no no no - that's the wrong approach. Until it is determined that their requirements are applicable to public comments, don't do anything except answer questions. You would be opening FWS up to all sorts of complications. I hope get get a department-wide answer from the Solicitors.

FWS doesn't do privacy assessments routinely - that I know of. Maybe we should be. I'll work with Teri Barnett on that.

As for DiscoverText retrieving names, the simple answer is yes, names are part of the metadata the commenter fills out. This is by default. The entire metadata record can be displayed for each comment.

OK - and another question - does FWS do privacy act assessments for public comment requests?

Also need an answer to my question on whether the system would retrieve names unless we ask that it be programmed that way, by noon

George Fisher said he thinks the contract will be done by Thursday.

I'm thinking we should wait for that. Just one day delay, but all i's dotted.
