yes. I am usually in the office by 8. My only other call is at 11, no more than 30 minutes.
If we don't need to access the system for this, we can use Call-in: (b) (5) DPP
passcode: (b) (5) DPP

Randy,

Can we talk early Tuesday about the best next steps?

am sending this via email because it may be too long for a request within the system -

Could you have one or more of your students search the comments not already in exact duplicate sets and save these terms into datasets (presuming that is the right term) where anyone can review and code them and they do not show up in future searches, i.e. all "Theodore Roosevelt" in one group and they do not also show up in search for another term. I did the TR search yesterday evening and coded 50 of them, but there is no sign of that group now, so I did something wrong - or perhaps did nothing - in terms of saving it. I will focus on the exact duplicate list for now

Sort terms (from the coding paper I sent yesterday):

Many of the comments do not appear to be form letters, but the non-form-letters often use similar wording. Based on a non-statistical sampling of comments displayed, use of the following exact words or phrases indicates a general comment against the review or against changes to existing monuments:

(b) (5) DPP

(b) (5) DPP

Letters supporting the review often include “support the review” and “oppose use of the Antiquities Act”.
