From: Bowman, Randal
To: Hoy, Mark
Subject: Re: apparent problem with search function
Date: Tuesday, June 20, 2017 1 01:17 PM

It is - http://doi.discovertext.com/search/listing/0000000C00000068000000000000000000000000000000000?page=1&type=archive&query=%e2%80%9cawe+inspiring+monuments%e2%80%9d&clusterId=0&applyFilters=True&notCoded=True

I've kept that page unchanged in case one of you wanted to look at it while I work on other things.

On Tue, Jun 20, 2017 at 1:58 PM, Hoy, Mark <mark@texifter.com> wrote:

> Randal -
>
> Can you send me the URL on the listing page you are at? I'll take a look. Thanks.
>
> - Mark J. Hoy
>
> On Tue, Jun 20, 2017 at 1:55 PM, Bowman, Randal <randal_bowman@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
>
> > OK, will try again.
> >
> > However, the two comments I noted in my earlier email were the first and second items returned from the previous search and did not have "awe inspiring" - with or without the dash - in the comment. I opened and read both when I didn't see the term highlighted.
> >
> > On Tue, Jun 20, 2017 at 12:36 PM, Shulman, Stu <stu@texifter.com> wrote:
> >
> > > I ran a couple of searches, and it appears to be returning correct data... however I did notice that t's not always highlighting the terms in the results list, but this is due to there being a dash in the text (e.g. "awe-inspiring monuments" vs "awe inspiring monuments") -- the full text search does however recognize both as the same phrase
> > >
> > > On Tue, Jun 20, 2017 at 11:35 AM, Bowman, Randal <randal_bowman@ios.doi.gov> wrote:
> > >
> > > > I started searching in the new list. I used the term "awe inspiring monuments", in quotes as shown here. However, the first two items on the list, DOI-2017-0002-167038.html and 167039, did not have that term in the comment.
> > > >
> > > > Do the use of quotation marks not limit the search to the exact term within the marks? If not, how do I search for exact terms?
> > >
> > > --
> > > Dr. Stuart W. Shulman
> > > Founder and CEO, Texifter
> > > Cell: 413-992-8513
> > > LinkedIn: http://www.linkedin.com/in/stuartwshulman