention and threatened to sue if Trump rescinded the designation. Zinke also met with coalition members on April 7 in Utah.

However, the interior secretary was touring the monument with people opposed to its designation, including Utah Gov. Gary Herbert (R) and members of the San Juan County Commission (Bears Ears is located in that county). He has also met with members of the state’s all-Republican congressional delegation, who also oppose the monument. And comments made by Trump and Zinke hint at the direction the administration is likely to go.

Trump said on April 26 that he’s looking to end “another egregious abuse of federal power,” put “states back in charge” and open up now-protected areas to “tremendously positive things.” Zinke said during his visit Monday that he believes the Bears Ears area should be preserved, but that “the issue is whether the monument is the right vehicle.”

“It is public land,” Zinke said. “It was public land before the monument. It will be public land after the monument. What vehicle of public land is appropriate to preserve the cultural identity, to make sure the tribes have a voice and to make sure you protect the traditions of hunting and fishing and public access?”

He has been given 45 days to give Trump a recommendation on Bears Ears and 120 days for all other monuments.

BACK

52. Bears Ears National Monument: Zinke gets mixed reactions during visit

Fox News, May 10 | Andrew O'Reilly

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke spent the first day of his listening tour of the country's national monuments visiting the famed Anasazi ruins in Utah's Butler Wash and trying to assuage concerns of Utahns that undoing or shrinking the designation of the controversial 1.3-million acre Bears Ears National Monument would not automatically result in lots of oil rigs or mining equipment.

"The legacy and what I've seen should be preserved. The issue is whether the monument is the right vehicle," Zinke said, according to the Salt Lake Tribune. "What vehicle of public land is appropriate to preserve the cultural identity, to make sure the tribes have a voice and make sure you preserve the traditions of hunting and fishing and public access?"

Zinke -- a former Navy SEAL and congressman from Montana who calls himself a "Teddy Roosevelt Republican" -- was tasked last month by President Trump to review 27 national monuments across the country designated since 1996 that total 100,000 acres or more. In the executive order signed by Trump, the interior secretary also has been directed to produce an interim report in 45 days and issue a final report within 120 days.

Despite Zinke's assurances on Monday, many Native Americans in the Southwest say that any change in Bears Ears' status would be a major setback after years of lobbying to have the area named a national monument.

"The national monument has already been justified and there is no need for a review," Cassandra Begay, a Navajo and the tribal liaison for the Native American advocacy group PANDOS, told Fox News. "Bears Ears is the first time that Native Americans played a crucial role in the creation of a national monument in the United States."

The 1906 Antiquities Act authorizes the president to declare federal lands as monuments and restrict their use. After long-term discussions with Native American groups in the southwest, President Obama designated Bears Ears and Nevada's Gold Butte as monuments in the waning days of his presidency.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The move was widely praised by environmentalists and Native Americans, but Republican lawmakers in Western states along with ranchers and those in the oil and gas industries widely panned the so-called “midnight monuments,” arguing that they do not represent the interests of the people in those states and will in time do more harm than good to the environment.

Trump has called the national monument protection efforts of his predecessors “a massive federal land grab,” saying Obama’s designations “unilaterally put millions of acres of land and water under strict federal control.”

Zinke faced criticism from Native American groups for traveling to Bears Ears for his four-day tour with an entourage of anti-monument politicians, including Utah Gov. Gary Herbert, and for only meeting with tribal leaders for a one-hour, closed-door meeting.

Davis Filfred of the Navajo Nation said that the meeting on Sunday in Salt Lake City wasn't enough time for the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition to make their points to Zinke. Filfred added that it seems Zinke is listening more to opponents of the monument than people who want it preserved.

Upon arriving at the Butler Wash trailhead on Monday, Zinke was greeted by PANDOS’ Begay and numerous other Bears Ears supporters. A video posted on YouTube shows Begay following Zinke and questioning him on why he won’t meet with tribal leaders before the interior secretary turns around, points his finger at her and chides her to “be nice.”

“My heart was racing when he came at me because I thought he was going to hit me,” Begay said. “It felt like he was about to snap! Certainly not what I expected from the interior secretary who is here on a listening tour.”

Others at the trailhead, however, had positive interactions with Zinke.

Hank Stevens, president of the Navajo Mountain Chapter, spoke to Zinke during his stop at Butler Wash and said Zinke promised to return to Utah to discuss the issue with tribal leaders.

“He reassured me that he is as worried about the issues as Native Americans are,” Stevens told Fox News. “This may be a fault of mine, but I always give people the benefit of the doubt.”

With the clock ticking on Zinke to hand in his recommendations to Trump, it is not entirely clear what powers the president actually has regarding Bears Ears.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Congressional leaders and courts have in the past contested many national monument designations – Franklin D. Roosevelt, for example, took heat for Jackson Hole National Monument, which later became Grand Teton National Park. Some monuments have also been scaled down, or enlarged, over the years by presidential orders or by Congress, but no president has ever attempted to eliminate his predecessor’s monument. If Trump tries to do so, the matter will most likely end up in court.

“It’s really unclear what powers the president has to abolish these monuments,” James Morton Turner, an associate professor of environmental studies at Wellesley College, told Fox News.

For his part, Stevens said the Trump administration could avoid all the legal tie-ups and protests if it just focused its attention somewhere a little farther away.

“President Trump seems to be all about space exploration,” Stevens said, noting the president signed a $19.5 billion spending bill for NASA. “I say they should go that way and leave us down here alone.”

BACK

53. Op-ed: Attempts to undo national monuments will rally formidable opposition

The Hill, May 10 | Glenn Nelson

The Trump administration is well advised to gauge the political blowback as it contemplates an assault — disguised as a review — on the Antiquities Act, as well as two decades of amplifying diverse and inclusive stories in this country. During its final months, the Obama administration shrewdly protected a string of cultural landmarks that should form a formidable firewall around those designations, as well as earlier sacred sites, such as the Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial in D.C. and the César E. Chávez National Monument in California.

In all, Obama designated 25 culturally significant monuments, memorials, historical parks and preserves, plus dozens of national historical landmarks. The last of these was far from the least.

The Belmont-Paul Women’s Equality National Monument added to the thin ranks of national park units dedicated to women. Stonewall Inn was the first dedicated to the LGBTQ community. A second Harriet Tubman National Historical Park, plus Reconstruction Era, Freedom Riders and Birmingham Civil Rights National Monuments cemented the civil-rights base.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The previous two years brought Honouliuli, a World War II Japanese imprisonment site in Hawaii, and San Gabriel Mountains, an important recreation area for the majority Latino population in the Los Angeles region.

The biggest target, Bears Ears National Monument in Utah, was the centerpiece of 10 units designated by Obama that are significant to Native Americans. It is to be co-managed by the Bears Ears Tribal Commission, a coalition of five tribes (Navajo, Hopi, Ute, Ute Mountain Ute, and Zuni) that lobbied for the protection.

It also attracted significant support from other communities of color, many represented by the Next 100 Coalition, an alliance of civil rights, environmental and community groups that advocate for more inclusive management of public lands.

You are understanding the magnitude of all this if you can hear the choir belting out the end of the Jeffersons theme song, “We finally got a piece of the pie-ee-eee-ee.”

The last of Obama’s public-lands designations were pieces of the American pie carved out for historically marginalized groups — people of color, LGBTQ and women. These are not your father’s tree huggers. They are the emerging wave of green in the U.S., where green isn’t just the color of environmental stewardship but also of permission. For these groups, it is permission to rediscover in the American landscape past selves that have been buried under the rubble of repression disguised as someone else’s destiny.

Connect the nouveau green with old-guard environmentalists (read: white, mostly liberal, mostly male) and you have the makings of a powerful voting bloc, certainly by the 2020 national election. By then, millennials, the most diverse generation in our history, will comprise about 40 percent of eligible voters. More states — Texas among them — are projected to be a majority nonwhite. Already there are more nonwhite babies than white babies being born every day in the U.S., and the mortality rate of whites has steadily risen.

It may go without saying that an alliance of the oppressed (people of color, LGBTQ, women), plus their environmentalist allies, will be politically activated by 2020. As demonstrated by the solidarity around women’s marches on Jan. 21 nationwide, it already has been. The newly protected federal lands either sit directly in or adjacent to urban areas or serve the galvanizing interests of Native Americans.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The first line of engagement has been drawn at Bears Ears National Monument in Utah, which has been ground zero for the so-called Sagebrush Rebellion, the movement to transfer federal public lands to state control.

Those whispering in the ear of Trump about the legality of dashing or shrinking Bears Ears are uttering worse than alternative facts. The Antiquities Act of 1906 gives president's power to create national monuments to protect cultural, historical, and natural heritage for future generations. Only an act of Congress can undo those designations.

It should not, however, require an act of Congress to drill some reality into those wishing to walk back hard-fought and meaningful gains by an impending new power structure already eager to flex its muscles at the ballot box in four years. The new math of the resistance is palpable: Add up all the women's marches, science marches, #NoDAPL protests, and #BlackLivesMatter demonstrations, and subtract the number who attended President Donald J. Trump's inauguration.

Glenn Nelson is the founder of The Trail Posse, which covers race and inclusion in the outdoors, and a founding member of the Next 100 Coalition, which seeks a more inclusive approach to management of our nation's parks and public lands.

BACK

54. Hunting, fishing businesses unite support of National Monuments

Ammoland, May 10 | Joe Evans

WASHINGTON -(Ammoland.com)- More than 100 hunting and fishing business owners and sporting organizations sent a letter today to Congress to show their support for national monuments and the responsible use of the Antiquities Act.

“As someone who has helped develop the outdoor industry in Colorado and watched it grow into an economic powerhouse, I am concerned by current efforts both to curtail national monuments and weaken the Antiquities Act itself,” said Jim Bartschi, president of Scott Fly Rods in Montrose, Colorado. “Public lands such as the new Browns Canyon National Monument preserve incredible outdoor opportunities to hunt, fish, hike, bike, camp and float – and they’re strongly supported by local communities, who understand that these lands offer one of the best new, sustainable ways to grow their local economies.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

“Since Theodore Roosevelt established the Antiquities Act in 1906, presidents of both parties have wisely used it to protect our nation’s most treasured hunting and fishing habitats,” Bartschi added. “Let’s make sure we celebrate these special places and work together to retain their status as national monuments.”

The letter is part of a larger effort to demonstrate the important role national monuments and the Antiquities Act play not only to small businesses and rural economies but also to hunters and anglers all across the country.

Business owners are meeting with decision makers in Washington this week to emphasize the value of public lands and national monuments to the outdoor industry.

“The outdoor industry accounts for $887 billion in consumer spending and 7.6 million jobs, making it one of the largest economic sectors in the country,” said Jen Ripple, editor in chief of DUN Magazine and a Tennessee resident. “Much of this economic output depends on public lands. Tools for conservation like the Antiquities Act will help ensure that America’s public lands remain not only a great place to hunt and fish but also an important pillar of the hunting and fishing industry.”

The business owners’ letter details support for safeguarding national monuments and the Antiquities Act, as well as criteria to ensure that national monuments are representative of collaborative, ground-up solutions for the management of public lands.

“Though some national monuments can be controversial, the Antiquities Act is an effective and essential tool for conservation,” said Ryan Hughes, a Nevada-based outdoor writer and volunteer for Backcountry Hunters & Anglers. “In places like Berryessa Snow Mountain in California and Rio Grande del Norte in New Mexico, we’ve seen Congress unable or unwilling to pass legislative proposals created with the help of local stakeholders. The Antiquities Act aided in allowing these collaborative efforts to happen.”

A Wednesday press conference will feature Bartschi, Ripple and Hughes discussing the business letter and the importance of national monuments to hunting, fishing and the outdoor industry.

BACK

55. The best way to save sacred land? ‘The issue is whether the monument is the right vehicle’

The Journal, May 10 | Michelle L. Price and Brady Mccombs, AP

BLANDING, Utah – U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said sacred tribal lands he toured Monday in America’s newest and most hotly contested monument should be preserved but he questioned whether the monument designation was the right way to do it.

Zinke’s aerial and ground tour of the Bears Ears National Monument was part of a review ordered by President Donald Trump to determine if 27 monuments were properly established.

Zinke spent the day getting familiar with the 1.3-million acre swath of southern Utah with red rock plateaus, cliffs and canyons on land considered sacred to tribes.

His tour guide was Utah Gov. Gary Herbert, one of several prominent Republican leaders in the state who oppose Bears Ears National Monument.

Zinke, a Montana Republican, said he wants to make sure Native American culture is preserved but cautioned that not all tribal members share the same opinion about the monument designated by former President Barack Obama near the end of his term.

He spoke before taking a short, winding hike in the afternoon sun with Herbert and other state and local officials to a lookout post above ancient ruins.

“Of course, the legacy and what I’ve seen should be preserved,” Zinke said, “The issue is whether the monument is the right vehicle.”

Herbert, U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch and the rest of the all-GOP congressional delegation consider the monument creation by former President Barack Obama an unnecessary layer of federal control that will hurt local economies by closing the area to new energy development. They also say it isn’t the best way to protect the land.

In Blanding, with a population of 3,400 people, two large banners read, “#RescindBearsEars,” reflecting the popular sentiment among residents.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Bears Ears supporters made their voices heard too. They believe the monument adds vital protections to tribal lands where members perform ceremonies, collect herbs and wood for medicinal and spiritual purposes, and do healing rituals.

Tara Benally, a member of Navajo Nation, was standing just outside the Blanding airport wearing a shirt commemorating the December declaration of Bears Ears National Monument.

“We want it left as is. We have history going through there,” said Benally, who lives south of the nearby town of Bluff. “That was basically my mom’s playground as she was growing up.”

A group of Bears Ears supporters greeted Zinke when he arrived to the trailhead. One woman asked why he only met with tribal leaders for an hour.

Zinke, who was shaking another supporter’s hand, turned around to face the woman and said: “Be nice.” The woman responded that she always is.

The monument review is rooted in the belief of Trump and other critics that a law signed by President Theodore Roosevelt allowing presidents to declare monuments has been improperly used to protect wide expanses of lands instead of places with particular historical or archaeological value.

Conservation groups contend that the monument review puts in limbo protections on areas across the country that are home to ancient cliff dwellings, towering Sequoias, deep canyons and ocean habitats where seals, whales and sea turtles roam.

After his arrival Sunday in Salt Lake City, Zinke was met by about 500 protesters who chanted, “Save our monuments, stand with Bears Ears.”

He held a closed-door meeting with a coalition of tribal leaders who pushed for the monument then spoke of his admiration for Roosevelt.

Davis Filfred of the Navajo Nation said Monday that the one-hour meeting Sunday wasn’t enough time for the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition to make their points to Zinke. Filfred, who was in the meeting, said it seems Zinke is listening more to opponents of the monument than people who want it preserved.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Zinke insisted there is no predetermined outcome of his review, saying he may not recommend the monuments be made smaller or rescinded, and he might even recommend an addition.

The two monuments he's reviewing in Utah are quite large. Created in 1996, Grand Staircase-Escalante is 1.9 million acres, about the size of Delaware. Bears Ears is smaller at 1.3 million acres.

Zinke has been tasked with making a recommendation on the Bears Ears monument by June 10, about 2½ months before a final report about all the monuments.

Environmental groups have vowed to file lawsuits if Trump attempts to rescind monuments – a move that would be unprecedented.

On the way back from his hike to the ruins, Zinke stopped at the trailhead and spoke with several people on horseback and admired their horses. .

He said his upcoming decision is not just about how the local tribes, county officials or the governor feel about the monument, but it's also about how the entire country feels about it because it's America's public land.

“President Trump, I'm going to tell you, is a great boss. The reason why I think he felt so strongly about this is he feels like sometimes Washington makes these rules and we don't have a voice,” Zinke said. “He put this in motion to make sure that local communities count. States count. America counts.”

BACK

56. NATIONAL MONUMENTS: Zinke: 'All of the above' possible for Bears Ears

E & E News, May 10 | Jennifer Yachnin

MONTICELLO, Utah — Make the mistake of asking Heidi Redd how many animals her Indian Creek Cattle Co. owns, and she'll only laugh good-naturedly and ask if you want to know her annual income, too.

But when it comes to her opinion on the Bears Ears National Monument — the boundaries of which surround both the 5,200-acre Dugout Ranch she operates and the 250,000 acres of grazing land she is permitted to use — it's a different story.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

"The spirit of all these lands need our help and protection," Redd said yesterday after a meeting with Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, who is visiting the 1.35-million-acre monument as he prepares to recommend whether it should be rescinded or reduced in size. She later added: "I'm not opposed to being in the monument."

She and Zinke spoke with reporters after a short hike near the ranch, where the fields are framed by red sandstone cliffs and talus slopes. Rock art and ancient dwellings can be found nearby.

Unlike many of the Utah elected officials Zinke has appeared with this week — including Gov. Gary Herbert (R) and House Natural Resources Chairman Rob Bishop (R) — Redd is not an opponent of the monument created by President Obama in his final weeks in office.

But she is worried that should President Trump attempt to revoke the monument's status, or otherwise prompt conservationists to sue the federal government, it could prove a disaster for the area here in the Colorado Plateau.

"This is a spiritual place, and to have it turned into a mass of cars and people without direction or funding, we're going to be in a right bit of trouble," said Redd, dressed in a wide-brimmed hat, delicate turquoise jewelry and mud-caked cowboy boots. She has worked on this ranch about 20 miles north of Monticello for more than 50 years and last year unsuccessfully ran for the state Senate as a Democrat.

Redd asserted that since the designation late last year, she has seen an influx of visitors to the area, particularly those who would like to view the cliff dwellings, as well as a growing community of rock climbers. But she said there has not been an increase in the number of Bureau of Land Management or Forest Service rangers assigned to protect those sites.

"I would rather not have a monument if you are not going to protect it," said Redd, who sold her ranch to the Nature Conservancy in 1997 but continues to own her own home there and raise cattle on the land. The Nature Conservancy conducts research at the ranch in areas including soil science and the impacts of climate change on vegetation.

She later added that undoing the monument's status is not an option, however: "Monument or no, people are not going to stop coming now."

Redd, who was once an advocate for the failed Utah Public Lands Initiative that sought to protect the Bears Ears area via legislation without a monument designation, also warned that rescinding

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

the monument could be more detrimental to the area, prompting "years of litigation, and could cause more damage."

Nature Conservancy Utah State Director Dave Livermore, who also accompanied Zinke on the hike yesterday, said he likewise urged the secretary to leave the current boundaries in place.

"We're fine with the way it is because it does allow our livestock raising to continue, it allows our science to continue," Livermore said.

'All of the above'

As Zinke continued his weeklong tour of the Beehive State yesterday in preparation for issuing recommendations on the future of Bears Ears next month — as well as dozens of other monuments in August — he said he is more of an "optimist" about his mission.

"If you list the priorities of all sides, the priorities are remarkably similar," Zinke said. "Everyone is talking about protection of the cultural resources, everyone is talking about making sure we have public access. A lot of people are rightly talking about infrastructure" like roads and bathrooms.

He dismissed concerns that any changes to the monument would prompt lawsuits, saying he plans to make recommendations on the "basis of doing what's right and not on the fear of litigation."

He later added: "I think there's a solution out there."

Zinke reiterated his assertion, however, that national monument status may not be the "right vehicle" for the Bears Ears area.

"All of the above," Zinke said when asked about the alternatives he could recommend. "The president has given me the flexibility to make a recommendation to him, and we have a lot of options."

Zinke did rule out the possibility of converting the area to a national park, which would require congressional action (E&E News PM, May 9).

But he said he could also ask Congress to step in to address the Bears Ears site or other monuments.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

"Congress has a role to play, too," Zinke said, before criticizing lawmakers for failing to address the area via legislation rather than allowing the White House to make the designation last year. "If Congress would have taken action earlier, probably a lot of the emotion around this wouldn't have taken place. We have to be partners with Congress on this."

Although Congress has converted dozens of national monuments to national parks, it has less often opted to abolish monuments created under the Antiquities Act of 1906 — doing so fewer than a dozen times.

"I think it's important to work with Congress," Zinke later added. "I wanted to make sure that we include both sides of the aisle."

Trump issued an executive order last month mandating a review of all monuments created since 1996 that encompass more than 100,000 acres. Zinke could suggest that the president rescind or reduce the size of those sites, or recommend changes to management plans.

'Unbalanced tour'

Protesters who have trailed Zinke throughout his visit to the state could not access the private Dugout Ranch site yesterday morning, opting instead to greet the secretary's caravan 20 miles east, on the road that leads north to Moab or south to Monticello.

Proponents of the monument, including the Bears Ears Inter-Tribal Coalition, the Utah Diné Bikéyah and conservationists, have accused Zinke of spending the majority of his visit with opponents of the site.

"It does appear that they are predisposed to undo the monument in some way given the fact that he's had this unbalanced tour, spending the bulk of his time with monument opponents," said Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance Executive Director Scott Groene.

Groene criticized the Trump administration's efforts to backtrack on the Bears Ears monument, saying that despite arguments from Bishop and Utah Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R) that Congress should have been allowed to address the site, "legislation is obviously not an alternative."

"The good alternative would be legislation, and they just went through an enormous effort for this very area and failed," Groene said. "They wasted a lot of our time for three years on the 'plundered land initiative' that they couldn't even get a House vote on."

Noting that the process has not begun yet on setting up management of the monument, he added: "No one has given this monument a chance yet."

BACK

57. Zinke rides with cattle ranchers working on Bears Ears

The Deseret News, May 10 | Amy Joi O'Donoghue

BEARS EARS, San Juan County — Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said Tuesday that in the context of Bears Ears National Monument, "cattle ranchers matter, too."

He put those words into action on a soggy afternoon, traversing 20-miles of winding, dirt road switchbacks on Elk Ridge Mountain in a 4-wheel drive vehicle to the Bears Ears grazing allotment managed by the U.S. Forest Service.

While the skies cleared, Zinke became acquainted with Payton, a tall flashy Tobiano paint mare who would take him through lush meadows high on south Elk Ridge Mountain, followed by a contingent of riders, including exclusive coverage by the Deseret News.

Zinke's no greenhorn on a horse and made plain to Utah cattle ranchers he understands what it's like to grow up in ranching country, with small towns, big dreams and tough challenges.

In a meadow, north of the Bears Ears buttes that rise 9,000 feet in elevation, he listened to Kenny Black talk about the controversial Bears Ears Monument designation made in December by President Barack Obama.

"There are a lot of protections in place," said Black, who began ranching in 2001 after buying a startup herd from his grandfather.

"There is nothing wrong with regular public land," he said.

The San Juan County native worries that the monument designation will bring another reason for the federal government to cut back on grazing allotments.

Right now, he runs about 225 head of cattle on two federal allotments from the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management, which owns the majority of land inside the footprint of the 1.35-million-acre monument.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

The presidential proclamation setting up Bears Ears National Monument declares that existing grazing will be honored, but Black, the Ivins family and the Johnson family are skeptical.

"The main thing is that it opens up the door to more federal regulations and scrutiny," Black said. "No one knows what the future will bring."

Zinke's visit to Bears Ears is part of an executive order directing the Montana native to review 27 monument designations — and come up with an answer on Bears Ears by early June — an unprecedented undertaking in the history of America's management of public lands.

Native American tribes, backed by environmental and conservation groups, pushed for a 1.9 million acre monument designation for Bears Ears, a successful act that Utah and San Juan County leaders called an affront to their concerns over how the sweeping landscape will be managed.

"Bears Ears is a little large to me. Beautiful country," Zinke said, jostling his horse to overstep sagebrush and fallen logs. He'd ridden some time in an unchanging landscape dotted with wildflowers and sagebrush, pine trees and soaked with rain.

That is what Black, Shawn Ivins and Sandy Johnson hoped he would see — large — that this country can accommodate ranching, hiking and Native American interests — without what they say is absentee dictatorship from Washington.

Zinke said that won't be the case any longer.

"We are going to pivot and change," he said. "Some of it is cultural within the department itself. But we want to be the 'advocate, the yep' team."

There was a moment when he brought his horse to attention and just stopped on the ride.

"I don't want to overemphasize respect."

In the Bears Ears controversy, this is the second time an Interior secretary visited southeast Utah to conduct a listening tour.

No one disagrees about the differences between Zinke's visit and that of Interior Secretary Sally Jewell in 2016.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

Sen. David Hinkins, R-Orangeville, just laughed at the contrast and shook his head.

"No comparison," he said. His smile was barely contained.

With Jewell's visit, monument critics were full of sighs, uptight, resigned. It's different now with Zinke.

"It was night and day," said San Juan County Commissioner Rebecca Benally, sporting a Brigham Young University ball cap while riding a dainty bay.

She said Jewell gave them 30 minutes in her listening tour, and listened to the coalition and Utah Dine Bikeyah — which spearheaded the proposal for the last seven years — for a day.

"I think he wants to listen to us."

That contrast has now put the opposing side in an attack mode, with Utah Dine Bikeyah issuing a statement that Zinke failed to give them enough time while he was here.

Board Chairman Willie Grayeyes said the one hour visit was a "tip of the hat" but worried it would not give the secretary the full story about the reasons for the monument push.

Grayeyes is an affable and sincere believer in the monument, and he is worried his voice, and that of the Navajo, are not being heard.

So do Sandy Johnson and Shawn Ivins, local ranchers who say there has never been such push for a monument until a few years ago.

"I've been coming off that mountain pretty much all my life, but until a few years ago is the only time I've heard of the Native Americans coming up here," Ivins said.

Is it an Old West fight about cowboys and the Native Americans who were here first?

Zinke, taking his military training to bear, was a Western diplomat: "I am an optimist."

He rode through hail and sleet and blinding wind. Next came mud and 20 miles to pavement. The storm had directed Zinke's destiny where it might be dicey, and the big mare named Payton was left to watch him go.

"I think he enjoyed himself. Away from all the crazy things," the rancher Black said.

BACK

58. NATIONAL MONUMENTS: Zinke review could open 2.7M acres to development — report

E & E News, May 10 | Jennifer Yachnin

BLANDING, Utah — Boundary changes to a half-dozen national monuments could open up 2.7 million acres of land to fossil fuel extraction, according to a new analysis released by Greenpeace this morning.

The environmental advocacy group compared maps of existing monuments with data from the U.S. Energy Information Administration, U.S. Geological Survey and other sources to examine areas with prospective oil, gas or coal deposits.

Greenpeace identified six national monuments with the largest potential energy development: Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante in Utah, Canyons of the Ancients in Colorado, San Gabriel Mountains and Carrizo Plain in California, and the Upper Missouri River Breaks in Montana.

"These are the spectacular landscapes whose rugged contours and breathtaking views have defined America's history and identity for centuries," Greenpeace spokesman Travis Nichols said in a statement. "They are the common heritage of everyone in our country and must be preserved for future generations."

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is reviewing the status of 27 national monuments and is set to issue a report by late August recommending boundary changes or wholesale rescission of monuments, or amendments to management plans.

President Trump ordered the review late last month, requiring an assessment of all monuments created since 1996 that contain over 100,000 acres, as well as individual monuments selected by the Interior secretary.

Zinke is in Utah this week visiting the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante monuments, which have been the target of complaints from GOP state and congressional leaders.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

DAILY NEWS REPORT - UTAH

An Interior spokeswoman could not immediately respond to a request for comment, but the agency told Greenpeace that the review is about "land management decisions" from local stakeholders.

"There is no pre-determined outcome on any monument currently under review," the Interior statement said.

Greenpeace spokesman Nichols accused Trump — who vowed to expand domestic energy extraction on public lands during his campaign — of attempting to "carve up these beautiful lands into corporate giveaways for the oil and gas industry."

But speaking from the Bears Ears monument on Monday, Zinke dismissed suggestions that the review of the nation's newest monument was prompted by desires to develop the area.

"We also have a pretty good idea of certainly the oil and gas potential: not much. So, Bears Ears isn't really about oil and gas at all," Zinke said. "There's some uranium. [I'm] more and more concerned about the present mill that's there."

BACK

From: U.S. Department of the Interior
To: alex_hinson@ios.doi.gov; heather_swift@ios.doi.gov; laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior: TEST
Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2017 2:58:56 PM

news release

Date: July 12, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

Tribal Leaders, Congressional Officials, Others Praise Selection

WASHINGTON – U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced the appointment of former Interior Department official and former Chief of Staff to Rep. Steve Pearce (NM) Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior. In this role, Willens will work closely with yet-to-be-confirmed Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt. Willens brings with him more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and the private sector. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

"In addition to being a westerner, Todd brings a strong combination of public and private sector experience to the Interior Department," Secretary Ryan Zinke said. "Most of Interior's holdings and responsibilities are in the West, and Todd's intimate understanding of the West, from growing up in rural California to his previous time at Interior to his tenure with Congressman Pearce, will be a major asset to the people we serve. I look forward to Todd helping us advance Interior's mission and the work of the Administration on behalf of local communities."

"It is an honor and privilege to be appointed as Interior's Assistant Deputy Secretary," Willens said. "I thank Secretary Zinke for his confidence in my abilities to serve the Department and the Administration. I look forward to getting to work contributing to the implementation of the President's priorities for the Department and our Agencies, making America great again."

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017. During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

"Todd's dedication to New Mexico and the West made him a most effective manager of people and policies," Congressman Pearce said. "More than anything though, my wife Cynthia and I consider him a close friend. He has run my congressional operations for nearly seven years and been my top adviser on numerous items, delivering countless successes on my behalf. I congratulate Todd and the Administration on his appointment to this important position."

"The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior," Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. "In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country. As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset."

"I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular," Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. "Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration."

"The Tehama Colusa Canal Authority couldn't be more pleased with the selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary at the Department of the Interior," Jeff Sutton, General Manager of the Tehama Colusa Canal Authority, said. "A native of Northern California, Todd has a great deal of experience in Western water issues and, as a sportsman-conservationist, he has a long track record of delivering mutually beneficial policy outcomes for the benefit of fish, wildlife and water users throughout the Western United States. We look forward to working with Todd in his new capacity."

"The Civil War Trust strongly supports the appointment of Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior," James Lighthizer, President of the Civil War Trust, said. "In his previous service on Capitol Hill and in the Department of the Interior, Todd has been a champion of our national parks and historic battlefield sites. We are excited about the opportunity to partner with him to preserve America's battlefield parks as places of remembrance as well as heritage tourism destinations."

"The Boone and Crockett Club proudly supports Todd Willens' appointment," said Paul Phillips, co-chair of the Boone and Crockett Club's Policy Committee. "Mr. Willens is a conservationist who hunts. He has this personal passion and understands the ecological and economic benefits that follow for the public. His experience in the complexities of policy at the Department of the Interior will serve the country and conservation community all very well."

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald

Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill. A California native, Willens is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

###

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to Email Address by: U.S. Department of the Interior · 1849 C Street, N.W. · Washington DC 20240 · 202-208-3100

From: U.S. Department of the Interior
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior
Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2017 3:18:45 PM

news release

Date: July 12, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

Tribal Leaders, Congressional Officials, Others Praise Selection

WASHINGTON – U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced the appointment of former Interior Department official and former Chief of Staff to Rep. Steve Pearce (NM) Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior. In this role, Willens will work closely with yet-to-be-confirmed Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt. Willens brings with him more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and the private sector. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

"In addition to being a westerner, Todd brings a strong combination of public and private sector experience to the Interior Department," Secretary Ryan Zinke said. "Most of Interior's holdings and responsibilities are in the West, and Todd's intimate understanding of the West, from growing up in rural California to his previous time at Interior to his tenure with Congressman Pearce, will be a major asset to the people we serve. I look forward to Todd helping us advance Interior's mission and the work of the Administration on behalf of local communities."

"It is an honor and privilege to be appointed as Interior's Assistant Deputy Secretary," Willens said. "I thank Secretary Zinke for his confidence in my abilities to serve the Department and the Administration. I look forward to getting to work contributing to the implementation of the President's priorities for the Department and our Agencies, making America great again."

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017. During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

"Todd's dedication to New Mexico and the West made him a most effective manager of people and policies," Congressman Pearce said. "More than anything though, my wife Cynthia and I consider him a close friend. He has run my congressional operations for nearly seven years and been my top adviser on numerous items, delivering countless successes on my behalf. I congratulate Todd and the Administration on his appointment to this important position."

"The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior," Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. "In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country. As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset."

"I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular," Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. "Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration."

"The Tehama Colusa Canal Authority couldn't be more pleased with the selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary at the Department of the Interior," Jeff Sutton, General Manager of the Tehama Colusa Canal Authority, said. "A native of Northern California, Todd has a great deal of experience in Western water issues and, as a sportsman-conservationist, he has a long track record of delivering mutually beneficial policy outcomes for the benefit of fish, wildlife and water users throughout the Western United States. We look forward to working with Todd in his new capacity."

"The Civil War Trust strongly supports the appointment of Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior," James Lighthizer, President of the Civil War Trust, said. "In his previous service on Capitol Hill and in the Department of the Interior, Todd has been a champion of our national parks and historic battlefield sites. We are excited about the opportunity to partner with him to preserve America's battlefield parks as places of remembrance as well as heritage tourism destinations."

"The Boone and Crockett Club proudly supports Todd Willens' appointment," said Paul Phillips, co-chair of the Boone and Crockett Club's Policy Committee. "Mr. Willens is a conservationist who hunts. He has this personal passion and understands the ecological and economic benefits that follow for the public. His experience in the complexities of policy at the Department of the Interior will serve the country and conservation community all very well."

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill. A California native, Willens is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

###

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to heather_swift@ios.doi.gov by: U.S. Department of the Interior · 1849 C Street, N.W. · Washington DC 20240 · 202-208-3100

From: U.S. Department of the Interior
To: alex_hinson@ios.doi.gov; heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior: TEST
Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2017 2:23:09 PM

news release

Date: July 12, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Ryan Zinke Appoints Veteran Interior Official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

Tribal Leaders, Congressional Officials, Others Praise Selection

WASHINGTON – U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced the appointment of former Interior Department official and former Chief of Staff to Rep. Steve Pearce (NM) Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior. In this role, Willens will work closely with yet-to-be-confirmed Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt. Willens brings with him more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and the private sector. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

In addition to being a westerner, Todd brings a strong combination of public and private sector experience to the Interior Department," Secretary Ryan Zinke said. "Most of Interior's holdings and responsibilities are in the West, and Todd's intimate understanding of the West, from growing up in rural California to his previous time at Interior to his tenure with Congressman Pearce, will be a major asset to the people we serve. I look forward to Todd helping us advance Interior's mission and the work of the Administration on behalf of local communities."

"It is an honor and privilege to be appointed as Interior's Assistant Deputy Secretary," Willens said. "I thank Secretary Zinke for his confidence in my abilities to serve the Department and the Administration. I look forward to getting to work contributing to the implementation of the President's priorities for the Department and our Agencies, making America great again."

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017. During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

"Todd's dedication to New Mexico and the West made him a most effective manager of people and policies," Congressman Pearce said. "More than anything though, my wife Cynthia and I consider him a close friend. He has run my congressional operations for nearly seven years and been my top adviser on numerous items, delivering countless successes on my behalf. I congratulate Todd and the Administration on his appointment to this important position."

"The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior," Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. "In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country. As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset."

"I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular," Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. "Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration."

"The Tehama Colusa Canal Authority couldn't be more pleased with the selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary at the Department of the Interior," Jeff Sutton, General Manager of the Tehama Colusa Canal Authority, said. "A native of Northern California, Todd has a great deal of experience in Western water issues and, as a sportsman-conservationist, he has a long track record of delivering mutually beneficial policy outcomes for the benefit of fish, wildlife and water users throughout the Western United States. We look forward to working with Todd in his new capacity."

"The Civil War Trust strongly supports the appointment of Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior," James Lighthizer, President of the Civil War Trust, said. "In his previous service on Capitol Hill and in the Department of the Interior, Todd has been a champion of our national parks and historic battlefield sites. We are excited about the opportunity to partner with him to preserve America's battlefield parks as places of remembrance as well as heritage tourism destinations."

"The Boone and Crockett Club proudly supports Todd Willens' appointment," said Paul Phillips, co-chair of the Boone and Crockett Club's Policy Committee. "Mr. Willens is a conservationist who hunts. He has this personal passion and understands the ecological and economic benefits that follow for the public. His experience in the complexities of policy at the Department of the Interior will serve the country and conservation community all very well."

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald

Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill. A California native, Willens is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

###

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to Email Address by: U.S. Department of the Interior · 1849 C Street, N.W. · Washington DC 20240 · 202-208-3100

From: Center for Western Priorities
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Secretary Ryan Zinke goes on Mediterranean vacation with one week left in his monuments attack
Date: Thursday, August 17, 2017 11:46:23 AM

CONTACT

Aaron Weiss, Media Director Center for Western Priorities
aaron@westernpriorities.org
720-279-0019

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

AUGUST 17, 2017

Secretary Zinke goes on Mediterranean vacation with only one week left to decide the fate of more than a dozen monuments he's never visited

DENVER—One week from today, Interior Secretary Zinke is due to decide the fate of dozens of national monuments protected over the last two decades. Secretary Zinke, who President Trump placed in charge of the review, promised that he would listen to and engage with local communities and national monument stakeholders before permanently closing any national monument lands.

Rather than spending his final week hearing from local communities who have worked tirelessly to protect their natural and cultural heritage as national monuments, Secretary Zinke is on vacation in the Mediterranean. His wife, Lola Zinke, tweeted a picture early this morning of herself and Secretary Zinke enjoying a sunrise on the Bosphorus Strait.

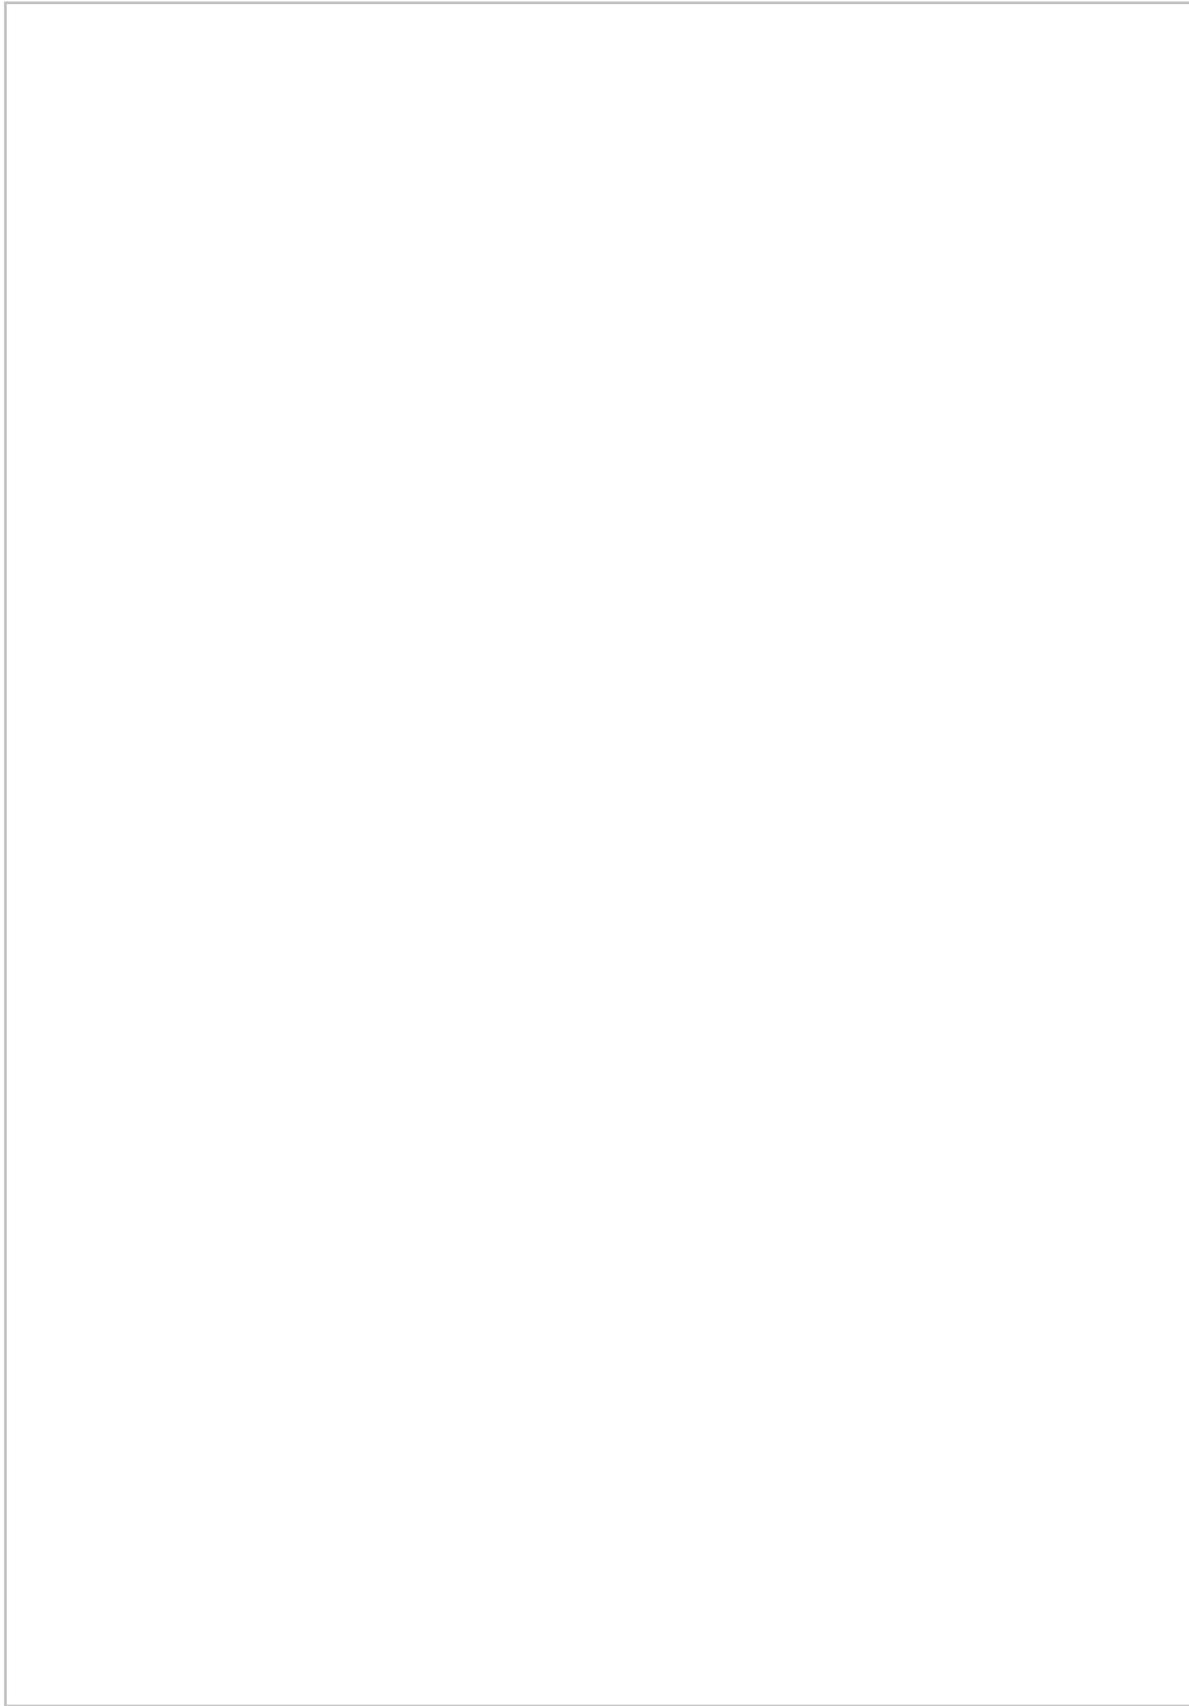

With only seven days remaining in the review, the secretary has failed to visit most of the national monuments on the chopping block. Of the 27 monuments under consideration for elimination, Secretary Zinke has visited and met with stakeholders at only 8 of them. The visits Secretary Zinke has made were marked by controversy, failing to meet key stakeholders and even admitting to a group of veterans in New Mexico that his mind was made up to eliminate national monuments.

The secretary is not expected to make other site visits prior to the August 24th deadline. In advance of next week's decision, the Center for Western Priorities issued the following statement from Deputy Director Greg Zimmerman:

"Our national monuments are full of beautiful places to take a summer trip.

Secretary Zinke promised a rigorous analysis of national monuments, but what the American public got was a sham review and a foreign vacation. If he bothered to listen, Secretary Zinke would have found that national monuments are cornerstones of Western economies, that they protect exceptional and unique lands, and, most of all, that virtually no Americans support eliminating national monuments. I worry, instead, he's moving to permanently shut down national monuments."

Additional Resources

- Zinke vs. Zinke on National Monuments: Conflicting statements show review lacks consistent criteria, rigorous analysis
- Analysis finds near-unanimous support of Bears Ears and other national monuments as public comment period closes, including a 9-to-1 margin among Utahns
- Make no mistake: The Trump administration's monument review is an attack on our national parks

###

The Center for Western Priorities is a conservation policy and advocacy organization focused on land and energy issues across the American West.

Center for Western Priorities | 820 16th Street Ste 450, Denver, CO 80202 | 303.974.7761

unsubscribe from this list | view email in browser

From: Nachmany, Eli
To: Laura Rigas
Cc: Newell, Russell; Heather Swift
Subject: SECRETARY: Upcoming Speaking Engagements
Date: Thursday, September 07, 2017 5:19:00 PM
Attachments: Upcoming Speaking Engagements 0907.docx

Laura,

As requested, here is an exhaustive summary of all upcoming Secretary speaking engagements that Leila has sent us. I will update this document periodically and send it along, and can even make this into a constantly-updating Google Doc if you think it to be a better idea than the calendar (probably easier to organize and easier to read).

This is all draft text and I welcome edits, suggestions, etc. I've left the Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation event information a bit bare, as Heather suggested I pull from RZ interview tomorrow. Working on two different speeches for 9/11 (one for 9/10, one for 9/11). Russ and I have connected on DepSec speech for hunting, and will work on getting this done.

Document is attached and text is also included below in the body for your convenience.
Thanks.

Upcoming Speaking Engagements for Secretary Ryan Zinke (Strategic Calendar)

September 10, 2017

EVENT: Flight 93 Soundbreaking for "Tower of Voices"

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Shanksville, PA

NOTES: 3 minute remarks, keynote speech is September 11th VPOTUS (Secretary introducing him for 3 minutes there as well)

TYPE: Formal, but brief enough for notecard

AUDIENCE: General public

PRESS: Open

September 13, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation Annual Banquet -- VIP Reception and Banquet

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Dovetails with broader push for sportsmen engagement

TYPE: Secretary likely doesn't need formal remarks here, given familiarity with the issues and the audience; "5-10 minutes of remarks about his passion for the outdoors and highlight one or two top priorities he's focusing on as Secretary."

AUDIENCE: Foundation VIPs and reception guests

PRESS: Closed

September 20, 2017

EVENT: Wonders of Wildlife Museum and Aquarium at the Bass Pro HQ -- Gala Dinner Event

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Springfield, MO

NOTES: Event staff sent over detailed information, will sort through prior to drafting remarks

TYPE: Informal remarks on conservation, appreciation of the outdoors/wildlife, likely one notecard is fine

AUDIENCE: Conservation leaders

PRESS: Closed

September 22, 2017

EVENT: NRA Women's Leadership Forum Summit

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Irving, TX

NOTES: Secretary could talk about strong women in his personal life (mother, wife, daughter) or professional life (military, political staff, Cabinet/Congressional colleagues). Big theme of NRA Women's push recently has been safety for females – women are safer when allowed to conceal carry.

TYPE: Formal, keynote remarks – opportunity to tell stories here

AUDIENCE: NRA forum participants, likely heavy female demographic

PRESS: Closed

September 25, 2017

EVENT: National Stone Sand and Gravel Association Legislative and Policy Forum

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Seems like a niche topic that may require specific remarks – will need to coordinate here with OCL. Website notes “Waters of the U.S. rule,” “MSHA’s workplace exams rule,” and “long term highway funding” as topics to be discussed over the forum, which runs 4 days all told. This one is likely worth a call to Association POC.

TYPE: Formal, 10 minute remarks on aggregates production and “ESA” issues – flagging for prebrief on this unless Secretary is particularly well-read here, Q&A is included

AUDIENCE: Industry folks and other forum attendees

PRESS: Likely industry press

September 26, 2017

EVENT: Jefferson Island Club Citizen of the Year Award

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Secretary is being honored as Citizen of the Year; it's for “legislators who have distinguished themselves for their outstanding leadership, dedication to public service, and contributions in the spirit of America's founding fathers.”

TYPE: Informal remarks, will reach out to find out more about the event

AUDIENCE: Jefferson Island Club members

PRESS: Closed

October 11, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Coal Caucus

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: U.S. recently announced first-ever coal export to Ukraine, WSJ piece on “Coal Makes a Comeback” has good nuggets as well. Secretary was a member of the Caucus. Blake Deeley running point on this from OCL, finding out if we want to put in an “ask” or “call to action.”

TYPE: Informal, brief remarks at a roundtable

AUDIENCE: Members of Congress and their staff

PRESS: Closed

November 9, 2017

EVENT: America First Energy Conference (Heartland Institute)

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Houston, TX

NOTES: Organization appears very pro-administration, focused on deregulation

TYPE: Formal remarks, possibly good to write them out given specificity of deregulation accomplishments and opportunity to get back on energy as hunting season winds down

AUDIENCE: Conference attendees (energy industry and policy folks)

PRESS: Presumably closed, will check

MISC. FLAGGING: Upcoming Deputy Secretary speech on hunting, upcoming Secretary speech on energy (Heritage Foundation), upcoming Vincent DeVito speech on tech (Oceans 17)

--

Sincerely,
Eli Nachmany
Writer, U.S. Department of the Interior
Office of Communications

From: Nachmany, Eli
To: Laura Rigas
Cc: Newell, Russell; Heather Swift; Alex Hinson
Subject: Secretary's Strategic Calendar UPDATE 09/13
Date: Wednesday, September 13, 2017 2:42:50 PM
Attachments: Upcoming Speaking Engagements.docx

All,

Below and attached, please find an updated strategic calendar for the Secretary's speaking engagements. New events on the schedule are highlighted in yellow.

Upcoming Speaking Engagements for Secretary Ryan Zinke (Strategic Calendar)

September 13, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation Annual Banquet -- VIP Reception and Banquet

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Dovetails with broader push for sportsmen engagement, remarks written

TYPE: Secretary likely doesn't need formal remarks here, given familiarity with the issues and the audience; "5-10 minutes of remarks about his passion for the outdoors and highlight one or two top priorities he's focusing on as Secretary."

AUDIENCE: Foundation VIPs and reception guests

PRESS: Closed

September 20, 2017

EVENT: Wonders of Wildlife Museum and Aquarium at the Bass Pro HQ -- Gala Dinner Event

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Springfield, MO

NOTES: Event staff sent over detailed information, will sort through prior to drafting remarks

TYPE: Informal remarks on conservation, appreciation of the outdoors/wildlife, likely one notecard is fine

AUDIENCE: Conservation leaders

PRESS: Closed

September 22, 2017

EVENT: NRA Women's Leadership Forum Summit

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Irving, TX

NOTES: Secretary could talk about strong women in his personal life (grandmother, wife, daughter). Big theme of NRA is how women are "backbone" of organization.

TYPE: Formal, keynote remarks – opportunity to tell stories here

AUDIENCE: NRA forum participants, likely heavy female demographic

PRESS: Closed

September 25, 2017

EVENT: National Stone Sand and Gravel Association Legislative and Policy Forum

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Seems like a niche topic that may require specific remarks – will need to coordinate here with OCL. Scheduling notes highlight Endangered Species Act policy speech.

TYPE: Formal, 10 minute remarks on ESA issues – flagging for prebrief on this unless Secretary is particularly well-read here, Q&A is included.

AUDIENCE: Industry folks and other forum attendees

PRESS: Likely industry press

EVENT: National Petroleum Council Meeting

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Secretary Perry from Energy will also be there, and the invitation discusses inter-agency collaboration and the Trump Administration's commitment to development. This could be a good place to preview/work through the Heritage speech, which is teed up to be a major policy address on energy.

TYPE: The invitation asks, in regard to the remarks, for the message of “a coordinated Administration working together to address energy issues. Such would be a continuation of the spirit displayed at the June 29 Energy Week event at the Department of Energy when you joined Secretary Perry, the President, Vice President, and other Administration officials.”

AUDIENCE: Members of the National Petroleum Council

PRESS: Open

September 26, 2017

EVENT: Jefferson Island Club Citizen of the Year Award

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Secretary is being honored as Citizen of the Year; it’s for “legislators who have distinguished themselves for their outstanding leadership, dedication to public service, and contributions in the spirit of America’s founding fathers.”

TYPE: Informal remarks, will reach out to find out more about the event

AUDIENCE: Jefferson Island Club members

PRESS: Closed

September 29, 2017

EVENT: Heritage Foundation Energy Speech

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Meeting with Vincent DeVito, who’s been tasked with typing up the first draft of the remarks

TYPE: Formal remarks, policy speech

AUDIENCE: Heritage Foundation

PRESS: Likely closed

October 11, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Coal Caucus

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: U.S. recently announced first-ever coal export to Ukraine, WSJ piece on “Coal Makes a Comeback” has good nuggets as well. Secretary was a member of the Caucus. Blake Deeley running point on this from OCL, finding out if we want to put in an “ask” or “call to action.”

TYPE: Informal, brief remarks at a roundtable

AUDIENCE: Members of Congress and their staff

PRESS: Closed

November 9, 2017

EVENT: America First Energy Conference (Heartland Institute)

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Houston, TX

NOTES: Organization appears very pro-administration, focused on deregulation

TYPE: Formal remarks, possibly good to write them out given specificity of deregulation accomplishments and opportunity to get back on energy as hunting season winds down

AUDIENCE: Conference attendees (energy industry and policy folks)

PRESS: Presumably closed, will check

MISC. FLAGGING: Upcoming Vincent DeVito speech on tech at Oceans 17, 09/20

--

Sincerely,
Eli Nachmany
Writer, U.S. Department of the Interior
Office of Communications

From: Esther Whieldon
To: BLM main press email; Heather Swift; Interior Press
Subject: Seeking verification/comment -- Steed taking over BLM
Date: Thursday, November 16, 2017 11:18:50 AM

Can you please confirm the contents of this email - that Zinke has appointed Steed as acting BLM director? What day did Zinke make the appointment and why did he decided to do this? Also, please address how the agency is dealing with the limitations of any BLM acting director's authority now that the vacancies act has kicked in and Trump has not nominated anyone for BLM director yet.

I'd love to have a response by noon if possible.

Thanks, Esther

From: "Nedd, Michael" <mnedd@blm.gov>
Date: November 15, 2017 at 3:03:21 PM PST
To: BLM_All_Employees <blm_all_employees@blm.gov>
Subject: BLM Acting Director

BLM employees:

This week, Secretary Ryan Zinke appointed Brian Steed as Acting Director of the BLM, and I want to welcome him as he begins his journey leading this great agency. John Ruhs and I have worked alongside Brian since his appointment as Deputy Director for Programs and Policy in October, and we have come to know his ethic, his intellect, and his passion for our multiple-use and sustained yield mission. His experience includes working as Chief of Staff to U.S. Representative Chris Stewart of Utah, teaching and researching economics at the University of Utah, and serving as a Deputy County Attorney in Iron County, Utah. He is a native of Logan, Utah, and now resides in Northern Virginia with his wife and three children. Brian's western heritage and values make him a perfect fit for the BLM team.

Since March 15, I have had the honor of leading the BLM. Your tireless dedication to our mission inspires me every day. DOI leaders continually express their confidence in the BLM's leadership in the field and here in Washington, which is a testament to all of you. Thank you for supporting me as the Acting Director over these months, and remaining as ever BLM strong.

During the coming weeks, John and I will transition to different roles. John will return to his position as BLM Nevada State Director, and I will assume the duties of Acting Deputy Director for Operations. I appreciate John's sacrifice over the past seven months while he has lived away from his family and the wide open spaces that he loves.

Please join me in welcoming Brian to his new position. As we move forward, let's continue to stay focused on our shared mission and values that guide us in our stewardship of America's public lands.

Take care and have a wonderful day! :)
Michael D. Nedd

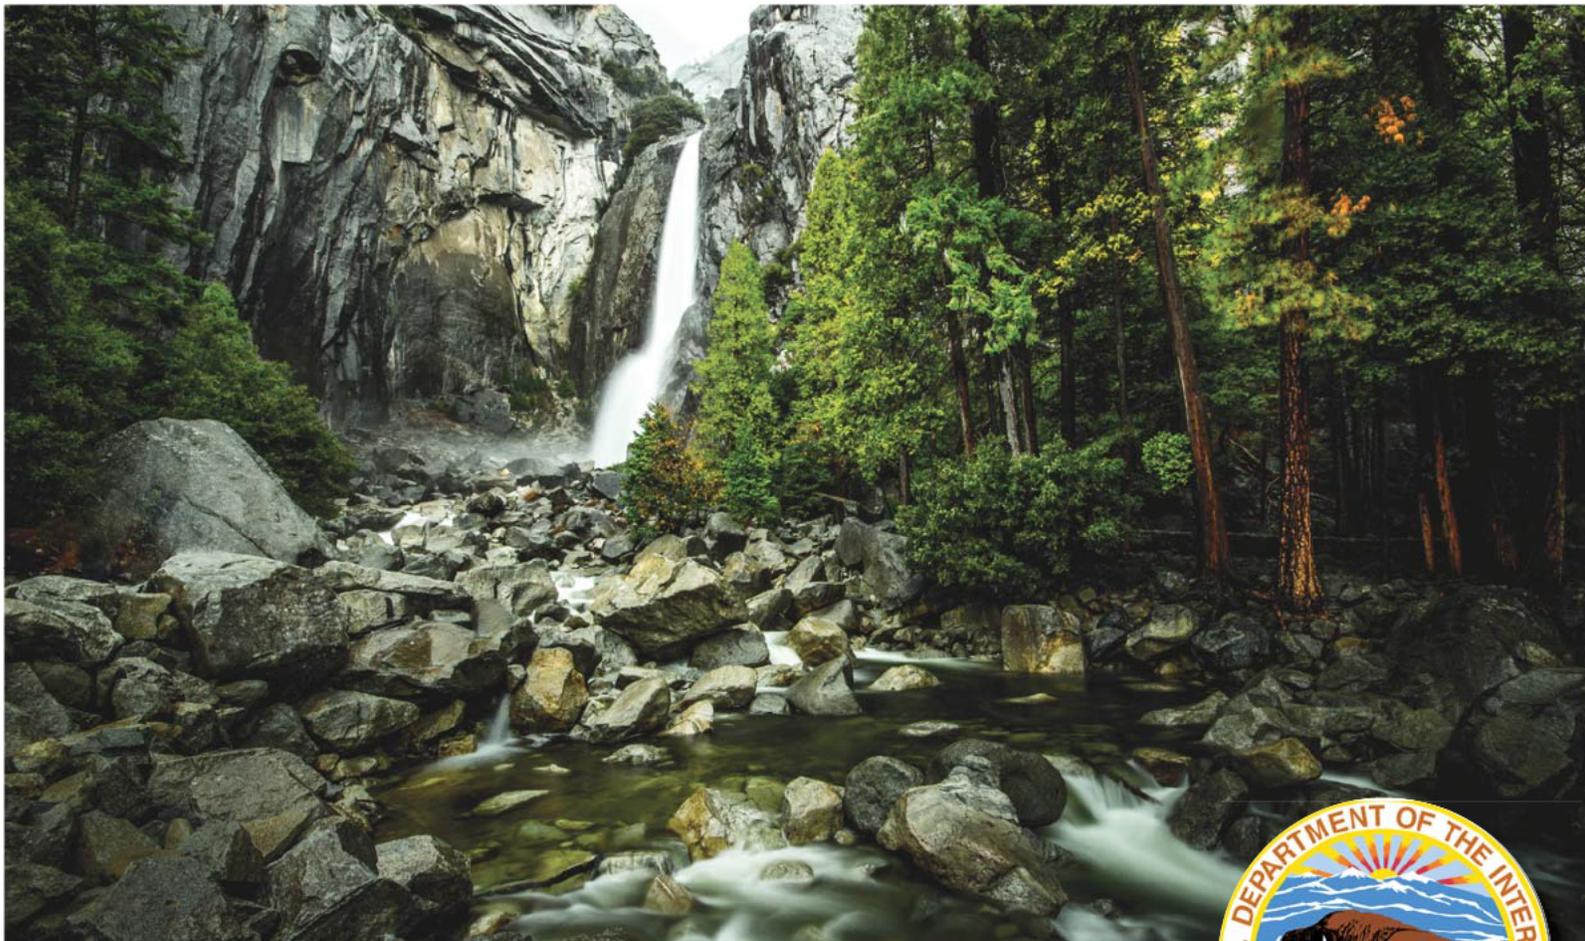

Esther Whieldon
Reporter
POLITICO
301-213-4370 (mobile)
703-672-2788 (office)
ewhieldon@politico.com
Twitter: @esthernow

OFFICE OF
INSPECTOR GENERAL
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

SEMIANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS

for the period ending March 31, 2017

October 1, 2016 - March 31, 2017

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Our Operating Principles	i
A Message From Deputy Inspector General Mary Kendall.....	ii
2016 Organizational Assessment	iii
2016 Top Management Challenges	iv
Financial and Contract Audits	1
Bureau of Land Management.....	7
Investigative	8
Bureau of Reclamation	9
Audit	10
Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement	14
Investigative	15
Indian Affairs	16
Audit	17
Investigative	17
Insular Affairs	23
Audit	24

October 1, 2016 - March 31, 2017

TABLE OF CONTENTS

National Park Service	25
Investigative	26
Office of Natural Resources Revenue	32
Investigative	33
Office of the Secretary and Multi-Office Assignments	34
Audit	35
Investigative	38
Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement	41
Audit	42
U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service	46
Investigative	47
U.S. Geological Survey	52
Audit	53
Investigative	53
Appendices	55
Cross References to the Inspector General Act	88
OIG Contact Information	90

OUR OPERATING PRINCIPLES

As the Office of Inspector General (OIG) for the U.S. Department of the Interior (DOI), we provide independent oversight and promote excellence, integrity, and accountability within DOI's programs, operations, and management. We do this by conducting audits, inspections, evaluations, and investigations.

We keep the Secretary and Congress informed of problems and deficiencies relating to the administration of DOI programs and operations. As a result of us fulfilling these responsibilities, Americans can expect greater accountability and integrity in Government program administration.

Our core values define a shared OIG way, guiding employee behavior and decisions at all levels. Adhering to these values—objectivity and independence, integrity, and getting results—we build a foundation to develop trustworthy information that improves DOI.

- Objectivity and independence define us and are the bedrock of our credibility. These concepts are closely related. Any impairment to independence would impact objectivity. OIG and its employees must remain independent from undue outside influence and approach work with intellectual honesty.
- Integrity is a character trait and a way of doing business. By acting with integrity in all we do, we build a reputation for producing actionable and accurate work.
- Getting results depends on individual and team efforts. We positively impact DOI by detecting fraud and other wrongdoing, deterring unethical behavior and preventing deleterious outcomes, confirming programs achieved intended results and were fiscally responsible, and highlighting effective practices.

A Message From Deputy Inspector General Mary Kendall

I am pleased to submit this semiannual report detailing the work we completed between October 1, 2016, and March 31, 2017. Our successful efforts to promote excellence, integrity, and accountability within DOI's programs, operations, and management happen with a small, highly trained and motivated workforce made up of auditors, investigators, attorneys, analysts, and various support staff.

In the last 6 months, our audits have uncovered systemic issues for potentially all of DOI's charge card policies and practices, and revealed that DOI's high-value information technology assets are not fully protected. We found that the U.S. Geological Survey and DOI's climate science centers and landscape conservation cooperatives lack necessary transparency, and we identified millions of dollars in potentially wasted funds by the Bureau of Reclamation pursuant to a cooperative agreement.

Our investigative work revealed mismanagement and wrongdoing by senior Government officials, to include multiple cases of ethical misconduct and violations by a Bureau of Land Management supervisory agent, a senior executive service Office of Acquisition and Property Management employee, and National Park Service and Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) employees. We also investigated instances of retaliation and sexual harassment, improper contract awards, and theft of Federal funds on Indian land.

In its "2017 High-Risk Report," the Government Accountability Office added the efficiency and effectiveness of Federal programs that serve American Indian tribes and their members as a new high-risk area—one with great vulnerability to fraud, waste, and mismanagement. We have certainly seen this to be true in our own work highlighted in this report, as well as work reported in our previous semiannual reports to Congress.

Our work has brought to light deficiencies in BIA's efforts to develop tribal energy resources, to manage tribal education programs and healthcare services, and to promote processes to secure tribal money against theft.

We continue to publish the results of all of our investigations, audits, inspections, and evaluations on our website, ensuring the entire scope of our work is available to the public. In addition, we have launched an in-house standardization effort designed to make our internal work processes more fluid and our report processes quicker, without compromising accuracy or completeness.

As we welcome a new Administration, we will remain focused on our mission to provide independent and objective oversight, and continue to provide the Secretary of the Interior, Congress, and the public with timely, accurate, and actionable reports to improve DOI's programs and operations.

Deputy Inspector General

2016 ORGANIZATIONAL ASSESSMENT

The Organizational Assessment Report recaps our performance annually, summarizing our most significant FY 2016 achievements. More specifically, the report highlights how we have promoted excellence in DOI and held wrongdoers accountable.

These achievements resulted from our investigations, audits, inspections, and evaluations, as well as improvements in how we work internally and include—

- investigations on sexual harassment at two National Park Service locations that led to congressional hearings, international media attention, and actions by DOI to combat harassment agency-wide;
- work that revealed that the Bureau of Indian Education Director inappropriately hired two individuals, resulting in his removal from the position in March 2016;
- work that helped ensure DOI addressed unacceptable health and safety conditions for children in Indian Country schools;
- audit work that hastened the notification of customers of the U.S. Geological Survey Energy Geochemistry Laboratory in Lakewood, CO, about scientific misconduct and data manipulation issues at the lab;
- work that identified approximately $12.6 million in questioned costs and recommendations for funds to be put to better use; and
- work that helped recover almost $7.4 million through criminal penalties.

Likewise, special projects and internal improvements helped us be more effective in meeting our mission. For example—

- to encourage DOI to take action based on our findings, we implemented a new policy to publicly post the results of most investigations;
- we took steps to increase our information technology security;
- we increased the capacity of auditors and investigators in the Insular Areas to ensure good stewardship of Federal funding; and
- we excelled in our scores on the Governmentwide “Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey” results.

These achievements are possible only through the work and dedication of a highly qualified, trained, and motivated workforce.

2016 TOP MANAGEMENT CHALLENGES

The 2016 Top Management Challenges Report summarizes the most significant management and performance challenges facing DOI. By statute—the Reports Consolidation Act of 2000—this list is required to be included in DOI’s “Agency Financial Report” for fiscal year 2016.

Eight challenge areas are included in this year’s report—

- Energy management,
- Climate effects,
- Information technology,
- Water programs,
- Responsibility to American Indians and Insular Areas,
- Acquisition and financial assistance,
- Public safety and disaster response, and
- Operational efficiencies.

These challenge areas reflect continuing vulnerabilities and the emerging issues that DOI faces. These are the challenges we see as potential barriers to departmental efforts to promote economy, efficiency, and effectiveness in bureau management and operations.

Reporting Highlights

Financial and Contract Audits

Contract and Grant Audits Identified $3.6 Million in Questioned Costs and Deficient Oversight

Audits of contracts and grants that DOI awarded to six recipients identified a potential cost savings to the Government of $3.6 million out of $10.2 million in claimed costs. In addition, five of these audits identified deficient oversight by the bureaus. We made 34 recommendations to DOI related to the contracts and grants we audited, and we focused on recovering questioned costs and improving oversight. DOI is working with all audited recipients to recover costs and resolve these matters.

Hurricane Sandy Audits

In response to our Hurricane Sandy efforts, we audited three contracts totaling $5.8 million and questioned $1.3 million in costs: one at the Statue of Liberty National Monument, one to facilitate educational and work opportunities for young people, and one to replace the outside communications infrastructure damaged by Hurricane Sandy.

Statue of Liberty National Monument Contract (Report No. 2016-CG-008)

In the Statue of Liberty National Monument audit, we found that the recipient claimed costs of $4,100,530 on contracts awarded by the National Park Service (NPS) to fund an irrigation system and repairs, including landscaping and hardscaping, at the Main Immigration Building at the Statue of Liberty National Monument. As a result of our audit, we questioned $257,493 that represented incomplete and inaccurate cost and pricing data, and costs that the contractor did not incur. We found that the recipient did not provide NPS with any support for the cost and pricing data in its proposal, as required by Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) § 15.408. During this audit, we also found that NPS did not obtain a fair and reasonable price or adequately oversee its contract with the recipient. As a result, NPS did not prevent or detect numerous problems, including inaccurate and incomplete supporting data for the cost proposal and oversight on the recipient's compliance with the FAR's "Limitations on Subcontracting" clause.

The Main Immigration Building on Ellis Island in New York Harbor

Educational and Work Youth Program Cooperative Agreement (Report No. 2015-ER-061)

We found that the recipient claimed costs of $1,649,916 on a cooperative agreement and three specific task agreements awarded by NPS that focused on assisting in the coordination and cleanup of NPS sites in the wake of Hurricane Sandy. The agreements were designed to facilitate educational and work opportunities for young people so that they could gain a better understanding of and appreciation for NPS' natural and cultural resources. As a result of our audit, we questioned $992,980 across the agreements, and identified noncompliance with contractual and regulatory requirements.

The recipient did not provide sufficient support for the in-kind matches it claimed under two of the agreements. We also identified inappropriate use of program management, training, and technology costs. In addition, the recipient had an inadequate accounting system to handle Federal funds, its required reporting was late and inaccurate, and it identified its teams inconsistently. Finally, the recipient's management of its volunteers may keep it from being able to match volunteer hours. For example, the recipient billed for in-kind matches by using estimates instead of actuals to calculate the in-kind contributions.

Communications Infrastructure Contract (Report No. 2016-CG-033)

We found that the recipient did not always comply with the applicable laws, contract clauses, and DOI guidance. Specifically, the contractor did not provide an environmental specialist, did not provide the data necessary to determine the contractor's compliance with the FAR's "Limitations on Subcontracting" clause, did not complete the percentage of completion sections in the invoices, and made mathematical and labor category errors in the certified payroll submissions.

For example, the recipient did not provide actual labor costs to NPS for NPS to evaluate the contractor's compliance with the FAR's Limitations on Subcontracting clause and submitted incomplete forms.

Piney Woods School Audit

The recipient claimed costs of $524,478 on a cooperative agreement awarded by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) that focused on supporting the BLM's Wild Horse and Burro program. We questioned that entire cooperative agreement amount because the recipient had an inadequate accounting system and lacked internal controls. While the recipient did provide value during the agreement, we found that the absence of these controls made it impossible to determine the allowability, allocability, and reasonableness of the recipient's claimed costs. We identified five issues related to the recipient's claimed costs, the amount owed on the agreement, recipient's compliance with the agreement terms and conditions, and BLM's compliance with the agreement terms and conditions.

Wild burro

Lower Brule Sioux Tribe – Bureau of Reclamation

We found that the recipient claimed interim costs of $4,042,500 on a cooperative agreement awarded by the Bureau of Reclamation (USBR). USBR awarded the agreement for the operation, maintenance, and administrative activities associated with the rural water system, which serves tribal and nontribal customers. Overall, we questioned $1,440,748, which included unsupported payments to related parties, subcontractors, and vendors; unsupported internal transactions in the recipient's accounting system; unsupported financial reporting; and unallowable payments to vendors.

We found that payments to related parties, subcontracts, and vendors did not have the detailed support for the cost. For example, an invoice for painting a water tower listed only the total amount with no additional support. The recipient could not provide contracts associated with the subcontractors.

Lastly, we identified internal control weaknesses involving recording and processing journal entries, accounting, and billing systems, as well as deficiencies affecting timeliness and the accuracy of allocating and invoicing costs. We also identified deficiencies with USBR's contract oversight and administration. USBR did not effectively review the contractor's SF-425 financial reporting: the recipient stated on the form that it had $883,432 in expenses but did not have the associated supporting documentation. DOI is working with all recipients to resolve these matters and recover costs.

Lower Brule Sioux Tribe – Bureau of Indian Affairs

We found that the recipient claimed interim costs of $2,974,507 on an Indian self-determination contract awarded by the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA). BIA awarded the agreement for the facilities management program, and the recipient provided the necessary personnel, supplies, materials, equipment, facilities, and management services to accomplish the goals and objectives of this contract. The recipient also operated and administered the reservation's Facilities Management Operations and Maintenance, Education, Non-Education, Quarters Maintenance, and Detention Center buildings.

Overall, we questioned a total of $385,127, which included unsupported payments to related parties and vendors, unsupported internal transactions in the recipient's accounting system, and unallowable payments to vendors. We found that payments to related parties and vendors did not have detailed support for the cost. For example, an invoice for removing and installing a new sidewalk listed only the total amount with no additional support.

We identified internal control weaknesses involving recording and processing journal entries, accounting, and billing systems, as well as deficiencies affecting timeliness and the accuracy of allocating and invoicing costs. We also identified deficiencies with BIA's contract oversight and administration regarding the post-award process. The contract file was incomplete; it did not have all of the attachments included within the contract, and BIA could not provide the attachments identified within the contract. The recipient did not provide progress and financial reports to BIA on a quarterly basis. DOI is working with all recipients to resolve these matters and recover costs.

Audits of Wildlife and Sport Fish Grants Identified Nearly $4 Million in Potential Savings and Program Improvements

Through its Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program (WSFRP), the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) awards grants to States and territories that finance up to 75 percent (100 percent in territories) of projects, such as site development for boating access or the acquisition and management of natural habitats for game species. Under a reimbursable agreement with FWS, we audit all States and territories over a 5-year cycle, which is required by Federal law. In this semiannual period, we completed the audits of two agencies:

- State of Delaware, Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control, Division of Fish and Wildlife; and
- Government of the U.S. Virgin Islands, Department of Planning and Natural Resources.

In these audits, we identified nearly $3.9 million in ineligible costs or unsupported claims. In addition, we identified accounting and control issues that could expose WSFRP funds to some risk of misuse. In all, we provided 16 recommendations for program improvements. FWS is working with these agencies to resolve the issues and to recover costs where appropriate.

Delaware (Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control, Division of Fish and Wildlife)

In this audit, we identified issues with an ineligible match and unreconciled real property records.

Ineligible Match (Out-of-Period)

Under WSFRP, States must use State-matching (non-Federal) funds to cover at least 25 percent of costs incurred in performing projects under the grants. We found that the Division of Fish and Wildlife had claimed out-of-period, and therefore ineligible, amounts in its 25 percent. The Division cited past costs and the value of past donations as its current match. We did not question costs because the Division had received approval, erroneously, from the cognizant FWS Regional Office. When informed of our finding, both parties agreed to end this invalid practice.

Unreconciled Real Property Records

The Division had not reconciled its lands inventory with FWS as needed to ensure that real property acquired with WSFRP funding continues to serve conservation purposes. Both parties agreed with our finding.

Government of the U.S. Virgin Islands (Department of Planning and Natural Resources)

In this audit, we questioned $3,880,195 because the Department was unable to provide sufficient accounting for expenditures claimed and reimbursed on WSFRP grants. In addition, we found that the Department—

- was not able to provide adequate support for drawdown (reimbursement) requests;
- could not demonstrate that it followed Virgin Islands Government procurement policy related to the St. Croix Brugal Property project, and was not able to provide adequate support for costs claimed;
- claimed unallowable and unsupported payroll expenditures;
- did not adequately manage its WSFRP-funded equipment; and
- had not submitted accurate grant financial and performance reports in a timely manner.

Fiscal Year 2016 Financial Audit Identified Internal Control Weaknesses

Under a contract issued by DOI and monitored by us, KPMG, an independent public accounting firm, audited DOI's fiscal year 2016 financial statements and found no issues. As such, KPMG issued an unmodified opinion.

KPMG did, however, identify three significant internal control deficiencies:

- Lack of Sufficient Controls over General Property, Plant, and Equipment. KPMG found that DOI did not consistently apply policies, procedures, and controls to ensure that assets under construction were adequately monitored, and the associated transactions were timely and recorded accurately. Specifically, KPMG found eight assets totaling $319 million that were placed in service in prior years, but were not transferred out of assets under construction until fiscal year 2016.
- Lack of Sufficient Controls over Accrued Liabilities. KPMG found that DOI did not take appropriate action for large variances in accrued liabilities, resulting in an inaccurate conclusion about the completeness and accuracy of the accrued liabilities recorded in the DOI's financial statements.
- Lack of Sufficient General Information Technology Controls. KPMG found that DOI did not in a timely manner recertify user access rights or remove user access rights due to changes in assigned duties or separations. In addition, KPMG identified untimely remediation of identified system vulnerabilities.

Under a separate contract issued by DOI and monitored by us, KPMG audited the financial statements of the Individual Indian Monies Trust Funds and the financial statements of the Tribal and Other Trust Funds managed by the Office of the Special Trustee for American Indians (OST) for fiscal year 2016. KPMG issued an unmodified opinion on the financial statements of the Individual Monies Trust Funds and a qualified opinion on the financial statements of the Tribal and Other Trust Funds. KPMG issued a qualified opinion because it could not satisfy itself as to the fairness of the tribal trust fund balances.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

Bureau of Land Management

Bureau of Land Management

BLM Supervisory Agent Violated Ethics Rules

We investigated allegations that a Bureau of Land Management (BLM) supervisory agent used his official position to provide preferential treatment for family members attending the 2015 Burning Man event in Nevada. The allegations also indicated that the agent intervened improperly in a 2015 hiring process for a special agent position that facilitated the hiring of his friend instead of other qualified applicants.

We found that the agent violated Federal ethics rules when he used his influence with Burning Man officials to obtain tickets and special passes for his family. He also directed on-duty BLM law enforcement employees to escort his family in BLM-procured vehicles, drove his BLM vehicle with his girlfriend, and directed his employee to make hotel reservations for his guests. We also confirmed the supervisory agent's intervention in the special agent hiring process to benefit a friend.

We forwarded our report to and received a response from the DOI Assistant Secretary for Land and Minerals Management.

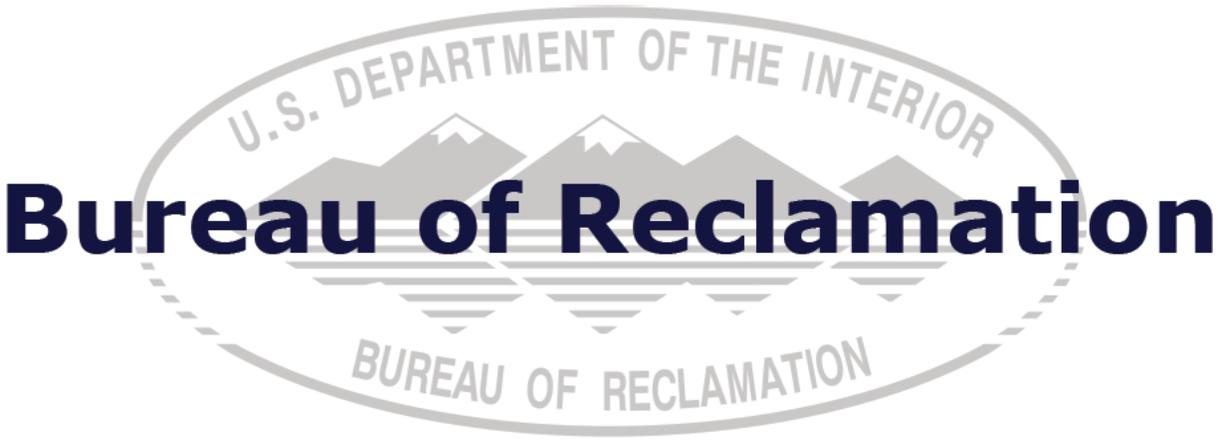

Burning Man event in Nevada

Allegations of False Reporting to Avoid Plugging and Abandonment Costs are Unsubstantiated

We and the BLM Special Investigations Group investigated allegations that an oil and gas company falsely reported production on a well that was incapable of producing to avoid plugging and abandonment costs and prevent expiration of the Federal mineral lease.

We found that no reporting violation occurred, and the company took corrective action as directed by BLM. Therefore, the allegation was unsubstantiated.

We provided a report of our investigation to BLM.

Bureau of Reclamation

Bureau of Reclamation

USBR's Klamath Basin Water User Mitigation Program Has Management Weaknesses

We conducted an audit to determine whether the Bureau of Reclamation (USBR) had the legal authority to enter into a cooperative agreement with the Klamath Water and Power Agency (KWAPA) to administer the Water User Mitigation Program and whether related expenditures were allowable. We determined that USBR did not have the legal authority to enter into the cooperative agreement and, because the agreement was improper, the $32.2 million that KWAPA spent over 7 years was a waste of funds. In addition, we identified KWAPA expenditures that were unsupported and unallowable, and have provided this information for USBR's consideration.

Only two of the five legal authorities cited by USBR—the Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act (Coordination Act) and the Reclamation States Emergency Drought Relief Act of 1991 (Drought Relief Act)—provide USBR with authority to use financial assistance. Nevertheless, these authorities restrict the use of funds to specific activities. The Coordination Act authorized USBR generally to provide financial assistance for the development and protection of fish and wildlife, and the Drought Relief Act authorized USBR to provide financial assistance for the development of drought contingency plans. USBR's cooperative agreement with KWAPA failed to explain how any of the assistance provided or work performed met the requirements of the Coordination Act and Drought Relief Act.

Upper Klamath Lake in south-central Oregon. The snow covered peak of Mt. McLoughlin is in the background.

We determined that the benefits of the Water User Mitigation Program flowed primarily to irrigation contractors rather than to fish and wildlife. Of the $32.2 million expended under the cooperative agreement, $28 million was used to compensate irrigation contractors for using pumped groundwater to irrigate their lands or for refraining from irrigation altogether. We also determined that none of the funds were used to develop a drought contingency plan. Finally, we determined that conflicting advice provided by the Office of the Solicitor facilitated USBR's award of the cooperative agreement.

We made three recommendations to address the weaknesses that allowed USBR to improperly award this cooperative agreement. DOI did not concur with two of our recommendations, but did concur with our third recommendation. We consider all three recommendations unresolved and not implemented; therefore, we referred them to the Assistant Secretary for Policy, Management and Budget for resolution.

A related case, currently in the Court of Federal Claims (Lonny E. Baley, et al. v. United States (1-591L)), may have an impact on DOI's legal assessment of this matter. Among other things, a decision in that case may determine whether, and to what extent, the Government may incur liability for a "taking" under the Fifth Amendment when USBR does not provide water to its Klamath irrigation contractors in order to meet requirements under the Endangered Species Act. A trial was held in January 2017, and the parties are engaged in post-trial motions and briefing prior to the court rendering its decision.

USBR Missing Out on Millions Due to Uncollected Klamath Project's O&M Costs

While performing our audit of USBR's Klamath Basin Water User Mitigation Program, we found that USBR allocated 37.5 percent of the annual cost to operate and maintain (O&M) the Klamath Project's reserved works to flood control, and ceased collecting these costs from project water contractors. USBR's allocation of costs to flood control purposes does not conform with USBR policy that purports to be based upon applicable statutes. We also found that even if the allocation of O&M costs to flood control purposes had been appropriate, USBR used an unsubstantiated basis for allocating the costs that appeared to assign too much of the O&M cost to flood control. As this matter was outside the objective and scope of our audit, we provided USBR with a management advisory report addressing the issue.

We estimated that USBR did not collect a total of $5.6 million in O&M costs from 1975 to 2015 due to a former regional director's decision to allocate O&M costs to flood control purposes. We also estimated that if USBR does not begin collecting the entire amount of annual O&M costs from project water contractors, it will forgo approximately $13.9 million in revenues over the next 30 years.

We made one recommendation to USBR to fully review the matter and take corrective action. USBR did not fully concur and we consider the recommendation unresolved and not implemented; therefore, we referred it to the Assistant Secretary for Policy, Management and Budget for resolution.

USBR Could be Reimbursed Millions for A-Canal Head Gates and Fish Screens

While performing our audit of USBR's Klamath Basin Water User Mitigation Program, we found that USBR did not secure repayment of millions of dollars of costs incurred to design, construct, operate, and maintain new head gates and fish screens at the A-Canal diversion within the Klamath Project. Under the terms of a 1954 contract with USBR, the Klamath Irrigation District (KID) accepted responsibility for all O&M costs, including replacement costs, of Klamath Project transferred works. USBR was advised by the Office of the Solicitor that the cost of the new head gates and fish screens was an O&M cost because it was incurred to remedy conditions brought about by the operation of the Project. USBR supported efforts to have KID's repayment obligation eliminated through legislation rather than pursuing contract negotiations for repayment of the costs. As this matter was outside the objective and scope of our audit, we provided USBR with a management advisory report addressing the issue.

We did not attempt to identify USBR's total cost to design, construct, operate, and maintain the replacement A-Canal head gates and fish screens, as such an effort would have been well beyond the objective and scope of our audit. From limited documentation that was available to us, however, it appears that the design and construction costs alone represent between $16 million and $20 million of costs that should be recovered from KID.

We made four recommendation to USBR to fully review the matter and take corrective action. USBR concurred with all four recommendations without fully agreeing with our finding that all costs to design, construct, operate, and maintain these facilities are costs that should be repaid by KID. We consider the recommendations resolved but not implemented and referred them to the Assistant Secretary for Policy, Management and Budget for tracking of implementation.

Upper Klamath National Wildlife Refuge, OR

The logo for the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement (BSEE) is centered on the page. It consists of a large, light gray oval. Inside the oval, on the left side, is a stylized gray silhouette of an offshore oil rig. To the right of the rig, the letters "BSEE" are written in a large, bold, sans-serif font. Below "BSEE", the words "Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement" are written in a smaller, lighter gray font. The main title "Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement" is overlaid on the logo in a large, bold, dark blue font.

Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement

Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement

Energy Company Fails to Document Safety Activities

We investigated allegations that an energy company conducted abandoned well operations at the South Timbalier offshore platform in the Gulf of Mexico, without prior approval from the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement (BSEE), and then falsified documentation related to those operations.

Our investigation determined that the company certified to BSEE that it successfully plugged and tested the well at the platform; however, the company subsequently determined the well had not been adequately sealed and performed remedial steps to regain well control without prior approval from BSEE. The company then failed to document its activities on safety reports or the well activity report. Furthermore, we found that during a routine platform inspection, the company failed to notify BSEE inspectors of the well control issues.

We provided our findings to BSEE and, during of our investigation, BSEE assessed the company $965,000 in civil penalties for incidents of noncompliance related to the company's unauthorized well operations.

Wood Group Falsifies Safety Documentation

We investigated allegations that Wood Group Production Services Network, Inc. (WGPSN) systematically failed to comply with BSEE regulations related to offshore oil platform inspections. It was also alleged that WGPSN routinely falsified records associated with the company's platform inspection obligations.

We substantiated the allegations, and found that from 2011 to 2014, WGPSN employees falsified inspection reports and maintained documentation that falsely indicated platform facilities had been maintained according to safety and environmental regulations. The company admitted to submitting 87 false inspection reports to BSEE.

WGPSN pled guilty to submitting false statements to the Federal Government in violation of Title 18 U.S. Code § 1001. In accordance with a plea agreement, WGPSN was ordered to pay $7 million in criminal fines, and a community service payment in the amount of $500,000. The community service payment will help fund gulf coast projects by FWS, the Louisiana Coastal Protection and Restoration Authority, and Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries.

In recognition of certain measures taken by WGPSN to correct its compliance and ethics program, a 3-year administrative agreement was entered between the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and WGPSN on February 23, 2017. For purposes of discretionary suspension and debarment, the DOI Suspending and Debarment Official signed the agreement, which requires the implementation of additional measures, periodic reporting, and verification by a third-party monitor.

Indian Affairs

Bureau of Indian Affairs

Federal Indian Minerals Office Needs to Strengthen its Oversight of Navajo Allottee Oil and Gas Activities

We audited the Federal Indian Minerals Office (FIMO), a multi-bureau partnership within DOI created to oversee and assist Navajo oil and gas allottees. We found that FIMO did not fully follow the requirements of its 2005 memorandum of understanding (MOU) because (1) the MOU is outdated and does not contain sufficient operational detail and (2) there was insufficient oversight by the Executive Management Group. As a result, we identified a number of issues that hinder FIMO's management of oil and gas activities. These include poor communication about inspection and enforcement activities, unreconciled lease inventories, no coordination of outreach to allottees, a poor audit and compliance review process, and very little monitoring or oversight of FIMO.

FIMO emerged in the 1990s as a one-of-a-kind partnership to assist Navajo oil and gas lease allottees, following a 1985 lawsuit alleging that DOI had not fulfilled its duty to make timely royalty and lease rental payments. DOI brought together staff from the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), Bureau of Land Management, and Minerals Management Service (now the Office of Natural Resources Revenue) into a one-stop-shop to fulfill its Indian Trust responsibilities. Guided by successive MOUs, FIMO is responsible for three core functions—

- lease administration, which includes permitting, inspection, and enforcement;
- production accountability; and
- royalty compliance.

We made 14 recommendations to strengthen FIMO's oversight of Navajo allottee oil and gas activities.

Welfare Assistance Sent to Wrong Recipient Due to BIA Processing Errors

We investigated allegations from BIA's Cheyenne River Agency that two BIA General Assistance checks, for $1,072 and $536, were sent to the wrong recipient.

We did not find any evidence of theft. Because the wrong recipient had the same first name and last name as the intended recipient and the check was addressed only by first and last name (no middle name or initial), the wrong recipient was able to cash the checks. Our investigation did not show that the wrong recipient obtained the checks through deceit; they were simply sent to him in error.

We also determined that BIA made processing errors, which caused the checks to be sent to the wrong recipient. The U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of South Dakota declined criminal prosecution of this matter.

We provided a report of our investigation to BIA.

BIA Failed to Take Action on Misuse of Crow Transit Building Funds

We investigated allegations that the Crow Tribe misappropriated Federal Highway Administration grant funds. The BIA Division of Transportation administered the $2,564,045 grant to the Crow Tribe for the construction of a transit facility on the reservation and an additional terminal in a separate location. The BIA Transportation Branch, Rocky Mountain Regional Office (RMRO), oversaw the project. A confidential informant alleged that the Crow Tribe used the money to offset general fund operations.

An independent review of a 2013 audit of the Tribe confirmed the misuse of funds, and we found that the BIA superintendent responsible for Crow Tribe activities was aware of the misappropriation and failed to take action. An RMRO official was responsible for the administration of the award to build the transit building and acknowledged that he did not provide appropriate oversight to the project.

We provided a report of our investigation to BIA.

Ethics Violations Committed by Married BIA Employees

We investigated allegations that two married BIA Office of Trust Services employees solicited positions with a tribe while simultaneously assisting the tribe in obtaining Federal funds for its forestry program.

We found that the couple participated in the distribution of $200,000 to the tribe while the husband sought the position of tribal forest manager and the wife considered an offer for a BIA superintendent position at the tribe. We found that the actions of the husband, who attempted to conceal his assistance to the tribe while his wife considered the position, violated Federal employment regulations. We also found that the couple's actions while the husband was seeking employment with the tribe created the appearance of a conflict of interest. Neither the husband nor wife ultimately took positions with the tribe.

We provided a report of our investigation to BIA.

Tribal Credit Card Used for Cash Advances and Personal Purchases

A former senior officer for the Northern Arapahoe Tribe alleged that a former administrative assistant used a tribal credit card to steal $20,000 in cash advances and personal purchases, and that she used tribal funds to pay her mortgage. During our investigation, we also received an allegation that a former official of the Tribal Grants Program used tribal funds to pay his mortgage.

We confirmed that the former administrative assistant used the tribal credit card to take cash advances and make purchases for her personal use. We also confirmed that the former grants official used his position to award himself a grant, which he used to pay his mortgage. We could not substantiate the allegation that the administrative assistant used tribal funds to pay her mortgage.

We provided a report of our investigation to BIA.

Alleged Misconduct by a BIA Employee and Alleged Misuse of a CDIB Card

We investigated allegations that a BIA superintendent might be receiving money or favors in exchange for his work with a tribe. According to the complaint, the superintendent continued working as a technical advisor for a tribe seeking Federal acknowledgment as a Native American Indian Tribe even after being ordered to stop. It was also alleged that one of the tribe's members requested social services by presenting a certificate degree of Indian blood (CDIB) card that potentially had been improperly produced.

We found that the superintendent began working with the tribe in 2002 and continued to help them even after he was moved to a different position. We found no evidence, however, that the superintendent received anything of value in exchange for helping the tribe after he changed jobs.

The superintendent assisted the tribe until late 2015, when he was directed by the BIA regional director to stop.

We also found that the tribe created two CDIB cards that were issued to two members, and that one of the members used his card to obtain medical services on three occasions. According to the tribe, the cards were issued under the direction of the superintendent. When we interviewed the superintendent, he said he told the tribe that while the tribe could issue cards internally, the cards could not be used to obtain services because the tribe was not federally recognized. The superintendent said he never saw the cards and he did not know the cards had been used to obtain services.

We provided a report of our investigation to BIA.

Allegations of Stolen Bureau of Indian Education Grant Funds Not Substantiated

We investigated allegations that a former employee of the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians (MBCI) stole grant funds awarded by the Bureau of Indian Education (BIE) for a maintenance project.

We determined that grant funds totaling approximately $129,000 were awarded to MBCI by BIE through BIA. We reviewed MBCI financial documents and determined that MBCI adequately accounted for the funds in question. We found no evidence to corroborate the allegation that the former employee stole grant funds or otherwise personally benefited from BIE grant monies.

We did discover that MBCI used surplus BIE grant funds from this project on other maintenance projects without notifying BIA.

We provided a report of our investigation to BIA.

Assistant Loan Manager Issued Excessive Number of Loans to Herself, Family, and Friends

We based this investigation on information that Monica Campbell, assistant loan manager for the Fort Peck Credit Program (FPCP) had been issued an excessive number of short term loans from the Fort Peck Tribes (FPT).

We showed that between December 18, 2014, and June 25, 2015, Campbell used her position to direct that 23 short-term loans be issued in her name and in the names of her relatives and a family friend. Seventeen of those loans were issued after FPCP established a policy that restricted the maximum number of FPCP short-term loans any applicant could have at any time to three.

Campbell admitted she used her relatives and family friend as nominees to obtain the loans so that she could exceed the loan limit and that she received all the proceeds. Campbell pled guilty to one count of violating Title 18 U.S. Code § 1163, theft from an Indian tribal organization, and was sentenced to 2 years of probation and ordered to pay $2,115 in restitution to the FPT.

The DOI Suspending and Debaring Official issued a default debarment determination to Campbell, debaring her from participation in Federal procurement and nonprocurement programs until 2019.

Former Director Stole funds from the Shoshone Oil and Gas Commission

We initiated this investigation based on allegations that John Enos, former Director, Shoshone Oil & Gas Commission (Commission), Ft. Washakie, WY, stole funds from the Commission.

Our investigation found that, while serving as the Commission's director, Enos stole from the Commission, and in April 2016, he pled guilty to a single count of violating Title 18 U.S. Code § 1163, theft from an Indian tribal organization, in U.S. District Court for the District of Wyoming.

He was sentenced to 5 years of probation, and was ordered to pay restitution.

Individuals Embezzled Money From Cedarville Rancheria

In January 2014, we initiated this investigation after the Cedarville Rancheria, Northern Paiute Tribe, reported potential theft of Federal funds. The subjects allegedly used tribal credit cards for unallowable personal purchases between March and November 2013; these individuals were removed from their positions with the Tribe in December 2013.

Our investigation confirmed that tribal credit cards were used to make unallowable personal purchases of $24,084.92 between March and November 2013. One subject paid off the purchases on the card with tribal funds and made no attempt to reimburse the Tribe. We also found that another subject used an assigned tribal credit card to make less than $500 in unallowable personal purchases, most of which occurred in 2011.

The Tribe was subsequently reimbursed for the loss amount by its insurance company after filing an employee dishonesty claim.

The U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Eastern California declined criminal prosecution in this matter.

Daughter Sells Mother's Tribal Trust Lands and Steals Her Money

We received an allegation in March 2015 from a fiduciary trust officer from DOI's Office of the Special Trustee for American Indians (OST), that Danelle Newman illegally obtained and sold her mother's tribal trust lands and negotiated a Cobell Settlement check belonging to her mother.

Our investigation found that Newman devised a scheme to defraud her mother of her tribal trust lands by adding herself to her mother's Individual Indian Money Account and obtaining a debit card in her mother's name. We also found that Newman forged her mother's signature on three deeds for land parcels belonging to her mother and sold the parcels to BIA. OST subsequently transferred $22,372.62 to her mother's debit card for the fraudulent sale.

The U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of South Dakota accepted the case for prosecution. Newman pled guilty to mail fraud, was sentenced to 50 months of probation, and was ordered to pay $23,246.95 in restitution. In August 2016, all of Newman's mother's tribal trust lands were returned to her trust inventory.

We provided a report of our investigation to OST.

Insular Affairs

Insular Affairs

Guam Port Authority Aware of Issues With Cargo Handling Facilities and Equipment

We discontinued our evaluation of the Guam Port Authority's cargo handling facilities and equipment. Although our review identified a number of potential issues, we learned that the Port is aware of them and has begun implementing corrective action. Therefore, we believe that the Port should have an opportunity to finish implementing its changes before we complete a more thorough review.

National Park Service

Senior Yosemite National Park Official's Management Style May Have Contributed to Employees' Perception of Bias or Harassment

We investigated allegations forwarded by the National Park Service (NPS) that a senior official at Yosemite National Park had created a hostile work environment for employees by basing management decisions on bias or favoritism and by harassing or belittling certain employees. During our investigation, 12 unrelated allegations of discrimination, hostile work environment, and other misconduct involving Yosemite and NPS Pacific West Region employees were brought to our attention; we investigated those allegations as well.

While we found no evidence to support the allegation that the official based management decisions on bias or favoritism, we determined that his management style may have contributed to what some Yosemite employees perceived as inappropriate behavior. Forty-two of the 71 employees we interviewed about the allegations spoke highly of the official as a manager, but many of the remaining interviewees said that he sometimes communicated poorly; that he could be dismissive, abrupt, or overly critical; and that he would often publicly criticize and undermine employees after he lost confidence in them. Some felt the official's treatment of them was personal or motivated by factors such as gender bias, while others accepted his behavior and did not believe he was aware of it.

The official, who has retired from NPS, acknowledged that he tended to micromanage certain issues at Yosemite and that he was critical of his employees, but he said that he did not consider his behavior hostile or harassing. He said that his job was very demanding and that he had not intended to appear dismissive. He also said that no employees had ever brought their concerns to his attention.

Of the unrelated allegations we investigated, three resulted in adjudication by NPS or other Government entities and four resulted in a supervisor taking some action to correct the problem. We forwarded three allegations to the NPS ombudsman for review. In the two remaining cases, the subjects of the allegations no longer worked at the park.

We provided our report on this investigation to NPS.

Male Employees at Yellowstone National Park Created a Negative Work Environment for Female Coworkers

We initiated this investigation in September 2016 after NPS reported allegations brought forward by a Yellowstone National Park employee. This employee alleged that a pervasive culture of gender bias, sexual harassment, and financial misconduct existed in a work unit within Yellowstone's Maintenance Division. He alleged that this behavior was tolerated, and even fostered, by a "men's club" environment—one of insensitivity and arrogance toward other Yellowstone employees—that was pervasive in the division from 2011 to 2015. An additional allegation of hiring discrimination by a Maintenance Division supervisor was raised during the interviews, so we included this allegation in our investigation.

We found credible evidence that male supervisors and staff in the Maintenance Division unit created a work environment that included unwelcome and inappropriate comments and actions toward women. This negative work environment was allowed to continue because of the actions, or inaction, of supervisors. Specifically, the Maintenance Division supervisor should have known about and addressed some of the alleged misconduct.

Our investigation of the employee's allegations of financial misconduct confirmed that the Maintenance Division supervisor had allowed his employees to use his Government credit card to make purchases, in violation of DOI's Integrated Charge Card Policy. We also found that between 2011 and 2015, some Yellowstone employees made split purchases (breaking a large purchase into small, separate purchases in order to circumvent the procurement process). The employee's allegation that Yellowstone promoted another employee after she made more than $10,000 in personal charges to her Government credit card was unfounded.

We also did not find evidence of hiring discrimination by the Maintenance Division supervisor. Although we confirmed that he had told a subordinate in 2016 that he would not be hiring women to fill open positions in the work unit, we found that he later offered positions to two women.

We provided our report on this investigation to NPS.

Investigation Reveals Absence of Oversight of Funds Donated by Cooperating Associations

During an ongoing investigation into an NPS employee's embezzlement of funds donated by a cooperating association, we determined that management at Martin Luther King, Jr. National Historic Site (MALU) did not have adequate oversight or controls in place to effectively oversee and manage association funds that were donated to NPS.

We learned that the MALU superintendent gave MALU's park cooperating association coordinator full responsibility for managing donated funds at the park and did not oversee how he managed and expended them. The absence of oversight allowed the coordinator to embezzle the donated funds without detection. We also found that NPS does not have a policy requiring a regional review or audit of the records of park cooperating association coordinators to ensure that donated funds are accounted for and expended properly.

To correct these issues and help prevent future fraud, we offered NPS' southeast regional director two recommendations: to develop and implement policies and procedures for the use, management, and oversight of donated cooperating association funds; and to train personnel on the new policies and procedures.

Martin Luther King, Jr. National Historic Site in Atlanta, GA

Inappropriate Behavior of a Management Official Found at DeSoto National Memorial

An investigation into allegations against a management official at NPS' De Soto National Memorial (DeSoto) in Bradenton, FL, revealed that the official behaved inappropriately toward a De Soto employee, violated NPS policies, and misused his position and created potential conflicts of interest.

We found that the management official touched the employee inappropriately, made inappropriate comments, and invaded the employee's personal space. The employee informed us that this contact and attention were unwanted, and that the employee had asked the official many times to stop. The official acknowledged touching the employee and confirmed that the employee had asked him to stop, which he said he did.

It was also separately alleged that the official was actively violating NPS policies and retaliating against the employee in various ways for questioning his management decisions. Our investigation confirmed that the official participated in or directed multiple actions that violated policies covering alcohol consumption on park grounds, resident volunteer agreements, and use of black powder (gunpowder) during De Soto's historical reenactments. Although two other employees at De Soto told us that they felt the official had retaliated against the employee, we could not find conclusive evidence to support their assertions. The official denied knowingly violating policies or retaliating against the employee.

In addition, we found that the management official had misused his position and created a potential conflict of interest by vacationing for free at the personal homes of two resident volunteer couples with whom he was friends. He then directed subordinate staff to allow one of the couples to stay on park grounds without proper documentation, and he authorized the construction of a new parking pad (at a cost of about $1,000) so that they could park their recreational vehicle while staying at De Soto.

While the official stated that he had not taken these actions specifically to benefit his friends or as repayment for letting him stay with them while on vacation, we found that his actions gave the appearance that he had failed to act impartially in his official position, failed to avoid the appearance of violating ethical standards, and directed subordinate employees to improperly provide benefits to his friends.

We provided our report on this investigation to NPS.

Alleged Off-Duty Misconduct by an Official at Denali National Park Unsubstantiated

We investigated an allegation that an NPS official employed at the Denali National Park (DNA) allegedly made inappropriate comments of a sexual nature to DNA staff during an off-duty gathering at the official's residence.

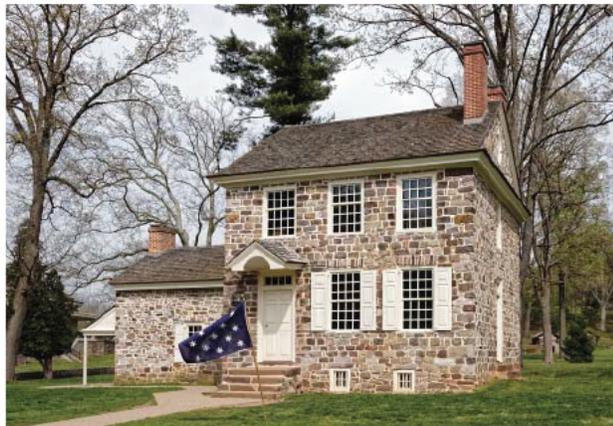

While our investigation did not substantiate that the official harassed or offended anyone, we did find that the official engaged in a conversation of a sexual nature with NPS employees. The conversation showed questionable judgment by the official and did not support departmental policies that make supervisors responsible for “establishing and maintaining a safe, productive, supportive and well-ordered work environment for their employees.”

We provided our report on this investigation to NPS.

NPS Northeast Regional Director Violated Travel Regulations

We investigated allegations that Michael A. Caldwell, the Regional Director of NPS’ Northeast Region, had taken personal vacations under the guise of official Government travel and that he continued to live in NPS housing at Valley Forge National Historic Park (VAFO) after he was promoted from VAFO superintendent and reassigned to the NPS regional office in Philadelphia, PA.

Valley Forge National Historic Park

While Caldwell was authorized by NPS to continue living at VAFO, he admitted that between 2011 and 2015 he violated multiple Federal travel regulations on at least eight official trips. The total cost for these trips was $17,481, and Caldwell’s admissions about the trips call into question whether they actually benefited the Government. We also found that Caldwell improperly accepted a gift, in the form of free vacation housing, from a subordinate.

We provided our report on this investigation to NPS.

City of Derby Made Improper Withdrawals of NPS Grant Funds

We investigated allegations that the City of Derby, CT, made two unauthorized withdrawals of NPS funds from its Save America’s Treasures grant to restore the Sterling Opera House in Derby. NPS informed us that the first withdrawal was for $10,000 and occurred without any request for approval or supporting documentation. The second withdrawal was for $100,000 and allegedly occurred after Derby was explicitly told that its payment request had been disapproved.

We confirmed that Derby officials improperly withdrew NPS funds totaling $110,000. A Derby official withdrew $10,000 from the grant without obtaining the required approval. Seven months later, Derby made a $150,000 withdrawal request, which NPS denied because the architectural design drawings did not comply with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties. After being told that the request was disapproved, the same Derby official who withdrew the $10,000 circumvented the approval process and withdrew $100,000 without notifying NPS. We further discovered that Derby did not comply with several of the administrative grant conditions.

When interviewed, the official and the official's supervisor stated that they were unaware of the rules and proper procedures, and they could not provide an explanation for not complying with the grant provisions. Our investigation found, however, that NPS informed Derby through several communications and documents that it had to request approval before obtaining reimbursement from the grant.

In a settlement agreement with the U.S. Attorney's Office, Eastern District of Connecticut, dated January 31, 2017, the City of Derby agreed to repay the $110,000 in three installments by February 1, 2019.

We provided our report on this investigation to NPS.

Investigation Confirms that NPS Law Enforcement Supervisor Inappropriately Touched Employees

We investigated allegations that an NPS law enforcement supervisor at the Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area (CHAT) inappropriately touched two of his colleagues. We confirmed that on two occasions, the supervisor touched a CHAT division chief on her upper thigh, and that this contact was unwelcome. We also learned during our investigation that the supervisor touched another NPS employee in a way that made her uncomfortable. These incidents were reported to the CHAT superintendent, but he did not investigate them or report them to the Human Resources or Equal Employment Opportunity offices, as required by DOI policy.

We provided a report of our investigation to NPS for review and action.

Office of Natural Resources Revenue

Office of Natural Resources Revenue

ONRR Supervisor's Relationship With Subordinate Gave the Appearance of Favoritism

We investigated allegations concerning a relationship between an Office of Natural Resources Revenue (ONRR) supervisor and one of his subordinates. We found that while the relationship did not seem to violate standards of behavior for Federal employees, it did create the appearance among ONRR staff that the supervisor had given his employee an unfair advantage in a hiring action and intentionally assigned her fewer projects than her coworkers. Finally, both the supervisor and the employee falsely denied, to ONRR officials and initially to us, that they were in a relationship.

We opened our investigation after DOI's designated agency ethics official reported to us in 2016 that her office had received allegations that the supervisor was romantically involved with a subordinate. The allegations also stated that after the relationship began, the supervisor selected this employee for a promotion to a position under his supervision. Furthermore, the complaint alleged that the employee was unqualified for her new position and that once she was promoted, the supervisor showed favor to her by assigning her a smaller workload than her colleagues.

Our investigation found that the supervisor and the employee began dating in the fall of 2015. Shortly thereafter, the supervisor selected the employee for a promotion to a position that was one grade level higher than her previous position, and he became her direct supervisor. We determined the position was competitively advertised and found that the employee was qualified for the promotion.

We learned, however, that the supervisor, who was a selecting official for the position, did not disclose his personal relationship with the employee or recuse himself from the hiring board. This may have created the perception that the employee had received an unfair advantage during the hiring process. We also confirmed that the supervisor appeared to show the employee preferential treatment by assigning her significantly fewer cases than her colleagues.

In addition, we found that during a 2016 internal inquiry ONRR conducted into these same allegations, both the supervisor and the employee denied being in a relationship. Their lack of candor during the internal inquiry caused ONRR to determine that the allegations of favoritism were unfounded. They also initially failed to disclose their relationship to our office when we interviewed them, although they admitted to it during subsequent interviews.

We provided a report of our investigation to ONRR.

The seal of the Department of the Interior is a circular emblem. It features a central illustration of a bison standing in a landscape with mountains and a sunburst. The text "DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR" is written in a circular path around the top, and "MARCH 3, 1849" is written around the bottom. The seal is rendered in a light gray color.

Office of the Secretary and Multi-Office Assignments

Office of the Secretary and Multi-Office Assignments

Insufficient Documentation of Use of Extended Administrative Leave Found at DOI

We evaluated DOI's management of extended administrative leave to determine how many employees were on extended administrative leave, the factors that contributed to the length of time on leave, and whether DOI policies provided enough guidance for DOI and its bureaus to properly manage extended administrative leave. Between January 2013 and July 2016, DOI and its bureaus placed 242 employees on extended administrative leave (45 calendar days or more) at a cost of more than $6 million in salaries.

During our evaluation, we found that many factors, including legal procedural steps to be completed before taking adverse action or time for completing investigations, contributed to the length of time an employee was on administrative leave. DOI, however, did not sufficiently document decisions related to using extended administrative leave, and as a result paid those salaries without sufficient evidence the leave was appropriate. More specifically, DOI did not document approvals to use extended administrative leave, consideration of alternatives to using administrative leave, or notifications to the employee that he or she was being placed on administrative leave.

In June 2016, DOI issued a new administrative leave policy, which addresses some of the documentation issues we identified in our evaluation. In addition, with the passage of the Administrative Leave Act of 2016, which places a number of restrictions on the use of administrative leave throughout the Government, DOI has an opportunity to further review its policies to improve its oversight of extended administrative leave and ensure compliance with the Act's requirements.

We made four recommendations that will help DOI effectively manage and oversee the use of extended administrative leave, reduce money lost to salaries paid out to employees unnecessarily on extended administrative leave, and implement the requirements of the Act.

IT Security Weaknesses at a Core Data Center Could Expose Sensitive Data

We evaluated the Continuous Diagnostics and Mitigation (CDM) program at a core data center and found it to be immature and not fully effective in protecting information technology (IT) systems from potential exploitation.

One bureau did not effectively oversee the contractor responsible for implementing the CDM program to ensure that vulnerabilities on a high-value IT asset were discovered and mitigated in a timely manner.

The bureaus' management practices left thousands of critical and high-risk vulnerabilities unmitigated for years. Bureau computers are running vulnerable, unsupported software because DOI has not established and enforced approved software lists. We also found that the data center's contingency planning practices contributed to hardware failures that temporarily affected the availability of other DOI systems.

These deficiencies occurred because the bureaus failed to install DOI's inventory management software on all computers, identify and remove unauthorized and unsupported products from its systems, mitigate vulnerabilities in a timely manner, monitor its contractors to ensure all IT security requirements were met, monitor computers to ensure they remained securely configured, and meet annual contingency planning and plan testing requirements. In our judgement, the Office of the Chief Information Officer (OCIO) could have discovered the deficiencies we identified in BIA's IT security program had it implemented processes to verify and validate bureaus' compliance with Federal and departmental IT security requirements.

We made seven recommendations to the bureaus and one recommendation to OCIO to help ensure that DOI data centers and the systems they house are adequately secured.

DOI's CDM Program Cannot Provide Complete Information for Enterprise Risk Determinations

We assessed the effectiveness of DOI's CDM program for three high-value IT assets operated by three bureaus. We found that DOI's CDM program is immature and not fully effective in protecting high-value IT assets from exploitation. DOI's management practices failed to detect critical and high-risk vulnerabilities on one of its high-value IT assets and left thousands of critical and high-risk vulnerabilities unmitigated for years on three of its high-value assets.

We made six recommendations to protect DOI's high-value IT assets from loss or disruption by strengthening DOI's CDM practices. OCIO concurred with five of our recommendations and partially concurred with one recommendation. The final report was revised to include a new DOI response.

Interior Business Center On Track To Meet DATA Act Requirements But DOI 6 Months Behind

We reviewed the status of DOI's efforts and those of the DOI Interior Business Center (IBC) to implement the Data Accountability and Transparency Act of 2014 (DATA Act) according to the eight steps in the "DATA Act Implementation Playbook" developed by the U.S. Department of the Treasury.

We found that, as of August 31, 2016, DOI was not on track to implement the DATA Act requirements by the Act's May 2017 deadline. We found that DOI is relying on a software upgrade that will not be completed on time due to vendor delays and is 6 months behind on the timeframes recommended in the playbook. Conversely, we found that IBC was on track to meet the deadline.

DOI Climate Science Programs Have Failed To Coordinate and Share Information

We evaluated DOI's climate science centers (CSCs) and landscape conservation cooperatives (LCCs) to determine whether they coordinated their programs and used available tools to prevent duplication of research efforts. We reviewed information sharing practices not only within DOI, but also throughout the greater scientific community using Climate.Data.gov, a Governmentwide data repository. We found that the CSCs and LCCs did not effectively share information, which could result in millions of Federal dollars wasted.

We reviewed policy and database use at two CSCs and their managing entity, the National Climate Change and Wildlife Science Center. We also looked at four LCCs and interviewed the LCC network coordinator. Our evaluation did not include a review of scientific research; rather, it focused on the processes that the CSCs and LCCs use to coordinate research.

We found that the CSCs and LCCs have not implemented sufficient internal controls or policies to coordinate research and have failed to use available technology to share scientific research. Communication and coordination between the two programs are informal and ad hoc and depend on the behavior of the CSC and LCC coordinators rather than on established policy. We also found poor project tracking at the LCCs. Further, the CSCs and LCCs in our sample fully neglected their responsibilities to share data with Climate.Data.gov, as required by Executive Order Nos. 13653 and 13642. These failures could waste Federal funds and reduce the CSC and LCC contributions to the greater scientific community.

We provided three recommendations to help the CSCs and LCCs more effectively coordinate their research grant programs and share information with Federal, State, local, and private-sector colleagues.

The U.S. Geological Survey, which chiefly manages the CSCs, and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which chiefly manages the LCCs, concurred or partly concurred with all of our recommendations, developed a plan to resolve all issues, and provided target dates for completion.

Deputy Director of the Office of Acquisition and Property Management Falsified Employment Records

We investigated allegations that senior executive service (SES) Deputy Director of the Office of Acquisition and Property Management (PAM), James McCaffery, falsified military and Federal employment records to improve his chances of gaining Federal employment.

During our investigation, McCaffery admitted that he falsified his military and Federal employment records, to include an unearned Purple Heart medal that he used to claim a 10-point veteran's hiring preference, and that he provided false statements to U.S. Office of Personnel Management investigators conducting his personnel background investigation. As a result, McCaffery could not obtain the favorable public trust determination required of the PAM deputy director position.

Purple Heart Medal

We determined that McCaffery's supervisor, PAM Director Debra Sonderman, SES, knew about McCaffery's dishonesty while he was still in a probationary SES status and took no action to resolve his inability to obtain a favorable public trust determination. She chose neither to remove nor to discipline him, nor to consult with her supervisor, despite a recommendation for removal from both the human resources and security offices.

McCaffery retired from Federal service on November 30, 2016. We provided a copy of our report to the Office of Policy, Management and Budget.

Alleged Retaliation by a Manager With Office of Civil Rights Unsubstantiated

We investigated an allegation that a manager with DOI's Office of Civil Rights (OCR) retaliated against an OCR employee by removing the employee from OCR and placing the employee on a detail outside DOI.

Our investigation did not reveal evidence of retaliation. According to the manager, he placed the employee on detail for disruptive behavior in the workplace, for undermining his authority, and for not supporting his management decisions. We did find that the manager placed the employee on detail in an effort to expedite the employee's departure from OCR instead of using the appropriate progressive discipline. In addition, he did not document the employee's misconduct, and had rated the employee as "superior" during the most recent end-of-year evaluation.

We issued a report of investigation to the Office of Policy, Management and Budget.

Construction Firm Misrepresented Itself as a Service-Disabled Veteran-Owned Small Business

We recently concluded an investigation into allegations that Kylee Construction, a Service-Disabled Veteran-Owned Small Business (SDVOSB) purportedly owned by a service-disabled veteran was actually controlled by Ricky Lanier, who was not a veteran. Based upon the assertion that it was owned by a service-disabled veteran, Kylee Construction had received a large number of Federal contracts, including $10,313,788 in SDVOSB and U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) 8(a) set-aside contracts with the National Park Service.

We found that Lanier formed two companies for the purpose of defrauding Federal set-aside programs. Lanier and his wife, Katrina, knowingly sent fraudulent documents to the Federal Government to gain an unfair advantage in receiving contracts from DOI and other Federal agencies. The Laniers managed and controlled both companies, and both had the same employees and assets. Neither firm performed any of the actual contracted work, which was instead done by subcontractors, often at a fraction of the cost represented to the Government by the Laniers.

The Laniers were convicted of wire fraud, conspiracy to commit wire fraud, and major fraud against the United States in U.S. District Court in December 2015. Ricky and Katrina Lanier were sentenced to serve Federal prison terms of 48 months and 30 months, respectively, in October 2016.

Inappropriate Behavior Admitted by the Director of the Office of Law Enforcement and Security

We investigated allegations made by an employee in DOI's Office of Law Enforcement and Security (OLES) that OLES Director Tim Lynn had hugged her, touched her, and made comments that caused her to feel uncomfortable. She also alleged that after she reported Lynn's unwanted behavior to his supervisor, Lynn embarrassed her in front of her coworkers and criticized her work to a colleague, actions she viewed as retaliation.

Lynn denied the employee's allegations. He said that touching people was in his nature and he had not intended to make her uncomfortable. While we confirmed that after Lynn's supervisor counseled him, he made a sarcastic remark to the employee during a meeting and expressed displeasure to a colleague about her performance, we found that he took no other significant actions against her.

During our investigation, we identified five other female employees who alleged that Lynn had acted unprofessionally toward them in various ways. When confronted, Lynn admitted to some of the actions but said he had not meant to make the women uncomfortable.

We provided this report to the Acting Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary for Policy, Management and Budget.

Companies Conceal Unauthorized Oil Discharge

We investigated allegations that ATP Oil and Gas Corporation (ATP), Champion Technologies Inc. (Champion), and others improperly concealed oil sheens from a Gulf of Mexico offshore oil platform, and improperly used coffee filters to alter water samples prior to testing mandated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The purpose of the testing was to ensure that water discharged into the Gulf of Mexico during offshore operations met environmental standards.

We conducted a joint investigation with EPA's Criminal Investigation Division and found that between 2010 and 2012, employees of ATP purchased 4,025 gallons of a chemical product from Champion, and both companies knew the chemical would be used to conceal the unauthorized discharge of hydrocarbons into the Gulf of Mexico and prevent an oil sheen from being visible on the surface of the water.

ATP dissolved its business operations through bankruptcy proceedings. Champion pled guilty to misprision of a felony and was subsequently sentenced to a $1 million fine, $250,000 for community service, and a $400 special assessment. The U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of Louisiana declined to pursue additional prosecutions based on the matter.

Company Fails to Report Oil Production, Pay Royalties

We investigated allegations that General Production Service (GPS) failed to report oil production and pay the proper amount of mineral royalties associated with the sale of crude oil from a Federal lease located in Lost Hills, CA.

We conducted a joint investigation with Bureau of Land Management Special Investigations Group and found that from October 2010 through July 2016, the company failed to properly report oil production and pay mineral royalties owed to the Office of Natural Resources Revenue.

GPS agreed to pay $300,000 to resolve the unpaid royalties and settle civil false claims allegations being considered by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Colorado.

OIG Recommends Interim Agreement with PG&E

Section 745 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2015, Pub. L. No. 113-235, and Federal Acquisition Regulation 9.104-5 provides that when an offeror affirms that it was convicted of a Federal felony within the preceding 24 months, the contracting officer shall not award to the corporation unless an agency suspension and debarment officer (SDO) has considered suspension or debarment of the corporation and made a determination that suspension or debarment is not necessary to protect the interests of the Government.

PG&E was convicted of obstructing a National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) investigation and violations of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1958, specifically relating to record keeping and pipeline assessments. PG&E is the sole provider of utilities in parts of California. Although the U.S. Department of Transportation (DoT) OIG participated in the investigation, DOI was designated as the lead agency to review the matter on behalf of Federal agencies.

PG&E implemented corrective actions since the fatal September 9, 2010 explosion in San Bruno, CA, including the following completed and in-process actions:

- Settled all claims brought by those affected by the accident (more than $500 million) and contributed $70 million to the city;
- Specific to gas pipeline safety, brought in new leadership and hired gas-safety experts and appointed a new chief ethics and compliance officer;
- Is physically updating and improving its gas pipeline system, incorporating recommendations from investigatory agencies;
- Updating and digitizing its records, and building a new gas control center;
- Spent more than $2.1 billion of shareholder funds on gas pipelines safety improvements;
- Developed new teams and processes to comply with regulatory regimes; and
- Completed 10 of the 12 NTSB recommendations; the two open recommendations are in an "open-acceptable status."

In recognition of corrective actions taken by the company, the OIG's Administrative Remedies Division (ARD) negotiated with PG&E and recommended that the DOI SDO enter into an interim administrative agreement. The December 21, 2016 interim agreement permits contracting officers to make awards, while adequately protecting the Government's interests. Specifically, under the agreement, ARD will conduct a review to determine whether PG&E has an effective compliance and ethics program. As such, ARD continues to work with the DoT's Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration to assess PG&E's continuing corrective actions, compliance and ethics program, and the company's submissions regarding its gas pipeline safety program.

Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement

The seal of the Department of the Interior, Office of Surface Mining is a circular emblem. It features a central scale of justice with an eagle perched atop the balance arm. Below the scale is a stylized landscape with a mountain peak and a body of water. The text "DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR" is arched across the top, and "OFFICE OF SURFACE MINING" is arched across the bottom.

Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement

Oversight of Annual Fund Transfer for Miner Benefits Needs Improvement

As part of its mission, the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement (OSMRE) distributes Federal funds intended for the welfare of retired mine workers and their dependents. Each year, OSMRE transfers millions of dollars drawn from two Government sources—the interest account of the Abandoned Mine Land Reclamation Fund and the U.S. Treasury’s General Fund—to the United Mine Workers of America Health and Retirement Funds (UMWAF). From 2011 through 2015, OSMRE transferred $961.3 million in funds to UMWAF to provide benefits for retired miners and their families.

Our audit objectives were to determine whether OSMRE administered the transfer of funds to UMWAF consistent with the Federal Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act of 1992 (Coal Act), and to what extent OSMRE provided oversight to ensure that UMWAF managed the transferred funds in accordance with regulations and statutes.

We found that OSMRE provided minimal oversight of UMWAF’s federally supported health benefit plans, leaving the Federal Government without sufficient insight into how UMWAF has been using the transferred funds. As a result, OSMRE did not ensure that UMWAF managed the federally supported health benefit plans in accordance with regulations and statutes.

Federal regulations and statutes do not explicitly provide a mechanism for oversight by OSMRE. In addition, OSMRE personnel do not have experience with health benefit plans, leaving a large knowledge gap at all levels. Despite these limitations, OSMRE has continued to fund the annual transfer requests to UMWAF without obtaining and validating the necessary information and supporting documentation from UMWAF.

Without adequate Federal Government oversight and guidance, UMWAF made decisions on how to spend the funds transferred through OSMRE without considering the impact on the Government, which is responsible for most of the costs for providing these benefits. As a result, OSMRE certified the annual fund transfers without requiring UMWAF to provide appropriate supporting documentation. Specifically, we found that OSMRE—

- did not verify beneficiary enrollments and assignments;
- used unreconciled information to support the fund transfers;
- received inadequate documentation to support administrative expenses;

- did not require UMWAF to report delinquent operators to the IRS;
- did not require UMWAF to apply residual funds to shortfalls; and
- did not require UMWAF to remit interest earned on Federal funds.

OSMRE's inadequate oversight and statutory limitations have allowed too many decisions to reside with UMWAF, rather than with the Federal Government. We made 21 recommendations to assist OSMRE in improving its oversight to ensure that UMWAF administers federally funded benefits in accordance with regulations and statutes. In response to our draft report, OSMRE concurred with 10 recommendations, did not concur with 5 recommendations, and did not specify whether it concurred with 6 recommendations. We referred the recommendations to the Office of Policy, Management and Budget for resolution and implementation tracking.

OSMRE Not Using Its Authority to Oversee the Abandoned Mine Lands Program

We evaluated OSMRE to determine whether its oversight of certified States ensured that the use of AML funds met the intent and requirements of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977.

We found that OSMRE has not used its authority over AML grants to ensure that certified States give coal reclamation projects priority over noncoal reclamation projects. This has allowed States to operate their reclamation programs without input from OSMRE regarding project selection. As a result, noncoal reclamation is completed while coal-related hazards persist. In addition, OSMRE was unable to provide a comprehensive accounting of the AML hazards facing certified States due to inaccuracies and incomplete information in its data management tools.

We made 11 recommendations to help OSMRE improve oversight and data management for AML grants given to certified States and to ensure that coal-related hazards are given reclamation priority. OSMRE concurred with all of our recommendations.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

No Endangered Species Act Violations Found in Masked Bobwhite Quail Program

We investigated potential violations of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (ESA) and possible reprisal associated with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's (FWS) recovery program for the endangered masked bobwhite quail at the Buenos Aires National Wildlife Refuge (BANWR) in Sasabe, AZ.

We initiated this investigation after learning that there had been an FWS PowerPoint presentation, developed by a BANWR employee, that contained photos of masked bobwhite quails that were injured and living in overcrowded conditions at BANWR. The photos of the quails depicted potential ESA violations.

In addition, we learned during our investigation that a supervisor at BANWR had approved the presentation and authorized the BANWR employee to show it to an advisory group to illustrate the quails' living conditions and the need to improve the facilities. Ten days after the presentation was shown, an FWS deputy regional supervisor lowered the BANWR supervisor's annual performance rating and reduced the amount of a monetary award she was to receive. The BANWR supervisor believed the deputy regional supervisor's actions were reprisal against her for allowing the presentation to be shown, so we included this issue in our investigation.

Although we confirmed that the quails had been living in overcrowded conditions at BANWR and that some had suffered injuries, we found no evidence of negligence by BANWR employees while caring for the quails. In addition, we learned before completing our investigation that FWS had improved the quails' living conditions.

We confirmed that soon after the BANWR employee gave the presentation, FWS regional officials visited BANWR to assess the quails and their facility; the BANWR supervisor's rating was lowered the day after they returned to the regional office. We further determined that FWS regional officials were concerned because the presentation had been shown to recovery team members who were not FWS employees, and they feared it might be released to the public. The officials we spoke to gave conflicting reasons for why the supervisor's rating was lowered; one said that her involvement in the presentation was a factor in the decision, while another said that the visit to the facility had revealed overall maintenance issues at BANWR.

Masked Bobwhite Quail

We issued this report to FWS for review and action.

Appearance of Retaliation Found Against an FWS Region 4 Employee

We investigated whether an FWS Region 4 employee was the victim of retaliation, harassment, and a hostile work environment. The employee claimed that Region 4 managers retaliated after the employee alleged management impropriety, including prohibited personnel practices, nepotism, falsification of Government documents, intimidation, and failure to investigate allegations of wrongdoing.

We found that there was an appearance of retaliation against the employee after the employee alleged, in January 2013, that an FWS supervisor was not abiding by the terms of a settlement agreement. The employee had not received disciplinary action before the January 2013 complaint, but over the next 3 years, the employee was disciplined six times culminating in an August 2016 proposed removal from Federal service. The employee's first and second level supervisors admitted that they knew about the initial complaint; however, they claimed that the subsequent personnel actions were to address performance and disciplinary issues and that they had consulted with human resources.

We issued this report to the DOI Chief of Staff and to the U.S. Office of Special Council.

Assistant IA Director Acknowledged Improper Award of FWS Grant to Partner-Impact, LLC

We investigated a $256,100 single-source cooperative agreement that FWS' International Affairs (IA) program awarded to a private company, Partner-Impact, LLC, to build a partnership strategy and marketing communication plan to reduce demand for illegal wildlife and wildlife products. Assistant IA Director Bryan Arroyo acknowledged that he preselected Partner-Impact to receive the funds and influenced his staff to disregard procurement policy and award a single-source cooperative agreement to the company. We also found that Partner-Impact did not complete most of the agreement's requirements because Arroyo directed the company to assist another anti-wildlife-trafficking initiative instead.

We provided a report of our investigation to FWS for review and action. DOI has said it will provide procurement training to managers and "relevant" procurement employees.

FWS Senior Official Overlooked Employees' Misconduct

After a 2016 investigation revealed multiple violations by former FWS employee Stephen M. Barton, we opened this investigation into potential mismanagement by Barton's former supervisor, Hannibal Bolton, FWS Senior Advisor for Diversity and Workforce Inclusion, while in his previous position as assistant director for FWS' Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program (WSFRP). We also investigated Bolton's oversight of two other former WSFRP employees who had reported to him.

We found that Bolton did not investigate or correct Barton's misconduct when he learned about it. Barton was therefore able to claim hundreds of hours of compensatory time without approval and to violate DOI's telework rules. Bolton also did not review Barton's travel or the travel of the two former WSFRP employees. His failure to do so allowed his employees to violate the Federal Travel Regulation by taking multiple personal trips to and from their home States at Government expense.

Stephen Barton pled guilty on October 26, 2016, to one count of Title 18 U.S. Code § 1001. He was sentenced on February 9, 2017, to 3 years of probation and a fine of $10,000. FWS reassigned Hannibal Bolton from his management position in WSFR and revamped reporting requirements regarding outside employment. Bolton has since retired from FWS.

Alleged Illegal Construction of Cabin at Tetlin National Wildlife Refuge Unsubstantiated

We investigated an alleged illegal cabin construction project at the FWS Tetlin National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska. The complaint specifically alleged that a refuge official illegally authorized the construction of a cabin on Stuver Lake, under the guise of supporting a scientific lynx study, but that it was actually intended for private guests to use as a base for moose hunting on the refuge. In addition to the allegations, the complaint questioned the refuge official's authority to authorize the project; FWS' compliance with applicable laws, regulations, and policies; the creation of a trail and felling of trees at the refuge; and the allegedly excessive project cost of $50,000.

Dedman Lake, Tetlin National Wildlife Refuge, AK

Our investigation found that the refuge official acted within his authority, with regional approval, and with the intent to facilitate scientific research and availability of emergency shelter.

We confirmed that the cabin had been used by refuge staff to conduct lynx research, but did find one instance when the cabin was used by a local resident who reserved the cabin for moose hunting.

The route created for access to the cabin in the winter was temporary and minimally disruptive to vegetation, and there was no evidence that any trees were cut down. The 12-by-16-foot cabin was constructed using approximately $5,200 in materials, not $50,000. We found that the refuge official failed to complete assessments necessary to comply with the National Environmental Policy Act and National Historic Preservation Act prior to initiating the construction project.

We provided a report of our investigation to FWS.

Alleged Collusion on Coastal Impact Assistance Program Grant Unsubstantiated

We completed an investigation into allegations of contract improprieties related to Coastal Impact Assistance Program grant funds awarded by FWS. The complainant alleged that a grantee facilitated bid rigging and violated acquisition regulations by allowing a contractor to change the contract's scope from the purchase of supplies to a research project.

Our investigation found that the contract in question was never awarded. The grantee determined that the contractor's initial proposal would exceed the available funding and that subsequent proposals, which were revised to lower the requested amount, would not be viable in an arctic environment.

We provided a report of our investigation to FWS.

FWS Employee Guilty of Theft of Funds From Recreation Fee Program

We initiated this investigation after receiving information that an FWS Region 3 refuge employee allegedly stole funds collected from the FWS Recreation Fee Program, which included the sale of Federal duck stamps and America the Beautiful passes to national parks and recreation lands. A new FWS supervisor, who had been reconciling program funds for 2015, discovered a shortage in the funds that the refuge employee had been managing.

U.S. duck stamp, circa 1991

We found evidence that between 1997 and February 2016, the refuge employee stole approximately $12,400 in cash from the sale of duck stamps. We were unable to quantify the amount of money that she stole from the America the Beautiful passes due to an absence of documentation and oversight in Region 3.

The refuge employee admitted that since 1998 she had stolen approximately $150 in cash every 2 weeks from the sale of the stamps and passes, and had used the money to pay for medication and gas. We found that the absence of any oversight by FWS managers not only made the theft possible, but also allowed it to continue for nearly 20 years. We determined, however, that program oversight had improved since the new FWS supervisor took over the program and identified the shortage in funds.

The refuge employee resigned from FWS in July 2016, and pled guilty to theft by swindle in district court. She was sentenced to 3 years of probation and 450 hours of community service, and she was fined $128.

We provided a report of our investigation to FWS.

U.S. Geological Survey

USGS Needs To Improve the Strategic Planning, Performance Measurement, and Transparency for its National Water Census Program

We reviewed the U.S. Geological Survey's (USGS) National Water Census program. Specifically, we reviewed the program's strategic planning and goals, performance measurement, and funding for fiscal years 2011–2016. We determined that although improvements have been made in recent years, USGS has not included all of the required elements in its strategic science plan for the USGS Water Mission Area, sufficiently measured the program's performance, or transparently reported its use of allocated funds for the program.

USGS is in the process of updating its Water Mission Area strategic plan and improving its performance measurement and reporting. We offered three recommendations to help USGS further improve its strategic management efforts for the National Water Census.

USGS Employee Violates Ethics Rules

We investigated allegations that a USGS Research Ecologist violated ethics and employment rules by working in paid positions at two universities located in China without USGS's permission. The complainant alleged the positions in China required the research ecologist to use USGS-developed research technology and that the research ecologist's work was completed as part of China's Thousand Talents Plan.

Our investigation revealed the research ecologist traveled to China to collaborate and mentor students at Chinese educational institutions without USGS's permission. We could not show that any of them paid the research ecologist as an employee; however, the research ecologist acknowledged some of those institutions paid his travel expenses, which violated ethics rules.

We determined the research ecologist's current supervisor knew he held an honorary position at a Chinese university. His supervisor did not know the institution covered the research ecologist's travel expenses. We determined that the research ecologist completed annual ethics training and that he was informed during that training that off-duty mentoring positions needed USGS approval.

We could not substantiate the allegation that the research ecologist used USGS-developed technology in China. He denied using any proprietary USGS research technology while mentoring in China and added the information he shared was available to the public. The research ecologist told us that he was formally recruited for China's One Thousand Talents program, but he said he never actually participated in the program.

We provided a report of our investigation to USGS.

Appendices

STATISTICAL HIGHLIGHTS

Audits, Inspections, and Evaluations Activities

Reports Issued	34
Audits (including Financial Audits), Inspections, and Evaluations	17
Contract and Grant Audits.....	8
Other Report Types ¹	9
 Total Monetary Impacts	$69,709,900
Questioned Costs (includes unsupported costs)	$46,109,720
Recommendations That Funds Be Put to Better Use.....	$23,600,180
 Audits, Inspections, and Evaluations Recommendations Made.....	192
Audits, Inspections, and Evaluations Recommendations Closed	174

Investigative Activities

Cases Closed	242
Cases Opened	231
Complaints Received From All Sources.....	236

Criminal Prosecution Activities

Indictments/Informations	11
Convictions.....	13
Sentencings.....	12
Jail	84 months
Probation	396 months
Community Service	450 hours
Criminal Penalties.....	$11,807,171.86
Asset Forfeiture.....	$0
Criminal Matters Referred for Prosecution	38
Criminal Matters Declined This Period	36

¹ Other report types include management advisories, special projects, and other types of reports that are not classified as audits, inspections, or evaluations.

Civil Investigative Activities

Civil Referrals.....	8
Civil Declinations.....	1
Civil Settlements.....	$410,000
Civil Recoveries.....	$0

Administrative Investigative Activities

Personnel Suspensions.....	4
Reprimands/Counseling.....	6
Resignations.....	1
Removals.....	1
Retirements/Transfers.....	3
General Policy Actions.....	6
Contractor/Participant Suspensions.....	0
Contractor/Participant Debarments.....	11
Interim Agreement to Address Statutory Exclusions.....	1

REPORTS ISSUED

This listing includes all reports issued by the Office of Audits, Inspections, and Evaluations during the 6-month reporting period that ended March 31, 2017. It provides the report number, title, issue date, and monetary amounts identified in each report.

* Funds To Be Put to Better Use

 Questioned Costs

 Unsupported Costs

Audits, Inspections, and Evaluations

Bureau of Land Management

2016-WR-027

Management Advisory: The Bureau of Land Management's Wild Horse and Burro Program is not Maximizing Efficiencies or Complying With Federal Regulations (10/17/16) *$3,700,000

Bureau of Reclamation

2015-WR-080

Audit of the Bureau of Reclamation's Klamath Basin Water User Mitigation Program (10/11/2016)

Multi-Office Assignments

2015-EAU-079

Bureau of Indian Affairs' Federal Indian Minerals Office (02/03/2017)

2015-ER-034

Climate Effects Program Coordination (03/17/2017)

2016-ER-070

Insufficient Documentation of Use of Extended Administrative Leave at the U.S. Department of the Interior (03/30/2017)

2016-FIN-025

Independent Auditors' Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Financial Statements for Fiscal Years 2016 and 2015 (11/15/2016)

2016-FIN-025-A

Independent Auditors' Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Closing Package Financial Statements for Fiscal Year 2016 (11/15/2016)

2016-ITA-021

Information Technology Security Weaknesses at a Core Data Center Could Expose Sensitive Data (02/15/2017)

2016-ITA-062

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2016 (03/10/2017)

ISD-IN-MOA-0004-2014-I

U.S. Department of the Interior's Continuous Diagnostics and Mitigation Program Not Yet Capable of Providing Complete Information for Enterprise Risk Determinations (10/19/2016)

Office of the Secretary2016-FIN-069

DATA Act Readiness Review for the U.S. Department of the Interior (11/30/2016)

2016-FIN-069-A

DATA Act Readiness Review of Interior Business Center for the U.S. Department of the Interior (12/15/2016)

Office of the Special Trustee for American Indians2016-FIN-024

Independent Auditors' Reports on the Tribal and Other Trust Funds and Individual Indian Monies Trust Funds Statements for Fiscal Years 2016 and 2015 (11/10/2016)

Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement2016-EAU-007

Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Oversight of the Abandoned Mine Lands Program (03/30/2017)

C-IN-OSM-0044-2014-A

Oversight of Annual Fund Transfer for Miner Benefits Needs Improvement (03/29/2017) *$19,900,000 $38,878,548

U.S. Geological Survey2016-WR-071

The U.S. Geological Survey Needs To Improve the Strategic Planning, Performance Measurement, and Transparency for its National Water Census Program (02/15/2017)

Contract and Grant Audits

Bureau of Indian Affairs

2015-ER-069-A

Audit of Contract Nos. A13AV00621 and A12AV00769/A15AV00265
Between the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Lower Brule Sioux Tribe (12/16/2016) $2,668 $382,459

Bureau of Land Management

2016-CG-006

Audit of Bureau of Land Management Cooperative Agreement
No. L10AC20002 With The Piney Woods School (02/14/2017)
$524,478

Bureau of Reclamation

2015-ER-069

Audit of Cooperative Agreement No. R95AV60020 Between the Bureau of Reclamation and the Lower Brule Sioux Tribe (12/05/2016)
$38,661 *$1,402,087

National Park Service

2015-ER-061

Audit of Task Agreement Nos. P13AC00279, P13AC01094, and P14AC00445 Between the National Park Service and the Student Conservation Association Under Cooperative Agreement No.
P09AC00402 (02/03/2017) *$180 $740,681

2016-CG-008

Compliance Audit of National Park Service Contract No. P15PC00170
With Strategic Consulting Alliances, LLC (10/04/2016)
$56,554 *$202,939

2016-CG-033

Compliance Audit of National Park Service Contract P15PC00612 with Kane Communications, LLC (03/31/2017)

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

2016-EXT-005

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Government of the Virgin Islands,
Department of Planning and Natural Resources, From October 1, 2012,
Through September 30, 2014 (02/21/2017) $3,880,195

2016-EXT-043

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Delaware, Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control, Division of Fish and Wildlife, From July 1, 2013 Through June 30, 2015 (02/15/2017)

Other Assignment TypesBureau of Indian Affairs2016-ITA-021-A

Information Security Technical Vulnerability Assessment – Bureau of Indian Affairs (10/06/2016)

2016-ITA-021-B

Information Security Technical Vulnerability Assessment – Bureau of Indian Education (10/17/2016)

Bureau of Land Management2017-CR-007

Verification Review – Recommendations for the Report, “Bureau of Land Management’s Wildland Fire Program” (Audit No. C-EV-BLM-003-2012) (02/14/2017)

Bureau of Reclamation2017-WR-011

Verification Review – Recommendations for the Report, “Bureau of Reclamation’s Sustainable Water Management Programs and Activities” (WR-EV-BOR-0026-2013) (01/05/2017)

Multi-Office Assignments2016-ER-049

Inspector General’s Statement Summarizing the Major Management and Performance Challenges Facing the U.S. Department of the Interior (11/04/2016)

2017-FIN-016

Progress Made by the U.S. Department of the Interior in Implementing Government Charge Card Recommendations (01/31/2017)

National Park Service2016-CG-008-A

Management Advisory – Issues Identified During Our Compliance Audit of Strategic Consulting Alliances, LLC on Contract No. P15PC00170 With the National Park Service (10/04/2016)

2016-CG-033-A

Management Advisory – Issues Identified During Our Compliance Audit of Kane Communications, LLC, on Contract No. P15PC00612 with National Park Service (03/31/2017)

Office of Insular Affairs

2016-CR-035

Closeout Notice – Evaluation of Guam Port Authority Cargo Handling Facilities and Equipment (01/12/2017)

Office of the Secretary

2017-ER-010

Verification Review – Recommendations for the Report, “Wildland Urban Interface: Community Assistance” (ER-EV-MOA-0012-2009) (01/26/2017)

MONETARY RESOLUTION ACTIVITIES

Table 1: Inspector General Reports With Questioned Costs*

	Number of Reports	Questioned Costs*	Unsupported Costs
A. For which no management decision has been made by the commencement of the reporting period.	6	$4,888,066	$2,579,292
B. Which were issued during the reporting period.	7	$46,109,270	$7,132,839
Total (A+B)	13	$50,997,336	$9,712,131
C. For which a management decision was made during the reporting period.*	9	$46,679,051	$7,724,646
(i) Dollar value of costs disallowed.		$42,894,238	$5,618,815
(ii) Dollar value of costs allowed.		$3,784,813	$2,105,831
D. For which no management decision had been made by the end of the reporting period.*	4	$4,318,285	$1,987,485

* Does not include non-Federal funds. Unsupported costs are included in questioned costs.

Table 2: Inspector General Reports With Recommendations That Funds Be Put to Better Use*

	Number of Reports	Dollar Value
A. For which no management decision has been made by the commencement of the reporting period.	0	$0
B. Which were issued during the reporting period.	3	$23,600,180
Total (A+B)	3	$23,600,180
C. For which a management decision was made during the reporting period.	2	$3,700,180
(i) Dollar value of recommendations that were agreed to by management.		$3,700,180
(ii) Dollar value of recommendations that were not agreed to by management.		$0
D. For which no management decision had been made by the end of the reporting period.	1	$19,900,000

* Does not include non-Federal funds.

REPORTS PENDING DECISION

This listing includes a summary of audit, inspection, and evaluation reports that were more than 6 months old on March 31, 2017 and still pending a management decision. It provides report number, title, issue date, and number of unresolved recommendations.

Audits, Inspections, and Evaluations

Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs

C-EV-BIE-0023-2014

Condition of Indian School Facilities (09/30/2016)
21 Unresolved Recommendations

Bureau of Indian Affairs

CR-EV-BIA-0002-2013

BIA Needs Sweeping Changes to Manage the Osage Nation's Energy Resources (10/20/2014) 1 Unresolved Recommendation

Office of the Secretary

2015-ITA-032

U.S. Department of the Interior's Management of its Smartphones, Tablets, and Other Mobile Devices (06/22/2016)
1 Unresolved Recommendation

2015-ER-011

U.S. Department of the Interior's Internal Controls for Purchase Cards and Fleet Cards (09/30/2016) 1 Unresolved Recommendation

Contract and Grant Audits

Bureau of Reclamation

2015-ER-047

Request for Equitable Adjustment by Dix Corporation on Contract No. R11PC10035 With the Bureau of Reclamation (06/13/2016) 1 Unresolved Recommendation

Other Assignment Types

Bureau of Reclamation

2015-WR-080-B

Management Advisory – Operations and Maintenance Cost Allocation for the Klamath Project Reserved Works (09/27/2016)
1 Unresolved Recommendation

REPORTS WITH UNIMPLEMENTED RECOMMENDATIONS

This listing provides a summary of reports issued by the Office of Audits, Inspections, and Evaluations prior to October 1, 2016, that still had open (unimplemented) recommendations as of March 31, 2017. Unimplemented recommendations are divided into resolved, management disagreed, and awaiting management decision categories. Recommendations with which management has disagreed have been referred to DOI for resolution. Recommendations are classified as awaiting management decision if either management did not respond or management's response was not sufficiently detailed to consider the recommendation resolved.

Open: 422 Resolved: 396 Disagreed: 4 Awaiting Decision: 22

Questioned Costs: $32,126,403

Funds That Could Have Been Better Used: $1,885,262

Recommendations are "on pause" due to pending legislation and/or suspended rulemaking*

Audits, Inspections, and Evaluations

Bureau of Indian Affairs

2015-WR-012

Bureau of Indian Affairs Funded and/or Operated Detention Programs (02/11/2016) Resolved: 4

C-EV-BIE-0023-2014

Condition of Indian School Facilities (09/30/2016)
Awaiting Decision: 21

C-IS-BIE-0023-2014-A

Condition of Bureau of Indian Affairs Facilities at the Pine Hill Boarding School (01/11/2016) Resolved: 7

CR-EV-BIA-0002-2013

BIA Needs Sweeping Changes to Manage the Osage Nation's Energy Resources (10/20/2014) Resolved: 18 Disagreed: 1
Better Use: $97,000

CR-EV-BIA-0011-2014

Bureau of Indian Affairs' Southern Ute Agency's Management of the Southern Ute Indian Tribe's Energy Resources (02/09/2016)
Resolved: 5

NM-EV-BIE-0003-2008

School Violence Prevention (02/03/2010) Resolved: 1

WR-EV-BIA-0001-2012

Management of Social Services in BIA: Opportunity for Action (03/18/2013) Resolved: 1

Bureau of Land Management2015-EAU-037

The Bureau of Land Management's Determination Processes for Wind Energy Projects Proposed on Public Lands (12/23/2015) Resolved: 5

2015-EAU-057

Bureau of Land Management's Management of Private Acquired Leases (12/11/2015) Resolved: 5

2015-ITA-072

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2015 (02/24/2016) Resolved: 6

C-IN-BLM-0002-2012

Bureau of Land Management's Mineral Materials Program (03/31/2014) Resolved: 2

C-IN-MOA-0013-2010

Management of Rights-of-Way in the U.S. Department of the Interior (09/27/2012) Resolved: 4

CR-EV-BLM-0004-2012

Bureau of Land Management's Geothermal Resources Management (03/07/2013) Resolved: 4

CR-IS-BLM-0004-2014

Inspection Report – BLM Federal Onshore Oil and Gas Trespass and Drilling Without Approval (09/29/2014) Resolved: 2

Bureau of Reclamation2015-ITA-017

Cloud Computing Security Documentation in the Cyber Security Assessment Management Solution (11/12/2015) Resolved: 2

2015-ITA-072

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2015 (02/24/2016) Resolved: 3

ISD-IS-BOR-0003-2013

IT Security of the Grand Coulee Dam Supervisory Control and Data Acquisition System (04/10/2014) Resolved: 2

ISD-IS-BOR-0004-2013

IT Security of the Glen Canyon Dam Supervisory Control and Data Acquisition System (03/26/2014) Resolved: 2

WR-EV-BOR-0006-2014

Garrison Diversion Unit's Interim Cost Allocation (09/30/2015) Resolved: 1

WR-EV-MOA-0015-2011

Bureau of Land Management, National Park Service, and Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Safety of Dams: Emergency Preparedness (12/27/2012) Resolved: 1

Bureau of Ocean Energy ManagementCR-EV-BOEM-0001-2013

U.S. Department of the Interior's Offshore Renewable Energy Program (09/25/2013) Resolved: 1

Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement2015-ITA-072

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2015 (02/24/2016) Resolved: 1

CR-EV-BSEE-0006-2013

Offshore Oil and Gas Permitting, U.S. Department of the Interior (09/30/2014) Resolved: 2

CR-EV-BSEE-0014-2014

The Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement, Incident Investigation Program (08/18/2015) Resolved: 1

CR-IS-MOA-0004-2009

BLM and MMS Beneficial Use Deductions (03/08/2010) Resolved: 1

National Park Service2015-ER-056

Internal Control Review of Student Conservation Association, Inc.
(05/31/2016) Resolved: 1

2015-ITA-072

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2015 (02/24/2016) Resolved: 2

2015-WR-019

Operation and Management of the Brinkerhoff Lodge at Grand Teton
National Park (09/30/2015) Resolved: 1

WR-IS-NPS-0009-2013

NPS Contractor Oversight of Visitor Tent Cabins at Yosemite National Park Involved in Hantavirus Outbreak (05/15/2013) Resolved: 2

Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and EnforcementWR-EV-MOA-0015-2011

Bureau of Land Management, National Park Service, and Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Safety of Dams:
Emergency Preparedness (12/27/2012) Resolved: 3

Office of the Secretary2015-CR-001

Inspection of the U.S. Department of the Interior's Occupational Safety and Health and Workers' Compensation Programs (02/09/2016)
Resolved: 5

2015-CR-031

Guam School Bus Transportation Program (08/09/2016) Resolved: 1

2015-ER-011

U.S. Department of the Interior's Internal Controls for Purchase Cards and Fleet Cards (09/30/2016) Resolved: 1 Disagreed: 1

2015-FIN-046

Independent Auditors' Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior
Financial Statements for Fiscal Years 2015 and 2014 (11/13/2015)
Resolved: 2

2015-ITA-017

Cloud Computing Security Documentation in the Cyber Security Assessment Management Solution (11/12/2015) Resolved: 3

2015-ITA-032

U.S. Department of the Interior's Management of its Smartphones, Tablets, and Other Mobile Devices (06/22/2016)
Resolved: 3 Disagreed: 1 Better Use: $1,763,423

2015-ITA-072

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2015 (02/24/2016) Resolved: 13

C-EV-MOA-0009-2011

Controls over Check Writing (10/31/2012) Resolved: 1

C-IN-MOA-0010-2008

Audit Report – Department of the Interior Museum Collections: Accountability and Preservation (12/16/2009) Resolved: 3

C-IN-MOA-0013-2010

Management of Rights-of-Way in the U.S. Department of the Interior (09/27/2012) Resolved: 1

C-IN-MOA-0049-2004

Department of the Interior Concessions Management (06/13/2005)
Resolved: 1

CR-IN-ONRR-0007-2014

Financial Management Division, Office of Natural Resources Revenue (06/03/2016) Resolved: 10

ER-EV-PMB-0005-2014

Evaluation of Security Features of the Main Interior Building (12/29/2014) Resolved: 2

ISD-EV-MOA-0001-2012

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2012 (11/13/2012) Resolved: 1

ISD-EV-OCIO-0002-2014

DOI's Adoption of Cloud-Computing Technologies (05/21/2015)
Resolved: 2

ISD-IN-MOA-0001-2013

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2013 (02/26/2014) Resolved: 5

ISD-IN-MOA-0004-2014

Security of the U.S. Department of the Interior's Publicly Accessible Information Technology Systems (07/15/2015) Resolved: 6

W-IN-MOA-0086-2004

Proper Use of Cooperative Agreements Could Improve Interior's Initiatives for Collaborative Partnerships (01/31/2007) Resolved: 1

WR-EV-OSS-0005-2009

Aviation Maintenance Tracking and Pilot Inspector Practices – Further Advances Needed (04/14/2009) Resolved: 1

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service2015-FIN-021

Performance Audit of Expenditures and Obligations Used by the Secretary of the Interior in Administering the Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Programs Improvement Act of 2000, Public Law 106-408 for Fiscal Years 2013 and 2014 (08/27/2015) Resolved: 1

2015-ITA-072

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2015 (02/24/2016) Resolved: 7

CR-EV-FWS-0002-2014

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Management of Oil and Gas Activities on Refuges (03/01/2015) Resolved: 3

CR-EV-MOA-0006-2012

U.S. Department of the Interior's Underground Injection Control Activities (03/31/2014) Resolved: 1

U.S. Geological Survey2015-ITA-072

Independent Auditors' Performance Audit Report on the U.S. Department of the Interior Federal Information Security Management Act for Fiscal Year 2015 (02/24/2016) Resolved: 3

CR-EV-GSV-0003-2014

Energy Resources Program, U.S. Geological Survey (05/13/2015)
Resolved: 3

CR-IS-GSV-0008-2014

Information Sharing between U.S. Geological Survey and Bureau of Ocean Energy Management (10/23/2014) Resolved: 1

Contract and Grant AuditsBureau of Land Management2015-WR-062

Bureau of Land Management Cooperative Agreement No. L12AC20673
With Utah Correctional Industries (11/27/2015) Resolved: 2
Questioned Costs: $1,931,699

WR-CA-BLM-0013-2013

Cooperative Agreement No. JSA071001/L08AC13913 between the Utah Correctional Industries and the Bureau of Land Management
(09/27/2013) Resolved: 2 Questioned Costs: $2,004,553

National Park Service2015-WR-084

National Park Service Task Agreement Nos. P13AC00875 and P13AC00891 With the University of Rhode Island (09/16/2016)
Resolved: 2 Questioned Costs: $146,329

X-CX-NPS-0001-2014

Final Costs Claimed by NY Asphalt, Inc., Under Contract Nos.
INPSANDY12003, INP13PX28237, and INP13PX22222 With the National Park Service (10/21/2014) Resolved: 2
Questioned Costs: $988,203

Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement2015-ER-025

Audit of the Abandoned Mine Land Reclamation Program, State of Indiana (09/30/2016) Resolved: 6 Questioned Costs: $723,362

Bureau of Reclamation2015-ER-047

Request for Equitable Adjustment by Dix Corporation on Contract No. R11PC10035 With the Bureau of Reclamation (06/13/2016)
Awaiting Decision: 1 Questioned Costs: $2,232,917

C-CX-BOR-0010-2013

Bureau of Reclamation Funding Agreements with Chippewa Cree Construction Corporation: R10AV60025 and 06NA602127 (12/16/2013) Resolved: 2 Questioned Costs: $12,914,545

ER-CX-BOR-0010-2014

Crow Tribe Accounting System and Interim Costs Claimed Under Agreement Nos. R11AV60120 and R12AV60002 With the Bureau of Reclamation (06/24/2015) Resolved: 12 Questioned Costs: $476,399

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service2015-EXT-005

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Department of Fish and Game, Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, From July 1, 2012, Through June 30, 2014 (01/07/2016) Resolved: 3

2015-EXT-006

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Department of Fish and Game, Division of Marine Fisheries, From July 1, 2012, Through June 30, 2014 (02/04/2016) Resolved: 3 Questioned Costs: $121,168

2015-EXT-009

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Utah, Department of Natural Resources, Division of Wildlife Resources, From July 1, 2012, Through June 30, 2014 (09/19/2016) Resolved: 13
Questioned Costs: $208,752

2015-EXT-041

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Commonwealth of Virginia, Department of Game and Inland Fisheries From July 1, 2012, Through June 30, 2014 (09/07/2016) Resolved: 4 Questioned Costs: $596,811
Better Use: $14,506

2015-EXT-043

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Alabama, Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, Division of Wildlife and Freshwater Fisheries, From October 1, 2012, Through September 30, 2014 (09/07/2016) Resolved: 2

2015-EXT-044

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Department of Lands and Natural Resources, From October 1, 2012, Through September 30, 2014 (08/10/2016) Resolved: 4 Questioned Costs: $42,580

R-GR-FWS-0002-2014

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Minnesota, Department of Natural Resources, From July 1, 2011, Through June 30, 2013 (12/19/2014) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0003-2012

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of New Jersey, Department of Environmental Protection, Division of Fish and Wildlife, From July 1, 2009, Through June 30, 2011 (06/22/2012) Resolved: 7 Questioned Costs: $6,028

R-GR-FWS-0003-2013

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of South Dakota, Department of Game, Fish, and Parks, From July 1, 2010, Through June 30, 2012 (06/04/2013) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0004-2009

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Minnesota, Department of Natural Resources, From July 1, 2005, Through June 30, 2007 (09/21/2009) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0005-2013

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Oregon, Department of Fish and Wildlife, From July 1, 2010, Through June 30, 2012 (07/26/2013) Resolved: 10 Questioned Costs: $58,976

R-GR-FWS-0006-2007

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Federal Assistance Program Grants Awarded to the Virgin Islands, Department of Planning and Natural Resources, Division of Fish and Wildlife, From October 1, 2003, Through September 30, 2005 (10/18/2007) Resolved: 6
Questioned Costs: $60,000

R-GR-FWS-0006-2008

Audit on U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Idaho, Department of Fish and Game, From July 1, 2005, Through June 30, 2007 (01/26/2009) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0006-2009

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the American Samoa Government, Department of Marine and Wildlife Resources, From October 1, 2006, Through September 30, 2008 (12/07/2009) Resolved: 7
Questioned Costs: $16,625

R-GR-FWS-0006-2011

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Government of the Virgin Islands, Department of Planning and Natural Resources, From October 1, 2008, Through September 30, 2010 (11/03/2011)
Resolved: 6 Questioned Costs: $40,209

R-GR-FWS-0006-2013

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the District of Columbia, Department of the Environment, From October 1, 2009, Through September 30, 2011 (07/30/2013) Resolved: 3

R-GR-FWS-0006-2014

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Wisconsin, Department of Natural Resources, From July 1, 2011, Through June 30, 2013 (09/15/2014) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0007-2011

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Maryland, Department of Natural Resources, From July 1, 2008, Through June 30, 2010 (11/30/2011) Resolved: 18

R-GR-FWS-0007-2014

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Department of Natural and Environmental Resources, From July 1, 2011, Through June 30, 2013 (11/26/2014) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0008-2009

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Game Commission, From July 1, 2006, Through June 30, 2008 (11/12/2009) Resolved: 4

R-GR-FWS-0008-2014

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Kansas, Department of Wildlife, Parks, and Tourism From July 1, 2011, Through June 30, 2013 (03/27/2015) Resolved: 8 Questioned Costs: $328,860

R-GR-FWS-0009-2004

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Federal Assistance Grants Administered by the State of New Hampshire, Fish and Game Department, From July 1, 2001, through June 30, 2003 (03/31/2005) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0010-2007

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Federal Assistance Program Grants Awarded to the State of New Jersey, Department of Environmental Protection, Division of Fish and Wildlife, From July 1, 2004, Through June 30, 2006 (12/05/2007) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0010-2008

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Oregon, Department of Fish and Wildlife, From July 1, 2005, Through June 30, 2007 (02/26/2009) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0010-2009

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the District of Columbia, Department of the Environment, From October 1, 2006, Through September 30, 2008 (02/26/2010) Resolved: 3
Questioned Costs: $100,358

R-GR-FWS-0010-2012

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Nebraska, Game and Parks Commission, From July 1, 2009, Through June 30, 2011 (11/30/2012)
Resolved: 2

R-GR-FWS-0010-2013

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Wyoming, Game and Fish Department, From July 1, 2010, Through June 30, 2012 (10/29/2013)
Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0010-2014

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the American Samoa Government, Department of Marine and Wildlife Resources, From October 1, 2011, Through September 30, 2013 (12/17/2015) Resolved: 7
Questioned Costs: $209,442 Better Use: $10,333

R-GR-FWS-0011-2007

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Federal Assistance Program Grants Awarded to the State of California, Department of Fish and Game, From July 1, 2004, Through June 30, 2006 (03/14/2008)
Resolved: 10 Questioned Costs: $1,381,957

R-GR-FWS-0011-2009

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Utah, Department of Natural Resources, Division of Wildlife Resources, From July 1, 2006, Through June 30, 2008 (01/29/2010) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0011-2010

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Wisconsin, Department of Natural Resources, From July 1, 2007, Through June 30, 2009 (11/22/2010) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0011-2012

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Iowa, Department of Natural Resources, From July 1, 2009, Through June 30, 2011 (11/28/2012)
Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0011-2013

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Montana, Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks, From July 1, 2010, Through June 30, 2012 (02/24/2014) Resolved: 2

R-GR-FWS-0011-2014

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania Game Commission From July 1, 2011, Through June 30, 2013 (05/05/2016) Resolved: 15 Questioned Costs: $1,508,801

R-GR-FWS-0012-2010

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Commonwealth of Kentucky, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, From July 1, 2007, Through June 30, 2009 (11/29/2010) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0012-2011

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Maine, Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife, From July 1, 2008, Through June 30, 2010 (03/01/2012) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0012-2012

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the Government of Guam, Department of Agriculture, From October 1, 2009, Through September 30, 2011 (11/14/2012) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0012-2013

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Idaho, Department of Fish and Game, From July 1, 2010, Through June 30, 2012 (05/19/2014) Resolved: 3 Questioned Costs: $564,627

R-GR-FWS-0013-2013

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of North Carolina, Division of Marine Fisheries, From July 1, 2010, Through June 30, 2012 (03/27/2014) Resolved: 2

R-GR-FWS-0013-2014

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of West Virginia, Division of Natural Resources, From July 1, 2011, Through June 30, 2013 (12/17/2015) Resolved: 11 Questioned Costs: $295,812

R-GR-FWS-0014-2005

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Federal Assistance Grants Awarded to the State of Texas, Parks and Wildlife Department, From September 1, 2002, Through August 31, 2004 (01/30/2007) Resolved: 4 Questioned Costs: $2,461,399

R-GR-FWS-0014-2014

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Program Grants Awarded to the State of Colorado, Division of Parks and Wildlife, From July 1, 2011, Through June 30, 2013 (07/21/2015) Resolved: 7 Questioned Costs: $696,955

R-GR-FWS-0016-2005

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Federal Assistance Program Grants Awarded to the State of Maine, Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife, From July 1, 2003, Through June 30, 2005 (12/11/2007) Resolved: 1

R-GR-FWS-0025-2005

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Federal Assistance Grants Awarded to the State of Maryland, Department of Natural Resources, From July 1, 2003, Through June 30, 2005 (02/08/2007) Resolved: 2

X-CX-FWS-0002-2014

Interim Costs Claimed by Coastal Environmental Group, Under Contract Nos. INF13PC00214 and INF13PC00195 With the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (05/04/2016) Resolved: 1
Questioned Costs: $2,009,036

Other Assignment Types

Office of the Secretary

2016-WR-022

Management Advisory – Office of Aviation Services' Maintenance System Presents a Threat to Public Health and Safety (06/29/2016) Resolved: 3

ISD-IN-MOA-0004-2014-H

Management Advisory – Failure To Adequately Protect Sensitive Data on Thousands of U.S. Department of the Interior Laptop Computers (12/21/2015) Resolved: 1

Bureau of Reclamation2015-WR-080-B

Management Advisory – Operations and Maintenance Cost Allocation for the Klamath Project Reserved Works (09/27/2016) Disagreed: 1

2015-WR-080-C

Management Advisory – Reimbursement of A-Canal Head Gates and Fish Screens on the Klamath Project (09/27/2016) Resolved: 4

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service2015-ER-022-A

Management Advisory – Issues Identified During our Audit of Interim Costs Claimed by Donjon Marine Company, Inc., Under Contract No. INF14PD01909 and our Audit of Interim Costs Claimed by Clean Venture Inc., Under Contract No. INF14D01910 with the Fish and Wildlife Service (08/03/2016) Resolved: 2

2016-CG-031-A

Management Advisory – Issues Identified During Our Audit of Interim Costs Claimed by Dewberry and Davis on Contract Nos. INF15PB000057 and INF15PB000059 With the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (08/10/2016) Resolved: 2

X-CX-FWS-0003-2014

Management Advisory – Issues Identified During Our Audit of Interim Costs Claimed by Coastal Environmental Group, Under Contract Nos. INF13PC00214 and INF13PC00195 With the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (05/04/2016) Resolved: 1

PEER REVIEWS COMPLETED

Government auditing and investigative standards require each statutory OIG to receive an independent, comprehensive peer review of its audit and investigative operations once every 3 years, consistent with applicable standards and guidelines. In general, these peer reviews determine whether the OIG's internal quality control system is adequate as designed and provides reasonable assurance that the OIG follows applicable standards, policies, and procedures. The Inspector General Act of 1978 requires that OIGs provide in their semiannual reports to Congress information about peer reviews of their respective organizations and their peer reviews of other OIGs.

Peer reviews are conducted in accordance with the Council of the Inspectors General on Integrity and Efficiency's "Guide for Conducting External Peer Reviews of the Audit Organizations of Federal Offices of Inspector General," based on requirements in the "Government Auditing Standards." Federal audit organizations can receive a rating of pass, pass with deficiencies, or fail.

Audit Peer Reviews

In the most recent peer review of our audit organization, the National Railroad Passenger Corporation (Amtrak) OIG reviewed the system of quality control for our Office of Audits, Inspections, and Evaluations (AIE) for the 3-year period ending September 30, 2013. Based on its review, AMTRAK determined that AIE's system of quality control provided reasonable assurance that AIE conforms to applicable professional standards in all material respects, and we received a peer review rating of pass.

We are currently undergoing a peer review by the Small Business Administration OIG for the 3-year period ending September 30, 2016. That review will be completed during the next semiannual reporting cycle.

Investigative Peer Reviews

During this reporting period, our Office of Investigation underwent a peer review by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency OIG, and peer reviewed Amtrak OIG. Each review was conducted without incident or negative findings.

INVESTIGATIONS INVOLVING SENIOR GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS

OI-PI-15-0768-I

Investigation of Ethical Misconduct and Violations by BLM Supervisory Agent (see page 8 of this report)

OI-MT-11-0192-I

Investigation of Alleged Theft from the Northern Arapahoe Tribe (see page 19 of this report)

OI-MT-12-0355-I

Investigation of Theft from the Eastern Shoshone Tribe (see page 21 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0300-I

Allegation of Travel Fraud by NPS Northeast Regional Director (see page 30 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0240-I

Investigation of Alleged Off-Duty Misconduct by an Official at Denali National Park (see page 29 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0530-I

Allegation of Sexual Harassment by NPS Law Enforcement Supervisor (see page 31 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0529-I

Falsification of Employment Records by the Deputy Director of the Office of Acquisition and Property Management (see page 38 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0029-I

Investigation of Alleged Retaliation by a Manager with Office of Civil Rights (see page 39 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0806-I

Investigative Report of Alleged Inappropriate Behavior by the Director of the Office of Law Enforcement and Security (see page 40 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0163-I

Alleged Endangered Species Act Violation of the Masked Bobwhite Quail Program (see page 47 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0175-I

Allegations of Retaliation Against an FWS Region 4 Employee (see page 48 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0114-I

Alleged Improper Award of FWS Grant to Partner-Impact, LLC (see page 48 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0435-I

Investigative Report of Potential Mismanagement by a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Assistant Director (see page 48 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0929-I

Allegations of Hostile Work Environment at Yosemite National Park (see page 26 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0900-I

Alleged Sexual Misconduct and Reprisal at Yellowstone National Park (see page 27 of this report)

OI-NM-16-0273-I

Investigation of Alleged Misconduct by a BIA Employee and Alleged Misuse of a CDIB Card (see page 19 of this report)

OI-GA-16-0706-I

Investigation of De Soto National Memorial Sexual Harassment Complaint (see page 28 of this report)

OI-PI-16-0650-I

Alleged Favoritism by an ONRR Supervisor (see page 33 of this report)

INSTANCES OF AGENCY INTERFERENCE

There have been no instances during this reporting period in which DOI or its bureaus or offices interfered with an audit, inspection, evaluation, investigation, or other OIG project.

SUSPENSIONS AND DEBARMENTS

Our Administrative Remedies Division (ARD) continued to provide training and outreach on administrative remedies. The ARD director and the DOI debarment program manager provided training at a DOI acquisition conference on suspension and debarment and referrals to ARD and a separate training to DOI OIG auditors during this period. ARD continued to assist Federal agencies in implementing effective suspension and debarment programs.

During this period, the ARD director moderated a panel discussion for about 50 attorneys at an American Bar Association Suspension and Debarment Subcommittee meeting on how suspending and debarring officials (SDO) assess the present responsibility of individuals. ARD also assisted the U.S. General Services Administration's SDO in providing information to Canadian officials on suspension and debarment best practices and Federal fraud analytics.

The Assistant Inspector General for Investigations and ARD staff participated in panel discussions and provided training to approximately 300 attendees at a suspension and debarment workshop that was jointly sponsored by the Council of the Inspectors General on Integrity and Efficiency and the Interagency Suspension and Debarment Committee. Presentations addressed a general primer, triggers for suspension and debarment referrals, and how to address fact-based and indictment-based suspension actions.

INSTANCES OF NONREMEDIATION

There have been no major Federal Financial Management Improvement Act weaknesses reported during this period.

ALLEGED WHISTLEBLOWER RETALIATION

In accordance with the National Defense Authorization Act of 2013 (NDAA), we transmitted these reports of investigation to the Secretary of the Interior to make a determination about whether reprisal occurred.

Whistleblower Retaliation Allegation by a Contract Employee

We investigated allegations that a contract employee was reprimed against by DOI and contract officials after the employee raised concerns about unresolved information technology issues—a disclosure protected under the NDAA.

We found that the contract employee did make a whistleblower disclosure, but despite being removed from the contract, we did not find conclusive evidence that the employee was reprimed against. DOI officials denied they asked the contractor to remove the employee. The contractor claimed they were concerned about the employee's working relationship with DOI and reassigned the employee to another contract at the same pay rate.

Whistleblower Retaliation Allegation by Contract Employee

We investigated allegations that a contract employee was reprimed against by DOI and contract officials after disclosing alleged gross mismanagement and waste of Federal funds related to a construction project—a disclosure protected under the NDAA.

We found that the contract employee did make a whistleblower disclosure. We also found that subsequent to that disclosure, DOI did not extend the contract the employee was working under beyond its expiration date, and that the contractor terminated the contract employee from the company. DOI officials claimed there was not enough work left on the contract to warrant an extension and denied that the contract employee's disclosures were the reason for their decision. The contractor also denied that the contract employee's disclosures were the reason the employee was released from the company and explained that once the DOI contract ended, they had no suitable positions for the contract employee.

Alleged Endangered Species Act Violation of the Masked Bobwhite Quail Program

(see summary on page 47)

CROSS REFERENCES TO THE INSPECTOR GENERAL ACT

		Page
Section 4(a)(2)	Review of Legislation and Regulations	N/A*
Section 5(a)(1)	Significant Problems, Abuses, and Deficiencies	1–52
Section 5(a)(2)	Recommendations for Corrective Action With Respect to Significant Problems, Abuses, and Deficiencies	1–52
Section 5(a)(3)	Significant Recommendations From Agency's Previous Reports on Which Corrective Action Has Not Been Completed	65
Section 5(a)(4)	Matters Referred to Prosecutive Authorities and Resulting Convictions	56–57
Section 5(a)(5)	Matters Reported to the Head of the Agency	N/A
Section 5(a)(6)	Audit Reports Issued During the Reporting Period	56
Section 5(a)(7)	Summary of Significant Reports	1–52
Section 5(a)(8)	Statistical Table: Questioned Costs	63
Section 5(a)(9)	Statistical Table: Recommendations That Funds Be Put to Better Use	64
Section 5(a)(10)	Summary of Audit, Inspection, and Evaluation Reports Issued Before the Commencement of the Reporting Period—
Section 5(a)(10)(A)	For Which No Management Decision Has Been Made	63
Section 5(a)(10)(B)	For Which No Establishment Comment Was Returned Within 60 Days of Providing the Report to the Establishment	N/A
Section 5(a)(10)(C)	For Which There Are Any Outstanding Unimplemented Recommendations	64

*N/A: Not applicable to this reporting period.

		Page
Section 5(a)(11)	Significant Revised Management Decisions Made During the Reporting Period	N/A
Section 5(a)(12)	Significant Management Decisions With Which the Inspector General is in Disagreement	N/A
Section 5(a)(13)	Information Described Under Section 804(b) of the Federal Financial Management Improvement Act of 1996	N/A
Section 5(a)(14)(A)	Results of Peer Reviews Conducted by Another Office of Inspector General During the Reporting Period	81
Section 5(a)(14)(B)	Most Recent Peer Review Conducted by Another Office of Inspector General	81
Section 5(a)(15)	Outstanding Recommendations From Any Peer Review Conducted by Another Office of Inspector General	N/A
Section 5(a)(16)	Peer Reviews Completed of Another Office of Inspector General During the Reporting Period or Previous Recommendations That Have Not Been Fully Implemented	N/A
Section 5(a)(17)	Statistical Table: Investigations	56–57
Section 5(a)(18)	Description of Statistics Used for Investigations	56–57
Section 5(a)(19)	Investigations Involving Senior Government Officials	82–83
Section 5(a)(20)	Instances of Whistleblower Retaliation	87
Section 5(a)(21)	Instances of Interference With the Independence of the OIG	84
Section 5(a)(22)	Closed but Unpublished Reports Involving Senior Government Officials	N/A

*N/A: Not applicable to this reporting period.

OIG CONTACT INFORMATION

U.S. Department of the Interior
Office of Inspector General
1849 C St., NW.
Mail Stop 4428
Washington, DC 20240

www.doioig.gov

Phone: 202-208-4618

Fax: 202-208-6062

From: E&E News
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: September 7 -- E&E Daily is ready
Date: Thursday, September 07, 2017 7:09:26 AM

Read today's E&E Daily on the web

AN E&E NEWS PUBLICATION

To access please enter:

Username: (b) (6)
Password: (b) (6)

E&E DAILY — Thu., September 7, 2017

READ FULL EDITION

1. APPROPRIATIONS:

House mulls enviro amendments, avoids monuments fight

The House plans to debate more than 300 amendments before the end of the week, including proposals dealing with carbon and the Clean Water Rule.

POLITICS

2. AGENDA:

Conservatives work to thwart Trump deal with Dems

3. WHITE HOUSE:

Trump deploys bully pulpit on taxes, energy

4. CAMPAIGN 2018:

Lola Zinke joins effort to unseat Tester

IN THE HOUSE

5. EPA:

Lawmakers question agency's response to Harvey

6. PUBLIC LANDS:

Bill giving states leasing control sharply divides panel

7. CHEMICALS:

Dems blast EPA absence at hearing on risk program

8. DOE:

Key Dem floats bill to reauthorize ARPA-E

9. CLIMATE:

Rep. Gabbard bill aims to expedite phaseout of fossil fuels

10. ENERGY POLICY:

Committee embarks on possible reforms to 'outdated' 1978 law

IN THE SENATE

11. POLITICS:

Murkowski 'finding out' about claims of stalled EPA grants

12. NOMINATIONS:

Stabenow urges delay, withdrawal of USDA science pick

13. LAW:

Democrats grumble as panel races through judicial picks

UPCOMING HEARINGS AND MARKUPS

14. CALENDAR:

Activity for September 4 - September 10, 2017

Get all of the stories in today's E&E Daily, plus an in-depth archive with thousands of articles on your issues, detailed Special Reports and much more at <https://www.eedaily.com>.

Forgot your passcodes? Call us at 202-628-6500 now and we'll set you up instantly.

To send a press release, fax 202-737-5299 or email editorial@eenews.net.

ABOUT E&E DAILY – CONGRESS. LEGISLATION. POLITICS.

E&E Daily is written and produced by the staff of E&E News. Designed for policy players who need to know what's happening to their issues on Capitol Hill, from federal agency appropriations to comprehensive energy legislation, E&E Daily is the place insiders go to track their environmental and energy issues in Congress. E&E Daily publishes daily by 7:30 a.m. while Congress is in session.

E&E News

Unsubscribe | Our Privacy Policy

E&E News

122 C Street NW 7th Floor Washington, DC 20001

Phone: 202-628-6500 Fax: 202-737-5299

www.eenews.net

From: E&E News
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: September 15 -- Greenwire is ready
Date: Friday, September 15, 2017 1:17:41 PM

Read today's Greenwire on the web

AN E&E NEWS PUBLICATION

To access please enter:

Username: (b) (6)
Password: (b) (6)

GREENWIRE — Fri., September 15, 2017

READ FULL EDITION

1. COAL:

Court spurns BLM's 'irrational' approach to climate review

A federal court this morning rebuffed the Bureau of Land Management for failing to closely consider the climate impacts of several coal leases in Wyoming's Powder River Basin.

TOP STORIES

2. WHITE HOUSE:

A weakened CEQ gets a chance to flex its muscles

3. DOE:

Solar's bête noire — so far — not so scary

4. Q&A:

Ex-EIA chief on his 'very famous' wife, schadenfreude

POLITICS

5. NATIONAL MONUMENTS:

Governor sees 'repeal and replace' for Utah monuments

6. INTERIOR:

Zinke orders more access to hunting, fishing on public land

CONGRESS

7. DOE:

Dem bill would shield gasoline reserve from Trump cuts

8. LOBBYING:

Ex-Pence chief of staff grabs biodiesel client

NATURAL RESOURCES

9. ENDANGERED SPECIES:

Greens angry after feds shoot Mexican gray wolf in Ariz.

10. WILDLIFE:

5 animals experts are watching after Irma and Harvey

11. ENDANGERED SPECIES:

Video shows rare footage of jaguar in U.S.

12. PUBLIC LANDS:

Cherokee National Forest expands by 1,600 acres

13. PUBLIC LANDS:

Central Idaho could host nation's first dark sky reserve

14. ENDANGERED SPECIES:

Western wildfire rips through habitat of at-risk voles

15. WILDLIFE:

Mystery solved after Harvey spits out strange sea creature

LAW

16. BORDER WALL:

Groups challenge Trump waivers of environmental laws

17. ENERGY EFFICIENCY:

Lawsuit says DOE illegally stayed Obama standards

ENERGY

18. DOE:

Solar industry mum as trade groups praise grid study

19. PIPELINES:

5 arrested in 'lockdown' protest of Enbridge's Line 3

AIR AND WATER

20. AIR POLLUTION:

Local regulators press EPA to tap their expertise

21. FLINT CRISIS:

Tested water meets EPA lead standard

22. HURRICANE HARVEY:

Benzene leak much larger than Houston refinery first thought

23. ARMY CORPS:

Calif. dam structurally unsafe, threatens residents — report

24. HURRICANE IRMA:

Millions of gallons of sewage, wastewater swamp Fla.

CHEMICALS

25. PESTICIDES:

43 kids report health problems after exposure at day care

STATES

26. ALASKA:

NOAA seeks tips on pair who may have harassed whales

27. INDIANA:

Hundreds of geese killings prompt public outcry

INTERNATIONAL

28. BARBUDA:

'Not a single living person' left on island hit by Irma

29. VIETNAM:

Typhoon kills 4, spares coffee region

30. MEXICO:

Tropical Storm Max rains on southern states

Get all of the stories in today's Greenwire, plus an in-depth archive with thousands of articles on your issues, detailed Special Reports and much more at <https://www.greenwire.com>.

Forgot your passcodes? Call us at 202-628-6500 now and we'll set you up instantly.

To send a press release, fax 202-737-5299 or email editorial@eenews.net.

ABOUT GREENWIRE – THE LEADER IN ENERGY AND ENVIRONMENT NEWS

Greenwire is written and produced by the staff of E&E News. The one-stop source for those who need to stay on top of all of today's major energy and environmental action with an average of more than 20 stories a day, Greenwire covers the complete spectrum, from electricity industry restructuring to Clean Air Act litigation to public lands management. Greenwire publishes daily at 1 p.m.

E&E News

Unsubscribe | Our Privacy Policy

E&E News

122 C Street NW 7th Floor Washington, DC 20001

Phone: 202-628-6500 Fax: 202-737-5299

www.eenews.net

San Juan Record

HOMETOWN NEWSPAPER FOR SAN JUAN COUNTY, UTAH SINCE 1915
Volume 103 Number 10 50 cents December 6, 2017

U.S. President Donald Trump shows his signature after reducing the size of Bears Ears National Monument by more than 85 percent. Trump is joined at the signing by (left to right) Senator Orrin Hatch, Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke, Utah Governor Gary Herbert, Senator Mike Lee... and Betty Jones of McCracken Mesa. See more photos at sjnews.com. Staff photo

Boundaries of Bears Ears cut by more than 85 percent, now two units

There are significant management changes for more than one million acres of public land in San Juan County after a presidential proclamation by President Donald Trump on December 4.

Instead of a 1.35-million acre Bears Ears National Monument, there are now two smaller national monuments in San Juan County, including the Indian Creek and the Shash Jaa national monuments.

See the map of the new monuments on page 2. The two units will be managed by the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service.

Shash Jaa National Monument starts at the Bears Ears and runs down Arch and Mule canyons into Comb Wash. The monument includes Butler Wash, and eastern portions of Cedar Mesa all the way to the San Juan River, including San Juan Hill.

In general, the Wilderness Study Areas on Cedar Mesa are not included in the new monument.

Two Ancestral Puebloan sites are included in the monument but are not within the contiguous monument boundaries.

They are the Doll House Ruin, which is located in the Manti La Sal National Forest on Elk Ridge, and the Moon House Ruin, which is located at the top of Road Canyon on Cedar Mesa. The new monument includes 129,980 acres of public land.

The Indian Creek National Monument includes Indian Creek Canyon starting at Newspaper Rock, and includes the Dugout Ranch, and adjacent canyons, including Cottonwood Canyon, Shay Canyon and the top of Salt Creek drainage.

The new monument includes 71,896 acres of public land.

The Nature Conservancy, which owns the Dugout Ranch, was a strong supporter of the original monument designation.

In total, the new monuments in San Juan County total 201,876 acres of public land, larger than Zions and Bryce Canyon national parks combined.

In Garfield and Kane counties, the Grand Staircase Escalante National Monument was trimmed from 1,865 million acres to just over one million acres.

The maps show three smaller sections where the larger monument has existed for 21 years, including the Escalante Canyons (243,000 acres), Kaparowitz (551,000 acres) and Grand Staircase (212,000 acres) units.

The new monument boundary is still larger than the State of Rhode Island.

President Trump cuts Bears Ears by more 85 percent

For the second time in less than a year, a presidential signature has made significant changes to San Juan County. On December 4, US President Donald Trump signed an executive order that changed Bears Ears National Monument and created two additional, separate national monuments in San Juan County.

The action cut the amount of land from the Bears Ears National Monuments by more than 85 percent, from 1.35 million acres to 201,876 acres. Instead of a single massive Bears Ears monument, there is now a 130,000-acre Shash Jaa National Monument and a 72,000-acre Indian Creek National Monument.

In addition, Trump withdrew more than 850,000 acres of land from the Grand Staircase Escalante National Monument in neighboring Kane and Garfield counties.

The President signed the documents at the Utah State Capital Building as part of a whirlwind trip to Utah. He arrived in Air Force at 11 a.m. and was gone in less than two and a half hours.

During that time, he met with leaders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints at Welfare Square and addressed about 1,000 supporters in the rotunda of the state capital building.

Speakers at the event included Trump, Senator Orrin Hatch, Governor Gary Herbert, and San Juan County Commissioner Rebecca Benally. The text of Commissioner Benally's speech can be found on page 4.

Bears Ears National Monument was designated by President Barack Obama on December 28, 2016 under the Antiquities Act. The designation culminated several years of effort to resolve public lands issues in San Juan County, including a Congressional attempt to address the issue through the Public Lands Initiative.

A coalition of Native American tribes and environmental groups were instrumental in the creation of the monument.

Trump assumed office soon afterward and quickly directed his new Secretary of the Interior, Ryan Zinke, to investigate possible misuse of the Antiquities Act.

Zinke visited the area in May and recommended soon afterwards that adjustments be made to the two monuments.

In the interim, the planning process for the new monument ground to a halt. Nearly one year after the designation, there has been no management infrastructure, no budgets, no increased management effort, and no progress. At the same time, visitation to sites in the monument increased dramatically.

Tribal and environmental organizations are expected to sponsor a host of lawsuits that will be filed in federal courts.

President Donald Trump signs the hat that Commissioner Bruce Adams has carried around for months. The hat says "Make San Juan County Great Again". Staff photo

This Week

- Federal judge receives final recommendation for voting district changes7
- Statements regarding local national monuments..... 8-9
- Buckaroo wrestlers dedicate season to Aaron Butler 12

The Round-up

HANDEL'S Messiah

Sunday, December 10
7 p.m. • Blanding LDS Stake Center
100 West 800 North

Sunday, December 10
7 p.m. • Monticello LDS North Chapel
347 North 200 West

Weather

Nov 28-Dec 4

Monticello

	Hi	Low	Prec	Snow
28	50	32
29	50	25
30	56	27
1	57	29
2	56	29
3	49	11
4	32	9

Blanding

	Hi	Low	Prec	Snow
28	56	35
29	49	36
30	65	33
1	58	36
2	58	36
3	55	35
4	48	19

Your internet stop for San Juan County news
SJR news.com

Bears Ears National Monument Boundary Modification

Legend:
 Shash Jaa Unit
 Indian Creek Unit
 US Highway
 State Highway
 Wilderness Study Area
 Bureau of Land Management (BLM)
 Indian Reservation (IR)
 National Park Service (NPS)
 Private
 State
 US Forest Service (USFS)
 USFS Wilderness Area

Coordinate System: NAD 1983 UTM Zone 12N
 Projection: Transverse Mercator
 Datum: North American 1983
 Unit: Meter

Wide scale power outage planned in Blanding on Wednesday, December 13

by Kara Laws
Contributing writer

Blanding City will have a wide scale power outage on Wednesday, December 13. The outage will last for up to four hours and will include mostly residential areas. A map of the areas affected can be found on the Blanding City Facebook page.

This power outage is part of the final stages of a power project to maintain and upgrade the city power system.

The power project should be finished by the end of December, helping give all residents more reliable power.

In a very short city council meeting on November 28, the Blanding City Council officially adopted resolution 11-28-2017, a resolution that approved the event sponsorship policy.

This policy outlines what qualifies an event to receive consideration for city funding. It has been discussed and changed for several weeks, finally being approved this week.

A few of the stipulations events will need to meet in order to be considered for city sponsorship include, but are not limited to, events that distinguish Blanding as a city with an array of opportunities for recreation, promote Blanding as a desirable place to live and visit, provide positive tax benefits or provide revenue opportunities to the city, and draw interest from outside Blanding and San Juan County.

Councilman Robert Ogle reminded the council once again that he feels the policy "is not in harmony with the appropriate role of government."

Ogle was the only council member who voted "nay" in adopting said resolution.

In other news, Blanding City will host a public hearing about dog licensing on December 12 beginning at 7:30 p.m. The council will make the decision on topic in the same meeting.

This will be the last council meeting with the current council members.

Council meetings will resume in January with two new members of the city council, including Robert Turk and Logan Shumway.

The first January meeting will also be the meeting that council will choose who will replace the council seat left vacant by Joe B Lyman.

Joe B. Lyman will be taking the mayoral seat in January, leaving his council seat open for council appointment.

The Blanding City Council also reviewed and approved the fiscal year auditor report for 2017.

The total assets for the city are just over $56 million, with $4.3 million in the fund balance and seven percent of that in the discretionary fund for council to disperse as needed.

The remaining is earmarked for public project such as public safety, roads, city debt, etc.

The City Council also wanted to remind Blanding residents that, as there is not any snow yet, residents should remember that when the snow does fall, cars need to be kept off of the road.

Residents are responsible for shoveling their drives and walks but should try and keep that snow out of the street.

Whether it's E Fiber or ExStream Broadband

Emery Telcom

has the speed & data you need!

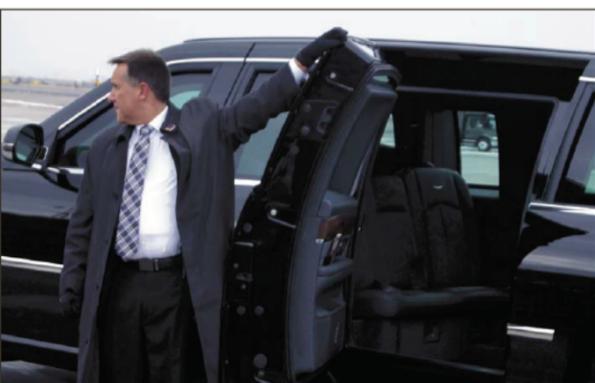

Call Us Today
888-749-1090
emerytelcom.com

US President Donald Trump made a whirlwind stop in Salt Lake City on December 4, culminating in signing a proclamation which cuts Bears Ears National Monument and creates Shash Jaa and Indian Creek national monuments. The San Juan Record accompanied the President as part of the official press pool. During the day, (clockwise from top left) Trump shopped briefly at the Bishop's Storehouse on Welfare Square; met with leadership of the LDS Church; spoke at the Capitol Building, saw a host of protesters; met with Trevor and Tristen Tharp, twin brothers from Magna who impersonate Trump and VP Mike Pence; and traveled in one of the "Beast" limousines.

Staff photos

Dr Jeff Cornelius
Monticello DENTAL

PLEASE CALL:
435-587-2700
225 South Main St, Monticello
ALSO PART OF THE MEDICAL STAFF AT SAN JUAN HOSPITAL

Monticello's Park & Beautification Committee presents

Merry & Bright Awards

MONTICELLO'S CHRISTMAS LIGHT COMPETITION

Deck the porch, windows and roofs for Monticello's Christmas Light Competition!

PRIZES 1st: $100, 2nd: $75, 3rd: $50

The judges favorites will receive a gift certificate from Empire Electric good towards their electric bill. Judging will take place on December 18; make sure your lights are on!

The competition is open to all homes in the Monticello city limits. To participate, simply have your home decorated by December 18.

Celebrate the joy of Christmas and make our streets sparkle!

Prizes sponsored by Empire Electric

SOUTHWEST MEDICAL GROUP ORTHOPEDICS

WELCOME
Dr. Evan Tavakoli

Diagnosis and surgical and non-surgical treatment of injuries, disorders and diseases of bones, joints, ligaments, muscles, nerves and tendons.

20 South Market Street, Suite 2, Cortez, CO

Orthopedic Care for All Ages
970-565-2600 • www.swhealth.org/ortho

San Juan Record News & Books

49 South Main, Monticello • 435-587-2277 • sjrbooks@frontiernet.net

Holiday Hours

MONDAY-FRIDAY 8AM - 6PM

OPEN SATURDAYS

10AM - 4PM

San Juan County Commissioner Rebecca Benally shakes hands with President Donald Trump after Trump signs documents shrinking Bears Ears National Monument. Neaveh Netesosie is in traditional dress at left. Staff photo

Text of Commissioner Benally's speech

Rebecca Benally was a featured speaker at the Utah State Capital Building when President Trump signed the executive order. Her speech follows:

When Bears Ears National Monument was designated, it was a disheartening day for my communities and San Juan County citizens. A total of 1.35 million acres – an area larger than Rhode Island and Delaware – was now locked up with limited to no access; an area in our own back yard.

We have used these areas to gather plants for medicine, to cut wood to heat our homes, to hunt for food, and a sacred place to give offerings as Native American people

San Juan County has become a talking point for political pundits from both sides of the aisle. These are people who have never been to San Juan County and likely couldn't find us on the map, people who don't understand our culture, tradition and histories, people who don't care about us.

These are the people who have defined the narrative and passed judgment on us.

San Juan County is our home, it is our heart, it is where we come from, and it's where we choose to stay.

Let me tell you the true story.

This was nothing but a land grab. It is about control of the land, people and financial gains for the NGOs (Non-Governmental Organizations). We have managed to manage this pristine land for generations in San Juan County. As a Native American Dine women, it was insulting that bureaucrats thousands of miles away didn't believe we were capable of protecting and preserving our homeland. I know the bureaucrats have made promises to Native Americans and these promises were broken again and again.

Thank you, Secretary Zinke, for coming to San Juan, Kane, and Garfield counties and listening to the local grassroots people. Your boots on the ground approach was unexpected, but well received and appreciated. As I've stated earlier, he is a great horse rider.

Thank you Senator Hatch. You and your staff have been champions for us. Thank you for never giving up, for believing we could rectify a wrong and for being a fighter for San Juan County and our people. Thank you to Senator Lee, Congressman Bishop, former Congressman Jason Chaffetz, Governor Herbert and the rest of the Utah delegation.

Thank you President Trump. Thank you for not being a typical politician and passing us over. Thank you for caring about San Juan County. We may be only 15,000 strong, but we matter. We appreciate you willing to take the backlash from the special interest groups as you stand for the people and the economy of San Juan County and the State of Utah.

Thank you to the local grassroots people and to all Utah Navajo community chapters for your willingness to share your voice.

We came together in unity despite the fact that divisiveness was intended. Your work is the reason we are here today.

Thank you to the Sutherland Institute for exemplifying and amplifying our voice to the nation.

It is an honor to be here today. As commissioners, we have done all we can to represent and fight for San Juan County and the State of Utah and importantly for the people.

Now it is time to continue in unity and move together.

'ROUND THE REGION

Library telescope lending program

SOUTHWEST UTAH – Cedar Breaks National Monument and local astronomy clubs have collaborated with Iron and Washington County libraries to launch a brand new library telescope-lending program, making it easier for area residents to “reach for the stars.” Telescopes are now available to the public at the Cedar City and Parowan libraries in partnership with the Southern Utah Space Foundation (SUSF). More telescopes will become available at additional libraries throughout Iron and Washington counties in the coming months, in partnership with the St. George Astronomy Group and the Grand Canyon-Parashant National Monument. Cedar Breaks National Monument, SUSF and the St. George Astronomy Group will maintain the telescopes in this program. Library patrons can check out a telescope as they would a book, and enjoy exploring the night sky for a week at a time in their own backyard or other dark place. The telescopes are modified to be user-friendly and are of higher quality than what most backyard stargazers use. Included with each telescope is an instruction manual, moon-map, pocket guide of the constellations and a night vision friendly red LED headlamp. Due to increasing light pollution, the opportunity to look at the stars is disappearing across the nation. Despite this trend, Cedar Breaks and southern Utah still boast some of the darkest skies in North America. With the launch of the telescope-lending program, residents from all walks of life will be able to get an even better opportunity to look up, question, wonder and explore this especially beautiful resource. – Southern Utah News

Utah ranks number one for Black Friday hunters

VERNAL – Shoppers begin to amass outside the doors of the Vernal Walmart in the waning hours of early morning. They're all eagerly awaiting the doors to open at 6 a.m. Most of them have been here a few minutes and you can tell they are starting to get impatient as they keep checking to see if the front door has opened yet. An associate opens one of the side entrances and the feeding frenzy begins. Walmart employees buzz around the store making sure everything has been set up for the crowds who will rummage through displays throughout the course of the day, searching for the best deals. Nobody is fighting over hoverboards this year, or at least not at this Walmart, but perhaps that is because the Black Friday rush has started earlier and earlier every year. Americans love deals and Utah is no different in that regard as a new study has produced data showing people in Utah hunt for bargains more than any other state in the country. Utah scored peak popularity points for three of the ten Black Friday online searches. The study cross-referenced the top 10 Black Friday search terms and revealed the states where these were the most popular. Utah outranked all the other 49 states by far. – Uintah Basin Standard

DID YOU KNOW?

Dr. Maughan can provide Therapy
for torn or pulled muscles

BLUE MOUNTAIN CHIROPRACTIC
225 SOUTH MAIN, MONTICELLO • 435 587 3255
11 WEST CENTRAL, BLANDING • 435 678 3667

$100 Prize Package includes:
Custom Jackalope Mug
Hoof Pick Trapper Knife
Southwest Cookie Cutters
Fiesta Purse & MORE!

JACKALOPE
TRADING COMPANY

Christmas Giveaway

Every $20 purchase from Black Friday to Dec. 16th Earns Another Chance to Win!
Drawing will be held December 18

Since 1957

Lyle Northern Electric, Inc.

Industrial • Commercial • Residential
Electrical Systems Construction

61 West 300 North, Blanding, UT
435-678-2415
Fax: 435-678-3933
LNElectric@frontiernet.net

Our friendly staff will

Stretch to meet your needs

advertising, copies, paper, custom printing, fax service, office supplies, cardstock, wedding invitations.

The San Juan Record
435-587-2277 | sjrnews@frontiernet.net

Gingerbread

HOUSE TOUR

Monticello, Utah ✨ Dec 1-16, 2017

The holiday season has inspired a streak of creativity around Monticello, resulting in a house-building boom... Gingerbread houses, that is. Tour the candy-filled town of at least 18 homes displayed in businesses around Monticello (see below). Visit all the homes, and you can enter to win in our multiple-prize drawing. Drawing prizes include fantastic gift cards from participating businesses. Drawing will be held at the Monticello Tree Lighting at Veterans Park on Saturday, December 16, 5 p.m. DON'T FORGET TO VOTE FOR YOUR FAVORITE HOUSE!

Details and forms are available at any of these participating businesses:

- Conoco/Subway ● San Juan County Library-Monticello ● Blue Mountain Foods ● Paca Pantry ● Zions Bank
- Wells Fargo ● San Juan Record ● Monticello Merc ● Unique Creations ● Main Street Drug & Boutique ● Jackalope Trading Company ● Artisan Jewelers ● Southeast Utah Welcome Center ● Thatzza Pizza ● Farm Bureau ● PS Petals & Sweets ● Mission Discovery School ● USU Monticello Learning Center ● Mimi's Thrift Emporium ● R&F Restaurant

MONTICELLO, UTAH

FESTIVAL OF TREES

Let's celebrate the Christmas season! The second annual Festival of Trees will kick off on Saturday, December 16 with a tree lighting ceremony and announcement of the Gingerbread House Tour winners at 5 p.m. in the Veterans Memorial Park. Don't miss your chance to participate in this year's celebration. Trees need to be completed by December 9. For more information, contact Jeremy at 435-587-2271.

Do you have an ad or story you need published in the December 27 or January 3 papers?

DON'T MISS THE

DOUBLE DEADLINE

5 PM, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20

The San Juan Record will be closed Sunday, December 24, 2017 thru Monday, January 1, 2018. Any stories, ads, classifieds, etc must be submitted by Wednesday, December 20 at 5 pm. We will reopen Tuesday, January 2 with regular hours (Mon-Fri, 8 am-5 pm). The regular deadline is Noon the Friday before publication.

San Juan Record News & Books

49 South Main • PO Box 879 • Monticello • 435-587-2277 • FAX: 435-587-3377
sjrnews@frontiernet.net • sjrnews.com

From the Past

80 years ago

Lyle Jensen has his hand scratched badly by briars while hunting. A visit to the doctor reveals that blood poisoning has set in. Friends hope the infection does not develop to be of serious nature.

70 years ago

Ten inches of heavy snow break telephone wires. Power lines and tree limbs yield under the strain. • Coloradoan's from Cahone haul their wet beans to Bluff and spread them out to dry. We wonder how they are succeeding in their venture.

60 years ago

His Honor perturbed, Defense rests. Not for the first time has a driver turned into the Highway Patrol Check station only to have the brakes fail and the truck run through Judge Christensen's fence. This time, Thomas Baird is cited for failure to secure vehicle. Baird will appear before City Judge Hafen.

50 years ago

Sp 4 Dennis Eugene Guymon reports to Fort Lewis, WA where he will be assigned to overseas duty in Korea. • A footbridge across Westwater is a reality for those who wish to see the kiva and cliff dwellings left by an ancient civilization.

40 years ago

Blanding Merc sponsors style show of the latest fashion for the holidays with 14 local models. • Monticello's Mark Hugentobler and San Juan's Jimmy Jones are named to two All-state football teams. San Juan's Gary Slavens is named to one.

30 years ago

White Mesa LDS chapel is dedicated. • The charred bodies of Andy Begay, 36, of Mexican Hat and Roy Lee Stanley, 27, of Oljato, were found locked in a prisoner cage in the back seat of a 4-wheel drive police truck. The vehicle was found torched and pushed off a sheer cliff in Copper Canyon near Paiute Farms Marina on the San Juan arm of Lake Powell. Begay and Stanley are the fourth and fifth members of the 287-man tribal police force killed in the line of duty in the past 14 years.

20 years ago

San Juan County Commissioners propose $6.5 million county budget for 1989. Legal expenses have grown dramatically. A huge portion of the legal budget is the county lawsuit against the federal government regarding RS2477 rights of way on roads on public lands. The Sheriff's department has shown a dramatic increase as the department continues to expand. Other increases are for 911 services, tourist promotion, and improvement for television and communication.

10 years ago

Aaron Butler is the Monticello High School Wrestler of the Week after bringing home a championship from the Carbon Tournament. Butler racked up nine wins, with eight by fall. He also put 34 take downs in the books. He is the son of Randy and Laura Butler. • Dora Christensen celebrates her 95th birthday. She remembers carrying water from the big wooden barrel for use in the house growing up. She is the mother of Merna Johnson who says her mother is a delight; she does all the dishes and keeps doing crocheting and reading. • In a surprise announcement, the Lisbon Valley Copper Mine says that it intends to discontinue mining operations and lay off more than 100 workers.

Kim Henderson, Paul Curtis and Carolee Curtis at the December 2 celebration in Monticello. Staff photo

San Juan celebrates

Two rallies took place on Saturday, December 2 that involved San Juan County residents and their response to the news that President Donald Trump was expected to significantly trim the boundaries of Bears Ears National Monument.

Dueling rallies were held by those both for and against the monument changes.

The events were in marked contrast to December 28, 2016, when Barack Obama created Bears Ears NM.

Many people celebrated that day when the monument was created. The protest in Monticello the following day was defiant and impassioned.

Less than a year later, on December 2, the celebration was in Monticello and the impassioned defiance was in Salt Lake City.

The Utah Highway Patrol estimates that 5,000 people participated in the protest at the Capital Building in Salt Lake City.

The event was organized by Utah Dine Bikeyah and included speeches by several local residents.

The rally in Monticello was attended by about 250 people.

Commissioner Bruce Adams thanked three people: Senator Orrin Hatch, Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke, and President Donald Trump. Adams said that Trump had listened to the 15,000 people in San Juan County.

Commissioner Rebecca Benally discussed many sleepless nights and long prayers and said that the people of San Juan County had been bullied by special interest groups. Benally said, "My little voice was speaking in behalf of the 15,000 people of San Juan County" and added that the grassroots voices from the San Juan County helped.

Commissioner Phil Lyman said, "Right is right and wrong is wrong. Truth is so much simpler than pursuing a false narrative."

Lyman praised Representative Jason Chafetz, who he called a great friend of San Juan County. He also praised State Representative Mike Noel and Senator Mike Lee, and expressed relief that Donald Trump had been elected, saying, "We are full of Christmas miracles."

Lyman used a quote attributed to Thomas Jefferson that discussed the tragedy of "waking up homeless in a continent that our forefathers conquered."

Jerry Taylor, of the Garfield County Commission, discussed the 21 years that Grand Staircase had been a monument. Taylor said, "Finally, our voice is being heard."

Also speaking were State Senator David Hinkens, Grand County Commissioner Curtis Wells, Weber County Commissioner Kerry Gibson from Ogden, Johnny Miller from the Utah Association of Counties, and Kelsey Berg of the Utah Farm Bureau.

Berg encouraged county residents to "stay unified as we pursue the ultimate goal, rescind the Antiquities Act."

Local resident who spoke include Betty Jones, San Juan County Sheriff Rick Eldredge, Jami Bayles from the Stewards of San Juan, Mariah Harris, and Susie Philemon.

BLM Utah Resource Advisory Council meets in Monticello

The Bureau of Land Management today announced it will hold a meeting of the Utah Resource Advisory Council (RAC), demonstrating that partnerships and inclusion are vital to managing sustainable, working public lands. The public is welcome to attend the meeting which will occur on December 11 and 12, 2017, at the Hideout Community Center, 648 Hideout Way, Monticello, Utah, 84535. On December 11, the RAC will meet from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. A field tour of the Indian Creek area will take place from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. On December 12, the RAC will meet from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Planned agenda items at the meeting include Secretary of the Interior priorities, a Canyon Country District overview, Monticello Field Office updates, a statewide oil and gas leasing update, the Utah recreation fee program initiative, Manti-La Sal National Forest's reclamation fee proposal, and updates on current resource management planning efforts and major projects, and RAC work projects and business.

A half-hour public comment period, during which the public may address the RAC, will take place from 11-11:30 a.m. on December 12. Depending on the number of people wishing to comment and time available, the amount of time for individual oral comments may be limited. Members of the public who wish to attend the field tour should contact Lola Bird, Public Affairs Specialist, Bureau of Land Management, Utah State Office, 440 West 200 South, Suite 500, Salt Lake City, Utah 84101; phone 801-539-4033; or, lbird@blm.gov no later than Wednesday, December 6, 2017.

Resource Advisory Councils are critical in assisting the BLM in continuing to be a good neighbor in the communities we serve. The 15-member RAC provides advice and recommendations to the BLM on resource and land management issues in Utah.

For more information about the upcoming meeting, please contact Lola Bird at 801-539-4033 or lbird@blm.gov. Persons who use a telecommunications device for the deaf (TDD) may call the Federal Relay Service (FRS) at 1-800-877-8339 to leave a message or question for the above individual. The FRS is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Replies are provided during normal business hours.

All meetings are open to the public; but transportation, lodging, and meals are the responsibility of the participating public.

The BLM manages more than 245 million acres of public land located primarily in 12 Western states, including Alaska. The agency's mission is to sustain the health, diversity, and productivity of America's public lands for the use and enjoyment of present and future generations.

2018 Photo of the Week Calendar

AVAILABLE DECEMBER 19

The spectacular beauty of the seasons. The stunning diversity of the landscape. The remarkable resiliency of the residents of San Juan County, past and present. All this and much more are featured in the San Juan Record Photo of the Week 2018 Calendar.

The calendar features photographs published as the Photo of the Week in the San Juan Record, San Juan County's hometown newspaper for more than 100 years, since 1915. Our weekly Photo of the Week has become a showcase of the beauty of the canyon country of southeastern Utah.

Our beautiful calendars, featuring talented local photographers, will make great gifts this holiday season. Purchase your 2018 calendars at the San Juan Record office in Monticello or call 435-587-2277 to order yours today.

$4.95 ea (+31¢ tax and $2 shipping)
Call for shipping costs on bulk orders

San Juan Record
435-587-2277

SEPTEMBER

Photo of the Week
2018

Blue Mountain Foods
BAKERY • DELI
FRESH PRODUCE
& MEATS
435-587-2465
100 S. Main, Monticello, UT
www.bluemountainfoods.com

SUBSCRIBE TO THE SAN JUAN RECORD

- ALL LOCAL SUBSCRIBERS RECEIVE:
- Deseret News National Edition, including the Church News
 - High School papers (Lariat & Rattler)
 - 101 Things to do in San Juan County guide
 - Photo of the Week calendar
 - Photos of the Week
 - Comprehensive local coverage
 - Sales, events, promotions
 - Free access to the full online version and weekly update on happenings in our beautiful, little corner of the world

San Juan Record

HOMETOWN NEWSPAPER FOR SAN JUAN COUNTY SINCE 1915
49 S. Main, Monticello • 435-587-2277 • sjnews.com

1 YEAR SUBSCRIPTION
In-Area $25 • Out-of-Area $40 • Online Only $30

Subscription for _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Email _____

Gift Subscription from _____

Letters to the Editor

The San Juan Record welcomes letters from our readers. Letters to the Editor must be:

- No more than 350 words
- Signed
- Include the author's address and phone number

The San Juan Record reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity and to eliminate libelous or tasteless material. Letters do not determine the editorial position of the San Juan Record.

Statements regarding local national monuments

PRESIDENT DONALD J. TRUMP

"Our precious national treasures must be protected. And they, from now on, will be protected. Under my administration, we will advance that protection through a truly representative process, one that listens to the local communities that knows the land the best and that cherishes the land the most."

UTAH GOVERNOR GARY HERBERT

"By acting on Secretary Zinke's thoughtful recommendations, President Trump has restored balance to our public lands discussion. We are pleased that Utahns once again have a voice in the process of determining appropriate uses of these public lands that we love. By reducing these super-sized monuments to a size consistent with the intent of the law, new doors of dialogue have opened up that will allow thoughtful, long-term protection of these federal lands. Federal, state, local and tribal officials can now convene to craft legislation for appropriate special protections and responsible recreational uses."

DAVIS FILFRED

Navajo Nation Council Delegate

"More than 150 years ago, the federal government removed our ancestors from Bears Ears at gunpoint and sent them on the Long Walk, but we came back. The President's proposal is an attack on Tribes and will be remembered as equally disgraceful —but once again we will be back. We know how to persist; we know how to fight; and we will fight to defend Bears Ears."

SHAUN CHAPOOSE

Ute Indian Tribe Business Committee Member

"If it's a fight they want, it's a fight they are going to get. They declared war on us today. When it's all said and done, just remember this didn't have to happen. You (the Utah Delegation) could have honored our request to protect our heritage."

SENATOR ORRIN HATCH

"I'm thrilled and grateful to President Trump and Secretary Zinke for giving Utahns a voice in the protection of federal lands in Utah. The President's proclamation represents a balanced solution and a win for everyone on all sides of this issue. It also represents a new beginning in the way national monuments are designated, paving the way for more local input, and taking into account the actual letter and intent of the Antiquities Act, which calls for the 'smallest area compatible with proper care and management of the objects to be protected.'"

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR
RYAN ZINKE

"I thank President Trump for his leadership on the Monument Review and for keeping his promise to make sure the rural voice is heard once again. As I visited the Monuments in Utah, I met with Americans on all sides of the issue -- from ranchers to conservationists to tribal leaders -- and found that we agree on wanting to protect our heritage while still allowing public access to public land. The people of Utah overwhelmingly voiced to us that public land should be protected not for the special interests, but for the citizens of our great country who use them, and this is what President Trump is doing today. Bears Ears and Grand Staircase will remain under federal protection, will adhere to the spirit and letter of the Antiquities Act, and -- even after our modification -- combined will still be nearly twice the size of Rhode Island."

JONATHAN NEZ

Navajo Nation Vice President

"Bears Ears National Monument is not just for Native Americans but for all Americans. This is a sad day for indigenous people and for America. However, we are resilient and refuse to allow President Trump's unlawful decision to discourage us. We will continue to fight in honor of our ancestral warriors who fought for our way of life, for our culture and for our land too."

HOMETOWN NEWSPAPER FOR SAN JUAN COUNTY, UT SINCE 1915

AN AWARD WINNING NEWSPAPER

Publisher • Editor
Bill Boyle

Office Management
Jill Pearson
Merri Allyson Platt

Layout • Ad Design
Andrea Montgomery

Insertion Specialist
Alice Epple

Writers
Tad Barton
Scott Boyle
Mary Cokenour
Maxine Deeter
Maggie Boyle Judi
Kara Laws
Joe B. Lyman
Eric Niven
Barry & Steve Simpson

Phone: 435-587-2277
435-678-9991
Fax: 435-587-3377

E-mail

sjrnews@frontiernet.net

Web Address
sjrnews.com

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Local Area	$25
Online	$30
Outside County - USA	$40
APO or FPO Address	$40
Newsstand	50¢
Sr. Cit. Area	$24.50
Sr. Out-of-Area	$39.50

Copyright, The San Juan Record® 2016. All rights reserved. Reproduction, reuse or transmittal of all matter herein is prohibited without prior written permission by the publisher.

ISSN 0894-3273

Published weekly at 49 South Main, Monticello, Utah. Periodical postage paid at Monticello, Utah 84535 (ISSN0894-3273).

Postmaster: Send all address changes to P.O. Box 879, Monticello, Utah 84535. The San Juan Record is a member of the Utah Press Association.

Don't forget the Deadline

ALL SUBMISSIONS for the San Juan Record must be in by NOON ON THE FRIDAY before you wish it to run. This includes stories, advertisements, classifieds, legals, calendar items, etc. Submissions can be made by phone, email, fax, or bringing them in.

San Juan Record
49 S. Main, Monticello
435-587-2277 • Fax: 435-587-3377
sjrnews@frontiernet.net • sjrnews.com

SAN JUAN THEATRE
435-678-7818

DECEMBER 6-14

Call for Shows & Times

2D showings: Mon/Wed/Fri
3D when available: Tues/Thurs/Sat

Call for additional shows & times
CLOSED SUNDAYS
20 South Main • Blanding

CRAIG C. HALLS
ATTORNEY & COUNSELOR AT LAW

GENERAL PRACTICE INCLUDING:

- CRIMINAL DEFENSE
- PERSONAL INJURY
- Wrongful Death
- Custody, Divorce, Adoption, Modifications
- Real Estate
- Boundary/Land Disputes
- Mineral/Water Issues
- Business Organization
- Appeals
- Contracts
- Wills, Trust, Probate

435-678-3333
435-439-9759
craigc@yahoocom
403 SOUTH MAIN
BLANDING

OVER 35 YEARS OF SUCCESSFUL TRIAL EXPERIENCE

Canyon Country Discovery Center
Saturday, December 9th; 5-8pm
$5/person Taco bar and avalanche safety presentation by Utah Avalanche Center included backcountry film festival celebrating the human powered experience

Visit our website for the feature film list.

1117 N. Main Street
Monticello, Utah
fourcornersschool.org • 435-587-2156

River Canyon Wireless

Tired of slow, unreliable internet service?
Concerned about your internet reliability?

OUR SERVICE IS SOURCED FROM THREE PROVIDERS which means you have consistent, reliable internet access with little to no downtime!

We Provide

NO LONG TERM CONTRACTS - Month-to-month service
UNLIMITED USAGE - No limits on how much you can download or upload
99.999% RELIABILITY - Except in extreme cases, our equipment is not affected by weather

SIGN UP TODAY!
NOW SERVING Blanding, Monticello, Moab, & Green River!

Plan	Speed	Monthly Fee
Residential Standard	Up to 2Mb/s	$29.99
Residential Advanced	Up to 4Mb/s	$39.99
Residential Plus	Up to 6Mb/s	$49.99
Residential Premium	Up to 8Mb/s	$59.99
Residential Premium Plus	Up to 12Mb/s	$69.99

One Time Start-Up Fee of $54.99 - NO DATA CAPS

Contact River Canyon Wireless Today!
www.rivercanyonwireless.com • 435-259-8319
611 S Main St - Moab, UT 84532

GIVE A

Kay Shumway

PHOTOGRAPH OF SAN JUAN

for Christmas

KAY SHUMWAY
NATURE photography
Awesome p' o'ogap' s a' our beautiful area

Call for an appointment to visit home gallery in Blanding 435-678-2182
or visit www.kayshumway.com

COMMUNITY CALENDAR

Wednesday
DECEMBER 6

- Story Hour, 10:30 a.m., Monticello library
- Story Hour, 10:30 a.m., Blanding library
- Addiction Recovery meetings, Noon, San Juan Counseling, 356 South Main, Blanding
- Monticello Rotary Club, Noon, R&F Restaurant
- Lunch at Blanding Senior Center, Noon, 177 East 200 North, 435-678-2427
- Lunch at La Sal Senior Center (ages 60+), 200 S. Firehouse
- Overeaters Anonymous, 6:45 p.m., Blanding Library

Thursday
DECEMBER 7

- Lunch at Monticello Senior Center (ages 60+), Noon, Hideout Community Center
- Family Support Group, 6 p.m., San Juan Counseling office, 356 S. Main, Blanding
- Al-Anon, 7 p.m., 132 1/2 South Main, Monticello
- 12-Step Addiction Recovery Class, 7 p.m., Blanding North LDS Chapel, 255 N 200 E
- Monticello Golf Board of Directors, 7 p.m., Hideout Community Center
- Daughters of Utah Pioneers Primrose Camp of Blanding, 1 p.m. day meeting, 7 p.m. night meeting

Friday
DECEMBER 8

- Lunch at Blanding Senior Center, Noon, 177 East 200 North, 435-678-2427
- Lunch at La Sal Senior Center (ages 60+), 200 S. Firehouse

Monday
DECEMBER 11

- Daughters of Utah Pioneers, 1 p.m., Monticello LDS North Chapel
- San Juan Mental Health/Substance Abuse Special Service Dist, 3:30 p.m. (budget hearing at 3 p.m.), Blanding Library, 25 West 300 South

Tuesday
DECEMBER 12

- SJ Conservation District, 8 a.m., SJC Administration Building, 117 S. Main, Monticello
- Lunch at Monticello Senior Center (ages 60+), Noon, Hideout Community Center
- Blanding Rotary Club, 5:30 p.m., Blanding Library
- 12-Step Addiction Recovery classes for all ages and addictions, 7 p.m., Blanding LDS North Chapel, 255 E 200 N
- English class for Spanish speakers, 7 p.m., Monticello High School library
- Clases de ingles, a las 7 en el tarde, en la biblioteca de Monticello High School
- Monticello City Council, 7 p.m. Hideout Community Center. Broadcast live on 103.9 KAAJ-LP
- Blanding City Council, 7 p.m., Blanding City Offices
- Blanding Planning Commission, 8 p.m., Blanding City Offices

Wednesday
DECEMBER 13

- Story Hour, 10:30 a.m., Monticello library
- Story Hour, 10:30 a.m., Blanding library
- Addiction Recovery meetings, Noon, San Juan Counseling, 356 South Main, Blanding
- Monticello Rotary Club, Noon, R&F Restaurant
- Lunch at Blanding Senior Center, Noon, 177 East 200 North, 435-678-2427
- Lunch at La Sal Senior Center (ages 60+), 200 S. Firehouse
- San Juan County Fire and Emergency Services Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC) meeting, noon, SJC Administrative Building, Monticello
- Overeaters Anonymous, 6:45 p.m., Blanding Library

Statements regarding local national monuments

PRESIDENT DONALD J. TRUMP

"The Antiquities Act does not give the Federal Government unlimited power to lock up millions of acres of land and water, and it's time we ended this abusive practice. Public lands will once again be for public use."

JAMES ADAKAI
Oljato Chapter President

"The Bears Ears Commission of Tribes holds a vision of a Bears Ears National Monument that is a landscape of healing for all Americans and a symbol of Native American and community engagement in our nation's public lands. Today's actions fundamentally undermine this vision, tribal sovereignty, and the cultural heritage of all Americans."

CARLETON BOWEKATY
Pueblo of Zuni Tribal Councilman

"Bears Ears National Monument has brought much joy to our people. Our responsibility is to move forward as collaborative managers of this sacred landscape, and to protect our heritage for all Americans for the benefit of all people. We will continue to do so until this matter is resolved by the courts."

TERRY KNIGHT
Tribal Historic Preservation Officer for the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe

"Because we are Commissioners, any decisions made regarding the fate of Bears Ears National Monument must involve us – the president is required by law to do so, but he did not involve us. In the decision today, President Trump has dishonored our longstanding ties to this cultural landscape and the government to government relationship that our sovereign tribes have with the United States government."

ETHEL BRANCH
Attorney General of the Navajo Nation

"What we saw today is a tremendous affront to tribal sovereignty and it is a tremendous overreach of executive authority. We intend to hold the president accountable for his actions in federal court."

LEIGH KUWANWISIWMA
Director of the Hopi Tribe Cultural Preservation Office

"Secretary Zinke and Utah politicians say that they have talked to tribes about the president's decision, but none of our Council leaders, executives, or our Commissioners were contacted. Working with tribes means leaving Bears Ears intact and supporting the Commission's efforts to bring our tribal expertise to the management of the Bears Ears National Monument – not leaving our important sites of pilgrimage, prayer, and the homes and graves of our ancestors unprotected."

WILLIE GRAYEYES
Chairman of Utah Diné Bikéyah

"Bears Ears National Monument was created to safeguard the history of five Native American Tribes and to protect their ongoing cultural uses of the land. This is a landscape that has been mined, looted and desecrated for 150 years and today, President Trump opened 85 percent of the land back up to these abuses. The current administration is playing politics with our native heritage, without even having the courage to look us in the eye. We have no other choice but to seek legal remedies against this illegal action, to listen to our people, and to restore hope in a future that is inclusive of Native American rights and interests on the land."

Technology in San Juan School District

by Aaron C. Brewer
M.A.Ed., CETL
San Juan School District

San Juan School District is working closely with school administration to bring technology into classrooms across the district.

Technology has an ever-increasing role in education. It is used to measure student understanding, report to parents, and develop new instructional methods for teaching concepts. These exciting innovations allow teachers to be more effective and efficient, students to have access to instruction tailored to their needs, and parents to be updated in a consistent and timely manner. Since the information provided by technology is so current, it can be used to identify student needs quickly, so that the teacher can adjust instruction accordingly. This allows teachers to work with individual students, small groups, or entire classes on specific, targeted skills or concepts. The effectiveness of instruction and student mastery can then be measured and adjusted again—creating a cycle of continual improvement.

It is important to note that technology doesn't replace instruction or teachers, but rather enhances it by adding a dimension impossible to achieve with traditional educational tools. Through the use of technology, teachers can develop lessons tailored to the specific needs of individual students. Students can pursue interests and areas of study to a greater degree than in the past because technology brings a world of information to them, despite the remoteness of their surroundings. The use of technology in schools does not diminish the need for students to receive quality targeted instruction from highly qualified teachers. It is a tool that assists in improving curriculum, instruction, and research.

San Juan School District is working closely with school administration and teachers to incorporate technology into classrooms across the district. Building capacity in both teachers and school leaders provides tools to enhance education. The one to one initiative which provides each student access to a connected device has been growing and implemented in each school. Technology enables principals to work closely with teachers to monitor student mastery of standards, concepts, and skills.

In collaborative teacher meetings DATA meetings data from recent assessments is discussed in detail. This leads to identification of specific needs for individual students and teachers. Analyzing particular concepts and how well they have been mastered by students can inform decisions concerning how to proceed with future instruction. By utilizing the technology available, teachers can make better decisions, principals can provide better support for students and teachers, and students can benefit from a more individualized curriculum.

One concern about technology is security. The San Juan School District has a strong commitment to securing data of both the students and the employees. The district is constantly taking measures to protect any data collected by teachers or district personnel. This includes ongoing training for the tech department concerning what information should be collected, how it should be stored and shared, and when it is no longer needed, how it should be deleted.

Living in an ever-increasing digital age, San Juan School District is striving to fill this need. District staff is mindful of the possible downfalls involved, and is constantly working to ensure that it is being utilized effectively and responsibly.

Makes An Excellent Christmas Gift
Subscribe & get a free copy of the San Juan Record
Photo of the Week Calendar
AVAILABLE IN COMING WEEKS
FREE COPY TO PRINT SUBSCRIPTIONS ONLY

San Juan Record

HOMETOWN NEWSPAPER FOR SAN JUAN COUNTY SINCE 1915

1 YEAR SUBSCRIPTION

In-Area $25 • Out-of-Area $40 • Online Only $30

Subscription for _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Email _____

Gift Subscription from _____

Edge of the Seaters Theatre, in partnership with Kigalia Fine Arts, presents

The Best Christmas Pageant Ever

By Barbara Robinson

DECEMBER 8, 9 & 11
San Juan High School Auditorium, Blanding

FRIDAY 7 P.M. SATURDAY 7 P.M. MONDAY 4 P.M.

ADMISSION: $5/person or $20 for a family ticket
KIGALIA SEASON PASSES HONORED

December

LEADER Brand SALE

Health & Wellness

Mucinex (14-20 ct)	$10.49
Leader Chest Congestion Relief (60 ct)	$7.29
DayQuil & NyQuil (8 oz)	$8.29
Sudafed (18-24 ct)	$5.79
Alka Seltzer (20 ct)	$5.39
Kleenex (160 ct)	$1.79
Tylenol (24 ct)	$5.99

SAN JUAN PHARMACY in Blanding
65 S. Main, Blanding • 435-678-2781 • Fax 435-678-2379
Store Hours: 9 am-6 pm • Pharmacy Lunch: 1-2:30 pm

Free Home Delivery for prescriptions in the Blanding Area (within 3 miles)

From: Jack Gerard, API
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: State of American Energy 2018
Date: Wednesday, January 10, 2018 10:37:36 AM

Click to view this email in a browser

January 10, 2018

Dear Heather,

Projections show 2018 could be a record year for U.S. crude oil production. The U.S. Energy Information Administration's (EIA) crude oil production forecast of 9.9 million barrels per day – surpassing the previous record from 1970 – is another landmark sign of the growing energy security that has reduced reliance on overseas energy and delivered savings to American homes and businesses.

EIA projects that most of the growth will come from energy resources in tight rock formations that operators simply couldn't access even a few short years ago -- before advances in hydraulic fracturing and directional drilling technologies ushered in an American energy revolution. The same technological innovations that have made the United States the world's energy leader have also made energy development, both onshore and offshore, safer than ever.

Those game-changing innovations in energy development, safety and environmental protection are the focus of API's 2018 State of American Energy report, "Powering Past Impossible." In addition to demonstrating how industry's use of advanced technologies and innovation produce the energy that improves lives and grows the economy while simultaneously advancing environmental goals, this year's report illustrates various ways our companies strengthen and engage with communities to make them better places to live.

The State of American Energy

Each era has improved productivity and safety – so much so that today's natural gas and oil business would be mostly unrecognizable to the rugged souls who first struck oil at places like Titusville in Pennsylvania and Spindletop in Texas. Then, success was mostly determined by grit and blind luck. In this new century, advanced technologies and operational innovations launched an American energy renaissance, accessing new natural gas finds and expanding oil production from reserves that once were unavailable. Credit for this growth belongs to the millions of women and men who ensure that American energy is produced, refined and delivered every day, safely and reliably – because being a good neighbor is at the heart of operating responsibly.

Secure, affordable energy is fundamental to American life, prosperity and security. Sound policies, such as those outlined in report, can help ensure that the reliable energy Americans count on will be available now and in the future. I hope you enjoy exploring the report and learning about the many ways America's natural gas and oil industry is Powering Past Impossible.

Sincerely,

Jack N. Gerard
President & CEO
API

Meet America's Natural Gas and Oil Industry

How are we "Powering Past Impossible"? Through innovative products made from natural gas and oil that make a difference in the lives of Bergan, a retired U.S. Army combat veteran, and Jimmie, a first-responder with a small-town fire department. And thanks to industry professionals: Eric, a supervisor of a high-tech hydraulic fracturing control room; Leslie, a manager responsible for the safety and integrity of modern pipeline systems; Colleen and Lola, environmental experts who ensure that our operations protect the land, air and water; and Carmen, who represents industry's terrific opportunities for career-minded young Americans. View this short video to learn more.

Follow our Blog to stay up-to-date

To stay up-to-date on the latest energy-related news, there is no better place to check than the Energy Tomorrow Blog.

About API:

API is the only national trade association representing all facets of the oil and natural gas industry, which supports 10.3 million U.S. jobs and nearly 8 percent of the U.S. economy. API's more than 625 members include large integrated companies, as well as exploration and production, refining, marketing, pipeline, and marine businesses, and service and supply firms. They provide most of the nation's energy and are backed by a growing grassroots movement of more than 40 million Americans.

To learn more about API and the value of oil and natural gas, please visit API.org.

Click to view this email in a browser

If you no longer wish to receive these emails, please reply to this message with "Unsubscribe" in the subject line or simply click on the following link: Unsubscribe

Jack Gerard, API
1220 L Street, NW
Washington, DC 20005
US

From: Swift, Heather
To: Laura Rigas; Wackowski, Stephen
Subject: Steve - please review your press release
Date: Tuesday, May 30, 2017 3:24:03 PM

Steve- can you please drop in a quote and make any edits?

Secretary Zinke Names Steve Wackowski as Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs

(ANCHORAGE) Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke today announced that Steve Wackowski will serve as his Senior Advisor for Alaska Affairs based out of Anchorage. Zinke made the announcement in Anchorage as part of his current tour of Alaska.

“A lifelong Alaskan and Air Force Major, Steve is perfectly qualified to advise me on Alaskan issues,” said Secretary Zinke. “Like 10 percent of Alaskans, Steve enlisted in the military and then he continued his service as a civilian working for elected officials. His broad range of experience will prove to be invaluable as the Department focuses on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior’s management.”

QUOTE STEVE

Wachowski grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family’s halibut and salmon sport-fishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary’s College, where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC-Berkeley’s Air Force ROTC program .

He is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve’s work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska’s North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce’s “Top 40 under 40” Award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the US Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as the late Senator Ted Stevens’ last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed U.S. Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski’s reelection campaign.

Steve is avid hunter and fisherman who says he continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their two-year-old son, Lucas, and their red fox lab, Cali.

Summary: Allegations of Travel and Ethics Violations by NPS Superintendent and Other Park Employees Unfounded

Report Date: May 3, 2017

The OIG investigated allegations that a national park superintendent, two of the park's administrators, and a Midwest regional officer may have violated ethics and travel regulations by joining an outside professional organization and attending multiple yearly conferences. It was alleged that the membership to the organization and the related travel were not essential to their respective positions and were a waste of taxpayer's money.

We found no evidence that employees violated Department ethics or Federal travel regulations through their membership in the outside trade organization or by attending the annual conferences. There was a consensus among the park employees and some National Park Service (NPS) regional office personnel that membership to the organization enhanced their ability to operate the park's unique assets. Additionally, NPS regional leadership were aware of the travel and supported it.

We also confirmed that the memberships were held in the name of the park and therefore did not violate Federal appropriations law, which generally prohibits the Federal Government from paying employees' membership fees for employees to outside organizations.

This is a summary of a report of investigation that we provided to the NPS Director.

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: SUPPLEMENTAL In-Town Pool Report: Military spouses listening session
Date: Wednesday, August 02, 2017 2:39:43 PM

From: Debra Saunders [mailto:dsaunders@reviewjournal.com]
Sent: Wednesday, August 2, 2017 2:33 PM
Subject: Fwd: SUPPLEMENTAL In-Town Pool Report: Military spouses listening session

Shortly after 1:30 p.m., Wednesday top figures in the Trump administration held a listening session with military spouses who discussed the hurdles they face looking for employment and continuing their careers. Names appear below.

Kellyanne Conway opened the event with statistics on military spouses. 92%, she said, are women, and 41% have dependent children. They are "highly educated, highly motivated," and in the working world, they should be "highly valued."

Ivanka Trump discussed the hurdles spouses face. Military wives have an unemployment rate of 16% -- four times the rate for adult women. They face "a wage deficit of 38%."

Secretary Acosta spoke of the harsh choices military spouses face. They must deal with "finding a new home, new schools, new friends." But also "excessive licensing is a barrier." Today 1 in 3 workers needs a license. States should find ways to recognize the licenses of other states for military spouses.

Administrator McMahon talked about growing up in a military base. A young friend's father was deployed, and the friend's mother was thrilled she got work as an Avon lady.

Kelly Hruska is with government affairs for the National Military Family Association. Her group gives grants to entrepreneurs.

Eric Eversole is a military spouse and serves in the Navy Reserve.

Elizabeth Griffin talked about the issues she faces as a language pathologist. "If you have children, that always falls on you." Often circumstances are such that she cannot "take positions that are career advancing."

Ivanka Trump asked Brooke Goldberg if there are careers to which military spouses gravitate? Yes, Goldberg answered "nursing, teaching, law degrees."

"And then we hit the barriers of licensing and certification."

Alexandria teacher Victoria Marrow said that because she has to move around "years and years of service and years of work" are not recognized.

Teacher Kim Lopez had a similar lament. She has 20 years experience but "Wherever I go, I start at the bottom."

Nicole Zillox is a nurse, which means long hours. Her biggest challenges: "licensing, portability and child care" for her long shifts.

Karla Mettling got her masters in 2003, and said she must continually ask, "Do I continue to achieve?"

Jennifer Korn of the White House Office of Public Liaison is the wife of a Marine. She thanked President Trump for hiring a military spouse. Korn too has had to make tough decisions. She and her husband lived apart for three years and she has had to ask, "Do I leave my career or leave my husband?"

Trump Administration:

Kellyanne Conway, Counselor to the President

Ivanka Trump, Advisor to the President
Alex Acosta, Secretary of Labor
Linda McMahon, Small Business Administrator
Jennifer Korn, Special Assistant to the President and Marine Corps Spouse

External Participants:

Kelly Hruska

, National Military Family Association
Brooke Goldberg, Military Officers of America
Eric Eversole, Hiring our Heroes
Elizabeth Griffin, Speech Language Pathologist, Army Spouse, MD
Natasha Harth, Administrative Assistant, Marine Spouse, VA
Kim Lopez, Teacher, Air Force Spouse, UT
Victoria Marrow, Vocational Teacher, Marine Spouse, VA
Karla Mettling, Mental Health counselor, Army Spouse
Elizabeth O'Brien, Military Spouse Program Director, Army Spouse, VA
Trina S. Phillips, Currently Volunteer and Mother, Air Force Spouse, GA
Nicole Zillox, Registered Nurse, Navy Spouse, VA

--

Debra J. Saunders
White House Correspondent
Las Vegas Review-Journal
529 14th Street NW Suite 994
Washington, DC 20045
202-662-7391
Cell 510-332-5870

--

Debra J. Saunders
White House Correspondent
Las Vegas Review-Journal
529 14th Street NW Suite 994
Washington, DC 20045
202-662-7391
Cell 510-332-5870

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Supplemental pool 1 - Handshake/arrival
Date: Thursday, July 13, 2017 10:12:09 AM

From: Andrew BEATTY <Andrew.BEATTY@afp.com>

Date: July 13, 2017 at 4:03:26 PM GMT+2
Subject: Supplemental pool 1 - Handshake/arrival

At around 14:00 your supplemental pooler was ushered through the the Musée de l'Armée gates of the Invalides complex.

We passed between several long cannon and two stone pillars with carved crests which appeared to depict Louis XIV's face emanating rays of sunshine (he was know as the Sun King) and the trio of fleurs-de-lis signifying the French monarchy.

We pre-set at the entrance to the courtyard, looking back at the gates along a long cobbled driveway flanked on each side by mounted Republican Guard.

The horses whinnied away as we waited, until at 15:11 General Dunford arrived in an armored car with Général Pierre de Villiers, who is the is the Chef d'état-major.

At 15:24 an armored Renault pulled up and President Macron and the French First Lady got out. The car was followed by a few other vehicles that deposited a gaggle of advisors.

While Mr Macron waited he chatted with a military aides, and pointed his wife to some of the old military vehicles lined up on the grounds.

At 15:34 the first cars of the US presidential motorcade arrived, creeping slowly over the cobbles as the cavalry horns and drums played a jaunty little number.

The Beast pulled up and POTUS gave a smile though the window, then got out and greeted Macron by saying "Emanuel, nice to see you. This is so beautiful."

They enjoyed a handshake (fairly normal this time) and a pat in the shoulder.

The US First Lady could be heard saying "beautiful so nice" to Brigitte Macron.

President Trump put his hand on President Macron's shoulder, they chatted a bit more and then turned to pose for the cameras.

"Okay" Macron finally said after an avalanche clicks, leading President Trump into the courtyard.

Inside, a couple of hundred troops from the major service branches were already lined up in formation.

The two men walked over slowly to a group of infantry Republican Guard complete with red-feathered shako caps. As well as ceremonial duties they are also responsible for presidential security.

The band struck up the Star Spangled Banner, the president put his hand on his heart.

The band then launched into the La Marseillais.

After, the two presidents walked along reviewing the troops, chatting as they went.

The turned back down the line and an officer with a sword informed them both of the companies involved.

With the band now silent, Trump and Macron greeted dignitaries on the other side of the courtyard. The US delegation included Cohn, McMaster, Priebus, Powell and Bossert.

The pair were then reunited with their wives and walked inside to visit the tomb of Napoleon.

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: Swift, Heather
To: Gareth Rees; David Bernhardt; Russell Newell
Subject: Talking Points for interview tomorrow
Date: Wednesday, November 01, 2017 6:08:26 PM
Attachments: TPs_DB_NPSFees.docx

David, TPs attached.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

- GOSPEL -

A reading from the holy gospel according to Matthew

Jesus took Peter, James, and John his brother, and led them up a high mountain by themselves. And he was transfigured before them; his face shone like the sun and his clothes became white as light. And behold, Moses and Elijah appeared to them, conversing with him. Then Peter said to Jesus in reply, "Lord, it is good that we are here. If you wish, I will make three tents here, one for you, one for Moses, and one for Elijah." While he was still speaking, behold, a bright cloud cast a shadow over them, then from the cloud came a voice that said, "This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased; listen to him." When the disciples heard this, they fell prostrate and were very much afraid. But Jesus came and touched them, saying, "Rise, and do not be afraid." And when the disciples raised their eyes, they saw no one else but Jesus alone. As they were coming down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, "Do not tell the vision to anyone until the Son of Man has been raised from the dead."

EVANGILE DE JESUS CHRIST SELON ST. MATTHEW

Six jours après, Jésus prit avec lui Pierre, Jacques, et Jean, son frère, et il les conduisit à l'écart sur une haute montagne. Il fut transfiguré devant eux; son visage resplendit comme le soleil, et ses vêtements devinrent blancs comme la lumière. Et voici, Moïse et Élie leur apparurent, s'entretenant avec lui. Pierre, prenant la parole, dit à Jésus: Seigneur, il est bon que nous soyons ici; si tu le veux, je dresserai ici trois tentes, une pour toi, une pour Moïse, et une pour Élie. Comme il parlait encore, une nuée lumineuse les couvrit. Et voici, une voix fit entendre de la nuée ces paroles: Celui-ci est mon Fils bien-aimé, en qui j'ai mis toute mon affection: écoutez-le! Lorsqu'ils entendirent cette voix, les disciples tombèrent sur leur face, et furent saisis d'une grande frayeur. Mais Jésus, s'approchant, les toucha, et dit: Levez-vous, n'ayez pas peur! Ils levèrent les yeux, et ne virent que Jésus seul. Comme ils descendaient de la montagne, Jésus leur donna cet ordre: Ne parlez à personne de cette vision, jusqu'à ce que le Fils de l'homme soit ressuscité des morts.

Race for Senate president starts early?

by
Jeremy Alford

One of the more substantive issues looming over the next term of the Louisiana Legislature is who will succeed Senate President John Alario to lead the upper chamber.

Alario, R-Westwego, has held the post since 2012 and prior to that was a member of the House since 1972, a span during which he served as speaker twice.

That approaching exit will leave a major void in the Legislature, but much more so in the Senate.

He hasn't said anything official yet, but Sen. Bret Allain, R-Franklin, is certainly looking like an early candidate running to replace Alario for Senate president.

At least that's the portrait being painted by the spending in his Bayou Leadership PAC, which is Allain's leadership committee.

The PAC received a hefty $25,000 contribution in April from Galliano shipbuilder Gary Chouest and the money has been circulating ever since.

Over the past two months Allain's PAC has given $2,500 to Sen. Ed Price, D-Gonzales, for his recent campaign for the upper chamber; $1,000 to Sen. Danny Martiny, R-Metairie, who's running for the Jefferson Parish Council; and $1,000 to Sen. Neil Riser, R-Columbia, who's running for state treasurer.

Others said to be favored contenders for the Senate president's race next term are Sens. Page Cortez of Lafayette, Ronnie Johns of Lake Charles and Rick Ward of Maringouin.

Competition for Higgins

While it might be a while until we start hearing more chatter about 2018's congressional races, speculation is already stirring in the 3rd Congressional District.

That's where freshman Congressman Clay Higgins of Port Barre may face some opposition.

Republican attorney Josh Guillory of Lafayette has been raising money since January and has $46,000 in his campaign war chest, according to the FEC.

Guillory describes himself as a "constitutional and family law attorney."

That tally normally wouldn't catch a second look, but Higgins himself had just $44,000 in the bank as of June 30, with an additional $10,000 in debts owed by his committee.

Not to be outdone in the 3rd, Democrats are making a hard push for Dr. Phillip Conner of Lake Charles, a family medicine and sleep specialist.

He is said to be seriously considering the race, but would only do it with a "first rate campaign team."

An endorsement for treasurer

The first notable endorsement of the election season has finally arrived.

The Jefferson Parish Republican Executive Committee has given an official nod to former state Rep. John Schroder's campaign for state treasurer.

There were 89 members voting and Schroder, a native of Covington, received nearly all of them.

Schroder's endorsement could be an early sign that he has infiltrated Jefferson Parish politics, which was important in the wake of state Rep. Julie Stokes of Kenner dropping out the race prior to qualifying.

It's a GOP-heavy parish with a lot big boxes in conservative precincts.

Schroder made the decision at the start of his campaign to have a political director focused only on Jefferson and Orleans parishes.

Political History: A state senator with artificial arms

In 1876 the ultra-conservative Redeemer Democrats were only one vote away from having control of the Louisiana Senate.

As a means to bringing about that majority, the most radical members of that faction targeted for assassination then-Sen. Marshal Harvey Twitchell, a Republican and former Union Army soldier.

Twitchell was a carpetbagger from Vermont who represented Red River Parish in the upper chamber. He was elected largely because of strong support from the black community in his district; Twitchell considered many free men of color his personal friends.

The assassin hired by the Redeemer Democrats went after Twitchell with a rifle and put six rounds into the senator. His brother was murdered during the attack, but Twitchell managed to play dead so convincingly that the assassin made his exit without firing another shot.

Twitchell's two arms took on most of the bullets somehow, and both had to be amputated above the elbows. Surprisingly he finished his term with a pair of wooden artificial arms, both of which were fashioned to

- PICTURE FROM THE PAST -

This St. Martinville Lucky Forties softball team defeated the Catahoula Old Dirt Movers in the first round of a softball tournament to benefit local recreation projects back in July 1974. Team members included (kneeling from left) Tony Laperouse, Anthony Randazzo and Earl "Mac" Willis. Standing, Charlene Soileau, Brenda

Simon, Gaston Dautreuil, Glenda Breaux, Ward Delahoussay, Vira "Wildcat" Laughlin and Jim Douet. (From the Teche News Files)
If you have any old pictures (20 years or more) of general interest that you would like to share with our readers, please contact us at 394-6232 or 332-3562, drop them off at our office in St. Martinville or e-mail to news@techetoday.com.

hold a pen or a fork.
Twitchell eventually returned to his home state of Vermont and married his second wife, who was also his childhood sweetheart.
He also went on to be appointed by both President Rutherford B. Hayes and President Grover Cleveland as the American consul to Kingston in Canada, where he died at the age 65.

His memoir, "Carpetbagger From Vermont," was published in 1989.
For more Louisiana political news, visit www.LaPolitics.com or follow Jeremy Alford on Twitter @LaPoliticsNow.

-REMEMBER WHEN-

by Sally Angelle

100 YEARS AGO August 4, 1917

Word has been received that the registration of women (for the draft) is to be compulsory, but the service is still to be voluntary. The age limit is 15 to 60 years.

The St. Martinville Town Council called for a special election seeking voter approval of a $20,000 bond issue to be used for the construction of public streets and highways both within and without the tow limits.

50 YEARS AGO August 3, 1967

Mayor Harold J. Resweber said that St. Martinville would need to add a new tower tank, additional pumps and larger lines crossing Bayou Teche in order to accommodate a request by the Police Jury to provide service to a proposed Ward 1 Water District.

The Louisiana Department of Highways awarded a $4.75 million contract to T.L. James Inc. of Ruston for work on the Lafayette-Lenora stretch (La. 3052-Breaux Bridge) of I-10 in Lafayette and St. Martin parishes.

Paula Hendrick, Nancy Guidry and Max McLeod, outstanding students at Breaux Bridge High, will represent their school at Pelican State in Baton Rouge.

25 YEARS AGO July 29, 1992

At its regular meeting the Breaux Bridge city council named local businessman and civic leader Ray Pellerin to head a 13-member Crawfish Festival Advisory Commission to take a long look at the annual Crawfish Festival and recommend what course future festivals should take.

Steve Riley of Mamou was the winner in the senior division of the Accordion Festival held at Breaux Bridge. Kristi Guillory claimed the top spot in the junior division.

15 YEARS AGO July 31, 2002

An airboat idled along the shoreline of Henderson Lake as it prepared to start an intensive attack on the hydrilla grass that threatened the viability of the lake as a popular fishing, boating and tourism destination. Experts with the LSU AgCenter and the state Department of Natural Resources hoped the $850,000 pilot project would control the invasive weed.

MaryBeth Robichaux of St. Martinville qualified as one of the 15 finalists from around the nation in the American Legion Air Rifle Competition. Her overall score included a 182 out of 200 in the standing position, a national record.

10 YEARS AGO Aug. 8, 2007

Joe's, as Amy's was known by Henderson residents, closed its doors. It was one of the first grocery stores in Henderson and was operated by three generations since the late 1920s.

After Henderson Police Chief Leroy Guidry provided information to the town council his department was finally given its own budget. Fines collected during the month of July totaled $36,484.50.

Offshore energy production – Growing stronger through 'Made in America'

In the spirit of President Trump's "Made in America Week" it's important to highlight the contribution of Outer Continental Shelf energy resources. As the second largest revenue contributor to the Treasury - $2.8 billion in 2016, OCS production supports more than 300,000 U.S. jobs, over $30 billion in value added and in excess of $55 billion in U.S. economic output.

Scott Angelle

With the OCS contributing one out of every six barrels produced in this country, we have an important role to play. The OCS contributes to energy security providing enough energy for one out of every ten Americans. National security is reinforced through reliable OCS production lessening our dependence on energy from areas of the world that do not share our values. Energy production from the OCS promotes economic security through the support of hundreds of thousands of jobs in 47 states.

That's why I've made it a priority since taking the helm at BSEE to make certain that our policies do not drive what would otherwise be investment in the U.S. into other countries because of what we have done in terms of some of our policies.

While we cannot control the price of the commodity, i.e. the price of oil and gas, we can help control the lifting costs and if the lifting costs are lowered without sacrificing safety, without sacrificing environmental safeguards – then we ought to be about that, and that's what the President and the Secretary has directed us to do first of all.

American ingenuity and technology advancements developed right here in the U.S. have provided opportunities for exploration in frontier areas and increased energy production in deeper waters. Being able to explore for and produce more offshore energy is an essential part of achieving energy dominance for America. The offshore energy industry relying on the ingenuity of Made in America companies are moving us forward toward this goal.

In addition, many of the technologies used across the globe in places like the North Sea and the Indian Ocean were developed by great Americans, many of them in your own zipcode. Made in America energy technology represents the highest standard of quality and performance throughout the world. The expertise demonstrated by American craftsmanship has far-reaching impacts on the world's economy and resource development. This is something that is not often recognized. American jobs and the resulting products from this hard work make a difference around the globe.

So as President Trump said, "We want to build, create, and grow more products in our country using American labor, American goods, and American grit. When we purchase products made in the USA, the profits stay here, the revenue stays here, and the jobs -- maybe most importantly of all -- they stay right here in the USA."

Scott Angelle is director of the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement.

From: Adams, Nathan
To: Laura Rigas; Swift, Heather; Newell, Russell; Rebecca Matulka; Larry Gillick
Subject: TEST: Happy Holidays from Secretary Zinke
Date: Wednesday, December 20, 2017 9:21:39 AM
Attachments: DOI email header.png

Here's a draft of the Secretary's holiday message. Please confirm when I should send it.

Thanks,
Nate

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Interior, Secretary <secretary_of_the_interior@ios.doi.gov>
Date: Wed, Dec 20, 2017 at 9:18 AM
Subject: TEST: Happy Holidays from Secretary Zinke

To the entire Interior family, Merry Christmas, Happy Hanukkah and Happy Holidays. However you celebrate the season, I hope you spend it with those nearest to your heart.

Happy New Year,
Secretary Zinke, Lolita and Ragnar

Visit doi.gov/employees for employee news, resources and events.

Please do not reply to this e-mail. This mailbox is not monitored.

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: The Bismarck Tribune: "Area business leaders eager to hear Trump's ideas on tax reform"
Date: Wednesday, September 06, 2017 10:43:29 PM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
September 6, 2017

THE BISMARCK TRIBUNE: "AREA BUSINESS LEADERS EAGER TO HEAR TRUMP'S IDEAS ON TAX REFORM"

"The U.S. tax code is bloated, cumbersome and long overdue for reform," [Gov.] Trump said in a statement. "Fortunately, President Trump recognizes that he and this Congress have a once-in-a-generation chance to simplify the tax code and cut taxes in a way that allows American workers and families to keep more of their hard-earned income."

Area business leaders eager to hear Trump's ideas on tax reform

By Amy Dalrymple
The Bismarck Tribune
September 5, 2017

...

The Mandan Refinery will be the backdrop Wednesday as President Donald Trump discusses the need for tax reform, a message several area business leaders are eagerly awaiting.

"We pay too much tax in this country, and I believe it restricts the free enterprise system," said Steve Herman, owner of AAction Movers in Bismarck.

Herman and his wife, Marcia, are among the small business owners Rep. Kevin Cramer invited to hear Trump speak.

...

"Any tax relief would be a benefit to everyone, I believe," Herman said.

Trump is expected to highlight personal stories from North Dakotans about the need for tax reform, including talking about Julie Ellingson, executive vice president of the North Dakota Stockmen's Association and a fourth-generation cattle rancher in Morton County.

...

Scott Meske, president of the Bismarck-Mandan Chamber of Commerce, said he's particularly interested to hear how Trump's tax reform plan would affect small businesses, which represent 85 percent of the chamber's members.

...

Kathy Neset, a geologist and owner of Neset Consulting in Tioga, said she was asked to be part of a small group to greet Trump at the refinery on behalf of the North Dakota Petroleum Council.

...

"I would love to see some lower corporate tax rates and a simplified plan for all Americans," Neset said.

Gov. Doug Burgum, who will greet Trump at the Bismarck airport, said he's looking forward to discussing how tax reform can benefit workers, farmers, ranchers, businesses and families.

"The U.S. tax code is bloated, cumbersome and long overdue for reform," Burgum said in a statement. "Fortunately, President Trump recognizes that he and this Congress have a once-in-a-generation chance to simplify the tax code and cut taxes in a way that allows American workers and families to keep more of their hard-earned income."

Cramer said the refinery will be a good backdrop for Trump to highlight why tax reform is needed and how it will affect Middle America.

...

Read the full article here.

###

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: The White House Announces the 2017-2018 Class of White House Fellows
Date: Wednesday, September 20, 2017 11:15:52 AM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
September 20, 2017

The White House Announces the 2017-2018 Class of White House Fellows

Today, the President's Commission on White House Fellows announces the appointment of the 2017-2018 class of White House Fellows. The prestigious White House Fellows program provides professionals from diverse backgrounds with an opportunity to engage in public service for one year by serving in various roles in Federal government.

Created in 1964 by President Lyndon B. Johnson, the White House Fellows program was designed "to give the fellows first hand, high-level experience with the workings of the Federal government and to increase their sense of participation in national affairs." The fellowship was created as a non-partisan program and has maintained this tradition throughout both Republican and Democratic administrations. The mission of the White House Fellows program is to encourage active citizenship and service to the Nation. Throughout the year, fellows actively participate in an education program that expands their knowledge of leadership, policy-making, and contemporary issues. Community service also plays a vital role in the program, as fellows take part in service projects throughout the year.

The highly competitive selection process to become a White House Fellow is based on a record of remarkable professional accomplishment, evidence of leadership skills and the potential for further growth, and a commitment to public service. Selected individuals spend a year working as a full-time, paid fellow to senior White House staff, Cabinet Secretaries and other top-ranking government officials. Additional information about the White House Fellows program is available at <https://www.whitehouse.gov/participate/fellows>.

The 2017-2018 White House Fellows:

Ryan Bell is from Coppell, Texas and is placed at the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. Ryan is a Major in the United States Army. As an infantry officer, he led soldiers throughout the Middle East, Asia, and the Pacific, including three combat tours in Iraq and two combat tours in Afghanistan. During Ryan's most recent assignment in Hawaii, he led 4,200 Soldiers as deputy Commander and Brigade executive officer of the 2nd Infantry Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division. Previously, Ryan served as deputy director for the Combating Terrorism Center and as an assistant professor of economics for the United States Military Academy's Department of Social Sciences. While in New York, Ryan led the West Point Parachute Team, winning a national championship in 2014, and co-founded the junior board for the Friends of the Children, a non-profit organization in New York City. His awards include the Bronze Star Medal, the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, the Meritorious Service Medal, Ranger Tab and the Combat Infantryman Badge. Ryan received a B.S. in management and Asian studies from the United States Air Force Academy, where he graduated with athletic distinction. He earned a M.S. in international relations from Troy University and a M.B.A. from Columbia Business School, where he served as class president.

Joseph Da Silva is from Norwood, Massachusetts and is placed at the U.S. Small Business Administration. Joe is a Major in the United States Army. As an infantry officer, he served in both conventional and special operations units, spending 42 months deployed in Iraq and Afghanistan. Throughout his career, Joe led and managed organizations that conducted counterinsurgency, counterterrorism, and foreign military training missions. Most notably Joe commanded a company that secured the largest oil refinery in Iraq where his efforts helped build economic capacity and minimize insurgent financing from black market fuel. He last served at the U.S. Army Cyber Command where he helped lead the command's talent management efforts. Joe also served as an assistant professor of international relations at the United States Military Academy's Department of Social Sciences, where he ran the department's annual national security conference, co-edited a compendium on American grand strategy, and served as an active term member of the Council on Foreign Relations. Joe earned a B.S. in American politics from the United States Military Academy, where he was the class president for the class of 2002. He also earned an M.A. with honors from the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in international economics and strategic studies.

Rachel Gleischman is from Farmers Branch, Texas and is placed at the U.S. Department of Defense.

Rachel was most recently a partner at TNTP, a non-profit organization supporting public school systems. She was responsible for business development and worked directly with districts on a variety of talent management initiatives. Previously, she managed the Arizona Teaching Fellows, a program placing teachers in high-need schools in Phoenix, Yuma, and the Navajo Nation communities in northeast Arizona. She also led the Oakland Practitioner Teacher Program, a special education certification program supporting Oakland Teaching Fellows and Teach for America corps members in the bay area. Prior to joining TNTP, Rachel served as a school administrator in San Francisco, a Teach for America recruitment director in the mid-Atlantic region, and a high school English teacher in Baltimore. She was the founding board chair for CASA Academy, a K-3 public charter school in Phoenix, and currently serves on the board for the Capital Pride Alliance in Washington, D.C. In her free time, she volunteers with the Girl Scouts and the Internal Rescue Committee. Rachel received a B.A. in English literature, Phi Beta Kappa and summa cum laude, from Texas A&M University and an M.A. in teaching from the Johns Hopkins University.

Cristina Hernandez is from Las Vegas, Nevada and is placed at the U.S. Office of Personnel

Management. Cristina is a U.S. Army veteran and has served in the national security sector for over fifteen years. Most recently, she served as senior policy advisor to the director of science and technology for the Office of the Director of National Intelligence. As a soldier and as a defense contractor, Cristina has led teams, delivered policy recommendations, and deployed innovative technologies to ensure the safety of those protecting our nation. She has served in Iraq and Afghanistan and has trained over 500 military members and intelligence analysts to support various missions all over the world. Cristina is also a Gold Star family member, having lost her brother while he served in the 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment in Afghanistan in 2009. While in the Army, Cristina received the Military Outstanding Volunteer Service Medal and she continues to volunteer and serve underprivileged communities today. Cristina was a next generation national security leaders fellow at the Center for a New American Security. She received a B.A. in political science from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, and an M.P.A from Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government

Shahla Jilani is from Washington D.C. and is placed at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Shahla is a physician who has worked to address the medical needs of underserved populations, most recently at Unity Health Care, a non-profit organization. She completed dual residency training in internal medicine – pediatrics at the OSU Wexner Medical Center/Nationwide Children's Hospital. As a pediatrician, she cares for underserved children, focusing on socioeconomic determinants impacting their health. As an internist, she cares for homeless populations, bridging gaps between health care access and social determinants of disease. Together, as a dual pediatrician-internist, she specializes in transitioning special needs children from pediatric to adult medical care. Serving as assistant professor at George Washington and A.T. Still University Schools of Medicine/Wright Center, Shahla has taught medical students and physicians in-training at both classroom and clinical levels. Her teaching includes leading health literacy-education classes for lower-income communities, and academic mentorship programs for at-risk, inner-city youth. Similarly, she has led graduate-level medical education-service programs in developing communities in Bolivia, Peru, and Costa Rica. Before medicine, Shahla was a researcher studying tumor angiogenesis, resulting in scholarly publications; and, earning college honors, highest departmental honors, and joint M.A. – B.S. through the UCLA Scholars Program in molecular, cell, developmental biology. She received her M.D. from University of Rochester School of Medicine and Dentistry.

Andy Ku is from Cupertino, California and is placed at the U.S. Department of Labor. Andy served as a director of product marketing at LinkedIn. He led marketing for the business unit that builds products to help people get jobs. He is proud that tens of millions of people use those products every week, with which millions of people get jobs every year. Prior to LinkedIn, he founded an internet company, which built a mobile app to help people find jobs they love by matching them to jobs that fit their strengths, skills, and interests. He also worked at Google, where he established how Google launched its most popular products, such as Google Maps, throughout Europe. His mission to help people discover and live out their vocation extends to community service. He co-founded the Mentoring Group of Silicon Valley, matching senior leaders with young professionals to help guide their careers. He recently served as a mentor and tutor at Year Up, which helps low-income youth gain skills to achieve their career potential. He has also served as a mentor at Lewisham Leaving Care in London, a program to help youths transition from juvenile detention and learn life skills. He received a B.S. in engineering from Stanford University and an M.B.A. from Harvard Business School.

Jeffrey McLean is from Mequon, Wisconsin and is placed in the White House Office of American Innovation. Jeff is a Lieutenant Commander in the U.S. Navy Reserve. As an F/A-18 Super Hornet pilot, he completed three combat deployments on aircraft carriers, including 51 missions supporting Operation Enduring Freedom over Afghanistan. As a Navy Test Pilot, Jeff served as project officer for the revolutionary X-47B Unmanned Combat Air System that made history as both the first unmanned aircraft to land on an aircraft carrier and the first to achieve autonomous aerial refueling. His writing has appeared in several publications and he served as vice chairman of the U.S. Naval Institute editorial board. Jeff previously served as president of the Truman Scholars Association, a next generation national security leader with the Center for a New American Security, and a millennium leadership fellow with the Atlantic Council. A lifelong community leader, he was awarded the Military Outstanding Volunteer Service Medal and Outstanding Young Wisconsinite award for his impact through community service and through humanitarian projects in Sarajevo, Bosnia and Kampala, Uganda. He is a Fulbright and Truman Scholar and received an M.A. from Oxford University, an M.B.A. from The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, and a B.S. with honors and distinction from the U.S. Naval Academy.

Crystal Moore is from Meridian, Mississippi and is placed in the White House Office of Public Liaison. Crystal previously served as senior director of business development for Fullbridge, Inc., a venture-backed education technology company. While there, her efforts supported the creation of online and blended-learning programs on college campuses, ensuring over 12,000 students have exposure to career readiness skills. Prior to Fullbridge, Crystal was a consultant for Parthenon-EY, where she advised colleges and universities, national foundations, policy organizations, and private investment firms. Her commitment to the education sector began as a ProInspire fellow at D.C. public schools, and led her to interning for the White House Domestic Policy Council's education policy team. Crystal has contributed through various organizations over 2,000 hours to mentoring underrepresented minority students and she is a previous participant in the Echoing Green Direct Impact Program. While at Xavier University of Louisiana, Crystal was elected to serve as student body president and was the recipient of the St. Katherine Drexel Award, Xavier's highest student honor for service and leadership. At Duke University's Fuqua School of Business, she was a merit scholarship recipient. At Fuqua, she concentrated her studies in strategy and social entrepreneurship and studied education policy at the London School of Economics. Crystal graduated cum laude, with a B.S. in finance, from Xavier University of Louisiana. She also received her MBA from Duke University, The Fuqua School of Business.

Matthew Phillips is from Christiansburg, Virginia and is placed in the Office of the Vice President of the United States. Matt is a Lieutenant Commander in the United States Navy. As a nuclear-trained surface warfare officer, he has led hundreds of sailors at sea during four combat deployments. Most recently, he served as a reactor safety inspector and technical lead on the Navy's nuclear propulsion examining board. As operations officer, he coordinated and executed a counter-narcotic deployment that interdicted over $500 million of cocaine traffic. Ashore, he led midshipmen as a company officer at the United States Naval Academy and taught courses in seamanship & navigation and leadership. His service has been recognized by numerous military decorations, including the Meritorious Service Medal. Following his fellowship, he will command one of the Navy's most advanced warships. An active volunteer with churches, food banks, and homeless shelters, he and his wife, Amy, have sought to make a difference in their community throughout his naval career. He graduated with honors from the United States Naval Academy, receiving a B.S. in computer science, and participated on the men's glee club. Selected for the immediate graduate education program, he graduated with honors from the Naval Postgraduate School and received a M.S. in computer science.

Kyle Sheetz is from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and is placed at the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. Kyle is a surgeon interested in improving the access and quality of surgical services in the United States. He is currently a resident in general surgery at the University of Michigan. Through his work with the Michigan surgical quality collaborative, he is involved in the development and implementation of initiatives that reduce costs and complications for high-risk surgery. As a fellow at the Center for Healthcare Outcomes and Policy, Kyle's research uses delivery system science to understand which treatments are most effective and how to institute large-scale practice changes. He holds degrees in medicine, clinical research design and biostatistics from the University of Michigan, where he was the recipient of the dean's award for research excellence. Kyle was a founding member of the academic surgeon development program, which fosters mentorship and career development for students interested in academic medicine. Kyle received a B.S. in biochemistry from Denison University in Granville, Ohio where he met his wife.

Jake Steel is from Garden City, Kansas and is placed in the White House Office of the Domestic Policy Council. Jake was most recently a math teacher in inner Oklahoma City, where he served as the math department chair. His focus on closing the achievement gap through the use of one-to-one technology has increased state test scores by over 30 percentage points, which assisted in the school's state report card being increased by two letter grades. Jake is a former Teach for America corps member and contributed to the organization on an alumni board. He served for two years as a full-time humanitarian volunteer in Ohio and volunteered as a community choir director and as an instructor for high school and college level seminary courses. After attending Johns Hopkins University, he was honored by the alumni council for the school of education for his commitment and leadership in his community. He studied in Jerusalem, Israel at Brigham Young University's Jerusalem center, where his academic work focused on ancient and modern near eastern studies and ancient religious texts. Jake earned a B.S. in communications from Brigham Young University, Idaho and an M.S. in education from Johns Hopkins University.

Christopher Stolte is from Aurora, Colorado and is placed at the U.S. Department of the Interior. Chris recently graduated from the Harvard Kennedy School (HKS) of government with a master in public administration. Prior to attending HKS, Chris acted as the business advisor to the executive vice president (EVP) of unconventional for Shell, where he supported the EVP on day-to-day operations and long-term strategic matters. Before taking on the business advisor role, Chris was the completion engineering manager for Shell Appalachia, overseeing engineering activities across multiple appraisal and development areas in Appalachia. He has completed international assignments in Holland and China. Prior to his international assignments, he worked as a completion engineer supporting unconventional gas operations in the Pinedale Anticline and as a production engineer supporting multiple assets in the Gulf of Mexico. Chris has served on the boards of multiple non-profit and for-profit organizations. Most recently, he served on the board of advisors for Sourcewater, a water sharing platform for the energy industry. He holds a B.S. in petroleum engineering from the Colorado School of Mines, an M.B.A. from MIT, and an M.P.A. from Harvard.

Katelyn van Dam is from San Jose, California and is placed at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Katelyn is a Major in the United States Marine Corps Reserve. An attack helicopter pilot by trade, Katelyn conducted combat operations in Helmand Province, Afghanistan and counter-piracy operations in the Horn of Africa and Gulf of Aden. She served over ten years on active duty. In her final active assignment, Katelyn instructed new Marine Corps officers in tactics and leadership as a staff platoon commander at The Basic School in Quantico. She most recently served as a civil affairs officer with 2D Civil Affairs Group. In her personal capacity, Katelyn co-founded and served as director of strategy and policy for No Exceptions, a nonpartisan initiative that advocated for the military to fully integrate women into all combat arms specialties. The efforts of No Exceptions contributed to the successful implementation of this Department of Defense policy change in 2016. She is an alumna of the Center for New American Security's 2014 next generation national security leaders program. Katelyn was selected as the American Red Cross Tiffany Circle distinguished woman warrior of the year in 2015.

Katelyn has published articles in JHU SAIS' Foreign Policy Institute, War on the Rocks, Just Security, Marine Corps Gazette, and US Naval Institute, and was a guest on the Center for Strategic and International Studies' smart women, smart power podcast and the Diane Rehm Show. She is married to her amazing husband David van Dam, who is also a Marine Corps veteran. She recently completed a master of arts degree in international economics and international relations at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, D.C. Katelyn is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy.

Mathew Zulauf is from Muskegon, Michigan and is placed in the White House Office of the Staff Secretary. Mat is a Major in the United States Air Force and was a B-2 stealth bomber pilot. He served as the 509th Bomb Wing nuclear executive manager where he was responsible for the coordination, planning, and execution of the nuclear missions of the B-2. He deployed to the European and Pacific theaters on strategic assurance and deterrence missions. He has more than 2,000 flight hours including 1,100 hours as an instructor pilot in the B-2 and T-38. Previously, he served as a flight commander responsible for the military training and flight training of student pilots from the U.S. and numerous allied NATO countries. Other prior assignments included executive officer for the Air Force Scientific Advisory Board, aide to the chief of staff, Office of Science and Technology Policy, Executive Office of the President, and intern at NASA's advanced space propulsion laboratory developing a plasma engine for deep space travel. Major Zulauf received his commission and was a distinguished graduate from the U.S. Air Force Academy where he was the top graduating cadet in physics. He also attended the U.S. Naval Academy on exchange. He received his masters of public policy in international security and economic policy from the University of Maryland.

###

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: Ben Lefebvre
To: Heather Swift
Subject: today's one email of questions from Politico
Date: Tuesday, October 03, 2017 12:41:17 PM

Hi Heather,

Sorry for all the email traffic – I know how it is when the flood gates are open. I'll try to keep things to one email today for the main question, though of course there may be follow-ups depending on what the answers are. And you can take a pass on the Lola stuff from yesterday. We're not going there.

So looking through the Secretary's trip calendar, I saw that there were about nine events he attended (listed below) that could be construed as political. I know that at least one DOI Secretary in the past was reprimanded for attending similar events. I was wondering if you could please tell me:

1. Did DOI set up these trips to co-incide with the political events he attended?
2. Is there any concern that the sheer number of political events attended during official trips could be construed as inappropriate use of official DOI funds/ Secretary's time? Was it appropriate for Secretary Zinke to carve out time for these nine events while on official DOI travel?
3. Were there any ethics waivers applied for to attend any of these political events? Anything you could forward me showing the Secretary asked/received permission from the appropriate department officials, if such permissions were needed?
4. Is there any estimate of how much these trips cost DOI?

If you have any questions, need any clarification, etc, please let me know. Events are as follows:

- Zinke attended a March 30 GOP event in the Virgin Islands with more than 50 people in attendance. Zinke's staff did not accompany him to the event, which was closed to the press, internal documents show.
- May 12: visits Westmoreland Resources Coal Company with VP Mike Pence and Steve Daines. DOI staff waited in cars while politicians met.
- May 11: Made Keynote remarks at RNC Spring Meeting Dinner in California.
- May 12: Rally for Greg Gianforte, with VP Mike Pence. Zinke delivered remarks introducing Gianforte. Gets group photo with Daines, Gianforte, Mrs. Pence.
- June 25: Attended the Rule of Law Defense Reception and Dinner in Nevada, where he made remarks and did a Q&A. dinner was attended by 19 state attorney generals, including Montana's Tim Fox. Zinke sat with Fox and Allen Richardson of Koch Industries at his dinner table.

- June 26: Vegas Golden Knights Development Camp Dinner at Red Rock Hotel and Resort in Nevada. Bill Foley, who's Fidelity donated $200,000 to Zinke's congressional campaigns, introduced Zinke, who talked for 30 minutes.
- July 20: Made remarks at American Legislative Exchange Council Kick-off Reception at Denver Hyatt. 15 minutes of remarks, 15 minutes "fireside chat" with CEO Lisa Nelson.
- July 21: Featured speaker at Colorado Republican Committee Roundtable.
- July 22: Attended Western Conservative Summit in Denver. Was introduced as Interior Secretary.

Thank you,

Ben Lefebvre
Oil & gas policy reporter, POLITICOPro
Desk: 703-647-8775
Mobile/WhatsApp: 313-473-0537
Proton: bjlefebvre@protonmail.com
Twitter: @bjlefebvre

From: Nachmany, Eli
To: Heather Swift
Subject: Todd Willens Press Release
Date: Monday, July 10, 2017 6:59:48 PM

Native American Leaders Praise Todd Willens as President Donald Trump's Nominee for Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior

President Donald Trump has announced the nomination of former Interior Department official Todd Willens as Assistant Deputy Secretary of the Interior.

Willens brings with him to Interior more than 20 years of public policy and governmental affairs experience, with proven successes on behalf of prior Administrations, Members of Congress, national associations, and private businesses. He possesses a deep knowledge and understanding of the Department's many complex policies, ranging from land to energy, wildlife, and water management.

"The selection of Todd Willens to serve as Assistant Deputy Secretary deepens the bench at Interior," Jackie Johnson Pata, Executive Director of the National Congress of American Indians, said. "In his prior work as Chief of Staff for Congressman Stevan Pearce, Todd handled a wide range of Native issues. In that role, he earned the great respect of many in Indian Country. As the Administration and Tribal Nations partner to advance economic development and self-sufficiency for Native communities, Todd's expertise and experience will be a valuable asset."

At the Department, Willens will focus on the policy initiatives and daily workings of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Park Service, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the U.S. Geological Survey.

Charged with a host of responsibilities, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service oversees the protection of endangered species, the restoration and conservation of wildlife habitats, and the distribution of excise taxes to State fish and wildlife agencies. The National Park Service administers the United States' national parks. Additionally, the Bureau of Reclamation manages water and other resources in the American West, while the U.S. Geological Survey strives to better understand the Earth and its resources through scientific examination.

"I have worked with Todd for several years. He has an exceptional understanding of western issues in general, and Native issues in particular," Chairman Paul Torres of the All Pueblo Council of Governors said. "Todd is exactly the kind of leadership that can advance Interior's trust responsibility to tribes, while supporting tribal sovereignty and self-determination. This is an exceptional selection by the Administration."

Willens served as Chief of Staff to Congressman Steve Pearce (R-NM) from 2010 to 2017.

During his tenure as Chief of Staff, Willens provided strategic advice and operational oversight to meet the needs of the constituents of the 2nd Congressional District of New Mexico. He worked closely with various stakeholders in this capacity, including local government officials, Congress, and the previous Administration to ramp up operations at defense bases, prevent job-killing regulatory action, and increase federal accountability significantly for the people of New Mexico.

“Todd Willens has worked on difficult Indian Country issues, proving himself to be a close listener to Native concerns and demonstrating the diplomatic skills necessary in the government-to-government relationship between the United State and Native Nations,”

Jackson Brossy, Executive Director of the Navajo Nation Washington Office, said.

“Todd’s addition to the leadership at Interior will bring practical, on-the-ground experience with Indian Country, to the benefit of both Interior and Tribes. The Navajo Nation looks forward to working closely with Todd.”

Prior to working on Capitol Hill, Willens served as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks at the Department of the Interior from 2006 to 2008. While at the Department, he worked on the National Parks Centennial, and the historic recovery of the Bald Eagle. In addition, Willens also served as Senior Policy Advisor for United States House of Representatives Committee on Natural Resources from 2003 to 2006. In this capacity, he worked closely with the Chairman to develop key legislation, including the 2005 Endangered Species Act Reauthorization and the 2005 Energy Bill.

“For tribes, it is critically important to have knowledgeable and trusted leadership at Interior,” Governor Kurt Riley of the Pueblo of Acoma said. “Todd has long proved his exceptional understanding of Indian issues and his willingness to work with tribes to find practical solutions. Todd is an outstanding choice for Assistant Deputy Secretary.”

Willens is a native of California and is a 1994 graduate of the University of California, Los Angeles. He currently lives in Washington, D.C. with his wife and four children.

TONY NGUYEN (SHORT BIO)

Tony Nguyen, Associate Director for Workforce and Inclusion

Tony Nguyen joins the National Park Service from the United States Department of Energy (DOE), where he was the Director, Office of Human Capital Strategy and Analysis. Throughout his fifteen years of federal civil service, Mr. Nguyen has led major programs at the agency and government-wide levels to implement and improve strategic planning and performance management; workforce analysis, planning, and metrics; recruitment and hiring; diversity and inclusion; employee engagement; and HR service delivery. Before coming to DOE in 2006, Tony was a project manager in recruitment and information technology for the U.S. Peace Corps, and he recently completed a one-year executive rotation to the Executive Office of the President in the Office of Management and Budget's (OMB) Performance and Personnel Management Division. As Associate Director (AD) for Workforce and Inclusion (W&I), Mr. Nguyen will lead all workforce programs for the National Park Service. Functions within W&I include staffing, compensation, benefits, employee and labor relations, employee performance management, suitability and security clearances, workers compensation, learning and development, and youth programs.

TONY NGUYEN (LONG BIO)

Tony Nguyen, Associate Director for Workforce and Inclusion

Tony Nguyen joins the National Park Service from the United States Department of Energy (DOE), where he was the Director, Office of Human Capital Strategy and Analysis. As the Associate Director (AD) for Workforce and Inclusion (W&I), Mr. Nguyen will lead all workforce programs for the National Park Service. Functions within W&I include staffing, compensation, benefits, employee and labor relations, employee performance management, suitability and security clearances, workers compensation, learning and development, and youth programs.

Throughout his fifteen years of federal civil service, Mr. Nguyen has led major programs at the agency and government-wide levels to implement and improve strategic planning and performance management; workforce analysis, planning, and metrics; recruitment and hiring; diversity and inclusion; employee engagement; and HR service delivery. In 2002, Tony began his federal service as an analyst for the U.S. Peace Corps, where he provided expertise and collaboration essential to redesigning the agency's processes and systems for volunteer recruitment, IT project management, and internal management controls. In 2006, he joined the Department of Energy (DOE) as a quality assurance manager, where he designed and managed the cost monitoring and oversight functions for a new enterprise-wide Training Most Efficient Organization that saved the DOE $28M over a three-year period. Since 2010, Tony's leadership in human capital management has earned DOE recognition for transformative outcomes and best practices from multiple oversight agencies, in areas such as: hiring reform (time-to-hire); employee engagement (Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey); performance management (Goals-Engagement-Accountability-Results, or GEAR); and data-driven management reviews (HRStat 1.0). In addition, he designed and implemented the strategic planning and goal-setting processes that have set DOE's strategic goals and priorities for human capital management from 2011 thru 2020.

In 2014, Tony was appointed to the career Senior Executive Service (SES) as the Director for DOE's new Office of Human Capital Strategy and Analysis. As an Office Director, he led three corporate divisions for the Department: Workforce Analytics and Planning; Recruitment and Outreach; and Workforce Engagement and Effectiveness. In this capacity, he developed organizational partnerships and implemented strategies to develop DOE's leadership, strengthen its federal workforce, and improve HR's service delivery. In June 2017, he completed a one-year executive rotation to the Executive Office of the President in the Office of Management and Budget's (OMB) Performance and Personnel Management Division, where he contributed policy development for the President's Executive Orders relating to the government reforms and the federal workforce and implementation guidance to agencies for the new regulation on Strategic Human Capital Management, 5 C.F.R. 250 (B).

He is a graduate of Lebanon Valley College with degrees in biology, philosophy, and Spanish. He attained the Project Management Professional (PMP) credential in 2005. Tony is a member of leading executive and HR professional organizations. He and his wife, Annie, reside with their four children in Fredericksburg, Virginia.

From: Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov; laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: TPs
Date: Monday, December 04, 2017 11:03:08 PM

Hey guys, please see some guidance for off topic talking points.
I don't see the Secretary getting asked but want him to be prepared just in case.
Please let me know if you have any questions.
Thank you.

Budget And Government Shutdown

. (b) (5)
[Redacted]

On Gen. Flynn:

. (b) (5)
[Redacted]

Roy Moore:

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

On DOJ:

. (b) (5)
[Redacted]

Proposed Targeted Peak-Season Fee Increase

- Secretary Zinke and President Trump love our national parks – in fact the President donated his first quarter salary to the National Park Service to restore Antietam National Battlefield.
- Our National Parks have fallen into disrepair and require about $11 billion in maintenance.
- The NPS is proposing a pilot program to increase fees at 17 of the busiest national parks during peak season at each park. 400 of the parks will see no increase.
- 80% of the money will go directly to the park charging. 20% of the money will go to other parks that don't charge an entrance fee. The fee increase is expected to generate about $70 million
- The revenue from these fees will improve things like restrooms, trails, roads, and visitors' centers.
- In addition to generating revenue, the peak and off-peak rates may also encourage visitors to plan their trips outside of peak season which has the added benefit of lightening congestion in the parks.
- 400 Parks are not increasing in price. Entrance to 299 National Park Service sites remains free

Comparison to bringing the kids to the movies

- The National Park entrance fee is $70 for an entire car load of people for 7 days.
- By comparison, if I take my wife and two kids to Tysons Corner to watch a 3D movie that's $68 before popcorn and a drink.

Q: The Trump budget cut funding for NPS. If you love the parks so much, why not ask for more money in the budget?

■ (b) (5) [Redacted]

■ [Redacted]

Deferred Maintenance

- Addressing the over $11 billion deferred maintenance backlog in repairs to national parks is a top priority for the Department and the Trump Administration.
- Park infrastructure includes trails, signage, restrooms, lodges, roads, bridges and waterlines that are fundamental to providing a world-class experience to visitors and the preservation of the natural and historical resources are parks protect.

(b) (5)

Q: Besides the peak-season fee proposal, what are some of the other ways you're trying to address the maintenance backlog?

(b) (5) [Redacted]

- [Redacted]

- [Redacted]

- [Redacted]

[Redacted]

NPS and Diversity

- The National Park Service is actively working to ensure that the Service's workforce and visiting public reflect America and we have hundreds of locations that highlight our Nation's diverse history and culture.
- The Service has taken several steps towards this goal, including by diversifying our employment applicant pool and ensuring that the National Park System accurately reflects our country's diversity.
- Reaching out to diverse populations with a special focus on the next generation is a core aim of the Find Your Park campaign that we have promoted with our partners at the National Park Foundation.

(b) (5)

Other Topics

ANWR – The Alaska 1002 area is a 1.5 million acre coastal plain in Alaska specifically set aside for the consideration of natural resource development under President Jimmy Carter. To develop energy there, however, Congress must give an authorization. The Trump Administration supports Alaska Natives' and the Delegation's effort to actualize that potential.

National Monument Review – The national monument review encompassed 27 national monuments, two of which are managed by the National Park Service and none were rescinded. The Secretary's recommendations was to restore access to public lands while balancing preservation and responsible resource use.

Confederate Monuments – “I'm an advocate of learning from our monuments, understanding the period they were made,” Secretary Ryan Zinke

“The NPS plays an important role in interpreting our nation's history. We tell America's story through our parks, and we are the keepers of many of the places where we became the nation that we are.” Mike Reynolds

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel 3 Fore arrival
Date: Saturday, July 22, 2017 10:36:11 AM

From: "Bierman, Noah" <noah.bierman@latimes.com>
Date: July 22, 2017 at 10:33:15 AM EDT
Subject: Travel 3 Fore arrival

Marine 1 touched down at 1013 on the ship's 1092 ft long runway full of helicopters and other aircraft next to Atlantic and docked naval ships. Trump was greeted by sec Mattis, acting naval sec sean stackley, and calf Richard McCormack. Priebus, miller, and mnuchin and wife exited back.

Trump saluted and chatted briefly beside the ship's 10--story superstructure that includes all air traffic and control functions. He then walked over a small red carpet surrounded by "rainbow sideboys" -- men dressed in green, red, purple, and blue that designate their functions on the ship. The monochrome suits and h omega look a bit like the tv show "Wiggles."

He then walked to a large gray platform that served as a giant elevator to take him down to the hangar base, a giant auditorium below.

He wan still wearing suit and red tie.

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool #3: Hickam scene
Date: Friday, November 03, 2017 7:52:10 PM

From: Mike Bender <mike.bender@wsj.com>
Date: November 3, 2017 at 1:45:51 PM HST
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Travel pool #3: Hickam scene

At 114 pm local, POTUS & FLOTUS deplaned into 87 degree weather. The were greeted with leis by Hawaii Gov. David Ige and his wife, Dawn Ige; US Navy Adm. Harry Harris, commander of the US Pacific Command, his wife, Bruni Bradley; and Mikayla Webb, the daughter of Adm. Harris's aid.

POTUS's brightly colored lei — orange and yellow it appeared from a distance — was decorated with maile & ilima flowers, a combination traditionally presented to royalty on the island, Gov. Ige reports to the pool. (Hat tip to Mrs. Ige for the spelling assist.) The white lei given to FLOTUS was made of Pilake and rose.

POTUS spent about 15 minutes shaking hands with some of the roughly 100 greeters, a mix of troops and civilians. The pool was kept too far away to hear the interactions, and was hustled into vans before he finished.

At one point several woman cheered White House chief of staff John Kelly, who stood about 15 feet behind the president. "We love you General Kelly!" Mr. Kelly acknowledged his fans with a smile and placing his right hand over his heart.

—Mike Bender
The Wall Street Journal.
202-725-5805

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool #5: Pearl Harbor/lid
Date: Saturday, November 04, 2017 1:52:33 AM

From: Mike Bender <mike.bender@wsj.com>
Date: November 3, 2017 at 7:44:54 PM HST
Subject: Travel pool #5: Pearl Harbor/lid

As an orange sun set over the Hawaiian islands and dark gray clouds gathered around nearby mountains, POTUS made a somber and short visit to the USS Arizona Memorial — about 13 hours before wheels-up to Japan. POTUS & FLOTUS spent about 20 minutes at the simple yet stark shrine to the 1,177 crewman who died during the Dec. 7, 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor.

The pair stood for about a minute in front of the white marble wall etched with the names of the fallen during a wreath laying ceremony. The first couple adjusted the wreath slightly before two soldiers placed it near the wall. The Trumps then threw white pekake flower petals into the water where the remains of more than 900 Arizona crewmen rest.

As POTUS left the main room, and his staff and White House press followed, his chief of staff, retired Gen. John Kelly, slipped in and wordlessly took in the wall.

While Kelly absorbed the memorial, POTUS & FLOTUS stood in front of a plaque describing it. POTUS asked one of his hosts a few questions and nodded during the answers. Your pool was kept at a distance at which neither side of the conversation could be heard.

POTUS was escorted to the memorial on the Pacific Fleet admiral's barge, a sharp looking boat with a blue hull, white cabin and adorned with US flags. A second, smaller barge, the Remembrance, carried much of the president's staff. Most of the president's top staff traveling with him joined the tour, including HR McMaster, Dina Powell, Rob Porter, Hope Hicks, Sarah Sanders, Matt Pottinger, Bob Lighthizer, Michael Anton, and Jared Kushner.

With the pool holding in vans, POTUS received a second private military briefing from Pacific Command leaders after his tour, and briefly attended a reception on Pearl Harbor Base at PACOM Commander Harris's residence.

At the social, the President and First Lady visited w PACOM staff and listened to marine band, said White House Press Secretary Sarah Sanders.

From his first tweet this morning at 6:51am Eastern, to the return to his Honolulu hotel at 7:33 p.m. Hawaii time, that's nearly a 19-hour day for POTUS on the first day of his 12-day trip halfway around the world.

For your record keeping:

- Pool departed POTUS's Honolulu hotel at 4:50pm, en route to USS Arizona Memorial. Arrived at the PAC fleet boathouse at 5:08pm
- 5:12 boarded the Pacific Fleet's Admiral's Barge
- At 5:40, POTUS was off his boat and saluting the memorial. He held the pose for about a minute.
- At 5:42, he and FLOTUS threw flower petals into the water
- POTUS and FLOTUS boarded the boat at 5:50 p.m.
- Motorcade was rolling from the boathouse at 6:34 p.m., and arrived at the reception 10 minutes later.
- Motorcade was rolling from the reception at 7:15 p.m.
- POTUS returned to his hotel at 7:33 p.m, when a travel/photo lid was promptly called.

- Participants in the wreath laying ceremony: The President and First Lady will be accompanied by Admiral Harris and his wife, Ms. Bradley. Others: HM1 Kyle Mobeck (USPACFLT) - Hometown: Rathdrum, Idaho; PS2 Koko Zaw (USPACFLT) - Hometown: Queens, New York; CS1 Shemeka Anderson - Hometown: Spartanburg, South Carolina

—Mike Bender
The Wall Street Journal.
202-725-5805
@MichaelCBender

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool 1 - Andrews
Date: Saturday, July 22, 2017 9:48:22 AM

From: "Bierman, Noah" <noah.bierman@latimes.com>
Date: July 22, 2017 at 9:06:32 AM EDT
Subject: Travel pool 1 - Andrews

Good morning from muggy but faintly breezy Joint Base Andrews where the president is about to be wheels up for Norfolk to commission the Gerald R Ford. Traveling with President Trump are Reince Priebus, Steve Mnuchin and his wife, per staff. Pool observed Mnuchin.

Marine 1 landed at 9:01. Trump walked into AF 1 at 9:05 In dark suit and red tie. He waved to a small group of onlookers and then reporters before boarding .

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool 6 — Trump on NoKo: "We'll see"
Date: Sunday, December 31, 2017 9:52:35 PM

From: Mike Bender <mike.bender@wsj.com>

Date: December 31, 2017 at 9:49:07 PM EST
Subject: Travel pool 6 — Trump on NoKo: "We'll see"

POTUS dropped in on the New Year's Eve party at Mar-a-Lago tonight at 9:25 p m., strolling past the assembled media pool and delivering very brief remarks. Asked for what his thoughts on North Korea's claims about developing its nuclear force, he said, "We'll see."

"Hello everybody. Happy new year. I think you're going to go in and take some pictures of the crowd. Great crowd. We're going to have a great year. We're going to have a fantastic 2018. We're off to a very good start, as you know, with the great tax cuts and ANWR and getting rid of the individual mandate, which is very, very unpopular, as you know. But we are going to have a tremendous year. Stock market, I think, is going to continue to go up. Companies are going to continue to come into the country. And they're doing it now, soon to be a record clip. So we look forward to seeing you inside. Come on along."

On North Korea leader Kim Jong Un's claim that he has a nuclear button on his desk, and that the weapons can reach the United States: "We'll see, we'll see. Come on inside."

A bit of color (with an assist from NYT's Emily Cochrane) for the curious:

POTUS and Barron were both in tuxedos. Melania had a full length rose gold glittery gown with floral accents.

Guests attended a cocktail reception near a swimming pool before the dinner. A red carpet led into the Grand Ballroom, where the dinner was held, and several guests confused the White House press corp for paparazzi (easy mistake), and stopped and posed for the cameras.

Guests arrived in full formal attire, many clutching champagne flutes and martini glasses. There was a lot of glitter -- full length gowns, clutches, shoes for women and a couple of the men -- and many of the women had fur stoles, some of them floor length. Louise Linton, wife of Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin, was one of them, with a short white dress and white fur caplet. Screens televised the crowd at Times Square, while a cover band played.

Among the attendees: Ivanka Trump and Jared Kushner (who wished the press corp a happy new year) and their two oldest children, Arabella and Joseph; Eric and Lara Trump; Don Jr. and his eldest son, Don III; Mr. Mnuchin (who promised 2018 will be "great") and his wife. Former NY Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez said hello, Fox Business host Lou Dobbs smiled, and Dr. Eric Kaplan, who claims to be the most-followed chiropractor on Twitter, stopped and chatted, too.

The menu tonight started with Trump Iceberg Wedge (roquefort, grape tomatoes, bacon, red onion) followed by a second course of Maine Lobster Ravioli (with fennel mousseline, olive & citrus verjus sauce). The third course was 7X Sliced Tenderloin & Pan-Seared Sea Bass (with taro root puree, morel mushrooms, roasted heirloom carrots, sweet cherries & burgundy jus). For dessert: Baked Alaska.

Happy new year everyone!

—Mike Bender
The Wall Street Journal.
(202)725-5805
mike.bender@wsj.com

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool 7/depart embassy for emperor greeting
Date: Sunday, November 05, 2017 9:06:32 PM

From: "Nakamura, David" <David.Nakamura@washpost.com>
Date: November 6, 2017 at 10:54:44 AM GMT+9
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Travel pool 7/depart embassy for emperor greeting

Pool held in vans as Potus did Q and A with biz leaders, and then spoke with US embassy staff. One note: after his introductory remarks to biz leaders ended and before pool was ushered out your pooler twice yelled a question to Potus about whether the US needs to consider tougher gun laws but he didn't answer. At 10:49 am motorcade left embassy for the Emperor Akihito's residence where the emperor and his wife will formally welcome the Trumps. There will be a preset pool to assist.

-30-

Sent from my iPhone

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel Pool 10: Yad Vashem Background
Date: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 7:15:57 AM

From: "Memoli, Michael" <michael.memoli@latimes.com>

Date: May 23, 2017 at 12:41:59 PM GMT+3
Subject: Travel Pool 10: Yad Vashem Background

Pool is loaded in vans ahead of the next scheduled movement, to Yad Vashem for a wreath-laying ceremony and guestbook signing.

Here is some background provided by the U.S. Embassy via the White House on events and personnel POTUS will see there.

Yad Vashem Press Notes

Yad Vashem, established by law in 1953, is Israel's official body entrusted with perpetuating the memory of the Holocaust. Official memorial ceremonies are held in The Hall of Remembrance, a solemn tent-like structure which allows visitors to pay their respects to the memories of the martyred dead. On the floor are the names of the six death camps and some of the concentration camps and killing sites throughout Europe. In front of the memorial flame lies a crypt containing ashes of victims. Press will enter the site via the Avenue and Garden of the Righteous Among the Nations, dedicated to non-Jews who risked their lives to help Jews, which is a wooded area with honorary plaques, like the one pictured here.

Arrival

1. Avner Shalev, Chairman of the Yad Vashem Directorate

Shalev was born in Jerusalem, and holds a bachelor's degree in Middle East Studies from the Hebrew University. During the Yom Kippur War, he served as Bureau Head of the Israel Defense Forces' (IDF) Chief of Staff, and subsequently as Chief Education Officer of the IDF. Shalev served later as Director of Israel's Culture Authority. Since 1993, Shalev has led Yad Vashem in a comprehensive program to meaningfully teach and commemorate the Holocaust. Prioritizing education, Shalev founded Yad Vashem's International School for Holocaust Education. He also conceived and established Yad Vashem's Museums Complex, including the Holocaust History Museum, for which he serves as Chief Curator, and brought about a technological revolution at Yad Vashem. Shalev also serves as Chief Curator of Yad Vashem's permanent exhibition at the Auschwitz-Birkenau (Poland) Museum's Jewish Pavilion. Under his direction, Yad Vashem was awarded the esteemed Israel Prize for Lifetime Achievement to Society and State, and the Prince of Asturias Prize for Concord. The President of France has appointed him to the Légion d'honneur. Shalev has also received the President of Israel's Medal from the late President Shimon Peres, the Hebrew University's Rothberg Award for Jewish Education, and the Worthy Citizen of Jerusalem Award. In December 2016 he was awarded the title of Commander of the Order of Civic Merit by the Kingdom of Spain.

2. Rabbi Israel Meir Lau, Chairman of the Yad Vashem Council

Rabbi Lau was born in Poland in 1937 and liberated from the Buchenwald Concentration Camp in 1945 by the U.S. Army when he immigrated to Israel. His father was a famous Rabbi who was killed during the Holocaust in Treblinka. Rabbi Lau received his Rabbinical ordination in 1960, and in 1971 was chosen as the regional Rabbi of North Tel Aviv. In 1979 he was chosen to serve as the Chief Rabbi of Netanya, and in 1983 became the youngest member of the Chief Rabbinical Council of Israel. He was chosen as the Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv-Jaffa in 1988, and from 1993-2003, he served as the Chief Rabbi of Israel. He was chosen to serve a second time as Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv-Jaffa in 2005, and in 2008 became Chairman of the Yad Vashem Council. He has published many books, including Judaism, in Theory and Practice; Yahel Yisrael; a Commentary on the Ethics of the Fathers; and his autobiography, Do Not Raise Your Hand Against the Boy. In 2005, Rabbi Lau received the prestigious Israel Prize for Lifetime Achievement and Special Contributions to Society and the State. In 2011 French President Nicolas Sarkozy conferred the title of Legion d'Honneur on Rabbi Lau.

3. Inbal Kivity Ben Dov, Director of the Yad Vashem Commemoration & Community Relations Division

Greetings inside the Hall of Remembrance, before ceremony

1. Margot Hershenbaum (née Goldstein), is the sister of Ester Goldstein, the Holocaust Child Victim whose personal album will be presented to POTUS (<http://www.yadvashem.org/yv/en/exhibitions/albums/goldstein.asp>). Margot was born in Berlin in 1929. In 1939, she was sent to Australia as part of the Kindertransport (organized rescue efforts of Jewish children between 1938-1940). She never saw her family again. She remained in Australia until 1948 when she went to live with her uncle in the United States and attended nursing school there. In 1957 she moved to Israel and became a nurse at Hadassah hospital. She met her husband Pinchas Hershenbaum (a Holocaust survivor from Lodz) and they married in 1961. They had a son and a daughter. Margot and her family settled in the town of Netanya, where she resides until today. Her husband passed away one year ago.

2. Colette Avital, Chairperson Center Organizations of Holocaust SURVIVORS in Israel

Ambassador Colette Avital immigrated to Israel from Romania. She has held a variety of key Foreign Ministry posts, including Deputy Director of Information (1979-1981), Director of the Training Division and Head of the Ehud Avriel school of Diplomacy (1984-1986), and Deputy Director General for Information, Media Communication and Culture (1986-1988). She served in Montreal, Brussels, Paris, Boston, and as Ambassador in Lisbon. She led Ministry's efforts to upgrade the status of women in Diplomatic Service, and when she was appointed Consul General of Israel in New-York in 1992, it was the highest position attained by a woman in the Foreign Service. In January 1999 she turned to politics and won a seat in the Knesset, the Israeli Parliament. In the Knesset, she formed an Inquiry Committee for the Location and Restitution of the Assets of Holocaust Victims and initiated a law to create a State Company for the restitution of these assets. She served as Deputy- Speaker of the Knesset, and was a member of the Constitution and Law Committee, the Knesset Committee and the Immigration, Absorption and Diaspora Committee. She has been awarded the Palmes Academiques and subsequently La Legion d'honneur by the French Government; the Cavaliere dell'ordine della Repubblica by the Italian Government and the National Order for Merit with the rank of High Officer by the Rumanian Government, and she has received the highest decoration given by Portugal, the Gran Cruz do Infante Dom Henrique.

3. Yossie Hollander, Chairman, Fuel Freedom Foundation

Yossie Hollander is the co-founder of Fuel Freedom Foundation (FFF), a nonprofit dedicated to opening the transportation fuels market to competition from cheaper, cleaner, healthier American made alternative fuels. It aims to end the US oil imports and launch a trillion dollar private investment that will grow the US economy over the next two decades. Hollander, who lives in Irvine, California, is a son of Holocaust survivors and the founder and major funder of Echoes and Reflections, the largest Holocaust education program in the U.S. He is on the board of USC Shoah Foundation, which is dedicated to archiving stories from Holocaust witnesses and survivors. Hollander serves on many other boards, including the executive board and management committee of the Weizmann Institute of Science, where he launched a renewable energy initiative. He and his wife Dana founded the Dana and Yossie Hollander Center for Structural Proteomics, a world leader in the field. He also serves as the chairman of the Weizmann tenure committee. Hollander has funded research at many universities, including Cornell, MIT, UC Berkeley, the University of Chicago, and Carnegie Mellon University. He is a member of the Board of Councilors at the University of Southern California's Dornsife College. Hollander received an honorary doctorate from the Weizmann Institute in 2010.

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel Pool 10a: Additional Background, from Yad Vashem
Date: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 7:15:36 AM

From: "Memoli, Michael" <michael.memoli@latimes.com>

Date: May 23, 2017 at 12:48:45 PM GMT+3

Subject: Travel Pool 10a: Additional Background, from Yad Vashem

Press materials from Yad Vashem describe what POTUS will participate in as a memorial ceremony.

More from them:

"Yad Vashem Chairman Avner Shalev will accompany President Donald J. Trump and First Lady Melania Trump while at Yad Vashem. Israel's Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and his wife Mrs. Sara Netanyahu, and Chairman of the Yad Vashem Council Rabbi Israel Meir Lau will also join the President during his visit to Yad Vashem.

While the President's visit to Israel is brief, he has chosen to commemorate the six million Jewish victims of the Holocaust by participating in a memorial ceremony in the Hall of Remembrance. During the ceremony, the President will rekindle the eternal flame and lay a wreath on a stone slab under which ashes from extermination camps are buried. El Maleh Rachamim, a Jewish prayer for the souls of the martyrs' of the Holocaust, will be sung by a cantor.

President Trump will be invited to sign the Yad Vashem guest book and Yad Vashem Chairman Avner Shalev will present the President with a token of remembrance, an exact replica of the original Holocaust-era personal album that belonged to Ester Goldstein who was murdered during the Holocaust at the age of 16. Ester's sister Margot Herschenbaum, the sole survivor of her immediate family, will attend the Presidential event at Yad Vashem. Ms. Colette Avital, Chairperson of the Center Organization of Holocaust Survivors in Israel will be present at the ceremony at Yad Vashem.

The President will be presented with a replica of a Holocaust-era personal album belonging to Ester Goldstein, murdered during the Holocaust at age 16.

About the Token of Remembrance:

Don't Forget Me: Ester Goldstein's Personal Album

“Love life, and don’t be afraid of death. Believe in God and a better future”

Written in the album by Ester’s classmate Bella Lassore. Bella was deported to Auschwitz in 1943 where she was murdered. The personal album of Ester Goldstein is one of hundreds of thousands of personal items preserved for posterity in the Yad Vashem Archives.

The album is comprised of messages of hope and everlasting friendship inscribed by Ester’s family and friends. Some of the pages are embellished with optimistic and innocent illustrations, while others include photographs of those dearest to her.

The dedications in the album express familial devotion and steadfast connection to Judaism. The first entry is from 1937, when Ester was eleven years old, and the final one is dated September 16, 1942, about a month before Ester was deported to Riga (Latvia) and subsequently murdered.

This personal album is one of several included in an online exhibition available via Yad Vashem's website in four languages: English, Hebrew, Spanish and German.

Approximately 1.5 million Jewish children were murdered in the Holocaust, most of them leaving behind almost no trace – a handful of photographs and some personal belongings. This precious album offers insight into the life of a young girl that was cut brutally short.

Background on Margot Herschenbaum:

Margot Herschenbaum, was born in 1929. In 1939, she was sent to Australia as part of the Kindertransport (organized rescue efforts of Jewish children between 1938-1940) and is the sole survivor of her immediate family. In 1999 Margot filled out a Page of Testimony commemorating her family murdered in the Holocaust.

Background on Ester Goldstein:

Ester was born in 1926 in Joachimstrasse, Berlin to Blima and David Goldstein, who moved to Germany from Poland two years before she was born. She had a sister Margot and a brother Heinz (Haim). In 1938, in the shadow of the increasing Nazi persecution of Jews, the family unsuccessfully attempted to flee Germany. However Ester was deported on 26 October 1942 to Riga and subsequently murdered at the age of 16. Details of this transport can be found on Yad Vashem's online database documenting the deportation of Jews from western European countries to ghettos, concentration and death camps in the east.

After liberation, Ester's cousin David Werner returned to the Goldstein family home in Berlin, where a neighbor gave him a box of papers that she had kept safe throughout the war. Among the papers was the album, which he gave to Margot, and in 2006, Margot donated it to Yad Vashem for safekeeping.

"Do not forget me" was a dedication written in the album by Ester's classmate Sonja Strenger who was deported to Auschwitz in 1943.

About Yad Vashem:

Yad Vashem, the World Holocaust Remembrance Center, was established by the Israeli Parliament in 1953. Located in Jerusalem, Yad Vashem is dedicated to Holocaust remembrance, documentation, research and education. Through its International School for Holocaust Studies, International Institute for Holocaust Research, Archives, Museums and Library, Yad Vashem has become the global center for gathering and disseminating information about the Holocaust and seeks to meaningfully impart the legacy of the Shoah for generations to come.

The Hall of Remembrance was the first commemoration site established at Yad Vashem on the Mount of Remembrance. Its walls are made of basalt boulders brought from the area surrounding the Sea of Galilee, and its angular roof gives it a tent-like shape. Engraved on the mosaic floor are the names of 22 Nazi murder sites, symbolic of the hundreds of extermination and concentration camps, transit camps and killing sites that existed throughout Europe. The Eternal Flame continuously illuminates the Hall, its smoke exiting the building through an opening at the highest point of the ceiling. Before it stands a stone crypt containing the ashes of Holocaust victims.

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool 12/Louisiana greeting
Date: Saturday, September 02, 2017 5:13:09 PM

From: "Gillman, Todd" <tgillman@dallasnews.com>

Date: September 2, 2017 at 4:05:30 PM CDT

Subject: Travel pool 12/Louisiana greeting

Trumps deplaned at 3:57. The governor and his wife were first and the president, first lady and cabinet members were still working their way down the line.as pool headed to vans. Blazing sun hid behind a cloud as we boarded.

Greeters, per White House and confirmed by local pooler from The Advocate.

Governor John Bel Edwards and wife Donna
Senator Bill Cassidy
Senator John Kennedy
Representative Clay Higgins, 3rd Congressional District
Representative Mike Johnson, 4th Congressional District
Representative Ralph Abraham, 5th Congressional District
Representative Garrett Graves, 6th Congressional District

Also lieutenant governor Billy Nungesser and state attorney general Jeff Landry.

Todd J. Gillman
Washington Bureau Chief
Dallas Morning News
202.661.8421
202.441.6840 mobile
tgillman@dallasnews.com
@toddgillman

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel Pool 18: LZ
Date: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 8:40:16 AM

From: "Memoli, Michael" <michael.memoli@latimes.com>

Date: May 23, 2017 at 3:30:53 PM GMT+3

Subject: Travel Pool 18: LZ

Motorcade arrived at the Jerusalem landing zone at 3:28 on. Boarding helos shortly for the hop to Tel Aviv.

Mike Memoli
202-374-6505
@mikememoli

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report #1 -- 11/9/17 -- motorcade arrival/welcome ceremony
Date: Wednesday, November 08, 2017 8:44:09 PM
Attachments: Image.png

From: Andrew Restuccia <arestuccia@politico.com>
Date: November 9, 2017 at 9:35:56 AM GMT+8
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Travel pool report #1 -- 11/9/17 -- motorcade arrival/welcome ceremony

Good morning from Beijing, where POTUS arrived at the Great Hall of the People via motorcade for a welcoming ceremony at 9:17 am local time.

The motorcade pulled up in front of the Great Hall. POTUS, in a red tie, exited the motorcade with FLOTUS and greeted Chinese President Xi Jinping and his wife. FLOTUS is wearing a long black and white dress.

Three horn players in red uniforms played briefly when POTUS arrived. As Xi and Trump stood on a platform together, a Chinese military band played the US and Chinese national anthems while ceremonial cannon fire erupted in nearby Tiananman Square, and a line of uniformed officials in green, white and blue uniforms stood at attention.

Xi and Trump then walked side by side on a red carpet that snaked around the area in front of the Great Hall. They walked past the uniformed troops and chatted briefly. And then paused in front of the military band as it played The Stars and Stipes Forver. They then walked by a crowd of school children waving American and Chinese flags. The children jumped up and down in a coordinated display of glee.

Xi, Trump and their wives walked up the stairs entered the Great Hall at 9:34 am, followed by US and Chinese officials.

Dozens of Chinese flags line the roof of the Great Hall, which faces Tiananmen Square. At the center of the square, there's a giant, maybe 100-foot-tall red lantern filled with oversized flowers.

Among the U.S. officials standing on the stairs of the Great Hall for the ceremony: Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross, US Trade Reprmentative Robert Lighthizer, communications director Hope Hicks, staff secretary Rob Porter, press secretary Sarah Sanders, US ambassador to China Terry Branstad, chief of staff John Kelly, social media director Dan Scavino, National Security Adviser HR McMaster and senior adviser Jared Kushner.

The Great Hall is the hub of much of China's government activity. It's a massive, cavernous, angular building made of stone that abuts Tiananmen Square. The square appears to have been emptied of tourists for the occasion.

POTUS is scheduled to soon meet with Xi for a bilateral meeting. And there's a state dinner tonight.

A photo of the scene is attached.

Get Outlook for iOS

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report #1a, 11/8/17--More detail on POTUS attempted DMZ trip
Date: Tuesday, November 07, 2017 7:28:44 PM

From: Julie Davis <julie.davis@nytimes.com>
Date: November 8, 2017 at 9:13:51 AM GMT+9
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Travel pool report #1a, 11/8/17--More detail on POTUS attempted DMZ trip

First a correction: the LZ today was Yongsan Garrison, not Yongson.

Press Secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders informed your pool that White House officials were hoping the fog would clear and allow a second attempt by President Trump to land at the DMZ, but instead it got worse.

She said the President Moon Jae-in of South Korea was going to join Trump there, a "historic moment" because she believes it would have been the first time a US and South Korean president had visited the DMZ together.

"The effort shows the strong and importance of the alliance between the two countries," Sanders said.

Motorcade is back at President Trump's hotel.

Julie Hirschfeld Davis
White House Correspondent
The New York Times
(202) 257-0476 mobile

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report #2a -- 11/9/17 -- transcript
Date: Wednesday, November 08, 2017 11:01:59 PM

From: Andrew Restuccia <arestuccia@politico.com>
Date: November 9, 2017 at 11:57:31 AM GMT+8
To: "(b) (6)" <(b) (6)>
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Travel pool report #2a -- 11/9/17 -- transcript

Here's are some key quotes from Trump's remarks at the bilat:

"It's an honor to be with you and there can be no more important subject than China-US relations. We have between us -- and we have to include other countries who could come in -- we have the capacity to solve world problems for many years to come."

"Our meeting last night was absolutely terrific. Our dinner was beyond that. We had a dinner that was going to last quickly -- 20 or 25 minutes -- because I was traveling and you were so nice and you said, 'we'll just do a quick dinner.' And I think it has to last at least two hours and we enjoyed every minute of it with your beautiful wife and Melania together. Their relationship is a great one and our relationship has already proven to be a great one."

"Our meeting this morning in front of my representatives and your representatives was excellent, discussing North Korea. And I do believe there's a solution to that as you do."

"Discussing trade...knowing that the United States really has to change its policies because they've gotten so far behind on trade with China and frankly with many other countries. And I have great respect for you with that because you're representing China. But it's too bad that past administrations allowed it to get so far out of kilter. But we'll make it fair and it'll be tremendous to both of us."

"My feeling toward you is an incredibly warm one. As we said there's great chemistry and I think we're going to do tremendous things both for China and the United States. And it is a very, very great honor to be with you. Thank you very much."

"The hosting of the military parade this morning was magnificent. The world was watching. I've already had people call from all over the world. They were all watching. Nothing you can see is so beautiful."

"I just want to thank you for the warm welcome and I look forward to many years of success and friendship, working together to solve not only our problems, but world problems and problems of great danger and security. I believe we can solve almost all of them and probably all of them."

And here are Xi's remarks, courtesy of co-pooler Michael Bender.

No major news from Xi. Some highlights from the Chinese leader:

- "We reached many common understandings."
- mentioned "Korea peninsula" instead of NoKo by name, and lumped it into a group of "major international and regional issues"
- "The China-US relationship now stands at a new starting point."

full transcript (beginning got cut off):

“...extending warm welcome to President Trump on your state visit to China from yesterday afternoon to the present we have had an in depth exchange of ideas on China-US relations and important issues of shared interest. We reached many common understandings. We both believe that China-US relations are important to the well being of our two peoples and on the peace, stability and prosperity of the world. For China and the United States, cooperation is the only viable choice and win-win cooperation can take us to a better future. We agree that China-US relations have made important progress this year. We have agreed to further promote strategic guidance of summit diplomacy for bilateral relations, strengthen interactions at high and all levels, make the most of the four high-level dialogue mechanisms, expand interactions and cooperation on economy and trade (inaudible) relations, law enforcement, people to people exchange and in other areas. In-house communication and cooperation on the nuclear issue on the Korean Peninsula, Afghanistan and other major international and regional issues and work together to take China-US relations to even greater development. The China-US relationship now stands at a new starting point. China is ready to work with the United States to enhance cooperation and properly manage differences in a spirit of mutual respect and mutual benefit. This way will enable our two peoples, the region people across the world to benefit more from China-US relations. Thank you.”

Get Outlook for iOS

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report #3 / departure from Bastille Day parade
Date: Friday, July 14, 2017 6:54:55 AM

From: "Bennett, Brian" <brian.bennett@latimes.com>

Date: July 14, 2017 at 12:43:34 PM GMT+2

Subject: Travel pool report #3 / departure from Bastille Day parade

At 12:24 pm, the motorcade left the viewing stand at the Place de la Concorde and is headed for the airport for the Air Force One departure from Paris.

We are told POTUS and FLOTUS are in the limo, but we did not see them get in.

The press pool was rushed to the van while President Trump, FLOTUS, President Macron and Brigitte Macron were standing together and talking at the end of the Bastille Day parade.

The parade lasted more than two hours, during which French and American troops marched before the two leaders as well as armored personnel carriers, tanks, missile launchers and other military equipment. Dozens of military planes and helicopters flew down the Champs-Elysees and over the heads of the two presidents.

Bands played traditional French marching music. At one point a marching band spelled out the word "NICE" in front of the VIP reviewing stand. That band also played a rendition of Daft Punk's "Get Lucky."

At the conclusion of the parade, Macron issued brief remarks with Trump standing beside him. The remarks were open press.

"We have also found sure allies, friends, who came to help us," Macron said. "The United States of America are among them. That is why nothing will separate us, never. The presence today of the US President Donald Trump and his wife is the sign of a friendship that lasts through time."

The two couples then walked across the square to stand in front of large American and French flags unfurled before them.

Brian Bennett
Los Angeles Times
Cell (202)294-9860
Twitter @ByBrianBennett

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel Pool Report #5 -- POTUS departure.
Date: Saturday, May 27, 2017 10:25:35 AM

From: Michael Shear <michael.shear@nytimes.com>

Date: May 27, 2017 at 4:08:06 PM GMT+2
Subject: Travel Pool Report #5 -- POTUS departure.

Your pooler is informed by White House staff traveling with POTUS that at 4:04 pm local the motorcade has left the hotel en route the LZ for Marine One and the flight to the Sigonella.

Again, your pooler does not have eyes on POTUS but will pass along the movements from wh staff.

--

Michael D. Shear
White House Correspondent
The New York Times
michael.shear@nytimes.com
202-681-0415

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report #6
Date: Thursday, May 04, 2017 9:43:31 PM

From: Tara Palmeri <tpalmeri@politico.com>

Date: May 4, 2017 at 9:37:57 PM EDT

Subject: Travel pool report #6

President Donald Trump and Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull were seated at the same table in the center of the dining room of the Intrepid.

President Trump sat in between First lady Melania Trump and Lucy Turnbull. Prime Minister Turnbull sat to the right of his wife, Lucy Turnbull.

The event started with a trio of singers who sang the Australian anthem, followed by a color guard presentation. It was followed by the U.S. national anthem and then another color guard presentation.

Also in attendance: Rex Tillerson, Reince Priebus, former Australian Prime Minister Kevin Rudd, U.N. ambassador for Australia Gillian Bird, John Travolta and country singer Kellie Pickler.

Anthony Pratt, executive chairman of Visy industries and Pratt Industries in the U.S., took the stage to pledge an investment of $2 billion over the next decade for "high paying manufacturing jobs" in the Midwest.

Mr. Turnbull took the stage to underscore the closeness of the two countries. "We are always more assured of winning when we are fighting together," he said.

He also said the U.S. and Australia "condemn and we resist North Korea's reckless provocation."

Turnbull: "Today and together we condemn and resist the reckless provocations of North Korea. We fight together in Iraq and Afghanistan to defeat and destroy the terrorists who threaten our way of life. Today Australians and Americans stand shoulder to shoulder defending our freedoms."

Rupert Murdoch followed Turnbull to introduce Trump. He noted the significance of the President's announcement that he will visit Saudi Arabia, Israel, and the Vatican later this month.

Trump took the stage at 9pm. He thanked the Australians for fighting alongside the U.S. in Iraq and Afghanistan. He spoke about the history of the Battle of the Coral Sea.

"There's no better place to remember the impact of military readiness than this ship," Trump said.

"This week my administration reached a historic deal with Congress, to end the devastating cuts to the United States military. I don't know what they were thinking when they started cutting, and it's coming back bigly. We're ordering lots of ships, lots of jobs."

"We will add $25 billion for national defense in a short period of time."

Trump said that he had a "productive discussion" with PM Turnbull about the future of the two countries from national security to trade to immigration and enhanced economic cooperation.

"We affirmed the tremendous friendship between the US and Australia," Trump said. "The armed forces are fighting side by side to defeat ISIS and the scourge of terrorism, and we will eradicate terrorism."

For nearly a century Americans and Australians have fought together, bled together, he said.

"Our brave warriors have fought shoulder to shoulder in every major conflict together," Trump said, citing Normandy, Vietnam and the Middle East.

He said: "Our two nations were born as the rebellious children of the same parent. Americans have had no better friends than the Australians, I mean that."

Trump recounted the battle of the Coral Sea that he said formed the foundation of the strong ties that exist today.

He thanked Australia for its contributions to the conflicts in Syria, Iraq and Afghanistan. "We are profoundly grateful for Australia's contribution in Iraq and Afghanistan," he said.

"On behalf of the United States, I thank Australia tonight.. we love Australia very much."

At the end he said: "So with love for our two nations, with pride in our shared history and with faith in almighty God we renew our old friendship."

He said the U.S. and Australia have a "great, great relationship."

Other highlights from Trump's speech:

- Trump started his speech by calling Rupert Murdoch a "good friend," adding there's "only one Rupert Murdoch"

- He also thanked pro Australian golfer Greg Norman, who he said convinced him that he could never be a great golfer.

- Mr. Trump chided Australian billionaire Anthony Pratt, who pledged $2 billion over 10 years to invest in U.S. jobs, particularly in the Midwest: "That's peanuts for Anthony. You can do better," Mr. Trump said.

" On the January phone call between Turnbull and Trump, he said: "We really didn't have a rough phone call. Everyone is talking about this phone call.... Now the record is straight, all of those people there," Trump said pointing to the media in the back of the room. "It got a little bit testy but that's okay. We have a very good relationship and i've very proud to it."

- Trump said he's been donating to the organization hosting the dinner, the American Australian Association, for years because Rupert Murdoch would pester him for money. He joked that he never really understood what he was giving to. "Now I realize it was money well spent," he said.

TARA PALMERI | POLITICO | White House Reporter | M: (973) 519-5725 | O: (703) 647-8569 | tpalmeri@politico.com

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report #7 -- 11/9/17 -- POTUS at dinner
Date: Thursday, November 09, 2017 7:04:13 AM

From: Andrew Restuccia <arestuccia@politico.com>
Date: November 9, 2017 at 6:48:05 PM GMT+8
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Travel pool report #7 -- 11/9/17 -- POTUS at dinner

POTUS, wearing a blue tie, entered the hall at 6:16 pm along with FLOTUS, who was wearing a long black printed dress. The state dinner is taking place in a room called Golden Hall -- an appropriate location for a US president who is fond of gold motifs.

Soon after entering, the hosts played a video with clips of Xi Jinping's April trip to Mar-a-Lago to visit POTUS, as well as a highlight reel of Trump's stops this week in Beijing. The montage included what looked to be a cell phone video of Ivanka Trump and Jared Kushner's daughter Arabella singing and reciting poetry in Mandarin during the Mar-a-Lago visit. It also later included a short clip of a video of Arabella speaking in Mandarin that POTUS brought to Beijing this week as a gift to Xi.

Xi and his wife were reportedly delighted by Arabella's performances.

Xi then walked onto a stage at the front of the room to deliver a toast. He spoke in Mandarin, but the remarks were translated in the room as he spoke.

"China and the United States, once involved in animosity, have grown into a community with our interests converging," Xi said, per the translation.

"To the prosperity of China and the United States and the well-being of our people," Xi said in toasting POTUS.

POTUS then gave a toast of his own: "Your nation is a testament to thousands of years of living history."

"Though we come from different places and far away lands, there is much that binds the east and the west," he said saying that people in both countries have overcome adversity to build great nations.

Mentioning his granddaughter Arabella, Trumo added, "Our children so often remind us of our shared humanity and true dignity."

"To the people of your country and to a friendship that will only grow stronger and stronger in the many years to come," Trump said at the end of his toast.

The screens in the room then played the whole video of Arabella reciting poetry and singing that Trump brought to China this week as a gift for Xi.

The pool was then ushered out of the room at 6:47 pm.

Get Outlook for iOS

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel Pool Report #10- Blue House
Date: Tuesday, November 07, 2017 2:09:13 AM

From: Jerome CARTILLIER [mailto:Jerome.CARTILLIER@afp.com]

Sent: Tuesday, November 7, 2017 3:40 PM

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Travel Pool Report #10- Blue House

After a 30 minute ride, Marine One landed at Yongsan Base.

On our way to the Blue House, onlookers could be seen waving the flags of the two countries but there were also protesters chanting and carrying signs "No war".

The pool motorcade was apparently separated from the presidential motorcade. Pool has asked for explanation to no avail at this stage.

Pool was then escorted inside the Blue House and could only see the arrival on a television screen.

Under a grey sky, POTUS and FLOTUS were greeted by president Moon Jae-In and his wife Kim Jung Sook.

The two leaders stood at attention for the national anthems.

They the walked side by side on a red carpet for a review of troops before greeting US and South Korean delegations.

US delegation included, among others, Rex Tillerson, H.R. McMaster, Jared Kushner, Steven Miller and Dina Powell.o

The two leaders then entered the main building. POTUS and FLOTUS sat down one after the other to sign the guest book.

The two presidents and their spouses then stood for a family picture.

"President Moon, this is such a great honor. Thank you", wrote POTUS.

Jerome Cartillier
AFP White House Correspondent
Cell : 202-374-9164
@jcartillier

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report #13 - Handshake
Date: Sunday, November 12, 2017 7:14:20 AM

From: Jerome CARTILLIER <Jerome.CARTILLIER@afp.com>
Date: November 12, 2017 at 8:12:30 PM GMT+8
Subject: Travel pool report #13 - Handshake

After a five minute drive from POTUS hotel, motorcade arrived at the Convention center for the ASEAN gala dinner.

At 8:02pm, POTUS wearing - like all the other leaders - Philippine formal attire, the Barong Tagalog (long-sleeve white shirt), walked on the red carpet.

He exchanged a lingering handshake and a few words with president Duterte's wife, who smiled, and then shook president Duterte's hand.

The three then turned to the photographers and as he was leaving, POTUS shook their hands again and smiled.

Everybody then stood for the family photo, POTUS standing to president Duterte's right.

Jerome Cartillier
AFP White House Correspondent
Cell : 202-374-9164
@jcartillier

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report #13
Date: Monday, September 18, 2017 4:25:38 PM

From: Anita Kumar <akumar@mcclatchydc.com>

Date: September 18, 2017 at 4:20:24 PM EDT

Subject: Travel pool report #13

New York
Sept 18, 2017

A few more tidbits from the Trump-Macron meeting:

The two leaders called each other by first name.

POTUS said he hopes a July 4th parade to show off US military strength could happen this year (which your pooler assumed means 2018) but it might take another year.

After POTUS spoke about the visit to France for Bastille Day, Macron said in English: "Our people in France were very proud to have you and your wife, Melania, in Paris for Bastille Day."

Here are a couple other quotes from POTUS:

Of Macron's governing in France, he said: "He's doing what has to be done." Later, near the end of the spray, he said "I am proud to say we are very very very good friends with France."

POTU did not appear to answer any shouted questions.

Anita Kumar
White House Correspondent
McClatchy Newspapers
202-383-6017 (office)
202-304-9868 (cell)
akumar@mcclatchydc.com
Twitter: @anitakumar01

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report #14 - Correction
Date: Sunday, November 12, 2017 8:00:19 AM

From: Jerome CARTILLIER <Jerome.CARTILLIER@afp.com>
Date: November 12, 2017 at 8:58:45 PM GMT+8
Subject: Travel pool report #14 - Correction

Philippine president Rodrigo Duterte was welcoming guests with his partner, Honeylet Avancena, who local media refer to as his “common-law” wife

Jerome Cartillier
AFP White House Correspondent
Cell : 202-374-9164
@jcartillier

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report 2 - SHS briefing
Date: Wednesday, August 30, 2017 6:22:36 AM

From: Andrew BEATTY <Andrew.BEATTY@afp.com>
Date: August 29, 2017 at 11:15:52 AM CDT
Subject: Travel pool report 2 - SHS briefing

Thirty minutes into the flight, after an unusually turbulent climb out of the greater Washington area, Sarah Huckabee Sanders came back to the press cabin to flesh out plans for the day.

Sanders indicated the president's schedule was still in flux because of the continued poor weather in Texas.

"Due to the weather and all of the circumstances it's a little bit more fluid today than a normal travel day," she said.

"The president wants to be very cautious about making sure that any activity doesn't disrupt any of the recovery efforts that are still ongoing, which is the reason for the locations we are going here today."

"As of right now, I don't know that we will be able to get to some of the really damaged areas.

Sanders said the WH began focusing on Harvey "early last week" and added that POTUS was joined aboard by secretaries Price and Carson, Administrator Linda McMahon and acting Secretary of Homeland Security Elaine Duke.

Also on the plane, from the White House, we Chief of Staff John Kelly, deputy chiefs Joe Hagin and Kirstjen Nielsen and senior advisors Dina Powell and Marc Short.

Further to pool report 1, James Rivera, who manages the SBA's disaster assistance unit, is indeed aboard. "SBA plays a really, really big role" in terms of individual and small businesses loans Sanders said.

She described the two stops -- Corpus Christi and Austin -- as being somewhat divided between state and local responses.

"Corpus Christi is a little bit more focused on the local response and recovery, Austin will be heavier on the state efforts," she said.

On the ground in Corpus Christi the plan is for POTUS to meet Governor Greg Abbott and his wife and FEMA administrator William 'Brock' Long who are on the ground.

"There will be a big group kinda briefing, local officials there in Corpus Christi and Senators Cruz and Cornyn are expected to join there and be with us through a bit of the day."

"The first part of the trip and one of the main, primary reasons for secretaries Price, Secretary Carson and Administrator McMahon (being here), each of their agencies will play a really big role particularly in the recovery efforts going forward and today they will be with their counterparts of the governor's cabinet, so that they can really come back and make sure that we are all in (inaudible) to offer federal assistance and lay the foundation for what we know is going to be a long recovery effort."

"Those are agencies that will have a pretty heavy lift in this process and so we want to make sure that they have the opportunity to meet face-to-face with, with not just the state, but also the local authorities."

"That's a big part of what today will be about, is the coordination between local, state and federal officials, that will lay the groundwork for the recovery efforts that are going to be going on for quite some time."

POTUS will also see several US and state Reps and mayors, although not the mayor of Houston, Sylvester Turner.

She said there may be some additional events that are not currently on the schedule, but she'll keep us posted on that.

She confirmed the intention is to go back on Saturday, this time "to a different part of the state."

Asked if we would fly over Houston, Sanders said she did not know. We requested to be with POTUS if and when that happens.

But there were no plans to helo while in Texas, because of the scattered showers.

She confirmed that a gaggle would come later, on the way back from Austin to D.C.

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report 3 - WB/Ivanka Women Entrepreneurship
Date: Saturday, July 08, 2017 4:52:51 AM

From: Andrew BEATTY <Andrew.BEATTY@afp.com>
Date: July 8, 2017 at 10:45:40 AM GMT+2
Subject: Fwd: Travel pool report 3 - WB/Ivanka Women Entrepreneurship

At around 9:20 the pool was led into the Messe's large "Retreat" meeting room, where a symposium on women and entrepreneurship was already underway.

Beyond an audience of about 100, the president's daughter and advisor Ivanka Trump was one of eight discussants on stage.

Ivanka was sitting between IMF director Christine Lagarde and World Bank president Jim Yong Kim, who yesterday was seen chatting with POTUS during the family photo.

As the discussion progressed PMs Turnbull and Trudeau also stopped by, both wearing very sharp blue suits, as did Mrs Turnbull (the Australian PM's wife) and the UN Secretary General, who made some remarks.

Ivanka spoke briefly about the administration's focus on skills.

At 9:52 the president walked in, trailed by Dina Powell and various leaders including Merkel, May and Abe. The president stood in the back row for a family photo, with Ivanka front and center.

The leaders then sat down, with POTUS sat between Merkel and Abe.

The German Chancellor spoke first, thanking Ivanka among others, then Trudeau spoke. The Canadian PM called for concrete commitments to empower women "if we want to change the world we have to invest in women."

As he spoke, POTUS and Merkel chatted briefly.

The president then rose for remarks, saying "we have a great neighbor in Canada and Justin is doing a spectacular job. "

"Everybody loves him and they love him for a reason, so congratulations," he said to giggles from the audience and some leaders.

"I want to thank also chancellor Merkel for what she's done here. It's been really incredible the way things have been handled and nothing is easy," he said.

POTUS then noted the protests of "quite a few people... that seem to follow your G20s around. You have been amazing."

POTUS then turned to the subject in hand (more below) saying the World Bank's fund for spurring women entrepreneurs would transform "millions and millions of lives."

He pledged $50 million from the US.

POTUS said women in developing and developed countries present "tremendous promise for economic growth and prosperity."

Among those looking on was aide Stephen Miller, who was stood at the back of the room.

"When more women participate in the work force, which by the way will be a lot more competition for people like me prior to government... the world economy will grow and millions of people will be lifted out of poverty."

POTUS continued in that vein, before his thoughts turned to Ivanka.

"I'm very proud of my daughter Ivanka, always have been from day one, I have to tell you that."

"If she weren't my daughter it would be so much easier for her" he said to some slightly nervous laughter. "It might be the only bad thing going for her."

He then praised World Bank president "my friend, ah Kim, great guy, really is."

"I might have even appointed him, but I didn't, he said to laughs.

The pool was led out and held for a while while the plenary took place (see co-pooler's report).

At 10:42 we are waiting to go into the Jokowi bilateral meeting.

Some background from a WH official:

At the G20 leaders' summit, President Donald J. Trump will announce the United States' intent to contribute $50 million (the highest donor level) to the new World Bank Group Facility for Women Entrepreneurship, the innovative new facility that aims to advance women's entrepreneurship and help women in developing countries gain increased access to the finance, markets, and networks necessary to start and grow a business. The United States initiated the idea for the facility and will serve as a founding member along with other donor countries. The President will make the announcement at an event with World Bank Group President Jim Yong Kim, Chancellor Angela Merkel and other world leaders.

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel pool report 9 - motorcade and lift
Date: Saturday, July 08, 2017 12:09:59 PM

From: Andrew BEATTY <Andrew.BEATTY@afp.com>

Date: July 8, 2017 at 6:06:12 PM GMT+2
Subject: Travel pool report 9 - motorcade and lift

At 17:17 the motorcade sped away from the Hamburg Messe, whose blue carpets and modernist chairs have been home for the last two/three days.

We passed a group of people waving and holding Russian flags (Putin just left ahead of us) and plenty of riot cops.

We sped around the lake there were some onlookers who waved from behind the barricades.

At 17:21 the motorcade pulled to a stop, there was a fair bit of confusion, with some people running from the vehicles in front. It turned out we were already at the landing zone.

Your pool moved toward the LZ proper as Marine One took off, we stopped and sheltered from the wash behind a white van but were urgently moved out of the way by German police. That is when we realized the van was a sniper position and we were standing right in front of the sights of a marksman.

At 17:30 another helo landed. Your poolers, now caked in dust, watched as Cohn, Powell, and S. Miller boarded.

At 17:37 another helo provided a fresh pelting with debris.

We landed at the airport about six minutes later, by Air Force One, ahead of POTUS.

At 17:52 Marine One landed, a few moments later the President and First Lady walked and greeted six individuals waiting at the bottoms of the steps.

The first couple then climbed up the steps, gave a quick wave and entered Air Force One.

At 18:05 we are rolling. Next stop, Joint Base Andrews.

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel Pool Report No. 7 Trump comments at church
Date: Saturday, September 02, 2017 3:16:47 PM

From: "Rucker, Philip" <Philip.Rucker@washpost.com>

Date: September 2, 2017 at 2:11:12 PM CDT

Subject: Travel Pool Report No. 7 Trump comments at church

President Trump delivered about five minutes of remarks inside First Church of Pearland in the Houston suburb of Pearland. (Color from the visit to the church is forthcoming from Todd.)

Texas Gov. Greg Abbott introduced Trump, who spoke extemporaneously to volunteers and storm victims who had gathered at the church.

Trump began by praising Abbott: "I want to congratulate the governor. I want to congratulate everybody that's worked so hard. It's been an incredible five days, six days. It seems like it's been much longer than that, but actually it's going so well that it's going fast, in a certain sense."

Trump highlighted National Day of Prayer tomorrow. He said, "So many of you are faith based and I want to just tell you that tomorrow we have national prayer day." Trump added, "Tomorrow's a very big day, so go to your church and pray and enjoy the day."

Trump then went through praising dignitaries on stage with him, starting with Sen. Ted Cruz. Trump thanked Cruz "for working so hard."

Trump said, in reference to Cruz, "We have to push that stuff through, but we will. We signed some very big authorizations last night, and we'll get it through."

Then Trump motioned for his FEMA director: "Brock, come here a minute, Brock. What a job you've done!"

Trump commented, "The water's disappearing. We knew we have a long way to go, but the water's disappearing. And you look at the neighborhoods and you see it's – we just saw it through there. Two days ago, even yesterday, they had water. Today it's all swept up and cleaned up. We've got a lot of hard-working people, I'll tell you that."

Trump praised Secretary Ben Carson and then Secretary DeVos, noting that she just had "a full-page story today in the Wall Street Journal."

Trump again commended Abbott as well as his wife, the first lady and, Trump said, "The real boss of the family."

Trump said, "They have worked so hard and the coordination between the federal and the state and the local has been terrific, and we're going to keep it going that way. If anything, I don't know if it gets better, but we're going to try to make it better."

He added, "The cameras are blazing and I have to say it, you have a great, great governor."

Trump spoke at length about the reforms at the VA under Secretary Shulkin before returning to the subject of Harvey and again congratulating Abbott.

Trump closed by talking about the recovery: "It's a long term. We're talking about, they say 2 years, 3 years, but I think that because this is Texas you'll prob do it in 6 months!" At that, the people in the church burst into loud cheers.

Philip Rucker

The Washington Post

White House Bureau Chief

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel Report #11
Date: Monday, May 22, 2017 10:26:26 AM

From: Annie Karni <akarni@politico.com>

Date: May 22, 2017 at 5:06:00 PM GMT+3

Subject: Travel Report #11

Travel Report # 11:

POTUS and FLOTUS arrived at the plaza in front of the Western Wall at 4:19 p.m., after finishing a closed-press tour of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, accompanied by Jared Kushner and Ivanka Trump.

At the Wall, the holiest prayer site in Judaism, POTUS donned a black yarmulke. He and FLOTUS were accompanied by Ivanka and Jared, and greeted by the Rabbi of the Western Wall, Shmuel Rabinovich, and another rabbi, whose ID was not totally clear (it is likely the director general of the Western Wall Heritage Foundation, Mordechai Eliav, but not confirmed). Rabinovich and the other rabbi explained to Trump the history of the Wall, and it's importance in Judaism, according to the White House (we couldn't hear).

The Trump group then divided by gender. On the men's side of the Wall, we spotted Gary Cohn taking pictures with his phone, David Friedman, Jason Greenblatt, and Sean Spicer.

On the women's side, Hope Hicks and Dina Powell sat in two rows of plastic chairs, set at the back end of the plaza.

On the men's side, only Trump and Kushner approached the Wall, accompanied by the two rabbis. The rest sat in the plastic chairs.

As female poolers, Carol and I were technically on the female side of the Wall, separated from the male press pool by a small, low barrier that we could look over. We couldn't hear anything of what was happening, but the rabbis spoke quietly to Trump as they approached the Wall.

At 4:23 p.m., Trump went up to the wall alone -- even Kushner hung back. Trump touched the Wall with his right hand and stared straight ahead, swaying back and forth slightly. After a long, reflective pause in that position, he stuck his note into a crack in the wall (Spicer said he would get back to us about what the note said). Trump then took a deep sigh, turned toward the cameras and media, and seemed to mouth "thank you" at the press riser. He then was rejoined by the rabbis, who presented him with an oversized, gold-leafed book. We are trying to find out the significance of the book.

Kushner hung back, out of the photo-op.

After the photo, Trump signed another book, and the group left just after 4:25 p.m.

And here's a feed from Carol, who watched the woman's side:

Mrs. Trump walked with three women and Ivanka Trump. One of the women was Rabbi Rabinovich's wife, Yael. Mrs. Trump was listening to one of the women, who appeared to be telling her about the wall. They walked - both Mrs. Trump and Ms. Trump in very high heels - to the book placed on the podium in front of the women's side of the wall.

Mrs. Trump listened as she walked and the woman was telling her things your pooler could only hear snippets like "amazing" and "for your family and for the world."

After a few minutes standing and listening, Mrs. Trump approached the wall. She placed a folded up piece of paper in a crack (pool has asked for info about what it said), and then she placed her hand on the wall, standing for a few moments.

Ivanka Trump then approached the wall. Your pooler did not see her place a paper in it. She stood with her hand on the wall, appearing to pray. She stood much longer than Mrs. Trump. The women left after that. Mrs. Trump joined her husband where they had separated earlier.

We are now holding in a beautiful room at the King David hotel, with a balcony overlooking the old city.

Annie Karni

White House Reporter

POLITICO

718-915-3177

@AnnieKarni

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: Daly, Matthew
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Travel
Date: Thursday, November 16, 2017 4:09:55 PM

Do you have comment on Kendall memo re travel?
I have response from David Bernhardt.

Also, letter refers to Lolita Zinke. Does she prefer Lola or Lolita on the wire?

Matthew Daly
Congressional Reporter
The Associated Press
202-641-9481 direct
202-365-2993 cell
Follow me on Twitter: @MatthewDalyWDC

The information contained in this communication is intended for the use of the designated recipients named above. If the reader of this communication is not the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that you have received this communication in error, and that any review, dissemination, distribution or copying of this communication is strictly prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify The Associated Press immediately by telephone at +1-212-621-1500 and delete this email. Thank you.

From: Freddy Monares
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Troy Downing Endorsement?
Date: Friday, August 25, 2017 4:29:02 PM

Hi Heather,

My name is Freddy Monares and I am the state and county government reporter for the Bozeman Daily Chronicle.

I saw two tweets sent out by Lola Zinke, and I was just wondering if Ryan was endorsing Downing for the Senate run in 2018? I'm aware that they were friends prior to Downing's announcement, but I just saw the tweets and was curious if they were an endorsement?

Thank you.

Freddy Monares | State and County Government Reporter

Bozeman Daily Chronicle: empowering the community

P.O. Box 1190 | Bozeman, MT 59718 | 406.582.2630

www.bozemandailychronicle.com

Like us on Facebook at www.facebook.com/dailychronicle

Follow us on Twitter @bozchron

Upcoming Speaking Engagements for Secretary Ryan Zinke (Strategic Calendar)

September 10, 2017

EVENT: Flight 93 Soundbreaking for “Tower of Voices”

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Shanksville, PA

NOTES: 3 minute remarks, keynote speech is September 11th VPOTUS (Secretary introducing him for 3 minutes there as well)

TYPE: Formal, but brief enough for notecard

AUDIENCE: General public

PRESS: Open

September 13, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation Annual Banquet -- VIP Reception and Banquet

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Dovetails with broader push for sportsmen engagement

TYPE: Secretary likely doesn't need formal remarks here, given familiarity with the issues and the audience; “5-10 minutes of remarks about his passion for the outdoors and highlight one or two top priorities he's focusing on as Secretary.”

AUDIENCE: Foundation VIPs and reception guests

PRESS: Closed

September 20, 2017

EVENT: Wonders of Wildlife Museum and Aquarium at the Bass Pro HQ -- Gala Dinner Event

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Springfield, MO

NOTES: Event staff sent over detailed information, will sort through prior to drafting remarks

TYPE: Informal remarks on conservation, appreciation of the outdoors/wildlife, likely one notecard is fine

AUDIENCE: Conservation leaders

PRESS: Closed

September 22, 2017

EVENT: NRA Women's Leadership Forum Summit

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Irving, TX

NOTES: Secretary could talk about strong women in his personal life (mother, wife, daughter) or professional life (military, political staff, Cabinet/Congressional colleagues). Big theme of NRA Women's push recently has been safety for females – women are safer when allowed to conceal carry.

TYPE: Formal, keynote remarks – opportunity to tell stories here

AUDIENCE: NRA forum participants, likely heavy female demographic
PRESS: Closed

September 25, 2017

EVENT: National Stone Sand and Gravel Association Legislative and Policy Forum

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Seems like a niche topic that may require specific remarks – will need to coordinate here with OCL. Website notes “Waters of the U.S. rule,” “MSHA’s workplace exams rule,” and “long term highway funding” as topics to be discussed over the forum, which runs 4 days all told. This one is likely worth a call to Association POC.

TYPE: Formal, 10 minute remarks on aggregates production and “ESA” issues – flagging for prebrief on this unless Secretary is particularly well-read here, Q&A is included

AUDIENCE: Industry folks and other forum attendees

PRESS: Likely industry press

September 26, 2017

EVENT: Jefferson Island Club Citizen of the Year Award

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Secretary is being honored as Citizen of the Year; it’s for “legislators who have distinguished themselves for their outstanding leadership, dedication to public service, and contributions in the spirit of America’s founding fathers.”

TYPE: Informal remarks, will reach out to find out more about the event

AUDIENCE: Jefferson Island Club members

PRESS: Closed

October 11, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Coal Caucus

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: U.S. recently announced first-ever coal export to Ukraine, WSJ piece on “Coal Makes a Comeback” has good nuggets as well. Secretary was a member of the Caucus. Blake Deeley running point on this from OCL, finding out if we want to put in an “ask” or “call to action.”

TYPE: Informal, brief remarks at a roundtable

AUDIENCE: Members of Congress and their staff

PRESS: Closed

November 9, 2017

EVENT: America First Energy Conference (Heartland Institute)

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Houston, TX

NOTES: Organization appears very pro-administration, focused on deregulation

TYPE: Formal remarks, possibly good to write them out given specificity of deregulation accomplishments and opportunity to get back on energy as hunting season winds down

AUDIENCE: Conference attendees (energy industry and policy folks)

PRESS: Presumably closed, will check

MISC. FLAGGING: Upcoming Deputy Secretary speech on hunting, upcoming Secretary speech on energy (Heritage Foundation), upcoming Vincent DeVito speech on tech (Oceans 17)

Upcoming Speaking Engagements for Secretary Ryan Zinke (Strategic Calendar)

September 13, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation Annual Banquet -- VIP Reception and Banquet

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Dovetails with broader push for sportsmen engagement, remarks written

TYPE: Secretary likely doesn't need formal remarks here, given familiarity with the issues and the audience; "5-10 minutes of remarks about his passion for the outdoors and highlight one or two top priorities he's focusing on as Secretary."

AUDIENCE: Foundation VIPs and reception guests

PRESS: Closed

September 20, 2017

EVENT: Wonders of Wildlife Museum and Aquarium at the Bass Pro HQ -- Gala Dinner Event

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Springfield, MO

NOTES: Event staff sent over detailed information, will sort through prior to drafting remarks

TYPE: Informal remarks on conservation, appreciation of the outdoors/wildlife, likely one notecard is fine

AUDIENCE: Conservation leaders

PRESS: Closed

September 22, 2017

EVENT: NRA Women's Leadership Forum Summit

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Irving, TX

NOTES: Secretary could talk about strong women in his personal life (grandmother, wife, daughter). Big theme of NRA is how women are "backbone" of organization.

TYPE: Formal, keynote remarks – opportunity to tell stories here

AUDIENCE: NRA forum participants, likely heavy female demographic

PRESS: Closed

September 25, 2017

EVENT: National Stone Sand and Gravel Association Legislative and Policy Forum

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Seems like a niche topic that may require specific remarks – will need to coordinate here with OCL. Scheduling notes highlight Endangered Species Act policy speech.

TYPE: Formal, 10 minute remarks on ESA issues – flagging for prebrief on this unless Secretary is particularly well-read here, Q&A is included.

AUDIENCE: Industry folks and other forum attendees

PRESS: Likely industry press

EVENT: National Petroleum Council Meeting

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Secretary Perry from Energy will also be there, and the invitation discusses inter-agency collaboration and the Trump Administration's commitment to development. This could be a good place to preview/work through the Heritage speech, which is teed up to be a major policy address on energy.

TYPE: The invitation asks, in regard to the remarks, for the message of “a coordinated Administration working together to address energy issues. Such would be a continuation of the spirit displayed at the June 29 Energy Week event at the Department of Energy when you joined Secretary Perry, the President, Vice President, and other Administration officials.”

AUDIENCE: Members of the National Petroleum Council

PRESS: Open

September 26, 2017

EVENT: Jefferson Island Club Citizen of the Year Award

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Secretary is being honored as Citizen of the Year; it's for “legislators who have distinguished themselves for their outstanding leadership, dedication to public service, and contributions in the spirit of America's founding fathers.”

TYPE: Informal remarks, will reach out to find out more about the event

AUDIENCE: Jefferson Island Club members

PRESS: Closed

September 29, 2017

EVENT: Heritage Foundation Energy Speech

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: Meeting with Vincent DeVito, who's been tasked with typing up the first draft of the remarks

TYPE: Formal remarks, policy speech

AUDIENCE: Heritage Foundation

PRESS: Likely closed

October 11, 2017

EVENT: Congressional Coal Caucus

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Washington, D.C.

NOTES: U.S. recently announced first-ever coal export to Ukraine, WSJ piece on “Coal Makes a Comeback” has good nuggets as well. Secretary was a member of the Caucus. Blake Deeley running point on this from OCL, finding out if we want to put in an “ask” or “call to action.”

TYPE: Informal, brief remarks at a roundtable

AUDIENCE: Members of Congress and their staff

PRESS: Closed

November 9, 2017

EVENT: America First Energy Conference (Heartland Institute)

PRINCIPAL SPEAKING: Secretary Ryan Zinke

LOCATION: Houston, TX

NOTES: Organization appears very pro-administration, focused on deregulation

TYPE: Formal remarks, possibly good to write them out given specificity of deregulation accomplishments and opportunity to get back on energy as hunting season winds down

AUDIENCE: Conference attendees (energy industry and policy folks)

PRESS: Presumably closed, will check

MISC. FLAGGING: Upcoming Vincent DeVito speech on tech at Oceans 17, on 09/20

From: Mark Asmussen
To: Caroline Boulton; Rusty Roddy; Raul Matias; Heathar Putnam; christine_lopez@ios.doi.gov; Greg Knee; laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov; heather_swift@ios.doi.gov; Aaron Thiele; downey_magallanes@ios.doi.gov; scott_hommel@ios.doi.gov; Mark Schuette; scott_brecht@nps.gov
Subject: Update on (b) (6)
Date: Friday, July 14, 2017 9:58:15 AM

Good morning all,

Just wanted to give everyone an update. (b) (6)

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]. We are so thankful for the support and prayers from our DOI family, and appreciate your continued prayers for healing. I apologize if I left anyone off the list, and as always safe travels!
Mark

Sent from my iPhone

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: UPDATED DAILY GUIDANCE AND PRESS SCHEDULE FOR FRIDAY, AUGUST 4, 2017
Date: Friday, August 04, 2017 11:23:08 AM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
August 4, 2017

UPDATED DAILY GUIDANCE AND PRESS SCHEDULE FOR FRIDAY, AUGUST 4, 2017

UPDATE: The President will depart the White House en route to Joint Base Andrews at 3:15PM.

In the morning, President Donald J. Trump will depart the White House en route to the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) headquarters to receive a briefing on hurricane season. The President will then return to the White House. In the afternoon, the President will have lunch with Vice President Mike Pence. The President will then speak with President Emmanuel Macron of France by telephone. Later in the afternoon, the President will depart the White House for Joint Base Andrews, en route to Morristown, New Jersey. In the evening, the President will depart Morristown, New Jersey, en route to Trump National Golf Club – Bedminster.

-
In-Town Travel Pool

Wires: AP, Reuters, Bloomberg
Wire Photos: AP, Reuters, AFP
TV Corr & Crew: CNN
Print: Tribune
Radio: Talk Media News

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

Wires: AP, Reuters, Bloomberg
Wire Photos: AP, Reuters, AFP
TV Corr & Crew: CNN
Print: AFP
Radio: NPR

EDT

9:00AM In-Town Travel Pool Call Time

9:45AM THE PRESIDENT departs the White House en route to FEMA headquarters

South Portico

In-Town Travel Pool (Final Gather 9:15AM – Palm Room Doors)

10:00AM THE PRESIDENT receives a FEMA briefing on hurricane season

FEMA Headquarters

In-Town Travel Pool Spray

10:55AM THE PRESIDENT departs FEMA headquarters en route to the White House

FEMA Headquarters

In-Town Travel Pool

12:30PM THE PRESIDENT has lunch with Vice President Mike Pence

Private Dining Room

Closed Press

1:30PM THE PRESIDENT speaks with President Emmanuel Macron of France by telephone

Private Dining Room

Closed Press

2:15PM Out-of-Town Travel Pool Call Time

Joint Base Andrews

Virginia Gate

3:15PM THE PRESIDENT departs the White House en route to Joint Base Andrews

South Lawn

Open Press

3:35PM THE PRESIDENT departs Washington, D.C. en route to Morristown, New Jersey

Joint Base Andrews

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

4:25PM THE PRESIDENT arrives in Morristown, New Jersey

Morristown Municipal Airport

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

4:35PM THE PRESIDENT departs Morristown, New Jersey en route to Trump National Golf Club – Bedminster

Morristown Municipal Airport

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

4:50PM THE PRESIDENT arrives at Trump National Golf Club – Bedminster

Bedminster LZ

Closed Press

###

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: UPDATED DAILY GUIDANCE AND PRESS SCHEDULE FOR MONDAY, AUGUST 14, 2017
Date: Monday, August 14, 2017 9:15:03 AM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
August 14, 2017

UPDATED DAILY GUIDANCE AND PRESS SCHEDULE FOR MONDAY, AUGUST 14, 2017

Update: The President will meet with Attorney General Jeff Sessions and Federal Bureau of Investigation Director Chris Wray on Charlottesville at 11:30AM.

In the morning, President Donald J. Trump will depart Morristown, NJ for Joint Base Andrews en route to The White House. The President will then meet with Chief of Staff General John Kelly. The President will then meet with Attorney General Jeff Sessions and the Federal Bureau of Investigation Director Chris Wray on Charlottesville. In the afternoon, The President will sign a memorandum on addressing China's laws, policies, practices, and actions related to intellectual property, innovation, and technology. The President will then meet with the National Economic Council. In the evening, the President will depart the White House for Joint Base Andrews, en route to John F. Kennedy International Airport. The President will depart John F. Kennedy International Airport to Trump Tower – New York. The President will then speak with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe of Japan by telephone.

In-Town Travel Pool

Wires: AP, Reuters, Bloomberg
Wire Photos: AP, Reuters, AFP
TV Corr & Crew: CNN
Print: Boston Globe
Radio: SRN

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

Wires: AP, Reuters, Bloomberg
Wire Photos: AP, Reuters, AFP
TV Corr & Crew: CNN
Print: NYTimes
Radio: CBS

EDT

7:00AM Out-of-Town Travel Pool Call Time

9:00AM In-Town Travel Pool Call Time

9:00AM THE PRESIDENT departs Bedminster, NJ en route to Morristown, NJ

Bedminster LZ

Closed Press

9:15AM THE PRESIDENT arrives Morristown Municipal Airport

Morristown Municipal Airport

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

9:25AM THE PRESIDENT departs Morristown, NJ en route Washington, DC

Morristown Municipal Airport

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

10:15AM THE PRESIDENT arrives Joint Base Andrews

Joint Base Andrews

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

10:25AM THE PRESIDENT departs Joint Base Andrews en route The White House

Joint Base Andrews

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

10:35AM THE PRESIDENT arrives The White House

South Lawn

Open Press

11:15AM THE PRESIDENT meets with Chief of Staff General John Kelly

Treaty Room

Closed Press

11:30AM THE PRESIDENT meets with Attorney General Jeff Sessions and the Federal Bureau of Investigation Director Chris Wray on Charlottesville

Treaty Room

Closed Press

3:00PM THE PRESIDENT signs a memorandum on addressing China's laws, policies, practices, and actions related to intellectual property, innovation, and technology

Diplomatic Reception Room

In-Town Travel Pool

3:45PM THE PRESIDENT meets with the National Economic Council

Blue Room

Closed Press

7:00PM THE PRESIDENT departs The White House en route Joint Base Andrews

South Lawn

Open Press

7:10PM THE PRESIDENT arrives at Joint Base Andrews

Joint Base Andrews

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

7:20PM THE PRESIDENT departs Joint Base Andrews en route New York, NY

Joint Base Andrews

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

8:15PM THE PRESIDENT arrives at John F. Kennedy International Airport

John. F. Kennedy International Airport

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

8:25PM THE PRESIDENT departs John F. Kennedy International Airport en route Wall Street Landing Zone

John. F. Kennedy International Airport

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

8:45PM THE PRESIDENT arrives Wall Street Landing Zone

Wall Street LZ

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

8:55PM THE PRESIDENT departs Wall Street Landing Zone en route Trump Tower

Wall Street LZ

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

9:10PM THE PRESIDENT arrives Trump Tower

Trump Tower

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

9:30PM THE PRESIDENT speaks with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe of Japan by telephone

Trump Tower

Closed Press

###

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: UPDATED DAILY GUIDANCE AND PRESS SCHEDULE FOR THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 2017
Date: Thursday, September 21, 2017 10:08:25 AM

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
September 21, 2017

UPDATED DAILY GUIDANCE AND PRESS SCHEDULE FOR THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 2017

UPDATE: Secretary of the Treasury Steven Mnuchin will give an on camera press briefing at 3:00PM and Ambassador Nikki Haley will give an on camera press briefing at 4:30PM

In the morning, President Donald J. Trump will depart Trump Tower en route to the Lotte New York Palace Hotel where he will participate in a meeting with the President of Afghanistan followed by an expanded meeting with the President of Afghanistan. Later in the morning, the President will participate in an expanded meeting with the President of Ukraine. The President will then participate in an expanded meeting with the President of the Republic of Korea. The President will then attend a working lunch with the Prime Minister of Japan and the President of the Republic of Korea. In the afternoon, the President will participate in an expanded meeting with the Prime Minister of Japan. The President will then participate in an expanded meeting with the President of Turkey. The President will then depart the Lotte New York Palace Hotel en route to the Wall Street Landing Zone where he will depart for Bedminster, NJ.

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

Wires: AP, Reuters, Bloomberg
Wire Photos: AP, Reuters, AFP, NYT
TV Corr & Crew: ABC
Print: LA Times
Radio: NPR

EDT

7:45AM Out-of-Town Travel Pool Call Time

8:45AM THE PRESIDENT departs Trump Tower en route to the Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Trump Tower

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

8:50AM THE PRESIDENT arrives at the Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

9:15AM THE PRESIDENT participates in a meeting with the President of Afghanistan

Hubbard 1– Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

9:30AM THE PRESIDENT participates in an expanded meeting with the President of Afghanistan

Hubbard 1– Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Closed Press

10:30AM THE PRESIDENT participates in an expanded meeting with the President of Ukraine

Hubbard 1 – Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

11:30AM THE PRESIDENT participates in an expanded meeting with the President of the Republic of Korea

Hubbard 1 – Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

12:15PM THE PRESIDENT attends a working lunch with the Prime Minister of Japan and the President of the Republic of Korea

Spellman Room – Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

1:30PM THE PRESIDENT participates in an expanded meeting with the Prime Minister of Japan

Hubbard 1– Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

3:00PM THE PRESIDENT participates in an expanded meeting with the President of Turkey

Hubbard 1– Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

3:35PM THE PRESIDENT departs the Lotte New York Palace Hotel en route to the Wall Street Landing Zone

Lotte New York Palace Hotel

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

3:50PM THE PRESIDENT arrives at the Wall Street Landing Zone

Wall Street LZ

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

4:00PM THE PRESIDENT departs New York en route to Bedminster, NJ

Wall Street LZ

Out-of-Town Travel Pool

4:20PM THE PRESIDENT arrives at Trump National Golf Club

Trump National Golf Club – Bedminster, NJ

Closed Press

Briefing Schedule

3:00PM Press Briefing with Secretary of the Treasury Steven Mnuchin

4:30PM Press Briefing with Ambassador Nikki Haley

New York Hilton Midtown – Rhinelander Gallery South

On Camera

###

Unsubscribe

Proposal for Event with Girl Scouts of the USA Summer 2017

Goals of the Event

- Highlight the ongoing partnership between the Department of the Interior and the National Park Service with the Girl Scouts of the USA (GSUSA) to introduce girls from all over America to the resources available to them to enjoy and support in the 417 National Park units.
- Promote the Girl Scout Ranger Program and the opportunity for girls to earn a certificate or patch through service at the National Park unit of their choice.
- National announcement of the new Girl Scout Outdoor Troop Camping Badges.
- Provide the Secretary an opportunity to engage with the girl scouts in their community service project, at a skill station such as first aid, or a ranger hike.
- Promote the event through earned media and social media amplification.

National Park Location:

Prince William Forest Park, Triangle, VA (45 min south DC off I-95)

Adjacent to Marine Corps Base Quantico

- Washington, DC Media market
- Prince William Forest Park is a diverse natural and cultural area located near Washington, D.C. The park is 15,000 acres of secondary growth forest.
- The park is the largest protected natural area in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan region at over 16,000 acres (6,500 ha).
- Camping, hiking, picnicking and bicycling are ways that visitors enjoy the park. Protection of a large portion of the Quantico Creek Watershed is an important natural function of the park. Headwaters for the North and South forks of Quantico Creek are in the park. Both creeks can be enjoyed by walking along park hiking trails.
- Telegraph Picnic Pavilion has picnic tables, a covered picnic pavilion, grills, and a restroom facility. The parking lot can hold over 70 cars. Also available is a group amphitheater and an indoor mess hall.

Date: Saturday- July – August (Dependent upon Secretary Zinke schedule)

Attendees:

Secretary Ryan Zinke (invited)
Acting Director of the National Park Service Mike Reynolds (invited)
CEO of the Girl Scouts of the USA
GSUSA National Board Members in DC area
Acting Director of the National Park Service Mike Reynolds
GS Juniors (65-70, ages 9-11)*
GS Cadettes (30 girls, ages 12-14) to lead skill stations*
Troop Leaders to support event and activities
GSUSA staff
NPS staff
Press invited

*Will be reaching out to Troops serving military families or Troops on a military base

Proposal for Event with Girl Scouts of the USA Summer 2017

Proposed Agenda: Date (TBD)

8:30 am Girl Scout Leadership, Staff and Volunteers arrive at National Park Location to set up for event and prepare skill stations

- Volunteer, Staff and Troop leaders set up skill stations

10:00 am - 10:30 Program Remarks by:

- Secretary Ryan Zinke (invited)
- CEO of the Girl Scouts of the USA
- Acting Director of the National Park Service Mike Reynolds (invited)
- Girl Scout selected from the participating troop
- Welcome and background on park and NPS/GSUSA partnership and introduce the Secretary: Mike Reynolds (3-4 minutes)
- Importance of partnership with Girl Scouts of the USA to bring more youth in nature through the National Park Service (stewardship, enjoyment, health and volunteerism): Secretary Zinke (5-10 minutes)
- Appreciation for partnership with the Department of the Interior and to engage girls in meaningful outdoor experiences through National Parks and highlight Girl Scout Ranger Program and announce new Outdoor Troop Camping Badge: CEO GSUSA or GSUSA National Board Member (5-10 minutes)
- Closing: Girl selected from Troop (2-3 minutes) highlight benefits of being outdoors and spending time in national parks earning the Girl Scout Ranger patch and Girl Scout badges.

After the official program, Secretary and Acting Director to interact with the girls in one or all of the following activities:

- Join their community service project in the park
- Lead or assist at a skill station to help a girl earn her badge
- Co-lead a nature hike with the girls

10:45am-11:45pm Community Service project

Ideas include:

- Basic trail maintenance
- Campfire cleanout
- Invasive plant removal
- Painting/ wash windows

11:45am – 12:45pm Hike

During Hike:

- History of park
- Flora and fauna
- Current research projects and how girls can get involved
-

12:45pm-1:45pm Brown Bag Lunch

- Girls will share lunch with park rangers to learn more about their careers and ask questions

2:00pm-5:00pm Skill Stations to earn Girl Scout Ranger Patch and portions of Girl Scout badges
(Girls divided into four to six groups)

- Fire building basics (no fire/ just instruction)
- Outdoor craft/ art in the outdoors
- Basic Knot learning
- Learn “Leave No Trace Principles” games

Closing: award girls Girl Scout Ranger patch. Girls will depart the park when the program activities are complete.

Contact:

Denise Ryan, Manager, Federal Relations, Girl Scouts of the USA, (202) 478-9828, dryan@girlscouts.org

35TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE WALL

35TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE WALL

VIETNAM VETERANS
MEMORIAL FUND

FOUNDERS OF THE WALL

35TH ANNIVERSARY COMMEMORATIVE PROGRAM
NOVEMBER 2017

JIMMY CARTER

November 2017

I am honored and inspired to take part in recognizing the 35th anniversary of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. When I signed the bill allowing for this memorial, I doubt that anyone envisioned a monument this profound and moving. The Wall that heals, conceived by a Vietnam veteran, assures us that none of the 58,318 men and women listed here, who courageously fought and ultimately sacrificed themselves for their country, will ever be forgotten. It is gratifying to know that their comrades who survived and returned to a nation that offered them less than a heroes' welcome have found solace and healing at The Wall. America is indebted to all who have answered the call to duty; those who are still among us as well as those named here. We are grateful for your dedication to ensuring the strong, free America that we all love so dearly.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Jimmy Carter".

Dear Friends,

When the Vietnam Veterans Memorial was dedicated in 1982, no one could have imagined the impact it would have 35 years later. It all started with a promise to never forget the names of those who sacrificed all in Vietnam and to honor all those who served in the Vietnam War. Along the way, The Wall helped to heal the wounds of a nation and changed the way America treats its veterans.

Today, veterans are welcomed home and thanked for their service. Vietnam veterans did not have that same experience when they came home. The Wall gave Vietnam veterans a tangible symbol of recognition from the American people for their service.

As we commemorate The Wall's 35th anniversary – family, friends, veterans and volunteers will read the names of the 58,318 service members listed on The Wall. As each name is said aloud, we will remember that behind each name is a face and a story of a life cut short and a family changed forever by their loss. By reading their names, we keep the promise to never forget.

This year, a new – and much needed – conversation about the Vietnam War has started. We must keep the conversation going so that we continue to educate current and future generations about the impact of the Vietnam War. The next step is to build the Education Center at The Wall so that we can ensure that for generations to come, American service members are properly honored and receive the recognition they justly deserve. The campaign to build the Center has gained momentum this year but there is still a long way to go and we need your help to make it a reality.

On this Veterans Day, you can be assured that VVMF will keep the promise to never forget – in 2017 and beyond.

Thank you for joining us this week and for your continued support.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Jim Knotts".

Jim Knotts
President and CEO
Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund
Veteran, Operation Desert Storm

Dear Friends,

I served in Vietnam as an infantry squad leader in 1968. I lost friends there and I came back to a country that was deeply divided over the war.

America has a responsibility to honor the men and women who serve this nation – and to remember those who do not return.

I spoke at the groundbreaking for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in 1982 and on that day, the first step was taken to honor all Vietnam veterans.

The Wall is a memorial like no other. It is a memorial that remembers individual sacrifice. Each family member or loved one that visits has a different experience. When I look at The Wall, I feel pride for serving my country and respect for all those who served and especially those who sacrificed everything and didn't make it home. They each had a family they left behind that was changed forever by their loss. The Wall should serve as a reminder for generations to come of the price of war.

It has now been more than 40 years since the war's end, but it's important that we never forget. Never forget their names. Never forget their faces. Never forget what they gave for their country. It's important that we educate current and future generations about the Vietnam War and its impact, legacies and lessons learned.

I have been privileged to lead the 35th Anniversary of The Wall commemorative committee this past year. By taking part in this week's commemorative events, I know that you are joining me in keeping the promise that was made when The Wall was built - the promise to never forget those who served and sacrificed all for our country.

Thank you.

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Chuck Hagel".

Chuck Hagel
24th Secretary of Defense
Chairman, 35th Anniversary of The Wall Committee

THANK YOU TO THE 35TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE WALL COMMITTEE

Chair – The Honorable Chuck Hagel, 24th U.S. Secretary of Defense *

Government & Military Leaders

The Honorable Colin Powell, 65th U.S. Secretary of State *

The Honorable Tom Ridge, 1st U.S. Secretary of Homeland Security *

The Honorable Eric Shinseki, 7th U.S. Secretary of Veterans Affairs *

The Honorable Richard Armitage, 13th US Deputy Secretary of State *

The Honorable Max Cleland, Former U.S. Senator (D-Ga) *

The Honorable Bob Kerrey, Former U.S. Senator (D- Ne) and 35th Governor of Nebraska *

The Honorable Chuck Robb, Former U.S. Senator (D-Va) and 64th Governor of Virginia *

General Peter Pace, 16th Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff *

General Richard Myers, 15th Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff *

General George W. Casey, Jr., 36th Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army

General Barry McCaffrey, Former Director of the White House National Drug Control Policy *

Business and Civic Leaders

Alan Buckelew, Chief Information Officer, Carnival Corporation *^

Henry Cisneros, Principal, Siebert, Cisneros, Shank & Co., LLC

Edward B. Cody, Chairman, Board of Directors, PenFed Credit Union *

Tom Hagel, Professor Emeritus, University of Dayton School of Law *

Red McCombs, Founder, Red McCombs Automotive Group

Bill Murdy, Civilian Aide to the Sec. of the Army and Chairman, Thayer Hotel Group *^

Bob Parsons, Entrepreneur, Philanthropist and Founder and CEO of YAM Worldwide *

Frederick W. Smith, Chairman, President and CEO, FedEx Corporation *

Ken Stinson, Chairman Emeritus, Kiewit, Inc. *

Entertainment

Ann-Margret, Award-winning Actress/Entertainer

Jimmy Buffett, Entertainer/Humanitarian

Gary Sinise, Actor/Humanitarian

* Vietnam War Veteran

^ VVMF Board Member

35TH ANNIVERSARY COMMEMORATIVE EVENTS

NOVEMBER 7–11, 2017 WASHINGTON, D.C.

The Reading of the Names Opening Ceremony Tuesday, Nov. 7, 3:30 p.m.
Vietnam Veterans Memorial

The Reading of the Names Tuesday, Nov. 7, 4 p.m. – Midnight
Vietnam Veterans Memorial Wednesday, Nov. 8, 5 a.m. – Midnight
Thursday, Nov. 9, 5 a.m. – Midnight
Friday, Nov. 10, 5 a.m. – Midnight

Reception honoring Maya Lin, the designer of The Wall Friday, Nov. 10, 6 p.m. – 8 p.m.
The Willard Hotel

Breakfast with Lynn Novick, co-director of The Vietnam War Saturday, Nov. 11, 9:30 a.m. – 11:30 a.m.
The Hamilton

Veterans Day Observance at The Wall Saturday, Nov. 11, 1:00 p.m.
Vietnam Veterans Memorial

*Ticketed event

ANNUAL VETERANS DAY OBSERVANCE AT THE WALL

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 2017 – 1:00 PM

Master of Ceremonies

Jim Knotts, President and CEO of VVMF

Invocation

CH (CPT) Joseph Mason

Presentation of Colors

Joint Armed Forces Color Guard
Military District of Washington

National Anthem

Pledge of Allegiance

LTG Charles N. Pede, USA

Welcome

Ryan Zinke, United States Secretary of the Interior

Vietnam Women's Memorial

Diane Carlson Evans, Founder and President of the Vietnam Women's Memorial Foundation
Kate O'Hare-Palmer, U.S. Army Nurse Corps, Vietnam

Special Remarks

Maya Lin, the Designer of The Wall

Keynote Remarks

The Honorable Chuck Hagel, 24th Secretary of Defense

Wreath Laying

Patriotic Organizations

"Amazing Grace"

Chris Jackson, Bagpiper

Taps

A SPECIAL THANK YOU TO OUR GENEROUS SPONSORS OF THE 35TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE WALL COMMEMORATION

Chairman's Circle

Leadership Circle

ALAN BUCKELEW WILLIAM F. MURDY EDIE AND ED ROSS

35th Anniversary Benefactors

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK W. SMITH

Legacy Circle

Bank of America
Kiewit Inc.
Mastercard
Dr. Robert Wintermyer

Patriot Circle

Henry Cisneros
General and Mrs. Charles W. Dyke, USA (Ret.)
William P. Kupper
Red McCombs

Keeping the Promise Partners

Arthur D. Huebner
Huong Le
Marsh & McLennan Companies, Inc.
Nationstar Mortgage
New York Community Bancorp, Inc.
Ron and Cecilia Rinard
Vectren Corporation
Col. Thomas J. Wright

35th Anniversary Patrons

American Express
Wayne Bowers
Capital Indemnity Corp.
Wayne M. Gatewood
Donna C. Harris
John Ippini
Michael Johnson
Jerome M. Kruszka
Terrence O'Donnell
BGen. George B. Price, USA (Ret.)
Edward W. Robinson
Mr. and Mrs. Richard Schmidt
Nancy Sinatra
Neal Stanley
Supervalu Inc.
Hal Valeche
Thomas R. Yarborough

CHUCK HAGEL

Chuck Hagel served as the 24th Secretary of Defense from February 2013 to February 2015. During his tenure, he directed significant steps to modernize America's partnerships and alliances, advance the rebalance in Asia-Pacific, bolster support for European allies, and enhance defense cooperation in the Middle East while overseeing the end of America's combat mission in Afghanistan. In addition, he led major initiatives for service members and their families, including increasing resources for suicide prevention, combating sexual assault, and accounting for missing personnel. Further, Secretary Hagel improved partnerships with the Department of Veterans Affairs, to include health record interoperability, service treatment record transferability, and continuity of mental health services and support. Secretary Hagel launched the Defense Innovation Initiative to better prepare the Pentagon for future threats, and enacted comprehensive reforms to the Nuclear Enterprise and Military Health system. He is the only Vietnam veteran and the first enlisted combat veteran to serve as Secretary of Defense.

Hagel served two terms in the United States Senate (1997-2009) representing the state of Nebraska. Hagel was a senior member of the Senate Foreign Relations; Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs; and Intelligence Committees. He Chaired the Foreign Relations International Economic Policy, Export and Trade Promotion Subcommittee; and the Banking Committee's International Trade and Finance, and Securities Subcommittees. Hagel also served as the Chairman of the Congressional-Executive Commission on China and the Senate Climate Change Observer Group.

Previously, Secretary Hagel was a Distinguished Professor at Georgetown University, Co-Chairman of the President's Intelligence Advisory Board, Chairman of the Atlantic Council, Chairman of the United States of America Vietnam War Commemoration Advisory Committee, and Co-Chairman of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund Corporate Council. He served as a member of the Secretary of Defense's Policy Board, Secretary of Energy's Blue Ribbon Commission on the Future of Nuclear Power, the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) Board of Directors and Systemic Risk Council; as a Senior Advisor to Gallup; and on the Advisory Boards of Corsair Capital, Deutsche Bank America, M.I.C. Industries, Bread for the World, Bonnie J. Addario Lung Cancer Foundation, Center for the Study of the Presidency, Dwight D. Eisenhower Memorial Commission, George C. Marshall Foundation, Georgetown's Institute for the Study of Diplomacy, Global Strategy Forum, Global Zero, Hamilton Project, Initiative for Global Development, Lung Cancer Alliance, International Center for the Study Of Radicalization and Political Violence, National Bureau of Asian Research's Next Generation Leadership Board, Ploughshares Fund, U.S. Global Leadership Coalition, U.S. Institute of Peace Middle East Senior Working Group, U.S. Middle East Project, America Abroad Media, American Security Project, and The Washington Center.

Prior to his election to the U.S. Senate, Hagel was president of McCarthy & Company, an investment banking firm in Omaha, Nebraska. In the mid-1980's, Hagel co-founded VANGUARD Cellular Systems, Inc., a publicly traded corporation. He was President and CEO of the World USO, Private Sector Council (PSC), and Chief Operating Officer of the 1990 Economic Summit of Industrialized Nations (G-7 Summit). Hagel also served as Deputy Administrator of the Veterans Administration under President Ronald Reagan and Deputy Commissioner General of the 1982 World's Fair.

He is the author of the book, America: Our Next Chapter and was the subject of a 2006 book by Charlyne Berens entitled, Chuck Hagel: Moving Forward. A graduate of the University of Nebraska at Omaha, Hagel and his wife, Lilibet, have a daughter (Allyn) and son (Ziller).

MAYA LIN

Walter Smith

Artist, designer and environmentalist, Maya Lin interprets the natural world through science, history, politics, and culture, creating a remarkable and highly acclaimed body of work in art and architecture. Her works merge the physical and psychological environment, presenting a new way of seeing the world around us.

Lin's Memorials address the critical social and historical issues of our time. From the Vietnam Memorial which she designed as an undergraduate student at Yale, to The Civil Rights Memorial in Alabama, and the Women's Table at Yale make our history part of the landscape. To her latest, What is Missing? which is focused on the environment.

Lin's art explores how we experience and relate to Nature, setting up a systematic ordering of the land that is tied to history, memory, time, and language. Her interest in landscape has led to works influenced by topographies and natural phenomena.

Her work asks the viewer to reconsider nature and the environment at a time when it is crucial to do so. A committed environmentalist, she is working on her last memorial, What is Missing?; a cross-platform, global memorial to the planet, located in select scientific institutions, online as a website, and a book, calling attention to the crisis surrounding biodiversity and habitat loss. Please visit www.whatismissing.org for more information.

Her architectural projects include the main building and master plan for Novartis Institutes for Biomedical Research in Cambridge, MA, the Museum for Chinese in America (2009) in New York City and the Riggio-Lynch Interfaith Chapel (2004) and Langston Hughes Library (1999) in Clinton, Tennessee. Currently she is working on the redesign of the Neilson Library at Smith College. Her designs create a close dialogue between the landscape and built environment, and she is committed to advocating sustainable design solutions in all her works.

Lin has been the subject of numerous solo exhibitions at museums and galleries worldwide, with works in the permanent collections of the National gallery of Art; The Metropolitan Museum of Art; The Museum of Modern Art; The Smithsonian Institution; The Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art; The Nevada Museum of Art; Crystal Bridges Museum of American Art; and the California Academy of Sciences.

A member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, she has been profiled in, among others, TIME, The New York Times Magazine and The New Yorker. The 1996 documentary about her, Maya Lin: A Strong Clear Vision, won the Academy Award for Best Documentary. Her book about her work and creative process, Boundaries, is in its fifth printing with Simon & Schuster. Maya Lin: Topologies, a monograph spanning the past 30 years of her career was first released in Fall 2015 by Skira Rizzoli and is in its second printing. In 2009 she was awarded the National Medal of Arts, the nation's highest honor for artistic excellence, and in 2016 she was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom, by President Barack Obama, the Nation's highest Civilian Honor.

HISTORY OF THE VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL

The idea for building a Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. came from Jan Scruggs, a wounded and decorated Vietnam veteran, who wanted to make sure that the names of all those who died in Vietnam were remembered. Soon joined by his first ally, Robert Doubek, an attorney and former Air Force intelligence officer during the war, they incorporated the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund on April 27, 1979.

Scruggs and Doubek began to recruit others to help and soon had a small group of Vietnam-era veterans on board. Col. Donald E. Schaet, Jack Wheeler, and John Woods were part of this core group. They soon learned that it required an Act of Congress to build a memorial on federal land. Scruggs and Doubek met with a senator from Maryland, Charles "Mac" Mathias, a Navy veteran of World War II, to outline their plans. One of Mathias' early suggestions was that the memorial should be on the Mall.

As they forged a partnership with Mathias and his staff, VVMF also set out to establish other key relationships including contacting Virginia Senator John Warner. Warner, who had served as Secretary of the Navy during the war, was himself a veteran of World War II and the Korean War. After meeting with the VVMF officers and advisors, Warner volunteered to help the organization raise the seed money needed to launch the fundraising campaign.

On November 8, 1979, VVMF held a press conference in which Mathias, Warner, and several others announced the introduction of legislation to grant two acres of land near the Lincoln Memorial for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

With the seed money from several defense industry donors, VVMF launched its first large-scale direct mail campaign to reach out to the public. The first fundraising letter was signed by Bob Hope.

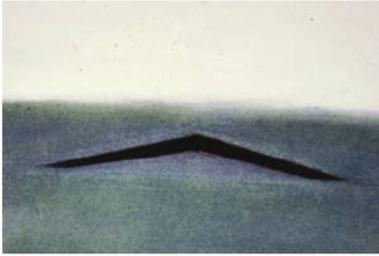

On July 1, 1980 at a White House Rose Garden ceremony, President Jimmy Carter signed legislation providing two acres for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on the National Mall. With the site approved, VVMF scrambled to address the issues of what the Memorial would look like and who would design it. It was decided that VVMF would hold a design competition, open to any American citizen over 18 years of age.

The purpose of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial was to honor all who had served, with a special tribute – their names engraved – for those who did not return. The chief design criteria were that the memorial: 1) be reflective and contemplative in character, 2) be harmonious with its site and environment, 3) make no political statement about the war itself, and 4) contain the names of all who died or remained missing.

Jimmy Carter at Rose Garden Ceremony.

HISTORY OF THE VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL

Maya Lin's design submission.

In the Fall of 1980, the national design competition was announced. By the March 31, 1981, deadline, 1,421 design entries were submitted for judging.

Design entry number 1026, unanimously selected by the jury, was submitted by Maya Ying Lin, a 21-year-old architecture student at Yale University, who was of Chinese descent. Lin's design consisted of two polished, reflective black granite walls, or arms. Each wall grew, sinking low into the ground, with the earth behind it. One arm pointed directly to the Washington Monument to the east, while the other pointed west to the Lincoln Memorial.

Critical to her design was the order of the names "At the intersection of these walls, on the right side, at the wall's top, is carved the date of the first death. It is followed by the names of those who have died in the war, in chronological order," Lin wrote in the narrative that accompanied the design. "These names continue on this wall, appearing to recede into the earth at the wall's end. The names resume on the left wall, as the wall emerges from the earth, continuing back to the origin, where the date of the last death is carved, at the bottom of this wall. Thus the war's beginning and end meet; the war is 'complete,' coming full circle."

On May 6, 1981, a press conference was held to announce the winner and the initial public reaction was generally positive. But several weeks after the announcement, a handful of people began to protest the design. They complained about the walls being black. They did not like the idea that it was below ground level. They did not like its minimalist design. Lin herself became a focus of contention. Opponents of the design made an issue of her race, her age, and her gender. Various parties sought to alter, undermine and gain control of the design. Lin fought fiercely to maintain her artistic vision and to retain the powerful simplicity of The Wall.

Jan Scruggs, Maya Lin and Bob Doubek at press conference to announce the winning design.

HISTORY OF THE VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL

An architect of record was required to execute the project because Lin was not yet an architect. VVMF and Lin interviewed several noted architectural firms, and the firm of Cooper-Lecky Partnership was selected. Working closely with Cooper-Lecky, Lin advanced her aesthetic vision while benefitting from the firm's expertise. Cooper-Lecky was ideal for the project as the firm had worked on the National Zoo, and was skilled at landscape integrated architectural solutions. Doubek, Cooper-Lecky and Lin participated in all of the numerous required design review and approval meetings.

The crowd at the dedication of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in 1982.

VVMF and Lin continued to struggle with the controversy. By early 1982, VVMF asked Warner to bring together both sides for a closed-door session to hammer out the issues. VVMF agreed to a compromise – to add a statue and a flag.

An official groundbreaking ceremony was held on March 26, 1982, and construction got underway. As soon as ground was broken, planning for its dedication ceremonies in the week leading up to Veterans Day began – to include a Salute to Vietnam Veterans. The Salute opened with a vigil Wednesday morning at the National Cathedral, where all of the nearly 58,000 names on The Wall were read by volunteers around the clock, day and night, through midnight Friday. On Saturday, a grand parade took place where veterans marched holding banners, flags, and signs. The Vietnam Veterans Memorial (The Wall) was dedicated on November 13, 1982.

Visitors have left more than 400,000 items at The Wall since the dedication. Those items of remembrance and tribute now make up the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Collection.

On November 8, 1984, the Three Servicemen Statue, designed by Frederick Hart, was dedicated as part of the memorial site. In November 1993, the Vietnam Women's Memorial statue, designed by Glenna Goodacre, was dedicated. The In Memory plaque – honoring those who served in Vietnam and later died as a result of their service – was dedicated in November 2004.

The impact of The Wall over the last 35 years has been wide-ranging. It separated the war from the warrior and changed the way America treats its veterans. Veterans refer to its "healing" power. Attracting more than five million visitors each year, The Wall is considered one of the most incredible works of art in the world.

WALL FACTS

- ★ There were 1,421 entries judged as part of the design competition for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.
- ★ The Vietnam Veterans Memorial was built with all private funds from donations large and small.
- ★ When The Wall was dedicated in 1982, it had 57,939 names inscribed on it. Today, there are 58,318 names on The Wall.
- ★ The Wall is nearly 500 feet in length and stands slightly more than 10 feet tall at its highest point.
- ★ The Wall is composed of black granite from Bangalore, India.
- ★ There are 160 Medal of Honor recipients listed on The Wall.
- ★ There are 8 women listed on The Wall.
- ★ There are 16 chaplains listed on The Wall.
- ★ The average age of service members on The Wall is 22 years, 9 months.
- ★ Each name is preceded (on the west wall) or followed (on the east wall) by a symbol designating status. The diamond symbol denotes that the service member's death was confirmed. The cross (or plus) symbol denotes missing in action.
- ★ The youngest service member listed on The Wall – Dan Bullock – was 15 years old when he was killed in Vietnam
- ★ There are 64 graduates of Thomas Edison High School in Philadelphia on The Wall – the most from any high school.
- ★ Service members who died in 1968 – the deadliest year of the war – cover 72 of the 140 panels on The Wall.
- ★ There have been more than 400,000 items left at The Wall since its dedication in 1982.

ABOUT THE VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL FUND

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund (VVMF) is the nonprofit organization that built the Vietnam Veterans Memorial (The Wall) in Washington, D.C. in 1982. VVMF's mission is to honor and preserve the legacy of service in America and educate all generations about the impact of the Vietnam War and era. We honor the service of all, preserve the memory of those who died during the war and since returning home, and educate all generations about the lasting impact of the war.

This week's 35th anniversary events and other VVMF ceremonies, programs, and education efforts are made possible by donations from our generous supporters.

VVMF's work includes:

Care and Preservation of the Memorial Site

VVMF partners with the National Park Service (NPS) to care for The Wall, the Three Servicemen Statue, the flagpole, and the In Memory plaque. VVMF's role in the care of the memorial site includes financial responsibility for engraving new names on The Wall, changing status symbols on The Wall, printing new paper directories each year, treating the lawn on the site, and conservation efforts for the Three Servicemen Statue, flagpole, and In Memory plaque.

The Wall That Heals

The Wall That Heals mobile exhibit features a half-scale replica of The Wall in Washington, D.C. along with a mobile Education Center. Through The Wall That Heals, VVMF is able to offer communities the opportunity to host The Wall and share the memorial with millions around the country while educating current generations through VVMF's educational exhibits.

Wall of Faces

The Wall of Faces is an effort to connect a face and a story to each name on The Wall. The names of more than 58,000 service members are listed on The Wall and there is a face and a story of a life cut short behind each one. Collected photos are displayed online at VVMF's Wall of Faces which features a page for every service member on The Wall.

ABOUT THE VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL FUND

Ceremonies at The Wall

Each year, VVMF hosts several ceremonies at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial to help carry out its mission to honor those who have served and sacrificed for our country. Ceremonies on Memorial Day and Veterans Day allow the public to honor those inscribed on the Memorial as well as those veterans who returned home.

Items left at The Wall

Since The Wall was dedicated in 1982, more than 400,000 items have been left by visitors as remembrances and tributes. NPS collects and preserves these objects as part of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Collection, with curatorial support from VVMF. VVMF introduced the virtual collection of items left at The Wall in 2015 on its website to share the collection with the public.

In Memory

VVMF's In Memory program honors Vietnam veterans whose lives were cut short as a result of their service in Vietnam, but are not eligible for inscription on The Wall under Department of Defense guidelines. VVMF hosts a ceremony each June to induct new honorees into the In Memory Honor Roll.

Education

VVMF develops and distributes comprehensive and balanced education materials that help students learn about the lasting impact of the Vietnam War and era. In order to ensure that current and future generations never forget the impact of the Vietnam era, VVMF is in the fundraising stages to build the Education Center at The Wall, an interactive learning facility on the National Mall that will feature the faces and stories of the service members on The Wall and honor America's legacy of service.

For more information on VVMF's work or to make a donation in support of these programs, please visit: www.vvmf.org or call 202-393-0090.

HELP BUILD THE EDUCATION CENTER AT THE WALL

How do you tell the story of the most divisive period within our nation during the 20th century? With each passing day, we are losing the voices that can tell the first-hand accounts of the Vietnam War and era. We must act now and preserve these personal stories from the past to educate our future.

To ensure that current and future generations never forget the impact of the Vietnam era, VVMF is in the fundraising stages to build the Education Center at The Wall.

The Education Center at The Wall will be an interactive learning facility on our National Mall with multimedia exhibits giving first-person accounts of veterans and citizens who lived through the Vietnam War and era. Powerful exhibits featuring the faces of the fallen and some of the more than 400,000 items left at The Wall will leave lasting impressions on the impact of war.

HELP BUILD THE EDUCATION CENTER AT THE WALL

All that is needed to start construction is the funding. As with the building of The Wall – the Center has to be built 100% from private donations. Of the $130 million campaign goal, $42.5 million has been raised so far by committed individuals, corporations and foundations.

The time is now. Please consider making a donation to help build the Education Center at The Wall.

To learn more and to find out how you can help, go to www.buildthecenter.org.

Renderings courtesy of Ralph Appelbaum Associates

"A MASTERPIECE"

CNN

"COMPELLING...
DEEPLY FELT"
TIME

"A MUST-WATCH
★★★★★"
Newsday

"POWERFUL...
EMOTIONAL"
Hollywood
REPORTER

"A MONUMENTAL ACHIEVEMENT.
THE RARE KIND OF TELEVISION THAT BECOMES AN EVENT."
VANITY FAIR

"INSPIRING...
A DENSE AND DEEP WORK OF NON-FICTION ART."
IHUFFPOSTI

"ASTOUNDING...
WORTH EVERY SINGLE MINUTE."
The Washington Post

"THE VIETNAM WAR' WILL BREAK YOUR HEART AND WIN YOUR MIND."
The New York Times

THE VIETNAM WAR

A FILM BY KEN BURNS & LYNN NOVICK

PBS

pbs.org/vietnamwar

#VietnamWarPBS

Funding for THE VIETNAM WAR provided by BANK OF AMERICA; CORPORATION FOR PUBLIC BROADCASTING; PBS; DAVID H. KOCH; THE BLAWATNIK FAMILY FOUNDATION; PARK FOUNDATION; THE ARTHUR WINING DAVIS FOUNDATIONS; THE JOHN S. AND JAMES L. KNIGHT FOUNDATION; THE ANDREW W. MELLON FOUNDATION; NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES; THE PEW CHARITABLE TRUSTS; FOOD FOUNDATION JUST FILMS; ROCKEFELLER BROTHERS FUND; AND MEMBERS OF THE BETTER ANGELS SOCIETY: JONATHAN & JEANNIE LAVINE; DIANE & HAL BRIERLEY; AMY & DAVID ABRAMS; JOHN & CATHERINE DEBS; FULLERTON FAMILY CHARITABLE FUND; THE MONTGOME FAMILY; LYNDIA & STEWART RESNICK; THE GOLKIN FAMILY FOUNDATION; THE LYNCH FOUNDATION; THE ROGER & ROSEMARY ENRICO FOUNDATION; RICHARD S. & BONNA L. STRONG FOUNDATION; BONNIE & TOM MCCLOSKEY; BARBARA K. & CYRUS B. SWEET III; THE LAVENDER BUTTERFLY FUND

PENFED[®]
CREDIT UNION

WE HONOR OUR VETERANS

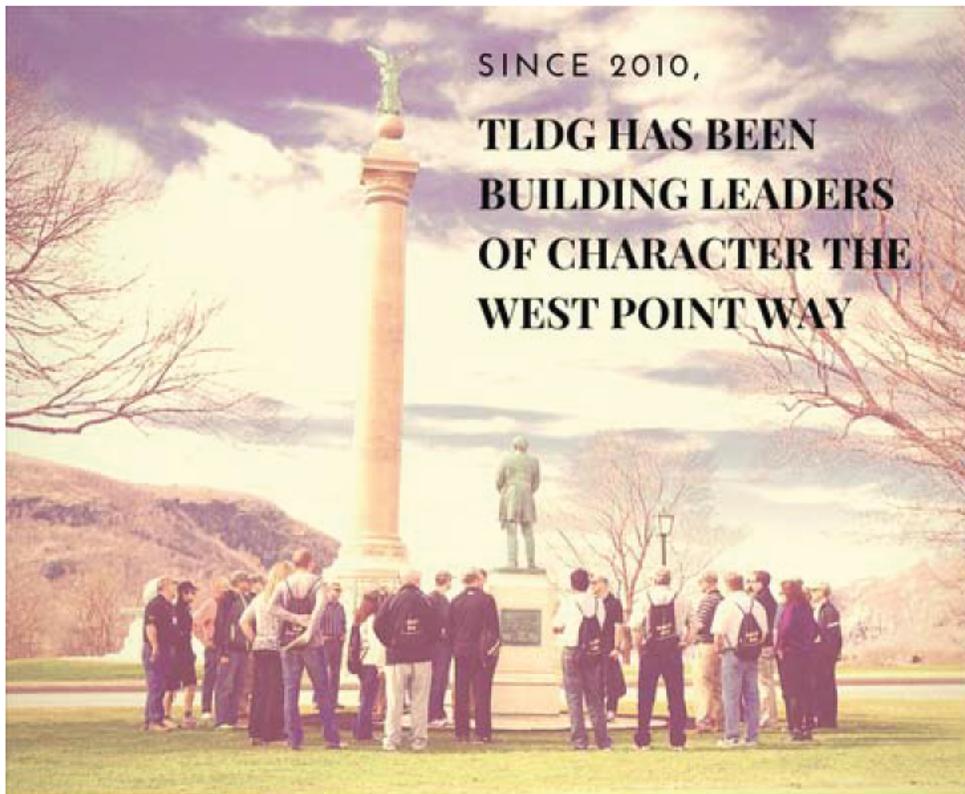

PenFed Credit Union is honored and humbled to sponsor the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund's Veterans Day Observance at the Wall. We join with our community and our nation in paying tribute to those who have served in our nation's military conflicts. At this singular location, we gather to acknowledge the service and sacrifices of our servicemen and women.

USAA proudly supports the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund.

FOR MORE INFORMATION | USAA.COM/VVMF | 844-488-WALL (9255)

USAA means United Services Automobile Association and its affiliates. Membership eligibility and product restrictions apply and are subject to change. Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund receives financial support from USAA for this sponsorship © 2017 USAA. 246333-1117

SINCE 2010,
TLDG HAS BEEN BUILDING LEADERS OF CHARACTER THE
WEST POINT WAY

Our leader development philosophy is grounded in timeless military principles.

Hiring, supporting, and strengthening the careers of veterans and their families is a priority.

We salute all veterans this Veterans Day.

TLDG
AT WEST POINT ★
Building Leaders of Character

ThayerLeaderDevelopment.com
845.446.4731 x8924

Headquartered at the Historic Thayer Hotel at West Point, NY.
Contact us to learn more about our customized solutions.

You're our hero.

wellsfargo.com

© 2017 Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. All rights reserved.

Together we'll go far

LAND OF THE FREE FOUNDATION

IS HONORED TO SUPPORT THE

VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL FUND

AND COMMEMORATE THE 35TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE WALL

Our congratulations to...

MAYA LIN

Your talent and vision have helped the nation better appreciate the sacrifices of our fallen soldiers

WWW.LANDOFTHEFREEFOUNDATION.ORG

Through career opportunities, financial education and partnering with nonprofits, we're committed to supporting veterans in communities across the country.

Learn more at bankofamerica.com/militarysupport

© 2017 Bank of America Corporation | AD-10-17-0344

Mastercard
Proudly Supports
Our Military Veterans

 mastercard.

Mastercard is a registered trademark, and the circles design is a trademark of Mastercard International Incorporated. ©2017 Mastercard. All rights reserved.

THANK YOU

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund wishes to thank the following individuals and companies for helping make this week's events possible:

Paul Masi and the Veterans Advisory Board for the Verizon Corporation for providing the American and POW/MIA flags for the Veterans Day ceremony

National Park Service

Acton Mobile

Christopher Jackson

Mission BBQ

Something Fabulous

UTZ Quality Foods, LLC

Which Wich Superior Sandwiches

A SPECIAL THANK YOU TO OUR VOLUNTEERS

VVMF would like to thank the amazing volunteers of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial who have assisted millions of visitors to The Wall this year. We thank them for their countless hours keeping “watch” over The Wall and helping visitors find names and do name rubbings. Their efforts at The Wall advance our mission to educate current generations about the impact of the Vietnam War. Their dedication is appreciated and we couldn’t do what we do without them!

Special thanks and congratulations to the 2017 Libby Hatch Volunteer Recognition Award winner, Bill Shugarts. At a luncheon in September, we thanked Bill for his thousands of hours of service and outstanding commitment to preserving the legacy of the Memorial.

VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL FUND BOARD OF DIRECTORS

John C. Dibble

VVMF Chairman of the Board,
Attorney at Law

Alan Buckelew

COO, Carnival Corporation

Ambassador Robert M. Kimmitt

Senior International Counsel,
WilmerHale LLP

William F. Murdy

Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army
Chairman, Thayer Hotel and Thayer
Leader Development Group

Major General Michael J. Nardotti, Jr., USA (Ret.)

Senior Partner, Squire Patton Boggs LLP

Lt. Col. Janis Nark, USAR (Ret.)

President, JJ Snow, Ltd.

Harry G. Robinson, III, FAIA, AICP

President, TRG International Professor & Dean Emeritus, Howard University

John O. Woods, Jr.

Principal, Woods Peacock Engineering Consultants
VVMF Board Treasurer

Jim Knotts

VVMF President and CEO

*Indicates non-voting member of the Board of Directors

VIETNAM VETERANS MEMORIAL FUND STAFF

Jim Knotts, President and Chief Executive Officer

Viktor Zikas, Chief Development Officer

Latosha Adams, Manager of Online
Communications

Adam Arbogast, Senior Director of Direct Response and Digital Strategy

Jason Bain, Senior Collections Curator

Ashley Barnes, Assistant Collections
Curator

Julianna Blaylock, Office Manager

Steve Delp, Senior Advisor for Outreach

Jessica Furr, Office Administrator

Cynthia Long, The Wall That Heals
Program Manager

Luz Lovins, Director of Development

Scott Lynch, Communications Intern

Patrick O'Neill, The Wall That Heals
Site Manager

Tim Tetz, Director of Outreach

JoAnn Waller, Director of the In Memory program

Katie Watson, Development Support Specialist

Callie Wright, Education Programs
Manager

Heidi Zimmerman, Director of Communications

RONALD D KELLER
D G BROUSSARD • STANLEY W BURGESS
NICHOLAS F CERRATO • JAMES C BYRD • JAMES
KENNETH J EYER Jr • PETER F FEGATELLI • ALBERT D FOSTER • CHA
L PLATT • PETER GIBSON • DEMETRIUS J GRAYS • ROBERT W HANSEN • THOMAS H
D ATKUCUNAS • PAUL N KUPCHINSKAS • LEE LARKINS • PAUL D MANNEROW • ROY J
HERBERT B MURPHY • PATRICK E MURPHY • NELSON Jr • DENNIS D PALM • DELBER
E LUNDY • JOHN F PAYNE • DAVID A PROTAIN • EDWARD A PUTNEY • JAMES E TANKERSLEY • F
RO S SISNEROS • CHARLES P SMITH Jr • RONNY SMITH • ALLAN E STAHLSTROM • DONALD K
JAMES R THOMAS • ROY S THOMAS • RICHARD A WADE • BILLY GENE WAID • WILLIA
W WHEELER • ROBERT L WILLEY • ERVIN H WILLIAMSON • ANTHONY J PASSERELLO • TERRY
SIPES • EDWARD A BARLOW • MILLS BEALE III • MALCOLM F BELL • RONALD J CARTER • G
IN J EMRICK • ROBERT MARTINEZ FUENTES • JAMES M GILBERT • BRUCE A GOURLAY • THO
GREEN Jr • HEINRICH RUHLMANN • JAMES E GREENE Jr • EDWARD W GRIFFITH • ARTURO B
HARTMAN • THOMAS W HASTINGS • WILLIE R HORNBURGER • JOSEPH E JACQUEZ • GERA
GEORGE H JULES • ROBERT C KERCSMAR • ROBERT G KOVAL • TERRY LEE LARSEN • MICHA
HEN H LINN • STEPHEN R LOPEMAN • JOHN R McLAUGHLIN • LONZIA R MOORE APPELL • TERRY A McCARTHY • PATRICK R McCLURE • TERRY KAY MAREADY • MICHAEL MEAL • ROBERT N NEWMAN • RICHARD M PACO • CHARLES M PENLEY Jr •
WILLIAM RUCKER • MICHAEL W GREEN • WILLIAM C RYAN Jr • MICHAEL
RONALD J SHROPSHIRE • HAROLD R SIMONDS •

Stay connected with VVMF on:

Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund

www.twitter.com/VVMF

VNVeteransMemorial

Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund
1235 South Clark Street, Suite 910
Arlington, VA 22202
202-393-0090
www.vvmf.org

From: Wackowski, Stephen
To: Laura Rigas; Heather Swift
Subject: Wackowski bio and hunting pictures
Date: Saturday, May 27, 2017 11:26:30 PM

Laura & Heather-

See below and attached. If this is not the angle you wanted to take with my announcement let me know. The trip is going well so far--the boss handled the presser in Fairbanks airport well. Micah should be sending you a recording.

My Best,

Steve

Steve Wackowski is a lifelong Alaskan who grew up in Anchorage and spent his summers working in Ninilchik for his family's halibut and salmon sportfishing business. After graduating from Bartlett High School in Anchorage, he played division I-AA football at Saint Mary's College where he earned a degree in Computer Science and a commission in the Air Force Reserve from UC Berkeley's Air Force ROTC program.

Steve is currently a Major in the Reserve and drills at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson at the 611th Air Operations Center. He has served on several active duty tours throughout his reserve career including contingency deployments to Afghanistan, Haiti, and Iraq.

After his last active duty tour Steve moved home to Alaska to work as the remote sensing operations manager for Fairweather Science, LLC in Anchorage. Steve's work detecting and mapping maternal polar bear dens for oil and gas companies on Alaska's North Slope was nationally recognized and helped earn him the Alaska Journal of Commerce's Top 40 under 40 award in 2015.

His public policy background includes serving as a Professional Staff member on the US Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee and as Senator Ted Stevens' last serving Press Secretary. He most recently managed US Senate Energy Committee Chairman Lisa Murkowski's reelection campaign, helping her to obtain her largest margin of victory ever.

Steve is avid hunter and fisherman who continually gets out-fished by his wife Lindsay. They enjoy spending time in the Alaska outdoors with their red fox lab, Cali and two year old son, Lucas.

From: Swift, Heather
To: Daniel Jorjani; Scott Hommel
Subject: Wash Post inquiry
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 10:45:57 AM

Dan, below is a rather extensive inquiry I received from Washington Post regarding the secretary's travel. Can you please give me a quick call? I have one question. 208-5338

- OVERALL questions
- How many flights has Sec. Zinke taken on government or charter jets? Can you please provide the aircraft manifest, type of plane, destinations, dates of use, purpose, cost of the trip and source of payment for the trips?
- On what trips did Sec. Zinke's wife Lola and/or other members of Sec. Zinke's family join?
- The calendar says that spouses attended a cultural briefing with local reindeer herders on May 26 in Norway. Was Lola Zinke one of the spouses?
- Did Sec. Zinke take steps to limit the costs of his travel? If so, what were they?
- Virgin Islands
 - What was the official purpose of the U.S. Virgin Islands trip during Zinke's first month as Interior secretary?
 - What was the cost of the trip?
 - Did Sec. Zinke's wife Lola attend?
 - While some flights appear to be commercial, others are not shown, including multiple flights on March 31. Can you please provide the manifest, type of plane, cost of the trip and source of payment for the trips?
- Big Sky event
 - Sec. Zinke was in Big Sky in March 17-19, the same time Sen. Daines hosted a "weekend in the Montana mountains" benefiting the Daines Big Sky Committee. He attended multiple Daines receptions and stayed the night at Daines' home. A fundraiser flyer says requested contributions were $3,000 for PACs, $1,500 for personal.
 - What was the policy purpose of this trip?
 - Was this a political trip?
 - Who paid for Zinke's travel to the political events?
- Atlanta
 - What was the purpose of Sec. Zinke's trip to the NRA Institute for Legislative Action event in Atlanta on April 28? Was this a political event? What was the cost of flying on Air Force One, and did the DOI reimburse any other agencies for the seats of Sec. Zinke, Lola Zinke or his staff?
- April 12-20
 - During the trip, Sec. Zinke spoke at the Reagan Center in Santa Barbara and campaigned for Greg Gianforte. Was this a political trip? What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?
 - On April 15 and 16, Sec. Zinke was in Santa Barbara, including a meeting with former Congressman Bob Lagomarsino. What was the meeting about? Did these home trips entail personal or official use? The items don't say that it was "personal travel" or "paid for personally" - was it?
 - On April 17, Sec. Zinke went to the Reagan Ranch Center and met the vice president of the Young America's Foundation. What was the official policy purpose of this trip? What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?
- May 5-13: Montana, Utah, California, Montana
 - What was the official policy purpose of Sec. Zinke's trip on May 5-13?
 - During the trip, Sec. Zinke gave keynote remarks to the RNC Spring Meeting Dinner and attended a rally for Greg Gianforte. Was this a political trip? What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?
 - On May 8 and May 9, Sec. Zinke traveled in a B200 Turboprop 8-passenger plane, the

- calendar states. Can you please provide the manifest, cost of the trip, owner of the jet and source of payment for the trips?
- Sec. Zinke spent that weekend at home in Kalispell, Montana. He then flew to Dulles and home on Monday. Federal regulations say employees' official travel should by no means include personal use. Did these home trips entail personal use?
 - May 25-June 2: Norway, Greenland, Alaska, Idaho
 - What was the official purpose of this trip?
 - Sec. Zinke attended a reception for Rep. Don Young at Sullivan's Steakhouse. Was this a political trip? What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?
 - Sec. Zinke flew from Boise to L.A. on June 2. The June 3 and 4 dates say "Personal travel // Paid for personally" in Santa Barbara. What did Sec. Zinke pay for? How much did he pay? At what rate did he pay for the travel personally? What aircraft did he fly on? What was the total cost to government?
 - June 25-28: Nevada, Montana
 - On June 25, Sec. Zinke attended the Rule of Law Defense Fund Reception & Dinner, where he sat at a dinner table with leaders of the casino industry, the NRA, the Chamber of Commerce and Koch Industries. What was the policy purpose of Sec. Zinke's attendance? Was this a political event?
 - On June 26, Sec. Zinke flew from Las Vegas to Kalispell on a private plane tied to a Republican donor. Can you please provide the aircraft manifest, purpose, cost of the trip and source of payment for the trips? It appears Sec. Zinke spent the night afterward at his home in Whitefish; is that correct, and wouldn't that convey personal use?
 - July 20-22: Colorado
 - On July 20, Sec. Zinke gave remarks in Denver at the American Legislative Exchange Council. He also attended a Colorado Republican Committee roundtable and gave remarks at the Western Conservative Summit.
 - What was the official policy purpose of these trips? Were these trips political or personal? What were Sec. Zinke's remarks at these trips. What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Heather Swift
To: Laura Rigas@ios.doi.gov; dwbarnhardt@ios.doi.gov; downey_magallanes@ios.doi.gov; russell_newell@ios.doi.gov; daniel_jorjani@sol.doi.gov; scott_hommel@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Watchdog says Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke failed to properly document travel - The Washington Post
Date: Thursday, November 16, 2017 2:44:49 PM

https://www.washingtonpost.com/politics/watchdog-says-interior-secretary-ryan-zinke-failed-to-properly-document-travel/2017/11/16/3277bac6-ca3f-11e7-b0cf-7689a9f2d84e_story.html?utm_term=.651f0a01b142

Watchdog says Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke failed to properly document travel

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has failed to keep complete records — and in some cases kept none at all — of his travel since taking office, the agency’s watchdog told department officials this week, saying that management of Zinke’s travel was “deficient” and lacked oversight.

A rare alert sent by Deputy Inspector General Mary Kendall to the secretary’s office Wednesday, obtained by The Washington Post, said her investigation into allegations of improper travel practices by Zinke has been stymied by “absent or incomplete documentation for several pertinent trips.”

Interior lawyers and ethics officials also have not shown evidence to investigators that they have been able to “distinguish between personal, political and official travel” or cost-analysis documents to justify his choice of military or charter flights, Kendall wrote.

The memo reveals that the inspector general is also scrutinizing the travel of Zinke’s wife, Lola, who often accompanied him on official trips. Kendall wrote that the department’s documentation was so lacking that investigators cannot determine “the full extent” of Lola Zinke’s travel and how it was paid for.

[\[Zinke took \$12,000 charter flight home in oil executive's plane, documents show\]](#)

Does Trump's Cabinet have a private plane problem?

Members of President Trump's Cabinet have taken noncommercial flights at the expense of taxpayers, and Trump says he's "not happy." (Monica Akhtar/TWP)

The alert raises new questions about the travel of the former Navy SEAL commander and former congressman from Montana. The Post and other news organizations have reported that Zinke flew a private plane owned by an oil executive, took charter flights in the Virgin Islands and has mixed official travel with stops at political fundraisers and donor events.

Interior Department officials have said that all of Zinke's travel was approved in advance by ethics officials and that private-charter flights were booked only when feasible commercial flights were unavailable.

But the agency declined to publicly release documents authorizing his travel or to say what percentage, if any, of the cost of these trips was covered by Republican campaign funds, as would be required.

Kendall's office has requested complete records for Zinke and his wife's travel, including authorizations and reimbursement documents that would "describe all instances when Mrs. Zinke traveled in a government-owned vehicle, watercraft, or aircraft," including the details of who paid.

[\[\[Traveling in style: White House wrestles with Cabinet costs\]\]](#)

In a letter of response obtained by The Post, Deputy Secretary David Bernhardt told Kendall that the agency would provide the outstanding travel documents. But he blamed the Obama administration for any record-keeping issues.

"When I arrived at the Department in August 2017, it was clear to me that the Secretary and I inherited an organizational and operational mess from the previous administration,” Bernhardt wrote. “From my perspective . . . it appears that the exact same [travel] procedures and processes utilized by the previous Administration remain in place and continue to be dysfunctional.”

Bernhardt added that was “apparently unclear” until last week whether all of former Interior Secretary Sally Jewell’s travel records had been entered into the agency’s tracking system.

Today's WorldView

What's most important from where the world meets Washington

The Office of Special Counsel, an independent agency, also is investigating Zinke’s travel to political fundraisers and appearances for possible violations of the Hatch Act, which bans federal officials from engaging in political activity on the job.

Zinke is one of four current and former Trump administration Cabinet secretaries under investigation by agency watchdogs. Tom Price, another former member of Congress who was secretary of health and human services, resigned in late September after taking at least $400,000 in chartered flights at taxpayer expense.

The watchdog for the Environmental Protection Agency also is investigating Administrator Scott Pruitt’s frequent travels to his home state of Oklahoma. Veterans Affairs Secretary David Shulkin’s July trip to Europe, which combined official travel for himself, his wife and two top aides with sightseeing and a Wimbledon tennis event, also is under review.

The Treasury Department inspector general’s office found in October that Secretary Steven Mnuchin’s multiple flights on military jets to destinations from West Virginia to Italy was legal, but that Treasury officials had offered poor justifications for the travel.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

Note: 250 visitor's is the maximum allowed.

From: Heather Swift
To: Laura Rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: WH east wing tour ideas reporters
Date: Wednesday, November 22, 2017 10:15:59 AM

These ones are always good to work with and each has a (b) (6) :
Mike Doyle (EE) and his wife and son
Tim Cama (The Hill) wife and daughter
Jennifer Dalhouy (Bloomberg) husband and son

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
Department of the Interior

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: WH In-town Travel Pool Report 1
Date: Sunday, September 24, 2017 5:58:17 PM

From: SV Date <sv.date@huffpost.com>

Date: September 24, 2017 at 5:55:46 PM EDT

Subject: WH In-town Travel Pool Report 1

Marine 1 approached from the direction of the Washington Monument and landed on the South Lawn at 5:40 pm.

POTUS climbed out, saluted the Marine who had opened the door and pulled down the stairs for him and crossed the grass to introduce reporters to Marine Maj. James Thompson, one of the pilots of the helicopter who was making his last flight, and his wife and three children.

He then took questions from reporters for several minutes. He said NFL players had to “respect” the flag, that he was not calling on a boycott of the league, that he didn’t know anything about HHS Sec Tom Price’s chartered flights but that they were “looking into it.”

He then entered the WH through the South Portico entrance.

The WH press office 10 minutes later issued a travel photo lid for the evening.

Full transcript of the president’s remarks coming ASAP.

-30-

S.V. Dáte

Senior White House Correspondent

HuffPost

202-624-9338 o

202-615-5845 c

@svdate

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: WH In-town Travel Pool Report 1
Date: Sunday, September 24, 2017 5:57:58 PM

From: SV Date <sv.date@huffpost.com>
Date: September 24, 2017 at 5:55:46 PM EDT
Subject: WH In-town Travel Pool Report 1

Marine 1 approached from the direction of the Washington Monument and landed on the South Lawn at 5:40 pm.

POTUS climbed out, saluted the Marine who had opened the door and pulled down the stairs for him and crossed the grass to introduce reporters to Marine Maj. James Thompson, one of the pilots of the helicopter who was making his last flight, and his wife and three children.

He then took questions from reporters for several minutes. He said NFL players had to “respect” the flag, that he was not calling on a boycott of the league, that he didn’t know anything about HHS Sec Tom Price’s chartered flights but that they were “looking into it.”

He then entered the WH through the South Portico entrance.

The WH press office 10 minutes later issued a travel photo lid for the evening.

Full transcript of the president’s remarks coming ASAP.

-30-

S.V. Dáte

Senior White House Correspondent

HuffPost

202-624-9338 o

202-615-5845 c

@svdate

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: WH POOL President Fort Myers Travel Report #1
Date: Thursday, September 14, 2017 12:31:47 PM

From: "Zoldan, Sheldon" <SZOLDAN@Fortmyer.gannett.com>

Date: September 14, 2017 at 11:55:51 AM EDT

Subject: [EXTERNAL] WH POOL President Fort Myers Travel Report #1

From: Gluck, Frank
Sent: Thursday, September 14, 2017 10:58 AM
To: Zoldan, Sheldon <SZOLDAN@Fortmyer.gannett.com>
Subject: Re: WH update #1 Fort Myers

Air Force 2 landed at RSW @ 10:05, five minutes ahead of schedule. Local temp is 86 degrees, with 76 % humidity, making it feel like 96.

Potus landed at 10:40 and deplaned at 10:45. Potus wearing white hat and presidential jacket. Greeted by Vp Pence (wearing Vp jacket) and his wife. Marco Rubio and AG Bindi seen at the greeting president. In motorcade at 10:55 to meet w FEMA and local officials.

Greeting members of coast guard at 11 am at Private Sky hangar. Potus wearing white USA hat

First Lady wearing olive green shirt, white cap and white tennis shoes

Potus thanks local officials, Thanks Marco Rubio and shakes his hand. Says about Gov Rick Scott: "the job he's done is incredible. Adding later: "I hope this man right here, rick Scott, runs for the Senate."

President, who was barely audible over the sound of running engines of nearby Blackhawk helicopters, took no questions from local press. Press was moved back to the terminal after the 10-15 mins of remarks. He's scheduled now to fly in a Blackhawk to Naples for roughly 90 mins before returning to RSW and leaving Florida

Unsubscribe

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: WH pool report #3 - background briefing on Paris trip
Date: Tuesday, July 11, 2017 4:17:51 PM

From: Linskey, Annie [mailto:annie.linskey@globe.com]
Sent: Tuesday, July 11, 2017 4:09 PM
Subject: WH pool report #3 - background briefing on Paris trip

Here's a quick rundown on the background briefing by a senior administration official on the president's upcoming trip to Paris. Do check any quotes against the transcript. (Contact me directly if you want to know who the SAO is, but the briefing is background only so I'm not including in this report.)

On Thursday POTUS is expected to have a working lunch with Chairman of Joint Chiefs of Staff Dunford and other military officials.

Also, on Thursday Trump and Macron will have a bilat meeting. It is sked for up to 1 hour and 15 min, but could go longer. The focus is Syria and counterterrorism. But climate could come up, according to the senior administration official.

The bilat will be followed by a "press event" featuring POTUS and Macron.

On Thursday evening POTUS and FLOTUS will have a private dinner with Macron and his wife.

The senior administration official is aware that Merkel is sked to be in Paris earlier on Thursday, but does not expect POTUS to meet with her. "That's not on the schedule right now," said a SAO.

On Friday, POTUS and FLOTUS will be guests of honor at the Bastille Day events in Paris. POTUS will leave France after the events.

Other quotes of note:

The senior administration official praised France for its NATO commitment, saying the country already commits 1.8 percent of its GDP to the alliance's defense. "Their numbers are trending in a positive direction," said a senior administration official.

"France is far and away one of the strongest military members of the alliance," said a SAO.

--

Annie Linskey
Boston Globe
DC Bureau
desk: 202-857-5131
cell: 443-627-0556
@annielinskey

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: WH print pool report 4
Date: Thursday, January 04, 2018 2:08:45 PM

From: David Smith [mailto:david.smith@theguardian.com]
Sent: Thursday, January 4, 2018 1:48 PM
Subject: WH print pool report 4

Final section from Roosevelt Room pool spray:

POTUS said: "Mr Vice-President, did you have anything to say?"

VPOTUS said: "Mr President, you've made immigration a centrepiece in the national debate over the last year and a half. You said all along the way we're going to build a wall, we're going to reform our immigration system, we're going to enforce the laws of this country for the citizens of this country. But you also said along the way that we're going to do it with a big heart and you've opened the door to an agreement on DACA and today, as part of an ongoing discussion with these Republican leaders but also with Democrats on Capitol Hill, to accomplish that, and I look forward to being a part of it."

POTUS replied: "Very good, thank you, Mike. And Senator Grassley, anything to say?"

POTUS turned to his right and touched Senator Chuck Grassley on the arm. Grassley, wearing a pale blue sweater under his suit jacket, said: "Of course, what you said, we were here, I think, with you on November the 8th. We set out a programme that we all agreed to here. We know that there has to be negotiations in regard to that, but you've laid out some principles that we will not compromise on."

POTUS tapped Grassley on the arm and said: "And you've been a great voice in a lot of different ways and we appreciate it, thank you very much."

POTUS looked along the table to Senator Lindsey Graham. "Lindsey. Used to be a great enemy of mine, now he's a great friend of mine. I really like Lindsey. Can you believe that? I never thought I'd say that but I do like him a lot."

Graham grinned broadly and shifted in his chair, then said: "Thank you. I like me too, so we have something in common."

There was laughter in the room and POTUS, jokingly putting his hand over his mouth, interjected: "We all know that."

Then Graham said: "Obama couldn't do it. Bush couldn't do it. I think you can do it. There's a bill to be had. If you want it bad enough, we'll get it and it'll be good for the country. Everybody's got to give a little bit but I've never been more optimistic about an immigration reform proposal making it to the president's desk than I am right now."

POTUS: "I think we have a good chance. Tom Cotton."

Senator Cotton said: "Thank you for having us, Mr President. As Senator Graham said, I think there's a deal to be had here. The president's made clear he wants to provide some kind of protections for those who received the DACA work permits but at the same time we have to deal with the negative consequences of that. We have to end chain migration prevent a future set of new chain migrants coming, we have to secure our border, we have to enforce our laws on the interior as well to decrease the illegal immigration that will inevitably encourage overstays. The president and our group have been clear on that from the very beginning and I hope the Democrats will sit down with us and finally take yes for an answer on it.

POTUS: "I think we've got a good shot, I really do. Tom, anything?"

Senator Thom Tillis said: "Mr President, I just want to say exactly what Lindsey did. If you think about in the Obama administration, you had the votes to pass Obamacare and you couldn't get the DREAM Act passed, then you know there's something structurally wrong with just the baseline. If you just think about it, you're providing the leadership to come up with a balance where you're going to produce a bipartisan solution and a solution that's consistent with your principles which I think are important for us to fulfil the promises we made to the American people. And we can provide certainty to the DACA population, and shame on anybody for getting caught up in words: the wall, for example, when we've got the opportunity to provide a solution, achieve your objectives and do something good for the DACA population, then I think we should.

POTUS: "Thank you, Tom, very much. You're right 100%."

POTUS then said "Tom" again but looked at Senator James Lankford, who responded: "Mr President, thanks for bringing us all together. I mentioned to you in September when you first made the announcement about DACA that you'd given a tremendous gift to the American people. It's been 20 years since we've had a vote on immigration of any type that's actually passed and become law. Immigration issues are very hard, they're very emotional, but there's been no deadline, so every time the Congress starts to work on it, they work on it for a while then drop it because it's difficult. You gave us a deadline and setting that for March the 1st and that's a tremendous gift to be able to get that done. Thanks for engagement on this. I do absolutely agree with your heart on the issues on DACA and for those kids, and be able to find – we've got to get a legislative solution but we've got to deal with every other issue as well or we'll just keep having DACA votes every 10 years and we can't do that. So thanks and, by the way, thanks for the new leadership at DHS as well, and looking forward to seeing your leadership in the days ahead of us."

POTUS: "I have to say James Lankford has been tremendous help, not only on what we just passed but will be a tremendous help in this and James, I want to thank you for your support. You've been really fantastic and I can say that for all of the men and the people in this room, they've been fantastic."

POTUS turned to Senator John Cornyn, adding: "And John, you have really been – we can't even call you the whip, but you have been more than a whip. You've been so fantastic on the taxes and the tax cuts and the reform and the success of that and certainly it wasn't easy, it went right to the last minute, and you were right there, and we all want to thank you. The job you did was fantastic. So, Senator Cornyn, want to say a few words?"

Cornyn replied: "Mr President, thank you for having us here. America's the most generous country in the world when it comes to legal immigration but that generosity has been abused by people who are exploiting the vulnerabilities we have along the border with a lack of enforcement. And we saw the previous administration try to usurp the authority that only Congress and the White House have in passing immigration laws. They tried to do it by executive action and the courts struck that down. So I do think this is an important opportunity for those of us who care not only about the people and about our legal immigration system that's benefited us all but also are determined to eliminate and stop illegal immigration along with the drugs and the harm that that causes. And I do think this is a great opportunity, I hope we make the most of it, coming from a border state, 1,200 miles of common border with Mexico, my constituents in Texas all understand the importance of border security and enforcement. At the same time, they are people with big hearts and like you, and like the rest of us, want to do the right thing by these adults who came here as children, and I think we have a right opportunity."

POTUS said: "Well, thank you very much, and I have to tell you that as I walked into the room, I don't know if you heard the latest, but the market is up about 150 points. And we broke a very, very big barrier: 25,000. And there were those who'd say we wouldn't break 25,000 by the end of the eighth year, and we're in the 11th month. We broke 25,000 just as we came in now. I have to be a little careful, because as we walk out maybe it goes down. You always have to be careful with that, Tom.

"But we did, in fact, break 25,000: very substantially break it, very easily. So I guess our new number is 30,000. But what it means is every time you see that number go up on Wall Street it means jobs, it means success, it means 401(k)s that are flourishing.

"I was in New York at a big event recently, and I take a lot of pictures with police and with firemen and with the military. And one of the policemen came up, an officer, and he said, 'Sir, I want to thank you. My 401(k) is through the roof. My wife thinks I'm a brilliant investor.' He said he was up 39%. I said, 'You should be doing better than that, actually.' But he said, 'I'm up 39% in nine months.' And he said, 'I've never seen anything like it. My wife is so happy, my family is so happy.'

"And people with 401(k)s, unless they're really having difficulties in life, they're doing very, very well. So I just want to congratulate everyone in the room because you worked so hard. I may finish off with our new secretary, who's just in the position but, I will tell you, respected by everybody. I got a very good vote. Got a very good vote. And would you like to say anything?"

Kirstjen Nielsen, the Homeland Security Secretary, said: "Yes. I just want to thank you for your leadership on this issue. And I really appreciate your support of the men and women at DHS. They do have a very dangerous job, one that we don't often like to talk about. But they do put their lives in danger for all of us every day.

"And I really look forward to working with all of you, and learning today about your progress. As you know, border security, we have to have the wall and the technology and personnel that go with that, but we also need to close the loopholes that we can do the expedited removal because that's a core part of border security. So I look very much forward to working with you and others in Congress to get this done."

POTUS said: "You're going to break all of General Kelly – who's right over here – you're going to break all of his records, right?"

Nielsen smiled: "Absolutely."

POTUS: "Because he had some pretty good records; 78 percent is -- so far, that's the best number. So you have to break 78 percent. That's tough, but you'll do it."

Nielsen: "All right. Yes, sir."

POTUS: "Thank you all very much. Appreciate it."

A reporter in the room shouted a question: "Your message to DREAMers, Mr. President? Your message to DREAMers, Mr President? What do you say?"

POTUS replied: "Hopefully, everything's going to work out very well. We really want it to work out. I can tell you the Republicans want to see it work out very well. If we have support from the Democrats, I think DACA is going to be terrific. We have people that have been working on this issue for a long time. As Lindsey said, as others have said, we really are at a point where I think we could do something spectacular for the people on the border, the people coming through.

"We have to be careful because there's a drug epidemic like the likes of which we've never seen in this country. We need protection. We need the wall. We need all of those things. And, frankly, I think a lot of Democrats agree with us. When they see what's happening, when they see the kind of problems we're having at the border, they really understand it. Whether they'll vote that way is another situation, but they really understand it.

"So we want to thank you all for being here. We have a great spirit going in the Republican Party. I think it can be bipartisan. I hope it's going to be bipartisan. And we take care of a lot of problems. We can take care of a lot of problems. It would be really nice to do it in a bipartisan way. OK? Thank you all."

Then came the questions about Steve Bannon as described in a previous pool report.

--

David Smith

Washington bureau chief
Guardian News & Media

O: +1 202 517 8909

M: +1 646 935 9047

E: david.smith@theguardian.com

@SmithInAmerica

900 17th St NW, Suite 250
Washington, DC 20006

theguardian.com

Download the Guardian app for Android and iOS

This e-mail and all attachments are confidential and may also be privileged. If you are not the named recipient, please notify the sender and delete the e-mail and all attachments immediately. Do not disclose the contents to another person. You may not use the information for any purpose, or store, or copy, it in any way. Guardian News & Media Limited is not liable for any computer viruses or other material transmitted with or as part of this e-mail. You should employ virus checking software.

Guardian News & Media Limited is a member of Guardian Media Group plc. Registered Office: PO Box 68164, Kings Place, 90 York Way, London, N1P 2AP. Registered in England Number 908396

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: WH Travel Pool 2
Date: Monday, October 16, 2017 5:54:42 PM

From: SV Date <sv.date@huffpost.com>

Date: October 16, 2017 at 5:44:36 PM EDT

Subject: WH Travel Pool 2

Air Force 1 touched down at Greenville-Spartanburg airport at 5:21.

He emerged from the plane at 5:30 and greeted at the base of the stairs by Gov. Henry McMaster, his wife and their two adult children.

Also flying down aboard was Sen. Lindsey Graham and Rep. Joe Wilson.

POTUS waved at the crowd assembled behind some barriers and then climbed into his limo.

But minutes later, the motorcade stopped and he and went out to shake hands with the 100 or supporters.

Pool was at the rear of the motorcade and could not see or hear any details.

At 1741 POTUS reentered his limo and the motorcade is rolling toward the event site.

-30-

S.V. Dáte
Senior White House Correspondent
HuffPost
202-624-9338 (o)
202-615-5845 (m)
@svdate

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: WH Travel Pool Report #7
Date: Wednesday, November 08, 2017 1:59:48 AM

From: Mark Landler <landler@nytimes.com>
Date: November 8, 2017 at 2:56:28 PM GMT+8
Subject: [EXTERNAL] WH Travel Pool Report #7

President Trump and his wife stepped off Air Force One at 2:50 pm. Chinese authorities pushed a large staircase to the side of the plane.

The first couple were met on a red carpet by officials, a line of school children waving US and Chinese flags and an honor guard in white and blue uniforms, holding rifles with fixed bayonets.

Spotted at the bottom of the stairs: Ambassador Terry Branstad, Secretary of State Rex Tillerson.

Motorcade is rolling at 2:53 pm, past another row of flag-waving school-children.

Mark Landler
NY Times

###

Unsubscribe

The White House · 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW · Washington DC 20500 · 202-456-1111

From: White House Press Office
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: WH Travel Pool Report #10
Date: Wednesday, November 08, 2017 3:17:23 AM

From: Mark Landler [mailto:landler@nytimes.com]
Sent: Wednesday, November 8, 2017 5:14 PM
Subject: [EXTERNAL] WH Travel Pool Report #10

In the Forbidden City

President Trump, President Xi Jinping, and their wives walked through the Gate of Supreme Harmony and gazed across a sprawling — and deserted, save for your pool — courtyard. The slanting rays of the afternoon sun reflected off the gold filigree on the sides of the pavilions, casting a soft glow.

After a guide explained the sites, POTUS, clad in a blue overcoat, and FLOTUS, in a black one, walked down a flight of stairs and into the courtyard, alongside Xi and his wife.

The foursome stopped in the middle of the square and turned to face a wall of cameras. Trump made pleasantries with Xi, but no words were audible to the pool. At one point, POTUS gestured to the stones underfoot.

After the photo op, the group strolled on toward the Palace of Supreme Peace, climbing another long flight of stairs.

Later, the WH staff, as well as Secretary of State Tillerson, USTR Robert Lighthizer and Amb. Terry Branstad, walked through and posed for a photo.

Pool is now resetting for the next sighting.

Mark Landler
NY Times

###

Unsubscribe

From: Timothy Williams
To: Heather Swift
Subject: Wife"s first catfish
Date: Saturday, September 16, 2017 7:21:52 PM
Attachments: ATT00001.txt

@timwjr if you wanted to use it? My twitter handle is there as well.

Tim

From: Swift, Heather
To: Johnson, Virginia
Subject: WSJ
Date: Thursday, July 13, 2017 8:20:01 AM

Mark Zuckerberg Hits the Road to Meet Regular Folks—With a Few Conditions

As he tours America, Facebook CEO appears at homes and businesses with little notice, asks not to be quoted; not always recognized

By Reid J. Epstein and

Mark Zuckerberg is trying to understand America, so he's embarked on a journey to meet people like hockey moms and steelworkers who don't typically cross his path.

But there are rules to abide by if you are an ordinary person about to meet an extraordinary entrepreneur.

Rule One: You probably won't know Mr. Zuckerberg is coming.

Rule Two: If you do know he's coming, keep it to yourself.

Rule Three: Be careful what you reveal about the meeting.

While the Facebook CEO has built a social network that inspired people around the world to share the most intimate details about their personal lives, his team goes to extraordinary lengths to keep his movements under wraps and control how he is perceived. Midway through a "personal challenge" to travel to 30 states he'd never visited, the 33-year-old aims "to talk to more people about how they're living, working and thinking about the future," he wrote in January on his Facebook page.

Among those people was Kyle McKasson, manager of the Wilton Candy Kitchen, a century-old shop on the town square in Wilton, Iowa.

He was at work one Monday afternoon in June when two men and a woman dressed in jeans and button-down shirts entered the store, which is a regular stop on Iowa's presidential campaign circuit.

The three said they were from California on a business trip on their way to Chicago and asked Mr. McKasson for a tour of the store and its museum of the history of Wilton, population 2,800. They didn't tell their names, he said, and he thought it impolite to ask.

Four days later, the same three people returned to the candy store, and one of his new customers revealed their true mission: "Mark Zuckerberg will be here in five minutes."

A startled Mr. McKasson, 54, asked: "What do I need to do?" he recalled, and was told: "Nothing."

Mr. Zuckerberg walked through the red-and-white store door. He ordered a $5.75 chocolate malt. An assistant paid the world's fifth-richest man's tab with a debit card.

The tech titan chatted with the young cashier about her future plans and spoke to Mr. McKasson about life in Wilton and the city's downtown revitalization efforts.

Members of Mr. Zuckerberg's team plan his visits with secrecy, but there are rare instances of the Facebook CEO's cover being blown. The result: chaos.

When someone let slip he'd be at the Kusanya Café on Chicago's South Side, Renée Banks, a barista, said she had to fetch extra chairs for the 100 people who showed up.

Mr. Zuckerberg sitting on a porch at a home in Dallas. PHOTO: TAYLOR TOYNES

Amy Dudley, a spokeswoman for the Chan Zuckerberg Initiative LLC, an entity formed in 2015 by Mr. Zuckerberg and his wife, Priscilla Chan, which is helping to arrange the CEO's tour, said the design of "these visits is to have the most honest and candid interactions and discussions as possible, without the additional attention that's likely to come as a result of word getting out ahead of time."

For nearly a decade, Mr. Zuckerberg has started every year with a "personal challenge." In 2009, this meant wearing a tie every day. Another year, he swore only to eat meat that he had personally slaughtered. "I just killed a pig and a goat," he boasted in a private Facebook post in 2011.

Facebook, the 13-year-old company he co-founded, now has two billion monthly active users. Its market value is $446 billion.

In Wilton, Mr. Zuckerberg's advance team had stopped at city hall to secure a meeting with Wilton Mayor Bob Barrett and City Administrator Chris Ball to discuss life in rural Iowa before the CEO went to the candy store.

But Messers. Ball and Barrett were asked not to tell anyone Mr. Zuckerberg was coming. Mr. Ball said Mr. Zuckerberg's representatives instructed them not to relay verbatim quotes from their discussions with him if asked by reporters.

"They asked me not to quote what Mr. Zuckerberg said," Mr. Ball said. "They said to refer people to their press guys."

Mr. Zuckerberg on July 4 at the Mount Marathon Race in Seward, Alaska. PHOTO: RUSS WINSLOW

Mr. Zuckerberg spent the July 4 weekend in Alaska, the 15th state he's visited on his tour since it began in January. He stayed at the Kachemak Bay Wilderness Lodge, a $1,000-per-night fishing resort on the Kenai Peninsula. A receptionist said the lodge's owners wouldn't discuss the visit. "You have to call Amy Dudley," she said.

Ms. Dudley, a former aide to Vice President Joe Biden and Virginia Sen. Tim Kaine, said Mr. Zuckerberg declined to be interviewed for this article.

Despite his world-wide fame, Mr. Zuckerberg isn't always recognized by his surprise hosts.

In June, he attended an Iftar dinner in Minneapolis. Mr. Zuckerberg arrived after the prayers and the other people in the room, who were mostly refugees from Somalia, didn't know who he was, said attendee Mohammed Jama.

Blues musician James "Super Chikan" Johnson was booked in February to play a concert funded by a mystery client at the Ground Zero Blues Club in Clarksdale, Miss. Mr. Johnson, 66, said it is unusual for him to not be told for whom he'd be performing. When he was on stage setting up his equipment, Mr. Zuckerberg approached.

"They said, 'That's Mark Zuckerberg.' I said, 'Who dat?'" Mr. Johnson said. "They said, 'It's the Facebook guy, the guy who owns the Facebook. I said, 'You've got to be kidding me.' I had no idea who he was."

The secrecy surrounding Mr. Zuckerberg's visits has nearly led to his target audience blowing him off.

Adam Kragthorpe, who runs a local youth hockey program in Minnetonka, Minn., deleted the initial email from James Eby requesting a meeting for "a Fortune 500 CEO who is traveling the United States and visiting a wide range of communities."

"We thought it was a multilevel marketing scheme," Mr. Kragthorpe said.

Mr. Zuckerberg and his wife, Priscilla Chan, with Bill Lockett, owner of Ground Zero Blues Club in Mississippi in February. PHOTO: SCOTT TRIMBLE

Mr. Eby, who planned travels for four Defense secretaries in the Obama administration, is now a contractor working for the Chan Zuckerberg Initiative. He declined to comment.

Two days after he emailed Mr. Kragthorpe, Mr. Eby arrived unannounced at the hockey rink.

Mr. Kragthorpe said he was told that Mr. Zuckerberg would like to visit with hockey families a couple of days later. He said Mr. Eby told him not to tell anyone the Facebook CEO was coming and asked that people at the rink not photograph the CEO.

The Zuckerberg entourage, which can be up to eight people, includes a professional photographer. His aides said there is no prohibition against others snapping pictures.

In Newton Falls, Ohio, Dan Moore got a call in April from Jimmy Dahman, a former presidential campaign field organizer for Hillary Clinton in Ohio. Mr. Dahman doesn't work for Mr. Zuckerberg's organization, but was acting as a volunteer, he said.

He wanted to know if Mr. Moore, a Democratic union steelworker who was a volunteer for Donald Trump's presidential campaign, would host "a billionaire philanthropist from California" at his home five days later.

Four days later, Mr. Moore, 57, was standing in his driveway waiting for his mystery guest. Fifteen minutes before a pair of black SUVs arrived, he was told he'd be joined by Mr. Zuckerberg.

Mr. Moore and his family enjoyed a dinner of chicken Francaise and baked whitefish Mr. Zuckerberg's staff had catered from a nearby restaurant. As Mr. Zuckerberg was leaving, he made one request, Mr. Moore said.

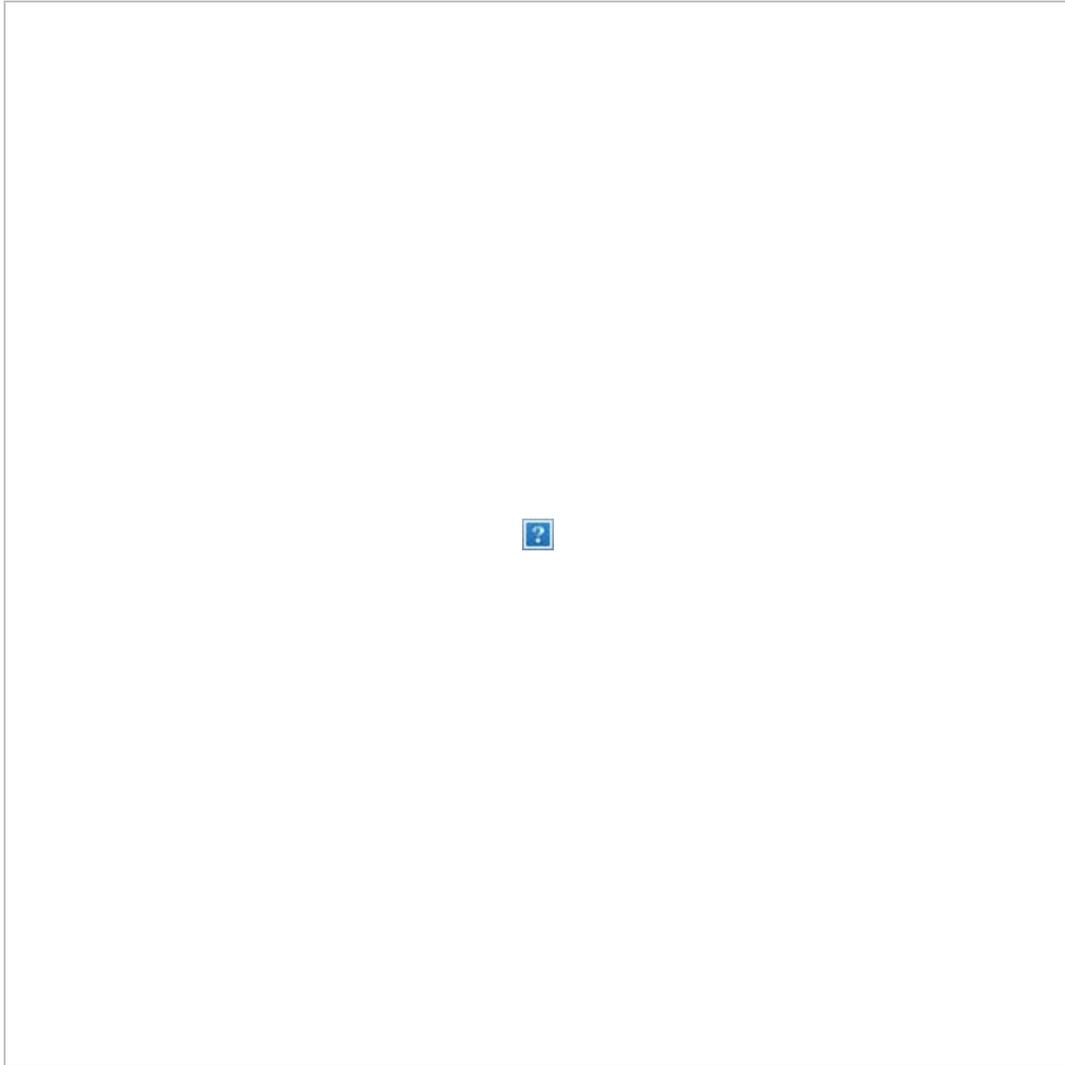

“He said, ‘If there are any news reporters that call you, just make sure you tell them I’m not running for president.’”

Write to Reid J. Epstein at reid.epstein@wsj.com and Deepa Seetharaman at Deepa.Seetharaman@wsj.com

From: The White House
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Your 1600 Daily
Date: Wednesday, June 14, 2017 2:04:03 PM

STATEMENT FROM PRESIDENT DONALD J. TRUMP

As you all know, shortly after 7:00 a.m. this morning, a gunman opened fire on members of Congress and their staffs as they were practicing for tomorrow's annual charity baseball game.

Authorities are continuing to investigate the crime, and the assailant has now died from his injuries. The FBI is leading the investigation and will continue to provide updates as new information becomes available.

Congressman Steve Scalise, a member of House leadership, was shot and badly wounded, and is now in stable condition at the hospital, along with two very courageous Capitol Police officers. At least two others were also wounded.

Many lives would have been lost if not for the heroic actions of the two Capitol Police officers who took down the gunman despite sustaining gunshot wounds during a very, very brutal assault.

Melania and I are grateful for their heroism and praying for the swift recovery of all victims.

Congressman Scalise is a friend, and a very good friend. He's a patriot and he's a fighter. He will recover from this assault. And, Steve, I want you to know that you have the prayers not only of the entire city behind you, but of an entire nation and, frankly, the entire world. America is praying for you and America is praying for all of the victims of this terrible shooting.

I spoke with Steve's wife, Jennifer, and I pledged to her our full and absolute support -- anything she needs. We are with her and with the entire Scalise family.

I have also spoken with Chief Matthew Verderosa -- he's doing a fantastic job -- of the Capitol Police to express our sympathies for his wounded officers and to express my admiration for their courage. Our brave Capitol Police perform a challenging job with incredible skill, and their sacrifice makes democracy possible.

We also commend the brave first responders from Alexandria Police, Fire and Rescue who rushed to the scene. Everyone on that field is a public servant -- our courageous police, our congressional aides who work so tirelessly behind the scenes with enormous devotion, and our dedicated members of Congress who represent our people.

We may have our differences, but we do well, in times like these, to remember that everyone who serves in our nation's capital is here because, above all, they love our country.

We can all agree that we are blessed to be Americans, that our children deserve to grow up in a nation of safety and peace, and that we are strongest when we are unified and when we work together for the common good.

Please take a moment today to cherish those you love, and always remember those who serve and keep us safe. God bless them all, God bless you, and God Bless America. Thank you.

Privacy Policy | Contact the White House | Unsubscribe

August 21, 2017

The Honorable Ryan Zinke
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, N.W.
Washington DC 20240

Dear Mr. Zinke,

On behalf of the National Stone Sand and Gravel Association, I write to invite you to address our Legislative and Policy Forum in Washington, D.C., Sept. 24-27, 2017. As you are aware, NSSGA has over 800 members in North America whose activities support hundreds of thousands of jobs across the continent and contribute exponentially to an evolving global economy. Our Forum is designed to bring representatives of these voices together in our nation's capital for innovative discussions on infrastructure, development, safety, the environment, tax and trade.

We wish to specifically request your appearance on Monday, Sept. 25, 2017, at your convenience between 6 and 7 p.m. at the Hyatt Regency Capitol Hill at 400 New Jersey Ave NW. We understand that this Forum is occurring at a crucial time in the fiscal year when your Department is highly active. You are invited to enjoy as much of our Forum as time allows, but we expect not to keep you longer than 30 minutes for brief 10 minute remarks followed by questions. Our membership would be very interested in hearing about the important work your department is undertaking, particularly on Endangered Species Act issues. We believe your input and participation would be invaluable in fostering a robust discussion among our nearly 300 expected attendees.

We would appreciate the favor of a reply by September 5, 2017. Should you have any additional questions please do not hesitate to reach out to Laura O'Neill-Kaumo, NSSGA senior vice president of government and regulatory affairs, at loneill@nssga.org. We look forward to the pleasure of your company and hearing the unique perspective that you will undoubtedly bring to our anticipated event.

Sincerely,

Michael W. Johnson
NSSGA President and CEO

August 2, 2017

The Honorable Ryan Zinke
Secretary
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, NW
Washington, DC 20240

Dear Secretary Zinke:

On behalf of the Steering Committee for National Clean Energy Week (NCEW), I am writing to invite you to participate in the inaugural National Clean Energy Week Symposium. The symposium will be held on Tuesday, September 26, 2017 at the Reserve Officers Association at One Constitution Avenue, NE, Washington, DC 20002.

It would be an honor to have you open the symposium with an 8:00 am breakfast featuring a discussion with you and Secretary Perry on the topic of "Harnessing the Potential of Clean Energy in the 21st Century". The discussion will be moderated by The Honorable Kelly Ayotte, who serves as a senior advisor to Citizens for Responsible Energy Solutions (CRES). If this time does not work for your schedule, we would be happy to accommodate you at another time.

The purpose of NCEW is to bring together industry associations, business leaders, non-profits, and advocates in the clean energy space for a week of events and activities in Washington, DC, and across America highlighting the value and benefits of clean energy solutions. In Washington, DC, there will be a series of events on Capitol Hill and downtown highlighting the work of these industries.

The NCEW Steering Committee is led by key industry associations across the clean energy spectrum. Members of the Steering Committee include:

*American Council on Renewable Energy
American Gas Association
American Wind Energy Association
Advanced Energy Economy
Business Council for Sustainable Energy Clean Energy Business Network*

*CRES Forum
National Hydropower Association
Nuclear Energy Institute
Solar Energy Industries Association
Solid Waste Association of North America*

It would be an honor for you to join us for this event. Please do not hesitate to contact me at hreams@citizensfor.com or (202) 276-7579.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Heather Reams".

Heather Reams
Managing Director

From: Swift, Heather
To: David Mihalic
Subject: Zinke speeches
Date: Thursday, June 22, 2017 6:48:04 PM
Attachments: Remarks_OutdoorIndustryEconomicReport.docx
Remarks_ShenandoahRoundtable.docx

Attached is two speeches Z had for two outdoor rec events.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Daly, Matthew
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: Zinke travel
Date: Tuesday, November 21, 2017 3:42:04 PM

Can you send me your statement from last night on Lola Zinke?

The information contained in this communication is intended for the use of the designated recipients named above. If the reader of this communication is not the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that you have received this communication in error, and that any review, dissemination, distribution or copying of this communication is strictly prohibited. If you have received this communication in error, please notify The Associated Press immediately by telephone at +1-212-621-1500 and delete this email. Thank you.

Ryan K. Zinke

March 6, 2017

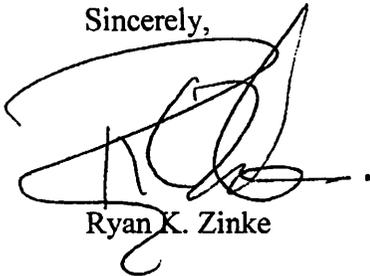

Continental Divide International, LLC
409 W 2nd Street
Whitefish, MT 59937

To Whom It May Concern,

With confirmation by the United States Senate to become Secretary of the United States Department of the Interior, I am required to resign from all outside positions in which I serve. The purpose of this letter is to convey my resignation, effective immediately, from my management positions with Continental Divide International, LLC; however, I will remain a non-managing member.

During my appointment to the position of Secretary of the United States Department of the Interior, I will not manage or provide any other services to Continental Divide International, LLC, and I will receive only passive investment income therefrom.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'R. Zinke', with a large, sweeping flourish above it.

Ryan K. Zinke

Ryan K. Zinke

March 6, 2017

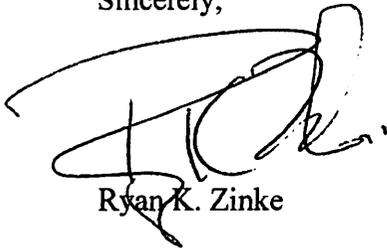

Double Tap, LLC
409 W 2nd Street
Whitefish, MT 59937

To Whom It May Concern,

With confirmation by the United States Senate to become Secretary of the United States Department of the Interior, I am required to resign from all outside positions in which I serve. The purpose of this letter is to convey my resignation, effective immediately, from my position as a managing member of Double Tap, LLC; however, I will remain a non-managing member.

During my appointment to the position of Secretary of the United States Department of the Interior, I will not manage or provide any other services to Double Tap, LLC, and I will receive only passive investment income therefrom.

Sincerely,

Ryan K. Zinke

Ryan K. Zinke

March 6, 2017

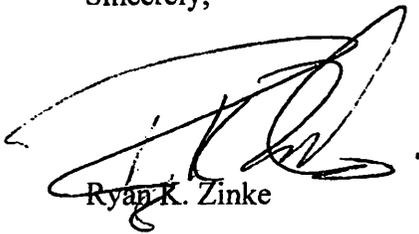

Great Northern Veterans Peace Park Foundation
409 W 2nd Street
Whitefish, MT 59937

To Whom It May Concern,

With confirmation by the United States Senate to become Secretary of the United States Department of the Interior, I am required to resign from all outside positions in which I serve. The purpose of this letter is to convey my resignation, effective immediately, as President of Great Northern Veterans Peace Park Foundation.

During my appointment to the position of Secretary of the United States Department of the Interior, I will not manage or provide any other services to Great Northern Veterans Peace Park Foundation.

Sincerely,

Ryan K. Zinke

January 10, 2017

Melinda Loftin
Designated Agency Ethics Official
and Director, Ethics Office
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, NW, MS 7346
Washington, DC 20240

Dear Ms. Loftin:

The purpose of this letter is to describe the steps that I will take to avoid any actual or apparent conflict of interest in the event that I am confirmed for the position of Secretary of the Department of Interior.

As required by 18 U.S.C. § 208(a), I will not participate personally and substantially in any particular matter in which I know that I have a financial interest directly and predictably affected by the matter, or in which I know that a person whose interests are imputed to me has a financial interest directly and predictably affected by the matter, unless I first obtain a written waiver, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 208(b)(1), or qualify for a regulatory exemption, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 208(b)(2). I understand that the interests of the following persons are imputed to me: any spouse or minor child of mine; any general partner of a partnership in which I am a limited or general partner; any organization in which I serve as officer, director, trustee, general partner or employee; and any person or organization with which I am negotiating or have an arrangement concerning prospective employment.

Upon confirmation, I will resign from my position with Great Northern Veterans Peace Park Foundation. For a period of one year after my resignation, I will not participate personally and substantially in any particular matter involving specific parties in which I know this entity is a party or represents a party, unless I am first authorized to participate, pursuant to 5 C.F.R. § 2635.502(d).

Upon confirmation, I will resign from my positions with Continental Divide International, LLC, and become a non-managing member of this entity. During my appointment to the position of Secretary, I will not manage this entity or provide any other services to it. Instead, I will receive only passive investment income from it. As Secretary, I will not participate personally and substantially in any particular matter that to my knowledge has a direct and predictable effect on the financial interests of Continental Divide International, LLC, unless I first obtain a written waiver, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 208(b)(1).

Upon confirmation, I will resign from my position with Double Tap, LLC, and I will become a non-managing member of this entity. During my appointment, I will not manage this entity or provide any other services to it. Instead, I will receive only passive investment income from it. As Secretary, I will not participate personally and substantially in any particular matter that to my knowledge has a direct and predictable effect on the financial interests of Double Tap, LLC, unless I first obtain a written waiver, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 208(b)(1).

I receive royalties from Thomas Nelson for sales of my book, American Commander: Serving a Country Worth Fighting For and Training the Brave Soldiers Who Lead the Way. I will not participate personally and substantially in any particular matter involving specific parties in which I know Thomas Nelson is a party or represents a party, unless I am first authorized to participate, pursuant to 5 C.F.R. § 2635.502(d).

My spouse has a vested beneficial interest in, and receives property management fees from, a family trust with underlying assets consisting of rental properties and an undeveloped lot, all of which are located in Santa Barbara, CA. As Secretary, I will not participate personally and substantially in any particular matter that to my knowledge has a direct and predictable effect on the financial interests of this trust, unless I first obtain a written waiver, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 208(b)(1).

If I am confirmed as Secretary of the Department of the Interior, I am aware that I am prohibited by 30 U.S.C. § 1211(f) from holding a financial interest in any surface or underground coal mining operation. Additionally, I am aware that my position is subject to the prohibitions against holding any financial interest in federal lands or resources administered or controlled by the Department of the Interior extended to me by supplemental regulation 5 C.F.R. § 3501.103.

Finally, I have been advised that this ethics agreement will be posted publicly, consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 552, on the website of the U.S. Office of Government Ethics with ethics agreements of other Presidential nominees who file public financial disclosure reports.

Sincerely,

Ryan Zinke

February 2, 2017

Melinda Loftin
Designated Agency Ethics Official
and Director, Ethics Office
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, NW, MS 7346
Washington, DC 20240

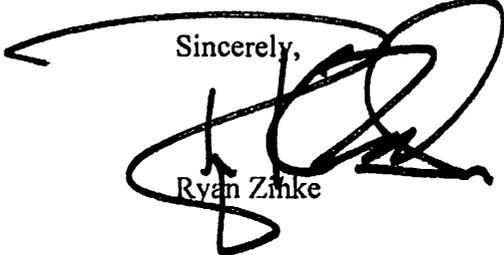

Dear Ms. Loftin:

The purpose of this letter is to supplement my ethics agreement signed on January 10, 2017. The following information supplements my ethics agreement:

I understand that as an appointee I will be required to sign the Ethics Pledge required under the Executive Order dated January 28, 2017 (“Ethics Commitments by Executive Branch Appointees”) and that I will be bound by the requirements and restrictions therein in addition to the commitments I made in the ethics agreement I signed on January 10, 2017.

I have been advised that this supplement to my ethics agreement will be posted publicly, consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 552, on the website of the U.S. Office of Government Ethics with ethics agreements of other Presidential nominees who file public financial disclosure reports.

Sincerely,

Ryan Zinke

From: Corbin Hiar
To: Swift, Heather; Laura Rigas
Subject: FW: COMPLETED - Request for Information for order 65394 for GREAT NORTHERN VETERANS PEACE PARK FOUNDATION, INC. (D172957)
Date: Friday, May 19, 2017 5:36:38 PM
Attachments: Certificate for Request for Information Fulfillment.pdf
CertificateOfFact.pdf

For the record, here's proof that I was only able to nail this story down about an hour and a half ago.

From: Business Registration [mailto:noreply@mtsosfilings.gov]
Sent: Friday, May 19, 2017 4:08 PM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Subject: COMPLETED - Request for Information for order 65394 for GREAT NORTHERN VETERANS PEACE PARK FOUNDATION, INC. (D172957)

Dear Business Customer,

Business Name: GREAT NORTHERN VETERANS PEACE PARK FOUNDATION, INC.

Your request for information has been processed, and the document(s) are attached to this email.

To view the information, log in to SIMS and go to "My Service Orders" tab and select the appropriate request to view the information.

Please contact the Business Services Division at (406) 444-5522 with any questions you may have.

Best Regards,

Corey Stapleton
Montana Secretary of State

Delivery Id: 359269

From: Heather Swift
To: Laura Rigas; Scott Hommel
Subject: Fwd: Following up re Mrs. Zinke
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2017 8:18:32 AM

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Date: June 19, 2017 at 9:29:58 PM EDT
To: "Swift, Heather" <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Cc: Noelle Straub <nstraub@eenews.net>
Subject: RE: Following up re Mrs. Zinke

Hi Heather,

Thanks for reaching out and I'm sorry about the radio silence on my end. Because the editors weren't comfortable running my unnamed sources' claims against your stated denials, we've decided to hold the story for now.

Best,

Corbin

From: Swift, Heather [heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, June 19, 2017 3:34 PM
To: Corbin Hiar
Cc: Noelle Straub
Subject: Following up re Mrs. Zinke

Hi Corbin, I saw you submitted FOIA requests regarding Mrs. Zinke last week. Is there anything you need follow-up information on?

Thank you,

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Swift, Heather
To: Laura Rigas
Subject: Fwd: Interior Department and EE
Date: Wednesday, June 07, 2017 4:00:11 PM

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----
From: Michael Witt <michael@eenews.net>
Date: Wed, Jun 7, 2017 at 3:57 PM
Subject: RE: Interior Department and EE
To: "Swift, Heather" <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

Heather –

Thanks for sending this. I have briefed my partner and editor-in-chief Kevin Braun and the Greenwire editor, Cy Zaneski on our call and have forwarded your email to them.

You will hear back from Cy today – unclear exactly what time as he's juggling his afternoon deadline but you will hear from him.

I appreciate the straight-forward manner of your presentation. It has prompted a serious conversation here and I expect you will have a substantive and respectful conversation.

Let me know if you are not satisfied with the follow-up,

Michael Witt

Publisher

E&E News

mwitt@eenews.net

202-446-0422 (office)

301-717-7062

E&E NEWS

122 C Street NW 7th Floor Washington, DC 20001

www.eenews.net | @EENewsUpdates | 202-628-6500

Energywire, Climatewire, Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM, E&E TV

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, June 7, 2017 2:43 PM
To: Michael Witt; Laura Rigas
Subject: Interior Department and EE

Hi there, Michael. Thank you for taking my call earlier today. The Department has dozens if not over a hundred subscriptions to E&E so it's no secret that we value your coverage of our issues. As such, the Department and E&E enjoy a positive and productive working relationship with every reporter on your staff with the exception of one.

Corbin Hiar has proven to be unwilling to work with the Department in a professional and unbiased manner. He routinely springs biased and poorly-researched stories on us with about an hour deadline to respond, knowing that responses to these types of questions require days. We have had several conversations with him over the months about getting more time to respond to inquiries that are not run of the mill policy questions. I have explained that we often have to track down official documentation, speak with attorneys, speak with the Secretary, etc. This is not something that can be done in an hour. He sometimes gives me a day extension but that is still not adequate time in many cases.

Additionally, when the Department's communications office presents information that proves the allegations wrong, he refuses to accept that perhaps he was given bad information, and still treats the allegations as if they were true, and continues to write an inaccurate and leading article.

For example: (example 3 below) There was a matter of the Secretary resigning from his small businesses upon confirmation to the Cabinet. The Secretary in fact resigned and we provided Corbin with the proper legal documentation to prove that. We also had statements explaining the process and the timeline, clearly showing that the Secretary met all of his requirements. Rather than cut bait on a non-story, Corbin proceeded as planned with a leading and biased story that strongly insinuated that the Secretary was not in full compliance with his ethics pledge.

There are still more troubling exchanges where I approach Corbin to get information about a story he is researching and then he blatantly lied to me that he is writing a story. The situation with Mrs. Zinke is a perfect example, which is example 1 below.

My colleagues and I have made every effort to have a positive and productive working relationship with Corbin and all of E&E. Jennifer was one of the only reporters to get a one-on-one in Utah when the Secretary was there for Bears Ears. I've given Corbin plenty of "heads up" opportunities for announcements and travel, and the comms director at the Interior would have a weekly call with him to go over the week ahead. In the end,

Corbin however has not returned the professionalism. Instead he sneaks around and writes leading and misinformed stories in darkness. I'm happy to continue working with any one of your other reporters but Corbin has taken an antagonistic and combative approach to his beat. I'm afraid his editor hasn't done much to correct his tactics either.

Thank you for your time and consideration. Please reply all, I've CCed my boss, Laura Rigas, DOI Communications Director.

Heather Swift

Press Secretary

U.S. Department of the Interior

c: 202-897-7111

d: 202-208-5338

EXAMPLE 1: Investigative piece into the wife of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, Lolita Zinke. I have been hearing for weeks from a sitting U.S. Senator, reporters from other news outlets, past administration officials, hill staff, and current DOI employees that Corbin has been asking around for information on Mrs. Zinke. When I approached Corbin twice on the subject, he avoided discussing the scope of his story or the deadline, or even ask a question about some of the information that he has been fed. As recent as yesterday, I asked Corbin if there was anything I could answer for him as I had heard once again that he was asking people for information on Mrs. Zinke. He gave one piece of intel, that Mrs. Zinke has a desk at the Department, which is patently false, and he refused to accept this fact. This morning I received an email from Corbin at 10:00 AM, with an 11:30 deadline, suggesting multiple accounts of wrong-doing by Mrs. Zinke and the Secretary, and not a shred of evidence to support his claims. When I asked about the claims he is extremely cagey, if not all together non-responsive.

10:02 AM (3 hours ago)

Corbin Hiar via ios.doi.gov

to Interior_Press

We have a story about Mrs. Zinke's activities at Interior that, due to competitive pressures, may run as soon as today. The story notes that she has travelled in official vehicles with the secretary, which appears to be a violation the department's policy against transporting family members in government vehicles except for in cases of emergency. It also details many of the non-public events she has attended with the secretary, her desk in his office, and her role managing CDI and a family trust with assets in California. The story, which provides background on Mrs. Zinke and her life with the secretary, includes quotes from watchdogs and former government officials noting how unusual such an arrangement is.

Why did she need that desk? Why has she traveled in government vehicles if, as Heather said yesterday, she has "no role at Interior"? Why did she receive an ethics briefing in early March if she has no role? Why did she attend a meeting with California Democratic Gov. Jerry Brown about water, infrastructure and conservation projects when such efforts could affect the value of her family trust or benefit CDI? Why was that meeting and all other events during the California trip not included on the secretary's calendar?

Please get back to me with any responses by 11:30. And I'm happy to provide more detail about the story if you have any questions.

Thanks, C

Corbin Hiar

Interior Reporter

O: 202 446 0438

M: 718 608 5314

T: @corbinhiar

EXAMPLE 2: Article summarizing aspects of Interior nominee David Bernhardt's senate hearing in which Corbin writes extensively about alleged ties to Jack Abramoff, without ever contacting the Department for a response. Corbin's article was wildly misleading and insinuated guilt and that Mr. Bernhardt was lying. When I approached Corbin and asked why he didn't contact Interior for information, he said it was because he didn't want to get scooped by Politico on the story. After I provided Corbin with a statement refuting the allegations, he included a few words he picked out of our statement.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, June 05, 2017 3:11 PM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Subject: ?

Corbin - Curious why you didn't reach out to us about this article? <https://www.eenews.net/eedaily/2017/06/05/stories/1060055514>

On Mon, Jun 5, 2017 at 3:37 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Hi Heather,

Thanks for reading and for the question. There were a couple of reasons I didn't contact you about the story.

First and foremost, because I was quoting directly from Bernhardt, who as a nominee for Interior's second-highest job can be reasonably expected to represent the viewpoints of the department.

Second, and less importantly, because I didn't get the QFRs until Friday evening and wasn't able to go through them until Sunday afternoon. We also knew Politico would have something out on Monday morning and wanted to do the same.

Do you disagree with my reasoning here? Is there some statement from Interior that you'd like us to consider adding?

Best, C

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, June 05, 2017 4:34 PM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: ?

1. Mr. Bernhardt is not yet our Deputy Secretary and therefore does not speak on behalf of the Department.
2. You have two email addresses for me, one for Laura, and three cell phone numbers between the two of us. We are always responsive over the weekend.
3. Background: Mr. Bernhardt is a highly-experienced and well-respected veteran Interior official. Mr. Bernhardt has been cleared several times over by the IG, the FBI and other federal government ethics officials with regard to Abramoff. All have corroborated Bernhardt was not at the dinner. Prior to his nomination, Mr. Bernhardt was subject to rigorous ethics vetting that found him fit for service.

DOI Statement: Just as Mr. Bernhardt said in response to Senator Franken, Mr. Bernhardt does not believe he ever met Abramoff and has no relationship with him. Mr. Bernhardt is unequivocal that he never attended any dinner, let alone the dinner that E&E News wrongly insinuated that he did. All E&E had to do to verify this fact was pick up the phone and ask.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

We've updated the story.

Note: The story was updated to include the line.... Interior Press Secretary Heather Swift, however, said in an email that Bernhardt "never attended any dinner" with Abramoff.

EXAMPLE 3: On a Friday after 5:00PM (when Government employees go home if they don't telework) Corbin emails weeks worth of research and allegations of misconduct by the Secretary, asking for a response by 11:00AM Monday. Essentially giving the Department two hours to work with the career officials in the Department to track down legal and ethics paperwork (not to mention Montana Secretary of State and Montana lawyers who are 2 hours behind). Corbin alleged the Secretary did not fulfill his ethics requirements because he was still a member of his family's small businesses upon confirmation to the Cabinet. The Secretary however did in fact resign and we provided Corbin with the proper legal documentation to prove that. We also explained the process and the timeline, clearly showing that the Secretary met all of his requirements. Rather than cut bait on a non-story, Corbin proceeded as planned with a wildly biased story that strongly insinuated that the Secretary was not in full compliance with his ethics pledge.

On Fri, May 19, 2017 at 5:09 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Hi, we're planning to run a story in Monday's Greenwire about Secretary Zinke's failure to resign from Continental Divide International LLC, Double Tap LLC, and Great Northern Veterans Peace Park Inc. before assuming office, as he promised to do in his agreement with the Office of Government Ethics. The story explains that his continued involvement with these entities as well as Lolita's role at CDI and access to top decisionmakers open the secretary up to, at the very least, the appearance of conflicts of interest.

Do you have any comment on Zinke's failure to follow through on his OGE agreement? Also, can you explain why Lolita has been allowed to sit in on meetings with the governor of California, a state in which she owns more than $1 million worth of property, and other closed-door events? How will Interior prevent her or the secretary for violating ethics and conflict of interest laws and policies?

I'd also like to note that the story includes links to previous reporting on Zinke's alleged travel fraud and close ties to the Special Operations for America PAC as well as documents about the history of CDI. That's not something you can really comment on, but I don't want you to be surprised when you see it in the story.

Please get back to me with a comment by 11 a.m. on Monday. Feel free to give me a call on my cell phone with any questions or concerns you may have about this request. I'm happy to elaborate if needed.

Best, C

Corbin Hiar
Interior Reporter
O: 202 446 0438
M: 718 608 5314

T: @corbinhiar

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 11:43 AM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov; Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance

"The claims made by E&E are patently false, and as promised, 'upon confirmation' Secretary Zinke resigned as a managing member from the family's two small businesses and a nonprofit organization which he founded to build the Veterans Peace Park, a sledding park for the children of Whitefish, Montana. The Secretary worked with the career veteran ethics officials at the Department every step of the way. He currently has no management role in any of the organizations identified."

Timeline of events:

On January 10, then-Congressman Zinke signed a letter pledging to resign as a managing official from the three entities 'upon confirmation' (which he did). (document attached)

On March 2nd, just an hour after arriving at the Department for the first time, the Secretary met with ethics officials to go over the ethics regulations and laws, including a review of his ethics agreement. This was his first meeting as Secretary.

On March 6th, the ethics officials presented the Secretary with, and he signed, documents executing the resignation (attached).

Regarding Mrs. Zinke: “There was no violation of any government ethics rules. Out of an abundance of caution, Mrs. Zinke received an ethics briefing in early March to avoid even the appearance of a conflict.

On background:

The Executive Branch Stands of Ethical Conduct do not apply to private citizens, including spouses.

Following the death of her mother in October, Mrs. Zinke inherited her parents' home and residential rental property business.

May 25 (13 days ago)

Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>

to me, Interior_Press, Laura

[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

Why did it take Secretary Zinke three days to in office to sign the resignation letters? What happened to the letters after he signed them? Why did the Montana Secretary of State's office not receive them?

Please get back to me by 11 a m. We plan to run the story today.

May 25 (13 days ago)

Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

to Corbin, Interior_Press, Laura

[redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted]

[]

[]

Corbin, The Secretary fulfilled his commitment and requirement to resign as a managing official. I'll remind you of the timeline. The Secretary's very first meeting was with the ethics office to resign as a managing official from the three entities. The ethics office then prepared the paperwork and presented it to him as soon as it was available, which was two businessdays later. Preparing and executing legal documents is a process, which in this case, was done as thoroughly and as expeditiously as possible. The documents were mailed to the attorney of the boards, who confirmed receipt, fulfilling the Secretary's requirement.

On March 2nd, just an hour after arriving at the Department for the first time, the Secretary met with ethics officials to go over the ethics regulations and laws, including a review of his ethics agreement. This was his first meeting as Secretary.

On March 6th, the ethics officials presented the Secretary with, and he signed, documents executing the resignation (attached).

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Swift, Heather
To: Dorr, Kaelan K. EOP/WHO; Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO; Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO; Laura Rigas
Subject: FYI -- DOI/Zinke
Date: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 11:57:29 AM
Attachments: Zinke, Ryan - Resignation Letters.pdf
Zinke-Ryan-finalAMENDEDEEA.pdf

Team: Wanted to make you aware of a hit piece from EE News (trade subscription) regarding Sec. Zinke's ethics agreement and whether or not he resigned from his two family businesses and non profit organization. Inquiry in blue at the far bottom.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Swift, Heather
Date: Tue, May 23, 2017 at 11:43 AM
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance
To: Corbin Hiar

"The claims made by E&E are patently false, and as promised, 'upon confirmation' Secretary Zinke resigned as a managing member from the family's two small businesses and a nonprofit organization which he founded to build the Veterans Peace Park, a sledding park for the children of Whitefish, Montana. The Secretary worked with the career veteran ethics officials at the Department every step of the way. He currently has no management role in any of the organizations identified."

Timeline of events:

On January 10, then-Congressman Zinke signed a letter pledging to resign as a managing official from the three entities 'upon confirmation' (which he did). (document attached)

On March 2nd, just an hour after arriving at the Department for the first time, the Secretary met with ethics officials to go over the ethics regulations and laws, including a review of his ethics agreement. This was his first meeting as Secretary.

On March 6th, the ethics officials presented the Secretary with, and he signed, documents executing the resignation (attached).

Regarding Mrs. Zinke: "There was no violation of any government ethics rules. Out of an abundance of caution, Mrs. Zinke received an ethics briefing in early March to avoid even the appearance of a conflict.

On background:

The Executive Branch Stands of Ethical Conduct do not apply to private citizens, including spouses.

Following the death of her mother in October, Mrs. Zinke inherited her parents' home and residential rental property business.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior

On Fri, May 19, 2017 at 5:09 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Hi, we're planning to run a story in Monday's Greenwire about Secretary Zinke's failure to resign from Continental Divide International LLC, Double Tap LLC, and Great Northern Veterans Peace Park Inc. before assuming office, as he promised to do in his agreement with the Office of Government Ethics. The story explains that his continued involvement with these entities as well as Lolita's role at CDI and access to top decisionmakers open the secretary up to, at the very least, the appearance of conflicts of interest.

Do you have any comment on Zinke's failure to follow through on his OGE agreement? Also, can you explain why Lolita has been allowed to sit in on meetings with the governor of California, a state in which she owns more than $1 million worth of property, and other closed-door events? How will Interior prevent her or the secretary for violating ethics and conflict of interest laws and policies?

I'd also like to note that the story includes links to previous reporting on Zinke's alleged travel fraud and close ties to the Special Operations for America PAC as well as documents about the history of CDI. That's not something you can really comment on, but I don't want you to be surprised when you see it in the story.

Please get back to me with a comment by 11 a.m. on Monday. Feel free to give me a call on my cell phone with any questions or concerns you may have about this request. I'm happy to elaborate if needed.

Best, C

Corbin Hiar
Interior Reporter
O: 202 446 0438
M: 718 608 5314
T: @corbinhiar

From: Michael Witt
To: Swift_Heather
Subject: RE: Interior Department and EE
Date: Wednesday, June 07, 2017 4:11:42 PM

Certainly my goal – I appreciate you reaching out.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, June 7, 2017 4:04 PM
To: Michael Witt
Subject: Re: Interior Department and EE

Thank you, Michael. Your willingness to hear me out and your concern for the matter gives me hope E&E and DOI can get back on good footing.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Jun 7, 2017 at 3:57 PM, Michael Witt <michael@eenews.net> wrote:
Heather –

Thanks for sending this. I have briefed my partner and editor-in-chief Kevin Braun and the Greenwire editor, Cy Zaneski on our call and have forwarded your email to them.

You will hear back from Cy today – unclear exactly what time as he's juggling his afternoon deadline but you will hear from him.

I appreciate the straight-forward manner of your presentation. It has prompted a serious conversation here and I expect you will have a substantive and respectful conversation.

Let me know if you are not satisfied with the follow-up,

Michael Witt
Publisher
E&E News

mwitt@eenews.net
202-446-0422 (office)
301-717-7062

E&E NEWS
122 C Street NW 7th Floor Washington, DC 20001
www.eenews.net | @EENewsUpdates | 202-628-6500
Energywire, Climatewire, Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM, E&E TV

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, June 7, 2017 2:43 PM
To: Michael Witt; Laura Rigas
Subject: Interior Department and EE

Hi there, Michael. Thank you for taking my call earlier today. The Department has dozens if not over a hundred subscriptions to E&E so it's no secret that we value your coverage of our issues. As such, the Department and E&E enjoy a positive and productive working relationship with every reporter on your staff with the exception of one.

Corbin Hiar has proven to be unwilling to work with the Department in a professional and unbiased manner. He routinely springs biased and poorly-researched stories on us with about an hour deadline to respond, knowing that responses to these types of questions require days. We have had several conversations with him over the months about getting more time to respond to inquiries that are not run of the mill policy questions. I have explained that we often have to track down official documentation, speak with attorneys, speak with the Secretary, etc. This is not something that can be done in an hour. He sometimes gives me a day extension but that is still not adequate time in many cases.

Additionally, when the Department's communications office presents information that proves the allegations wrong, he refuses to accept that perhaps he was given bad information, and still treats the allegations as if they were true, and continues to write an inaccurate and leading article.

For example: (example 3 below) There was a matter of the Secretary resigning from his small businesses upon confirmation to the Cabinet. The Secretary in fact resigned and we provided Corbin with the proper legal documentation to prove that. We also had statements explaining the process and the timeline, clearly showing that the Secretary met all of his requirements. Rather than cut bait on a non-story, Corbin proceeded as planned with a leading and biased story that strongly insinuated that the Secretary was not in full compliance with his ethics pledge.

There are still more troubling exchanges where I approach Corbin to get information about a story he is researching and then he blatantly lied to me that he is writing a story. The situation with Mrs. Zinke is a perfect example, which is example 1 below.

My colleagues and I have made every effort to have a positive and productive working relationship with Corbin and all of E&E. Jennifer was one of the only reporters to get a one-on-one in Utah when the Secretary was there for Bears Ears. I've given Corbin plenty of "heads up" opportunities for announcements and travel, and the comms director at the Interior would have a weekly call with him to go over the week ahead. In the end,

Corbin however has not returned the professionalism. Instead he sneaks around and writes leading and misinformed stories in darkness. I'm happy to continue working with any one of your other reporters but Corbin has taken an antagonistic and combative approach to his beat. I'm afraid his editor hasn't done much to correct his tactics either.

Thank you for your time and consideration. Please reply all, I've CCed my boss, Laura Rigas, DOI Communications Director.

Heather Swift
Press Secretary
U.S. Department of the Interior
c: 202-897-7111
d: 202-208-5338

EXAMPLE 1: Investigative piece into the wife of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, Lolita Zinke. I have been hearing for weeks from a sitting U.S. Senator, reporters from other news outlets, past administration officials, hill staff, and current DOI employees that Corbin has been asking around for information on Mrs. Zinke. When I approached Corbin twice on the subject, he avoided discussing the scope of his story or the deadline, or even ask a question about some of the information that he has been fed. As recent as yesterday, I asked Corbin if there was anything I could answer for him as I had heard once again that he was asking people for information on Mrs. Zinke. He gave one piece of intel, that Mrs. Zinke has a desk at the Department, which is patently false, and he refused to accept this fact. This morning I received an email from Corbin at 10:00 AM, with an 11:30 deadline, suggesting multiple accounts of wrong-doing by Mrs. Zinke and the Secretary, and not a shred of evidence to support his claims. When I asked about the claims he is extremely cagey, if not all together non-responsive.

10:02 AM (3 hours ago)

Corbin Hiar via ios.doi.gov

to Interior_Press

We have a story about Mrs. Zinke's activities at Interior that, due to competitive pressures, may run as soon as today. The story notes that she has travelled in official vehicles with the secretary, which appears to be a violation of the department's policy against transporting family members in government vehicles except for in cases of emergency. It also details many of the non-public events she has attended with the secretary, her desk in his office, and her role managing CDI and a family trust with assets in California. The story, which provides background on Mrs. Zinke and her life with the secretary, includes quotes from watchdogs and former government officials noting how unusual such an arrangement is.

Why did she need that desk? Why has she traveled in government vehicles if, as Heather said yesterday, she has "no role at Interior"? Why did she receive an ethics briefing in early March if she has no role? Why did she attend a meeting with California Democratic Gov. Jerry Brown about water, infrastructure and conservation projects when such efforts could affect the value of her family trust or benefit CDI? Why was that meeting and all other events during the California trip not included on the secretary's calendar?

Please get back to me with any responses by 11:30. And I'm happy to provide more detail about the story if you have any questions.

Thanks, C

Corbin Hiar
Interior Reporter
O: 202 446 0438
M: 718 608 5314
T: @corbinhiar

EXAMPLE 2: Article summarizing aspects of Interior nominee David Bernhardt's senate hearing in which Corbin writes extensively about alleged ties to Jack Abramoff, without ever contacting the Department for a response. Corbin's article was wildly misleading and insinuated guilt and that Mr. Bernhardt was lying. When I approached Corbin and asked why he didn't contact Interior for information, he said it was because he didn't want to get scooped by Politico on the story. After I provided Corbin with a statement refuting the allegations, he included a few words he picked out of our statement.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, June 05, 2017 3:11 PM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Subject: ?

Corbin - Curious why you didn't reach out to us about this article? <https://www.eenews.net/eedaily/2017/06/05/stories/1060055514>

On Mon, Jun 5, 2017 at 3:37 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:
Hi Heather,

Thanks for reading and for the question. There were a couple of reasons I didn't contact you about the story.

First and foremost, because I was quoting directly from Bernhardt, who as a nominee for Interior's second-highest job can be reasonably expected to represent the viewpoints of the department.

Second, and less importantly, because I didn't get the QFRs until Friday evening and wasn't able to go through them until Sunday afternoon. We also knew Politico would have something out on Monday morning and wanted to do the same.

Do you disagree with my reasoning here? Is there some statement from Interior that you'd like us to consider adding?

Best, C

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, June 05, 2017 4:34 PM

To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: ?

1. Mr. Bernhardt is not yet our Deputy Secretary and therefore does not speak on behalf of the Department.
2. You have two email addresses for me, one for Laura, and three cell phone numbers between the two of us. We are always responsive over the weekend.
3. Background: Mr. Bernhardt is a highly-experienced and well-respected veteran Interior official. Mr. Bernhardt has been cleared several times over by the IG, the FBI and other federal government ethics officials with regard to Abramoff. All have corroborated Bernhardt was not at the dinner. Prior to his nomination, Mr. Bernhardt was subject to rigorous ethics vetting that found him fit for service.

DOI Statement: Just as Mr. Bernhard said in response to Senator Franken, Mr. Bernhardt does not believe he ever met Abramoff and has no relationship with him. Mr. Bernhardt is unequivocal that he never attended any dinner, let alone the dinner that E&E News wrongly insinuated that he did. All E&E had to do to verify this fact was pick up the phone and ask.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>

We've updated the story.

Note: The story was updated to include the line.... Interior Press Secretary Heather Swift, however, said in an email that Bernhardt "never attended any dinner" with Abramoff.

EXAMPLE 3: On a Friday after 5:00PM (when Government employees go home if they don't telework) Corbin emails weeks worth of research and allegations of misconduct by the Secretary, asking for a response by 11:00AM Monday. Essentially giving the Department two hours to work with the career officials in the Department to track down legal and ethics paperwork (not to mention Montana Secretary of State and Montana lawyers who are 2 hours behind). Corbin alleged the Secretary did not fulfill his ethics requirements because he was still a member of his family's small businesses upon confirmation to the Cabinet. The Secretary however did in fact resign and we provided Corbin with the proper legal documentation to prove that. We also explained the process and the timeline, clearly showing that the Secretary met all of his requirements. Rather than cut bait on a non-story, Corbin proceeded as planned with a wildly biased story that strongly insinuated that the Secretary was not in full compliance with his ethics pledge.

On Fri, May 19, 2017 at 5:09 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Hi, we're planning to run a story in Monday's Greenwire about Secretary Zinke's failure to resign from Continental Divide International LLC, Double Tap LLC, and Great Northern Veterans Peace Park Inc. before assuming office, as he promised to do in his agreement with the Office of Government Ethics. The story explains that his continued involvement with these entities as well as Lolita's role at CDI and access to top decisionmakers open the secretary up to, at the very least, the appearance of conflicts of interest.

Do you have any comment on Zinke's failure to follow through on his OGE agreement? Also, can you explain why Lolita has been allowed to sit in on meetings with the governor of California, a state in which she owns more than $1 million worth of property, and other closed-door events? How will Interior prevent her or the secretary for violating ethics and conflict of interest laws and policies?

I'd also like to note that the story includes links to previous reporting on Zinke's alleged travel fraud and close ties to the Special Operations for America PAC as well as documents about the history of CDI. That's not something you can really comment on, but I don't want you to be surprised when you see it in the story.

Please get back to me with a comment by 11 a.m. on Monday. Feel free to give me a call on my cell phone with any questions or concerns you may have about this request. I'm happy to elaborate if needed.

Best, C

Corbin Hiar
Interior Reporter
O: 202 446 0438
M: 718 608 5314
T: @corbinhiar

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 11:43 AM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov; Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance

"The claims made by E&E are patently false, and as promised, 'upon confirmation' Secretary Zinke resigned as a managing member from the family's two small businesses and a nonprofit organization which he founded to build the Veterans Peace Park, a sledding park for the children of Whitefish, Montana. The Secretary worked with the career veteran ethics officials at the Department every step of the way. He currently has no management role in any of the organizations identified."

Timeline of events:

On January 10, then-Congressman Zinke signed a letter pledging to resign as a managing official from the three entities 'upon confirmation' (which he did). (document attached)

On March 2nd, just an hour after arriving at the Department for the first time, the Secretary met with ethics officials to go over the ethics regulations and laws, including a review of his ethics agreement. This was his first meeting as Secretary.

On March 6th, the ethics officials presented the Secretary with, and he signed, documents executing the resignation (attached).

Regarding Mrs. Zinke: "There was no violation of any government ethics rules. Out of an abundance of caution, Mrs. Zinke received an ethics briefing in early March to avoid even the appearance of a conflict.

On background:

The Executive Branch Stands of Ethical Conduct do not apply to private citizens, including spouses.

Following the death of her mother in October, Mrs. Zinke inherited her parents' home and residential rental property business.

May 25 (13 days ago)

Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>

to me, Interior_Press, Laura

[redacted]

[redacted]

Why did it take Secretary Zinke three days to in office to sign the resignation letters? What happened to the letters after he signed them? Why did the Montana Secretary of State's office not receive them?

Please get back to me by 11 a.m. We plan to run the story today.

May 25 (13 days ago)

Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

[redacted]

[redacted]

to Corbin, Interior_Press, Laura

[redacted]

[redacted]

Corbin, The Secretary fulfilled his commitment and requirement to resign as a managing official. I'll remind you of the timeline. The Secretary's very first meeting was with the ethics office to resign as a managing official from the three entities. The ethics office then prepared the paperwork and presented it to him as soon as it was available, which was two businessdays later. Preparing and executing legal documents is a process, which in this case, was done as thoroughly and as expeditiously as possible. The documents were mailed to the attorney of the boards, who confirmed receipt, fulfilling the Secretary's requirement.

On March 2nd, just an hour after arriving at the Department for the first time, the Secretary met with ethics officials to go over the ethics regulations and laws, including a review of his ethics agreement. This was his first meeting as Secretary.

On March 6th, the ethics officials presented the Secretary with, and he signed, documents executing the resignation (attached).

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Swift, Heather
To: Corbin Hiar
Subject: Re: Poking around
Date: Tuesday, June 06, 2017 4:04:09 PM

That she's a private citizen and has no role at Interior.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Jun 6, 2017 at 4:02 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Well, she's a managing member of Continental Divide International and runs a family trust.
What else am I missing?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, June 06, 2017 4:00 PM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: Poking around

What "current activities" are you looking at? She has no role at Interior. What do you think she does?

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Jun 6, 2017 at 3:58 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

It's pretty broad at this point. I'm looking into both her background and current activities.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, June 06, 2017 3:56 PM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Subject: Re: Poking around

She has no role at Interior. What's the scope of your story?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, Jun 6, 2017 at 3:50 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Well, they're not intended to be weird. But yes, I am still pursuing a story about Mrs. Zinke. I plan to reach out soon with specific questions about her role at Interior.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, June 06, 2017 2:30 PM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Subject: Poking around

Why is it I keep hearing from multiple sources that you're asking weird questions about Mrs. Zinke?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Swift, Heather
To: Corbin Hiar
Cc: Noelle Straub; Laura Rigas
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Mrs. Zinke
Date: Friday, June 09, 2017 11:51:05 AM

Please reach out to me before running your story with any hangups or points of contention. I'd also like to give the Mrs. a courtesy heads up if you decide to publish this.

Statement:

“Spouses of Cabinet members received a briefing by White House ethics officials in April. Maintaining ethical standards is of the highest importance to the Secretary, and to that point, out of an abundance of caution, Mrs. Zinke also received an ethics briefing by veteran ethics officials at Interior in order to avoid even the appearance of conflicts of interest.

“The claims made by E&E about Mrs. Zinke’s supposed involvement at the Interior Department are demonstrably false; for instance the crux of E&E’s argument, that Mrs. Zinke supposedly has a desk at Interior, is wrong. No such desk or workspace exists, and when asked to provide proof, E&E could not. While Mrs. Zinke has popped in to have lunch or say hello to her husband a couple times over the past several months, as happy couples do, the allegations that she is driving policy-making are flat-out wrong.

“Occasionally, Mrs. Zinke will travel at her own expense to site visits, such as a recent visit to Yosemite National Park. The Secretary enjoys his wife’s support while travelling because it allows for him to connect with his staff on a deeper level. All travel by Mrs. Zinke was at the personal cost of the Zinkes and approved by the ethics office prior to travel.

“Furthermore, the spouse of the secretary is permitted to travel in the secretary’s secure vehicle with him when deemed necessary. The secretary is often confronted by protesters and other variables, and ensuring the secretary’s quick and secure transport between points A and B is critical. At no point did Mrs. Zinke riding in the car with the secretary incur any additional expense or break any ethics guidance.

“Unfounded and down-right false allegations like these are ‘gotcha’ journalism at its worst and it smells of political gamesmanship. We would expect more from a news organization.”

On background:

The Executive Branch Stands of Ethical Conduct do not apply to private citizens, including spouses, and therefore Mrs. Zinke is well within her right legally and ethically to remain a manager in the family business.

Following the death of her mother in October, Mrs. Zinke inherited her parents' home and residential rental property business in California.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Jun 7, 2017 at 10:26 AM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

I am sorry about the short notice, but we've heard from sources familiar with the desk that other reporters are pursuing a similar story about Mrs. Zinke.

After talking with Noelle, we've decided to hold the story for a day. Please get back to us with any addition comment for the story by 11:00 tomorrow.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, June 07, 2017 10:12 AM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>; Noelle Straub <nstraub@eenews.net>; Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Mrs. Zinke

Corbin, 11:30 is an impossible and seemingly it was a deliberative effort on your part to not give the Interior Department the opportunity to respond and show you why the allegations are false.

I mean, just on it's face, what is this fictitious desk you talk about? No such desk exists. Where is your proof that Mrs. Zinke has a desk in the office?

Please give me until Friday at 11:30 so I can speak with the appropriate officials at the Department.

-
Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Jun 7, 2017 at 10:02 AM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

We have a story about Mrs. Zinke's activities at Interior that, due to competitive pressures, may run as soon as today. The story notes that she has travelled in official vehicles with the secretary, which appears to be a violation the department's policy against transporting family members in government vehicles except for in cases of emergency. It also details many of the non-public events she has attended with the secretary, her desk in his office, and her role managing CDI and a family trust with assets in California. The story, which provides background on Mrs. Zinke and her life with the secretary, includes quotes from watchdogs and former government officials noting how unusual such an arrangement is.

Why did she need that desk? Why has she traveled in government vehicles if, as Heather said yesterday, she has "no role at Interior"? Why did she receive an ethics briefing in early March if she has no role? Why did she attend a meeting with California Democratic Gov. Jerry Brown about water, infrastructure and conservation projects when such efforts could affect the value of her family trust or benefit CDI? Why was that meeting and all other events during the California trip not included on the secretary's calendar?

Please get back to me with any responses by 11:30. And I'm happy to provide more detail about the story if you have any questions.

Thanks, C

Corbin Hiar

Interior Reporter

O: 202 446 0438

M: 718 608 5314

T: @corbinhiar

E&E NEWS

122 C St NW, 7th Fl; Washington, DC, 20001

The leader in energy and environment news

Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM, Climatewire, Energywire, E&ETV

From: Swift, Heather
To: Corbin Hiar
Cc: Noelle Straub; Laura Rigas; Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Mrs. Zinke
Date: Wednesday, June 07, 2017 10:27:38 AM

Corbin, there's no such desk! Literally, how can you report on something that is patently, physically false. People are lying to you and you're accepting it as fact with zero proof.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Jun 7, 2017 at 10:26 AM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

I am sorry about the short notice, but we've heard from sources familiar with the desk that other reporters are pursuing a similar story about Mrs. Zinke.

After talking with Noelle, we've decided to hold the story for a day. Please get back to us with any addition comment for the story by 11:00 tomorrow.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, June 07, 2017 10:12 AM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>; Noelle Straub <nstraub@eenews.net>; Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Mrs. Zinke

Corbin, 11:30 is an impossible and seemingly it was a deliberative effort on your part to not give the Interior Department the opportunity to respond and show you why the allegations are false.

I mean, just on it's face, what is this fictitious desk you talk about? No such desk exists. Where is your proof that Mrs. Zinke has a desk in the office?

Please give me until Friday at 11:30 so I can speak with the appropriate officials at the Department.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Wed, Jun 7, 2017 at 10:02 AM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

We have a story about Mrs. Zinke's activities at Interior that, due to competitive pressures, may run as soon as today. The story notes that she has travelled in official vehicles with the secretary, which appears to be a violation the department's policy against transporting family members in government vehicles except for in cases of emergency. It also details many of the non-public events she has attended with the secretary, her desk in his office, and her role managing CDI and a family trust with assets in California. The story, which provides background on Mrs. Zinke and her life with the secretary, includes quotes from watchdogs and former government officials noting how unusual such an arrangement is.

Why did she need that desk? Why has she traveled in government vehicles if, as Heather said yesterday, she has "no role at Interior"? Why did she receive an ethics briefing in early March if she has no role? Why did she attend a meeting with California Democratic Gov. Jerry Brown about water, infrastructure and conservation projects when such efforts could affect the value of her family trust or benefit CDI? Why was that meeting and all other events during the California trip not included on the secretary's calendar?

Please get back to me with any responses by 11:30. And I'm happy to provide more detail about the story if you have any questions.

Thanks, C

Corbin Hiar

Interior Reporter

O: 202 446 0438

M: 718 608 5314

T: @corbinhiar

E&E NEWS

122 C St NW, 7th Fl; Washington, DC, 20001

The leader in energy and environment news

Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM, Climatewire, Energywire, E&ETV

From: Swift, Heather
To: Scott Hommel; Laura Rigas; Megan Bloomgren
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance
Date: Monday, May 22, 2017 4:29:00 PM

Poke.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 12:31 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
Meg/Laura/Scott -- The hit piece inquiry from E&E is below. My proposed response is in red. Yes, it's very amped up. Our Deadline is Tomorrow at 11:00AM

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

[Redacted]

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----
From: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>

Hi, we're planning to run a story in Monday's Greenwire about Secretary Zinke's failure to resign from Continental Divide International LLC, Double Tap LLC, and Great Northern Veterans Peace Park Inc. before assuming office, as he promised to do in his agreement with the Office of Government Ethics. The story explains that his continued involvement with these entities as well as Lolita's role at CDI and access to top decisionmakers open the secretary up to, at the very least, the appearance of conflicts of interest.

Do you have any comment on Zinke's failure to follow through on his OGE agreement? Also, can you explain why Lolita has been allowed to sit in on meetings with the governor of California, a state in which she owns more than $1 million worth of property, and other closed-door events? How will Interior prevent her or the secretary for violating ethics and conflict of interest laws and policies?

I'd also like to note that the story includes links to previous reporting on Zinke's alleged travel fraud and close ties to the Special Operations for America PAC as well as documents about the history of CDI. That's not something you can really comment on, but I don't want you to be surprised when you see it in the story.

Please get back to me with a comment by 11 a.m. on Monday. Feel free to give me a call on my cell phone with any questions or concerns you may have about this request. I'm happy to elaborate if needed.

Best, C

Corbin Hiar

Interior Reporter

O: 202 446 0438

M: 718 608 5314

T: @corbinhiar

E&E NEWS

122 C St NW, 7th Fl; Washington, DC, 20001

The leader in energy and environment news

Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM, Climatewire, Energywire, E&ETV

From: Swift, Heather
To: Corbin Hiar
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov; Laura Rigas
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance
Date: Thursday, May 25, 2017 10:13:14 AM

Corbin, The Secretary fulfilled his commitment and requirement to resign as a managing official. I'll remind you of the timeline. The Secretary's very first meeting was with the ethics office to resign as a managing official from the three entities. The ethics office then prepared the paperwork and presented it to him as soon as it was available, which was two business days later. Preparing and executing legal documents is a process, which in this case, was done as thoroughly and as expeditiously as possible. The documents were mailed to the attorney of the boards, who confirmed receipt, fulfilling the Secretary's requirement.

On March 2nd, just an hour after arriving at the Department for the first time, the Secretary met with ethics officials to go over the ethics regulations and laws, including a review of his ethics agreement. This was his first meeting as Secretary.

On March 6th, the ethics officials presented the Secretary with, and he signed, documents executing the resignation (attached).

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, May 25, 2017 at 9:05 AM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Why did it take Secretary Zinke three days to in office to sign the resignation letters? What happened to the letters after he signed them? Why did the Montana Secretary of State's office not receive them?

Please get back to me by 11 a.m. We plan to run the story today.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 11:43 AM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov; Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance

"The claims made by E&E are patently false, and as promised, 'upon confirmation' Secretary Zinke resigned as a managing member from the family's two small businesses and a nonprofit organization which he founded to build the Veterans Peace Park, a sledding park for the children of Whitefish, Montana. The Secretary worked with the career veteran ethics officials at the Department every step of the way. He currently has no management role in any of the organizations identified."

Timeline of events:

On January 10, then-Congressman Zinke signed a letter pledging to resign as a managing official from the three entities 'upon confirmation' (which he did). (document attached)

On March 2nd, just an hour after arriving at the Department for the first time, the Secretary met with ethics officials to go over the ethics regulations and laws, including a review of his ethics agreement. This was his first meeting as Secretary.

On March 6th, the ethics officials presented the Secretary with, and he signed, documents executing the resignation (attached).

Regarding Mrs. Zinke: "There was no violation of any government ethics rules. Out of an abundance of caution, Mrs. Zinke received an ethics briefing in early March to avoid even the appearance of a conflict.

On background:

The Executive Branch Standards of Ethical Conduct do not apply to private citizens, including spouses.

Following the death of her mother in October, Mrs. Zinke inherited her parents' home and residential rental property business.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Tue, May 23, 2017 at 11:00 AM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Thanks for the update. We'll standby.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 10:54 AM
To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov; Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance sending you something shortly. getting it cleared by ethics. will take a moment.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 10:43 AM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

While we've agreed to hold the story until tomorrow's Greenwire, we'd appreciate it if you could provide us comment by the end of today or first thing on Tuesday. Thanks for your consideration.

Best, C

From: Corbin Hiar
Sent: Friday, May 19, 2017 5:35 PM
To: 'Swift, Heather' <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov; Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: RE: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance

Noelle's cell phone number is (b) (6)

There's a lot of documents. But the most significant ones are Secretary Zinke's ethics

agreement and proof that he hasn't complied with it:

https://www.eenews.net/assets/2017/05/22/document_gw_01.pdf

https://www.eenews.net/assets/2017/05/22/document_gw_02.pdf

https://www.eenews.net/assets/2017/05/22/document_gw_03.pdf

And I really am sorry about the timing of this. As I tried to explain to you and Laura before sending this request – I got voicemail on both of your phones – I was delayed in sending this due to the calendar story Noelle assigned this morning and because I wasn't able to definitively confirm that the secretary hadn't resigned until after 4 p.m. We're also planning to run this faster than usual because we don't want it to get lost in all the budget news that's coming out later in the week.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, May 19, 2017 5:26 PM

To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>

Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov; Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>

Subject: Re: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance

Please send me her cell phone number.

Please also send me all of the documents you're working off.

Also, sending a bogus email after 5:00PM on a Friday for a Monday morning deadline absolutely flies in the face of you claiming you're trying to give us time to respond to your inquires. You didn't just come up with this hit job half an hour ago.

Furthermore, it's Secretary Zinke and Mrs. Zinke.

-
Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, May 19, 2017 at 5:18 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Noelle's cell phone number is 202-316-1325.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]

Sent: Friday, May 19, 2017 5:11 PM

To: Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net>

Cc: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Subject: Re: Request for comment on Secretary Zinke's ethics compliance

Corbin, please send me your editor's number.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Fri, May 19, 2017 at 5:09 PM, Corbin Hiar <chiar@eenews.net> wrote:

Hi, we're planning to run a story in Monday's Greenwire about Secretary Zinke's failure to resign from Continental Divide International LLC, Double Tap LLC, and Great Northern Veterans Peace Park Inc. before assuming office, as he promised to do in his agreement with the Office of Government Ethics. The story explains that his continued involvement with these entities as well as Lolita's role at CDI and access to top decisionmakers open the secretary up to, at the very least, the appearance of conflicts of interest.

Do you have any comment on Zinke's failure to follow through on his OGE agreement? Also, can you explain why Lolita has been allowed to sit in on meetings with the governor of California, a state in which she owns more than $1 million worth of property, and other closed-door events? How will Interior prevent her or the secretary for violating ethics and conflict of interest laws and policies?

I'd also like to note that the story includes links to previous reporting on Zinke's alleged travel fraud and close ties to the Special Operations for America PAC as well as documents about the history of CDI. That's not something you can really comment on, but I don't want you to be surprised when you see it in the story.

Please get back to me with a comment by 11 a.m. on Monday. Feel free to give me a call on my cell phone with any questions or concerns you may have about this request. I'm happy to elaborate if needed.

Best, C

Corbin Hiar

Interior Reporter

O: 202 446 0438

M: 718 608 5314

T: @corbinhiar

E&E NEWS

122 C St NW, 7th Fl; Washington, DC, 20001

The leader in energy and environment news

Greenwire, E&E Daily, E&E News PM, Climatewire, Energywire, E&ETV

From: Swift, Heather
To: Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO; Laura Rigas; Russell Newell
Subject: DOI - Heads up IG report
Date: Thursday, November 16, 2017 12:21:06 PM
Attachments: MA_ZinkeTravel_111517.pdf
Document.pdf

The IG is investigating Zinke's travel. In the process of that, they IDed an area where the paperwork process (done by career officials the same way it was for previous admins) is a bit troublesome. Attached is the letter the IG sent to Dep Sec and the letter Dep Sec sent back.

The IG letter was sent to the Hill so we expect Dems to make hay over it.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Congressional, OIG <oig_congressional@doioig.gov>
Date: Thu, Nov 16, 2017 at 11:54 AM
Subject: OIG Management Advisory to Hill & public

Yesterday DOI OIG delivered the attached Management Advisory to Deputy Secretary Bernhardt regarding secretarial travel. (b) (5) [REDACTED] It was just sent to Congress and will be posted publicly tomorrow, 11/17.

Nancy K. DiPaolo
Director, External Affairs
Office of the Inspector General
Department of the Interior
202.208.4357
(c) 202.805.4701

From: Swift, Heather
To: Shah, Raj S. EOP/WHO
Cc: russell_newell@ios.doi.gov; laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: From Interior
Date: Monday, October 02, 2017 10:52:56 AM sure. thanks.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Oct 2, 2017 at 10:34 AM, Shah, Raj S. EOP/WHO <(b) (5)> wrote:

(b) (5)

From: Heather Swift [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, October 2, 2017 10:05 AM
To: Shah, Raj S. EOP/WHO (b) (5) >; russell_newell@ios.doi.gov; laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: From Interior

Raj - As it's a bit more reaching than the standard travel inquiry I wanted to double check what you all wanted us to do with it. There's A LOT of wrong information in here, such as the claim that there were political events in California, Nevada, others. I have the answers for all of these questions, just for your reference.

- OVERALL questions
- How many flights has Sec. Zinke taken on government or charter jets? Can you please provide the aircraft manifest, type of plane, destinations, dates of use, purpose, cost of the trip and source of payment for the trips?
- On what trips did Sec. Zinke's wife Lola and/or other members of Sec. Zinke's family join?
- The calendar says that spouses attended a cultural briefing with local reindeer herders on May 26 in Norway. Was Lola Zinke one of the spouses?
- Did Sec. Zinke take steps to limit the costs of his travel? If so, what were they?

- Virgin Islands
 - What was the official purpose of the U.S. Virgin Islands trip during Zinke's first month as Interior secretary?
 - What was the cost of the trip?
 - Did Sec. Zinke's wife Lola attend?
 - While some flights appear to be commercial, others are not shown, including multiple flights on March 31. Can you please provide the manifest, type of plane, cost of the trip and source of payment for the trips?

- Big Sky event
 - Sec. Zinke was in Big Sky in March 17-19, the same time Sen. Daines hosted a "weekend in the Montana mountains" benefiting the Daines Big Sky Committee. He attended multiple Daines receptions and stayed the night at Daines' home. A fundraiser flyer says requested contributions were $3,000 for PACs, $1,500 for personal.
 - What was the policy purpose of this trip?
 - Was this a political trip?
 - Who paid for Zinke's travel to the political events?

- Atlanta
 - What was the purpose of Sec. Zinke's trip to the NRA Institute for Legislative Action event in Atlanta on April 28? Was this a political event? What was the cost of flying on Air Force One, and did the DOI reimburse any other agencies for the seats of Sec. Zinke, Lola Zinke or his staff?

- April 12-20
 - During the trip, Sec. Zinke spoke at the Reagan Center in Santa Barbara and campaigned for Greg Gianforte. Was this a political trip? What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?
 - On April 15 and 16, Sec. Zinke was in Santa Barabra, including a meeting with former Congressman Bob Lagomarsino. What was the meeting about? Did these home trips entail personal or official use? The items don't say that it was "personal travel" or "paid for personally" - was it?
 - On April 17, Sec. Zinke went to the Reagan Ranch Center and met the vice president of the Young America's Foundation. What was the official policy purpose of this trip? What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?

- May 5-13: Montana, Utah, California, Montana
 - What was the official policy purpose of Sec. Zinke's trip on May 5-13?
 - During the trip, Sec. Zinke gave keynote remarks to the RNC Spring Meeting Dinner and attended a rally for Greg Gianforte. Was this a political trip? What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?
 - On May 8 and May 9, Sec. Zinke traveled in a B200 Turboprop 8-passenger plane, the calendar states. Can you please provide the manifest, cost of the trip, owner of the jet and source of payment for the trips?
 - Sec. Zinke spent that weekend at home in Kalispell, Montana. He then flew to Dulles and home on Monday. Federal regulations say employees' official travel should by no means include personal use. Did these home trips entail personal use?

- May 25-June 2: Norway, Greenland, Alaska, Idaho
 - What was the official purpose of this trip?
 - Sec. Zinke attended a reception for Rep. Don Young at Sullivan's Steakhouse. Was this a political trip? What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?
 - Sec. Zinke flew from Boise to L.A. on June 2. The June 3 and 4 dates say "Personal travel // Paid for personally" in Santa Barbara. What did Sec. Zinke pay for? How much did he pay? At what rate did he pay for the travel personally? What aircraft did he fly on? What was the total cost to government?

- June 25-28: Nevada, Montana
 - On June 25, Sec. Zinke attended the Rule of Law Defense Fund Reception & Dinner, where he sat at a dinner table with leaders of the casino industry, the NRA, the Chamber of Commerce and Koch Industries. What was the policy purpose of Sec. Zinke's attendance? Was this a political event?
 - On June 26, Sec. Zinke flew from Las Vegas to Kalispell on a private plane tied to a Republican donor. Can you please provide the aircraft manifest, purpose, cost of the trip and source of payment for the trips? It appears Sec. Zinke spent the night afterward at his home in Whitefish; is that correct, and wouldn't that convey personal use?

- July 20-22: Colorado
 - On July 20, Sec. Zinke gave remarks in Denver at the American Legislative Exchange Council. He also attended a Colorado Republican Committee roundtable and gave remarks at the Western Conservative Summit.
 - What was the official policy purpose of these trips? Were these trips political or personal? What were Sec. Zinke's remarks at these trips. What was the cost for this trip, and who covered the expenses?

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO
To: Swift, Heather
Cc: Laura Rigas
Subject: RE: FW: Flagging - Zinke a bit out over his skis in a GQ interview
Date: Monday, July 31, 2017 2:53:55 PM

Thank you! Sorry I overlooked this...

Brad

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, July 31, 2017 2:51 PM
To: Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>
Cc: Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: FW: Flagging - Zinke a bit out over his skis in a GQ interview

Brad, here's the statement.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Jul 31, 2017 at 1:44 PM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

The Secretary spent a number of hours with the reporter over a several month span, where they talked about everything from his love of public lands, admiration of the President and his cabinet, and the Administration's shared vision to Make America Great Again. The reporter selectively used quotes out of context to write a story that fit her pre-conceived narrative. Secretary Zinke looks forward to continuing to carry out the President's agenda and fulfill Interior's mission to protect and manage our nation's natural resources and cultural heritage.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Jul 31, 2017 at 8:20 AM, Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)> wrote:

See below. I'm at my desk until 8:45 a.m. Let's discuss.

Brad Rateike
The White House
Assistant Director of Cabinet Communications

(b) (6)
Desk: (b) (6)
Mobile: (b) (6)

From: Shah, Raj S. EOP/WHO
Sent: Monday, July 31, 2017 8:19 AM
To: Kennedy, Adam R. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>
Cc: Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO (b) (6)>
Subject: FW: Flagging - Zinke a bit out over his skis in a GQ interview

Adam, work with Brad. We need some guidance/answers here in case asked.

From: Hemming, Andrew J. EOP/WHO
Sent: Monday, July 31, 2017 7:36 AM
To: Boza-Holman, Sofia M. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>;
Cheung, Steven EOP/WHO (b) (6)>; Ditto, Jessica E.
EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Dorr, Kaelan K. EOP/WHO
(b) (6)>; Ferre, Helen A. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Fetalvo, Ninio J. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Grisham, Stephanie A. EOP/WHO
(b) (6)>; Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Hulse, Elliott Y. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Hurley, Carolina L. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Kennedy, Adam R. EOP/WHO
(b) (6)>; Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO
(b) (6)>; Montesi, Janet M. EOP/WHO
(b) (6)>; Parkinson, Andrew Z. EOP/WHO
(b) (6)>; Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Ross, Tyler E. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Sadler, Kelly J. EOP/WHO
(b) (6)>; Sanders, Sarah H. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Shah, Raj S. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Shoemaker, Clay M. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Short, Michael C. EOP/WHO
(b) (6)>; Sims, Cliff D. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>; Strom, Natalie M. EOP/WHO
(b) (6)>; Walters, Lindsay E. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)>
Subject: Flagging - Zinke a bit out over his skis in a GQ interview

A Zinke interview just popped in GQ and he has a couple of eyebrow-raising quotes in there about Trump.

KEY SECTIONS:

Zinke Calls His Job Interview With Trump Disorganized:

Rumors buzzed that he'd been shortlisted for the job atop the Interior Department, but when Zinke and his wife, Lola, passed through the gilded doors of Trump Tower, he actually had no clue what position he was interviewing for—Priebus had never said definitively. And by the end of a rambling conversation with the president-elect, Zinke still wasn't entirely sure.

"The conversation went a hundred seconds. It went from women in combat to Syria policy to the Chinese to energy independence, a little about public lands, a little about hunting access," Zinke tells me. "Most of the conversation was not really Interior, per se." At one point, Trump proposed the Veterans Affairs post, to which Zinke quipped, "I don't think you hate me that much."

He was flying back to Montana when Mike Pence called him. "The vice president says, 'Well, congratulations!'" Zinke recalls, sharing the moment he was asked to join the Trump Cabinet, "and I asked him, 'What job?'"

Zinke Says The Trump Administration Has Had “A Lot Of Distractions And Chatter”:

Thirty minutes into our ride, after snaking through another throng of tourists, we approach the Washington Monument—that stone memorial to the original military man turned president—and Zinke takes stock of these still-early days of the Trump administration. "The president is the best boss I've ever had," Zinke tells me, "but there's a lot of distractions and chatter." He tugs on his reins to pause for a moment and consider the structure, the city's tallest by edict. "You're just always looking for ways to stay above that."

Zinke Complains About How Hard It Is To Bring People Onboard And Notes Government Is Different Than Business:

For all that camera-ready affection for the boss, members of the Trump cabinet, Zinke included, admit to being frustrated with the White House, which they say has left them chronically short-staffed. According to the Partnership for Public Service, the White House has yet to nominate staffers for 357 out of 570 key agency positions. So far, only 50 nominees have been confirmed. (By this time in their first terms, President Obama had gotten 203 confirmed; George W. Bush, 203.)

...

Zinke, four months into the job, has been able to fill only two key positions that require White House approval, out of 15 vacancies. He notes that he's submitted the names of "awfully good, just super people," but that the past few months have been a waiting game. "Operating a business sometimes is a little different from operating in the Oval Office," Zinke says. "[In business], it's just 'All right, you're hired.' But I think the White House is running into the swamp...there's a bureaucracy there that's very difficult to determine." (Zinke may have himself to thank for recent inaction, though. The day after his unseemly call to Murkowski, the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, which the Alaska senator chairs, announced that hearings for a slate of Zinke's nominees would be delayed.)

Zinke Said The WH Is “Getting Its Legs Under It” And Says They Were “Getting In Other People’s Business A Bit Too Much”:

Zinke insists that he and his team have gotten along just fine with their designated White House minder, but John Kelly, who served until last week as the secretary of homeland security, was a bit more candid when we spoke. "I don't need a lot of supervision," he told me. "Obviously the White House is getting its legs under it, but early on it was a bit of a pain. They were getting in other people's business a little bit too much." (Kelly's tune will presumably change: On Friday he was named White House chief of staff.)

<http://www.gq.com/story/ryan-zinke-secretary-of-interior-profile>

From: Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO
To: Swift, Heather
Subject: RE: Press inquiry: Chuck Johnson, Palmer Luckey
Date: Tuesday, May 23, 2017 9:26:09 AM

Heather – Tried you, but realized that’s the wrong number. Call me this morning when you’re able.

(b) (6)

From: Dorr, Kaelan K. EOP/WHO
Sent: Monday, May 22, 2017 9:26 PM
To: Shah, Raj S. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Ditto, Jessica E. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Kennedy, Adam R. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Hemming, Andrew J. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Dubke, Michael D. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Cheung, Steven EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>
Subject: Fwd: Press inquiry: Chuck Johnson, Palmer Luckey

Flagging the below for the broader team - they've responded that they didn't know who he was when they accepted invite, etc.

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Date: May 22, 2017 at 9:13:21 PM EDT
To: <(b) (6)>, "Love, Kelly A. EOP/ Who" <(b) (6)>, Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Fwd: Press inquiry: Chuck Johnson, Palmer Luckey

Kelly, can you give me a call? 202-8897-7111

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>
Date: May 22, 2017 at 9:04:25 PM EDT
To: Dell Cameron <dell.cameron@gizmodo.com>
Cc: Interior Press <Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov>, Bryan Menegus <bryan.menegus@gizmodo.com>
Subject: Re: Press inquiry: Chuck Johnson, Palmer Luckey

Hi Dell, the Secretary nor anyone on staff was aware of the behavior you outlined. Regarding setting up the meeting, a friend of the Secretary's suggested he talk with them about their technology. As a result, they had a very brief meeting with the Secretary there was no action after.

For your background, please see this letter then-Congressman Zinke penned denouncing such behavior, tactics and rhetoric
<https://www.daines.senate.gov/news/press-releases/tester-daines-zinke-bullock-fox-stand-against-anti-semitism-and-white-nationalism>

Sent from my iPhone
On May 22, 2017, at 8:23 PM, Dell Cameron
<dell.cameron@gizmodo.com> wrote:

Thanks Heather.

Can you say who arranged this meeting? One of those "gentlemen," Chuck Johnson, is a fairly controversial figure.

- His website is fundraising for Andrew Anglin, publisher neo-Nazi website Daily Stormer. Link: <http://gizmodo.com/internet-gremlin-chuck-johnsons-website-becomes-inaccess-1794791944>
- Prior to the meeting, Johnson incorrectly identified a student at University of Virginia and accused her of making false rape accusations (he attacked her online and posted a photo of her). Link: <http://jezebel.com/woman-falsely-idd-as-uvas-jackie-by-conservative-blogge-1671234663>
- He was booted from Twitter after saying he planned to "take out" a black activist. Link: <http://www.politico.com/blogs/media/2015/05/troll-charles-johnson-banned-from-twitter-207688>
- He's argued that homosexuality was responsible for an Amtrak derailment. Link: <http://www.advocate.com/commentary/2015/05/15/op-ed-amtrak-accident-isnt-part-gay-agenda>
- He falsely claimed a "left-wing Democrat" nurse in New Jersey had Ebola and offered $1,000 for pictures of a Republican candidate's wife, who was in a nursing home. Link: <http://bit.ly/139nGar>

Was the secretary aware of Mr. Johnson's... how do I put it.... extremely inappropriate and abusive behavior prior to taking that meeting?

Dell Cameron

Staff Reporter, Gizmodo
Gizmodo Media Group
Email: dell@gizmodo.com
Signal: (469) 387-1810

PGP: keybase.io/dellcam

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 6:23 PM, Swift, Heather
<heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hey there, Dell. The Secretary had a brief meeting where he listened to their ideas about using technology on the border and referred the gentlemen to the Department of Homeland Security.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov 1
Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 5:03 PM, Dell Cameron
<dell.cameron@gizmodo.com> wrote:

Follow up.

Please excuse the language in this email below, I'm quoting one of the attendees of the meeting in which Mr. Zinke, Downey Magallanes, Scott Hommel, Nancy Guiden, as well as acting Communications Director Megan Bloomgren, were all present.

We asked Mr. Luckey if he could elaborate on what was discussed w/ the Secretary at this meeting.

Mr. Luckey told our reporter: "I could give you an answer. Or I could tell you to go fuck yourself."

In response, we're filing a FOIA request for additional information about the meeting & printing a story about the meeting within the hour.

Regards,

Dell Cameron
Staff Reporter, Gizmodo
Gizmodo Media Group
Email: dell@gizmodo.com
Signal: (469) 387-1810
PGP: keybase.io/dellcam

On Mon, May 22, 2017 at 2:46 PM, Dell Cameron

<dell.cameron@gizmodo.com> wrote:

Good afternoon,

It came to our attention that Sec. Zinke attended a meeting on April 12 with Oculus Rift founder Palmer Luckey and WeSearchr founder Charles Johnson, as well as four Interior staff members, concerning the construction of a border wall.

Can your office elaborate on what that meeting was about, and why Johnson and Luckey were asked to advise on such a project?

Thanks,

Dell Cameron

Staff Reporter, Gizmodo

Gizmodo Media Group

Email: dell@gizmodo.com

Signal: \(469\) 387-1810

PGP: keybase.io/dellcam

From: Swift, Heather
To: Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO
Cc: Laura Rigas; Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO
Subject: Re: Questions about Zinke for Congress PAC data
Date: Monday, October 30, 2017 2:28:07 PM

The department cannot comment on political matters.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Mon, Oct 30, 2017 at 2:11 PM, Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)> wrote:

How are you handling these PAC questions?

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Monday, October 30, 2017 10:43 AM
To: Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>; Rateike, Bradley A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>; Love, Kelly A. EOP/WHO <(b) (6)>
Subject: Fwd: Questions about Zinke for Congress PAC data

Brad, inquiry below regarding the campaign PAC.

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Esther Whieldon <ewhieldon@politico.com>
Date: Fri, Oct 27, 2017 at 5:56 PM
Subject: Questions about Zinke for Congress PAC data
To: Interior Press <interior_press@ios.doi.gov>, Heather Swift <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov>

I'm looking over some of the Zinke for Congress PAC expenditures. Please answer the following questions.

1) Please address the sale of the RV to Buttrey and whether the PAC sold it to him for less than it's actual value. And please address whether Lola Zinke may have conversely sold the RV to the PAC for more than it was worth.

2) The Zinke for Congress PAC reported a $22K-ish payment to First BankCard and listed the underlying transactions as all happening on December 31.

2a) Please provide the dates that the three expenses listed underneath were actually incurred?

recipient_name	recipient_state	disbursement_description	disbursement_amount	disbursement_date
VONS	CA	CAMPAIGN DINNER	314.36	12/31/2016 0:00
WESTHOUSE	NY	LODGING	696.18	12/31/2016 0:00
LIME INN	Virgin Islands	LODGING	522.74	12/31/2016 0:00

3) The Zinke for Congress PAC reported the receipt of this $13,997.653 transfer on its April Quarterly report, but does not list the individual contributions contained in the transfer-in from Zinke Victory Fund. Why is that?

4) Lastly, please provide a general comment on the extent to which Zinke ensured his campaign PAC followed campaign finance and disclosure laws.

Please respond by 10 am Monday as we plan to run a story at 11 a.m. Apologies for the short notice.

Thanks, Esther

Esther Whieldon

Reporter

POLITICO

301-213-4370 (mobile)

703-672-2788 (office)

ewhieldon@politico.com

Twitter: @esthernow

From: Hudson, Hope R. EOP/WHO
To: Swift, Heather
Cc: Laura Rigas
Subject: RE: Sec. Zinke GQ
Date: Thursday, May 25, 2017 2:13:30 PM

Terrific

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Thursday, May 25, 2017 12:39 PM
To: Hudson, Hope R. EOP/WHO (b) (6) >
Cc: Laura Rigas <laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov>
Subject: Re: Sec. Zinke GQ

(b) (5)

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, May 25, 2017 at 12:25 PM, Hudson, Hope R. EOP/WHO

(b) (6) > wrote:

This is so helpful. Thank you! (b) (5)

Thanks!

Sent from my iPhone

On May 25, 2017, at 11:29 AM, Swift, Heather <heather_swift@ios.doi.gov> wrote:

Hi Renee, thanks for the call. Below are some topline messaging on the Secretary and his bio. Let me know if there's anything else you need.

TOPLINE

- Secretary Ryan Zinke is a fifth-generation Montanan and a 23-year veteran of the U.S. Navy SEALs
 - Zinke is a guy that the average American connects with. He's a veteran, comes from a blue collar family (three generations of plumbers), and like the President is incredibly close with his wife and adult children.

- Zinke is a total work horse whose leadership at Interior has been bold and decisive.
 - Zinke has signed a number of Secretarial orders to implement the President's American Energy First agenda.
 - Zinke is a hands-on leader who does extensive travel to the places impacted by his Department, like his four-day trip to Utah to conduct a review of the national monuments under the President's executive order.
- He is well-liked and well-respected by his colleagues in the cabinet and in the White House.
 - Zinke is always willing to go the extra mile and collaborate on projects

Secretary Ryan Zinke Bio

Ryan Zinke was sworn in as the 52nd Secretary of the Interior on March 1, 2017.

A fifth-generation Montanan and former U.S. Navy SEAL Commander, Ryan Zinke built one of the strongest track records in the 114th Congress on championing sportsmen's access, conservation, regulatory relief, forest management, responsible energy development, and smart management of federal lands.

“As a former Navy SEAL, Ryan has incredible leadership skills and an attitude of doing whatever it takes to win,” President Donald Trump said in nominating the former congressman, who built an impressive portfolio on Interior issues ranging from federal mineral leases to tribal affairs to public lands conservation.

Growing up in a logging and rail town near Glacier National Park, Ryan has had a lifelong appreciation for conserving America's natural beauty while honoring Teddy Roosevelt's vision of multiple-use on our public lands. He has consistently led the efforts to renew the Land and Water Conservation Fund in Congress, and has also been a firm advocate for our nation's sportsmen to gain access to our public lands with the SCORE Act and SHARE Act. Zinke also coauthored the Resilient Federal Forest Act, which initiated new reforms for revitalizing America's timber towns and preventing wildfires by emphasizing the collaborative process.

Zinke is widely praised for his voting record supporting the Teddy Roosevelt philosophy of managing public lands, which calls for multiple-use to include economic, recreation and conservation. He has pledged to explore every possibility for safely and responsibly repealing bad regulations and using public natural resources to create jobs and wealth for the American people.

“I am honored and humbled to serve Montana and America as Secretary of the Interior,” Zinke said. “I shall faithfully uphold Teddy Roosevelt's belief that our treasured public lands are ‘for the benefit and enjoyment of the people’. I will work tirelessly to ensure our public lands are managed and preserved in a way that benefits everyone for generations to come. Most importantly, our sovereign Indian Nations and territories must have the respect and freedom they deserve. I look forward to making the Department of the Interior and America great again.”

As Secretary of the Interior, Zinke leads an agency with more than 70,000 employees who are stewards for 20 percent of the nation’s lands, including national parks, monuments, wildlife refuges and other public lands. The department oversees the responsible development of conventional and renewable energy supplies on public lands and waters; is the largest supplier and manager of water in the 17 Western states; and upholds trust responsibilities to the 567 federally recognized American Indian tribes and Alaska Natives.

Ryan Zinke represented the state of Montana in the U.S. House of Representatives since 2014. Before that he served in the Montana State Senate from 2009 to 2011, but the bulk of his public service was 23 years as a U.S. Navy SEAL officer.

Zinke enlisted in the Navy in 1985 and was soon selected to join the elite force where he would build an honorable career until his retirement in 2008. He retired with the rank of Commander after leading SEAL operations across the globe, including as the Deputy and Acting Commander of Joint Special Forces in Iraq and two tours at SEAL Team Six. Zinke was the first Navy SEAL elected to the U.S. House and is the first SEAL to serve as a cabinet secretary.

Zinke holds a Geology degree from the University of Oregon, where he was an All-PAC 10 football player; a Master’s degree in Business Finance from National University; and a Master’s degree in Global Leadership from the University of San Diego. Ryan and his wife Lolita (Lola) have three children and two granddaughters. Zinke is proud to be an adopted member of the Assiniboine Sioux Tribe at the Fort Peck Reservation in Northeast Montana.

-

Heather Swift

Department of the Interior

@DOIPressSec

Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Swift, Heather
To: Sadler, Kelly J. EOP/WHO
Cc: jlawrence@usatoday.com; dmastio@usatoday.com; Laura Rigas
Subject: Re: Secretary Zinke Op-Ed Pitch
Date: Thursday, July 13, 2017 5:17:06 PM
Attachments: OpEd_MadeInAmerica_Rec_FINAL.docx

Jill, Heather Swift here - press secretary at the Department of the Interior.

Attached is an op-ed from Secretary Ryan Zinke written exclusively for USA Today. Also here is a high-res headshot.

Please let me know if you're interested in running this in the Sunday edition, or on Monday.

Happy to discuss any edits as well.

Best,
Heather

(b) (6)

-

Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Jul 13, 2017 at 12:54 PM, Sadler, Kelly J. EOP/WHO

<(b) (6)> wrote:

Jill,

Hi - we're branding next week "Made in America" and would love to kick it off by placing an op-ed with you by Secretary Zinke on America's public lands and how public private partnerships can and will create a world-class outdoor experience. We'd love this to go in your weekend edition or to run on Monday.

Are you interested in the exclusive? We'll have the copy by the end of the day to review.

Thanks,
Kelly

Kelly Sadler
Special Assistant to the President
Office of Communications
White House

C: (b) (6)

From: Laura Rigas
To: Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO
Cc: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Re: TPs
Date: Monday, December 04, 2017 11:05:57 PM

Many thx!!

Laura Keehner Rigas
Communications Director
U.S. Department of the Interior
(202) 897-7022 cell
@Interior

On Dec 4, 2017, at 11:03 PM, Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO
<(b) (6)> wrote:

Hey guys, please see some guidance for off topic talking points.
I don't see the Secretary getting asked but want him to be prepared just in case.
Please let me know if you have any questions.
Thank you.

Budget And Government Shutdown

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

On Gen. Flynn:

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

Roy Moore:

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

On DOJ:

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

From: Swift, Heather
To: Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO
Subject: Re: Zinke next week Mornings w Maria
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 1:24:56 PM

Yes.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

On Thu, Sep 28, 2017 at 1:16 PM, Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO

<\(b\) \(6\)> wrote:

Hey! Apologies for the delay. Have you been coordinating with FEMA on the visit? Just want to double check.

I think it would be good to do press but I want to make sure we're sensitive about this and coordinating with DHS/FEMA.

From: Swift, Heather [mailto:heather_swift@ios.doi.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, September 27, 2017 8:22 AM
To: Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO <\(b\) \(6\)>
Subject: Zinke next week Mornings w Maria

Alexa - Next week Zinke will be in south florida touring a lot of the hurricane damage at four national parks and also visiting some FEMA sites. Are you OK with Zinke doing FBN Mornings w/ Maria Thursday or Friday next week? We'd probably want to have a camera crew go to the tour he does at a FEMA site. We are also looking into if he can meet with displaced PR families. His wife Lola is a native spanish speaker so she will accompany as well.

-
Heather Swift
Department of the Interior
@DOIPressSec
Heather_Swift@ios.doi.gov | Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

From: Henning, Alexa A. EOP/WHO
To: heather_swift@ios.doi.gov; laura_rigas@ios.doi.gov
Subject: TPs
Date: Monday, December 04, 2017 11:03:08 PM

Hey guys, please see some guidance for off topic talking points.
I don't see the Secretary getting asked but want him to be prepared just in case.
Please let me know if you have any questions.
Thank you.

Budget And Government Shutdown

. (b) (5)
[Redacted]

On Gen. Flynn:

. (b) (5)
[Redacted]

Roy Moore:

(b) (5)
[Redacted]

On DOJ:

. (b) (5)
[Redacted]